Gibsons parking problems addressed

by Ian Cobb

Where to park or not to park — that is the question.

Parking in Lower Gibsons is becoming more of an issue all the time.

"The parking bylaws in this town are restricting desired, good development," said a town businessman, speaking on terms of anonymity.

"It's a disgrace. Molly's Reach is just sitting there, empty. It's disgusting. Have you ever watched visitors when they arrive in town for the first time? They walk up, yank on the doors, look inside, take a photograph and walk away. I'm sure they can't believe it's sitting there empty."

Town administrator Dan Legg agrees. "Parking is a real issue."

Because there is no parking for Molly's Reach, and none can be provided that will meet town bylaw requirements, the site, made famous in the now defunct CBC television show "The Beachcombers," sits empty but inviting to newcomers.

Should Molly's Reach be purchased and turned into a restaurant or pub, a common usage bandied about by residents and visitors, one parking space for each five seats would be required.

Should it be set up as a museum, one parking space per each 646 square feet of display area is required. For retail space, one site for every 484 square feet of gross floor area is needed.

Finally, as an auditorium/theatre hall designation, one parking site for every five square meters of gross floor space is needed.

The Coast News could not contact the owner of the Reach to verify the square footage of the building or what they would or wouldn't like to do with it.

"It's an issue with virtually every commercial development, even in upper Gibsons. In Lower Gibsons we face it with every development," Legg said of the parking issue.

He pointed at the "design exercise" undertaken by the architect designing the Gibsons and District Library (to be situated between the current library and Gibsons town hall) as an example.

"They came up with a parking structure with the library above it," he said, quickly noting it's not underground parking because of the slope of the site. "It will be open on three sides."

Another site ripe for downtown development is the old Shell station at the five-corners.

"There's a much better likelihood of developing it," Legg said, explaining there is some room for parking.

The town is waiting for the output of recently hired consultants that are looking into ideas for a downtown revitalization project and "parking will be examined and solutions arrived at," Legg said.

"The consultants will be talking to the merchants and we fully anticipate there will be some solutions but they won't be easy and they won't be perfect."

The most difficult area to bridge for the town in terms of parking is the limited space it has to work with.

"You're not going to create more land so you have to create as friendly a pedestrian environment as you can," Legg said.

"There's always the potential for a parking structure but that would have to fit in with Lower Gibsons."

The town also owns a strip of land up School Road from the Ingoll's House municipal parking lot to N. Fletcher Road. "There's the potential for quite a bit of parking there," Legg said.

Gibsons RCMP bust home pot operation

The grass is always greener behind a window covered in tinfoil...

An RCMP search of a Pratt Road home June 6 resulted in a seizure of 17 "mature" marijuana plants plus a kilogram of dried marijuana.

Corp. Robin Blair of the Gibsons RCMP said police also found growing equipment such as grow lights, electrical fans and a drying kiln.

Blair would not elaborate on how the police were tipped about the location but did say the operation was fairly sophisticated.

According to Detective Steve McKennan of the Vancouver City drug squad, the street value of the Gibsons drug bust is upwards of $20,000.

McKennan explained that, for court purposes, a mature marijuana plant is estimated as capable of producing three ounces of marijuana.

"Of course, growers usually get a lot more than that... Maybe as many as nine ounces per plant," McKennan said. "But in court it's standard practice to guarantee that a plant will yield three ounces."

Marijuana currently sells for between $10 and $15 a gram.

The occupants of the Pratt Road home have yet to be charged and cannot be identified.

An investigation continues.

Sechelt Band land claim court action continues

by Darah Hansen

After meeting with their lawyers Wednesday (June 8) in Vancouver, Sechelt Indian Band say they will proceed with court action against both the federal and provincial governments.

Band chief Garry Feschuk confirmed late Wednesday afternoon the band is moving ahead with legal actions which commenced Friday (June 3) after the band served a writ of summons on the federal and provincial Crown.

The band is taking the governments to court in hopes of having their land claims settled.

"We're just doing everything possible to get on with our land claims," Feschuk said.

John Haig, a lawyer with the federal Justice Department, said it's too early to know how the federal government will proceed with the case.

Haig said there have been no discussions so far between the federal government and the Sechelt Band regarding the case.

He added, the Sechelts are not the first Native band to take the government to court on land claims issues.

Haig estimated it will take a few months before action is taken on the case by the federal Crown.

The provincial government has been actively involved in negotiating Sechelt land claims since the band threatened to cut off the main water supply to the town of Sechelt and surrounding district earlier in the year. Those negotiations have been on-going.

The band has stated it doesn't believe the governments are negotiating their claim in good faith because they stand to lose too much money by giving up rents, royalties and profits garnered from resources and services on land currently under the Sechelt land claim.

Under the current legal action, the band is seeking the creation of a special trust fund into which all money garnered off land under the claim will be put until a settlement is reached.

The band's claim covers an area of 4,900 square miles on the Sunshine Coast.

Reflecting on 40 years of life and times in Gibsons

by Darah Hansen

There is a "for sale" sign in front of the little house on the hill in which Gibsons residents Diana and Ron Brackett have lived for the past 40 years.

They've packed up the front shop where Ron had run a shoe repair business over the years. Inside the house, the pictures are still on the wall, the furniture is in place but it will all be gone soon.

The Brackett's are moving to Vancouver Island at the end of the month.

"It (the Coast) is not easy to leave," says Ron.

It was September, 1954 when they first stepped off the ferry into Lower Gibsons — Diana, 20, Ron, 27, and the first two of their four children. Their memories are still fresh as the day they arrived.

LRUP up for public review

by Ian Cobb

Are you prepared to digest 42-plus months worth of valuable information flavoured by a cross-section of interest groups?

The Tetrahedron Local Resource Use Plan committee is finally, after three and one-half years of debate and discussion, ready to come before the Sunshine Coast populace to present their findings and to glean public response and reaction.

The LRUP committee and Sunshine Coast Forest District is staging a two day public review, Sunday June 26 from noon until 9 pm and Monday, June 27 from 6 p.m. to 10 pm at the Rockwood Centre in Sechelt.

"We wanted to hit a weekend day and week day to accommodate people that work and people out of town for the weekend," said LRUP chair Barry Miller of the SCFD.

The Sunday review will be just that, a review of the conclusions reached and the information gathered by the LRUP core and sub-committees over the past years.

The Monday review will consist of a presentation by an as yet to be decided facilitator and three minute presentations by the seven sub-committee chairs (Wilderness, Jobs, Water, Old Growth, Recreation, Fish and Wildlife and Forestry). After those presentations the floor "will be thrown open," Miller said.

An eighth sub-committee, Final Report, will have their work on hand in the form of a draft of the final report of the LRUP, detailing the most important portions of all sub-committee reports and issues raised during LRUP core-committee meetings.

"It will be a statement or an expression to the public of our progress the last three and a half years," Miller said.

All public input and comments will be included in the final report that is to be forwarded to the provincial Protected Areas Strategy for consideration of including the five/sixth (88 per cent) agreed upon area of the Tetrahedron Plateau, also called the Option Six boundary, into the province's protected areas.

A protected area means no industrial activity (logging/mining) and restricted recreation.

The remaining 12 per cent of the Tetrahedron, which the LRUP has been unable to come to an agreement on, will also be thrown out to the public for their suggestions and questions.

Miller also noted that all questions asked and concerns aired will be noted in official minutes and be attached to the final report to PAS.

As for the LRUP moving from the often heated atmosphere of boardroom debate to the public, Miller said, "It's a good feeling."

So, if you care about what should happen to the Tetrahedron Plateau — mark June 26-27 on your calendar and head down to Rockwood Centre.

Breakaway celebrates four years

About 20 young people show up Saturday afternoon for the barbeque, with morepeople trickling in all the time. Mostly they are Elphinstone students and their ages range from 13 to 19.

From outward appearances they are your typical group of teenagers, with all the variety that implies.

Some have long hair, some short. Some are dressed in jeans and rock T-shirts, some are decked out in Sunday-best. But they share some common ground... all have or have had some association with drugs or alcohol.

It's the fourth anniversary celebration of the Sunshine Coast Breakaway program and members past and present have shown up for the festivities.

Ron Girard, who runs the program, is happy with the turn-out, and even more pleased with the progress Breakaway has made since inception.

"We've helped a lot of kids," he says. "We've shown them there is another way (besides drugs or alcohol)."

Breakaway councillor Mary Thys, who has been with the program for just a week, says she's excited by what she sees in Breakaway.

"This is an excellent program," she says."And it's essential to the recovery process."

