Small Debts Court

At the regular weekly session of the Small Depts Court held on Thur day afternoon, Magistrate Johnson disposed of the following cases:

That of Geo. Smith vs. Geo. Hogan—claim $30.50. Judgment was given to defendant with costs.

In the case of the Creston Mercantile Co. vs. J. A. Mitchell and wife, being a claim of some $56 00, defendant admitted claim, all but three sacks of flour, which he denied over having received. In this case the magistrate reserved his decision tell 2 p.m. on Saturday.

In the case of Jas. Wilds vs Antiece, an Indian, the claim being the price of three pigs sold, valued at $15. This case was set for 5 o'clock on Saturday.

The cases of J. A Mitchell vs. McGinnis and Wheelan, which were continued from last week, were resumed. Mr. McDonald, a Cranbrook lawyer, appeared for the defendants, and considerable evidence was taken in both cases. The magistrate reserved his judgment in both cases.

Meeting Appoints Commission

Quite a representative gathering of ratepayers attended the sewerage meeting in the Mercantile Hall on Monday evening. Mr. A. Okell was appointed chairman of the meeting and Mr. P. B. Fowler secretary.

After the chairman had explained the objects of the meeting, the matter was discussed by several of those present. Mr. T. M. Edmondson spoke strongly against the sewerage system being installed under the Sewerage Act. Mr. J. B. Moran spoke in favor of having a sewerage system, and moved that a commission be appointed to go fully into the matter and report to a subsequent meeting. This motion was adopted and the following gentlemen were elected: Messrs Moran, S, Hatfield, E. Payne, Edmondson and F. G. Little.

The meeting was then adjourned for one month.

It was then proposed to hold a meeting to discuss the question of forming the district into a municipality and Mr. Edmondson was appointed chairman of this meeting. After a little discussion and the reading of the Municipal Act by the chairman, this meeting was also adjourned to some future date.

Come and see the ladies' nail-driving contest at the Auditorium on Thursday next.

The first stumping machine in the Creston district arrived at McNellie this week and is being unloaded. It belongs to the Canyon City Lumber Co., and C. O. Rodgers, the manager of this company, informs us that the machine is 80-horse power and he expects to have it started clearing land on Block 812 next week.

Halley's Comet

Put this paragraph away for reference. If the sky is clear tonight find Sirius. It is the brightest twinkling star visible in this latitude. It is in the south and about one-third of the way from the horizon to the zenith. Then find the three stars, which form the Belt of Orion. You can hardly fail to notice them. They are overhead in the early evening; not directly so, but so far above Sirius as Sirius is above the horizon. Orion is easily the most brilliant of all the constellations. Now imagine a line drawn across the sky, beginning at Sirius, passing through the highest of the three stars in the Belt and prolonged about as far from the latter as the latter is from Sirius. The end of the line will be close to Halley's comet. Get this part of the sky well fixed in your mind, and along about the latter part of this month keep a sharp lookout there for the comet. Of course you know where the North Star is. Draw in imagination a line from the highest star in the Belt to the North Star, and you will cross the point where the comet will be when it is nearest the earth and consequently the brightest. It will then be 18,000,000 miles away from the earth. On May 18, if the comet's tail is long enough, it will envelope the earth for a few hours. The comet will then be moving at the rate of 20 miles a second, or slightly faster than the earth. The motions of the two bodies will be in opposite directions, so that the passage of the earth through the tail, if it reaches us, will be at the rate of 40 miles a second. In 1835 the comet passed within 5,000,000 miles of the earth. It will on May 2nd cross the orbit of Venus at a distance of 6,000,000 miles from that body. The tails of comets shorten as they go further from the sun. On February 28th the tail of Halley's comet was estimated to be 14,000,000 miles long. It is likely to be fully as long on May 18, although there is nothing much more unreliable as to size and brilliancy than the tail of a comet.—Ex.

Captain Tatlow Fatally Injured

THROWN FROM TRAP—DIED IN VICTORIA ON SUNDAY

VICTORIA, April 11.—Captain R. G. Tatlow, late Minister of Finance and Agriculture for British Columbia, died at 12:30 today from injuries received when thrown from his trap on Friday last. He had not recovered conciousness since the accident.

Thrown from his trap when his horse shied at a passing auto at the corner of Vancouver and Maclure streets. Capt. R. G. Tatlow, late Minister of Finance and agriculture in the McBride Goverment, sustained injuries on Friday which proved fatal. The accident occurred at 5:30 oclock and until a late hour Saturday Capt. Tatlow had not regained conciousness.

The accident was witnessed by E. J. Murray, who happened to be passing. He ran at once to the rescue of Capt. Tatlow, called the ambulance and had him conveyed to the Jubilee hospital, whither Dr. D. O. M. Jones had already been summoned. Dr. Jones at once made an examination and did all in his power for the injured gentleman.

The cheif injuries appear to have been in the head, the fall being severe and the concussion to the brain great. Dr. Jones would not speak of the injuries pending a later examination.

Capt. Tatlow since his retirement from office has been living quietly in this city, devoting his time to his ranch at Finnerty's Beach, and to riding and driving. The time has been occhpied as a holiday following his labors in the office which he held for such a considerable period and with such succees.

Board of Trade Meeting

There was a most enthusiastic meeting of the Board of Trade on Wednesday evening, in the Board of Trade rooms on Canyon street. There were present at this meeting President C. O. Rodgers, Secretary P. B. Fowler and a good working quorum of members.

After the usual routine business had been run over the matter of holding a Fall Fruit Exhibit was introduced by R. M. Reid, when a resolution was passed instructing the secretary to write to the Farmers' Institute as well as the Fruit Growers' Institute to send two representatives to the next monthly meeting of the Board of Trade to discuss the fruit fair question. President Rodgers and other members expressed strong views on the advisability of holding the fruit fair here this fall.

The Rev. L. Thomas, of North Dakota, arrived in town last Saturday and will occupy the Presbyterian pulpit for a few Sabbaths until a permanent minister is sent here.

Summer Pruning

The following is a lecture delivered by Maurice Middleton, Provincial Fruit Expert for the Kootenay district, before the B.C. Fruit Growers' Association, at Creston, on Wednesday, November 5th, 1909:

"The majority of the pruning has been done in the winter or the spring, after the growth of the tree has developed in the fall. I have been recommending summer pruning. You know that the buds of a tree are formed this year, and from those buds, if they are sufficiently strong, you get fruit spur or branch the following year. Now in the majority of cases, trees in this part have a great tendency towards terminal growth, that is, they grow long and spindly. By cutting this back in the summer time—it is not definitely known yet as to the proper time to do this pruning in the summer time, it all depends on your conditions—the character of your tree, whether it is bearing, whether you are giving it high cultivation, or no cultivation at all, all this has to be taken into consideration; but in many cases you will find that the trees will need this up to eight or nine years in the majority of cases, making a rapid and luxuriant growth. This is the time I endeavor to practise summer pruning; cut back about the middle of August. It is impossible to lay down the length to cut down these branches; use your own judgment in this respect.

"Sometimes they come to blossom or growth, but in the majority of cases there is very little growth takes place after pruning in August. If in this dry summer you had pruned in time after your rainy season stopped in the spring, until your rains begun in the fall, you would have got a growth; but in any case this has a tendency to check the sap and store it up in the lower buds, and that is the object in summer pruning.

"Mr. Watson has done sommer pruning, which has given very good results It saves the sap which would go out to form the terminal shoots and stores it up in the bush, thus thickening your branches, and you have the energy stored up so that the following year they are strong enough to produce a fruit spur or a branch.

"With winter pruning the trees are too weak to produce even a leaf, especially so with the Northern Spy and the Ontario. In the majority of trees in this part of the country there is too much fruitless wood just in the very places that we want our fruit spurs and our fruit, namely, down where the tree is strong and able to support a considerable weight of fruit. The most important thing in a young orchard is to mature fruit spurs down low on the strong limbs where the tree is able to bear a quantity of fruit without straining them. I have recommended in summer pruning cutting back to, say, four or five inches in length. You will find that the lower buds close to your old wood; these are the buds I want. You will find as a general thing that the first three or four buds are very weak. Now if you cut to the fourth bud your fourth bud will be strong enough to produce a fruit spur or branch. In the majority of cases you get a branch from that, which is exactly what we want. Now if you leave four or five inches of growth, say, leave four or five good strong buds; thus invariably you will get three or four good strong fruit spurs—sometimes a terminal bud will throw a branch. By this means you get plenty of fruit spurs in your trees, sufficient spurs so that one apple to a spur will make a good load to a tree; whereas to leave three or four apples means fruit growing too close together, flat sided, uncolored and inferior.

"Some people think that a young tree should not bear fruit. When a tree makes a growth of four or five feet in a year, that tree has sufficient energy to produce a few apples. We want fruit spurs instead of this overgrowth. After the tree has reached eight or nine years, after this summer pruning, very little pruning will be necessary; no terminal pruning at all. All that will be required after that time will be to cut back an ingrowing branch which you do not wish to leave.

"Light is a most important factor in fruit growing. Cut the shoots back to fruit spurs. Open up your tree; let in more light and get your fruit spurs. Many people believe in the vase shaped tree. We find that in the summer time the sun shines nearly vertical on the center of your tree, and the center gets all the sun it is possible to get; whereas the sides of the tree only get the sun for a quarter of the day, and it is found that the majority of your call fruit is found on the outer lower portion of your tree. We want to do away with that; we want all the color we can get on the fruit. In order to get this, the best method to practise is to have the center of your tree and the outside open to allow the light in and thus color the fruit.

"These are the most important considerations in a young section. It is the fruit we are after, not firewood, as a great many of the trees have here. The later the tree is in bearing fruit, and the later the pruning should be. Different trees should be pruned at different times; pruning too early means a subsequent pruning. I do not think that the Northern Spy should be pruned until early in September. There is no hard and fast rule; judgment is the only criterion in every case. All varieties should be in bearing on the fourth year, that is, on the three-year old wood, with summer pruning we get the fruit. A healthy tree of this age should be producing fruit instead of long, useless woods. The useless wood is energy, which should have been converted into fruit.

"Fall pruning is the next best thing to summer pruning. Trees will come through the winter far better if pruned in the fall than if you leave them with this excessive growth during the winter. The less evaporating surface you have on your tree in the winter and the less liable is that tree to freeze back during the winter."

CHURCHES NOT FOR POOR.

Sensational Address by Dr. Austin at Rochester.

Former Canadian Minister Says Jesus Was a Heretic.

Condemns Churches Which Are Only for Rich.

The most radical address directed against orthodox religion, heard before the Labor Lyceum, in Rochester, N. Y., in a long time, and which the speaker himself, Dr. E. F. Austin, of the Plymouth Spiritual Church, admitted contained statements which might shock his hearers, was delivered by Dr. Austin in the Common Council Chamber of the City Hall before a large audience. Dr. Austin was at one time a member of the Methodist Church in Canada and principal of St. Thomas College.

In the course of his remarks, the speaker condemned supernatural religion, religion based on authority, a virgin born Savior, blood atonement, miraculous, instantaneous conversion, and he described Jesus as a heretic, who was crucified by the church of His own time.

Among other remarks in his sensational address, Dr. Austin said:

"That there is a religion for capitalists and for the 'Four Hundred' no one doubts. But is there a religion for the plain workingman? There are people," said Dr. Austin, "who ask, Is any religion, any good, anytime, anywhere to anybody?"

"Vast numbers of workingmen do not subscribe to the religion of the churches. Organized labor is not known as a religious organization. The average church, the average labor organization, like the Jews and the Samaritans, have no dealings with each other. Among labor men, the view prevails that rich men run the churches, and poor men are not treated as equals and brothers; that the Churches are ecclesiastical clubs; that the church service is a Sunday dress parade, which poor men cannot afford; that the church is silent on some of the great social and economic evils and injustices of to-day; that the church is the friend of the classes and not the masses; that it is too conservative; and stands as a bar to progress and reform."

"In the churches," continued Dr. Austin, "the pew system is ordinarily carried out, and the rich man has a decided advantage over his poorer neighbor, and gets the seats of honor, while the poor man sits under the gallery or among the 'gods,' all of which is looked upon by the multitudes as a distinct violation of the law of equality, and is a sale of the gospel by the square inch. Men look upon religion as taught by the churches as a matter of tradition—not of reason or scientific demonstration."

