Cuts in fisheries spending, staffing queried

by Mike O'Keeffe

The Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO) is attempting to whitewash its mismanagement of the West Coast salmon fishery, says MP John Duncan.

The Reform MP for North Island/Powell River is calling for a judicial inquiry into the DFO loss of three million salmon in the Fraser and Adams Rivers this year. In an interview, he said fisheries minister Brian Tobin's proposed appointed review board amounts to a cover-up of the ministry's actions.

"An appointed review board won't get to the bottom of the issue because it doesn't have the same powers as a judicial inquiry and is too closely tied to the DFO," said Duncan. "Their recommendations would be too much controlled by the same people who are avoiding enforcement [of fishing regulations] now."

Duncan said the DFO left fish stocks open to poaching by removing fisheries officers from the field while preserving its bureaucracies in Vancouver and Ottawa. "We are moving toward disaster in the West Coast fishery," he said in a recent news release. The ministry plans to reduce the annual DFO budget by $175-million and eliminate 1,200 jobs by the year 2000.

Duncan criticized the department for "effectively closing" the Pender Harbour fisheries office by not replacing enforcement officer Ross Squire, who quit in September. The Sunshine Coast was without a fisheries officer until Nov. 1, when two full-time temporary officers were assigned to the post. They will be stationed in Pender Harbour at least until the end of March, when a departmental staffing review is complete, said Bob Humphreys, area manager of the DFO's south coast division.

Humphreys said the department is "going through a transition period," and he expects that its fortunes will improve next year. He said the concept of community-based enforcement has been weakened as officers become more specialized.

"In the old days, an officer was a resident in the community, and people saw him as Mr. Fish," said Humphreys. "But that is no longer the case, and people are feeling the loss of the old-style fisheries officer."

In response to shrinking resources, the DFO is trying to build teams of specialists that it hopes will serve the fishery better, said Humphreys, adding that "The jury is still out as to whether it will be effective."

Paul Sprout, acting director of DFO operations, said there is "no evidence that suggests that the level of illegal fishing this year has been higher than in other years." He said the department has had to get creative in order to maintain enforcement in the face of fiscal restraint.

Sprout said he has faith in the five-member appointed review board, headed by former house speaker John Fraser. He said the board will have complete freedom to examine department files and technical information.

"The members are well respected in their fields and are concerned about conducting a comprehensive review that will get to the bottom of things."

The BC Fisheries Survival Coalition, a lobby group made up of commercial fishermen, is also pushing for a judicial review with the power to subpoena witnesses and documents.

SCRD primed, ready for Ecuador trip

by Darah Hansen

With their plane tickets booked, Ecuador is just a flight away for regional district director Brett McGillivray and administrator Larry Jardine.

McGillivray and Jardine announced their plans to take part in the federally-funded trip to Ecuador at Thursday's Sunshine Coast Regional District (SCRD) board meeting, Nov. 10.

In a prepared statement, McGillivray said he was taking part in the program because "...I do believe some development programs can have a mutually positive impact. Moreover, the regional board staff has extensive professional, technical expertise to offer..."

The SCRD raised the ire of some constituents earlier this summer when directors announced the Coast district had been chosen to participate in a foreign aid program arranged through the Federation of Canadian Municipalities and financially supported by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

Public outcry led Pender Harbour director Jane Reid to withdraw her support for the program in September.

At that time, Reid said her constituents saw it as "a trek off to wherever...and they don't think politicians are deserving of it."

More recently, local Reform MP John Duncan called the program funding the trip to Ecuador "marginal" — and that's a complimentary term, he said. "I find it unbelievable a government could spent this amount of money in a time when the country is borrowing money to cover for its national debt."

According to Basil Gilbert, a spokesman with CIDA, the Ecuador trip is part of a Canada-wide program to set up trade relations with foreign nations as well as an opportunity to exchange information on a municipal level.

"This is not a twinning at all...It's more of a partnership," Gilbert said.

Gilbert estimated the cost of the trip at $3,000 per person. CIDA's annual budget is $1.3 million, he said. The trip — scheduled for January 15 to 25 — is the first of several exchanges to take place between the regional district and their Ecuadorian counterpart over the next five years.

On your telemark... get set... ski the Coast

by Sandra Smith

It's a cold, dark, rainy day on the Sunshine Coast but Patrick Mark's face is glowing. His mind is at higher altitudes—about 5,000 feet above town in the Tetrahedron Plateau where he knows the clouds are dumping big, white, powdery flakes.

Five sets of skis straddle across the ceiling rafters above him, the boards already waxed and waiting for the chance to glide noiselessly across a snow-laden valley.

Mark bends his knees as if frozen in mid-stride. It's a muscle building exercise and he's gearing up for his first ski of the season.

"You've got to build up these muscles," he says, pointing to his thighs.

"They're the hardest to build up but that's the real key to telemark skiing."

Mark is the president of the Tetrahedron Ski Club and is psyched to spread the spirit of the sport. He believes in skiing almost like a religion and knows heaven is less than an hour away.

"I've lived in communities where a large number of people skied and they were nice communities. The people were friendly and that was a really good environment to live in....We're getting too lazy. We need to get people, especially young people, out there and active and physically involved in the environment. I'd much rather see people doing this kind of stuff than sitting in bars."

He knows of what he speaks, having skied in the back country for 20 years, and says the Sunshine Coast mountains have been sadly overlooked by local skiers who continue to take their enthusiasm and their money to more famous snow havens like Whistler, Mt. Washington and the Rocky Mountains.

Snow conditions on Mt. Steele are similar to Whistler, he says.

A dreamy look crosses his face as he reminisces about last winter's adventures, skiing the "steps" of Mt. Steele, through a powdery valley and up the sides of a chute.

"When there's lots of snow you can ski everywhere. It's a very forgiving valley....and it's not uncommon to be skiing in June."

The Tetrahedron Plateau, the Caren Range, Mount Elphinstone and its adjacent Dakota Bowl offer a mixed bag of ski terrain, he says.

The range of difficulty allows new and experienced skiers to make their trips together, he says.

Using a Ministry of Forests map, he points out an "easy day trail" across Bachelor Ridge.

"There are long stretches of flat terrain and if you want rolly hills, just go a few feet off. That's the nice thing about the Tetrahedron, there's such a mixed variety. The experts can shoot down the hills and climb back up. Dakota Bowl and Mt. Elphinstone are the same."

In addition, the local hills offer four cabins in the Tetrahedron for skiers and hikers to use year-round, free of charge.

He guesses a thousand skiers live on the coast and he knows stories of families spending $3,000 on ski trips in "other places where the grass is always greener."

"If just a small amount of that money stayed here, boy could we use it for educational programs, trail maintenance and road plowing."

The ski club consists of close to 100 members who meet once a month, often for a potluck dinner and a ski film. They carpool up the logging roads, issue a newsletter and keep each other informed of the ski and road conditions. It's an enthusiastic group of families and individuals and they've got big plans to make the coast more skier- friendly.

For starters, they are collecting donations of ski clothing and equipment (downhill, cross-country or telemark) in order to build a rental supply on the coast. The closest outlet to rent ski equipment is a ferry ride away in Vancouver.

Collection buckets now sit in both the Sechelt and Gibsons recycling depots for people to drop off doantions.

Paint recycling program postponed

By Darah Hansen

The BC Paint Care Program: not coming to a community near you — at least not this year.

The paint program — initiated earlier this year by the Ministry of Environment — was supposed to be in place in the province by September, 1994. However, Minister of Environment Moe Sihota has relaxed that date until the new year to allow the paint industry to develop waste paint collection facilities around the province.

Currently a mobile paint collection station is available only in major centres on the Lower Mainland and on Vancouver Island.

On the Sunshine Coast used paint is not welcome at local landfill sites. Paint users are being asked to store their used paint until a collection facility becomes available.

