Fire Wardens Kept Busy

Last Saturday, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, an engine of the gravel train started a fire at McNeillie siding and it might have been serious if it had not been for the fact that the extra gang that are working at McNeillie were used to a good advantage in preventing it from spreading. Indeed, so close was the fire to the Goat river bridge that the fence around the watchman's house was burnt. The fire came actually to within a few hundred feet of the bridge. If this bridge had been consumed by fire it would have meant the stopping of all freight for a long time between east and west points. Fortunately no damage was done to speak of. F. G. Little, fire warden for the C. P. R., directed matters and got the fire under control.

While this fire was raging, another fire broke out at Duck Creek; but was soon got under control.

On Sunday afternoon fire broke out at Yahk, but C. P. R. Fire Wardens R. O'B. FitzGerald and J. Cook and a gang of men soon got the fiery fiend under control. It is stated that the very dry weather is the cause of so many fires in this district, which fact has made both the Government and C. P. R. fire wardens work double shift lately.

Concentrator to Start Running On May 16

Harry Dimock, of the Aurora Mining and Milling Co., was among the many visitors in Creston this week. Mr. Dimock's company having leased the concentrator at the Alice mine, he says that they expect to have the mill running on the 16th inst. The ore is now waiting for shipment pending the arranging of the shipping rates. Mr. Dimock says that they expect to ship 30 tons per day for 25 days out of each month till the end of the present year.

The ore is silver-lead and zinc. The ore will be separated at the concentrator, the silver-lead will be shipped to Trail, while the zinc will be shipped to the Empire Zinc Co in Colorado. The Aurora Mining and Milling Co. is composed of Cranbrook and Moyie business men, who are thoroughly alive to the situation. Mr. Dimock says that they will put in a hoisting engine at the Alice mine to raise the ore from the car to the top of the mill.

Mr. Dimock, who has been mining all his life, says that the concentrator at the Alice mine is an excellent one in all respects. At this concentrator, after it is running, from six to twelve men will be employed. The leasing of this big concentrator by this mining company really means much for the various mining properties around Moyie, as by the treating of this ore as it is now proposed to do, it will be shown just exactly what values exist in that particular kind of ore, and it may lead to the opening of many more properties at Moyie.

District Court

In the Small Debts Court held last Thursday afternoon, the case of Walter Elliott vs. S. E. Trombley and wife, being a claim for $10.50 was heard before Stipendiary Magistrate Johnson. This was an action for alleged wages. The defence showed that plaintiff had been allowed to remain at defendant's boarding house and worked at washing dishes etc. The defendants claimed that they did not want plaintiff about the place, but at the same time accepted of his services. The magistrate held that as they had accepted of the services of the plaintiff they were liable and consequently gave judgment for $10 and costs, the item of 50c. being charged for cleaning out a pig pen was not allowed by the court as it was not clearly proved.

James Cooper, of Saginaw, Mich., and a prominent member of the Canyon City Lumber Co., was paying a visit to Creston this week.

Room for 50,000 People Around Creston

What Hon. Thomas Taylor said to the people of Nelson last Sunday about Creston:

"One place that impressed me immeasurably was Creston. This was my first opportunity of visiting that thriving settlement and what I saw of it surpasses the sanguine expectations aroused by Mr. Schofield's description en route.

"No one passing through by the Canadian Pacific railway can get any idea of the Creston district. There is room in the valley in which Creston is located for a population of 50,000 people and it is only a question of a comparatively short time until that number is there. I have seen no spot in British Columbia that offers greater opportunities to land seekers than Creston and once this fact becomes known abroad people will rush in there.

"I was particularly struck by the progressive class of people who have settled at Creston. All are pulling together and working for the good of Creston. Such a spirit itself is bound to push the place forward. The work being done by Mr. Swanson affords an example of what is being done at Creston. Within the past year or so Mr. Swanson has cleared a large area of land and has set out 6000 trees, 3500 being apple."—Nelson News.

It was at a smart dime tea on Wednesday afternoon last that Mrs. E. C. Wilson as hostess entertained a number of her friends. During the afternoon fort and other games were played, after which an observation contest was held. The first prize in this contest was won by Mrs. Hayman, while Mrs. Darbyshire won the second prize. A most novel feature of the afternoon's entertainment was a word twisting contest, in which Mrs. Mallandaine won the prize. During the afternoon refreshments of a dainty nature were served. Those present on this occasion were: Mrs. Rose, Mrs. Darbyshire, Mrs. Hayman, Mrs. Mallandaine, Mrs. Nunn, Mrs. Attwood, Miss Howarth, the Misses Bell, and the Misses Johnson.

Mr. S. S. Gordon an expert at planting trees, who hails from New Westminster, B. C., has this week been helping R. S. Bevan to plant the 6,000 trees on Swan Swanson's land. Mr. Gordon who is familiar with the American and Canadian Okanagan fruit districts, says that these famous districts, while growing good fruit are completly outclassed by the Creston district in this important matter, that in these districts the fruit is grown by the aid of artificial means of irrigation, whereas at Creston equally good, if not better, is grown without any artificial means of irrigation.

We are glad to see a number of local fruit growers getting letterheads and envelopes with facts about the Creston district on them. Surely the fruit growers who are the very backbone of the district should all use stationery of this kind, when nearly all the business men in Creston have adapted this kind of stationery.

KING EDWARD THE PEACEMAKER

DIES FROM PNEUMONIA FOLLOWING BRONCHITIS

FATAL ILLNESS AGGRAVATED BY WORRY OVER THE POLITICAL SITUATION

LONDON, May 6—King Edward VII who had returned to England from a vacation of few days ago, in the best of health, died at 11.45 o'clock last night, in the presence of his family, after an illness of less than a week, which was serious hardly more than three days.

The Prince of Wales succeeded to the crown immediately according to the laws of the kingdom without any ceremony. His first official act was to dispatch to the Lord Mayor the announcement of his father's death, in pursuance of custom. His telegram read:

"I am deeply grieved to inform you that my beloved father, the King, passed away peacefully at 11.45 tonight. (Sgd.) George."

The physicians soon afterwards issued their official bulletin, which was as follows:

"May 6, 11.50 p.m. His Majesty the King breathed his last at 11.45 tonight in the presence of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Royal, the Duchess of Fife, Princess Victoria and the Duchess of Argyle. (Sgd.) Laking, Reid, Powell and Dawson."

Pneumonia following bronchitis is believed to have been the cause of death, but the doctors thus far have refused to make a statement. Some of the King's friends are convinced that worry over the critical political situation which confrontrd him, with sleepless nights, aggravated, if it did not cause, the fatal illness. Besides the nearest relatives in England, the Duke of Fife and the Archbishop of Canterbury, were in the death chamber. The King's brother, the Duke of Connaught, with his family, is at Suez hastening home from Africa. The King's daughter, Queen Maude of Norway, will start for England tomorrow.

The New King

LONDON, May 7.—The Prince of Wales is king, assuming the title of George V., and took the oath before the privy council at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

George Frederick Ernest Albert, Prince of Wales, who now becomes king, is the second son of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, and was born at Marlborough house on June 2, 1865, 17 months after the birth of his brother, the late Duke of Clarence. He and his brother entered the navy together as cadets, and he spent two years on the Brittania, then he started on a three-year voyage around the world, sailing on the Bacchante.

In 1892, when his brother died, he became heir apparent and took his seat in the House of Lords as Duke of York.

In May, 1893, his engagement was announced to Princess Victoria May of Teck, and they were married on July 6, 1893. Six children were born to them, Edward Albert, Albert Frederick, Victoria Alexandra, Henry William, Edward, and John Charles. The duke became Duke of Cornwall when his father took the throne, and soon thereafter started on a tour of the colonies. He opened the first parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia.

In celebration of his safe return from the tour he was entertained by the London corporation at the Guildhall on December 5, 1901, on which occasion he delivered his well-known ddvice to England "to wake up." In the fall of 1905 he went to India and when he returned there was another celebration. In 1908 he visited Canada to attend the celebration at Quebec and Ottawa.

The prince is less democratic than his father and does not have such an ardent love for sports. It is predicted, therefore, that after his accession to the throne the court gaieties which were always a feature during King Edward's reign, will be less marked.

DATE OF FUNERAL

The funeral of the late King Edward has been arranged to take place on Friday, May 20th.

Mr. James Scott, of Montreal, a prominent hide and leather merchant of that city, came here last Saturday to stop a day and see his old friend, Mr. Okell. He was here in the early days of this town and is astonished at the marvellous growth of the district. When he was first here he thought that Creston had a future, but the realization has exceeded his utmost expectations. People in the East hardly know Creston yet, but Mr Scott promises to be a good advertising agent and let them know what a high-class fruit raising community we have here.

Hugh Walkem, divisional engineer of the C. P. R. main line of Vancouver, a brother of Dr. Walkem, who is well known in Creston, passed through town on his way to Spokane, at Creston he met his old friend F. G. Little whom he not seen since the completion of the Arrowhead branch of the C. P. R.

Halley's Comet Flares

STEAMSHIP BURMUDA, AT SEA, May 9th.—On Friday night, that of the death of King Edward, a remarkable phenomenon was observed at Burmuda, and was recorded by an experimental scientist.

Halley's comet, which first became visible about 2 o'clock a.m., later displayed a decided red tinge on the tail. At 12.30 o'clock the fort near the city of Hamilton began firing the salute of 101 guns to the new King at intervals of two minutes.

Just as the last gun was fired, at exactly 3:52 a.m., the comet's tail fiared a decided red and the head became a ball of fire. This phenomenon was observed by many negroes working on the docks loading the steamer Bermuda who fell on their knees and prayed, refusing to work.

Mrs. J. Heath and family, Mr. Robert Stark and Mr. Jeoffrey Stark will arrive in Creston the end of next week from Devonshire and Hampshire, Eng. Mrs. Heath is coming to join her husband who is manager for Mr. Stark, who recently bought the East plot of 40 acres of orchard land a few miles from town. The Messrs. Stark will remain here on a few months visit and will likely purchase land and be added to the list of fruit growers at Creston. Mr. Heath, the genial manager for Mr. Stark, says that this season will be devoted by him principally to clearing the land, but that next spring a large number of trees will be planted. Mr. Heath, who has been engaged in the horticultural occupation all his life, is fairly in raptures with the Creston district. This land land of Mr. Stark's that is being managed by Mr. Heath contains one of the vineyards of this district and will produce a crop of No. 1 grapes this year.

WOMANS WORLD

The time has come, the hour has arrived, when the question of the spring and summer wardrobe must be faced. In truth, the spring is here, but fortunately the weather of the early spring is such that light weight winter clothes are by far the best suited to the temperature, but the new models are "in" and every mail brings announcements of the display of the very latest fashions, so that women are indeed busy rushing hither and yon to see what is ordered by Dame Fashion to be worn for the next few months.

There are always many new materials displayed at this season, more than at any other time, and there are also countless different styles for each and every sort of gown and costume. It is in consequence extremely hard to decide, especially as there are still to be found the most wonderful bargains in the left over winter stock, many of which are quite up to date, very smart and perfectly suitable for the present moment and will be so for months. It is almost trite to repeat the statement that the very latest winter fashions are the same as are taken for models for spring and summer styles, while also some one fashion that has been proved popular for the winter is copied in different material for the spring and summer seasons.