"I readily grant," continued the speaker, "that it will be impossible to get labor men, as a body, enrolled under the banner of orthodox religion. They will not subscribe to supernational religion, a religion of authority, based on miracles, virgin born saviors, blood atonement and miraculous, instantaneous conversion."

Continuing, Dr. Austin, declared that various kinds of religions, like races of men, have sprung up like vegetables. "To be religious after the church fashion," he said, "men have had to stultify reason, deny teachings of science, falsify history, and do violence to the noblest feelings of the human heart; and in addition, bow to the authority of priest and preacher, of church and creed, and to worship a God of moral character, much lower than that of the average man of to-day."

"There is a religion of nature," explained Dr. Austin, "under which every man is his own priest. I maintain that the fundamental ideas of natural religion are rational, scientific, and in accord with history, and with human experience, and as capable of demonstration as any other teachings of life. Under natural religion, churches and the priesthood are shorn of authority, and under natural religion man makes his own creed, and fashions his own morality."

Referring to Jesus, the speaker said: "We do not know that the life story of Jesus was true. No one can prove it true or false. From the standpoint of natural religion it does not make any difference whether it is true or not.

"Jesus was not much of a churchman. He was not considered orthodox, but a heretic. His bitterest foes were the priests and churchmen of His own time, and it was, in fact, the church that caused his crucifixion. Jesus broke the church traditions. He was a persistent Sabbath breaker."

Dr. Austin compared the Savior with Andrew Jackson Davis, an uneducated youth who died at Watertown, Mass., last week. Davis wrote the "Principles of Nature," which Dr. Austin went so far as to declare was the greatest single volume the world possesses to-day.

In substitution for the Ten Commandments of Moses, which are accepted by the Christian religions of the world, Dr. Austin recommended to his hearers a number of new commandments for the right guidance of lives of men. These commandments the speaker called "The Commandments of Natural Religion." In stating what these commandments were, the speaker said:

"Do not judge and condemn your brother or try to force and make him think as you do. Live up to the knowledge of to-day. Throw a little sunshine over your neighbor's cloudy pathway. Consider that all labor is worship."

Dr. Austin asked his audience not to consider his address too shocking, because he had been at a Methodist service in Glenns Falls not long ago, and he heard the minister there in the course of his sermon say: "If we have no other God than a tyrant, a beast, a Caliban, let us unite and Kill Him."

A JOLT TO ROMANCE.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

"How about the young doctor? Has he proposed?"

"Not yet. Papa ruined everything last night."

"How was that?"

"Just as the doctor was pleading for a peep at my eyes, papa came in and asked him to take a look at my throat."

TAKING SNOW PICTURES.

A Time When the Amateur Photographers Come Out in Numbers.

"Snow may be bad for some lines of business," said a dealer in photographic supplies, "but it's good for ours.

"Winter generally speaking is our dull season. The amateur photographer doesn't really begin to get busy until the trees begin to bud in the spring; the spring lurs him as it does everybody else and on all his outdoor trips he takes his camera along, as to be sure he does when he goes on his summer vacation. He takes many pictures then; summer and the early fall mark the height and culmination annually of business in the photographic line. In later fall and winter the amateur goes out less and naturally takes fewer pictures.

"Every year there are more and more people travelling in winter, more and more people going south and everywhere in the country and out of it and they all take cameras and so there is now an increasing photographic business in winter; but stated as a general Pdshel. y.eakw 31..''l po proposition amateurs take fewer pictures in winter than in summer. But let a good snowfall come, to make the country white and beautiful, and the amateur photographers get out in great numbers with their cameras to take snow pictures.

"Go where you will then in avenues and drives where the snow is left lying and sleighs are driven; where people are sliding down hill ,or where beautiful landscapes are to be found and you meet the amateur photographer carrying along with him his camera and taking snow pictures; and so while winter is with us commonly a duller season than summer yet a good heavy snowfall may bring at this season quite a lively revival."

Didn't Recognize Her.

A noted divine in Washington was constantly urging his flock to be more sociable and to give a hearty welcome to "the stranger within the gates," not forgetting to maintain a proper interest in the members of their own households. After one of his most effective sermons on his pet theme he went to the door as usual and began to shake hands industriously with the people passing out after the service.

He was much interested in a well-dressed and intelligent-looking young girl, apparently a stranger, and greeted her heartily.

"I hope we may see you often here," he said. "We always have a warm welcome for new faces."

"Thank you, sir," she replied, modestly.

"Do you live hereabout?" he went on.

The girl looked at him with a puzzled smile. "Yes, sir, I do."

"Will you kindly leave me your address, and my wife and I will call on you some evening," he said.

"You would not have to go far to find me—I am your cook."

Russian Furs Scarcer.

According to the estimates of the Russian Government for the year 1910, the following results are expected in respect to the catch of valuable sea and fur bearing animals: Sea bears, 6,600; beavers, first quality, 40; second quality, 140; blue Arctic fox, 550, and other varieties, 600.

The revenue to the Treasury paid for each beaver, first quality, is 200 rubles; second quality, 100 rubles, blue fox, 18 rubles, white fox, 9 rubles, entirely white, 5 rubles, and sea bears, 10 rubles. The total to be expected by the Treasury next year is about 100,000 rubles. It is unfortunately to be observed that there is a gradual decline in the industry. The Treasury got from the seal fishing of 1905 222,000 rubles, in 1906 144,000 and in 1907 31,000 rubles only.—From Fur News.

When a man is said to be a good judge of human nature it is a sign that he is making money out of it.—Dallas News.

Among the Jews

The Euphrates is now bridged at Izoli, where it flows through a gorge about four hundred feet wide. The post road, which the bridge will free from the trouble of waiting for the ferry, runs from Malatia to the sea.

Wladimir Bourtzeff, the editor of the revolutionist organ Byloe, the man who unmasked the terrorist traitors Azeff, Kaplinsky, Harting and some other so-called terrorists who were really spies for the Russian Government, is expected in New York. Many of the unmasked provocators, including the above named, are Jews, and they alone, according to Bourtzen, are responsible for the collapse of the Russian revolution.

M. Gabriel Lippmann, of the faculty of sciences in Paris, has been appointed a member of the council of administration of the Thiers trust, the object of which is to enable young teachers or students, by means of grants, to devote themselves to reesarches on scientific work.

The Emperor of Austria has caused his gracious acknowledgments to be sent to Dr. Edmond Benedikt, a prominent lawyer in Vienna, Professors Dr. Hans Gross and Dr. Joseph Rosenblatt, for their valuable co-operation in the preparation of the reform of the Austrian criimnal code.

Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York, has appointed two Jews to important offices. As one of the commissioners of taxes and assessments he named Edward Kaufman, formerly a resident of Brooklyn, and at one time the county clerk of Kings County. As the commissioner of licenses the Mayor appointed Herman Robinson, the organizer of the American Federation of Labor, and for fourteen years in charge of its New York office.

By a decision of the Russian Appeal Court no actor or actress can now be compelled to take part in an anti-Semitic play if they refuse.

In a remarkable address delivered recently at the Wesley Church, Melbourne, Australia, the Rev. Dr. Watkin said: "Great Britain entered upon the career of empire when she began to treat the Jew with toleration. Any nation that oppresses the Jews sooner or later smarts for it. They are still God's chosen people."

The Grand Vizier supports the Jerusalem water scheme, but announced emphatically that the Turkish Government is not prepared to sanction the entry into Palestine of Jews without means. The Government would not object to immigrants possessing capital or a knowledge of a trade, but it has set its face against a pauper population who would subsist on "Chalukah."

The Constitutional Grand Lodge, B'nai B'rith, is announced to meet in quinquennial session in Washington, D. C., on Sunday, April 3, 1910, and continue a week.

On the initiative of the Jewish members of the Russian Douma, Nisselowitsch and Friedman, the cadets, are making endeavors to bring forward a motion for permission for Jews to live outside the pale. There are indications that such a motion may receive a majority of votes.

It is quite impossible to get Jews in the United Kingdom to agree in politics. Besides, the process of assimilation seems to spread year by year, as shown by the marriage statistics. There has been a marked decrease of Jewish marriages in the last two years, and a greater number of Jews and Jewesses have contracted mixed marriages.

According to the definition of Dr. Herzl, Zionism strives to create for the persecuted Jews a home in Palestine. Not all Jews in America are agreed as to the wisdom of the Zionist programme.

The vicar of Leeds, Dr. Bickersteth, presiding at a meeting of the Leeds church mission on a recent Monday, said that Christians owed a great debt to the Jews, of whom there were two hundred and fifty thousand in England.

When Dr. Carstairs was appointed health officer to the municipality of Geelong, he studied the sanitary laws of Moses, and he found that the Jews had anticipated all the discoveries of modern science. These include isolation of the infected, destruction of refuse by fire, scrupulous cleanliness and a strict dietary scale.

Dr. A. Wilson, addressing a meeting of the London Society for the Study of Inebriety, said they had an object lesson in the Jews—a non-alcoholized race, who always came out on top, while the alcoholized Christians went under.

According to the Stamboul, an Constantinople journal, Sir William Willcocks, the British adviser to the Turkish Ministry of Public Works, claims to have determined the exact site of the Garden of Eden. He places it at Hairlah, a flourishing oasis some two hundred and fifty kilometres northwest of Bavdad, in the centre of a desolate Mesopotamian plain.

Frankfort Jewry has been sorely stricken—this time by the death of Rabbi Hermann Lehmann, one of its most learned and its most orthodox spiritual leaders.

The Russian section of the emigration department of the Ito is about to publish a collection of letters written by Galveston emigrants to their friends and relations in Russia. These letters record the success of the movement.

Mr. Zangwill has written for the March number of the Fortnightly Reviewe a brief history of the Zionist and territorialist movements up to and including the Zionist Congress at Homburg.

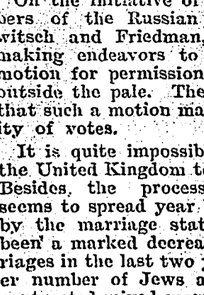
For the Ethnographical Exhibition at St. Petersburg a number of portraits and pictures of Jewish Caucasian types were requisitioned. Without any explanation, however, they were returned.

When the founder of Zionism died in Vienna his eldest boy, H. Herzl, was provided for and placed at St. Paul's, one of the best public schools in England. His career at school has been brilliant, and on leaving it he went to St. John's College, Cambridge University, where he has been awarded an entrance scholarship of four hundred dollars annual value, for modern languages.

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me; I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.



"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

IN PAIN FOR YEARS

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" BRINGS RELIEF

MRS. FRANK EATON

Frankville, Ont., Sept. 27, 1909.

"I suffered for years from headaches and pain in the back, and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit juice tablets, and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. I took several boxes altogether, and now I am entirely well of all my dreadful headaches and backaches".

ON THE MOVING PICTURE STAGE.

Mrs. Frank P. Hulett.

If you go often to moving picture shows, you are familiar with this face. The woman is Mrs. Frank P. Hulett, of New York. She has appeared in some of the most elaborate moving picture plays ever produced.

Until the time her daughter was born Mrs. Hulett was on the stage, more or less, appearing in some big productions. She gave up the stage, however, to care for the baby, but when the moving picture firms began to seek actresses Mrs. Hulett found she could do that work easily, without interfering with home routine.

Recipes

Calves' Brains Chopped.

Cut two cupfuls of chopped brains in small pieces; marinate with French dressing; melt two table spoonfuls of butter; add four tablespoonfuls of chopped green peppers or one dessertspoonful of paprika, one-half cupful of chopped mushrooms, a few drops of onion juice, two tablespoonfuls of flour and one cupful of chicken stock. Cook five minutes; add brains, season with salt, cayenne and Worcestershire sauce.

Lamb Terrapin.

Mix two cupfuls of cold cooked lamb, cut in small pieces; two hard-boiled eggs chopped fine; two tablespoonfuls of olive oil; let stand two minutes; melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and one cupful of lamb stock or milk. Cook five minutes; add lamb, previously sprinkled lightly with salt; add eggs. Serve on graham toast as soon as steaming hot.

Corn Broad.

Beat together one-quarter cup of white sugar and a piece of butter the size of an egg, and stir in two beaten eggs. Add one-half pint of sweet milk, two cups of white flour, one-half cup of yellow cornmeal, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt. Beat hard and bake in a long, narrow bread tin in a moderate oven.

Oyster Loaf.