The paint care program was initially developed by the province to allow consumers to recycle their residential — alkyd or latex — paints. The program does not apply to industrial, marine or aerosol paints nor to paint thinners.

It is designed to put the onus of cost and collection on the the paint industry, and will require the industry to set up paint collection centres wherever their products are sold.

Paint producers failing to abide by the new regulation could face a range of penalties

Once the program is in place, paint retailers will be required to post information regarding the locations of the nearest waste paint collection facility.

Paint producers failing to abide by the new regulation could face a range of penalties including the loss their retail licence in BC or fines up to $200,000.

According to a ministry press release, paints collected under the program will be disposed of by incineration as effective methods to re-use or recycle waste paint have not yet been established in the province.

Uncontrolled disposal of paints has resulted in several environmental problems including toxins from the paints leaching into the soil and water pollution caused by consumers pouring the waste directly into the sewage system, the release said.

To accommodate for the cost of the paint care program, paint producers have put an "eco-fee" on the sale of paint. According to Bill Woods at Brooks and Miller in Sechelt, consumers can expect to pay an additional $1 for a five gallon can of paint; $.50 for one gallon; $0.25 for a quart; and $0.10 for a pint.

The paint industry has released figures estimating the cost of managing the returned paint at $0.60 per one gallon can.

Draft approved for BC midwifery college

by Jane Seyd

Midwives on the Sunshine Coast were cheering the news last week that they're one step closer to becoming fully-recognized health professionals in BC.

Health Minister Paul Ramsey announced on Nov. 10 the province has approved draft regulations to establish an independent College of Midwives which will oversee the practice in the province.

The college would licence people working in the profession and set standards could be established as earlier as next spring.

"We're very happy about it," said local midwife Denise Olson.

Michelle Ballantyne, another midwife on the Sunshine Coast said, "I think it'll make a lot more women feel comfortable with midwifery."

She added, "the best care possible is to give (women) options and choices."

In a press statement, the government said once the college is established, midwifery care will be available for women with normal, low-risk pregnancies.

The government also said it supports the principle of "full public funding for midwifery services," although details of how that would work have not been developed. Olson said funding would make home births accessible to a lot more women.

'I think it'll make a lot more women feel comfortable with midwifery'
-Michelle Ballantyne

Currently, midwives on the Coast work on a sliding scale according to ability to pay but bills for midwifery services in Vancouver can run from $1,000 to $1,500. The government is also hoping to save money through the use of midwives.

"The experience in other countries which have autonomous midwives...is the health care costs seem to be lower," said Lisa Simpson, spokesperson for the ministry.

On the issue of home births, the government said a pilot project will be established once the college is formed before home births are legalized province-wide. Home births have been an especially contentious issue in discussions on midwifery.

Last October on the Sunshine Coast, a baby boy died during the course of a midwife-assisted home birth. A second baby died earlier this year in Vancouver after complications arose in an attempted home birth.

Arguments have been made in both cases as to whether the babies would have died in a hospital setting. For midwives, the issue of whether home birth is safe is not an issue, said Ballantyne. "Home birth is safe if the screening is done properly."

But some midwives are wary about the effect college licensing may have on choices available to women, particularly in cases of complicated births.

"There's always going to be women wanting to birth at home," said Ballantyne. But when college regulations are in place, "...it's not just you and the woman anymore."

As part of the move to midwifery services, the ministry is also considering setting up "birth centres" where women can give birth assisted by a midwife.

Both Ballantyne and Olson said that's a good idea. "It would be nice to provide a middle ground (between home and hospital settings)," said Ballantyne.

Cuts called for in DFO bureaucracy

It is also calling for reductions in bureaucracy rather than enforcement.

"The department has economists, social planners, and advisors coming out of every nook and cranny," said coalition spokesman Phillip Eidsvik. He noted that the listings for DFO senior staff fill 64 pages of the department's directory while the enforcement staff directly responsible for the lower Fraser River and southern Gulf of Georgia fill about 20 lines on one page.

"The trouble is that the people who are in charge of making the cuts have an interest in protecting their own jobs," said Eidsvik. "The department has completely misplaced its priorities."

Freedom of information hits home

by Jane Seyd

Interested in seeing the latest Dayton & Knight engineering study, your own personnel file at the school board office or financial records on a sewer construction project?

If it's general information written down on local government paper, the public now has a right to see it.

That's the basic theory, anyway, behind the latest inclusions to the provincial Freedom of Information and Privacy Act.

As of Nov. 3, the act was extended to apply to local public bodies, including school boards, colleges, health care bodies, municipalities and regional districts.

So far, though, nobody on the Sunshine Coast is anticipating a flood of applications.

"My opinion is for the most part local government has operated in a relatively open manner," said Joe Calenda, Sechelt's administrator. "...I don't think it's going to increase that much."

"It's going to be interesting to see what actually shakes out."

Pat Stuart, chair of the school board, had similar comments on the act.

"I don't think there'll be a lot of major changes," she said. "Everything has more or less been available to the public."

For most local government bodies, so far the change has meant updating their filing systems and designating an employee to deal with public requests for information.

'It's going to be interesting to see what actually shakes out'

-Joe Calenda

In practical terms, however, it remains to be seen just how easy or difficult it will be to get a look at government files — and even what kind of files people are interested in seeing.

Not everything will be up for public perusal, though. According to the act, records of meetings on the local level from which the public is legitimately excluded do not have to be made available.

Originally passed by the government in 1992, the act covers most aspects of who gets to see what in terms of information collected, used, or produced by public bodies.

In the simplest terms, you can get access to personal files about yourself, but not about others, while everyone has access to "general" information.

Request for material must be submitted in writing and could very well end up costing you money. If the government agrees to give out the material, it must be released within 30 to 60 days. If not, you can appeal the decision.

According the the Ministry of Government Sevrvices, in the year since the act has applied to provincial government bodies, there have been more than 7100 requests for information. Most of those were from people wanting access to personal information kept on them by government.

About five per cent of requests have been appealed. Most of those have been settled in favour of the government, rather than the applicant.

Examples of information available to the public through the provincial government include public opinion polls, statistical surveys, environmental impact statements and final audits on government performance.

Student TV panel focuses on drug abuse

by Sandra Smith

The panel guests are in position, sitting somewhat nervously on the couch under the bright show lights. The interviewer checks her notes, memorizing her questions for the last time. The cameras are rolling and the production crew, hidden behind the glass doors, has the controls cued up.

"Okay, 15 seconds to start, come out from black, get the music started, ready...five, four, three, two...cut to camera one."

Everything goes off without a hitch or a glitch. The host throws out some thought-provoking questions and the panelists toss up a variety of perspectives on the subject of teens and drugs, a subject that hits close to home for these high school students.

The TV talk show is not an episode of Oprah and there's no sign of the cat-calling audiences of Geraldo. It's a Coast Cable production directed and produced by Elphinstone's Career Preparation students in their high school classroom.

This is CPTV.

Today's host, Chandra Juhasz does a great job in "community TV" style and, without any of the expected "um's" of the novice, professionally reels in the discussion for the audience.

What are some of the reasons for drug use on the Coast? What's so appealing about it? How do you know when you cross the line?

The discussion panel consists of teens who have and haven't used drugs, one teen in recovery and one board member from Breakaway, the Coast's teen drug and alcohol centre located in Gibsons.

They say teens use drugs because they want to experiment, because they don't want to miss out on what everyone else is doing and what everyone else is doing still reeks of "cool".

"They didn't seem to have any problems and, for me, that sounded pretty good," says teenager Aaron Harrison, a former drug addict now in recovery.

He describes how he "hit bottom" before making the life-saving decision to get clean and sober.

"One day, I just felt a real presence of death running through me and I got up to go to the fridge and collapsed....[Life without drugs] is like learning how to live all over again."