There is undoubtedly strongly marked the note of eccentricity and individuality—by no means the same thing, be it understood—but also this spring there are many more what may be termed reasonable models, while the majority of styles show much more simplicity of design and more careful consideration of what is suitable. For instance, there are strictly tailor-made costumes, which depend absolutely upon the lines, the cut and fit, rather than upon ornamentation or trimming of any kind. The more elaborate street gowns can, on the contrary, be so elaborate as to make them quite possible for reception wear. As yet no marked originality of design has made its appearance, and there is nothing absolutely unlike what has been put forward tentatively for the general public to decide upon.

Will full skirts be popular? This is a serious question, for which as yet no unanimous vote has been cast. Pleated and gathered skirts, accordeon pleated and gathered all around, are exhibited as models for crepe de chine, silk and all wash materials, but they have not as yet been madly sought for. A very slight girlish figure is required to look well in a full skirt, and the long slim lines that are emphasized and sometimes given outright by the more severe styles are far more popular.

Overskirts have arrived, and if there is not a double skirt then the effect must be given by the cut and trimmings. The pointed tunic or double skirt effect is the most generally becoming, but there are several effective models with draped overskirts or with extra material draped to look like a double skirt. There is more than a hint of the old fashioned window drapery in some of the new gowns, but it is a fashion that requires the greatest skill and the best of work to be at all satisfactory, and at its best it is not a fashion to be entered into rashly by the woman who cannot afford an endless number of gowns.

One of the newest skirts has a distinctly odd appearance, for it is cut in two pieces, the upper part quite close fitting, the lower a quite full flounce, gathered or plaited as the case may be, and the two joined under a band of some trimming; it is at the moment a fashion for the gowns of crepe de chine, soft silk or silk voile, but will be undoubtedly chosen as a popular model for the wash materials. It is the revival of a style of many years past, but with modifications and new touches that make it seem quite new and original. The waist is extremely simple in design, with a slight blouse effect, and has either curved surplice folds showing a V-shaped yoke or is finished with an embroidered frill and turned back cuffs to match.

Simplicity and beauty of line are most distinctively shown in many of the simpler models in voile de soie, cachemire de soie and the most charming of the soft finished silks and satins. One most favorite model has not one particle of trimming. The material is rose pink satin with double skirt, and the upper skirt is draped, while the waist is in soft draped surplice folds, bias bands of the same material. It is simplicity itself, this model, but made in black, white or colors is most graceful and becoming. It is not so easy to make as might be thought at first glance, but keeping always in mind that the lines must be unbroken and with a perfect fitting lining the task is a possible one.

For those who love trimmed gowns this season will afford an unexampled opportunity to indulge their taste for ornamentation. All kinds of trimmings are displayed and in endless variety, while there are many of the newest fashions for afternoon and evening gowns that depend largely upon their trimming. Soutache braiding, of which there was so much last season, appears again, but of course with some change and variety. Soutache braiding on satin and crepe de Chine gowns is smarter this season than on the lighter transparent fabrics, and a very popular model is the satin or crepe de Chine gown with the effect of a braided tunic. The material in itself is so delightfully soft and drapes so beautifully that the braiding does not interfere with the lines, which are very simple and display every good point of the figure to the best advantage. In this model the waist line is absolutely normal in its placing, and in truth it seems as though every detail had been planned to keep the outline as simple as possible.

After advocating, or at all events admiring, simplicity of style, it must be carefully considered that there is always danger of an exaggerated simplicity and in the newest fashions this very point must be noticed. The absolutely tight fitting coat frock, a one piece gown buttoned up the back, is too trying a fashion for any but the exceptionally beautiful figure, and even the modified imitations with the plaited skirt, or rather the plaited flounce, as finish to the sheath fitting gown, is not sufficient to entirely remedy the the too conspicuous outline of the figure. And yet the fashion has much that is good about it, and so the clever woman recognizes, for she has the model copied with a modification of the too close fitting, too scant skirt and with bands of trimming on the waist that break the too severe appearance most marvellously.

There are many new fabrics, but all the old favorites are not thrust aside, and while the softer, more clinging materials are best suited to the draped, close fitting gown, the stiffer silks and heavier weight goods are more in demand than they have been for some years. Serge is one of the materials that have experienced a curious change of finish these last few months. The finer weaves and softer finish are now much smarter than the wide wale and coarse, hard appearance that, after all, was far better for winter wear than for spring and summer, and the serge of this spring can be made up in the close fitting one piece gown most satisfactorily.

CHANTILLY LACES ON THE COUNTERS.

Forehinting a Summer Season of Flounces, Overskirts and Waist Trimmings.

With chantilly laces returned to the lace counters, no end of old-fashioned flounces, overskirts and waist trimmings may be expected during the coming summer. With the chantillies are a host of other fine laces, such as the fancy shadow webs of allover scroll or small figure designs and the white cotton malines. In the chantillies and the white cotton malines matched-up sets are provided in every width wanted, from the deep flounces and bands from 27 inches down to two or three. Entire sets of insertions and edgings in four or five widths are on hand.

The black chantilly, white malines and other laces of similar nature for tunics and overdresses are very important accessories for white, black or colored silk gowns, and the possibilities of a passe dress are multiplied by them. The gown in the sketch (reproduced from the New York Evening Sun) has chantilly veiling of a pale satin gown in which fur edges the back of the overskirt and the neck. Jet bands finish the sleeves.

Fine laces are occupying the most space at lace counters, and it looks now as though the heavy ones would be quite out of demand, and some surprises may be awaiting us in the bales and boxes on their way or still unopened.

Covered Cords.

Cords covered with material of the gown or with silk or satin of another shade are being put on in braid patterns to trim entire gowns or waists. These cords were used a year ago in the same manner, but the dressmakers are favoring a continuance of them. Shirred ornaments of the material of the gown or overdress in the shape of buckles or big motives trim skirts and waists. Such ornaments often finish the girdle or are used in plain back breadths of silk or satin gowns to give a sash look. They are also employed below yokes and on sleeves.

Peplum.

The straight classic gown known as the "peplum" has brought into the shops for its use foulards in known lengths, which have two kinds of material, one polka dotted and the other plain. The polka dots are sprinkled over the ground of the dotted silk and make a border all around it. The silk comes in street tones.

Belts.

There are belts on most of the new gowns, the straight princess shape being out of use. Many of the newest gowns, however, have unbroken front and back panels.

BECOMING NET TURBAN.

Turbans continue in favor, as they are becoming to young and old, stout and slender alike.

The dainty one in the sketch is made of cream-white net and trimmed with white and cream marabou feathers and a large gold and turquoise ornament.

THE MARCH BIRTHSTONE.

It is the bloodstone.

Set in a ring is the usual form of wearing it.

This may be a single stone, a double setting or even five stones, as the wearer prefers, or can afford.

Brooches, chains and rings are the feminine forms of wearing this stone.

Scarfpins, cuff links and fobs are the way a man wears it.

NEW GLOVES FOR SUMMER WEAR

With winter not officially over, icy cold blasts coming our way every little while, and muffs still very much in vogue and also in evidence it does seem a bit early to talk of thin summer gloves.

But the glove makers consult the calendar and work wisely without regard to the weatherman; and so when spring is almost ready to come some of the accessories precede it.

To add variety or elaborateness, this season, the makers have introduced embroidery—daintily done flowers, sprays, dots and other designs, in silk to match the hue of the glove itself. This embroidery ends up the back of the glove from the wrist. It extends quite high when the glove is elbow length, but there is just a suggestion of this when the glove has but a couple of buttons for fastening.

Tucks, too, play their little part in ornamenting the new feminine harbingerings—wee tucks that go around the arms and are done in clusters of two, three or four.

Fastenings, too, are unique this spring and instead of the conventional buttoning down the middle from the palm they fasten at the side of the wrist. This perhaps is to simulate the sleeve fastening. And it is rather effective and does not look too conspicuous, as one might imagine.

And such delightful colors these are from which to make selections! Surely the glove makers keep pace with the fashionable fabric and silk makers and dyers. Last year they started doing this and the result was a pleasant innovation. This year the shades are even more prettily in dainty and delicate hues, which will match gowns and tailor suits beautifully.

Champagne, lovely blues, all the violet tints, pongee, the new reseda green, fuchsia, mahogany, exquisite rose shades—all these you may have in your glove box if the contents be of silk.

SHEPHERD CHECKS.

They are very spring like.

Fetching looking tailored suits they make.

And separate skirts that are very smart in appearance.

The English gun club checks are always modish.

So, too, are the white and black checks with a third and brighter color.

Top coats of checks, well tailored, and with a dash of red or a stunning blue touch on collar and cuffs, are very chic.

Russian blouses, also, of shepherd checks, are the shops showing and these are quite new and pretty.

ALUMINUM KITCHEN UTENSILS.

Yes, they cost more than the other kind.

But they will last a lifetime, so the expenditure is justified.

And they are easy to keep clean.

And look so attractive when they are clean—shining and bright.

Light as the proverbial feather, too—no aching arms in lifting aluminum pots and pans.

There are all sizes and all kinds of pans from milk kettles to double boilers.

Spring brides will be wise to remember these facts in furnishing their future kitchens.

ACCESSORY NEWNESS.

Ospreys Fortunately High — Furs, Clever New Chapeau.

One discovers with relief the enormous prices asked for real osprey—with relief and sadness mingled, remembering the slaughter of the birds. The expense of such feathers rises annually; in Paris now gourah and heron plumes cost about ten guineas apiece, according to the size of the sprays used. Their great price argues a shortage of supply, but may help to place a limit upon the amount sold.

The huge muff, too, is as pliable and looks as luxurious as can be. But muffs of various sizes are to enjoy a new success.

One of the most supple and handsome of fur scarfs is made of sealskin, both sides alike, and to match such a scarf the milliners are introducing sealskin into our hats. There is immense attraction in one smart model, which to a crown of white suede adds a brim faced with sealskin and a huge mass of white cock Beraaglieri plumage in front. The fact should be noted that the brim, which is high at one side, is small and straight at the other.

THE CHIFFON BLOUSE

Made Over Lace With Buttons and Loops.

Very simple little chiffon blouses for wear with tailored suits are made in chiffon to match the coat and skirt, laid in vertical tucks, either pin tucks or pin tucks alternating with quarter-inch tucks. This tucked chiffon is laid over cream lace—Valenciennes of bold design, Alencon, Chantilly—and is untrimmed save for an inch band of self-colored satin finishing the neck of the throat line or a little below, and running down the left front, where the blouse fastens.

Little satin buttons and loops are set along this opening, and a pleated frill of the chiffon falling over a soft frill of the cream lace finishes the edge of the overlapping front. The sleeves have a tiny undersleeve or cuff of lace at the wrist with a narrow band of satin finishing the oversleeve. There is a satin girdle and a little guimpe of the creamy lace.

This is an admirable model, easily made by any dressmaker, and there is another better than that of the curving band, which is difficult to adjust smoothly and inclined to break. The piquant collar finish of this model would not be becoming to all wearers, but is exceedingly good-looking when it can be worn. A tiny frill of white next the face relieves the coloring.