Cut the top crust from a loaf of bread and scoop and scrape out the inside, leaving the bottom and sides whole. Set the hollowed loaf, with the top crust laid by it, in an open oven and get very dry and warm. Cut four dozen oysters in halves and cook them over the fire in their own liquor. When they begin to curl at the edges add the crumb of the loaf, rubbed very fine, a large tablespoonful of butter rolled in one of flour, and a teacupful of hot milk. Season with salt and pepper, and cook for three minutes after the milk is added. Butter the inside of the dried loaf, fill with the oyster mixture, put on the upper crust and serve.

Sour Milk Biscuit.

Sift a quart of flour with a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of baking soda. Chop into this dry mixture a piece of butter or lard the size of a walnut, add enough sour or buttermilk to make a dough of the consistency of pastry. Do not handle, but roll out quickly and lightly; cut into rounds and bake in a quick oven.

Roast Pork Rechaufee.

To a cup of brown sauce made in the pan after the pork is roasted, add one-fourth a cup of well-reduced tomato puree, a slice of cooked onion, pressed through a sieve, or half a teaspoonful of beef extract, one-fourth a teaspoonful of mustard, half a teaspoonful of salt, half a chilli pepper, chopped exceedingly fine, and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Let boil up once, then add one cup and a half of cold roast pork, cut in cubes. Serve very hot with boiled rice or baked potatoes.

Macaroni and Mushrooms.

Break the contents of a small box of macaroni into pieces and boil until soft. Have ready a cup of stewed mushrooms and a cup of grated cheese. Put macaroni, cheese and mushrooms in layers in a buttered baking dish and bake until brown.

HAM, SOUTHERN STYLE.

Boil ham until tender, using two waters, skin and place in baking pan. Then stick in the fat two dozen whole cloves and sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake an hour. It is delicious when sliced cold.

HAM AND EGGS.

Melt one tablespoonful of butter and moisten it with one and a half cupfuls of stale breadcrumbs. Put a layer of crumbs in a small baking dish, then a layer of minced ham, sliced eggs, and cream sauce alternately. The last layer should be crumbs. Bake on top rack of moderate oven twenty minutes.

BAKED LIVER.

Buy calf's liver in a whole piece and wash and place in baking pan. Make four slits across the top with a sharp knife and place a fat piece of bacon in each. Sprinkle well with fine cracker crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, and add a little water. Bake for two hours, basting often and adding water as it boils away.

MEAT AND POTATO PIE.

Pare and slice ten potatoes and six onions. Put them in a baking pan in layers, with a sprinkling of salt and pepper on each layer. Lay slices of salt or fresh pork over the top, cover with boiling water, and bake until done, turning the meat once in a while and sprinkling a little flour on it, so it will brown nicely, just before it is served.

DEVILED STEAK.

One flank steak, one large onion, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, one teaspoonful mustard, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two cupfuls of hot water. Melt the butter in a frying pan, slice the onion and fry in the butter. Remove the onion when brown, cut the steak to pieces, dip in flour, and fry in the butter. Remove the meat from the frying pan and add to the butter the salt, vinegar, mustard, and pepper. Then add the hot water. Replace the steak in the frying pan, cover closely, and let simmer until the steak is tender. Dish on a platter, pour the gravy over it, and garnish with brown potatoes.

ORANGE SHORTCAKE.

One quart of sifted flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of whate sugar. Mix thoroughly. Then add three tablespoonfuls of butter and sweet milk sufficient to make soft dough.

Roll out in three layers, slightly butter each layer, lay one on top of the other, bake twenty-two minutes, separate the layers while warm, place bottom crust on plate, cover with sliced oranges, sprinkle thickly with sugar, serve while warm with cream and sugar. Bananas or peaches may be used instead of oranges.

RAINY-DAY SAINTS.

Legends of Swithin and Other Good Men of Old.

In the early summer many nations commemorate saints who are popularly supposed to have an influence on the weather. The principal form of the belief is that whatever the weather may be on this particular saint's day so it will be for the next 40 days. Among English-speaking people the day is July 15 and the saint is St. Swithin. The old rhyme is well known:

St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain,
For forty days it will remain,
St. Swithin's day, if thou be fair,
For forty days 'twill rain nae mair.

St. Swithin was a native of Winchester, who lived about the year 800 and finally became the bishop of his city. His life was exemplary and after his death the miraculous properties of his tomb became so well known that his body was installed in a gorgeous shrine in the new cathedral. The ceremony took place on July 15, 971, so that this date is really the Feast of the Translation of St. Swithin. For a while the cathedral was dedicated to him, but Henry VIII. stripped him of that honor. He is buried in the choir of the present church.

There is nothing in St. Swithin's history that would make him influential with the weather, and the same statement applies to most of the other saints who have had such honors thrust upon them.

In Germany they have a similar belief concerning the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus, whose day is July 27; while in Belgium the honor is given to St. Godelieve, July 28. In other places June 15, St. Vitus' day, and July 4, the Translation of St. Martin, are accredited with a meteorological influence. In the United States many people think it always rains on July 4, which is an odd coincidence with those ancient beliefs, though any connection between them is highly improbable. In France they have two days which decide the next 40 days' weather—St. Medard's day, June 8, and SS. Gervais' and Protais' day, June 19. They also have a proverb similar to ours, which might be translated:

If it rains on the day of St. Medard
For forty days 'twill rain right hard;
If on Saints Gervais and Protais,
'Twill also rain for forty days.

They tell of St. Medard a quaint legend which is worth repeating. It seems he was driving a cart containing a number of people, when rain began to fall. Every one was wet through except Medard, who was sheltered by a great eagle, which came swooping down from the sky and made itself a self-propelled umbrella.

It has been suggested in explanation of these beliefs that in the days before Christianity our Teutonic ancestors had some feast, possibly moveable, which was believed to affect the weather. This pagan festival was so deeply sunken in the minds of the people that it survived the antagonism of the missionaries and preachers and took on a Christian appearance by becoming connected with some saint especially revered in each district.

What Rufus Harris Says of Dodd's Kidney Pills

After Trying Five Doctors for His Kidney Disease He Found Relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Hurdville, Ont., Feb. 21.—(Special.)—"After trying five doctors for Kidney Trouble, from which I had suffered for three years, I find that Dodd's Kidney Pills relieve me best of all. If I keep on feeling as I have since I began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I shall be well pleased and I am hoping they will cure me."

So says Rufus Harris, well known in this village. "I had stiffness in the joints," he continues, "cramps in the muscles, backache, and was heavy and sleepy after meals. I was depressed and low spirited, perspired freely, was often dizzy and always thirsty, but since taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I am feeling very good."

If you have any of the symptoms Mr. Harris tells of, it is time for you to beware. They are the symptoms of Kidney Disease and may be the forerunners of Rheumatism, Dropsy, Lumbago, Heart Disease or even the dread Bright's Disease itself. Take warning and guard against suffering or even death itself by putting the Kidneys in good working order with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Sweet Norine

Their horrible yell produced a magical effect upon the white, masked bandits. In less time than it takes to recount it, Joe had whipped up his horse and was plunging through their midst. They seemed for a time fairly paralyzed at the menacing danger which confronted them.

"Now, I guess you will have no objections to letting me pass" cried Joe, jerking the bridle from the leader's hand.

"Pass!" they all cried, in a breath. "Why, of course you will, but surely you will stop and take a hand with us in defending ourselves. A shot from your right hand might turn the tide of the skirmish in our favor if we are nearly equally numbered."

"I don't know why I should risk my life in your defense, for you would have taken mine a moment since without a scruple. But if you will hand me one of your rifles, a pistol, anything, I will wing as many redskins as I can; not for your sakes, particularly, but for my own," replied Joe, hurriedl.

There was no time for further words. A belt containing a brace of seven-shooters and cartridges was flung to him, and at that moment the redskins dashed into sight. For a moment they seemed fairly bewildered at the score or more of faces that loomed up before them, when they had expected to behold but one fleeting form. But they were equal to the occasion; the Pawnee is seldom or never taken at a disadvantage. Though surprised at the number of whites, they had no thought of shirking the fierce contest on that account.

The Indians seemed to have increased in numbers. There were fully fifty of them advancing like an avalanche upon the bandits from around the sharp bend in the road!

As they nove in sight, riding furiously, half a dozen abreast, the rifles of the desperate robbers made wild havoc among them.

In the midst of the whites they beheld their escaping captive, and with demoniac yells of fury their first arrows were pointed at him. But luckily their aim was so hurried, the flew harmlessly past him. The firearms of the bandits and the dexterity with which they use them gave them great advantage over the Pawnees, and in the terrific battle which ensued the latter were cut down like grass with the scythe.

In the midst of the carnage Joe thought it wisest and best for his own safety to make his escape as quickly as possible, for the safety of Hadley depended upon his reaching there as quickly as possible and warning the villagers of their peril.

The excitement was at its height, both the bandits and the savages fighting like veritable demons for supremacy.

No one seemed to notice Joe when he edged his horse further and further away from the centre of the conflict, dropping out of sight eventually behind a heavy clump of trees, which effectually shielded both himself and horse.

Turning quickly he galloped as swiftly as the noble little animal could carry him through the forest, heading for a point which opened out upon the main road, some three or four miles beyond.

The mad shouts, the firing and cursing, and the neighing of the terrified ponies of the Pawnees, effectually drowned the sound of his horse's galloping hoofs.

How would the skirmish end. Joe did not stop to consider the matter. They were both the enemies of the villagers.

To his great anxiety, his pony began at last to show signs of the heavy strain to which he had been subjected.

"I see that you must rest, poor fellow," murmured Joe, patting the glossy, arched neck, as he slid down from the animal's back.

Should he push onward and abandon the pony, or wait beside him until he should be able to carry him along the rest of his journey.

Again Fate decided the question for him.

At the unexpected crackling close at hand among the underbrush, caused by the falling limb of a tree, the animal suddenly took fright, wheeled quickly about with a neigh of terror, and plunged suddenly into the path he had but just come, and in less time than it takes to tell it, was out of Joe's sight.

"That settles the matter," he mused. "I must make the way back on foot."

Herealized that he was horribly weak, and that the progress he would make must be necessarily slow; but this fact did not daunt him. He pushed on as rapidly as possible.

The brace of weapons, the property of the bandite, he still had with him, for he knew full well that he might have great need of them ere he reached his journey's end. Yet their heavy weight told greatly against his speedy progress. If he could but reach the main road, he felt that all would be well with him, for he would encounter some one of the Hadley stages. Then he need have no further fear.

It was a bold bandit indeed that would attempt to hold up one of the Hadley stages, and the Indians were by far too cunning to thus lay themselves liable to the anger of the government, who might out of revenge exterminate them, drive them from their hunting grounds, still further from the haunts of men.

As he was pondering over this matter an arrow suddenly whizzed past him, burying itself in the trunk of a tree close by.

In an instant Joe's hand was on the stock of his revovver, and, following the direction from which it had come, he saw a tall bush to the right of him move slightly.

There was no choice left him but to fire into it quickly, despite the loud restudy the probable outcome of his action, thus guiding the foes which he had left behind him to where he was.

Without stopping to take time to study the probabl outcome of his action, he took hurried aim and fired thrice in rapid succession.

As soon as the bullet struck the bushes there was a deep, guttural groan.

Joe sprang toward the bush without stopping to think whether or not the heavy underbrush concealed on foe or half a dozen.

Parting the heavy branches, he peered behind them cautiously.

His keen eyes were used to discerning objects even in the deep shade of the wood by this time.

There, stretched upon the green sward, he beheld the stalwart form of an Indian.

A rift of moonlight drifted in through the interlacing trees above, and by its light Joe could see that his bullet had done its work. The glased eyes were glaring ghastly beneath the blue and red streaks of war paint.

Joe knew by the way in which his scalp lock of coarst black hair was twined and braided, and by the color of his warpaint, that he was a Pawnee; also by his battered and broken eagle plume, and his richly embroidered wampum belt, that he was one of the chiefs of the tribe. With this knowledge came another remembrance to our hero, and that was that these warrior chiefs never travel alone—they were always accompanied by two or more braves.

Joe looked cautiously about him. Where were this chief's companions? Surely they could not be much more than a league away. Perhaps even at that moment they were stealing upon him silently as shadows from among the trees, no doubt surrounding him. He stood quite still. All was deathly silent, save the wind sighing among the trees and the loud beating of his own heart.

One moment, two, he stood thus, listening with terrible intentness, every nerve strained to its utmost tension.

No sound broke the awful stillness save a startled night bird's cry, as it flew from its nest over his head far into the dim recesses of the leafy forest.

Another moment passed; another, and yet another.

