Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Canyon City Lumber Co. was held at the company's office here on the 3rd inst. At this meeting D. W. Briggs, of Portland Oregon, was elected president; James Cooper, of Saginaw, Mich., vice-president, and Chas. O. Rodgers, sec.-treas. A general review of the business of the year was gone over, which showed the finances of the company to be in a healthy state.

The W.C.T.U will hold its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. S. A. Speers on Wednesday, January 11th, at 3.30 p.m. A full attendance is requested.

Walter V. Jackson, who has been appointed a delegate to the annual convention of the Farmer's Institute to be held at Victoria next week, leaves for the Queen City to-day.

FRUIT GROWERS TO MEET

There will be a meeting of the Creston Fruit and Produce Association at Murphy's hall, the Creston Auditorium, on Monday next, January 9th, at 8 o'clock. A full attendance of all the members is requested, as important business will be transacted.

Business Changes Hands

The business heretofore carried on by Eugene Caserta, "The Spokane Turk" at the Creston Tailor Shop, has been taken over by Mr. Glenn Wisler, who is an experienced tailor and clothier. Mr. Wisler opened up for business on Jan. 2nd., under the style and title of The Creston Clothing House. See his display ad. in this issue.

We bespeak for Mr. Wisler a liberal public patronage.

Mr. Goodeve Talks

While passing through Creston a few days ago on his way to Rossland to spend his Christmas vacation, A. S. Goodeve, the M.P. for Kootenay, granted the Review scribe a short interview, and said in part:

"Yes, the House has adjourned for the Christmas recess from December 16 to January 10th, as a good many members wanted to spend Christmas with their relatives and friends. Mr. Goodeve stated that so far the session has been a pretty busy one. He spoke strongly in favor of the legislation on an eight-hour bill; in fact he took the ground that if the government were honest in their intention to give an eight-hour Act to the working men of the country, it should have been introduced as a Government measure, and in that way would have been assured of becoming law. He further pointed out that it was a most peculiar procedure or the member who introduced the measure granting eight-hour work to make the statement that he was ready to accept a number of amendments which had already been discussed with the Department of Labor. He stated that those amendments should have been submitted to the House at the same time as the Bill.

Another interesting feature of the session was the delegation of farmers of the Western Grain Growers' Association. This delegation wanted numerous things, and were greatly disappointed when turned down by the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Goodeve states that there is every likelihood of this being a very strenuous session. It is expected the Budget will be brought down soon after the recess, and it was reported that Mr. Fielding is greatly improved in health.

Mr. Goodeve looked exceeding well, and from present appearance he was in good fighting trim for the busy session this winter down at Ottawa.

Annual Parishioners Meeting

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the parishioners of Christ Church, Creston, will be held in the Schoolhouse on Wednesday, the 11th day of January, 1911, at eight o'clock in the evening for the purpose of passing the year's accounts, and of electing wardens, vestrymen, and auditor for the ensuing year.

A communicants meeting will be held at the conclusion of the Parishioners meeting for the purpose of electing delegates for the Synod.

Dated this 1st day of January, 1911.

PHILIP C. HAYMAN,
Convener

Province Takes Second Place

An increase of 22 per cent in the lumber cut in British Columbia, accompanied by a decrease of 7.7 per cent in the cut of Quebec has caused Quebec to drop from second place among the provinces in point of lumber production, which it has held for many years. B.C. now occupies second place, a position which, because of the rapid exploitation of the fir and cedar forests, it will probably maintain.

A Gift to be Appreciated

We learn that every public school in the Dominion will be provided with a manual of physical exercise, through the generosity of Lord Strathcona in his recent gift to Canada.

What a Contrast

Whilst 50 below zero weather is raging at Winnipeg, and 40 at Moose Jaw, and below zero weather throughout Alberta and the Crow's Nest district, Creston is enjoying spring like weather with just enough frost at night to call it winter.

A Paltry Hundred Millions

Victoria, Dec. 31.—Hon. Richard McBride states that one hundred million dollars will likely be expended in B.C. during the next four years.