EASTER EGG PARTY.

A Novel Little Entertainment for a Bride-to-Be.

One clever hostess gave an egg party to a friend who was to be married after Easter, the entertainment taking the form of a novel shower. A large basket on the table, says The Housekeeper, was filled with egg-shaped packages, on which was a placard—"Spring Eggs—Strictly Fresh." Then followed some clever tableaux of the old woman who went to market her eggs for to sell, falling asleep on the King's highway. The Peddler "Stout" comes in, steals her basket and runs and presents it to the bride-to-be (who is in the audience.) The awakening of the old woman, her woe over the discovery of the loss of her basket and of her petticoats cut all round about and the entrance of the family dog, which began to bark while she began to cry was all strictly in accordance with the well-known nursery rhyme.

After the bride had examined her eggs, the parcels containing her gifts, all went in to luncheon, where the Easter motif was observed throughout. A basket of fancy eggs formed the centrepiece. Oval-shaped fromes of stiff white paper were slashed to represent a broken egg, and the face of the hostess peeped out as the novel souvenir at each place, while violet-tinted, egg-shaped baskets served for bonbon dishes.

The menu was chiefly in gold and white, while artificial violets added a dainty touch to many of the dishes.

YE FRILL.

It Should Run Down One Side the Blouse Front.

A dainty finish to the blouse front is the frill.

The plaited frill running down only one side of a central band has come into popularity this season, another version of the same general idea being the frill which slips under the central front plait of a blouse opening in front. The best of these latter frills button in with the same buttons which fasten the blouse and so are easily adjusted.

Plain frills of fine lawn or frills with narrow colored hems or very narrow lace edge are used in this fashion, or the plain tailored blouses of soft sheer stuff which have invaded the province once dominated by the tailored waist of madras or linen, and the removable frill launders much more easily and satisfactorily than a frill permanently stached.

A WONDER.

"What a quaint old teapot! And you say it has been in the family since the year 1810? Then it is a century old! It has outlasted an entire 100 years!"

"Yes, and probably 300 cooks."

NA-DRU-CO

Formulae Have Been Well Tried Out

Though the NA-DRU-CO line of Medicinal and Toilet Preparations have been on sale for a few months only, don't think for minute that in buying NA-DRU-CO goods you are experimenting with new or untried preparations.

Their Origin

The twenty-one wholesale drug firms now united in the "National" had all of them lengthy careers, some for fifty to one hundred years, prior to the union. Each firm had acquired or developed a number of valuable formulæ for medicinal and toilet preparations, all of which became the property of the "National".

Since the union our expert chemists have carefully gone over these formulæ and selected the best for the NA-DRU-CO line. Every formula has been carefully studied by these experts, improved if possible, and then thoroughly tested again, in actual use, before we consider it good enough to bear the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

An Example

A good example of what we mean is NA-DRU-CO Nervozone for Brain Fag or nervous break-down. The formula was pronounced the most scientific combination of nerve medicines, but this was enough for us; we had it tried out with a dozen different kind of Brain workers — School Teachers, Lawyers, Bookkeepers—as well as Society leaders and home workers, and everywhere the result was so good that we adopted it as one of the best of the NA-DRU-CO line.

There are therefore no experiments among NA-DRU-CO preparations. We have invested altogether too much time, work and money in the NA-DRU-CO line to take any chances of discrediting it with preparations that might not prove satisfactory. We make absolutely certain that each preparation is satisfactory before we endorse it with the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

Ask your physician or your druggist about the firm behind NA-DRU-CO preparations and about the NA-DRU-CO line. They can tell you, for we will furnish them, on request, a full list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO article.

"Money Back"

If by any chance you should not be entirely satisfied with any NA-DRU-CO article you try, return the unused portion to the druggist from whom you bought it and he will refund your money—willingly, too, because we return to him every cent he gives back to you.

If your druggist should not have the particular NA-DRU-CO article you ask for in stock, he can get it for you within two days from our nearest wholesale branch.

Sweet Norine

He knew that it would not be long until night would close in upon them again. The forest was scarcely more than ten miles long each way; why, then, had they not reached the mountain road ere this? he asked himself in dismay, over and over again.

"Are we almost there, Joe?" asked Norine at length, as though reading the troubled thoughts that he was striving so diligently to keep from her.

"We ought to strike into the mountain road at any moment now," he replied, endeavoring to speak cheerfully.

"It almost seems to me as though we had passed this very spot before," murmured Norine, glancing around critically.

"All spots in a dense forest like this appear pretty much the same," he declared.

But Norine stopped short.

"We have been here before, Joe," she said, her face paling perceptibly. "This is the spot where the snake was; don't you see him hanging over the branch of that tree—just where you flung him?"

It was, indeed, but too true. They had traversed for long hours in a semicircle from the time they had resumed their journey after Norine's thrilling experience.

"Heaven help us both; you are right, Norine," he answered, with the sound of tears in his voice. "I thought I was going due east. How could I have made such a fatal error?"

They had proceeded but a short distance further ere they came upon the tall tree in which they had found shelter, with the three fallen Pawnees buried in the snow beneath it.

They looked into each other's troubled face, unable to utter a word.

"Forgive me, Norine," was all that Joe could say in broken accents.

"It was through no fault of yours that it happened, Joe," she answered, making the bravest kind of an effort to keep back her tears. "Everything happens for the best. No doubt if we had gone any other way we would have been murdered by some roving bands of Pawnees."

"It is most kind of you to overlook it in that way," he answered huskily. "You are an angel not to turn on me with bitter words of reproach—such as I deserve."

She looked up into his troubled, grieved face, forcing a smile to her lips, as she answered lightly:

"We have at least derived one benefit from our long tramp, as you must admit. We have been enabled to take the cramp out of our limbs."

Joe did not reply; his heart was far too heavy.

Another night up in the tree! God in heaven! could any prospect be more horrible to contemplate?

For himself he cared nothing; but Norine—ah! how would she ever be able to endure it without breaking down altogether?

It was clearly evident to him that there was no other way than passing the long hours of the night up in the same tree again, waiting for the light of another morrow to proceed.

In the midst of his sad reflections a thought came to him like an inspiration. He remembered once hearing of a hunter who overcame just such an obstacle as confronted him now by laying several heavy fallen branches across the almost level boughs of the trees, making thus a sort of rude platform up in the tree, where he could stretch himself out and sleep in comparative comfort, and out of the reach of the roaming, howling beasts of the forest, who were unable to reach him so far up in his eyrie among the topmost branches.

With alacrity Joe set about constructing two such landings, Norine watching him with wide open, puzzled eyes.

He soon had them as secure as they could possibly be made, and when he helped Norine up to her place of shelter she rewarded his labor by declaring the scheme an excellent one, assuring him that she could rest there without fear.

Thus the long hours of the night dragged their slow lengths by, Joe taking fitful naps by fits and starts, listening long and earnestly every little while to hear the faint sound of Norine's breathing from above.

As for himself, he dared not trust himself to sleep lest some unforeseen danger confront them and need all his energies to battle with it.

His fears proved to be well grounded, for in the wee small hours of that never-to-be-forgotten night his sharpened ear caught the sound of moccasined feet approaching.

He realized that it was a prowling band of Pawnees, and as they halted under the great tree for a moment he gathered from their conversation that the chiefs had given up the hope of capturing the fugitives, and had ordered the braves all back to their wigwams, where they were to be summarily disciplined for not bringing back the two who had so cleverly eluded the vigilant Pawnees.

Then they fell to discussing vigorously what course they had taken, and by listening intently Joe soon learned that the main road, of which he had been in search, was scarcely two miles distant from that very spot, and that by following an almost hidden path that lay alongside of a row of stunted bushes it could be reached with little difficulty.

Soon afterward the Pawnees resumed their journey, much to Joe's infinite relief.

He could have cried out aloud in his joy. He could scarcely wait for daylight and Norine to show some signs of awakening to impart to her the wonderful news. But when hour after hour passed and all was as still as death amid the green boughs among which she rested, he began to grow alarmed.

Could anything have happened to her? he asked himself, a strange chilliness creeping over his heart.

Softly he called up to her: "Norine! Norine!"

There was no answer—no sound save the beating of his own heart broke the unnatural stillness.

"Norine!" he called again; "Norine!"

After what seemed to him an age of weary waiting, and just as he was about to sob aloud in the horror of his agony, she answered him.

"For a moment I did not know where I really was, Joe," she said. "I thought that I was home, and that the tree and your voice were some strange, weird dream which I could not shake off! Is it really daylight again—has another day dawned?"

"Yes," he answered, "and I have good news for you. Make haste to eat the rest of the rations, and we will set out for the mountain road. I know where to find it now, thank God!" and he proceeded to eagerly tell her all that had transpired while the oblivion of sleep wrapped her in its merciful mantle.

"I almost feared, when you did not answer when I called you, that you had frozen during the long hours of the night, or had met some other fate equally as horrible."

"I think that I would have succumbed to the cold had it not been for the Pawnee blanket. I am greatly grieved to discover, too, that you wrapped your own about me as well. You went without that I might not feel the terrors of the bitter cold. Why did you do that, Joe?. It was not merciful nor kind to yourself," she added, gravely.

"I am well repaid, seeing you so thoroughly refreshed, Norine!" he answered, huskily. "No sacrifice is too great for me to make for you."

She hid her face in her hands and wept. Little by little she was beginning to realize the mighty magnitude of this man's love for her. And she pitied him—ay! pitied him from the depths of her soul, for she told herself that she could be nothing to him while life lasted. A dark, handsome, debonair face came between them. She loved Clifford Carlisle even as Joe loved her, and if her love could never be returned, she would go down to her grave unwedded.

She was beginning to believe, against all judgment, that Clifford Carlisle could explain away her harrowing doubts and why he had left her to the mercy of the half-breed.

Perhaps they had overpowered him by superior numbers and taken her forcibly from him! It was as unjust as it was cruel to doubt him until she saw him again and gave him the opportunity of telling his own side of the story. Ah, if poor Joe had but dreamed what was passing in her thoughts he would not have cared for life or freedom!

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Let no soul say: "This is a bitter life!"
Or, old and gray: "I weary of the strife!"
Turning aside with sad or scornful lips
To words allied that tell of hope's eclipse
Long as there dwells in any earthly spot
One heart that dwells with love unshaken not;
For no soul's storm-weathering anchor's gone
While love lives on!

Nor in God's plan may overthrow befall
To any man who, losing elsewhere all,
Yet claims, alone, one constant heart beat still
That to his own gives a responsive thrill;
In this is might that fears no ill to meet,
Makes day of night, or victory of defeat,
Fronting elate the darkness as the dawn—
For love lives on!

We must pause for a few moments and review the thrilling events that were taking place in Hadley.

When Norine's grandfather discovered her flight, his grief was so intense that every other woe was overshadowed by it; he forgot the peril of the villagers and his dear old wife and himself, forgot everything save that the dearly loved ewe lamb had strayed from the fold and had wandered none knew whither.

He put on his greatcoat and grasped his lantern, saying:

"You must go to the Town Hall, where the women folk of the village are gathered together, while I go to search for Norine. Do not mention to any one what has happened," he added, "for it doesn't take much to hurt the reputation of a young, careless thing like bonny Norine."