Joe wondered why, if the savages were lurking behind the trees, that they did not spring forth upon him with a savage warcry.

He told himself that he would sell his life as dearly as possible, but this horrible suspense was a thousand times harder to endure than the hottest conflict.

Joe knew, too, the Pawnees' manner of fighting. A single Indian had never been known to attack a white man. Yes, surely his companions could not be far off. They must have heard, too, the discharge of his weapon.

Should he advance or retreat? While he was attempting to study out this problem he heard the rustle of dead leaves, and the swift approach of moccasined feet. He could tell by the sound that there were not less than half a dozen of the warriors.

They were advancing directly toward the spot where he stood.

CHAPTER XXVI.

It is not pleasant to leave our hero in such a sad predicament, but I am sure, my dear reader, you will be equally interested in knowing all about the thrilling experience through which our Norine was passing at that identical moment, and so near the spot where Joe was hiding in ambush from his foes.

When Norine had stolen away from the cottage her little heart was so torn with conflicting emotions that she scarcely heeded in which direction she turned her footsteps; nor did she heed the darkness of the night or the bitter cold. All she thought of was the handsome lover whom they said was false to her.

She would not believe it, though an angel cried it out from heaven trumpet-tongued; even now the fire of his impassioned love-making seemed to thrill and burn her heart, as each whispered word returned to her in vivid imagination.

"They say you are false, my love, but I'll still believe you true. It would kill me to doubt you, Clifford," she wailed, clutching her hands tightly over her heart.

She had not intended to take the path toward Barrison Hall. Indeed, she scarcely knew that she had wandered that far, until it suddenly loomed up before her. And oh, joy, joy, as she stood by the gate she saw the great oaken door swing open and the subject of her thoughts come down the walk.

Norine did not attempt to conceal herself. Indeed, she uttered a cry of delight, which came from the very depths of her poor, tortured little heart. Clifford Carlisle heard the sound and paused abruptly.

"Is that you, Norine?" he demanded, in a very annoyed tone of voice, as he attempted to peer through the darkness toward the spot from whence the sound proceeded.

"Yes," sobbed the girl, springing to his side, adding, as she caught his arm in the clasp of her trembling fingers: "Oh, how fortunate I am in seeing you, Clifford, dearest."

He shook off her hand roughly, exclaiming:

"I see; you sent in the old man to tell me the story you had made up between you, because you found out that I had inherited a fortune. But it did not work. I am not a man to be coerced into anything that I do not choose to do—mark that, Norine. No doubt you have the old man somewhere behind you to hear what is taking place at this moment. If so, it is lucky for him that the darkness is shielding him. I am not a fellow to be trapped in that way, depend on it."

"Oh, Clifford, do not speak so unkindly to me, or I shall die," wailed Norine, wringing her hands. "Grandfather is not here. I—I did not send him here; I did not know he was coming here to talk with you. I had kept everything a secret, as you desired me to do, and—and I betrayed my love for you to him to-night quite by chance. They were speaking ill of you, Clifford, and I could not bear it. It was like plunging a sharp knife through my heart, and I told them so."

An impatient imprecation broke from her companion's lips.

"I will walk with yo me far as the post office, where I am going to mail some letters, and you shall tell me about it," he said, taking her arm in a not very pleasant mood.

With faltering voice Norine told him truthfully just what had occurred. She expected him to vigorously refute the charge that he did not love her, but instead, to the girl's great astonishment, he broke into a sneering laugh—a laugh that made the blood run cold in her veins.

"Well, whatever comes of the affair, you have brought it on yourself, Norine," he declared. "It would now be a rather difficult matter to take you with me when I go East; the opportunities for getting off are so perilous."

"Not if we were—were married," she faltered, timidly, "and—and I will consent to marry you and go with you, Clifford!"

He laughed a harsh, grating laugh, answering sneeringly:

"I am sure I ought to be very much obliged to you for your kindly intentions, Norine, but the fact of the matter is, I cannot marry you under the terms of the will just yet, until I reach New York and transact some business that remains to be attended to there. Do you comprehend?"

"Oh, Clifford!" moaned the girl. "I cannot part from you; I should surely die! You cannot mean to go away without marrying me, and—and taking me with you, as you have so often told me you would if I would consent to go with you, dear."

He bit his lip in vexation. He had been very careful not to use the word marriage in talking with Norine in the past, and now to hear her pin her faith to his promise of making her his wife annoyed him exceedingly, to say the least.

"You must listen and heed what I have to say, Norine," he replied, doggedly and evasively. "I cannot marry until I reach the East, and come into full possession of this fortune. Now do you understand the position I am placed in? If you wish to go with me under these circumstances, well and good; if not, I must leave you behind me. I leave you free to make your own choice. I don't want you to ever have it to say that I ever persuaded you in this matter."

Norine was so much of a thoughtless, innocent child that she did not realize the drift of his carefully selected words.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

She only understood one thing, and that was, that he wanted her to marry him when he should get the great fortune that had been left him. That was all that she understood clearly.

Even while they were talking Clifford Carlisle was telling himself that he was tired of the girl. He had enjoyed the love-making while she had been content to say nothing, hear nothing, of marriage; but now that that subject filled her mind he was beginning to tire of it. He knew, too, full well that he would never dare make any other woman than Florice Austin his wife. Florice held him in her power too completely for that.

And yet Norine Gordon was so exquisitely lovely he could not bear the thought of giving her up.

If he could have managed to have grasped the fortune without Florice Austinn having such a damaging hold on him, he might have been tempted on the spur of the moment to have married Norine. But as it stood, there was no possibility of it; not the slightest.

Still, he did not quite have the heart, cool rascal that he was, to tell the girl who was clinging to him with such passionate sobs the plain truth; and it was very pleasing to him, too, to see how completely the pretty creature was in love with him.

"Do not weep, Norine," he whispered. "I have changed my plans about leaving Hadley for a fortnight yet; or I may be detained still longer in this confounded hole, so we will have ample time to talk this matter over. These very letters in my hand must go east, and be answered, ere I shall know my future plans entirely. So let us not think of this unpleasant subject any longer. A man likes a girl who laughs and is merry with him, Norine, not one who falls into tears at his approach, so call forth the smiles to your pretty lips, kiss me, and swear never to fall into such weakness again when I am about. I do not fancy it, Norine; I assure you I do not."

Still, the girl was not to be appeased. He could feel through the darkness that she was looking up in his face wistfully.

"Tell me, assure me that you love me, Clifford," she murmured, tremulously, her voice quivering.

"Can you doubt me, beloved?" he answered, melodramatically. "My heart beats only for you, fairest of all prairie flowers."

The lightness, carelessness of his tone jarred upon her.

"Then my grandfather misunderstood your words and meaning, Clifford?" she interrogated, gravely.

"Certainly, if he has come to any other conclusion than that I adore his charming granddaughter," he replied, gathering the girl up in his arms and kissing the words trembling on her lips into silence.

"Of course I love you, Norine," he declared. "Why, I love you so well that I would give my life to save yours, if necessary. You know they are still in hopes that that rascally thief, Joe Brainard, who stole all that money from the express company, will come back some day, and that they will marry you to him; that is the reason they are so bitter against me, and are doing their best to part us by telling you that I don't love you. I wonder that you do not see through it."

"I never thought of that. Perhaps you are right," declared Norine, with a little gasp in her voice. "How strange that I did not think to look at it in that light, Clifford. Will you ever forgive me for letting a doubt creep into my heart?"

"Yes, if it never occurs again," he answered, lightly. "Let me also add, if you do not come to Barrison Hall again in search of me. That would never do, you know, my dear. The servants, indeed, any of the villagers, would talk if they knew that you came here at this time of the night to see me. It is nearly 10 o'clock. What if your grandparents were to miss you, and find that you were out of the house, and on such a night as this, and, furthermore, that you had come here? Why, they would be apt to lock you up, and make it mighty unpleasant for both of us. Can you not realize that?"

TEN YEARS' TEST OF ECZEMA CURE

During its ten years' test, oil of wintergreen as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription has thoroughly, absolutely proven its merits for skin diseases.

Though on sale only a short time in Canada, it is rapidly duplicating here its remarkable success in the United States. Cure after cure, and the testimony of the world's leading skin specialists, show plainly that the way to cure the skin is through the skin; not, however, by means of a salve reaching only the outer skin, but with a penetrating liquid that gets in to the inner skin, killing the germs and soothing the healthy tissue.

D. D. D. does just this. It cures—and it relieves instantly. If you have never tried it write the D. D. D. Laboratories, Dept. D, 23 Jordan street, Toronto, for a free trial bottle.

Municipal Wages in Nottingham.

Night watchmen about the city property receive 3 shillings (73 cents) for 12 hours, equivalent to 6 cents an hour. Some other city workmen get 4 pence (8 cents) an hour. Street laborers receive 5½ pence (10 to 11 cents) an hour, laborers for the waterworks 10 cents, and those in other departments 10½ to 12 cents an hour.

Street car conductors are paid no more than laborers till they have served two years, when they receive the maximum rate of 12 cents an hour. Motormen are paid a shade more.

Of the policemen, 45 out of 320 receive less than 12 cents an hour in cash, but an allowance for boots and uniform and an allowance from a fund for their benefit slightly advances their hourly compensation. The pay of the police force works out a week at $6.25 to $9 a man for seven days' work, with 21 days' vacation each year.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

GOLD IN NEW YORK.

Where It Is Stored and How It Is Used.

What ransom would a foreign foe whose ships of war had passed the guardian forts demand of New York City! "What a city to loot!" the Russian exclaimed as he looked, from a lofty window out over the million lights of London, and even more suggestive of such a thought is a view of New York with its thousand treasure chests.

New York is a great storehouse for gold—almost any day the vaults are guarding $200,000,000 worth of the yellow metal—about one twenty-fifth of all the gold in existence, and the total amount in the city, including private holdings, has risen as high as $300,000,000, or more than the world's roduction in a year.

The bulk of the gold is held by the sub-treasury and by the New York clearing house, and in the form of bars in the assay office. The clearing house has on hand usually about $125,000,000, and the sub-treasury $50,000,000, while the value of the bars in the assay office may be much more or much less than $50,000,000.

At the clearing house is stored all the surplus gold belonging to the banks composing the association, and the amount, of course, fluctuates, but at all times the great chest is well lined.

The gren box which contains the gold at the clearing house is said to be the best and safest vault in the world, surpassing in safety the vaults of the treasury at Washington and those of the Bank of England. It is located somewhat lower than the sidewalk, and is 25 by 20 feet in size, with a 12-foot ceiling. The top, bottom and sides are 6 1-4 inches thick, and made of chrome steel plates, each plate being 3-16 inch thick, so tempered as to be almost diamond hardness, and so bolted together as to "break joints" at every point.

With the finest tools it would require a man twenty-four hours of the hardest kind of work to make a small hole in the floor, or top. However, the gold would probably be safe enough if in a wooden box.

The treasure chest is placed in a large chamber, 40 by 50 feet in size, and 20 feet high, which is at all times brilliantly lighted. The treasure chest does not touch the walls or floor, but is supported in the centre of the chamber on four solid masonry piers that rest on bedrock. These piers raise the great box 6 feet 6 inches from the floor, so that the watchman who is constantly on duty can walk not only around but under the chest, and it is, of course, impossible for cracksmen to get at the book by means of a tunnel. In addition to all of which the treasure chest is surrounded by a grill made from two-inch bars of finely tempered steel.—New York Times.

STOCKING DYE CAUSED POISON.

A case at Kingston shows vividly the danger of neglecting to apply Zam-Buk to a cut or a sore. Mrs. R. Harrison, living in Place d'Armes, while attending to her household duties, struck her ankle against a sharp objection on the furniture. She took no notice of the injury, deeming it trivial. In a day or two the ankle began to swell and cause excessive pain. A doctor, called in, found that dye from her stocking had entered the wound and set up blood poison. Treatment with Zam-Buk followed, but it was several days before the limb was out of danger. "Had it not been for the powerful antiseptic properties of Zam-Buk and its exceptional healing virtues, the wound might have had a very serious result," says Mrs. Harrison. "But I believe if I had applied Zam-Buk at the time of the injury, it would have prevented the blood-poisoning altogether."

I NEVER LEARNED TO PLAY THE CLARINAT.

PRINTERS, COMPOSITORS AND pressmen, and machinists—At once, who are clarinet players; to locate in good town. Address Bandmaster, Red Oak, Iowa.—Tribune adlet.