Aaron's testimony had an eye-opening impact on many of his peers and they thanked him again when the taping session ended.

Juhasz identified a big stumbling block when she asked her panel why kids still use drugs even after hearing the horror stories.

Simple. Because no kid thinks it will happen to them.

They're always talking about teens... it's not just teens'

And because every kid hears the same message repeatedly flashed at them by an adult society — that alcohol is synonymous with "having a good time".

The hypocrisy has not been lost on these students.

Since the tragedy of Jeff Lewis' drug-related suicide in September, there's been a lot of media coverage and community discussion about related issues, panelists say.

"But they're always talking about teens and the abuse of drugs and, when I look around, it's not just teens," said a panel member.

Why are adults diverting their attention away from themselves, they question.

"They don't want to admit it," another sums up.

These students speak of alcohol as a drug and one which is much more difficult for them to purchase than marijuana or LSD. They debate the possibility of a drug free society and finally someone asks what it would take to drive the message of abstinenece home to teens.

Aaron sums it up in two simple words.

"The truth," he says.

Freeze it right there... music... graphic...and fade to black.

This is the second in a series of educational CPTV shows produced by Elphinstone students this year under the guidance of their teacher Marta MacKown and Coast Cable Program Manager Steve Sleep.

Another, "Toward Understanding Teens', looks at materialism, happiness, the personal problems and the stress teenagers feel. The talk show discussion on teens and drugs will air on Cable 11 this Thursday Nov. 17 at 6 pm.

Fishing for more protection on the Sunshine Coast

It would seem a little public outcry can be heard. The Department of Fisheries and Oceans has agreed to staff the Madeira Park fisheries office, at least temporarily, with two officers.

This will continue, of course, only until spring and then the department is to decide whether the Coast really needs any kind of official presence to enforce fishing regulation.

Well, public pressure should be maintained. It is telling, as illustrated in our front page story on the DFO, that the number of bureaucratic positions listed in the department's phone book numbers in the area of 20 pages while the number of officers takes up some 20 lines on a single page.

As with most government agencies, the bureaucracy of the DFO is topheavy in the extreme while practical uses for the department are kept to a minimum.

The only way this can change is through public pressure. While it may seem to some a time-consuming effort to keep track of government workings and spendings and to keep up pressure on given issues, it's part and parcel of living in a democracy and of keeping it running smoothly. It's also one of the ways we as a community can unite and maintain some kind of control over the things which affect our lives.

We've got to ensure the government helps us protect what we have here on the Coast. That's what the government is for, that's why we pay taxes.

Applause for our veterans, lest we forget

There was a good turn out, despite the weather, for all the Remembrance Day functions on the Coast.

It is good to see that our veterans are not only still keeping guard over the event and all it signifies, but that so many members of the public are taking the time to participate.

The ceremonies were dignified, one and all, and were carried out with an enviable military precision. Congratulations to all who participated.

Good effort on drug awareness

It's good to see the effort mounted on the Coast to recognize drug awareness week.

The high schools, through discussion and undertakings like the Elphinstone TV panel (story on page 3) are good indications the substance abuse situation is being taken seriously. As well, the rebound of Breakaway is heartening.

Also good to see is that many of the anti-drug endeavours are wholly supported by area students and youths.

They can't do it alone, however. They need the help of the Coast's adults. Now that we've got the ball rolling, we should keep it headed in the right direction... away from drugs and away from complacency.

A different stand on loitering

RE: Gibsons council striving to curb loitering problems, front page Nov. 7 issue.

There is another approach to the situation that council thinks might be rectified by giving more power to the police, to make arrests without witnesses or even crimes. It's called community planning.

Could it be that the teens loitering about the malls are in fact waiting for the bus, a ride, or simply for it to be time to get home for dinner, amusing themselves as best they can in the only few places that provide cover without charge. The police lament that loitering in itself, is not a crime, but that it can often lead to crime. So can not having enough to do, any place to go, or any way to get there.

I myself am a victim of the abysmal bus service, living a bit too far away to walk home with groceries and sometimes I am forced to take refuge in the halls of Sunnycrest. While this is not something that gives me a lot of joy, I cannot recall that I have ever been obstructed there, nor unduly harrassed, and I appreciate the sanctuary.

I guess since I'm over 21 and have spent some money, I'm not loitering.

Of course, being over that age I have a bit of a choice; I could go to the pub. What alternatives are we giving our children? Most of the teens I've met are pretty wonderful and would welcome antidotes to hanging about the mall. Scapegoating a few of the wilder or more troubled ones can only alienate them further from the community.

The town council would do well to change its attitude and its focus. I think we could all benefit from a decent bus service and a few creative alternatives.

Food bank challenge

To: All parent advisory councils on the Sunshine Coast

Subject: Food Bank challenge

The West Sechelt elementary school PAC would like to extend a challenge to all other PAC groups to collect non-perishable foods for the Food Bank during the remainder of November. With Christmas approaching fast, the needs at the Food Bank traditionally increase as well. If all the schools on the Coast take part in collecting food for this worthy cause, their shelves won't resemble Scrooge's cupboard.

Perhaps your school could team up with another school to see which one can collect the most. A friendly wager of a round of doughnuts and coffee for other PAC members might be the winner's bounty.

Classic thanks

Last Sunday afternoon, Nov. 6, the Coast Classics under music director Tom Kershaw, presented us with yet another delightful and beautiful concert. The perfect setting was St. John's United Church, Davis Bay, with its bright, large windows.

We enjoyed a mixture of vocal, instrumental and orchestral music performed by such talented people as Alice Horsman, Jirina Vavrik, Enid Harrison, the Coast Consort, Sunshine Coast Community Orchestra Strings and other special guests. All proceeds from the concert going to the SPCA.

Thank you very much - all of you: the Coast Classics and guests for an unforgettable afternoon; the local merchants who donated the refreshments so freely - Clayton's Heritage Market, IGA Gibsons and Wilson Creek and SuperValu; All Occasion Flowers for the lovely carnations which adorned the tables; the wonderful public who supported this event and the loyal SPCA volunteers.

It was indeed an unforgettable afternoon. A special thank you from those who cannot speak for themselves, they need all the support we can give them.

CORNELIA VAN BERKEL,

Auxiliary grateful

The Sechelt branch of St. Mary's Hospital Auxiliary is extremely grateful to everyone who attended our recent fall bazaar held at the seniors hall.

It was one of the most successful ones we've ever had. We were pleased to have such generosity shown to all our branch volunteers for their hard work.

Many thanks must also be extended to the newspapers, the merchants and cablevision for their help with advertising this event. It was appreciated.

Insights to the gaming, naming and taming of cats

a few words

patricia wolfe

Cats love our yard. It could be the mouse nest in the broken stone retaining wall or the privacy provided by a wall of cedars or the fact we don't have any kids or pets to disturb them in their quest for prey.

The neighbour's two cats visit regularly. Every day, except weekends. They always follow the same route: up over the concrete wall beside the driveway, through the ornamental evergreens, past the roses and up to the mouse nest. There, they sit and wait for the mice to appear, but the mice never do.

Only once have we seen the cats actually corner a mouse. They batted that poor little creature around like a catnip toy, while the mouse chose the cats' deliberate moments of seeming indifference and inattention to hide under a dandelion leaf or behind a large stone. They finally chased it under a pile of lumber and couldn't quite stretch their paws far enough to reach the wee thing.

That was about the only time those two cats worked in conjunction. Normally, they take turns coming to visit and often we've seen them hissing at each other on their own doorstep.

If they were our cats, we'd name them after movie stars or singers, but we know their names so it's hard to call them anything else.

Naming our feline visitors has become a tradition. The black cat who lives across the road and visits occasionally was named Eartha Katt until it was apparent she was a he. He's now called Mingus and actually responds, even though he's called something else at home.