The breakaway program is adapted from the 12-step philosophy of Alcoholics Anonymous and as such, requires that young people communicate with each other their thoughts and feelings.

And while Thys says this is not always easy for those in attendance, it too is essential to recovery.

"A lot of times a lack of communication, a feeling that we are misunderstood, is the source of addiction," she says. "This is a safe place for the kids, a safe environment, and that's important."

According to Girard, Breakaway has helped over 200 young people in the last four years.

"I'll say 200,"he says."But that's low if anything."

Couple talks about 'progress' in town

"I remember there was the biggest thunder and lightening storm the day we came," says Diana. They'd been told it never rained like that on the Sunshine Coast.

They were greeted on the docks by a member of the Kinsmen Club — after Ron contracted polio the organization sponsored the Brackett's move to the Sunshine Coast, supplied them with their house and set Ron up in his shoe repair business.

Diana remembers how friendly the town seemed compared to their previous home in Vancouver. Everyone said 'hello' as they passed in the streets and the family felt immediately welcomed into their new community...until they saw the house.

Diana laughs now as she recalls climbing up to their new home and seeing what she thought was an outhouse behind the building. With two small children she thought her worst nightmare had been realized.

Further investigation inside the house revealed a full bathroom, much to the young mother's relief. The building outside was the pumphouse.

Over the years, the house has become an "old friend" to the family. In it, they've lived and worked and watched their children grow.

From out its windows they've seen their town change.

They hold memories of all the old stores and houses which no longer stand — some of them burnt down, some of them torn down and still others which just fell down — and of people who are no longer alive.

"It's noisy now compared to what it used to be," says Ron reflecting on how Gibsons has grown.

"When we first moved here, we weren't even part of the town," he says.

"There was nothing up behind us. It was all bush...there was a chicken farm across the street."

Out the back window housing developments now fight for space, and from out front sounds from the busy Highway 101 leak their way into the room.

"Progress is fine," both Brackett's agree, but they hope town council will maintain some measure of control to keep the small town flavour.

And as they make their final preparations to leave their home, the Bracketts say they are ready to make the move to the Island. It'll be different, they know, but they're hoping they'll be able to share some of the community feeling they first learned in Gibsons.

'Dangerous' apartment block raises ire of Gibsons council

by Ian Cobb

It's becoming an executive pain in the backside for the Town of Gibsons.

An apartment block at 725 Highway 101 (Executive Suites Apartments), eyed by town officials as a "long standing problem" has run out of time in responding to a town order to rectify various safety requirements.

Gibsons town council agreed June 7 to a recommendation made by chief building inspector Roland Seguin that Section 750.1 of the Municipal Act be invoked and that a notice-on-title be filed with the Land Title Office.

"The owners have allowed the building to become dilapidated and decayed to the point where it is affecting the health, safety and well-being of the occupants and visitors," wrote Seguin in a report to town administrator Dan Legg.

Seguin said a "bridge egress passageway" as decayed and dilapidated "beyond repair," missing, damaged, broken and decayed guardrails, a leaking roof and "fire prevention deficiencies are not being attended to or satisfactorily resolved," in his report as what is wrong at the apartment.

Because the absentee-owners of the property, named as 380699 Ontario Ltd. from "various parts of Canada" have not responded to a town double registered letter dated April 15, identifying the problems and asking the owners to resolve them, Seguin and the town have had to take matters into their own hands.

> 'The owners have allowed the building to become dilapidated and decayed'
> -Roland Seguin

The reason being, said Dan Legg, is the town has to protect itself from liability.

And enacting a notice-on-title will "protect the town from subsequent liability.

The practical implication is many owners won't want this on their title."

Town Councillor Ed Steeves said he was "concerned about the dilapidation" of the building and wondered if there "were not more teeth" the town could use to force the landlord to rectify the problems.

Legg said a force in the way of the town getting a response from the landlords is the fact they're "absentee. It's a slow process.

"It slows things down. It's not like we can just go knock on their door."

Steeves said he would rather see occupants moved out because he feared lives were being endangered.

In a similar matter, town council agreed to another recommendation made by Seguin that a notice-on-title be filed on a Casa Luna Condominium at 450 Marine Drive.

Because a unit owner will not allow the building owner to install a fire alarm system, as is required in the building code for a five-story building, Seguin asked for the notice-on-title to help ameliorate the contravention of the building code requirement.

"This procedure will have the effect of notifying any subsequent purchaser and limit the town's liability with respect to this issue," Seguin said.

From Pigs to policies

"And now to more mundane things," remarked Gibsons Mayor Eric Small following a plaque presentation to Gibsons Pigs Rugby club representative Stu Frizzell on June 7.

The town recognized the Vancouver Rugby Union Pigs for their championship season.

Dis-is-appointing?

"Like the murder/suicide — planning is everything," said Sunshine Coast Regional District Area E Director Jim Gurney, explaining why the board first discussed and then appointed Joan Harvey as elections officer June 9.

Once a cop...

"Oh Earl, I know you're into tickets. It's like a past life," declared SCRD Roberts Creek Director Brett McGillivary after Sechelt Mayor Earl Basse commented on the SCRD's plans to begin proceedings to set up a Municipal Ticketing Information System Implementation.

Basse, of course, is a former RCMP officer.

School lay-offs announced

by Roxanne Gregory

School district assistant superintendent Stewart Hercus issued lay off notices last Wednesday to 60 special education teaching assistants and noon hour supervisors.

The staffing cuts come as a result of a special education audit last year that identified the need to trim $250,000 from the district's operating budget.

"We've had to make a significant re-allocation of working hours across the district, and in order to avoid the disruption caused by worker's bumping other workers in the fall, we decided to lay everyone off, and re-post the jobs with amended hours," Hercus said.

"We are working with the union and hope to be able to post positions by the end of June. Some people will be able to re-apply for their old jobs, but seniority will decide who gets what."

Hercus said, "It's not like we're firing these people, but at least half of them are being directly affected by the change in the number of hours.

"Although this is a massive change, we think we've been able to maintain a lot of jobs," he said.

Normally the school district evaluates the number of special education hours each school requires in the fall. SETA's, whose positions are reduced or eliminated, are then able to bump those with less seniority. The change in personnel can have a rippling effect across schools for months.

According to Hercus, there will be a net loss of 70 hours or the equivalent of three SETA positions this fall.

The lay-off plan will avoid the kinds of disruptions caused by bumping.

Although some library clerk/secretary positions will also have changes in hours, the lay offs only affect noon hour supervisors and SETA's.

District trustee Liz Wilson, a former SETA, said the union had proposed the plan in an effort to stop bumping. "It's really hard on kids, it's very disruptive, and it takes months to complete. This way, in the fall, bumping won't be a problem."

CUPE local 801 president Celia Fisher could not be reached for comment.

In Gibson... No parking at the Inn

Build them and they shall drive.

But build them outside of Lower Gibsons, please.

The success and character of historic Gibsons should not be determined by modern bylaw requirements for parking, developed well after Lower Gibsons' character was shaped and formed.

A little bit of history you say — Molly's Reach sits vacant partially because its owners wouldn't be able to afford the parking requirements that go hand in hand during the '90s with development. But parking requirements should not determine the nature of business at Molly's Reach, the market should.

Rather than facilitating the sprawl of the downtown or the continued shift of retail and commercial up the highway, town council should clear the way for a town parking lot within walking distance of Lower Gibsons — but outside the core.

The town's downtown revitalization consultants will likely find that pedestrian access to Lower Gibsons would be preferred both by necessity and choice. Keep the cars out of the tourist area. Although places like White Rock's waterfront strip and Robson Street in Vancouver do not exist without vehicle traffic, both cities are now grappling with too many cars up and down their tourist traps.

If there were enough parking spaces in Lower Gibsons, there would be little room for all the cars to drive to and fro.

There is no more land for parking in Lower Gibsons.

Two cents — the most sense in LRUP review

Now is the time for Sunshine Coast citizens to offer their two cents regarding the Tetrahedron Local Resource Use Plan.

On June 26 and June 27 the LRUP committee is unveiling a draft of the final report of what they've deemed should and shouldn't be done on the Tetrahedron Plateau.

In case you've managed to skim past the crush of articles in the Coast News over the years and especially over the last six months, the LRUP committee has been trying to determine whether or not the Tetrahedron should be included in the provincial Protected Areas Strategy.

The committee, all residents of the Coast, except chairman Barry Miller (Powell River) of the Sunshine Coast Forest District, have offered their blood, sweat and tears (often literally) to compile the information and suggestions they're opening up for public scrutiny and input at Rockwood Centre.