I played the devil early in my time;
Played jokes upon the "comps." of other days;
I inked the office towel when its grime
Became immortalized in lilting leys;
Set type along the trail of Westward Ho,
Playing each free lunch counter that I met;
As journeyman I played the rambling bo—
But never learned to play the clarinet.

When "points" replaced bourgeois and minion lean,
And linotype supplanted stick and rule,
I played sonatas on the new machine,
Using a keyboard as a printing tool.
I played the country weeklies, Dana's Sun;
The Arizona Kicker's type I've set.
I've played a Gordon, played a Washington—
But never learned to play the clarinet.

I've paused at kindly Joe McCullough's seat;
I've had my pleasant hour with Eugene Field;
Dave Henderson was not too proud to treat;
A dime or two Ben King would always yield.
I've stuck type on Hy Grady's southern sheet;
Marse Henry's awful copy I have set;
Medill would smile the old tramp print to greet—
And yet I never learned the clarinet.

Soon will I cease to hear the click of type,
Or falling matrix in the type machine.
My years are full, the time will soon be ripe
To send this first edition from the scene.
In the print shop St. Peter keeps on high
Some music all must play or be reset;
And so, before my form begins to pi,
I'll learn to operate a clarinet.

A FORM OF POPULARITY.

(Washington Star.)

"My husband is one of the most popular men in his club," said young Mrs. Torkins, proudly.

"I'm sorry to hear that," replied Miss Cayenne. "It indicates that he never wins."

Starvation Amid Plenty

Not Uncommon To-day—The Reason is Explained.

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodges, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines to-day and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Look for the yellow boxes. Sold by all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada, at 25c per box.

THE VIVAPHONE.

Living Speaking Pictures of Politicians.

One of the features of the campaign is the display on the bioscope of politicians making speeches while their actual words are delivered by a gramophone.

An exhibition was given on Wednesday by the Hepworth Manufacturing Company in a hall in the Strand. Strangely lifelike effects were produced. On a screen appeared the picture of Mr. F. E. Smith. He began speaking, and his words appeared to come from the picture itself. His head was thrust forward in emphasis, anger and scorn crept into his tone, and his hand was raised to hammer in his argument. After Mr. F. E. Smith came Mr. Bonar Law, with calm, earnest, determined face, putting forth his lucid and deliberate arguments with that paucity of gesture which is his distinguishing trait in the House of Commons. It was interesting to see the expression creep into his face as he came to a point on which he felt particularly warmly interested, too, to hear his voice deepen at the same point.

The name of the instrument which produces these wonderful results by synchronising voice and picture is the vivaphone. The talking machine is the telephone kept up its persitent clampany.

Odd Facts About the North Pole.

At the North Pole all meridians meet and every direction is south. So the fixed meridian upon which the determination of longitude and time depends is lacking, and it is necessary to assume an arbitrary direction as the meridian. A parallel of latitude is reduced to a single point and longitude entirely vanishes. Time also vanishes, for it is always local noon. All winds blowing over the pole blow from the south and also toward the south at the same time. The magnetic needle points due south. The stars do not rise and set, but describe a circle around the horizon.

The north star is not directly overhead, but describes a circle four and one half times as broad as the sun's face. If a man should walk westward on a parallel of latitude three and one-half miles from the pole at the rate of a mile an hour, he would be traveling west at the same velocity with which that part of the earth is going west. So he would not be moving at all, but would be treading the earth under his feet in the same way that a dog walks on a rolling barrel.

The auroras shod their mysterious radiance over the long polar nights. The phenomena of auroras extend through a zone the centre of which is near the magnetic pole, but the maximum effect is observed at a considerable distance from this pole. Inside this belt of maximum effect auroras are seen to radiate from points both north and south of the zenith, but at places outside the belt they stream only from the north.

There appears to be an intimate relation between the distribution of auroras and that of barometric pressure in the polar regions. To science the discovery of the pole is of great importance. A knowledge of the ocean depth, winds and temperature at the pole are of the greatest value in geography and meterorology.

Some Causes of Failure.

Long years of experience have demonstrated to the seekers after the underlying causes of business failure the fact that, generally speaking, four-fifths of all failures are due to faults inherent in the person, while about one-fifth are due to causes outside and beyond his own control. This proportion varies slightly in some years of stress, but on the whole the percentages are so constant that in themselves they constitute a virtual guarantee of statistical accuracy. Under the head of faults due to the subject himself the following causes are grouped by Bradstreet's:

Incompetence (irrespective of other causes).
Inexperience (with other incompetence).
Lack of capital.
Unwise granting of credits.
Speculation (outside regular business).
Neglect of business (due to doubtful habits).
Personal extravagance.
Fraudulent disposition of property.

On the other hand, the following causes are classed as not proceeding from the faults of those failing:

Specific conditions (disaster, panic, etc.).
Failures of others (of apparently solvent debtors).
Competition.

Subscription, $2 00 a year, in advance.
20-Day Notices, $5; 60, $7 50; 90, $10

The Review is the acknowledged advertising medium of the Creston valley, circulating in over one thousand homes throughout the Creston district. Our columns are open to correspondents on live questions of local interest. Contributions must be brief, written on one side of the paper only and signed, not necessarily for publication, but as evidence of good faith. We invite support in our endeavours to increase the usefulness of the Review by bringing in your advertisements, subscriptions and news. Complaints from subscribers as to non-receipt of paper will be promptly attended to. Address all communications to the editor.

From present appearances British Columbia will make great advances during the present year. The complications of political matters in the Old Country is forcing capital to seek investment in the colonies. Added to this the great tide of immigration is now on to the Canadian West; and while it must be admitted that a great majority of the immigrants coming to the prairie provinces are people of small means and quite unfit to become settlers in fruit districts like the Creston district, where it takes money to buy land, still, when such a large immigration is taking place, it is a foregone conclusion that a certain percentage of these new arrivals will be people of means and most desirable settlers for our district.

The pictorial pamphlet of the Creston district that is being got out by the Board of Trade will be completed in a few days and will do an immense amount of good in legitimate advertising this district. Let us all pull together during this year so that the district will be the more benefitted by the prosperous times upon which we are about to enter.

At this season of the year all towns should have a general clean-up; and in this respect Creston is no exception. There are many of the backyards of private dwellings in Creston as those of the businesss houses that are a great eyesore to any community. Why not everyone take a pride in keeping their places clean and make a start in this important work right off before the Provincial Constable has to give you official notice to do so?

Also there are hogs running at large through the streets. Whoever owns these animals should lose no time in getting them penned up, for they are a public nuisance and the owner is liable to prosecution for allowing them to run at large.

It is to be hoped that all parties referred to in this article will take a hint and attend to these matters before it is found necessary for the police to take action.

The sewerage meeting, held on Monday evening, did not accomplish much one way or the other. It seems now as if the matter of giving Creston a sewerage system would die a natural death, and possibly it is all for the best. One thing however, is certain, and that is that within the near future Creston should realize that the ratepayers should control local affairs and receive the amount annually received in Nelson for taxes of various kinds; and this can only be brought about by incorporation. It may be too early to talk incorporation this spring, but within the next few months something will have to be done in that line. This is as sure as the law of gravitation.

DEATH NOT SO BAD

The brimstone-preaching minister had been called upon to preach before a congregation known for their liberal views, and consequently careless way of living. Sounding a warning which he thought would strike home the minister said:—

"Hell, my friends, is lined with poker players, men and women who drink to excess, painted daughters of Jezebel, women in decollete gowns, divorcees, and the like."

At that point a little red faced man with a high pitched piccolo voice, arose in the rear of the room and piped out:

"Oh, death, where is thy sting?"

F. E. (Old Man) Simpson, formerly editor of the Cranbrook Herald, has joined the staff of the O. W. Kerr company as field manager in the state of Illinois. He will be a good man for the position, as he is a natural booster, and Southern Alberta will receive the benefit of his being there. He will send many people to the Canadian West.—Lethbridge Herald.

Mrs. C. O. Rodgers, accompanied by her son Floyd, left on Monday for Spokane, where Master Floyd will resume his studies, after spending the Easter vacation with his parents.

If the Wanata correspondent of the Nelson Daily News, who about a week ago offered to challenge any other district on the matter of producing early rhubarb by June 10, were at Creston now he could be shown rhubarb and green onions fit for table use that were picked by Mr. J. J. Atherton at Sirdar, near Creston, on the 18th day of April When it comes to producing early produce in the open air, Creston district has the whole of B.C. whipped to a standstill.

District News

Mr. Graham has taken his wife and family to his ranch near Erickson.

H. Martin has returned from Nelson, where he went for a short stay.

H. Wheeler and J. McGinnis, of Erickson, were in Cranbrook on business last week.

T Haskins has returned from Cranbrook, where he went ot have his face treated for a complaint. It will be some time before he has entirely recovered.

Mrs. M. McLeod, of Erickson, left on Tuesday for Seattle, where her mother resides. She will be gone for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mitchell, of Erickson, entertained a number of their friends at their farewell party on Thursday evening the 7th. inst. The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, singing and playing cards. The singing was fine, as also were the Scotch reels which, although old dances, were new to some of the guests and were danced with great skill. Messrs. H. Hamilton and I. Beam furnished the music and Mr. J. Mason played the accordeon. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Long and children, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cartwright, Mr. and Mrs. B. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. S. Kenan, Mr. and Mrs. I. Beam, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Brownrigg, Mr. and Mrs. M. McLeod, Mr. and Mrs B. Breeze, Mrs. T. Cole, Miss L. Cartwright, Miss R. Beam, Melba and Peargana Cartwright, J. Mason, R. Telford, M. Beam and P. Crown. A nice lunch was served at midnight and all present had a good time. The dancing continued till a late hour.

A Kootenay Industry

The town of Nelson and the Kootenay district have every reason to be proud of that very excellent brewing plant doing business at Nelson, known as the Nelson Brewery Company. The establishment, which is under the able management of Wm. Gosnell, has prospered to an unprecedented extent during the past few years. At this brewery Geo. Hawthorn, a brother of F. W. Hawthorn, the prosperous cigar man, is the office man, while Mr. Fred. Steiner is head brewer and mechanical man of the establishment. Mr. Steiner has brewing down to a fine art. He is a graduate of the Brewers' School Royal, Bavaria, of Germany, and with the able assistance of some fifteen employees does good work. It was a treat to visit the brewery to see the massive machinery of the various departments all working in harmony and with almost human regularity. Another noticeable feature of the brewery was the extreme cleanliness of all the various departments; not a cobweb can be found on the premises anywhere, and insects or vermin are not known in this very excellent brewery. The water used is fresh spring water, and the hops are imported specially from Germany. This big brewery now has a capacity of 6,000 barrels annually; and the business has increased so greatly of late, that this year extensive improvements to the bottling and cold storage plants will be made. This brewery took first prize at Nelson exhibition last fall for the best display of lager beer and porter. The beer produced from these works is noted throughout the Kootenays and the province of B.C. for its clearness and total absence of impurities. Nelson has reason to be proud of the Nelson brewery.

"FRAT THING" NEW TO BARNEY

They're telling a story on Barney Oldfield that's so rich it will spill if kept much longer.

The speed king carries quite a layout when he's burning up the tracks, and among the party are W. H. Pickens and J. Alex. Sloan. Both are big men. Pickens is big around like a second-term alderman and Sloan is big on the Jim Corbett lines. It's their business to work the publicity thing, make contracts—and get the money.

Sloan quit a job editing a sport page in St. Paul some months ago to hook up with Oldfield and Pickens. In his more callow days Sloan, who is known as "Tod" to his intimates, played football, and incidentally joined the Eata Pica Pies or some other fraternity.

Everywhere he goes Sloan runs across brothers of the mystic letters, and being a genial soul, always has a bunch of the brothers in tow. Which leads up to the story.

One of Oldfield's stunts, when reaching a town where he has a race date, is to drive from the railway to the track in his racing machine. Sloan, who does the advance business, is always on hand to ride with Barney, and having been in town several days, is usually accompanied to the depot by a retinue.

"It got to be something of a chestnut for Barney," says Pickens, who tells the yarn, "for Sloan to invite three or four friends to hop on and slide out to the track. Oldfield would look back, and lean over to 'Tod' and say, 'Nix, nix, Tod, chase 'em.'

"'She-h-h-h,' Sloan would say, 'They're frat brothers.' This kept up for several weeks. Every day in the hotel Barney'd see half a dozen of the fellows with pins like the one Sloan sported, hanging around, fanning with 'Tod,' and finally his curiosity could stand it no longer, and he came to me.