The Reason Why

We go to press one day earlier this week, our only apology being found in the fact that the "Review" building and its contents are being moved the latter part of this week.

Children, Take Warning

Children should be careful about sleigh riding on the sidewalks. Constable Gunn will confiscate all sleighs used in this manner, besides leaving the owners open to prosecution.

BOARD OF TRADE HAD GOOD YEAR

PRESIDENT'S REPORT AND BALANCE SHEET SUBMITTED AT MEETING ON WEDNESDAY. ELECTION OF OFFICERS FOR ENSUING YEAR

DIPLOMAS PRESENTED TO THE WINNERS AT THE NATIONAL APPLE SHOW AT VANCOUVER.

There was a full attendance of members of the Board of Trade at the Annual Meeting in Speers' Hall on January 4th, some 30 members being present when President C. O. Rodgers took the chair at 8.30 p.m.

PRESENTING DIPLOMAS

Before proceeding with the business, the president on behalf of the board, presented Messrs. J. Heath, W. K. Brown, W. S. Watson, J. W. Dow, J. Arrowsmith, and Stocks & Jackson, with the diplomas won by these exhibitors at the National Apple Show at Vancouver, and also handed to the secretary of the Board the diplomas for the three prizes in the limited exhibit won by the Board, as being the body in whose name same was staged, complimenting these gentlemen in a neat speech on securing by their successful exhibits credit alike for themselves as growers, and for the Board of Trade exhibit and the Creston Valley. After this pleasant introduction the business commenced.

The minutes of the last meeting were passed as read. Various communications were received and answered or fyled.

Various rseolutions to be submitted to the Associated Boards Convention on January 18th, were read by the secretary. A communication from Mr. Cockle re Vancouver joint exhibit was read, and a check for $28.59, payment for the apples from Creston, at $1.75 a box, was tendered. The secretary was instructed to accept the check on account, and to request payment of the balance to make up the sum to the total at $3 per box as agreed by the original convention, and promised to the Board and to growers by the manager of the exhibit, and by the Creston delegate.

Mr. Ed. F. Johnson was nominated and elected a member of the Board, and reports of committees were received.

The president then read his report, as follows.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

"To the members of the Creston Board of Trade.

Gentlemen,—

In submitting a statement of the receipts and expenditure of the Board during the past year, I beg to call your attention to a few of the things the Board has accomplished.

A pamphlet was published of which over 3,500 copies have been distributed over the world. In fact we have had enquiries even from China, and those from the Mother Country and the United States have been numerous. A Fall Fruit Fair was taken in hand, but owing to the lack of support from the ranching community the matter had to be dropped.

The matter of poor telegraphic service was taken up, and the company at once sent a representative here, with the result that a vast improvement has been noticed.

Long distance communication by telephone has also received our attention, and we believe that it will be an accomplished fact within the near future. Show cases containing samples of fruit and vegetables were placed on the station platform, with a result that the Creston fruit exhibit was talked of from one end of the line to the other.

The Kootenay lake steamer has now orders to call at Boswell on either trip, when signalled to take up passengers and freight or discharge them, which will no doubt send some of the business this way.

Under the care of the Board, exhibits were sent to Vancouver, Spokane and Cranbrook. At the two latter places we met with wonderful success, but from the former we have not yet heard as to the results, although the matter is in course of correspondence at the present time.

The freight rate on oil from Spokane will be reduced within a very short time to 30 cents.

The rate on fruit, etc., to Calgary, which is at present $2.40, is being discussed with the Express company, and it is thought that a rate of $2.15 will be obtained.

During the year 279 letters have been received and despatched. These things are a few of what the Board has undertaken during the year. Many other matters have come before us, and much work has been done for the advancement of the district and residents.

The matter of this coming year's dues will come before you this evening, and it is possible that an increase in the membership for business men will be brought forward, to cover all calls, and a smaller subscription for the ranchers who care to join this body. To this matter you will no doubt give your earnest consideration, as much depends on having a fixed amount to work on during the coming year.