Simply put, the Tetrahedron is the lifeblood of the Sunshine Coast, and the battle this dedicated group of volunteers has waged to come up with a fair and logical solution, as to the future use of the area, has been monumental.

The community not only owes it to itself but to the members of the LRUP committee to take the time and attend one or both of the public reviews.

Your two cents now makes the most sense.

Time running out

It seems that time is running out for the hundreds of people who signed a petition to the District of Sechelt Council to seek means to acquire the Tong property for a park on Sechelt Boulevard. More than 900 people signed the first petition and a second petition now circulating has gathered many more names.

The acquisition of this land need not mean an increase in taxes — there are other options which can be explored by our elected representatives and our paid senior staff — if only they cared. They have consistently refused to sit down with us as a group to consider active research of these options by those who have the authority and expertise to do so. Private citizens do not get far upon such matters without official blessing.

The Tong development permit is on the agenda for ratification at council's next meeting, Wednesday June 15, 7.30 p.m. at the Municipal Hall, Inlet Ave. The Trail Bay Protection Society will be presenting the case for a park. We are hoping that as many people as possible of those who care about the quality of life on the Coast will come to this meeting to give support to all those who are actively working for Trail Bay Park.

Sunshine Coast — this is a vital part of your future.

Our mayor stated in an interview in a Coast paper that it is "always the same people" who come to council meetings, so show up with friends and let him see some new ones — lots of them. This may be our very last chance to make our feelings known before the chainsaws go in to bring down those trees. Next year a long wall of condos could stretch from Wharf Avenue to the Driftwood Inn. If this prospect saddens and appalls you, then come join us.

E. MAJORIE GOODING
Sechelt

Favourable vote

Last year, during our meetings regarding the future of Sechelt, the Village Core OCP Sub-Committee voted in favour of Trail Bay Park. Our sub-committee included a developer, a real estate salesperson, merchants, environmentalist, industry, long time residents, short time residents, seniors, youth, taxpayers, renters, working, retired, men and women.

Needless to say this group did not agree on everything. However, they did agree to designate the property on Trail Bay as a park.

I am writing this letter now because I do not see the will of the sub-committee or others who support the park, reflected in council action. I would like to see some positive action. I ask the mayor to direct staff to find ways that we could possibly acquire this property from its present owner, Mr. Tong.

There is money for downtown revitalization. There is money for a canal. There is money for the Trail Bay Wharf. Now we hear that there is even money for a municipal hall, too. There is money for Trail Bay Park. We need to find out where it is and how to get it.

Finding the money is not the job of citizens. That is the responsibility of government through their staff. The people have fulfilled their responsibility. The people have spoken. The people continue to speak. I ask mayor and council to listen now and direct staff to find ways that the democratic process can be reflected in political action.

Community spirit

Community spirit and caring is alive in Gibsons. This was evidenced by the wonderful support during our "Why Watch When You Can Live It" week at Cedar Grove school. Many local personalities demonstrated activities children and adults could get involved in.

The Learning for Living Committee at Cedar Grove staged a successful campaign to encourage students away from their television sets. This was in conjunction with the school's awareness and emphasis against violence in the community. Without the enthusiastic involvement of the community, the week would not have been such a huge success.

Ryan Dempster started off the athletic stations Monday afternoon by inspiring students that dreams are obtainable through hard work and dedication. Many thanks to the grade five students of Divisions 3 and 5 for working so hard to set up and teach their "Commonwealth Games". A round of applause to Alexandra Hook, Arden Currie, Sarah Hook, Jake Fiedler, Holly Morgan, Mike Forrest, Maggi Guzzi, James McCarthy and the Karate Club, and Doug Detwiller for providing stimulating alternatives to television on Tuesday evening. Brian Harbison and his Karaoke system entertained the students, teacher and parents Wednesday after school. The family barbecue Thursday evening was a success thanks to the organization of Belle Wilson.

It is heartwarming to know our community has so many inspiring and enthusiastic volunteers. Thank you so very much.

The fateful day the beagles from hell put me up a tree in the middle

ian cobb

I got treed by a pack of beagles the other day.

As I was aimlessly wandering down a country-lane, a pack of beagles came bounding around a corner, spotted me and chased me up an alder.

Now, if you're not familiar with beagles, they're relentless, flappy eared little demons. They sat at the bottom of the tree and bayed and bayed and bayed. My cries of "go away, pee off," only made them bay louder.

Eventually I drifted into a fitful sleep with dreams intruded upon by politicians, a woman covered in chocolate and Charles Schultz with horns protruding from his head and a forked tail dangling from his behind.

"And you thought Kansas was a weird place, Dorothy," he kept saying as he swatted at the beagles. I was frozen in my tree. All I could do was gape down at Schultz as a long line of national and provincial politicians filed past, all dressed like Charlie Brown.

The only exception was Svend Robinson. He was dressed like Linus and as he walked past he looked up at me and stopped. Preston Manning, not watching where he was going, bumped into Svend and bonked his pointy nose against Svend's pointy head.

"Rats," Preston said, rubbing his proboscis.

"You look lonely out on that limb," Svend said to me, devising a way to gain some noteriety from the prediciment he perceived.

The line then started up again and I found myself drifting into the air. A silver cord floated down to the earth and I felt so free and uninhibited. After a period of time — I'm not sure how long, I came back to my body. The beagles were gone but so was the daylight and the ground.

I fell asleep again.

"The Sechelt Indian Government District wants to talk about their land claims," the seal seated behind the secretary's desk barked.

"Spray them with cliches, rhetoric and stall them," shrieked the ferret from inside the office which said "Premiers media and troubles avoidance office" on a gilded, shiney marble door.

Giggling, the seal followed his orders.

"They'll be too busy bathing themselves in tomato soup and master will be able to escape into the skies in his helicopter gunship so he can make his 3 p.m. lunch date with a major sponsor," the ferret yelped.

"Sechelt?" the Premier mused as he flew toward Nanaimo, "Is that in B.C.? And if it is, what is it they want?"

A whispy little woman dressed in black leather and covered in chocolate leaned forward, flipped a couple of cards over, studied them for a second and said in a husky Ed McMahon-voice, "A group of people want to talk to you about land claims."

The Premier carefully placed his lollipop in the hair of a frightened looking aide, suspiciously similar to Pavel Bure and scrunched his face up into his best 'I'm a confused little squirrel look.'

"Gold?" He spluttered.

"No, goodness no. Just land, sir," the chocolate enchantress rasped.

"Give it to them then," the Premier laughed, looking down in posed-awe at a group of American salmon fisherman tossing dynamite into Georgia Strait.

"We can't," the frightened looking aide blurted, twitching as if expecting a backhanded pimp-slap from his squirrely boss.

Still watching the antics below, the Premier said, "Tell them we're listening to them and we'll do everything we can to ameliorate this long-running situation.

Tell them we're inordinately sorry for the howling errors of past governments and remind them that it's not nor has it been our fault."

Following his sudden outburst of volume, the Premier looked at the startled chocolate enchantress and smiled. His tongue flicked from his mouth and he coiled down in his seat.

Charles Schultz, flying the chopper, turned and cracked a satisfied smile.

"Rats," I heard myself say after my body thumped into the mulchy ground of the forest floor.

The beagles were gone but in the time they circled the tree baying at me, they'd left enough Gains-Burger surprises to cushion my fall.

Just another day on the job, I suppose.

Learning the real lessons of war

mountains of things

caitlin hicks

D-Day looks different to me. I saw the advertisements, the stories, the television specials. And last week, on D-Day revisited, I witnessed the familiar heads of state and the aged faces of the vets, everyone paying tribute to the kind of rhetoric that has had us mothers sending our sons to wars for millennia.

We who live, what else can we do but sing the praises of those who have given their lives for "freedom" and "democracy"? What else can we do but glorify them in retrospect? They're dust, we're pulsing. What can we do but shoot bombs into a big blue sky that doesn't need any more pollutants? What else can we do but parade in uniforms and salute and cry a nostalgic tear, telling bygone stories of the glory days?

Isn't this so familiar? The speeches, the sound of the guns? We've learned the lessons of other wars, they say. War is the biggest failure of mankind, they say. War is horrible, war is hell, they say. It was worth it, they repeat.

And then, they revel in it. Wars continue. The sons and now the daughters, are sent. They're returned in coffins. Billy who? Sally who? Wasn't she an honor student? Isn't it a shame? The sorrow and the despair of parents who've lost a child to senseless violence has been repeated millions of times, for thousands of years. But what else can we do? We got the message.