"'Say, Pick, whatinhell's this frat thing Sloan's always shooting at me?'

"'Why, it's a secret society he belongs to,' I replied. 'He joined in college.'

Barney looked about the hotel lobby where Sloan was in the middle of about a hundred enthusiasts, all bound for the track. Finally he burst out with, 'Say, this frat is a daisy. It must be almost as strong as the Elks or Eagles, isn't it?'"

A MOTHER'S PRAISE FOR BABY'S OWN TABLETS

There are thousands of mothers throughout Canada who have no hesitation in saying that the good health enjoyed by their little ones is entirely due to the judicious use of Baby's Own Tablets. And there are many mothers who do not hesitate to say that at a critical period Baby's Own Tablets have saved a baby's life. Such a medicine should always be kept in every home. Mrs. J. A. Porier, Paquetville, N. B., says: "We give Baby's Own Tablets all the credit for keeping our little one well. They are an excellent medicine for children." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Jim's Cost a Dollar More.

Richard Le Gallienne, the poet, was entertaining a group of magazine editors at luncheon in New York.

To a compliment upon his fame Mr. Le Gallienne said lightly:

"But what is poetical fame in this age of prose? Only yesterday a school boy came and asked me for my autograph. I assented willingly. And to-day, at breakfast time, the boy again presented himself.

"'Will you give me your autograph, sir?' he said.

"'But,' said I, 'I gave you my autograph yesterday!'

"'I swopped that and a dollar,' he answered, 'for the autograph of Jim Jeffries.'"—Washington Star.

Dice Throwing for Charity.

A singular incident, which has not taken place during the last thirty years, occurred at the Town Hall, Guildford, yesterday, in connection with the interesting old ceremony of throwing dice for the "maid's money," or John How's charity.

Both servants on the first throw obtained exactly the same total—10, but on taking the dice box for the second time Ellen Reeve totalled 12 and Dora Palmer 8. The former was then given a cheque for £11 10s.—London Standard.

A MOTHER'S ANXIOUS TIME

Promptness Saved her Child

"My daughter was in the last term of her High School work when it suddenly and forcibly dawned upon me that her little cough had been hanging on, even in spite of the warm weather. Looking at her anxiously, for a fear had come into my mind, I saw she had grown pale and a lot thinner. It seemed queer I hadn't noticed it all along before, but, you see, I counted on it wearing away. What an awful risk for parents to take! Of course, I didn't tell her how anxious I was, but I watched the effect of Ferrozone with the utmost anxiety. My girl seemed so slow to improve, and the first two weeks seemed like a year. By this time not even the first box of Ferrozone had been used up, still she had greatly improved appetite, and her progress after that was splendid. When the weather improved she walked a lot, and gained steadily in vigor and weight. The hacking cough disappeared, and with it every trace of weakness. I know of no tonic so nourishing, strength-giving, so beneficial for growing girls as 'Ferrozone.'"

Not only for girls, but for all who are weak, tired, pale, run down and in repressed spirits—there is no medicine so sure to to win back vigorous health as "Ferrozone." Try it, one or two tablets at meals; 50c. per box, six for $2.50, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Why Didn't He Speak?

He was a countryman in London on business, says Cassell's Journal. He was walking down the street for something to buy as a present for his wife. In passing a bird shop his eye was caught by a parrot.

It was priced at £5 and warranted to talk. The countryman bought it, and as he had to stay a week he sent it on to his wife by rail.

When he returned he asked his wife how she liked the bird.

"He was a mighty pretty bird, but pow-ful tough."

"Tough? You don't mean to say you have eaten that bird?"

"Eat that bird? O course I have."

"My stars! Why, woman, that bird cost a fiver, and could talk like a lawyer."

"Well, if that bird could talk when I had him by the neck, and was a-goin' to wring his neck, why didn't he say so?"

When Siamese Topnots Are Cut.

A Siamese child, whether boy or girl, wears its hair in a little topknot until it has attained the age of 11 or 12 years. On reaching this age the topknot cutting ceremony takes place. The child is dressed in its best and amid much rejoicing of relatives and friends the topknot is cut, one lock at a time. The head is then completely shaved by the priests.

All guests invited to the ceremony bring presents—usually money, which is carefully invested for the child by its parents or guardians. A young prince or princess will sometimes receive as much as $25,000 in presents at his or her topknot cutting ceremony, while a poor child may get $10 or $15.—From the Wide World Magazine.

Sir William's Mistake.

"Sir William Harcourt once told me that he had dined out every night for a whole week in advance of his invitations. He only discovered his mistake on the last night, when, on going to dine with some people who gave long invitations and large dinners, he found them alone.

"After a very pleasant evening he thanked them for asking him in so friendly a manner, whereupon they explained that the invitation had been for a week later, but that they had been only too delighted at his mistake.

"On hearing this, Sir William looked at his engagement book and discovered that this was the last of a number of invitations which he had anticipated by a week."—Sir Henry Lucy's Memoirs.

Wonders of the Mono-rail Car.

Percival Gibbon, writing in the February McClure's, on the trial trip of Mr. Brennan's mono-rail car, gives the following account of some of the problems met and solved:

"Lubrication is a vital part of the machine. Let that fail, and the axles, grinding and red-hot, would eat through the white metal of the bearings as a knife goes through the butter. It is a thing that has been foreseen by the inventor; to the lubricating apparatus is affixed a danger signal that would instantly warn the engineer.

"'But,' says Brennan, 'if one broke down, the other gyroscope would hold her up—till ye could run her to a siding, anyway.'

"'But, supposing the electric apparatus failed?' suggests a reporter—with visions of headlines, perhaps. 'Supposing the motor driving the gyroscopes broke down; what then?'

"'They'd run for a couple of days with the momentum they've got,' answers the inventor. 'And for two or three hours, that 'ud keep it upright by itself.'"

Mary's Cook Book.

Ice Cream Candy—Two cups sugar, one cup water, one tablespoon vinegar, one tablespoon cream of tartar, butter the size of a nutmeg, and flavoring. This must not be stirred while cooking. Boil about 25 minutes, or until it hardens when dropped in cold water. Work as soon as possible after taking from the fire. Flavor while pulling.

Stuffed Eggs—Take six hard-boiled eggs, remove the shells, cut them crossways, scoop out the yolks, fill in the vacant spaces with caviare, and cover over with a little mayonnaise sauce, with which the yolks of the eggs have been incorporated. Procure a few even-sized tomatoes; cut them into slices; season them with chopped parsley, oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Serve the eggs on slices of tomatoes. Dish them up garnished with parsley.

Potatoes a la Maryland—Pare six potatoes and cut in thin slices. Lay in cold water for 15 minutes. Drain and put in a stewpan with milk enough to cover, put on lid and simmer slowly until the potatoes are perfectly tender, but not broken. Add a tablespoonful butter, salt, and a teaspoonful of finely minced parsley. Serve in heated dish. If necessary, the milk may be thickened by rubbing a level tablespoonful of flour in the tablespoonful butter before adding to the potatoes.

He Hated to Waste Anything.

Fetzer (in street car) —See that man sitting at the other end —the big fat fellow who takes up so much room?

Wallman—Yes.

Fetzer—Do you know why he doesn't give up his seat to that little thin woman standing in front of him?

Wallman —That's easy; he's too selfish.

Fetzer—No, you're mistaken. That's Millionaire Grippes. He made all his money by practicing economy and the habit of wasting nothing is so strong in him that he would feel guilty if he gave his seat to a woman who was not large enough to fill it.—Chicago News.

Electric Waves and the Eyes.

The experience of the corps of telegraphers employed to operate the wireless appartus used by the French in the recent campaign in Morocco suggests that the Hertzian waves develop various affections of the eyes. A slight conjunctivities, resembling that occurring among those who work with arc lamps, was commonly observed, together with a few cases of a more serious nature. Two cases of eczema were apparently due to the same cause, and one man suffered from palpitation of the heart after working for any great length of time at the sending instruments. Dr. Bellis is inclined to think that many cases of neurasthenia and nervousness, now becoming common in the navy, may be due to the influence of the waves used in wireless telegraphy.

A Useful Wasp.

In the "Comptes Rendus" of the Biological Society of Paris M. Picard gives an account of a useful wasp found in Senegal and Nigeria. It is one of the burrowing wasps, and feeds its larvae on a species of tsetse fly. In view of the part played by many species of the latter in spreading disease, this wasp might prove a useful ally to those who are fighting malaria in tropical countries.

"Window-Leaves."

Dr. R. Marloth has discovered in South Africa six species of plants that possess "window leaves." They are all stemless succulents, and the egg-shaped leaves are embedded in the ground, only the apexes remaining visible. This visible part of the leaves is flat or convex on the surface, and colorless, so that the light can penetrate it and reach the interior of the leaf below, which is green on the inside. With the exception of the blunt apex, no part of the leaf is permeable to the light, being surrounded by the soil in which it is buried.

Miss Barrymore's Admirer.

Miss Ethel Barrymore's marriage has not affected her popularity. The proof of this lies in a pretty story.

Every night during an engagement in Boston a tiny bunch of violets was sent to her. She always left the violets in her dressing room, but one night she pinned the purple violets to her belt, and the following day, when the usual fresh bouquet came to her, this scrawl came with it:

"Dere Friend Miss Barrymore: I seen you wear my vilets, so I know you got them. To-night look at me. I will be in top gallery first roe in my shirt sleeves and my legs hanging over the front of the galary."

Miss Barrymore looked. Her admirer, a bootblack of 8 or 9 years, was in the place and attitude he had promised, and she rewarded him with a smile and a nod of recognition.

LONDON'S TITLED DANCER.

Comments on the Debut of Lady Constance.

The mantle of Miss Maud Allan has fallen upon the shoulders of Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, who made her professional debut at the Palace Music Hall in a series of Greek dances. Very scanty and gauzy is the mantle, and English society assembled in the boxes and stalls gasped when this "daughter of a thousand earls" exhibited herself thus, not only to their eyes but also to the eyes of hundred of blebeian music hall visitors in the balconies, gallery and foyer of the theatre.

Lady "Connie's" dancing is of course a combination of the methods of Maud Allan and Isadora Duncan, though she has indignantly denied having taken lessons from either. She lacks the lightness and grace of Maud Allan and the technique of Miss Duncan. In fact, physical rather than poetical culture is expressed in her emotions, and you could more easily fancy her an amazon arrayed for the hunt than a Greek nymph dancing for sheer joy of life.

Curtains of pale blue draped the stage of the theatre and formed a background for Lady Constance, whose single garment was of the same shade of blue and fell a little below her knees. Her legs and feet were bare, after the approved fashion of this style of dancing.

Her repertoire included a gay spring dance to Grieg music, a marchlike triumphant movement with Tschaikowski accompaniment, a funeral dance to Beethoven's "Marche Funebre" and a gay polka to Waltenfald's "Bonne Bouch." In the last she was most at ease.

Lady Connie's reason for entering into the professional arena is that she wants to raise money to start a school where boys will be educated according to her theories. She wants to have them trained physically as well as mentally, with most time spent on outdoor exercises, sports and games of skill and strength. Her entire salary will be devoted to the furtherance of this scheme.

There are of course suggestions that the Cromartie family, of which she is a member, is among the richest in Scotland and might have raised money to help her in her purpose; and that the Stewart-Richardsons, who are far from impoverished, would have aided had they been asked, so that Lady Constance need not have trod the boards in such chilly garments to achieve her desire. There are other persons who suggest that after having secured a reputation as a huntress of big game in African wilds, as an expert horsewoman, and as champion woman swimmer of England, this restless daughter of the house of Cromartie longs for new worlds to conquer, and hence her professional debut.

PATENT OFFICE.

The Only Government Department to Show a Profit.

The patent office is the one department of the Government which actually yields a profit—something over $80,000 for the last fiscal year, during which the fees amounted to $1,887,000. The records show 62,000 applications for mechanical appliances, on which 35,000 and practical ideas.

Inasmuch as the past year shows an increase of 4,000 applications, it is evident that invention, instead of growing less, is, on the contrary, steadily increasing, and while many patents are secured on which the inventors realize little or nothing, yet fortunes are now and will continue to be made from new and practical ideas.

In most cases the causes of failure to realize expectations will be found, says Popular Mechanics, in the natural tendency of an inventor to magnify the possibilities and minimize the dififculties of selling his invention. While an occasional "find" is made by some one working along a line in which he is poorly informed, hundred waste time and money edveloping some device which, when finished, proves to be either old or without demand.