For awhile, we had an influx of new cats. There was Smokey Robinson, a spunky little grey kitten who followed us around like a puppy and jumped into the car when the door was open. Smokey had a pal, a timid fluffy calico with an asymmetrical face that gave it a funny quizzical look. She was Shirley MacLaine. Smokey and Shirley were gone as suddenly as they had arrived.

Sylvester, too, was short-lived. With black and white markings, he was a ringer for the cartoon cat.

This naming of cats got its start when we lived in Vancouver. One day a slender calico came limping into the yard. She looked hungry and abused. Any attempt to approach her was met with hisses until she made a run for it. She was skittish. Skitter. Skeeter. We named her Skeeter Davis.

Skeeter set up a home for herself in some exposed insulation in the crawl space under the building. We fed her packets of Meow Mix and within a few weeks, the limp was gone, her fur was glossy and she seemed quite content, but we still couldn't go near her. She had a boyfriend for awhile, a big tom with similar colour and green eyes. He wasn't around long enough to acquire a name.

The day we moved a few blocks away, Skeeter stayed around the building despite all the activity of movers and friends trucking furniture down the stairs. She was pacing around the live trap we had rented from the SPCA, smelling the food inside but also sensing the danger.

When all the furniture was loaded and ready to go, we made one last attempt to coax her to come with us. She took a few steps in our direction, sensing the urgency. She wanted to go with us, but she was afraid of people. She walked back towards her nest. Then she took a few steps forward.

After five minutes of this, the movers honked the horn. We had to leave.

The next day, we put the live trap with Skeeter in it, in the garage.

Skeeter was an outdoor cat. The garage was a step up from the nest in the insulation. Maybe she could make her home here. After leaving food and water dishes, we made the mistake of leaving the trap unlocked.

We never saw Skeeter again. A few months later, a neighbour told us some people down the block had found a stray – "A calico... yes" – and took it with them when they moved to Sechelt.

It's funny. Skeeter got here before we did.

Freshness factors in fraudulent catch

The fraudulent fishermen have finally been caught!

It was a case of "questionable freshness" that tipped other contestents off to two North Vancouver men who weighed in their winning 11.7 kg chinook at a June fishing derby in Horseshoe Bay.

It took a seven-month investigation which entailed sending the winning salmon to the federal government's Pacific Biological Station in Nanaimo but West Vancouver Police cracked the case last week.

Tests on the fish revealed it had been dead and out of the water several hours prior to the start of the derby, said Constable Jamie Gibson.

The two men now face criminal charges of attempted fraud and will not collect the first prize award of $7,500.

The prize money will likely be awarded to the second place fisher, Gibson said.

The 6th Annual Curtis Lumber/Kask Brothers BC Childrens Hospital Fishing Derby took place on June 12.

Future looking brighter for purchase of Jedediah Island

by Darah Hansen

Things are looking up for those working to preserve Jedediah Island as a provincial nature park.

"We're pretty optimistic," said Wes Umphreys, an official with the Ministry of Environment in charge of reviewing a plan to purchase the island.

Umphreys said the government is now awaiting approval of funding from the provincial treasury board which could come within the next two weeks.

He said the treasury board decision may have "strings attached" in terms of how and when the island can be purchased by the province, but "at least we'll know where we stand."

In the meantime, Umphreys said the ministry has hired a land appraiser, timber evaluator and accountant to determine the current value of the property.

Jedediah is a 640-acre island located between Lasqueti and Texada Islands and is on sale by its private owners for $4 million.

The island has been appraised at well over $6 million but the owners have stated they are willing to sell it for less on the condition that the purchaser use the island as a public park.

Earlier in the fall, Vancouver resident Bruce Culver said he was willing to invest $1 million in aid of a government bid to purchase the island. The money is part of his late brother's — climber Dan Culver — estate.

Another group calling themselves Friends of Jedediah have organized a fund-raising campaign with the goal of raising $250,000 to put towards the purchasing price. And without leaving their base on Lasqueti Island, spokesman for the group Doug Hopwood said they've already raised $12,000.

"We're really just getting started," Hopwood said, adding the group intends to hit up companies, industries and individuals for donations — "anybody we can think of to give us money."

The Nature Trust, a BC wilderness preservation group based in Vancouver, is also accepting donations for the island.

Umphreys said a strong show of community support for the Jedediah proposal will likely act as a positive factor in swaying the government's final decision on allocating funding.

Stage set for Jedediah fundraiser

Friends of Dan Culver remember his passion for the outdoors and his love of adventure.

They remember his energy and his conviction to preserve the wild spaces of his home province, British Columbia — last year he carryed two flags to the top of the second highest mountain in the world, K2, as a show of support to the battles to save both the Tatshenshini and Clayoquot Sound from destruction.

Culver died in the descent of that same mountain in 1993, but his friends haven't let his passion for the environment die with him.

Around the Lower Mainland, groups are springing up to aid a cause Culver's family and friends think he would have been proud to serve — purchasing Jedediah Island as a provincial park space.

On the Sunshine Coast Cheri Le Page and Rand Rudland have organized a fund-raising benefit for the Jedediah purchase.

Both friends of Culver, the two have arranged to bring Dan's climbing partner, Jim Haberl, to the Coast to deliver a talk and slide show highlighting their K2 climb. The event is scheduled to take place December 14 at the Raven's Cry Theatre.

A dinner prior to the event is scheduled to be held at Rockwood with limited tickets to both available for $55.

Those interested in the fundraiser should call Le Page at 886-2192.

Province to study school board amalgamation

by Sandra Smith

A recent announcement by the Minister of Education has local school trustees squirming in their seats.

In January a provincial commission will begin researching strategies for "more efficient and effective operation" of BC's 75 school districts. Their mandate also includes finding better ways to deliver educational programs.

To school trustees, that sounds like provincial "downsizing"—reducing the number of school districts—and government encroachment on local autonomy.

> 'I fear some arbitrary process is going to take away what people value'
> -Lynn Chapman

Discussing the commission's Draft Mandate and Terms of Reference at last Tuesday's school board meeting (Nov. 8), trustee Shawn Cardinall said the magnitude of the mandate gives the commission the potential to profoundly affect local governing of education.

"If they can do this in a year, whatever it is, we'll have some really interesting stuff to chew over. My concern is their terms of reference have sprung from nowhere," Cardinall said.

Trustee Lynn Chapman said the "more fuzzy kinds of issues" like community values wouldn't likely be addressed by the provincial commission.

"I fear some arbitrary process is going to take away what people value in their community and local school board," she said.

The four-member commission, yet to be appointed, will consist of two school trustees and two "non-governmental" people, said local school board chair Pat Stuart. Their report is expected to be released in November of 1995.

She said the government move is a result of the Sullivan royal commission on education which has led to the new directions in education for the Year 2000.

It is also a trend across the country to reduce the number of school boards, Stuart said, adding there are other ways to cut costs such as centralizing shared services like accounting.

The Alberta government is presently completing a major overhaul of its education system which has caused a tremendous public outcry, she said.

"Efficiency is a wonderful thing to strive for, but there's a cost," she said.

"There is a point when you get too big an organization... We'd definitely be concerned if our school district were to amalgamate with, say, West Van or Powell River...but I think the board has to listen to what the public wants too."

george in gibsons

by George Cooper

The Royal Canadian Legion has recently honoured both John and Vi Wilson of Gower Point Road with special awards for their individual services to their branch 109 Gibsons. John has received the Meritorious Service Medal and plaque for long and outstanding service both to the branch and to the community of Gibsons and district. Vi, who is already a life member of the ladies auxiliary has received a life membership in the branch for her continued service over the years.

The prestigious award to John Wilson recognizes the long years he has served in a number of executive positions in branch 109 since he first became a member in 1948.