C. O. RODGERS, President.

The Balance Sheet and Auditors report was next submitted and unanimously adopted, as under:

"I have examined the vouchers and statements of the Board and find the above to be a true and correct showing of the affairs of the Board."

J. K. JOHNSON, Auditor.

The election of officers resulted in the president, C. O. Rodgers, and the secretary, P. B. Fowler, being unanimously reelected for the ensuing year, with S. A. Speers as vice-president, and the following board of directors: W. S. Watson, R. S. Bevan, R. J. Long, H. S. McCreath, Sam Hatfield and R. M. Reid.

The subscription for the ensuing year was fixed at $10, with a proviso that all members who paid a maximum annual fee of $25 were indemnified from any further calls and liabilities.

Votes of thanks to the president and secretary for their services for the past year were passed, and the meeting concluded.

As a result of the aggressive fruit exhibition campaign that has been carried on in the old country, an increased immigration is expected next summer far surpassing anything heretofore.

R. Beattie, the proprietor of the Creston Drug and Book Store, and the well-known Cranbrook druggist, paid Creston a visit a few days ago.

Geo. Prichard went East on Thursday noon train.

Frank Broderick, who went to visit his relatives and friends in Edmonton, is expected back in Creston in a few days. It is as we thought, those Dakota below winds, have proved too much for Frank.

A dance will be given in the Creston Auditorium Hall, on Saturday, Jan. 14. See next issue for full particulars.

The Boy Scouts equipment and uniforms have been ordered, and are expected to reach here in a few day.

Since the snow has arrived, Hugh McCreath has been wearing a broad smile, as now he is doing a rushing business.

Mr. A. Ahern formerly assistant bookkeeper for the Canyon City Lumber Co. left for Spokane last Saturday. We understand that Mr. Ahern contemplates taking an appointment on the staff of the New Thought society.

LORD SALISBURY.

As Goldwin Smith Saw Him in His Prime.

Something of the Saturday Reviewer was afterwards discernible in Lord Salisbury's speeches, perhaps not to his political advantage; for that which would be smart in an article may be too smart in a Minister's speech. He offended the Irish vote by a philosophic remark on the inequalities of political capacity and the imprudence of giving democratic institutions to the Hottentots. "Master of flouts and gibes and sneers," he was called by Disraeli. As the guest of Hope at Bedgebury, where we had very pleasant meetings, I was thrown much into Lord Salisbury's company, and I always felt and expressed more confidence in his judgment and rectitude than in his strength. Bismarck in his slashing way said of him that he was a reed painted to look like iron. This was exaggeration. But Lord Salisbury used to speak both in public and private of Disraeli's character and designs in terms which it might have been thought would make their union impossible. His ultimate submission to Disraeli was ascribed to the pressure of his aspiring wife. His consent to the attack on the independence of the Transvaal Republic, being the man of honor that he was and clearly committed on the question, may probably be ascribed to the dominant influence of Chamberlain.—Goldwin Smith, in the Canadian Magazine for November.

Ten Summer Commandments.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, food expert of the government, gives these 10 rules for summer:

Eat on-fourth less in summer than in winter.

Eat meat in moderation. Select the lighter meats.

Banish all alcholic beverages.

Eat most largely of cooked fruits and vegetables.

Drink nothing below 60 degrees in temperature, and drink sparingly.

Be careful to seek the society of cheerful friends.

Practice moderation in open air exercise.

Don't fret; don't worry.

After elaborating his rules, Dr. Wiley broke into verse:

Full many a man both young and old,
Has gone to his sarcophagus
By touring water, icy cold,
Adown his hot esophague.

A TROPICAL SEA AT SUNRISE.

On earth there is nothing more beautiful than the sea-foam touched by the first rays of the tropic sun. Then, and for a moment after, a breeze from some seashore of the golden age seems to fill the world with youth; a moment after, and the sun, freeing himself from the sea that seems to cling to him, rises in the blue rapidly, hurriedly, like a king hastening to ascend his throne, and the tremendous day of the tropics has begun.—The Forum.