If the inventor would have his attorney make a search of the records before instead of after completing his invention he would save money and be able to work out his ideas along different lines from those already protected by patents.

HORSE BLOOD A STYPTIC

Now Comes in Dried Form for Doctor's Use.

That the blood of a horse has the peculiar property of acting like a styptic and assisting the formation of a cicatrix when applied to fresh wounds is a fact well known to the medical profession. The difficulty about its application has hitherto been how to obtain fresh, germ free horse blood in an emergency.

Doctors Robert and Chody at a recent meeting of the Therapeutical Society in Paris gave demonstrations with a powder obtained by a new antiseptic method from the blood of sound, healthy horses which has preserved the styptic properties. Dissolved in water it acts in the same way as fresh horse blood. This dried blood powder, it is declared by Drs. Robert and Chody, is also efficacious taken internally as a cure for hemorrhage.

Preserving Flour.

A new method ofpreserving flour has recently been adopted with success in England. It is done by means of compression. With hydraulic apparatus the flour is squeezed into the forms of bricks and the pressure destroys all forms of larval life, thus preserving the flour from the ravages of insects, while it is equally secure from mould. Three hundred pounds of compressed flour occupy the same space as one hundred pounds in the ordinary state.

Telegraph Poles From Russia.

There was a time when the needs of the British Post-office in the way of poles to support the overhead telegraphs to the United Kingdom were met solely from Norway. But to-day Norway's tallest pines are not forthcoming in sufficient numbers to meet the demands of the expanding service—demands averaging 50,000 pales per annum. Sweden was duly laid under contribution, and now Russia has become a valuable source of supply. It was in 1905 that this source was opened up by the present Comptroller of Stores, who visited Russia for the purpose. The poles come not only from the forests that feed the Baltic ports, but from those in the White Sea hinterland.—From St. Martin's-le-Grand.

HAT NEWNESS OF LA PARISIENNE

Early Spring Chapeaux Range From "Duchess of Devonshire" to the Toque.

"New hats," said the French milliner, "have been prepared for early spring, when something lighter in weight will be demanded than the felt and velvet toques and hats we have been selling. I have seen some of the latest models from the great houses, where designs are carried out in straw, and I can describe what we shall wear to you. Drooping?

"Yes, the new ideas all tend to drooping lines, particularly at the back of the head, for the chignon is coming lower down, as evidence by the bunches of Greek curls Parisian hairdressers are trying, with excellent result, to introduce."

The Size.

"The size of the hat?" and she laughed. "Well, you know there is a diversity of opinion on the subject. Some milliners are all for the small hats rolled up abruptly at one side, and which have undoubtedly 'le chic' to commend them. But the big hat," and she waved her hands appreciatively, "the big hat remains always with us. There are ladies who never will wear anything else for certain occasions. Those hats appear always in drawing rooms, receptions and many of them are worn at the special lectures, for which there is a craze in Paris at the present moment. They are defendus in the theatres by law now, so our little toque suits that purpose very nicely, indeed. To return to my big hat. It is huge, immensely bigger than ever, and it droops deeply to one side and right round toward the back of the head.

Feathers.

As to the trimming of these wide-brimmed and carelessly-rolled hats, nothing but a large bunch of ostrich plumes is wanted, and you must remember that the days of uncurled feathers have gone past utterly. The huge panache of plumes is a bunch of richly-curled ostrich feathers. Most of the creators of these hats are inspired by the English pictures of the Duchess of Devonshire painted by Gainsborough, and to be exactly reproduced the effect of hairdressing must be carefully got. One thing more, the woman who wishes to be suitably attired as to her headgear must not forget, and that is her hatpin. These, too, have grown larger than ever; and, last of all, have the true Gainsborough hatpin, consisting of a medallion, more beautiful the better, of great size, ornamenting the hat at the left side, where it is turned up.

NEW DRESS LINENS.

Diagonal linens are new—and smart.

The French oyster white is always pretty.

And a natural color linen frock is as cool as a drink of ice water on a hot day.

Black and white checks are unusual.

For dainty blouses and frocks the "handkerchief" variety is best.

Etamine weaves are another of the season's novelties.

Then there is white with a black hair line over its snowy surface.

But of course there are all sorts of rich and glowing colors as well as the paler tints—dark mahogany, elephant gray, royal blue, russet brown, and ever as many more.

NEW USE FOR HER HATPIN.

Its Head is Made to Carry Several Accessories.

"Well, of all things," exclaimed a man in deep amazement the other day who was gazing in a jeweler's window. "What won't a woman have next?" With which query and the amazed look upon his countenance he joined the moving throng in the street.

Being a mere man, he couldn't appreciate the article at which he was looking, but the woman who stood next him at the same window did. She said, "What a clever idea! A hatpin that is a powder-holder, puff-box and mirror all in one—I wonder how much it costs?" So you see the effect was quite different.

The vogue of enormous hatpins makes such a combination easily possible. The great gold heads of these hatpins were hollow and this left room for a bit of powder and a puff that was an inch and a half across.

How did it open? Simply by pressing a little spring at the top, which lifted the flat jewelled head. When this opened, a tiny mirror was disclosed directly back of the stone—and there you have the whole of this new toilet equipment.

They look just like ordinary hatpins when closed and are not too conspicuous, for they are no larger than the majority of pins madame is putting through her chapeaux this winter.

CREPE DE CHINE WAIST.

This waist is made of sage green crepe de chine, and has a scroll design in velvet lines. The sleeves at the top are slightly draped. The lower cuffs and narrow, round girdle are of cerise chiffon embroidered in colors. Green enamelled buttons trim the upper cuff.

THE COAT DRESS.

Do you like it?

Will it "catch on?"

It arrived last summer.

Paris dressmakers continue to make it.

It is much liked in heavy linen weaves.

The skirts are set on under the side pieces, plaited or gored.

A bit of braiding, embroidery or other trimming outlines the coat effect.

On hot days such a dress has a more dignified look than a coatless dress.

DRESSES MADE OF SILK CASHMERE.

Silk cashmere has sufficient substance to make it suitable for even a cold day, and it is made in the loveliest colors. Being woven of pure silk and finest wool it makes these shades and shows them at their best. There is a deep, glowing shade of ruddy copper, almost approaching flame color, and a gown of silk cashmere in this tint has an embroidery in floss silk to match, with a bold variation in the shape of two Brobding nagian trefoils in the most brilliant, vivid emerald green. The effect of this is curiously magnetic.

Pretty Example.

Another silk cashmere is in the soft and pretty shade of color known as "ashes of roses." It is princess shape, and the bodice is carried out in bands of the material stretching up to the shoulder over an under-bodice of sunset pink chiffon veiled with net in the exact color of the gown. The sleeves follow this idea, having bands of the cashmere with intervals between them, showing the combined chiffon and net.

Done in Blue.

With this is worn a velvet hat in the ashes of roses color, with pink feathers matching the old rose or sunset color of the chiffon. The wide brim is caught up in front diadem-fashion, and some fronds of the feathers fall over it.

A very graceful afternoon frock of blue is embroidered in varying tones of blue with glints of silver. The frock is very simple in effect, the straight front panel of the skirt being embroidered about half-way up and the front of the bodice crossed fichu fashion is also embroidered.

OPERA CLOAK.

High Collar and Long Sleeves Are Altogether Comfortable.

Eminently practical, and at the same time exceedingly becoming, is the way in which the high opera cloak collar, with its soft border of ermine, fits closely round the throat, while the upper part of the coat is arranged with a yoke effect, out-lined effectively with a band of the same fur.

Very sensible too, for the cold weather, are the long sleeves, which are narrow enough to be warm, and yet sufficiently wide not to crush or crumble the gown beneath. The fur-trimmed cuffs too, which encircle the wrists so snugly, add not a little to the cozy appearance of the wrap as a whole.

Fortunately for those among us who are chilly mortals, some of the smartest of the new opera cloaks are being made with high collars, which are in many cases composed entirely of fur. On wraps in vieux rose mirror velvet, for example, beautiful chinchilla collars are to be seen, while again on a satin cloak chosen in the bright shade of sapphire blue, now enjoying so great a vogue, there is a large shawl collar of sable. In both these cases the coats are lined with soft satin to match the shade of the fur collar, while in addition to the collars there are also cuffs to correspond and very broad bands of fur to border the hem.

LINGERIE FROCKS.

From the way the shops are displaying them one might imagine summer just around the corner.

Sheer batiste is an important factor.

Also quantities of French or German valenciennes.

The more filmy and cobwebby the gown the better Milady likes it.

Irish or other heavy lace is often most effectively combined with the more sheer varieties.

Daintily colored ribbon sashes and streamers are a pretty 1910 note.

Have you seen those new embroidery over-skirt effects?

The embroidery tunic and jumper-blouse are in colors, French blue or delicate pink, usually, and the underskirt, sleeves and chemisette are of white batiste or mull.

Whole embroidery robes are lovely.

Eyelets and the Broderie Anglaise predominate in these.

FUR TRIMMINGS.

The Smart Choice for Decking the Evening Dress.

The proud and mighty sable is not this winter the really chic border even with lace gowns; these are very smart with black fox, although unless a little touch of color is somewhere introduced upon the gown the effect is apt to be rather that of half-mourning. A sensible and graceful fashion for evening wear is the long, very wide scarf of lace, or embroidery, or even brocade with a narrow edging around for fur—ermine, skunk, or fox.

White and silver brocade, with an edging of ermine, and a padded lining of white crepe-de-chine is one dainty example of the brocade scarf.

DAINTY NECKWEAR.

There's the jabot.

Likewise the rabat.

Stocks remain in favor.

Sheer linens figure extensively.

Some stocks are of heavy linen.

Embroidery is one favorite feature.

Lace is by no means to be neglected.

The stock collar may be worn quite by itself.

Or a rabat or a jabot may be added to the stock.

The main thing is to have these accessories dainty and becoming.

THE RUSSIAN SUIT.

It is already here.

No longer will the small boy have a monopoly of this well known fashion.

Linen suits are made up that way.

Also heavy cloth suits.

Sometimes the blouse fastens on the left side.

Sometimes it opens in the middle of the front and has little revers.

With its high collar, left side opening, belt and sleeve cuffs there is opportunity to use embroidered bands, braid or lace to add attractiveness.

NEW LACES.

Fine filmy laces predominate for spring and summer.

"Vichy" is one of the trade names for pretty, cobwebby style.

Gold threads twisted in to form quaint designs are new.

Silken floss, smoot hand glossy, is also used in outlining the patterns.

"Billows of fine laces to be used this summer," says one fashion note.

French and German Valenciennes will come in for a large share of attention.

Most all the new laces are from France and Switzerland.

SHREDDED WHEAT

Boys and girls thrive on it. Shredded Wheat fortifies them against winter ills—builds sturdy, robust youngsters.

Simply heat biscuit in oven, pour hot milk over it and salt to taste. Best for every meal.

Sold by all grocers, 13c. a carton, two for 25c. 2007

DAINTY HOUSE GOWN.

Here is one of the most charming designs for that comfortable garment, the house dress, that has been given this season. It is made of henrietta or silk with girdle of smocking and bebe collar and cuffs of embroidered batiste. It is particularly suitable to slender, girlish figures.

SEEN IN THE SHOPS OF PARIS.

Gaudy stockings are being worn again.

Green is unrivaled in popularity.

Most of the new linen suits are lace trimmed.

Many of the new Swisses have embroidered colored dots.

A new fad is the handbag made of cloth to match the suit.

Bedford cord is again in fashion, though much softer in weave.

New bracelets expand and contract with the movement of the arm.

The longer, supple, drooping aigret has come into its own again.

The latest necklaces brought from the far east resemble flexible snakes.

Feathers are of the weeping willow fashion and measure about a foot in length.

The regulation size for a scarf is three yards long by a good half yard wide.

Lace, which has been so long out of favor, is making an effort to regain its place.

The pearl is again the queen of precious jewels, with the moonstone as her understudy.

Box plaitings around the lower edge of skirts are one of the late Paris revivals.

Brown as well as black chantilly lace veils are being seen more as the season advances.

Nothing is more in the style than the untrimmed fur turban.

The time honored black lace shawl hangs from the back of many a magnificent evening gown.

There is a tremendous vogue of gold and silver in the realm of millinery, blouses and laces.

Fashion has decreed that short coats are smart, and the newest gowns from abroad show the abbreviated coat.