John served in Italy with the Seaforth Highlanders in WWII and a few years after his discharge he came with Vi and family to settle in Gibsons. He has served as president for eight different terms and the same number as vice-president. Ten terms as second vice president as well as membership chairman twice, service officer twice and house and grounds chairman five times including this present year. At the very start of his membership in the branch he was one of the volunteer workers in the construction of the legion hall, now a small apartment building on Highway 101.

The community has benefited from his 25 years as a volunteer fireman and his part in the construction of the old firehall, now demolished in Lower Gibsons. He has been in years past a manager of little league baseball and has participated for a good many years in Sea Cavalcade and in Canada Day celebrations.

Schools

The Langdale school gym is open for volleyball Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:00 for men and women 19 years and older. Tomorrow is the last day to order your box of fresh chicken. Phone 886-8433 or 886-3767. The sale is to benefit Langdale school.

Gibsons elementary has just started The Club, a program designed to build "positive self-esteem and responsibility in the students from grades 1 to 7." I will report further on this program in the weeks to come. I was overwhelmed and so is the school, at the great number of contributions businesses and offices have made to support this program.

harmony hall

by George Cooper

Members of Branch 38, OAPA took up every chair in Harmony Hall for the November meeting.

Although there is always a large turnout for meetings this one was somewhat special - election day.

Re-elected by acclamation was George Withnall for president. George has already done a term and a half in that office, very successfully too. Returned by acclamation were secretary Bill Wallace and treasurer Verda Schneider.

Re-elected directors by ballot were Lilie Eidet and Pat Edwards. Elected by acclamation for second vice-president was Alf Davies.

Seniors Lottery

Treasurer Verda Schneider needs some volunteer seniors lottery ticket sellers on two different days: Nov. 18 and Dec. 2 in Sunnycrest Mall. You can? You will? Call Verda at 886-9906.

If you do buy these lottery tickets, consider buying them from Harmony Hall. It's one money raiser for the branch.

Coming events

Wednesday lunches for members will continue to Dec. 12. Soup and sandwich, $4; soup only or sandwich only $2.50.

Line dancing now is Saturdays at 12;15. No fee. Ceramics is now underway on Thursdays at 12:15. No fee.

Scottish country dancing presents a special day and evening Saturday, Nov. 19.

Workshops both morning and afternoon. Potluck supper is at 6 pm followed by a dance. Telephone Don Caenhead at 886-3073.

Birthday tea Nov. 21 at 2 pm for all members as well as those whose birthdays fall at some day in November.

Christmas dinner will be Dec. 10. Tickets are $12 per person. Call Lilie Eidet at 886-9000.

Hiking

Bill Rowan reported that walks conducted in September took the group to Soames Hill on one occasion; Ambleside and Dundarave in West Vancouver on another; and the Charman trail to Gospel Rock on still another.

In October the hikers journeyed to Bowen Island to visit the park at Killarney Lake and on Oct. 13 visited Lynn Creek headwaters. Anyone thinking about X-country skiing or snowshoeing?

Committee reports

Muriel Combs is calling for more volunteer soup makers for the Wednesday lunch program. Call 886-2540.

Ceramics has been looked after by Bernice Chamberlin since 1967 and she is turning that task over to someone else. A vote of thanks was heartily applauded by the members at the November meeting.

Don Cadenhead says the workshops on Scottish country dancing are open to all who live on the Sunshine Coast who would like to learn or learn more. If you wish come only to the potluck supper with your favourite dish of food and then stay to take part in the dance or to just watch.

Tickets for the Christmas dinner [the number is limited by fire regulation] are available only to paid up 1994 members until the end of next meeting in December. After that to the new 1995 members.

Remembrance

The poem A Day of Thought by Melissa Charbonneau was read by Rena White to remind us of the special day Nov. 11. This poem appeared in one of our local weeklies last year and was placed in the branch's scrapbook which is compiled by Grace Gilchrist.

roberts creek

by Katharine Trueman
885-2282

Well winter has certainly settled into the Coast this past week. However, it did not deter the large number of residents who gathered at the Roberts Creek Legion on Nov. 11. The community represented by many groups including Girl Guides of Canada, Scouts Canada, Roberts Creek Elementary and Legion representatives placed wreaths on the cenotaph and silently remembered those who fought for freedom so long ago.

Auxiliary Christmas fair

The members of the Roberts Creek Auxiliary wish to thank Creekers for attending their Christmas fair held recently.

It was a "wonderful, record turnout" claims vice-president Muriel McKay and we are very appreciative of the support. Ticket sales were up and the end result was just over $3,000 which will be used to further our work with St. Mary's Hospital.

The winners of the raffle were first prize J. Emerson, oak TV tables; second prize Anne, hooked rug; and third prize R. Greenwood, hedgehog boot scraper. Congratulations.

Benefit dance

Friends of Patty Dewar (previous owner of the Deli Fish Cafe) will have an opportunity to gather round and lend support. Save the Hall and Sweet Roots Productions will sponsor a benefit dance to be held on Saturday, Nov. 19 at 8 pm at the hall. The event will feature Sue Leonard and Band and Patty will be on hand at the beginning of the evening to share some time with all of her friends. Tickets are $15 and there will be bar facilities. Tickets are on sale at the Roberts Creek Store. All proceeds will go to help with Patty's medical expenses which have been tremendous over the past year. See you at the dance. If you would like to help organize this event call Jeanette Moen at 885-9425.

Library news

Many Creekers with or without gumboots feel the very best Christmas presents are made by hand with lots of TLC. If you agree we suggest now is the time to get started with those special Christmas presents for someone special in your life. Not sure how? Well, your library can help. Consider the cookbook shelf and think of jams, jellies or maybe some elegant Christmas cookies. How about potpourri? Find how to make this along with other good ideas in the Complete Guide to Drying and Pressing Flowers by Lesley Gordon.

The craft section is bursting with good ideas, learn how to make candles or wooden toys, to smock or quilt. Make a variety of small bazaar items or tackle something larger, twig furniture for instance. Finally we have a wonderful book to help you with the finishing touches. Look for Creative Gift Wrapping by Kirby and Kollath. These are the gifts to be remembered for years. Both your friends and your cheque book will love you for them.

Christmas pot luck

Can you believe that it's that time again. Yes on Sunday, Dec. 5 from 4 to 8 pm the annual Christmas Potluck dinner will unfold. Turkeys are usually bought by the association and everyone is asked to bring a tasty potluck item to enhance the festive spread. Santa Claus will be dropping by to see all the children. Start practising now for the Christmas Carol session which will follow dinner. There will be donations taken at the door. Do not miss this wonderful Creek tradition. Volunteers are also needed.

A challenging concept that began in June of 1993 called Books for Newborns, has developed into a success story largely due to the efforts of one man, Bill LeNeve. This project endeavours to provide every new baby born on the Sunshine Coast with a hard cover picture book. It is hoped that right from birth, they will be introduced to books, first by parents and as they grow, will develop the love of reading on their own.

To date, Bill has delivered 210 books to new babies. While the Davis Bay/Wilson Creek Community Association funded this project from June of 1993 to September 1994. Bill now funds it privately with some help from anonymous donours. With each book costing approximately $4 that represents quite an outlay, some $840 to date.

The community association has acknowledged the exceptional job Bill has done on this project in the form of a letter sent to him, with a copy to me. A quote from the letter reads "...we feel this would be an appropriate time to take note of your remarkable endeavour to increase literacy and awareness in our community and elsewhere." Good on yuh, Bill.

How appropriate that the Davis Bay elementary school is presenting their 'great Canadian book fair' on Nov. 14 to 16 from 6:30 to 8 pm in the school library. There are over 300 new paperback titles from kindergarten to adults available for sale. These make great gifts and/or stocking stuffers for the readers in your family. Everyone is welcome.

The Sunshine Coast branch of Save the Children Fund is holding its annual Christmas craft sale on Nov. 18 and 19 in Trail Bay Mall and will run all day, both days. Items such as handmade clowns and children's sweaters will be on sale and I'm told people wait all year for these specialty items.