It's etched in sorrow on our psyche: Sometimes War Is The Only Solution.

I will not say that in 1944 it wasn't necessary to stage a battle on the beaches of Normandy. I will not say that it wasn't lucky that the Allies' strategies, manpower and machines of destruction were greater than the Germans'. I'm happy to be alive in North America. I cherish the contribution of those different than me, targeted for annihilation by the Third Reich. I can speak freely — up to a point — and I appreciate that privilege.

What puzzles me is the amount of money, time and attention given to this event, 50 years later. The logic of it makes me wonder: when were the lessons of war learned? And who learned these lessons?

Think about the things you've been taught about War.

• Murder is wrong, but in War, the more the better.

• To have Peace, we have to have War.

• Want freedom and equality? Smash "the enemy", bomb their lands, murder their women and children and bury their faces in the mud so deeply that when they come up for mercy, they scarcely resemble us anymore.

• This is important: the Evil is Them and the Evil is to be feared.

• And when the mess is all mopped up, and the beaches are clean again? Stage these events, talk about "the horror" of the war, the valor and most certainly, the glory.

Without the glory, without the fear, we wouldn't be so stupid. Without these deeply entrenched beliefs about the "way things must be", mothers wouldn't even consider sending their children off to do the bidding of the politicians. Hell, let the politicians go to the front lines themselves.

But as a world culture, we believe in the war ethic. We're seduced by its glory, stuck to its fear.

And we don't seem to notice that the war's best pupils are its leaders, kings, presidents, prime ministers who have learned that without the participation of the masses, they have no hierarchical power. Without our lurking fear of biggets and bullys, without our love of competition and winning, we wouldn't be doing things that don't make sense.

The solution to conflicts like World War II which get so bad they must be "rescued" with the wasted sacrifice of our sons and daughters is not more violence at the last minute. As a species, we have the information we need to Have Peace. We understand how violence begets itself, we know how despots like Hitler rise up and why they behave the way they do. Alice Miller, a learned and experience psychiatrist has written a compelling argument for world peace through healing in • For Your Own Good.

It's no big mystery that violence has been passed on from generation to generation in the privacy of the home, through racism, through abuse of women and children, then broadly ratified through war. But those who benefit from a culture which is based on the war model pretend that nothing has been learned.

The rest of us who make "the sacrifices", who enable this system by our participation — we watch the parades beamed in for our indoctrination, we listen to the 10 gun salutes, consoling ourselves that we're on the side of good.

And then we teach our children the lesson that has destroyed the lives of our parents, grandparents, indeed, our ancestors for thousands of years.

The fear. The glory. The way it is. Wasn't he an honor student? Isn't it a shame?

Taking issue with Trail Bay wharf

Once again the issue of a wharf on the Trail Bay beach in Sechelt has been revived.

This pristine stretch of beach is the longest, most accessible pebble beach on the entire Coast.

Everyone should gaze at the pebbles through the crystal clear water to realize how clean it is. All one needs to do is compare it to the waters of Porpoise Bay wharf, Gibsons harbour and Horseshoe Bay.

Would one like their children to swim in those waters? Not only are they dirty with oil, gas and raw sewage dumped from boats, but physically dangerous to a swimmer with regard to the constant boat traffic. How will this wharf be any different? It won't be.

No, we must have the foresight to preserve this jewel for our children and grandchildren. If business thinks the extra commerce generated by transient boaters will make or break them, then this is a sad mistake in the long term.

An attractive, clean, and pleasant environment in which to live and visit is far more important to develop solid long term (and year round) business. We need to keep Sechelt as a liveable, desirable place to be as most of us feel it is today.

Let's endeavor to keep a beautiful, enjoyable town in which to live and protect it for generations to come.

Think of the foresight many years ago which allows Vancouver to retain such a legacy as Stanley Park.

Let's not allow this local treasure to be looted.

Keep Trail Bay beach and foreshore unblemished — save our beach. We must tell Sechelt councillors now how we feel, and to take measures to prevent future despoilation.

Missing Larry Marshall

I miss Larry Marshall. I miss all those great editorials he was responsible for which dealt with the watershed, prevention of violence in the community, support for the SPCA and a new transition house.

And how many of you remember the one where he asked us all to "Help Bring Back Home Our Seniors to the Coast", wherein he included a petition asking us all to become involved?

That was all really good community journalism, and much appreciated.

So what about all the complainants who shouted "Off with his head" the moment there was one piece, a trifle overstated, regarding business on this Coast — surely meant for debate, discussion and helpful dialogue?

The vengeful reaction was stunning, and despite two sincere apologies from the Coast News, the barrage continued until two individuals lost their jobs.

Are the complainants now fully satisfied? Do they really think that we will miss their advertising?

And do the Sechelt Press really believe we respect their obvious relish in "throwing stones from glass houses?

They should stick to the repetitive and boring Judi and Gordo stuff.

It is more in keeping with their style.

Concern for Pharmacare

As pharmacists on the Sunshine Coast we are concerned over the latest changes to Pharmacare.

The elimination of the Pharmacare subsidy of a portion of the dispensing fee is our greatest concern.

We believe that this change will jeopardize health care for our seniors as focus on the dispensing fee will encourage larger quantities of the drug to be dispensed in order to save extra cost on dispensing fees.

The Pharmacare subsidy for a portion of seniors dispensing fees was only a drop in the bucket in comparison to the dollars wasted elsewhere. Right now, over half of all prescription drugs are either misused or wasted.

This costs the taxpayer millions of dollars every year. The changes to Pharmacare are guaranteed to create even greater waste. Since it appears that the dispensing fee has increased, some of our customers believe that the changes are going to put more money in our pockets.

This is not true. Unlike other retailers, there is no allowable mark-up on most of our product (i.e., prescription drugs) therefore a $50 prescription or a $200 prescription will make us the same profit, less than $8 each. The public must be aware that we as pharmacists are here to ensure quality health above all else.

If we can ensure correct drug usage and give counselling to increase understanding of prescription drugs, then we cannot only keep people's health our main concern but also save our health care system millions of dollars. It is estimated that 20 per cent of all senior admissions to hospitals are related to improper use of prescription drugs. We must focus on providing the best health care possible to our customers, thereby enhancing their quality of life. This in turn will help our overburdened health care system. Society benefits as a whole when health has a greater priority over money, unfortunately it appears that Pharmacare has their priorities backwards.

Sad day in Porpoise Bay

Today was a sad day.

On June 3, I and a number of my neighbours watched trucks dump five or more enormous box loads of land clearing debris on the gravel mining property that borders the provincial park, and is directly behind our East Porpoise Bay community. We have been told that the debris came from Gibsons where they are much more stringent about applying strict burning control regulations.

The sad story is that of the opsrey. Last year two of these beautiful birds built a nest in a tall tree very close to the edge of the park. Our whole community felt like proud relatives as we watched them raise two babies. Unfortunately, the December winds blew down their nest. This spring the osprey returned, and to our delight, worked hard at building a new nest in the same tree.

By the end of May, the nest appeared to be finished. We don't know if there are eggs yet, but we were all hoping and it seemed reasonable that there would be.

Today, on that property behind us, a huge fire was started close to the park boundary. At about 2 p.m. this afternoon, immense clouds of thick smoke billowed through and above the treetops. Dense smoke obliterated the osprey's tree from view. The heat must have been tremendous judging by the size and the speed of the fly ash ascending the smoke in the direction of its tree but was quickly forced out.

It circled and tried again, but again was forced out. Once more, the osprey circled, but this time, after the briefest penetration into the smoke it flew off.

Much later, we saw an osprey flying in the area, but it made no attempt to reach the nest.

I wonder what it will find there if it does return

Gibsons Cadet inspection

I received an invitation to attend the annual inspection of the Kenneth Grant Corps, Sunshine Coast Branch of the Navy League of Canada, at the Legion Hall, Gibsons, May 29. I was happy to accept.

It was a joy to see so many parents and the public attending this important meeting.

Everything went off smoothly, the Cadets looked bright and eager and very smart in their uniforms with shoes shining like mirrors.

I was very proud of them. Commanding Officer Lena Cleland was busy as usual and with her fellow officer, did a fine job.Reviewing Officer Larry Farr was also kept busy as well as some of the many distinguished guests.Executive Officer Christine Phaneuf is a most remarkable person, the right one for this very important job of training young lads for the future.

It was easy to see the love and respect they held for her.

I had the honour of presenting a plaque for the best new entry for the year, won by Trevor Wulf.

Marsh Society perseveres with preserves

by Ian Cobb

While society marshes along...