AN ENGLISH JOCKEY'S FORTUNE

To make a fortune of a quarter of a million as a jockey is a feat which places the late Tom Loates at the pinnacle of his profession so far as mere worldly wealth is concerned. Of course, the fees in these days are much greater than when Fred Archer, who left £66,000, and Fordham, who was worth under £20,000, were in the prime of their racing careers. But then it is not every one who has a Leopold de Rothschild to advise in the matter of investments, and it is said that Tom Loates was thus particularly favored.—London Globe.

SUCKS UP THE ASHES.

An Economical Device for Use With a Boiler Plant.

One of the latest and most effectual devices for economically handling ashes in boiler plants, says the Engineering Magazine, is the suction system now in successful operation in a number of plants. A line of heavy eight-inch or ten-inch cast iron pipe extends beneath the ash pits with such inlets at each. This duct leads directly to the "receiver," an air-tight chamber of concrete or steel lined with cement mortar. Just before entering the receiver a water spray is introduced. Draught is induced by an exhauster fan, direct-connected to an electric motor or steam turbine, maintaining a partial vacuum in the receiver. On uncovering one of the suction inlets dust, ashes and clinkers are drawn swiftly through the duct and into the receiver, passing through the water spray which quenches the ashes and prevents the dust mingling with the air drawn through the fan. When the receiver is filled, it is discharged into the storage bin, or if desired, the functions of storage bin and receiver may be combined. Erosion occurs chiefly at the bends in the dust. These are provided with heavy detachable backs of chilled cast iron or manganese steel, and require replacement ordinarily at intervals of about eighteen months.

The operation of this system is very satisfactory, particularly as regards simplicity and freedom from dust in the boiler room. The suction action is quite powerful, clinkers being handled easily—even brickbats thrown into the ducts are drawn up into the receiver under the impulse of the strong induced draught. As generally installed the capacities run up to 16 or 18 tons per hour.

Catching Cobras With Hook and Line

It was our privilege a short time ago to revisit Kurnool, where we spent five years as missionaries. Almost the only old workers we saw were Jacob and his wife. I appointed Jacob as colporteur. He sells more books than any other man I know of anywhere in India. You find him everywhere, at the new railway station, in the bazaars, at the schools and bungalows of the officials, and he will not leave till he has sold some books.

Jacob is a genius. When a cobra killed some of our children's pet rabbits he said:

"I'll catch the snake with a fish-hook!"

He put a frog on the hook, tied a strong string at the other end of the hook and let the frog hop around in front of the wall in which the snake lived. Sure enough the snake swallowed the frog and the hook, and when Jacob pulled in his line, he pulled the deadly cobra out of the wall and killed it.—George N. Thomssen, Bapatla, India, in the Christian Herald.

A PRESIDENT'S SON.

President Taft had just heard of one of the innocent pranks of his young son, Charlie.

"That reminds me of a good joke I had on Roosevelt when he was President and I was Secretary of War," said Mr. Taft.

"I was walking up G street one afternoon when an anxious mother stuck her head out of a neighboring two-storey window and called shrilly to a little boy on the corner:

TOBACCO FOR PRISONERS.

(Kingston Standard.)

It does seem a great pity—both for themselves and the officers of the institutions—that the prisoners in our penitentiaries are not allowed tobacco in moderate measure. The nerves of a man accustomed to the use of tobacco must suffer through sudden deprivation, and by his consequent very irascibility and irritability he must be a harder man to handle and to discipline. Would it not, therefore, be well to allow tobacco-users a moderate amount of tobacco each week? It would make it easier all around; and if then a prisoner were still refractory he could be punished by a complete deprivation of the weed until such time as he saw the reason and the reasonableness of the thing.

WHY HE WOULDN'T SHOOT.

A deputation of three soldiers once came to the late Dr. Lueger to make some kind of a request in their behalf. The burgomaster of Vienna turned to one of the soldiers with the following inquiry: "What would you do if the Kaiser commanded you to shoot the burgomaster?"

"I would shoot him," said the soldier.