"You expect to find her with the handsome stranger?" queried his old wife, with tears in her voice, her old hands trembling pitifully.

"I shall look for her at Barrison Hall," he answered. "If I do not find her there, the handsome stranger must point out where she has gone, or—or——"

He did not finish the sentence, his voice dying slowly away in a muttered curse—a curse which seemed to rend his very soul in twain.

There was so much commotion on the streets that no one noticed that old Daniel Gordon parted silently from his wife at the town house door and struck into a path that led over the hills to the other end of the village.

It was quite an hour's tramp through the drifting snow, but the old man, whose heart was on fire with a bitter, burning rage, scarcely heeded the long, desolate journey, until he found himself standing, for the second time that night, in front of the towering gates of Barrison Hall.

He did not hesitate as before as to [illegible] he should pursue, but walked straight up the broad path and knocked loudly and heavily upon the door.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

Again it was Miss Austin who answered the summons, and she looked, as she felt, greatly surprised to behold the visitor of scarcely two hours before standing upon the snow-covered porch.

Before she could express her surprise the old man said with intense emotion, which he did his best to keep in abeyance:

"Go to Mr. Clifford Carlisle and say to him that I am here for my Norine; tell him just that and no more."

"You are here for your Norine!" exclaimed Miss Austin, in amazement. "What in the world do you mean, my good man? I do not comprehend your words in the least, I assure you."

"He will know," exclaimed old Mr. Gordon, smiting his hands together fiercely. "She has gone to him. If it be his intention to elope with her, I say to him now that he had better be dead than attempt it; old man that I am, I would follow him to the end of the world, but that I would find him and wreak my vengeance upon him."

Miss Austin had turned deadly pale; she leaned heavily against the framework of the door for support, clutching her hands tightly together.

"What is this? Let me understand it clearly and fully. Do you mean to infer that Mr. Clifford Carlisle is—is making love to any young woman in Hadley, and that it has gone so far that—that you fear that they have eloped together? Step into the hall here, where it is warm, and tell me the whole story, quickly—ay, with great haste, for moments are precious."

"It is Carlisle whom I must see at once," replied Daniel Gordon.

"Nay, you cannot see him, for he is not here. But perhaps I can help you to find him if you tell me your story with great despatch."

There was not much to tell, sad as the story was, and in a few heartbroken sentences he told of that first unfortunate meeting of the handsome, debonair stranger with little Norine, and how he had kept the acquaintance up, pledging her to secrecy concerning it to further his own designs; and how he managed to meet the guileless, thoughtless little maiden day after day, until he had won her trusting little heart from her.

The upshot of the matter was, little Norine had fled, and Daniel Gordon felt beyond a doubt that she had fled to her lover. That he had no serious intentions regarding Norine, Carlisle had coolly admitted, adding that he had made love with quite as much ardor to half a dozen village girls. But Norine had stoutly refused to believe that her lover had uttered these words when they were told to her that evening after he had reached his cottage home from his visit to the master of Barrison Hall.

"I shall never believe that Clifford Carlisle loves any one on earth but me," Norine had declared. "He has told me so over and over again with his own lips and he will make me, and no one else, his bride."

An exclamation of the deepest rage fell from Miss Austin's lips.

"If he told your Norine, or any other girl that, then he has been false to me—and I trusted him so! Prove to me the truth of what you say, then he and the people of Hadley will hear from me, and, if I do open my lips, I can make an astonishing disclosure. Clifford Carlisle will wish that he had never played with fire in the shape of Florice Austin. Ay! I can wreak a fierce vengeance upon him!

"If he thinks because he has come into possession of all the Barrison money—and I haven't a dollar—that he can play fast and loose with me, he will find that he is very much mistaken. I have told you that Clifford Carlisle is not here, and in telling you so I have spoken the truth; he is at this moment making his way to the railway station to take the train that will bear him East. We had planned that I should join him, I starting to-morrow. We can easily overtake him by taking a cross cut to the station. Come, I will go with you, and if I find that he has a woman companion with him, he shall feel the full force of Florice Austin's vengeance!"

Daniel Gordon had listened to her words with dismay as he looked at her. She seemed transformed from a woman to a veritable fiend incarnate.

Not another word did she utter, but with all speed donned her long, heavy cloak and hood, and, drawing a veil over her rage-distorted face, announced that she was ready, and that if they expected to intercept the flying Clifford Carlisle they would have to make all possible haste.

"You know these paths better than I do," she said, briefly; "take the lead and I will follow. Remember, we have less than twenty minutes to make the journey. He left Barrison Hall less than a quarter of an hour ago; it takes but half an hour longer to reach the station, so, unless we make all haste, he will have boarded the train in spite of us."

On reaching the depot they found that the train which was due would not reach Hadley that night, it was half buried in an embankment of snow some hundred miles away, their despatches had informed them.

"Had any passengers intending to go East learned of this?" Miss Austin asked, eagerly.

"Yes; a gentleman has just left the station, who had been mightily disappointed over the state of affairs, if his deep cursing was an indication of it," the station master replied.

"Was he alone?" queried Miss Austin, and old Daniel Gordon in the same breath.

That the station master did not know, he was so entirely engrossed by the telegraphic despatches that were coming in at that moment.

"He has returned, of course, to Barrison Hall," said Miss Austin. "You shall return with me there, and he shall answer us both. If your granddaughter was with him, of course she must have returned home; under the circumstances they would probably make the appointment for two days later, when they would meet no difficulty in getting off. Don't you see?"

Daniel Gordon shook his head, saying, tremulously:

"If Norine was with the rascal—which I have every reason to believe—then the belating of the Eastern bound express was an intervention from heaven."

When they returned to Barrison Hall they found that Clifford Carlisle had not returned there.

"Come back to-morrow," said Miss Austin.

Daniel Gordon looked at her wonderingly.

"You cannot remain here," he said; "you must come with me to the town hall, where the rest of the women and children are."

"What do you mean?" she asked, sharply, beginning to think that the old man's thoughts were wandering.

When he told her of the expected attack of the Pawnees and the grave danger that would result from it, her horror knew no bounds.

"Ah! That is why Clifford Carlisle made up his mind so suddenly to leave Hadley," she cried, adding, with eyes fairly blazing: "He never told me of the danger he was leaving me in. I see through it all now. He was sure we would all be massacred—and the dead could tell no tales."

Mechanically she accompanied Daniel Gordon to the only place of safety that the village people had provided.

Two days and two nights they remained banded together, and as yet the Pawnees had not come. The excitement ran high, not a man, woman or child dared close eyes in sleep.

During that two days nothing was seen or heard from Norine or Clifford Carlisle. The villagers never gave a thought to the handsome stranger, and the blacksmith and his wife uttered no word. Miss Austin was silent, too, but she was laying her plans for the mightiest vengeance that a woman ever dealt out to a false, fickle lover—cleanly exemplifying the old adage, that no revenge is so bitter, so cruel, as love to hatred turned.

In those long hours Florice Austin learned the truth; Clifford Carlisle had never loved her, and wished to be rid of her.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Miss Austin had been quite correct in her surmise; it had been Clifford Carlisle's intention to rid himself of her; she knew too much about him for his peace of mind; he would be constantly in fear of her divulging the secret of the spurious will.

If the Pawnees attacked Hadley they would make a clean sweep of the village, she would share the fate of the others and there would be no one to tell the tale.

Even when he promised Chowsky to lead the Pawnees in the massacre against the villagers, he promised himself secretly that he would only do so providing he could not in the meantime make his escape from Hadley.

He had no relish to be in the thick of a skirmish, with the weapons of either party against him.

"I did not come out into this western wild for this," he muttered to himself. "I came to get the Barrison millions; I accomplished what I came for, and I have no business here and hour longer, so the quicker I leave the place behind me the better."

A Remarkable Trade Mark Proposition

The big "NA-DRU-CO" advertisement, which appears on another page of this issue, announces probably the most extensive trade marked line which has yet been brought out in Canada.

The proposition, as outlined in the advertisement, is a truly "National" one, and one which is of the greatest practical importance to every Canadian.

Scores of Canadian manufacturers have already proved the business-building value of a well-known—and that means well-advertised—trade mark, but none have ever carried the idea so far as has the firm behind the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

To put out 125 different preparations under the one name and trade mark, and advertise as they are doing, is business genius—though it would be business suicide were they not absolutely certain of the quality of each and every article trade marked.

A careful reading of the advertisement, however, leaves little doubt of NA-DRU-CO quality, and impresses one with the business acumen and judicious daring of the firm which has planned such a project and announced it with such an advertisement, appearing to-day, we understand throughout the Dominion.

LONGEST TELEGRAPH CIRCUIT.

It Is 4,000 Miles Long, Extending From London to Teheran, in Persia.

Persia and its capital, Teheran, have been very much before the public lately, but probably few people are aware that the news which has come through to London has passed over the longest telegraphic circuit in the world.

The distance between London and Teheran by wire is 4,000 miles, and the operator in Teheran communicates direct with the operator at the London end, automatic repeaters taking the place of operators at ten places along the circuit.

The first repeating station from London is at Lowestoft, where the wires enter the North Sea, beneath which they run for 200 miles to Emden, Hanover, where the second automatic repeater continues the message.

Thence it is flashed to Berlin, Warsaw, Rouno, Odessa, Kertch, Sukhum, Khlen, Tiflis and Tauris, from each of which station it is instantaneously forwarded without human intervention, the telegraphist at Tehera, who receives the message from Tauris, being the first operator to handle it since it left London. From Teheran the line then extends to India, but nowhere else is there a circuit so long as that between Teheran and London.

The Craving for Drink

Often a Result of Weakness.

"I think I would have given up drink sooner if I hadn't been run down and nervous. I had to take it up to keep me up," explains Mr. G. H. Eckerdt, Toronto. "At the last I had to do something, my hand got so trembly, and I was so easily over-heated and rattled that I could not properly keep up my set of books, and I could see that the boss had his eye on me. Our stenographer had been cured of nervousness by Ferrozone, and when I happened to say I had a nervous night, she told me her experience, and assured me Ferrozone would suit me just as well.

"As a matter of fact it did suit me. It entirely overcame all nervousness. But it taught me that if a man makes his blood purer and stronger, his nerves get strong too. When this happens he does not need a bracer, and gets out of the way of feeling the need of stimulants, and this makes Ferrozone a remedy worthy of taking by everybody whose nerves are weak and blood impure and watery."

Everyone in a nervous, sleepless, run-down condition will be quickly restored to health by Ferrozone. Try it, 50c per box, six for $2.50, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

COST OF CARAVANING.

How But the Idle Rich Can Afford It as an Amusement.

The Caravan Club of Great Britain and Ireland have just held its second meet. According to the secretary of the club it is, as a rule, rich people who take to caravaning, at least to caravaning for amusement. A recent addition to the membership is a woman who said she had eight motor cars. She was tired of rushing about and wished to try ambling for a time.

It is natural that caravaning should attract well off rather than ill off people, says the Queen, for however great economy is practised there must always be the initial cost of a van (which is still not less than £60 to £80, without fittings and furnishings), the hire and keep of a horse, besides food, which can often be bought from farmhouses and need not of course be at all relatively expensive.