Ivory and gray satin stamped with a good design, also green satin, are on the modish list for evening wear.

There is no doubt about the attractiveness of a military cut in coats and wraps for the majority of women.

Some of the handsome Japanese corded silks are being bought by women who like clothes a little unusual.

For dressy wear, black satin slippers are always in good taste. They are, too, more economical than many others.

Gold, silver and brass buttons, with insets of semi-precious stones, are made in order to carry out the color scheme of a costume.

For the foundation of blouses over which dark chiffon falls, Persian silks are utilized by many of the best dressmakers.

Nearly all evening gowns and the majority of reception gowns are a-glitter with beads, gems, sequins, steel ornaments or jet.

Silver filagree, frequently modeled after the old Italian button, will serve as fastening and as jewelry at one and the same time.

Narrow bands of skunk, mink and another fur that simulates sable are used to border the beautiful scarfs that are worn with low necked evening dresses.

The waist line is now normal, but it does not appear so on account of the size. The reason for these waists is the effect of the corsets made at present.

Sable skins on soft chiffon or soft satin arranged in scarf effect are considered smart, and the beauty of the fur shows to great advantage in this fashion.

One of the new veils is so large as to be more like a long scarf. It is composed of a strip of Bieg net, edged at either side with a wide and handsome lace insertion.

The gauzy underskirt in color and the satin underskirt is unmistakably a feature just now. The gauze afternoon frocks are generally mounted over some pale, soft shade.

The newest flower for corsage wear at night is a mixture of silk and chenille; each silk pink petal is tipped with a tiny edging of chenille, which gives it a soft and attractive apepurance.

Lapels of coats are faced with moire, velvet or satin, the long, separate coats oftener than otherwise having a collar, of caracul, astrakhan, mink or other fur.

The shepherdess hat is going to be worn, though, unlike the shepherdess shape of old, the new one is poised quite low and over the ear at one side.

Many of the new skirts show plaits introduced in great variety, side and box plaits mounted on hip yoke or side yokes or laid in full length.

FASHIONABLE STOLE AND MUFF.

Very charming and original are the sets of stole and muff made of handsome fabrics trimmed with marabout or fur. The cat in the illustration is of deep little clusters of roses with mink. The little clusters o froses are made or old gold satin, brown pinks, yellows and delicate pinks—all of them made in the shaded satins with velvet foliage.

The hat is made of the same materials and trimmed with ostrich feathers in the shaded browns.

FINANCIERS WORRYING.

Toronto Globe The recent crumbling of values in Wall street cannot logically be linked with any evidence of retrogression in business, but it has been sufficient to set a large proportion of the commercial population straining on their tiptoes in an effort to see over the top of the wave of prosperity. There is, in other words, no data to prove that business reaction exists, but there is competent evidence that business men all over the country are worrying about the situation, and are consulting their banking connections in this centre about it. From the advice which, I am told, they are receiving, they will proceed conservatively, but they will not abandon any new undertakings.

There is no more dispassionate or analytical judgment of the commercial outlook in the United States than that of the group of Canadian bankers who daily watch the safety of millions loaned to the New York market. The commanding position of the Canadian banks in the money markets of the metropolis is much better appreciated here than it is in Canada, and the immense responsibilities of the agents in Wall street of our larger financial institutions force them to incessant and intelligent study of every turn of financial affairs. None of these men whom I had the opportunity of meeting to-day would say anything more pessimistic on the subject of the general outlook than that business expansion would probably not be as vigorous in the early months of 1910 as was evidenced in the first quarter of 1909. A member of the banking fraternity, who is perhaps at the head of the Canadian contingent in New York, expressed the opinion that the slump on the Stock Exchange was due almost entirely to over-speculation, in which, following the established custom, stocks had been loaded on the public and the pools close to the highest levels.

Absolutely Perfect

EVERY single telephone we put out is as perfect as the pattern instrument from which it is made—the original instrument that cost $10,000 and years of time from the best electrical engineers in the country.

THAT'S our newly designed No. 1317 Type Telephone set we're talking about—the best rural and farm 'phone made anywhere. Listen to these details of it. The transmitter is standard long-distance type; the receiver entirely precludes your hearing local noises while using it; the generator will ring more 'phones on a longer line than any other 5 bar generator in use to-day; our new 38 type ringer operates on from one-quarter to one-third the current ordinarily required; our extra large brass gongs make half as much noise again as gongs on other sets; the switch hook makes all contacts on the best grade of platinum points.

But there's more to know—more that we haven't space to tell here. Send for our Free Book, Bulletin No. 3123 and let it tell you the whole story in detail. It also tells all about organizing a rural 'phone company. Send to-day.

Many Women Suffer Untold Tortures in Silence

They Can Be Relieved by Keeping the Blood Supply Rich and Pure With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

A woman needs a blood-building medicine regularly just because she is a woman. From maturity to middle life the health and happiness of every woman depends upon her blood, its richness and its regularity. If her blood supply is irregular she suffers from headaches, backaches, sideaches, and other unspeakable distress which only women have grown to expect this suffering at regular intervals and to bear it in hopeless silence. But women would escape much of this misery if they took a box or two of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to help them over each critical period. These Pills actually make new blood. They help a woman just when nature makes the greatest demand upon her blood supply. They have done this for thousands of women throughout Canada, why not for you?

Mrs. Joseph Kinney Gilbert's Cove, N.S., says: "For ten years I suffered from nervousness and those troubles that make the lives of so many women one of almost constant misery at times I would be confined to my bed for weeks. I spent sleepless nights and seemed to lose all courage. I tried several doctors but they failed to give me any relief. The last doctor I consulted told me frankly that he could not undertake my case unless I would undergo an examination. It was then I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. After taking six boxes I was much improved in health, but I continued to take the Pills for a couple of months more when I felt like a new woman, and was enjoying such health as I had not experienced for ten years before. I have had no return of this trouble since, but I have used the Pills once since that time for the after effects of la grippe, and the result was all I hoped for. These are plain facts from my own experience, and I have always felt that I cannot too strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the many women who suffer as I did."

You can get this great blood-building, health restoring medicine from any dealer in medicines or direct by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

R. Lamont made a flying trip to Nelson on Sunday last and returned the fore part of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mitchell left on Tuesday for Sault Ste. Marie, where they will reside in future.

Mrs. Murphy has this week opened a clothes cleaning, pressing and repairing business in Frank Bast's block. See her ad. elsewhere in this issue.

It has been ascertained that owing to the numerous calls on him, J. H. Schofield, M.P.P., will not be able to visit Creston until about the end of the month.

Wm. H. Crawford will take a well-earned holiday for the next twelve months. Mr. Crawford has for several years past been an active member of the Creston Mercantile Company. The business of this company will now be carried on by Messrs. Faas and Cherrington.

The ladies of the Methodist Church will hold a Pie Social on Tuesday, April 26, in the Mercantile Hall.

Geo. Nunn and R. M. Reid will compete in a 100 yards foot race, and there will be at least one more entry in this race on May 24. It will pe a young man who is a real sprinter and who be the dark horse of this race no matter how many others may enter.

Commencing in our next issue we will publish a series of articles on "Poultry, and how to make cnickens pay." The articles are written by a well-known poultry expert and are exceedingly valuable, especially by those interested in this branch of farming. It might be well to file these papers away as they appear with these articles in, and thus they can be preserved for future reference.

The Methodist ladies want everyone to be "pie"-cas on the 26th in the Mercantile Hall.

Richards and Payne the local contractors have made rapid progress on the house they are building for Jack Atherton on Fourth street, and people of Creston have been surprised to see the mushroom-like growth of the building during the week.

Mr. Murphy, who recently went to Washington to dispose of his interest in a thrashing machine, is expected back soon, when it is expected he will purchase some orchard land and make his permanent home here. His son-in-law, James Hutchinson, is also likely to be added to Creston's list of fruit growers in the near future.

Geo. M. Benney, superintendent of roads for Ymir County, Wm. H. Crawford and J. K. Johnson were among the Crestonians visiting Nelson this week. Messrs. Crawford and Johnson returned on Wednesday, while Mr. Benney, in company with Government Engineer Griffith, left Nelson on Wednesday to inspect a bridge at Salmo, and will return home the end of this week.

A Most Remunerative Business

To those wishing to engage in a profitable business, land-clearing with the Ducrest Stump Puller offers most attractive inducements. There is practically an unlimited field of operations, and the demand far exceeds the supply of contractors in this line. Farmers, like other people, prefer machine work to either blasting or hand work. Hitherto it has been a more or less unprofitable business, because the required power could not be obtained at a sufficiently low cost, but the Ducrest Stump Puller has practically revolutionized this work. Farmers can afford, and are glad, to pay $10 per day to have their stumps removed, because it will cost less than the slow and costly method of land clearing. In countries where grain is grown to any extent, many people operate threshers for hire, and make well out of it. A threshing machine is expensive to run. A Ducrest Stump Puller is inexpensive to purchase, costs practically nothing to operate, and will furnish you with a profitable industry in which you will be your own master. Think it over.

It will pay you to buy the Ducrest Stump Puller, even if you have only five acres to clear.

No. 1: Weight 500 lbs. Guaranteed to develop 246 tons pressure using one horse, 20ft. lever and single power block. Without accessories, $75. The additional outfit consists of 150 ft. 7-8 ins. special plow steel cable, 25 ft. 1 1-8 in. anchor 10 ft. 1 1-8 in. power cable, special steel power-block, and 3 heavy shackles, bringing the price of stumper complete to $150.

The above outfit will stump nearly 3 acres without resetting.

No. 1: Weight 750 lbs. Guaranteed to develop 346 tons pressure, with one horse; 20 ft. lever and single power block. The outfit comprises 200 ft. 7-8 in. special plow steel cable, 28 ft. 1 1-8 in. anchor, 12 ft. 1 1-8 in. power cable, special power-block and three heavy shackles. The machine alone is $100; complete, $200. Nearly 4 acres can be cleared without resetting.

No. 3: Weight 1,100 lbs. Guaranteed to develop 246 tons pressure, with one horse and 20 ft. lever, or 492 tons with two horses, with single power-block. The equipment includes 250 ft. special plow steel cable, 28 ft. 1 1-8 in. anchor, 12 ft. 1 1-8 in. power cable, specially constructed power block and three heavy shackles, each cable having a good socket at each end. Machine alone, $125; complete, $285. Radius, about 5 acres without resetting.

The rope supplied is the very best obtainable. Cheap wire rope is too dangerous to be used with this powerful stumper.

The power can be greatly increased by an extra power-block.

You don't have to go outside of Canada to buy one of these stump pullers either; you can buy them in B.C.

The "Ducrest Patent Stump Puller," invented by J. Ducrest, is claimed, without fear of contradiction, to be the only machine ever made that will, with ONE horse, pull green stumps up to 40 inches in diameter. This has been done not once, but thousands of times.

Severe, practical tests—the only sure guide to the value of a machine—have demonstrated that the Ducrest Stump Puller can do all that is claimed for it. Nowhere else in Canada can one find stumps requiring such a tremendous power to pull. The Ducrest machine was specially designed to pull British Columbia stumps.

Briefly, the principle given is a drum, sitting close to the ground, smaller in diameter at the center, and operated by one horse at the end of a long lever, with the anchor chain pulling in the same line or plane as the pulling cable. The machine cannot, therefore tip over and enormous power is developed.

The Ducrest machine is specially designed for pulling British Columbia stumps; the ordinary type of imported machines are designed from experience gained where conditions are much less rigorous, and in many cases the latter is not only useless for the experiments here but are also dangerous and expensive.

Furthermore, the inventor has had PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE under the same conditions with which you have to contend, and the proof of his success is that land-clearing contractors are now adopting the Ducrest Stumper. He has cleared 400 acres with his machine, and never made less than $10 00 per day; while the Stumper he used on 300 acres of this still looks now, and his horse is in the pink of condition, notwithstanding the tremendous power employed. Many people lose money on the land-clearing contracts simply because they waste so much time in blasting and cutting—an unnecessary proceeding with the Ducrest Stump Puller, although it is recommended that in the case of large stumps a few of the leaders might be cut to expedite the work; put the inventor has pulled stumps 54 inches in diameter without any cutting whatever From 2 to 55 green stumps can do hitched at one time, and two men with No. 1 outfit can pull from 200 to 800 stumps per day

The Ducrest requires only one horse and two men to operate it, because of its tremendous power; while it can be moved and reset in a few minutes.