"So!" exclaimed Dr. Lueger, "and what is your religion?"

"I am a Protestant."

Dr. Lueger spoke to the second soldier.

"What would you do if the Kaiser commanded you to shoot the burgomaster?"

"Then I would shoot him," said the soldier.

"And what is your religion?"

"I am a Catholic."

The burgomaster turned to the third soldier.

"Would you have shot me if the Kaiser commanded you to do so?"

"No," said the soldier.

"And what is your religion?"

"I am a Jew," he answered.

"What!" exclaimed the burgomaster. "Do you not know that I am the greatest anti-Semite in Austria? Tell me, why would you not have shot me?"

"Because I have no rifle; I am the drummer of the regiment."—Jewish Chronicle.

HOW THE WORLD WENT ROUND.

Little Margaret had just heard from her friends in the geography class that the world was round, and that it turned once in every 24 hours. She put that information into a little corner of her brain and thought very hard about it.

That night after she went to bed she could not go to sleep. Nine o'clock came and 10 o'clock, and still she held her eyes wide awake, staring out into the dark. Then grandmother peeped in and found little Margaret still awake at half-past 10. "Why, child, what is the matter? Why aren't you asleep?"

Little Margaret finally said, "Why, grandma, I am afraid to go to sleep, because when the world turns around I am fraid I'll fall off it."

YAWNING.

A good, wide, open-mouthed yawn is a splendid thing for the whole body. A yawn is Nature's demand for rest. Some people think they only yawn because they are sleepy. But this is not so. You yawn because you are tired. You may be sleepy also, but that is not the real cause of your yawning. You are sleepy because you are tired. Whenever you feel like yawning, just yawn. Don't try to suppress it. If you are afraid of offending somebody, suppose you step out of the room. Then yawn to your heart's content. Put your hand over your mouth if you want to, but let the yawn come. And if you are where you can stretch, at the same time that you yawn, just stretch and yawn. This is Nature's way of stretching and relaxing the muscles. Don't be afraid to open your mouth wide and yawn and stretch whenever you feel like it. Indeed, if you are very tired, but do not feel like yawning, there is nothing that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight-back chair and, lifting the feet from the floor push them out in front of you as far as possible, stretch the arms, put the head back, open the mouth wide, and make yourself yawn. Those tense nerves will relax, the contracted muscles will stretch, and the whole body will be rested. Do this two or three times when you are tired, and see what it will do for you.

CHILDREN AND MONEY.

(The Christian Herald.)

My father was a minister with six children. My mother was ready to enter college with her brothers before the day of the woman's college. Now that I have children of my own I am thankful for the thoughtful training which we six children had. We each had a small allowance, and at the close of the year, if in our home-made diaries we could show a balance in our favor, the amount of money we had saved was doubled and placed to our account in the savings bank. We then became the proud possessors of a bank book. The habit of saving, with wise supervision to prevent miserliness, makes all the difference between plenty and want in later years.

MOTHER'S LITTLE TREASURE

What mother does not look upon her baby as a little treasure? What mother would not rather suffer herself than see her precious little one suffer? The well child brings joy to the home—the sick child brings misery, despair and care. But, mothers, there is no need for your baby to be cross and ailing; even during teething time. What baby needs to keep him well is an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles; destroy worms and make teething easy. Mrs. Pierre M. Cormier, New Richmond Centre, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have been of great benefit to my little one and now he sleeps well and eats well and is happy all the time." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers at 25 cents a box or direct from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WALTHAMSTOW STRIP.

Most of Walthamstow is too modern to have much mystery about it, but the "Walthamstow Strip" of Leyton preserves the memory of a curious old rule. Barely a hundred yards broad, this strip of land, belonging to Walthamstow parish, ran right across Leyton from the Lea to Snaresbrook, parallel with the southern border of Walthamstow. How came Leyton to be crossed by this alien strip? Leyton, it was said, had once refused to bury a body found in the Lea; Walthamstow came forward to do it. And in such cases it was the rule that the volunteering parish might take from the other as much land right through to the other side as the men who carried the corpse could cover walking in line, hand in hand and arms extended. The inconvenient result worried both parishes until the growth of population made new parishes necessary.—From the London Chronicle.