If the horse is stabled there are tips to grooms. Some one who had spent many week ends caravaning estimated that for three or four persons the cost of a week end worked out at about 15s. per day, everything included, but that caravaning for several weeks or a month or two worked out more cheaply.

An excellent plan for anyone thinking of taking up caravaning would be to buy a van second hand, which may sometimes be done. There was a beautifully fitted up one at the meet this year for sale second hand for £75. It had a stove or range and all sorts of conveniences and contrivances for carrying many comforts in little space and could not have been built for less than several hundred pounds.

To be able to supply accurate information to members of the club as to facilities for caravaning in the different counties the club secretary prevails upon as many caravans as possible to send him printed postcards with certain particulars filled in where blanks are left. These give the name of the district pitched at details as to water supply and civility received and also state whether the pitch was charged for and whether there were people willing to let horses for caravans. The particulars received are classified under counties and members, but members only—for the club subscription is only 5s. a year—are allowed on application to have the benefit of them.

Surrey, Kent and the home counties generally are the favorites among caravaners, though many seem to have been about Lincolnshire. This year several members have taken their vans to France and are going about Brittainy. How they got the vans past the customs and what they had to pay will be known when they return. Evidently, however, there is no insuperable difficulty about getting a van into France. Brittainy is an inexpensive district, and the peasants very civil. The address of the Caravan Club is now 358 Strand, London.

THE ROADS OF MOROCCO.

Tribes Plough Them Up Now and Then and Sow Grain on Them.

There are two roads from Tangier to Fez, the one passing through Alcazer and the other following the seashore via Larache. The former is the more direct and except during the rainy season is usually chosen by the traveller, but the beach road to Larache possesses many attractions and you are able to spend a night at the old Portuguese settlement of Arzil, which is a model of the fortresses of two centuries ago.

No one has ever yet measured accurately the exact distance which separates Tangier from Fez, and I hope the next person to make the journey will take a bicycle wheel with a cyclometer attached to settle the vexed question once and for all. Roughly I put the distance at 185 to 190 miles, and it is usual to take from six to eight days on the road, thus limiting the daily march to twenty-five miles, which is quite sufficient if you want to shoot on arriving in camp.

The journey can be done comfortably in six days if your animals are not too heavily loaded, and I have ridden from Fez to Larache in three days during the heat of August, but it is an experiment not to be recommended.

Except during the months of July, August and September the climate of Morocco is temperate and pleasant. The early spring is, however, the best season for a journey, as the tropical rains which are likely to overwhelm you in the late autumn and early winter have ceased. The rivers are serious obstacles during the rainy season, as there are no bridges and no ferries except close to the coast, and consequently if the fords are impracticable you are likely to be hung up on the banks of a river for a very considerable time. The rivers are wide and shallow, but are liable to rise and fall six to eight feet in twenty-four hours. Your baggage must be carried on mules or horses.

There are no regular roads in Morocco and the tracks are often very difficult to trace and vary constantly because the tribes have the curious custom of ploughing right over them and sowing their grain thereon. Thus in the summer when the corn is ripe the old road has sometimes entirely disappeared, and it is necessary to strike a new trail. As there are no roads carts are unknown in the interior. The only wheeled vehicles which ever found their way to Fez were brought there by the late Sultan Abdul Aziz, who succeeded in adding considerably to his unpopularity by the innovation.—From the National Review.

But Some of the Songs Are to the Tune of Caruso Prices.

One of the farm papers reports a few recent sales. One place of less than 200 acres in Chenango County has just been sold for $10,000, one of 82 acres in Monroe County for the same round sum, and one of 240 acres, same county, for $70 an acre. Another paper reports three recent sales in Illinois—one at $125 an acre, one at $200 and one at $250. The $200 an acre place hadn't a building on it, the price was for land alone.

When you next hear of "abandoned farms," says Country Life in America, just docket these few with them. The comparison may suggest something. There are farms and farms.

Some are rich as mud and some are poor as Job's turkey; some are accessible and some are miles from a lemon; some are mostly arable and some couldn't be plowed with dynamite. Some can be bought for $3 an acre and some can't be touched for one hundred times that sum. The chances are that when you buy a farm you'll just get your money's worth—if you're as shrewd a buyer as the other fellow is seller—you won't get any more.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, But the Trouble Lies in the Blood.

Changeable spring weather, often raw, cold and damp, is pretty sure to bring a time of misery to people who suffer from rheumatism. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism; the trouble is rooted in the blood—the damp, changeable weather merely starts the aches and often almost unbearable pains going. The trouble must be reached through the blood, and the poisonous rheumatic acids driven out. This is a medical truth, every rheumatic sufferer should realize. Liniments, outward applications and so-called electric appliances, never did, and never can, cure rheumatism. The sufferer is only wasting valuable time and money with this sort of treatment, and all the time the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted—and harder to cure. There is just one sure way to cure rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, weak, acid tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and so root out the cause of rheumatism. Mr. John Finnamore, Marysville, N. B., says: "I was laid up with rheumatic fever for a year, and for eight months of that time I could not go about. My blood had seemed to turn to water, and the pain I endured was at times almost unendurable. Notwithstanding I was under the doctor's care I was not regaining my strength and I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. I took altogether nine boxes, and they simply worked wonders in bringing back my lost strength. I still take the Pills occasionally as I am working in a saw mill where the work is pretty heavy."

Not only rheumatic sufferers, but all who have any trouble due to weak, watery blood, will find a cure through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It is because of their direct action on the blood that these Pills cure such troubles as anæmia, indigestion, general weakness, neuralgia and the aches, pains and secret troubles of women folk alone know. Give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and they will not disappoint you. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRISON LIFE IN JAPAN.

Convicts Treated Well and Many Come Back.

"Most people imagine that a prison is a place where malefactors are punished for their crimes. It is not so in Japan, however, declares a writer in the Wide World Magazine. There a convict may earn money enough while in jail to maintain his family, has the best of food and lodging, is taught a trade, and, if he wishes, pursues the study of foreign languages. At Sugamo a qualified teacher instructs the younger prisoners in reading, writing and arithmetic. Prisoners of 20 and upward who are in seclusion for the first time are taught geography and history.

If, on entering the prison, a man states that he has a knowledge of English, he is carefully examined by a linguist and the extent of his knowledge fathomed. He is then allowed to pursue his studies, the necessary books being supplied by the authorities. When there are several in together a teacher is obtained from outside and lessons are given regularly.

In the offices a record of each prisoner is kept during his stay. This serves to show whether the convict is prompt to obey the officials; whether he shows affection for his parents and relatives; whether he writes letters home; and whether he makes progress or not in his scholastic studies.

It was natural that, after parading this paradise, I should doubt if Japan's treatment of her criminals led to a decrease in crime. The officials confessed that, of robbers, burglars, thieves and swindlers, sixty per cent. came back to the prison. Of those who had been twice imprisoned, sixty per cent. returned; of the first offenders, forty per cent. found their way back.

THE ABOMINATION THAT BRINGETH DESOLATION

Now that the meeting about the sewerage question has become a matter of history, which, like Jonah's gourd, that came up in a night and perished in a night, I would like to draw your attention to the high-handed, low minded manner in which the ratepayers were treated on this occasion.

As a matter of fact, one and all were invited to attend this meeting and, accordingly, a goodly representation turned out. According to the act the boundary of the district should be settled at this meeting, but this matter seems to have been cut and dried before the meeting, as the chairman, A. Okell, told the ratepayers that the said district was to have as its outside limits the original townsite, as pre-emptied by F. G. Little. He also informed the people that any one living outside of this area had no right to speak. Another important item was the fact that the Secretary of the Board of Trade, who advertised the meeting, appeared on the scene without even a copy of the Act, and with this knowledge, "keep your mouth shut," so to speak, and the fact we don't know what the act is, people, yes ratepayers, were called together to discuss what would in all probability be an expenditure of a possible $100,000.

Fellow ratepayers: Did you ever read or hear tell, or even conceive of such a bull-headed combination? As a matter of fact the chairman lives outside the said limits, and if it be true that the secretary does not own a foot of land within said boundary, and if it be true that the president of the said Board of Trade is an alien, it is not much wonder that the psoychological atmosphere of the meeting was so full of emptiness that the meeting of the Board of Trade came to a full stop.

Just here I might say that one of the greatest and most important assets that a man can have socially is to enjoy the confidence of the people; but once this confidence is betrayed, all hope of redeeming such confidence is most hopelessly lost; and at present it would appear that this is the present attitude of the people to the Board of Trade.

The ratepayers however had learned that one of their number had a premonition of what was likely to occur, and accordingly that person took immediate steps to procure from the King's printer copies of the bill No. 40, 1910, on act respecting the construction of sewers in unincorporated districts, also copies of the act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the incorporation of municipalities, chapter 143 of the royal statutes of British Columbia; and they, learning that those acts were in his possession, demanded a meeting of the ratepayers, which meeting took place in the same hall the same evening, viz., April 11, 1910, at the close of the Board of Trade meeting. They at once appointed a chairman who had considerable knowledge of both acts, he going closely into the matter, and also provided the ratepayers with what literature he could spare bearing on the aforementioned acts.

When the people became aware of the real sentiment of the sewer act—that without even their sanction or vote, a board of commissioners might have been appointed—and as a result beautiful Creston might have been in the throes of an awful and needless debt. They then turned to the municipalities incorporation act, which was all read in their hearing, and as a result probably 90 per cent. of the ratepayers are in favor of having a township municipality, whereby they may enjoy that freedom which their fathers fought and bled for, viz., that of having their own council whereby they may levy their own rates of taxes, have their own court of revision, appoint their own assessor, clerk, etc., and once and for ever free themselves of any possibility of any debt which the Board of Trade or any commissioner of any kind whatever might saddle them with.

Farther, there would have been nothing said about having a township municipality formed had it not been for the fact that the Board of Trade breached this sewer question, when we have already an act which covers all the ground necessary. Let the Board of Trade mind their own business, as the sewer question is one that the ratepayers and the ratepayers alone, have any legal right to tamper with.

Some people will do anything for notoriety—tax the widow and the fatherless to death and hunt the laboring man from his home. The people of Creston are getting wise, and woe be to that man or company of men who would interfere with their profits.

GERMANY'S WAR CARS

Bullet-proof automobiles, veritable war cars, will play a prominent part in the German army manoeuvres this year. The war car is a totally different thing from the transport and supply car or private automobile. These latter could only operate with safety well to the rear of the advanced troops, whereas the former is designed to push boldly to the front and take a definite offensive in the fighting line. Not only Germany, but France and Austria have already constructed some highly ingenious specimens of these battle motors.

These war cars are practically small mobile forts, equipped with quick-firing guns, and having all their vital parts completely protected. Their armor, which in every case has been subjected to fire tests at close range, is bullet-proof, and in the French and Austrian patterns completely covers the interior of the car, something like the rounded gun-turret of a battleship. Wheels and engines are, of course, amply protected, and the Austrian pattern has the additional advantage that its driving power is applied to both sets of wheels by means of an ingenious device, which is a strictly guarded secret. The latest French pattern has a revolving turret armed with a Hotchkiss quickfirer, and both the French and Austrian as well as the German war cars are able to cross country, if necessary, and to negotiate ditches and obstacles of the ordinary character.