Another year has rolled around and it's time to start thinking of your choice for the Davis Bay/Wilson Creek Citizen of the Year award. You are entitled to one nomination per person and all nominations must be signed. There will be a sealed box available to deposit your nomination in. For further information contact me at the above number.

elves club

The Elves Club held its annual general meeting on Sunday, Oct. 2 in the Marine Room in Lower Gibsons. At that meeting officers were elected for the current year. President, Ed Rhodes; vice-president, Marion Hodson; treasurer, Rick Gibb; secretary, Sue Harding; hamper co-ordinator, Lil Pariseau; mediator, Jacquie Braun and press co-ordinator, Esther Carey.

What is the Elves Club? It is a non-profit society that was formed in 1972 to make sure that everyone has a good Christmas. This is done in the form of food hampers with gifts for children. Last year over 600 hampers were delivered from Port Mellon to Earls Cove.

A few things to note on your calendar. Depots are open from Nov. 26 to Dec. 16 (closed on Sundays) from 10 am to 5 pm. The depots are at the following places: Sunnycrest Mall and Park Plaza in Gibsons; Pastimes in Sechelt and Kenmar Draperies in Madeira Park. We will be having our 9th annual telethon on Cable 11 on Dec. 3 from 2 to 10 pm with lots of local talent. The deadline to get the application in is Dec. 7. Delivery date of hampers is Dec. 17. Our phone number is 886-7743 and will be operational on Nov. 24.

What can you do to help? We need good clean used toys, new toys, food items, donations and volunteers to help.

REAL Estate

WHEN IT'S YOUR INVESTMENT

When you own an investment property, your main goals are to get the highest monthly rental, maintain the lowest vacancy rate, and keep quality tenants. How can you pull it all together?

It pays to keep your property in good condition, not only while you are trying to rent it, but after the new tenants move in. You will obviously want the property to look its best while you are showing it to prospective tenants. If you work with them to keep it that way, the tenants are likely to stay. When something needs to be repaired, be sure the tenants know whom to call to do the job. Arrange to inspect the property periodically to check for leaking roofs or pipes, defective wiring or malfunctioning appliances. By the time a defect becomes aggravating enough for a tenant to complain the repair may be more costly than if you caught the problem early in one of your regular inspections.

If you are an absentee landlord, it may make sense to hire a professional to keep a close eye on your investment.

If you are looking for an investment it is an excellent time to be a buyer! Contact...

Professor warns of Dangers at Urban Gypsy.

A visiting professor warns local residents that shopping at Gibsons Landing's URBAN GYPSY may be a mind-altering experience.

Says the professor, "When I saw those colors -- bright greens, blues, yellow, red and orange, in florals, tweeds, and checkers... not to mention the fuschia and pink duck candleholder... I thought I was hallucinating!"

The Doctor is a visiting psychology professor from Berkeley, California.

Shop the Coast this Christmas and get an interest free loan up to $1,000.

No payments or Interest until June 30th, 1995

Here's how it works!

Sunshine Coast Credit Union

Your local branch of the Sunshine Coast Credit Union will make loans of up to $1,000 to shoppers wishing to do their shopping on the Coast. These loans will be interest-free from the time of purchase until June 30, 1995. Should the amount not be paid off by that date, interest will be charged at prevailing interest rates and a regular monthly payment will be established. A one time application fee of $10 per loan will be charged. Non-members of the Sunshine Coast Credit Union will be required to open a membership with a minimum deposit of $25 to an equity share account.

Your local branch of the Sunshine Coast Credit Union will issue special "Christmas Cash" cheques to consumers who qualify.

- Enjoy Christmas Cash shopping from Nov. 14 - Dec. 24, 1994.
- No payment required until June 30, 1995.
- Participating merchants will have special "Christmas Cash" promotions.
- Your money will stay on the Sunshine Coast and supports your community.

Look for any participating merchant displaying this logo.

You do not have to spend the entire $1,000.
You can make your purchases for any amount as long as you do not exceed your $1,000. You can also use your "Christmas Cash" as partial payment for larger purchases and pay the balance by any other method acceptable to the participating merchant.

All purchases must be complete by December 24, 1994.

Pick up your loan application at:

The Gibsons Branch of the Sunshine Coast Credit Union - 886-8121

The Sechelt Branch of the Sunshine Coast Credit Union 885-3255

sechelt scenario

Last week in my column I said that the proceeds from Sechelt elementary school's Book Fair were going to help some students with a trip to Quebec. Of course that is not the case, not true, erase this from your memory. The proceeds from the book fair Nov. 14 to 17 are going to be used to update the library, maybe put in a computer etc. The times again are: 2 pm to 5 pm and 7 pm to 9 pm on the Wednesday. I apologize for any inconvenience my mis-information caused. Now may be your chance to pick up a book you've always wanted, so please come out and support this great cause.

Annual general meeting

A reminder to all members and friends - the St. Mary's Auxiliary (Sunshine Coast) will be holding its annual general meeting Monday, Nov. 21 at the Sechelt Legion. Registration starts at 11 am, meeting at 11:30 and lunch will be served at noon. Tickets are $6 and are available from the branch presidents. For any more info, contact Vivian Tepoorten at 885-4508.

Showtime

It's showtime with the fabulous Nikki Weber in the Seniors Centre on Nov. 27 starting at 8 pm. This show is something you just can't afford to miss. Tickets are $8 and may be bought at Books 'n Stuff, Talewind Books and the Seniors Centre.

SPCA in the mall

The Sunshine Coast SPCA will be doing their thing in Trail Bay Mall Saturday, Saturday, Nov. 26. On display will be a model ship, four feet long, donated by Norman Hoffar, for which you can buy tickets. Please buy tickets. Even if you don't win the beautiful ship you'll know that you've helped the animals. The volunteers at the SPCA do a super job and are super people, but sometimes even they feel daunted by the work that's still to be done. Let's all do our bit. Make sure your animal is spayed or neutered and buy a ticket for the raffle. Dare I suggest a year's subscription to the SPCA? By the way, a picture of a ship may be seen at the shelter, not the real thing as I suggested in last week's column.

In lieu of cards

Friends of St. Mary's Hospital auxiliary Sechelt branch may make donations in lieu of Christmas cards at Bobby's Shoes or call Erika Wright at 885-5775.

halfmoon happenings

by Ruth Forrester, 885-2418

Saturday Night

You have two choices for places to go in Halfmoon Bay this coming Saturday, Nov. 19. At Welcome Beach Hall there is Pub Night, always a popular night at the hall. Pop in for an evening of games and a good time with a cool pint and some great grub. There are lots of new people to be met at the hall so join in and make some new friends.

Then there is the dance at Halfmoon Bay School on the same evening. This is a fundraiser for the Welcome Beach Preschool. It starts at 8 pm and you can dance to the music of Night Moves. Get your tickets at Pastimes, Talewind Books or at Halfmoon Bay Store.

Good progress

The many friends of Marg and Bill Vorley will be pleased to learn that Marg is coming along just fine and responding well to treatment and therapy. It would be a good idea to give Marg a call some time and drop by for a visit. I'm sure she would be glad to see some of her old friends from Halfmoon Bay.

Some sad news items are those of the passing of two of our long time residents. John Grognet was well known in the area where he lived for many years. He spent his last few years at Shorncliffe. He will be sadly missed by his family and friends. Phyllis Winton became a full time Redrooffs resident several years ago, having owned property in what is known as Damp Bay since way back in the late 30s. Phyllis had taken care of herself at home up until last week when she became suddenly ill and passed away in St. Mary's Hospital.

It was nice to know that she enjoyed her last weekend with a visit from her sister Margaret Stoker, also a former Redrooffs resident and now residing in Beacon Hill Lodge in West Vancouver.