GOT HER 20 CENTS.

A well-dressed woman standing just inside of a pay-as-you-enter car taking fares from passengers was recently one of New York's queer scenes. On entering the car the woman dropped a 25-cent piece into the fare box by mistake. The conductor could do nothing in the matter. "Very well," said the woman, "I will get my 20 cents from the next four passengers." She explained the situation to the first man who boarded the car, took his nickel, saw that the fare was rung up and stood her ground till the change to which she was entitled was collected.

MOUNTAINS WEARING OUT.

According to Agassiz, the Laurentian Highlands Oldest Land in World.

Stretching across Canada, north of the St. Lawrence, and ending in the regions about the source of the Mississippi, runs the Laurentian range of mountains. These hills are really mountains that are almost worn out, for they are the oldest land in America, and, according to Agassiz, the oldest in the world, says the Atlantic Monthly. In the days when there was nothing but water on the face of the globe, these mountains came up—a long island of primitive rock with universal ocean chafing against its shores. None of the other continents had put in their appearance at the time America was thus looking up.

The United States began to come to light by the gradual uplifting of this land to the north and the appearance of the tops of the Alleghenies, which were the next in order. Later, the Rockies started up. The United States grew southward from Wisconsin and westward from the Blue Ridge. An early view of the country would have showed a large island which is now Northern Wisconsin, and a long, thin tongue of this primitive rock sticking down from Canada into Minnesota, and these two growing States looking out over the waters at the mere beginnings of mountain ranges east and west. They were waiting for the rest of the United States to appear.

Cat's Long Journey in a Bureau.

A tiny Maltese cat has completed a trip from Holland, Mich., a distance of 2,500 miles, in a drawer of a bureau wrapped in sacking and shipped by slow freight.

When freight hands opened the bureau the cat jumped out, and although lean and thin from its long trip without food or water was apparently as good as ever and displayed a keen appetite.—From the San Francisco Chronicle.

THE CURE AT AIX-LES-BAINS

Life at a European Health Resort Where Americans Congregate.

The douche massage, the most famous of the Aix treatments, consists of general massage, done usually by two skilled operators under a continuous flow of sulphur water at any temperature prescribed, the douche lasting about ten minutes. The effect of this treatment is really marvellous, and besides its efficacy is very soothing and agreeable to the patient. In many cases, says the Queen, the patient after being dried is wrapped in a loose bathgown and rolled up in blankets, put into a quaint looking Sedan chair and carried by uniformed porters through the streets to his or her hotel.

The sulphur waters of Aix have been found of great value in cases of eczema and other skin affections and although so strong in their effects the waters have practically no disagreeable smell or taste. As an adjunct to the cure the pleasant mineral waters of the Massonat, Deux Reines and St. Simon springs are freely prescribed by the medical authorities.

Luncheon at most hotels is at 12 o'clock, which gives a long afternoon for one of the numerous excursions for which Aix-les-Bains is such an admirable centre.

Should the weather prove unkind, ample provision is made for the entertainment of visitors at the beautiful Cercle or Club of Aix, comprising as it does in one splendid building the casino, concert hall, theatre, ball room (with a Salviati mosaic ceiling), hall for petits chevaux, reading and writing rooms and a room set apart for baccarat.

A good deal of tennis is played in the Cercle gardens, which are very prettily kept, and tennis courts are also to be found in the public gardens and at Marlioz. The evenings are passed enjoyably at the Cercle, where, in comfortable chairs, a midst of luxurious surroundings, one may listen to the best of music provided by the gifted orchestra of the Cercle. The fair sex is generally in a majority. Smart high dresses, with hats, are worn at the evening concerts, and one sees in the gay crowds some of the most wonderful creations from the ateliers of London, Paris and New York, for the Aix cure is a great favorite with our cousins across the water.