The picture of a motor battle in which these monsters will operate is a highly interesting one to consider. The German idea is that these war cars will in a great measure form the pivots upon which the mobile elements of an army in the field will work, and this, in accordance with the German conception, is what is likely to happen.

Well out among the advanced and covering troops of an army on every road leading to the front there will be armored high-speed war cars armed with revolving machine guns. They will co-operate with and support the mounted troops, working across country, and with the cyclists in covering the advance, or feeling for the enemy, and in capturing and holding bridges, fords and places of vantage. Conversely they would materially assist in covering a retreat, or in protecting the flanks of an army, where they would be very awkward customers for cavalry to tackle.

They will carry tiny garrisons of from 10 to 12 men, and as they work along the main roads they will act as suports and rallying points to bodies of cyclists who, acting as the monster's tentacles, will search and examine the country between their own road and the next, sure always of being able to retire on the protection of the mobile fort and its machine gun. Further occasions will arise where, when opposing hostile infantry or cavalry, the war motor can be used to defend or assault points, such as a bridge or defile, and they will be invaluable for the purpose of a sudden rush to cover an attack, or hold on limpet-like to some post until reinforcements can arrive. In these days cover from fire is so important that many occasions will arise when these small mobile forts, which can ignore the rifle fire of an enemy, will prove of immense value in assisting the efforts of their infantry or cavalry.

The publisher of the best farmers' paper in the Maritime Provinces in writing to us states:

"I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT. It has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

What a Baby Can Do.

It can beat any alarm clock ever invented waking a family up in the morning.

Give it a fair show and it can smash more dishes than the most industrious servant girl in the country.

It can fall down oftener and with less provocation than the most expert tumbler in the circus ring.

It can make more genuine fuss over a simple brass pin than its mother would over a broken back.

It can choke itself black in the face with greater ease than the most accomplished wretch that ever was executed.

It can keep a family in a constant turmoil from morning till night and night till morning without once varying its tone.

It can be relied upon to sleep peacefully all day when its father is downtown and cry persistently at night when he is particularly sleepy.

It may be the naughtiest, dirtiest, ugliest, most fretful baby in the whole world, but you can never make its mother believe it, and you had better not try it.

It can be a charming and model infant when no one is around, but when visitors are present it can exhibit more bad temper than both of its parents put together.

Queen Elizabeth, in a characteristic rage, had proclaimed the doom of the courtier: "Off with his head!"

The culprit courtier was heard to mutter something to himself.

"What said the caitiff?" demanded Elizabeth.

MONEY IN SUMMER RESORTING.

(Boston Globe.)

New England's summer resort business brings this section more than $60,000,000 a year, whereas all the silver mines of the country produced only $28,000,000 last year, and even the gold mines of all the States and Alaska yielded but $90,000,000.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 8, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instrutions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

To Make Farmers of Indians.

In connection with the new plan for administering Indian affairs the Department will ask for an appropriation from the present Congress with which to establish model farms on all the reservations where agricultural pursuits are practicable. It is planned to place these farms in the hands of expert agriculturists and horticulturists, who will instruct the Indians in all branches of farming.

The Department already has taken steps to deprive the Indian landowners of direct control of the money derived from renting their holdings to the white settlers by requiring that this money be held in trust by the Indain Commissioner, to be turned over to the Indians for such improvements as are deeped advisable.

This order was made to suppress the leasing system on reservations and to compel the Indian to cultivate his own land.—Lewiston correspondence Portland Oregonian.

COMBINATION DRESSES.

This is one name for them.

They are made from two or more fabrics.

Sometimes a plain color and a border effect is combined.

Two kinds of foulards are often used.

Or a taffeta silk with a figured silk.

Chiffon, too, is combined with another soft silk.

Over-skirt, bodice drapery and little over-sleeves are of one material and the dress proper of still another.

THEY WATCH YOU IN BERLIN,

And It Is Sometimes Convenient When Looking Up a Friend.

"I had no idea that they kept such an espionage over strangers in Berlin until a friend of mine had occasion to look up some one there," said a traveller. "We had come on from Vienna, and as my friend was in the diplomatic service we called at the embassy.

"While there he happened to think of another friend, an American who had gone to Berlin about three years before to represent an American concern and wondered how he could get a trace of him.

"'Nothing is easier,' said the embassy secretary. 'Just wait a moment.'

He wrote a note and handed it to a messenger.

"'We shall know all about your friend in fifteen minutes,' he said.

"Sure enough, within that time the messenger reappeared with an answer. From it the secretary read that Soandso had arrived in Berlin on such a date three years previous, that he lived at a certain address, that he had gone the week before to a little town in the interior, but that he was expected back within three days.

"Well, he turned up on the day the police said he would be back, and we had dinner with him."

Town Moves Six Miles.

The city of Brownsville, which has stood on the records here six miles distant from its real location for forty-five years, now has the same legal and actual location.

Judge William Galloway to-day granted a decree to reform the plat of the city and to correct errors which, though slight, made a tremendous difference in the legal location of the town.

The original town of Brownsville was laid out in the late 50's by Capt. James Blakely, who is yet living in Brownsville at the age of 90 years, being the oldest man in Linn county. Some mistakes were made by the surveyor who platted the site, and when the plat was recorded in the court house here in 1864 the clerk placed the letter "E" instead of the letter "W" in the starting point of the description, thus tying the plat to the northeast instead of the northwest corner of the township, and getting the town located six miles distant from its real site, or just north of the town of Crawfordsville.

Incandescent electric lamps consist of a very thin, wire-like coil or filament inclosed in an air-tight glass bulb. The filament is made from hair, silk, wood fibre, cotton or other material, and is pure carbon. Its other original elements having been removed by baking at great heat. The filament is placed in the glass bulb and the air exhausted by means of a pump, and by heating both to extreme heat. When all air is exhausted, the bulb is sealed. The brass screw is attached and the projecting wires connected to the filament imbedded in plaster of paris.

WANTED TO VOMIT

A Condition Involving Both Liver and Stomach That Was Quickly Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"The doctors told me my sickness was caused by complications of the stomach and liver," writes Mrs. E. P. Fourraine, well known in Williamsport. "The least little error in eating would cause nausea, and after a time actual vomiting was easily excited. I grew very thin, pale, with dark lines under the eyes; my strength so failed that even light housework quite exhausted me. Of course, with a large family, I could not afford a doctor all the time, and when in deepest despair I tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills. From the very first they acted wonderfully, and I experienced a desire for food, and ate my meals with a relish. After a while my system became quite regular, and that horrid sick feeling only came now and again. This made me persevere, and it was a good thing I did so, because the continuation of Dr. Hamilton's Pills was the means of giving me my health again, and I am now the happiest woman I know."

Every person with stomach trouble can be cured with Dr. Hamilton's Pills—refuse any substitute. At all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

WAITING FOR A WIFE.

One Man Who Thought Twenty Years Was Just a Starter.

"There's romance for you," said little Binks, putting aside his morning paper. "This paper has a story of a college professor who met a beautiful girl twenty years ago, fell in love with her at first sight and then lost sight of her altogether. Now, after waiting for twenty years, he is rewarded by leading her to the altar as his bride. Just think of it, waiting twenty years for a wife!"

"What of it?" asked the genial philosopher. "There's nothing extraordinary about that. I've waited thirty-five years for mine."

"You? Waited thirty-five years? Why, I thought you'd been married that long!" said little Binks.

"I have," said the genial philosopher. "That's how I know how long I've waited. I've waited for her to get her gloves on about three years. I've waited for her to change her hat about four years. I've waited while she said just one last word to the cook for at least five years. I've waited upstairs, I've waited downstairs, I've waited at church, I've waited at the theatre, and I have waited in cabs, omnibuses, taxies, motorcars and the Lord knows what else besides. Fact is, Binksy, I've waited so long, so often and so regularly that between you and me that little college professor of yours, with only one wait of twenty years, strikes me as a miserable piker."—Harper's Weekly.

INDIAN DANCING SEASON.

Present From One Tribe to Another for a Successful Entertainment.

In the midst of an annual payment of leased land money, the Indians of southwestern Oklahoma are now engaged in one of the greatest celebrations and dance meets ever given.

Three dances and picnics are in progress this week—one at the home of Eachiti, one of the principal chiefs of the Comanches; one at Ploody's, the Mexican who was taken prisoner by the Indians when a young man, and is this year giving his eighth annual picnic near Fletcher, and a third at Anadarko, near the agency, in which Kiowas, Apaches, Wichitas, Caddos and Cheyennes are engaging.

Yesterday the Cheyennes were the guests of the Kiowas and put on a dance for them of the most fantastic character as a mark of appreciation of their hosts, and, the dance given, Kiowas presented their visitors with sixteen head of cattle, fourteen ponies, $300 worth of blankets and $400 in cash.

Two thousand Indians engaged in the Indian dance that was held in Lawton the night of August 6. Six tribes will participate—Comanches, Apaches, Kiowas, Cheyennes, Wichitas and Caddos. Lawton correspondence Kansas City Star.

EASTER BONNET PARTY.

Plenty of Fun Can Be Had at an Affair Like This.

Easter novelties are so many and varied that no hostess need be at a loss for decorations for her Easter table, or for any entertainment near the festal time.

An Easter bonnet party, as suggested in The Housekeeper, is a novelty that will amuse a club of ladies. Send out invitations, on cards decorated with the well-known "Sunbonnet Babies" asking all to come prepared to trim their Easter hats. Tissue paper, cardboard, ribbons, needles, thread and paste can be supplied, and all can set to work. At one party of this sort the results were so varied that it was difficult to award the prize. One fetching sunbonnet could be converted into a basket to hold baby ribbon; another crepe paper creation was decked with a paper plume of remarkable bluffiness, while a litle black paper turban with one rakish rose at the side looked like the latest thing from Paris. The prize was a little cardboard box in shape of a hat-box holding a bunch of exquisite French flowers toward the coming summer millinery. Then followed luncheon. A hat filled with flowers was the centrepiece and sunbonnet babies did duty as place cards. Folded inside each napkin was also a paper cap which the guests wore during the meal.

A literary addition could have hats cut from paper with quotations from the poets where headgear is mentioned in some manner, to guests to give the names of the poets from whose works the quotations were taken.

Cynthia Grey's Correspondents

Dear Miss Grey,—I know a woman who is so taken up with her home life and the training of her child that she seems unaware of the fact that her husband is paying devoted attention to another woman. Do you not think that in justice we should tell this poor wife of her husband's unfaithfulness?

Onlooker.

A.—What possible good would you accomplish by telling her? If her husband is unfaithful, telling his wife will not purify him. There is a chance that this woman will live her life in total ignorance of these facts, and thus be happy. "In justice," do not break her heart.

Dear Miss Grey,—Please give me a recipe for soft gingerbread.

Dora D.

A.—Cream a half cup of butter, a half cup sugar, and the same of Orleans molasses. Beat lightly, add a beaten egg, a half teaspoon ground mace, and one tablespoon ginger. Then add a half cup sweet milk and two cups flour in which has been sifted one teaspoon baking powder, a half teaspoon soda and a dash of salt. Pour into pans, sprinkle ground nuts over top, and bake.