How about bocci ball?

We have just been informed that there is quite an active group playing carpet bocci at Welcome Beach hall every week. If you would like more details give Sandy a call at 885-9088. She will tell you what nights are available.

Reward

The Sargeant Bay Society has been doing a wonderful job in that precious area, having recently done extensive work on the hiking trail between Sargeant Bay and Triangle Lake.

With the trend towards vandalism these days, "the Sargeant Bay Society is offering a maximum $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a person or persons found guilty of damaging public property or wildlife in Sargeant Bay Provincial Park. Please phone BC Parks at 885-9019. Phone calls will be treated in confidence."

Trails

This summer the Sunshine Coast Forest District continued work on a trail between Trout Lake and Sargeant Bay. The trail is essentially complete from Trout Lake to Halfmoon Bay School and there is still some finishing work to be done. The trail is for the use of both hikers and cyclists.

Block parents

On Tues., Nov. 15 Constable Woodsworth will be at Halfmoon Bay School to talk about a Block Parent Program. You don't have to be a parent to attend and your input will be welcome. Time is at 7:30 pm.

Thank you for supporting the Order of the Eastern Star in buying raffle tickets.

The winners of the raffle which was drawn on Nov. 5 are: first prize, Irene Taylor of Madeira Park; second, Eddie Westmoreland from Coquitlam; and third Brian Burke of Ladysmith. The Past Matrons raffle of a Christmas cake was won by Margaret Foster of Halfmoon Bay.

Pender Harbour dry grads 1995 will be holding a garage sale Nov. 26 at the high school gym. For donations call Kristine at 883-9204.

A youth forum on drug, alcohol and suicide prevention Nov. 16 from 2:20 to 3:30 will be held at Pender Harbour high school.

The Pender Harbour and District Chamber of Commerce meeting Nov. 28 will take place at the legion hall.

egmont news

by Lisa Lightbourn, 883-2018

You weren't hearing leftover firecrackers from Hallowe'en on Nov. 4, it was just some blasting going on at Stan Terema's lot on Bradwynne Road. He was having it levelled out a bit and Paddy was there moving some rock.

I had a nice visit with Flo Williams the other morning, long-time resident of old Egmont — or East Egmont I guess it's called — across the water. A couple of weeks ago Flo moved into one of the pink cabins in downtown Egmont and is settling in comfortably. She's a lovely person. She also showed me some of the beautiful baby blankets that she crochets.

Welcome to Lisa and son Damien, age two, recently moved to Egmont from Ontario.

The community, many friends and family gathered Saturday evening at the hall to show their love, support and friendship for Buddy Cook. Buddy was also honoured at a dance after the pot luck dinner, featuring the Electric Warriors, a band from North Vancouver, also friends of Bud's.

This time of year with the heavy rains etc. the question arises: how safe is our drinking water? I thought I would address that at least for those on the Waugh Lake water system. The Waugh Lake water system was established around 1946 by Oliver Larson and Jean Bernzen as a service to the community, which made it a community owned, community maintained water system. With the initial connection fee each member becomes equal partners with others on the water system.

To inquire about the Waugh Lake water I called John Seabrook who has been drinking the water for 25 years and has played a major role in the maintenance and preservation of the water system, learning everything he knows, years ago, from one of the original founders, Jean Bernzen.

The intake line was eight feet deep but as of last spring it was extended to about 700 feet into the lake, drawing water from approximately 40 feet down. At this level the water is crystal clear, ice cold, and yes, safe, says John.

The extension of the line not only encouraged cleaner, clearer water, but also a 25 percent increase in water pressure. The water is tested once or twice a year. It was last tested in the spring and received a good rating. The only bad reading John was ever aware of was three years ago after a clear cut in the area of the watershed. Basically it's a very pure, low maintenance gravity fed system.

An exploration of "Radical Innocence"

by Jane Seyd

In memory, a boy sits in the car next to his father in silence "enroute from the last thing he tried to do with me," driving past a lake and some Ponderosa pine trees.

A girl hurries home from Sunday school afraid she might hear the voice of God and "the deafening harmonies of everything at once..."

A man and woman with a mysterious child stop for Turkish coffee, watching the shelling of an old city behind them and the arc of the mortar.

These enigmatic images are just some of those brought up in a new collection of poetry by Pender Harbour resident John Pass.

There are also SCUD missiles, and domestic scenes of planting a garden. A "body" lying down near a pile of grass clippings and listening to its own breathing. "Old prophets foretelling/the coming and the coming again of kings."

In Radical Innocence, recently published by Harbour Publishing on the Sunshine Coast, there are few poems which move in a straightforward, linear fashion, but many evocative suggestions to the reader.

A central theme connecting many poems, however, is Pass's exploration of Christianity, and meditation on what it means to the contemporary world.

John Pass

"So much of our social behaviour is based on those concepts," says Pass.

Although he was brought up an Anglican himself, "I'm ambivalent about Christianity," he says, "...that's essentially what I'm explaining here."

Not surprisingly, considering the subject matter, Radical Innocence covers a lot of ground.

There are the mysteries of faith, and hope which "has somewhere to go we cannot name", the dual "threat and promise of rejuvenation." There are the also the secret workings of fate, as when a man "falls/ into an alternate life...sort of choosing to take a mistress, a mortgage/or a bachelor apartment on the thirteenth floor..." or "...slips against the tables of the money-changers/the odds-makers, and walks away a changeling, a babe..."

Many of the lines and poems from the book deal with the subject of masculine relationships; the simultaneous power and loneliness of authority figures and the relationship between fathers and sons, both mortal and divine.

Another exploration in the book concerns the often troubled relationship between the soul and the body. In "Reprieve for the Body", Pass writes with wonderful compassion for the body which "wants its walking daylight, daily/bread of whole air and things seen at the right pace."

Throughout Radical Innocence, Biblical images are frequently mixed with the detritus of 1990s civilization to interesting effect. We end up with both "Lambs blood, laser surgery", and "the gospel of the online/feedback", limbs anointed with oil appearing in the infra-red display. "I think the job of the poet is to update mythology," says Pass. "It's to shatter its structures with contemporary detail and observation."

The job of poetry, he says, is to "surprise you into certain kinds of awareness."

In this, Radical Innocence succeeds.

Juried show a blend of creativity

by Darah Hansen

A metal chain grows rusty in the imaginary flow of the salty water.

It holds tight as the sliding sand moves past its sturdy links, through them. It sinks deeper into the earth and lets life surround, overcome. It remains, a lifeline to the forces with which it exists.

Such are the thoughts that come to mind when viewing Vivian Chamberlin's painting "Life's a Beach" — a vivid creation blended together from watercolour, acrylics and ink.

Chamberlin's piece is one of over 50 paintings, photographs, sculptures, tapestries, needlepoint and pottery currently on display at the Sunshine Coast Arts Centre in Sechelt. The show, entitled "View 16", is part of the annual juried show, a collage of talent selected this year by artist Barry Cogswell of Langley.

The show represents a pleasing variety of local skill and artistry with styles and mediums as varied as the artists themselves.

Arts Centre curator Larry Westlake gave credit to the selection of this year's juror. In past juried shows, there was a perception of juror bias towards drawings because they represented the juror's own experience.

This year's show contains a wider range of "solid" work because Cogswell is himself a sculptor and potter as well as a painter and drawer, Westlake said.

Indeed the two large sculpted works displayed mid-room just off the centre's floors add balance and contrast to the works on the surrounding walls — in particular, Roy C. Lewis' "Sunday Morning" sits, casually, like a bronzed monument to sunlit warmth and human sensuality.

"View 16" is the 16th annual juried show on the Sunshine Coast and will be on display at the arts centre until Nov. 20.

Coast arts community mourns Louise Baril

The arts community on the Sunshine Coast is mourning a loss after Louise Baril died Nov. 6 after a fight with leukemia.