The Sechelt Marsh Protective Society is continuing its diligent work at Sechelt Marsh, Lot 48 and Arrowhead Park.

The society, formed in 1976, consists of "some of the genuinely most respected residents on the Sunshine Coast," said director Barry Janyk.

The society's work on the Sechelt Marsh, owned by the Nature Trust of BC and leased to the District of Sechelt for $1 a year, has been ongoing to meet with the many changes that have occured in the area.

"There has been a condominium development of the west side, the works yard and sewage treatment plant to the south, a new condo development to the east. The thinning of trees on the perimeter of the marsh has caused the shallow rooted trees to be blown down by the heavy winds experienced in the last couple of years," said Janyk, a zealous supporter of the society's projects.

He points out how the District of Sechelt, following recommendations from their engineers concerning 100-year flood scenarios, replaced an 18 inch wooden stave culvert, which ran under Wharf Street, with a galvanized metal replacement of 42 inches.

"The repercussions of increasing the salt water flow into the formerly brackish waters of the Sechelt Marsh cannot be overstated. The salinity levels have altered the fresh water content in the root systems of the flora in the marsh, killing many of the large conifers and shrubs which once provided shade and greenery," Janyk said.

However, blame serves no purpose, he said.

"The habitat is shifting and the Marsh Society must now work to enhance this changing habitat — habitat that is now even more conducive to woodpeckers, flickers, nuthatches and many cavity nesting bird species. Unfortunately, to the inexperienced eye this presents an image of disrepair and mess, some of which is obviously in need of addressing."

All of what Janyk speaks of is outlined in the society's constitution.

In the second section it reads the society is to "encourage use of the marsh as a sanctuary by birds, fish and waterfowl and to act as a public park.

To promote public interest in the Sechelt Marsh as a sanctuary for birds, fish and waterfowl. To promote the preservation of areas critical to the quality of the marsh and in particular, Porpoise Bay and its environs.

To support and promote the preservation of areas deemed to be of ecological value."

Janyk said, "I think it's important to recognize that these concepts were established by this group as basic tenets long before it became politically correct to trumpet them."

Society members have spent hundreds of volunteer hours working at the marsh as part of their ongoing restoration projects and repairing damages to the site from both man and nature.

And now after nearly two decades the society is launching a "major financial undertaking" thanks to $30,000 obtained from the society's fund raising efforts, the Canadian Jobs Strategy program, Ducks Unlimited and the Federation of BC Naturalists and with the aid of the towns of Sechelt and Gibsons.

"We are continuing to seek donations for the project, and others such as this, which of course are tax deductible," Janyk said.

The salt water intrusion into the marsh can be stemmed by the installation of a "flap gate, allowing the fresh water to flow out while halting the salt water from coming in. Unfortunately, the solution will cost about $8,000 to provide and install," Janyk said. "It would, according to an engineering report the society has received, solve the problem."

The society's works program started April 11, with five people employed to work up to 10 weeks.

Phase one of the project dealt with an improvement and maintenance program to restore areas of the marsh damaged by development, nature and vandalism. Trees were topped and trails were brushed and rebuilt in a few places, bridges were repaired and improved to allow safer access for the hundreds of visitors to the site during the course of a week. Disabled access was also arranged.

Janyk said, "It has to be remembered that the marsh is designated as a nature preserve, rather than a park, per se, to be maintained in as natural a state as possible. For this reason it may never look as tidy as some would wish it."

Phase two of the project is currently under way as a team of five workers are locating and constructing a 300-metre trail through Arrowhead Park, a 1.5-hectare municipal park in Lower Gibsons behind the OAP Hall.

A raw conifer and deciduous 50-year-old second growth forest lowland is considered ideal habitat for roosting raptors, blue herons, cavity nesting species like woodpeckers and thicket nesting birds like warblers, vireos and other songbirds.

Similar to lot 48 in Sechelt, the site currently has no access in or through it.

Janyk said Gibsons residents living near the park need not worry about the preserve.

"Little development as possible will take place in order not to disturb the wildlife — even the resident raccoons."

The project has included trail siting and building, rubbish removal, the digging of a frog pond to complement the stream, nesting boxes for birds, topping of hazard and sick trees, wooden bridges, landscaping, some planting and interpretive signage.

"We should be done in about a week," said work crew foreman Michel Frenette.

Phase Three of the project will see a 250-metre trail built on Lot 48 (corner of Ebbtide and Trail in Sechelt), as well as the removal of rubbish and addition of nesting boxes and signage.

"We need the public's help and continued financial support to help us with the initiative," Janyk concluded.

On Sunday, June 5 the 50th anniversary of D-Day was observed at the Roberts Creek Legion. Well over 80 people, veterans and their families attended to remember and to give thanks for the liberty of peace.

Thirty-plus men and women veterans were recognized with a special commemorative item and will receive their D-Day pins when they arrive on June 15.

John Forbes, a World War One veteran who died recently, was remembered by friends and family. His wife placed his name on a plaque for the last post.

President Jack Elred encouraged all in attendance not to forget this day in history and to be proud to be Canadian. He said, "Canadians are not ones to attract attention to themselves but during campaigns of any kind Canadians can be found in the forefront. They are never sitting on their laurels but continue to strive to make a difference for world peace."

The Padre for the Legion, Reverend Whittles, shared how he remembers being on the Beach of Normandy 50 years ago as he represented the Canadian government by being along side the troops and 25 years ago when once again he was at Normandy. He said he always manages a tear when he remembers those times and the miseries of battle. It is hard to explain and impossible to understand but we must never forget the sacrifices the troops made so that we are able to do what we are doing today. He went on to encourage us to live out those principles that today are still very much alive. D-Day cannot be duplicated and at the going down of the sun and in the morning, we shall remember them!

A roast turkey dinner with all the trimmings and trifle for dessert was enjoyed.

Congratulations

Congratulations to Roberts Creek elementary school student Carl Poulsen, who placed seventh "A" plight for the 100 metre, and who received a gold medal (first place) for the long jump at the BC Elementary Track and Field Championships held recently in Richmond. Also, hats off to the entire team who attended the meet and did a first class job in representing their school.

Congratulations also to Joe Zornes, an enthusiastic Creek teen who won round five of the CMA superseries in Merritt on the provincial moto-cross motorcycle racing circuit at the end of May. Zornes is a Grade 11 student at Elphinstone and works very hard to be able to compete in the moto-cross circuit which runs through Merritt, Agazziz, Duncan, Mission, Nanaimo, 100 Mile House and elsewhere.

In order to make this event happen, they are selling raffle tickets which are now available at the Creek Store. First prize is "Rescuing A Memory" by James Lumbers (a framed limited edition print), the second prize is pottery by Elaine Futterman (Creek Clayworks), and the third prize is a wood carving by Ernie Burnett (The Wood Carver). The draw will take place at 9 p.m., Sept. 24 at the fire hall.

'round west howe sound

by Joan Peterson

The commitment and dedication given to his responsibilities as regional director for this area, ultimately led to Tony Laver's resignation.

We respect his integrity while regretting his choice. WHSEA expresses the thanks and appreciation of the West Howe Sound community, to Tony for his efforts on our behalf.

Now however, there's this terrific employment opportunity open on the Sunshine Coast. The job description might read as follows:

Job Opportunity – SCRD Regional Director, Area "F"

The ideal candidate will have an MBA, PhD, LL.D, DD, DSM and, V.C. Recent Diplomatic Corps experience also considered helpful.

- Must possess superior verbal/written and politically correct communication skills. Semaphore, a plus.
- Also desirable, the wisdom of Solomon, patience of Job and hide of a rhino.
- Should be willing to devote endless hours to numerous meetings on any topic at any time.
- Single status or proof of an utterly forgiving spouse, preferred.
- Compensation, (prorated) approximately 9.5 to 11 cents per hour, plus mileage.

Okay, maybe that's an exaggeration, and certainly a regional directorship is not for the shy or faint-hearted. But for the individual whose talents may be presently underutilized, the prospect should be intriguing. The challenge will lie in shaping the necessary strategies for controlled growth in the inevitable expansion of the Coast — no small responsibility.

Those interested should contact WHSEA president, Daphne Avis before Aug. 10. Phone 886-2654.

A by-election for regional director and the referendum on increased Gibsons Library funding is set for Aug. 13.

April meeting activities

WHSEA members moved unanimously to extend the SCRD Jet Ski Ban to include the section from above Granthams to the Langdale dock.

The danger to swimmers and small craft is evident.