Dear Miss Grey,—How can I cure sores on my head?

Constant Reader.

A.—Wash hair and scalp with resinol soap every ten days. Apply a little zinc ointment to the sores morning and night. Be careful in combing not to dig the crusts off the sores. Do not scratch the scalp. Keep the bowels regular. Eat simple food, chewing it well.

Dear Miss Grey,—(1) Will massage lessen the thickness of the nose?

(2) What will whiten my face? It is yellow and full of pimples.

(3) What can a man do when a girl insists that he go with her, and he is ashamed to refuse, although he does not care for her?

Curious.

A.—(1) No.

(2) Regulate the bowels. Simplify the diet. Eat some raw vegetables and fruit daily. Drink water freely. Chew well. Bathe the face morning and night in hot castile soap suds and rinse in cold, clear water. Don't pinch or pick the pimples.

(3) Be courteous, but refuse so firmly that she cannot fail to understand.

Dear Miss Grey,—Is there any way to keep linens from turning yellow when packed away?

Newly-wed.

A.—Wrap each piece in blue tissue paper.

Dear Miss Grey,—How can I prepare and serve grape fruit? Also, how can I dye a white lace hat black?

Reader.

A.—(1) Wash the grape fruit, dry and cut in halves crosswise. With a small, sharp knife cut the pulp loose from the tough portion. Complete cutting with scissors and remove the tough part. Put half cup powdered sugar on each half, let stand 30 minutes in a cold place, garnish with a candied cherry and serve. A more economical way by which three persons may be served with one fruit: Pare and cut the fruit in small pieces, sugar, and serve in three sherbet glasses.

(2) Rip lace off the hat and dye with the best black you can find. If the lace is worth it, send to a dry cleaner, as amateur efforts are so seldom successful.

Dear Miss Grey,—(1) What is generally served at a 6 o'clock dinner? (2) Should announcement cards be answered? If so, how.

Alice.

A.—(1) It is nice to begin with a fruit relish. Then soup and wafers compose the next course. Meat and two vegetables, bread and butter, celery in season and pickles the third. Then a salad. Then dessert and coffee. If you want a less elaborate dinner leave out the relish and soup.

(2) Yes, by a note of congratulation.

Dear Miss Grey,—(1) Is it necessary to serve refreshments at a wedding where only the immediate relatives are present? If so, what? (2) What material should the bride's dress be? (3) Should I wear my engagement ring at the ceremony? (4) I do not wish to announce my approaching wedding until necessary. How soon must I tell my bridesmaids? (5) What will restore the natural color to hair which has been bleached by peroxide?

Perplexed.

A.—(1) Serve light refreshments, such as sandwiches and coffee, cake and ice cream or other dessert.

(2) Make your dress of sheer white material, very dainty. If you can embroider, put some of your own work on it.

(3) Wear your engagement ring, but no other jewelry unless your intended presents you with some as a wedding gift. Carry flowers.

(4) Tell your bridesmaid long enough in advance that she may have her dress ready, and have no other engagement.

(5) Nothing. You will have to wait for it to grow out.

Dear Miss Grey,—(1) Is it proper for a young man to call on a girl when she is ill? (2) What are the birthstones for June and December, the flowers and the meanings?

A.—(1) Yes, if her mother is present.

(2) June, pearl, rose, purity. December, turquoise, holly, happiness.

Dear Miss Grey,—How can I restore the color on an old black chip hat?

Interested Reader.

A.—Brush well, then use liquid shoe polish on it.

Dear Miss Grey,—Will you please give me a recipe for fruit punch?

Topsy.

A.—To one quart cold water use two cups sugar, one-half lemon juice, one cup orange juice, one cup pineapple juice. If the water and sugar are boiled to form a syrup and allowed to cool before adding fruit juices, it is much nicer. If you have canned cherry or strawberry juices, they add to the flavor. When you make the quantity desired, pour it over ice, and add a few slices of banana, orange and lemon, and a few candied cherries. It is then ready to serve.

Dear Miss Grey: What can I do to reduce a swollen finger joint?

Dorothy R.

A.—Prepare two pans, one with as hot water as can be borne, the other with ice water. Hold the hand in hot water three minutes and then in ice water one minute. Repeat several times. Rub joint gently, and bend the finger to loosen the joint. Keep bandaged at night. If the swelling continues consult a physician.

Dear Miss Grey: A young man has been spending Sunday evenings with me for six months. He has never taken me to any place of amusement. What do you think of it? He is 30 and I am 23.

Puzzled Girl.

A.—He is selfish and inconsiderate.

Dear Miss Grey: What can I do for a sore soft corn?

Anxious.

A.—After warm foot bath, soften edges of the corn with alcohol and trim with sharp sterilized corn razor. Moisten several times during the trimming with the alcohol. Dry and cover with two or three drops of flexible collodion. Put a roll of dentist's cotton between the toes to keep them separated and thus relieve the corn of contact with opposite toe. Use talcum in stocking and shoe.

Dear Miss Grey: If a woman give a party for her son should the party calls be paid by the couples, or by the individuals? Or is it necessary to make a party call?

Worried.

A.—Party calls should always be made within a couple of weeks. It is not necessary for the couples to go together, but it is alright if you wish to do so.

Dear Miss Grey: Can you give me the recipe for "Washington" pie? How should salted nuts be served?

Appreciative.

A.—(1) Take one egg, one cup sugar, on tablespoon butter and beat together until light. Sift into this two cups of flour, one teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon and one-half teaspoon baking powder, and one cup milk, and beat until smooth. Line the pie plate with pastry, pour the mixture into it and bake a half hour. Cover with frosting when cool and serve.

(2) Serve on tiny nut dishes with salad course.

Dear Miss Grey: A young man has taken me out a couple of times and I have enjoyed his company. But he disappointed me since by breaking an engagement. Would you write him a letter?

Anxious.

A.—No. Such broken engagements usually mean that the man has little regard for his word. You are better off without his friendship.

NASAL CATARRH

An Old Physician Says to Look for Dizziness, Frontal Headache, Stuffiness and Nose Colds.

TELLS HOW TO CURE.

Catarrh in almost every instance starts with a common cold in the head, which is added to with another cold, and because of some extra exposure or weakness of the system, it becomes chronic.

A full case of disgusting nasal and throat catarrh then develops. Unless a radical cure is effected then the disease passes rapidly to the throat, bronchial tubes and finally to the lungs.

No man or woman can ever get new lungs any more than new fingers or a new nose; but every one suffering from Catarrh can get a sure cure by inhaling Catarrhozone and this is proved after you read further.

QUICK, LASTING CURE

"After ten long years of suffering with Catarrh in the throat and nose I write to tell you that I am now completely cured with Catarrhozone. What a relief it was to get the buzzing stopped in my ears, to have my nose free and easy to breathe through—what a blessing it was to get cured of droppings, catarrhal dyspepsia and bad breath. All this is the result of Catarrhozone, which I recommend everyone to use for any trouble in the throat, nose, bronchial tubes and lungs."

John McCullough,
Moosebrook, N. S.

Let Catarrhozone cure you, get the large dollar outfit which lasts two months and contains an indestructible hard rubber inhaler. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c each. Beware of imitations of Catarrhozone, which all reliable dealers sell, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

BAD KICK FROM A HORSE

Mr. I. S. Kelly, of Markerville, Alta., says: "We have proved Zam-Buk of great value on the farm. I was kicked by a horse and sustained a nasty wound, which finally turned to an open sore. This caused me considerable pain, but as soon as Zam-Buk was applied I got relief. In a short time Zam-Buk completely healed the wound.

"My father sustained a bad burn on his leg, which for a long time would not heal. Zam-Buk healed it, and brought on a covering of new, healthy skin all over the wound in a few days."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for eczema, ulcers, bad leg, piles, abscesses, cold sores, cuts, scratches, burns, children's rashes, and all skin diseases. Obtainable, druggists and stores, everywhere, 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

RAISES MILLIONS WITH A BIG CLOCK.

CHAS. S. WARD.

Chas. S. Ward, official money-raiser for the Y. M. C. A. in America, strikes 12 every time. He never runs slow, but he has been a little fast occasionally, and so he come out two or three minutes past 12 when his day's over.

Our storybooks told us we would never succeed if we watched the clock; Ward's success has come from making other people watch it.

When a local Y. M. C. A. wants a new building it sends for Ward to conduct a "short-term building campaign." He puts up a big clock, measuring 200 feet in diameter, in a public place.

There are no Roman numbers on this clock. Plain Arabic "figgers" introduced by plainer Yankee dollar signs mark the points of the dial, to tell how goes the day with the busy Y. M. C. A. solicitors. When the goal is $500,000, the big hand moves three minutes every time $25,000 is added.

The little hand always points to 12, where the goal is marked. Ward has made the hand sweep around the face in 54 cities. Each time the big hand has ended by lying over the little one, except when its impetus carries it past the goal. In Birmingham, Ala., he needed only $200,000 to strike 12, but he just couldn't help raise an extra trifle of $10,000. He has raised a total of $8,500,000. He wants to make that $10,000,000 by June 1, when he will have completed five years of service as Y. M. C. A. money-raiser.

Of course, time is money with Ward, so he's hard to get. Already he has booking for almost all of 1910.

RHEUMATISM WEATHER THIS

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Always Cure Rheumatism.

What They Did for W. H. Craine, and Why They Always Cure Rheumatism—They Remove the Cause.

Toronto, Ont., March 21.—(Special.)—In these days of sudden changes of temperature known to so many suffering people as Rheumatism weather, the experience of W. H. Craine, of 103 Gladstone avenue, this city, is of widespread interest. Mr. Craine suffered from Rheumatism. He is cured and he knows the cure. It was Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Yes, I know Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my Rheumatism," Mr. Craine states. "For after I started taking them I used no other medicine. I never ceased recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to my friends."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Rheumatism by putting the Kidneys in condition to strain the uric acid out of the blood. It is uric acid in the blood that causes Rheumatism. Cold or damp causes it to crystallize at the muscles and joints, and then comes those tortures every rheumatic knows only too well. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Rheumatism by curing the Kidneys. The cured Kidneys remove the cause of the Rheumatism.

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

There is no optic in the world that has played so important part in history as the "eye" of the Speaker of the British House of Commons. Its powers and rights are based, like the English constitution, not on written law, but on long established custom and tradition. Very often several members arise in their places at one and the same time, endeavoring to arrest the wandering optic of the Speaker, and it is then free to that august functionary to make his selection and to indicate the member who has his permission to speak. This he does, not only by means of a look, but also by an inclination of the head and by calling upon the member who has his permission to speak—a practise which has been in vogue since the tenure of office of Sir John Trevor, who squinted most abominably and whose obliquity of vision led to all sorts of embarrassing mistakes.