Baril was active in many local arts organizations including the Soundwaves choir, and had sat on the boards of the Sunshine Coast Arts Council and the Sunshine Coast Music Society.

She had also been an important force in running the Countryside Concert series of classical music performances on the Coast in recent years.

Those who knew Baril spoke this week of her great love of music.

"She was just incredibly enthusiastic and knowledgeable about music," said Pat Forst.

Maureen Jennings, current president of the arts council, also spoke of Baril as a "major force with music for the arts council."

"She was very interested in music in all forms," said Jennings. "She performed. She sang." Jennings also recalled Baril as a stabilizing influence for various arts organizations. "She had a good sense of humour. She was very good a bringing people together."

Said Forst, "Nothing seemed too much trouble for her to do."

Jennings said Baril will be remembered by her friends and those who knew her on the Coast "with a great deal of affection."

A local memorial gathering is planned for Nov. 27, 3 pm at Henderson Beach in Roberts Creek.

Ski club looks toward future

Fundraising events are also in the works and Mark hopes by next year the club will be operating a snowmobile and track setter and offering ski lessons.

"We want to try to reach into education and teach the youngsters to ski. Almost every community I've been in has a Jack Rabbits program (for kids) and I think it's time we brought it to the Sunshine Coast. There are local families taking their kids to Seymour for it now.

"We also want to start up a club for retired folks. I look at that stuff and think, if we can offer some of that stuff to youngsters, it gives them a life sport. And seniors can pick it up at any time. It doesn't matter how fragile they are. With a little basic instruction, it's amazing how fast we can get them on skis....

"I think a lot of people think you have to be in really good shape to do this but it's not really that hard. The hardest part is just going and doing it. There's so much fun to be had out there. That's why a lot of us are doing this.

"To break the monotony of work and to exercise. It gets you to some beautiful spots and you can begin to have a better understanding of the environment. I don't think it has to be a life threatening event."

He mentions the huge cost benefits of back country skiing compared to downhill skiing which can require $50 lift tickets, hotels and transportation.

A new set of bindings is all a downhiller needs to become a back country skiier, Mark says. 2

Snowboarders, too, have found glorious bowls to ski locally, he says, adding the club has talked about organizing more for snowboarders.

The club's annual general meeting takes place this Wednesday (Nov. 16) at Roberts Creek School at 7:30 pm.

There will be a discussion on cross country and telemark touring schedules, a potential new cross country ski area and ski lessons.

George Smith will present a slide show of a recent trip to the northern Rockies.

The club's snow phone is up and running for information on ski conditions and other club activities at 885-9167.

elphie volleyball

For a young team (one grade 9, five grade 10s and four grade 11s and 12s) the Elphinstone Cougars Senior Girls Volleyball team is having an excellent season.

The girls can brag of a 21 win and 12 loss record with strong finishes in the five tournaments in which they have competed.

Highlights of the season include:

A third place finish at the Guildford Park Invitational in Surrey.

They defeated Triple A schools such as North Surrey, South Delta, Westview (Maple Ridge), Burnaby South and Guildford Park only to lose close three game matches to Yale and Burnaby North.

A strong showing at the UBC Tournament defeating David Thompson and Alpha and losing close matches to provincially ranked St. Thomas Aquinas and Westsyde (Kamloops).

Another good showing at the Maple Ridge Ramblers Tournament defeating Pitt Meadows, Burnaby Central, Maple Ridge and Regent Christian Academy only to lose a close 15 to 13 third game in the semi-finals to Regent.

A three match sweep of Howe Sound, Carson Graham and Pemberton in Squamish. All six games were won at this mini-tournament.

A strong showing at Pender Harbour defeating Cariboo Hill, Carson Graham and Pender Harbour, but losing a very close game three in the final to Pender.

Next up: The North Shore Zone Finals in North Vancouver on Nov. 19.

This tournament will take place at Sutherland Secondary School with the winner gaining a berth to the AA Provincial Championships in Kimberly.

4. In Memoriam

RENA DIXON: In loving memory of Rena who passed away one year ago today, November 16, 1993.
We watched you suffer,
We heard you sigh, -
But all we could do was just stand by.
When the time came
we suffered, too -
For you never deserved
what you went through.
God took your hand
and we had to part;
He eased your pain
but broke our hearts.
If you could have spoken
before you died,
These are the words
you would have replied:
"This life for me has truly passed.
I loved you all to the very last.
Weep not for me,
but courage take...
and love one another
for my sake."
Sadly missed by the Joe Family. #46c

5. Thank You

The family of John Grognet would like to thank everyone for their kind words, flowers, cards and donations during our recent loss. A special thank you to the staff of Shorncliffe and Dr. Farrer for their excellent care of John. #46c remember when

5 YEARS AGO

The Halfmoon Bay elementary school was officially opened by School Board Chair Maureen Clayton, other officials and young helpers Allison Petula, Jenny Schofield and Kyle Doyle.

In an agreement finalized last week the Sechelt Indian Band through its wholly owned company S.I.B Air & Transportation Services Inc., became a corporate partner of Tyee Airways Limited.

10 YEARS AGO

Gibsons Planner Rob Buchan had some welcome news at the Nov. 7 committee of the whole meeting. The Downtown Revitalization Plan agreement has been signed by the Minister of Municipal Affairs, funding is available and preparatory work is already underway on the project.

The Pender Harbour Golf Society has received a Local Employment Assistance and Development grant in the amount of $350,000 to further work on the nine hole Pender Harbour golf course.

15 YEARS AGO

The first public meeting on the controversial Gibsons Marina proposal draws 200 residents of Gibsons and vicinity to the Royal Canadian Legion Hall.

The village office continues to press the claim for damages in the Cavalcade dynamite caper; about 20 property owners are claiming a total of $3,000.

25 YEARS AGO

An era came to an end in Port Mellon when the last of the stucco houses which formed the Stucco Townsite was bulldozed out of existence. The new site of Port Mellon sits on the hill above the town.

Alderman Morgan Thompson resigns his aldermanic seat to oppose incumbent Sechelt Mayor William Swain.

35 YEARS AGO

Thomas Hansen of Pender Harbour narrowly escaped death when his gillnetter listed on the grid at Art Duncan's Marine Ways and burst into flames when oil spilled and ignited.

The number of telephones on the Sunshine Coast has reached 1,854, a far cry from the 80 telephones listed in the 1947 telephone book.

45 YEARS AGO

Don Howell and Ed Lutz were plucked from their half-submerged raft which was drifting out to sea at Davis Bay, by Davis Bay resident Mr. Charles Brookman.

Three fish boats and their owners have been missing since a recent big storm off the Sunshine Coast. Missing are William Harris of Pender Harbour, Red Hamilton and Jimmy Nelson.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Sunshine Coast Regional District REQUESTS PROPOSALS FOR THE REMOVAL OF RECYCLABLE SCRAP METAL FROM THE SECHELT AND PENDER HARBOUR LANDFILL SITES.

The SCRD requires that all scrap metals be removed on a regular basis and that the storage area at the landfill sites be kept to the smallest practical area. All proposals should include the frequency at which the scrap metals will be removed and the size of the area required for adequate storage. Previous tracking information is available upon request.

The SCRD anticipates revenues from redirecting the recyclable scrap metals.

Please direct written proposals to the Sunshine Coast Regional District Works Department by 2:00 p.m. on Thursday, November 17, 1994. Any or all proposals may not be accepted.

ANNUAL FLUSHING PROGRAM

We are continuing our annual hydrant flushing program. During the week of November 14, 1994, we will be flushing in the Halfmoon Bay, Redrooffs & Welcome Woods areas.

You may experience short periods of low water pressure and/or sediment in the water for brief periods of time. The water is safe to drink.

Thank you for your cooperation.