John McNevin presented the evening's topic One Coast Government, emphasizing the need for checks and balances to ensure the individuality of WHS, not be sacrificed for the "good of the majority."

A suggestion by Gibsons council to form police liaison groups, was also accepted. Glen Marden to represent WHSEA.

No July meeting

A special meeting will be held in August to accommodate summer residents.

The agenda to include discussion of the By-election/Referendum.

Next General Meeting, Aug. 10, 7:30 p.m., at Langdale school.

george in gibsons

There's nothing like hearing a well spoken traveller tell of his journeys to little known places to fire your own interest — lecturers like those who came to prairie towns on the summer Chautauqua circuit in the 1920s before radio to tell of far-off places and adventures.

Vilhjalmur Stefannson, for instance, told of the potential value as he saw it of our Arctic region. But folks on the prairie thought they lived too far north as it was. So we did our polar travel vicariously by reading and listening to the hardy travellers.

For me a latent interest in the North is stirred each time I visit our Elphinstone Pioneer Museum, there to view the items that the late Ross Gibson donated. Gibson's Inuit caribou parka, for example, and sealskin boots are there, as are the artifacts on loan from Bill White of Sechelt who spent four years in the Arctic with the RCMP.

Anecdotes by Bill renewed my interest in the Vancouver Maritime Museum and the adjacent St. Roch National Historical Site. Bill is one of the few remaining members of the RCMP who served on that vessel.

When you visit the St. Roch site one of the first displays you pass on the way to the vessel itself is that of an Inuit caribou parka, a display similar to the one in our museum. Today's synthetic materials may now protect the Arctic traveller as well, but in the years the St. Roch served in the Arctic the double Caribou parka sewn by the skillful Inuit women was the only means to survive the cold while patrolling along the sea ice by dog team and komitik.

The ever-present wind or ground drift drove snow into the hair of the parka and before entering the snow house for the night this snow had to be beaten out of the parka. Otherwise the garment would get wet while in the snowhouse, stay that way, and then freeze on the trail the next day. Result...no insulation value in the parka.

An excerpt from the patrol diary by Sgt. Larsen, St. Roch skipper, in December, 1941: "During the night wind cut a large hole in the snowhouse...drifting snow inside.

Attempted to fill hole with new snow blocks...put sled wrapper over the house...lashed it down and piled more snow around. Unable to travel the next day. One dog with long hair unable to relieve himself became hair frozen over rectum. Taken inside and thawed out with warm water...hair clipped away."

Dog much happier, no doubt.

Elephant Eats Tilley Hat . . . Three Times!

We found it a bit hard to swallow, but Michael Hackenburger, Director of the Bowmanswille Zoo, swears it's true: an elephant ate his Tilley Hat three times! As time passed, so did the hat! Michael tells us a good washing was all that was needed to make his Tilley serviceable again.

Susan and Alex Tilley were not chosen for last Summer's Olympics. They have, of course, worn 173 $45.00

Here's why it's acknowledged the best, most practical outdoor hat in the world:

- It's smart-looking and comfortable.

- It blocks UVA and UBV radiation.
- Machine washable yet won't shrink!
- Comes with a four-page Owner's Manual, a Brag Tag, and in EVERY, HUMAN SIZE.
- Returns? Any time. Alex Tilley

A postscript to the excellent show put on by Alice Horsman and Friends: Two selections from Franz Lehar's The Merry Widow were show stoppers. Vilia was sung by Elizabeth Messenger and the Merry Widow Waltz was sung by and danced to by Annabel Kershaw and David Woodhouse.

A standing ovation greeted the performers at curtain call and it was then the entire cast sang, Play Gypsy, Dance Gypsy...it was breathtaking.

There have been a number of cougar sightings around the school area, so please be aware if you are walking in or around heavily wooded areas. If you sight a cougar, call Doug Pierce at 885-2004 or 885-8804 and report it.

Early registrations for all levels of the Hunechin District Girl Guides, which includes Sparks, Brownies, Guides and Pathfinders, will be held on Tuesday, June 14 from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. in Greenecourt Hall, Sechelt. For further information, please call Denise at 885-2961.

This coming Sunday, June 19, is the day set aside to honour our fathers. The idea originated in 1909 by a woman, Sonora Louise Smart Dodd of Spokane, Washington after hearing a sermon on Mother's Day. Through her efforts, the first Father's Day was celebrated in 1910. In 1972, President Nixon made it an official national holiday.

We bestow flowers, chocolates and perfume on our moms on her day, let's not forget our dads on his. A phone call, a card, a visit, a lovely dinner, whatever. Happy Father's Day to all the dads.

Don't forget the Sunshine Choristers Concert this coming weekend, Friday and Saturday nights at the Seniors Hall. I'm told the Queen of Sechelt, the Langdale Queen and the Blackball Ferry will be in attendance. See you there.

Alf Lucas remembers...during the Depression, they, (along with thousands of others) were on Relief (a forerunner to Welfare) because there were no jobs to be had. For his family of three, he received $11.71 for two weeks and was required to spend it in the area in which he lived which consisted of corner stores with higher prices than the larger department stores. Alf remembers stacking a full load of wood for 50 cents, an all-day job...those were really tough times, but people survived them after all.

Such is the human spirit.

Homes are urgently needed in the Sechelt area for two Japanese students.

The two young women, 19 years old, arrived here the last week of August and stay until the end of the following June. While here, they will attend Chatelech high school, Grade 10.

If you're worried about a language barrier, don't be. The girls have had four years of English.

If you feel this would be an exciting and interesting project to undertake, you can contact Gail at 886-3783.

I should mention that the host families will receive a remuneration in the bargain.

I feel sure that there are many families out there who will jump at the chance to extend a warm welcome, in their own homes, to these students.

Welcome Visitors

At this time of year, Sechelt is full of visitors and we welcome each and every one of you.

A very special welcome to Barry and Shirley Breed who are currently holidaying with their son Ian and daughter-in-law Wendy.

Shirley and Barry have come all the way from New South Wales in Australia to the Sunshine Coast.

Have a great holiday, Shirley and Barry. I sure hope the weather gets better soon so you will have warm memories of your stay.

Choristers

Be sure to take in the music of the Sunshine Choristers Friday and Saturday, June 17 and 18.

Through the Years the musical selection, will be held in the seniors hall on Trail Avenue in Sechelt at 7:30 p.m.

The wind-up meeting of the Suncoast Writers' Forge took place in Rockwood Lodge on Wednesday, June 8. Their 1994 magazine is now in the Coast bookstores. Look for the bright green cover.

Potluck dinner

Following protocol our branch will have their month end "dinner get-together" on the evening of June 25. Bring a potluck gathering this month, it will be a good opportunity to sample our members' choice recipes. Bring along your favourite recipe for others to enjoy. Refreshments will be available starting at 6 p.m. There will be some form of entertainment following the meal.

Please keep in mind that these Saturday night dinners will be discontinued for July and August, which is customary for our centre. Although a number of branch activities will be discontinued during July and August, there will still be some that will carry on during the summer. Look for a list of these in a future column, but off-hand, bridge and carpet bowling on Mondays only come to mind. Carpet bowling on Wednesdays has been discontinued for the summer, at least. We'll see what September brings.

Line dancing

Our very active line dance group will have their last session on June 24 at the centre at the regular time. Please contact Gwynneth Houghton (885-5911) regarding time and place for a get-together for all dancers shortly after the last session.

Lonely seniors

Joan Mackereth's column of June 1 dwelt on a new program whereby isolated, or just plain lonely, seniors are invited to our centre for tea and light refreshments each Wednesday afternoon between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. Granted some will need transportation which will be supplied by calling the centre (885-3513). So far there has been about a dozen participants each week but hopefully the program will become better known with many more people taking part.

Our branch, along with some financial assistance from the Ministry of Health, and other community services has made this program possible.

There is a new brochure available at the centre listing this program along with a regular schedule of activities.

Keep in mind, though, that although the tea will carry on until further notice, some of the other activities on the brochure will be discontinued for the summer months.

General meeting

The general meeting of the branch will be held at 1:30 p.m. on June 16. It would be nice to have a full house to help conduct the business of the branch at that time. Members attendance is requested.

Keeping tabs on the Coast's Painted Ladies

The Pender Harbour Wildlife and Sechelt Marsh Societies are asking the public's help in a pioneer research project.

Four hundred Painted Lady butterflies will be released from Eagle Harbour Primary School, West Vancouver, on or about Wednesday, June 15 at 1 pm (weather permitting).

Each butterfly will bear a tiny paper tag on the right forewing. The tag invites a collect phone call to report timing and location of retrieval.