While the Speaker generally concedes priority to newcomers who are about to address the House for the first time, he is so impartial in the performance of this particular duty that within the memory of the present generation, at any rate, no speaker of the House of Commons has ever been taxed with unfairness in this respect. Of course, this extremely antiquated method is attended by some disadvantages, and it often happens that members are prevented from addressing the House for weeks together and debarred from taking any part in the debate owing to their failure to catch the Speaker's eye. Failing eyesight, under the circumstances, is an almost insuperable bar to the retention of the Speakership, and it was solely on this ground that Speaker Brand, one of the most remarkable occupants of the office during the reign of Queen Victoria, was compelled to resign his office, during the closing term of which he was obliged to wear gold rimmed spectacles, which had a very disconcerting effect, indeed, it would have been preferable from a legislative point of view if he had worn a monocle, since in that care there would never have been any doubt as to the direction of "the Speaker's eye." Nor would a monocle have seemed so out of keeping with the Speaker's full bottomed wig and judicial robes as one might be disposed to imagine.

The Speaker takes no part in the debates, and has no vote, except in one solitary circumstance, which very rarely occurs, namely, when the numbers are equal. Then he has the casting vote, and it is due to a casting vote of this kind that the Act of Settlement was passed a little over two hundred years ago, by virtue of which King Edward occupies the throne of the British Empire. In all the history of Parliament, extending over many centuries, there have only been fifteen instances where the Speaker has thus been called upon to exercise his prerogative.

The office of Speaker carries with it a magnificent official residence in the northern portion of the Palace of Westminster, the bright and lofty rooms being lighted with great windows commanding views of the Thames. His residence is most luxuriously furnished, with a full equipment of plate, servants, carriages, horses, etc. Moreover, it is lighted and heated free of any expense to his purse, and he receives a salary of $30,000 a year, allowances amounting to almost as much more, all sorts of odd perquisites, some of them of very ancient origin, besides a retiring pension of $20,000 a year for the remainder of his life. Moreover, it is the prerogative of each Speaker of the House of Commons to be offered a Peerage and a seat in the House of Lords on his retirement. While the emoluments are liberal, they may be described as well earned, for the post of Speaker calls for the exercise of the most superhuman patience. No matter what twaddler is on his legs, the Speaker must give his whole and undivided attention, often for long hours in succession. He cannot slip out to the smoking room or to the lobby, but must remain in the chair, bored literally to death.—New York Tribune.

ITCHING SKIN EASILY SOOTHED

By D. D. D. Prescription.

That awful, agonizing itch, torturing day and night!—then suddenly the skin calmed, soothed and refreshed.

That is what any eczema sufferer can accomplish in two minutes by the use of the right treatment! Just oil of wintergreen, mixed with thymol, glycerine and other healing ingredients in liquid form. While a smeary salve would only close up the pores of the skin, driving the disease germs in still deeper, the medicine in liquid form penetrates the epidermis, kills and washes out the eczema germs and stops the itching instantly.

Don't hesitate to try this D. D. D. Prescription. It is practically certain to cure, and absolutely certain to give immediate relief from that awful itch.

Among the Jews

In an address before the "Alpha Theta" Fraternity, a Jewish organization in Bayonne, in that city, Rabbi Bernard Drachman, of Manhattan, urged the young men and women to organize egg brigades, visit the theatres where Hebrew comedians hold forth and pelt them off the stage. "I want to protest," he said, "against the bold comic newspapers which ridicule the Jews, and against the stage, where the character of the Jewish people is misrepresented.'

In honor of the sixty-fifth anniversary of Madame Nordau's birthday, a Micro-Biological Institute is to be founded in Haifa. Subscriptions to this end are being gathered all over Europe. The purpose of the institution is the fighting of malaria by modern methods in order to make large tracts of land better habitable, and the defence of the country against the epidemic diseases which priodically come into Palestine from India and from Arabia in pilgrim caravans.

During the Paris flood, President Adolf Kraus, of the I. O. B. B., sent the following cablegram to Dr. Berthold Timendorf in Berlin, President of the B'nai B'rith, in Germany: "If needed, pay on behalf of executive committee Independent Order of B'nai B'rith 5,000 francs to relief fund Paris sufferers."

After the British elections had ended it was found that fifteen Jews had come out of the fray victorious, eight of whom are Liberals, and seven Unionists. Previously there were sixteen Jews, so they lose one by the election.

A new land law is about to be submitted to the Turkish Chamber. The principal provision of the new measure will be a clause permitting the ownership of land by corporations. It will be seen how important this provision will be for Jewish societies working in Palestine. The only condition is that the societies must be registered as Turkish companies.

The Society of Jewish Women for Culture Work in Palestine, which was founded in August, 1907, and has its headquarters in Berlin, has already about 1,000 members, and is represented in most States of Europe and in America. The income in 1909 from subscriptions and donations was £400.

It is said that Lord Rothschild contributed no less than $250,000 to the war chest of the Unionist party during the recent election, and that he has intimated his readiness to contribute an equally large sum again in case another general election comes soon.

The death in one week of the two distinguished Hebrew authors, Dr. Solomon Rubin, in Lemberg, and Wolf Schurr, in Chicago, is a remarkable coincidence in more than one way. Both writers were on intimate terms while in Europe, both reached the same high age, both were paralyzed the last few years and both closed their eyes in the same week.

The death of M. Lillenblum, at Odessa, removes one of the leaders of the two chief movements that have influenced modern Russian Jews. As a Hebrew writer he was one of the heads of the Haskala, or Rationalist movement, which attempted to deal in Hebrew with Jewish problems from an ultra-modern standpoint.

ABOUT PAVING.

Asphalt and Granolithic Are Considered the Most Sanitary Kinds.

Former Congressman McNary, of South Boston, in pleading for the surfacing of the narrow streets in congested districts with granolithic or asphalt, is striking a higher keynote in public health probably than he himself realized. With the possibility that now exists of laying with economy the smooth pavements instead of the cobblestones or Belgian blocks or bricks, the streets lose much of their unhealthfulness. Whether there are parks and rest grounds, it is the middle of the street that in certain portions of the city must be the playground of the children. And children play very close to the ground. The pavement that is smooth in its surface, that affords no interstices in which dirt may lodge, that may be swept easily and easily flushed, is the pavement for a tenement house district. It lightens the problems of the street sweeper, it removes a minor cause of disease, it makes for a cleaner, more healthful city.

Mr. McNary, when he pleads for smooth-surfaced streets, voices a principle of wide application to this city, where in streets of the north and west end there is abundant opportunity for improvement of this kind. Taking all of the conditions, with the fact that the residents of such streets are ignorant and negligent, and in their daily practices take the street to be a kind of waste basket, garbage pail and dump combined, and that the children have this street for their playground, the apropriateness and good sense of the plea of Mr. McNary is most evident.—Boston Transcript.

NEW STYLES FOR MY LADY OF THE AEROPLANE.

"Oh, you sky pilot, how's my coiffure?"

Any time you load Mme. Fashion it is necessary to have the clutch in the fourth speed gear, for the madame is a traveller who counts not distance by miles.

The latest effort of the dame, assisted by the Parisian designers, is the aeroplane coiffure and the monoplane sash.

The coiffure is built along the lines of the newest thing in biplanes. The hair extends right and left of the head like porches of a city bungalow, instead of projecting backward in la the Psyche knot.

The new thing requires an abundance of hair, although the woman not so blessed will not be worried by a little thing like that when the hair stores are so numerous. The style is becoming and makes the slender woman decidedly chic.

The real thing in sashes is a wide, voluminous scarf of brilliant fabric—usually satin. In some cases it is not attractive, for it narrows the gown at the knees and balloons it above until the wearer resembles a pyramid standing upon its apex. They do say, however, that in modified form, the new sash is just as graceful as——

The sash is generally of a color that contrasts sharply with the gown. Kingfisher blue will be worn with a gray frock, peacock blue over green, black on white and maybe some fair one will try out yellow on green.

OUR POULTRY COLUMN

(By J. R. COTE)

OPERATING AN INCUBATOR

The subject last week was the setting up of the incubator, and now in this article I propose dealing with the running of it. Of course, to obtain the best of results, good eggs are essential and of one breed. Eggs from pure bred stock may cost a few more cents, but it more than pays in the end, as the profits are not to be compared.

To proceed; take a lead pencil and put a (x) on every egg, place the eggs in the tray, putting the mark on top and well in the middle. See that the ventilator is open. For the first two days there will be nothing to do but to see that the temperature is right and the trimming and filling the lamp morning and night. Better make a practice of filling the lamp with oil every night and trim the wick both morning and night. On the third day open up the incubator door, say at eight in the morning; take out the tray or trays of eggs and let them cool. Shut the door again. I take it the temperature of the room is comparatively warm. Now place your hand after a while, on the eggs, and when you find them becoming a little cold, turn them by hand, one by one, putting the cross (x) under and white side on top. By following this method it will ensure every egg being turned. Some people commence turning the eggs as soon as taken from the machine, but the reason why I advise letting them cool first is that I find that the eggs that come out of a temperature of 102 degrees need but a very little shake to mix the white with the yolk, and this, after a few days, means a rotten egg. If you note a hen you will see it is when she returns to the nest that she commences turning the eggs around. We might as well do the same. The cooling allows the white and yolk to become firm, and by turning gently by hand, which, to my way of thinking, is "the only way," to ensure strong, vigorous chicks. At night, again, about 8 o'clock turn the eggs again after being cooled, this time bringing the (x) on top, thereby ensuring a complete turning without any doubts, and a safe one too. Continue this method every day, and on the fifth day, at night, test the eggs. With every machine a test is, or should be, supplied. If the egg is perfectly clear, that means infertile; if fertile, you will notice some veins. An egg with a somewhat decided black spot within a darkish sort of misty circle means more probably a rotten egg. It might be a poorly fertilized egg or one that has become stale after being laid in one position before hatching. Anyway, they will not hatch, so take them away. A decidedly rotten egg it will be no trouble to distinguish by the very dark appearance.

The most important point about the embryo chick is to breathe good, pure air. If you leave an egg that gives off a bad odor, you are simply killing the good ones, or at least weakening them somewhat by breathing the poisonous air. Having tested them, place the eggs back on the tray with the cross showing on top. From now on to the fifteenth day the eggs should be turned both morning and night; in fact until the chicks commence to pip the shell. If you have a large 200 machine with two trays you will get better success if you change the position of the trays every time you take them out. The eggs that pass the night in the front of the machine should be put back by turning the tray end for end, and the tray that remains the night nearest the lamp should be changed to the other end of the machine and the other one brought into its place.

After the seventh day, every night, after the eggs are cooled, take one here and there and test them to see the air cell. If the air cell seems too large at any time during the hatch the ventilator must be closed a little; if too small, open it up a little.

On the tenth day it would be well to go over the eggs again, testing each one. Then do ditto on the fifteenth day. If you have any doubt as to any being rotten, test them with your nose; but failing to detect any bad odor, let them remain. On the 18th, 17th and 18th days cool and turn the eggs as usual, testing the air cell at night and continue until you hear the chicks chirp or commence to pip the shell. When the chicks commence to hatch take out the thermometer. By this time you will know just how your temperature is by the position of the regulator.

If you have run your machine well you will not need any moisture; but if you think it is needed I would advise you to take a bucket of warm water and soak a cloth or flannel in the water; place on the eggs and let remain some five minutes; that should be sufficient to do the trick. Leave the chicks in the incubator for a couple of days or so with the temperature at about the same pitch as before; this will give about 90 degrees in the nursery. On the fourth day they will be transferred to the brooder.

Next week we take up the next stage—the brooding and feedings of the chicks.