Some butterflies are expected to head toward the Sunshine Coast. They are medium-sized with black and white wing markings and are rapid-flying and active.

It is not necessary to kill the animal to read its tag.

Tag information would provide a first glimpse into the northern migratory habits of these insects which are known to leave Mexico each spring.

The project has presented several challenges, including:

• How to find enough food for nearly 500 hungry caterpillars — they feed on thistles which are fairly scarce in West Vancouver.

• How to tag the butterflies — butterfly tags are not a common item in the average mall. They were made on a school computer.

Fingers will be kept crossed during the next two weeks in the hope of a phone call from the Sunshine Coast or other areas announcing the discovery of a Painted Lady butterfly with a tag attached.

For further information call Pender Harbour 883-2434 or Sechelt 885-5413.

halfmoon happenings

Ruth Forrester 885-2418

Good news with which to start the week is that Queenie Burrows is home again and now has her place in Shorncliffe.

Queenie and her family are happy that the strain on everyone is over. Friends and family can now pop in to visit without having to make the trip to Vancouver. Hopefully a change will come in the law of the waiting list which will see to it that those who have had residence in the area for at least 10 years will automatically have their name placed at the top of the list as soon as the need arises.

Much expense and trauma of moving people back and forth could be saved. Let's keep working towards this goal.

There is a group of young students in the process of trying to raise funds for a skateboard park in Sechelt. A fairly lofty ambition, but with their enthusiasm this could well become a reality. They are willing to take odd jobs for donations to the fund, and from experience, I can tell you that they are good workers. Call either Terry Nelson at 885-0231 or Rob McNee, 886-3994. You will get the help you need, while at the same time showing support for their cause.

The theme for this year's Country Fair of Halfmoon Bay salutes the Commonwealth games and is on July 8-10, starting off with the annual Car Rally on Friday evening, July 8. The fee for each driver and navigator team is $12. Enter and register with Marion at 885-8555, then meet at the parking lot at Cooper's Green at 6 p.m. to take part in a fun event. Saturday morning, July 9 will see hundreds of kids enjoying the Kids' Fishing Derby at the Halfmoon Bay wharf. Preregistration is required at the store where owners Scott and Marion are sponsoring the event.

Also scheduled for the Saturday is the bocci ball tournament sponsored by the Recreation Association. Call Maurice Arduin at 885-6278 for information and registration. A big crowd will gather in the evening at 5:30 p.m. for dinner and socializing. The Halfmoon Bay Preschool/Daycare are in need of donations for their Service Auction. Call Sue at 885-9975 to help with this worthy cause. Tickets for the 50/50 raffle are now on sale at outlets on the Coast and will be available in Trail Bay Mall, June 23-24. Be sure to get in on this one.

New lion born

On Sunday, June 5, the caretaker (and glass artist) of the Lions Park, "June", gave birth to a baby boy right in her home at the Lions Park. This I'm sure is a first in the whole world. Congratulations June, I don't know what you will be calling him but in my book he is down a D-Day Minus One.

Wildlife

The Pender Harbour Wildlife Society will be having a picnic at the Lions Park on Tuesday, June 21 at 6 p.m. It's a potluck dinner, so please bring a dish to share with some one who can cook as good as you. Now there is a tough one. Of course, there are barbecues available, but please bring plates, utensils, a friend or two and most of all, sunshine. There will be all sorts of games and plays like volleyball, horseshoe throwing, and frisbees.

Sounds like a fun evening. Tuesday being a fire department evening I wonder if they could combine a practice and have some fun at this picnic? How about it fellows? You could check if the tank is still full of water.

New bridges

Last Saturday, June 11, two new bridges were officially opened by a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the Lions Park.

These bridges were built by the students of the Pender Harbour secondary school's shop class and they have done a beautiful job on them. Gracefully arched, laminated, routered and fitted to perfection, the bridges are works of art. The first chance you get, you should come and see them. Better yet, take some time off and walk the whole trail which, especially at this time of year, is fantastic.

Special thanks go to the following companies that have graciously donated toward these bridges: A.C. Building Supplies, Earls Cove Barge Terminal, Howe Sound Pulp & Paper, Interfor, Ray Hanson Trucking, Roosendal Farms, Swanson's Ready-Mix. Thank you fellows, it is people like you and the volunteers that get projects like these done in this here "Beautiful Harbour."

egmont news

by Maureen Parrott, 883-9189

A canoe full of kids from Maple Ridge wilderness camp entered the Skookumchuck last Wednesday before afternoon slack.

The tide was still running out, maybe five knots with lots of white showing on the water. (Warning: do not try this at home.)

The canoe rolled over in tide, and the six kids and their instructor clung to it, yelling. Charlie Angus arrived first. He got a line on the canoe and towed them out of the rapids, while Ted Lee came and helped pick the people out of the frigid water.

They received first aid (dry clothes, warmth, hot drinks) at the gravel pit, while Charlie salvaged some packs and gear. Later Ted ferried the group to Egmont Marina, where they spent the night, apparently none the worse for their scare.

Egmont Day

Ignoring intermittent showers, sports at the Egmont Day fishing derby caught and released quite a few fish. Some big ones escaped when eager youngsters tried to lift them clear of the water on light fishing line.

Wayne Silvey caught the biggest fish, followed by Sean Grey. Russell Silvey caught the most fish, as well as the third biggest.

Egmont Day hasn't been rained out in years, but this one was close. After the derby, heavier weather drove everybody into the hall. Sack races and a closely contested tug-o-war entertained the kids until the rain stopped.

This year's canoe race winners were Dave Farrel and Pete Schmidt.

Everyone loved the potluck dinner. Afterward, about 50 Egmonsters gathered in the hall for the dance.

Thanks to everyone who helped, including Bathgate's, the Backeddy, and Egmont Fish Plant for great fishing derby prizes.

First Aid workshop

Last Tuesday at Egmont School, 12 fisher folk from Egmont and Earls Cove gathered to learn Survival First Aid. Two ambulance attendants, Gerald Sullivan and Dennis Gamble, drilled everyone in emergency procedures. The main points were: remove danger, test consciousness, get help (885-5191), then check "ABCD" — airway, breathing, pulse (circulation), and deadly bleeding.

Use resuscitation or other first aid techniques if necessary. Finally, roll an unconscious patient into a three-quarters prone position (safe from choking).

Mr. Sullivan pleaded, "Be kind." Helpers may not know or remember enough to save a patient, but they deserve full credit for doing their best. At least someone tried.

Arts society holds first show

by Ian Cobb

In the beginning there was Quay Works Gallery and now, after a period of slight metamorphosis, there is the Quay Gallery Society.

And in keeping with the society's self proclaimed penchant for puns, they're striving to become a key ingredient to promoting and stimulating the arts and artists on the Sunshine Coast.

"We hope to set up a vital place where all the arts can find a home," said society president Dr. Peter Millard.

"It will be a place for artists who very often wouldn't have a commercial outlet."

Currently seeking non-profit society status, the society, numbering about 70 members after only one brief membership drive, plans to launch their ambitious endeavor with a six week exhibition entitled "Cross Currents."

Simply put, "It will be a cross section of arts on the Sunshine Coast," said society director Patricia Nattrass.

The exhibition, scheduled to open at the society's 271 Gower Point Road location with a June 11 grand opening (7 pm), will feature Coast sculptor, paintings and photographs by such artists as Maurice Spira, Gordon Munro, Zoe Mackenzie, Mandad, Gurtrude Pacific, Nina Braathen, Donna Balma, Edmund Butler, Tom Hunt, Lisa Blackwell, Dean Schutz and Francine Desjardins.

The artists featured in the exhibition were selected by a committee of local collectors, Millard said.

"It should be a really fun opening show," Nattrass said. "We've asked the artists to bring an earlier piece and a new piece to show their development and what they were concerned with then as compared to now."

During the course of the exhibition the society plans on holding coffee houses featuring Coast jazz musicians and guitarists, as well as a series of open discussions, poetry readings, book signings and other art related events.

On June 19 an "artists talk" will be featured during which exhibition artists will be on hand to discuss their work(s).

"It will be a chance to interface with the local artists," Nattrass said.

As the society develops, the community will benefit, Millard said.

"We think it will be good for tourism and good for business. This is the right time for it in Gibsons. People seem to be very responsive."

In fact, after one membership drive, the society's number rose to around 70 — a positive sign, Millard said.

"It's a strong board. I think it's going to be a really vital group," said Nattrass, who sits on the board along with Dr. Terence Webb, Carol Dunsford, Micheline Larose, Lionel Trudel (secretary), Sandie Loach (treasurer), Kay Bailey (vice-president) and Millard.

Madeira Park poet wins praise, prize

Madeira Park poet John Pass was recently awarded second place in The League of Canadian Poets 7th annual poetry contest for his work, Reprieve For the Body.

Pass' winning poem is part of a larger collection of works entitled Radical Innocence, to be published by Harbour later this year.

The poem will also be printed in a special anthology published by the League of Canadian Poets.

Reached at his home Thursday (June 9) for comment, Pass said he was pleased to be recognized for his work but added it's not the deciding factor in whether he will continue on in his creative endeavors.

First prize in the 1994 League of Canadian Poets contest went to Tim Bowling of Ladner, B.C. for his poem Snowy Owl After Midnight.

Other winners in the League's contests include Barbara Klar of Saskatoon and Ilya Tourtidis of Vancouver Island for a first place tie for the Gerald Lampert Award for best first poetry book.

Ottawa's Diana Brebner won the Pat Lowther Award for the best first book by a Canadian woman poet.

Seven balls, two hands...no brains

In 1981 David Aitken, at the tender age of 13, was told to put the laundry away. Who would have thought juggling three bundles of socks would turn into a lifetime passion for juggling?

Whether manipulating cigar boxes, kinibilling, or juggling on "The Very Large Unicycle Of Death", Dave's fondness for checkers and his approach to performing distinguished him from others in his class.

Tickets for the double bill show are $14 for adults and $10 for youth

In the nine years following his departure from the laundry room, Aitken created the "Checkerboard Guy" character. This led to performances at the 10th annual European Juggling convention in Saintes, France, a three month tour of Australia, and two months at Expo 1990 in Osaka, Japan.

The Checkerboard Guy was among the first Canadian artists to perform at the Canadian Pavillion at Expo 92 in Seville, Spain. His popularity and universal appeal earned him a nomination as "best young performer" on the Expo site.

Riding his "six foot unicycle of death", the Checkerboard Guy wheels to the doors of the Raven's Cry Theatre for Rockwood Centre's Physical Comedy Minifest on Saturday, June 25 at 8 p.m.

The first show features Girardo Avila and Doug Vernon in the Electro Tecno Teatro. Avila and Vernon are both former members of the renowned "Le Cirque du Soleil".

Tickets for the double bill show are $14 for adults and $10 for youth. Available from Talewind Books, the Roberts Creek General Store, Sayward Books, and the Rockwood Centre. For information and reservations call 885-2522.

Third Coast Theatre finds home for summer

Third Coast Theatre Works and The Sundowner Inn announce a first-ever on the coast: Summer Theatre with a special dinner package every Saturday in July and August.

Following upon a successful presentation in April of "God Couldn't be Everywhere, Therefore She Made Mothers", Third Coast Theatre approached owners of The Sundowner to provide a season of summer theatre in the Annex space.

On June 3, a contract was signed between The Sundowner and Third Coast Theatre for a repertory of three shows, titles to be announced. "It's exciting to have the opportunity to work consistently in one location," says Gord Holloran, Third Coast Theatre's artistic director.

"I really enjoy going where the people are," said Caitlin Hicks. "I'm hoping that this kind of experience will attract people who may not normally attend theatre. Because it's connected with a meal, friends can share dinner — that's a social ritual, a custom ... Ron and Dallas Brock and Alex Boyd and Holly Smirl have given us their vote of confidence, and we're going to be working towards promoting the location as a place for some exciting creative work.."

A repertory of three shows will be produced on alternate Saturdays. A special weekend of entertainment revolving around the arrival of the Mission Boats will take place Friday and Saturday, Aug. 19 and 20.

Coast authors will speak on Friday evening Aug. 19. On Saturday, Aug. 20, Caitlin Hicks will present a dramatic evening based on true stories of the history of Pender Harbour. Tickets must be by advance reservation.

Over 160 riders from a variety of coast schools descended upon Gibsons Elementary for the Second Annual Sprockids Rockets Championships. Gibsons politicians praise rugby Pigs

The Gibsons Pigs received some official praise June 7 for becoming British Columbia Rugby Union Division Three champs May 7.

Gibsons council presented club representative Stu Frizzell with a plaque commemorating the club's achievement. "We're really proud of you," exclaimed Mayor Eric Small, noting the team "has brought honour to our community."

Frizzell said, "It's our philosophy to open it (club) up the entire community" and has been since the club was first established in 1972.

In related news, the Pigs announced their team awards for 1993/94 last week during their annual general meeting.

Team leader Drew Murphy earned the most valuable player and most inspirational player awards and Frizzell once again captured the unsung hero award for the third time in four years.

Bob Cowie was forward of the year, Dean Johnston was back of the year and Dave O'Coffey was rookie of the year.

O'Coffey has since been selected to play for the Vancouver under 19-side. The club also appointed a new executive during the AGM.

Raymond Dow is taking over as club president and Dean Johnston, Mike Mannion, Karl Messner and Dave Nanson will take over from Frizzell, Jeremy Heywood, Terry LaFavor and Dave Strom on the executive.

Red faced

The Coast News would like to apologize, in a major way, to Joe Zornes for our howling error in the spelling of his name in an article published in the June 6 issue.

Throughout the article, detailing his recent moto-cross racing successes, Zornes name was published sans the es on the end. Sorry Joe.

Canuck support

Directors take duties seriously

Proof of dedication?

Dave Babych had just scored to push the Vancouver Canucks into a 4-3 lead over the New York Rangers with just nine minutes remaining in game five of the Stanley Cup finals.

The Canucks had to win or they were toast, being down three games to one. They had taken a three to nil lead only minutes earlier but the Rangers closed the gap until Babych's goal.

All of BC was poised before television sets or radios. Even the directors of the SCRD were watching the game on the HUGE screen behind Roberts Creek director/vice-chair Brett McGillivary.

The members of the local press watched with bemused appreciation, having begrudgingly torn themselves away from the game to cover the meeting.

Play resumed after the Babych goal and the frenzied activity on the screen was reminiscent of some of the finer moments in televised hockey history, recent Canada Cups included. At 7:30 p.m. — CLICK. The picture disappeared and the directors started their meeting.

And some people think their politicians aren't dedicated.

Luckily, McGillivary informed the directors and the media that the Canucks won 6-3 about 15 minutes into the meeting. After a brief session of "Yes — alright" and arms punching into the air with elation, it was back to work.

Funding approved to fight solid waste

An application by the Sunshine Coast Regional District to the provincial solid waste management planning financial assistance program has been approved.

Under the program, the SCRD has been granted up to $50,867.

The amount represents the total of direct contributions and the cost-share contribution for the development of a solid waste management plan for the regional district.

In a letter dated May 9 and addressed to SCRD chair and directors, Minister of Environment Moe Sihota officially approved the grant, enclosing a cheque for $30,867 for the direct contribution portion.

The remaining cost-share contribution will be payable to the SCRD upon completion of the entire solid waste management plan.

Savoy to stand trial for murder

Former licensed practised nurse Carrie Savoy has been ordered to stand trial for the alleged murder of 86-year-old Earl's Cove resident Harold Tibb.

Savoy, 43, of Gibsons was ordered to strand trial after a two-week preliminary hearing into the case wrapped up in Sechelt Provincial Court, Thursday (June 9).

Savoy was arrested and charged with second degree murder last October by RCMP after months of police investigation.

Tibb's body was discovered on a logging road west of Sechelt in late May, 1992. He had been reported missing for two weeks prior to the discovery. Savoy, a former licensed practised nurse at St. Mary's Hospital in Sechelt, was placed on indefinite suspension without pay from her duties by hospital administration at the time of the police investigation.

Evidence in the preliminary hearing against Savoy cannot be printed according to a court-ordered publication ban.

Savoy is scheduled to appear in BC Supreme Court June 29 to set a date for trial.

Gibsons councillor presses for ball field

A Gibsons town councillor wants a baseball diamond put in at Brothers Park.

Councillor Ed Steeves recommended a ball field be established at the Upper Gibsons park during a June 7 council meeting. "Here on the (Sunshine) Coast there are no ball fields capable of accommodating ball players over the age of 16-17," he said.

After council agreed to Steeve's recommendation, he told them the ball field, "would be properly designed with bleachers and the ball people have said they would brush the land — but not cut any trees (around the ball field)," Steeves said. The field would have 90 foot baselines and "hopefully it would be constructed so it's done right the first time."

Steeves said if everything moves along well, "The ultimate would be we could play on it next year."