Three weeks is about the average duration of the cure, dependent naturally on circumstances, and the doctors often advise a week in the mountains after taking the baths to brace one up before returning home; but in many cases this is not found necessary.

TIME-SAVING TUNNELS.

These tunnels will be of the greatest assistance in solving the congestion and transportation problems. As an illustration of how time is saved by the opening of the new tunnels, it may be stated that on the main line on Long Island, the old running time to many points is cut down more than one-half, and to all points from one-third to one-half. Thus, the old time from New York to Jamaica, which was 44 minutes, is now cut down to 19 minutes, and to points on the main line in proportion. On the Montauk division, the time to Valley Stream, 61 minutes, is reduced to 35 minutes; Freeport, 77 minutes to 51 minutes; Babylon, 85 minutes to 60 minutes. On the Long Beach branch, the time to East Rockaway is reduced from 68 minutes to 36 minutes. On the other branches the time to Arverne, 53 minutes to 20 minutes; Far Rockaway, 60 minutes, to 37 minutes; Huntington, 74 minutes, to 57 minutes; Woodside, 31 minutes, to 9 minutes; College Point, 50 minutes, to 27 minutes; Flushing, 39 minutes, to 18 minutes.—The Christian Herald.

EARLY RISING

Father Testifies to Good Effect On His Children's Health.

Tonic of Early Morning Air—Get Lazy in Bed.

Is it harmful for children to rise with the lark, or should they do so in the interests of their health?

In The Daily Mirror of Wednesday, in the report of the public inquiry at Spring Gardens into the L. C. C. by-laws regulating the employment of children under fourteen, evidence of witnesses stating that early rising is harmful was given.

Now, at yesterday's adjourned meeting of the same inquiry, other witnesses have come forward to say that nothing is so life-giving for children as early rising.

This was the opinion of Mr. F. Leppard, a dairyman, of College Park, Lewisham.

"Children would be a great deal better in health," he said, "if they got up early," and he went on to speak of his own children. At one time they constantly required the doctor, who finally advised early rising as a cure. As a result he took them with him in his cart on his morning round.

From that time they became strong and healthy, and he believed that if it had not been for rising early they would have been dead by now. He also contended that children who got the benefit of the morning air were less liable to fever.

A newsagent bore this out. One boy who came to him and was supposed to be in the incipient stage of consumption became robust through the early rising and the exercise in the fresh air of the morning.

Another newsagent said that during forty years he had employed 200 boys, and only one had had ill-health.

The managing director of a well-known dairy company said that when he was a visiting manager under the London Council Education Department he had never heard any complaints from headmasters that boys employed in early morning work were late or dull.

Mr. Mundella, vice-chairman of the Committee on Wage-Earning Children, secretary of the National Education Association, and a member of forty-seven Council Committees, said the trouble in street trading and in early morning employment was that boys and girls were out in bad weather, fog and rain, and went out early without food, so sowing the seeds of disease.

That, it will be remembered, was the point of view taken by the doctor consulted by The Daily Mirror with regard to the evidence published on Wednesday.

Another doctor, interviewed yesterday, said: "Early rising in itself is one of the best things possible for children.

"Children who lie in bed late acquire lazy habits of body and brain. A growing child, like a growing plant, wants all the sunshine and fresh air possible, and the best way to get it is to go to bed early and get up early.

"It is the fact that they get up and work which makes sentimental people think early rising a hardship.

"If a child is well fed and well clothed outdoor work will not hurt it. And, besides, it is far more likely, when its parents are poor, to be both if it earns wages, too."

COLDS BREED CATARRH

Her Terrible Experience Shows How Peruna Should Be in Every Home to Prevent Colds.

Mrs. C. S. Sagerser.

Mrs. C. S. Sagerser, 1311 Woodland Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes:

"I feel it a duty to you and to others that may be afflicted like myself, to speak for Peruna.

"My trouble first came after la grippe eight or nine years ago, a gathering in my head and neuralgia. I suffered most all the time. My nose, ears and eyes were badly affected for the last two years. I think from your description of internal catarrh that I must have had that also. I suffered very severely.

"Nothing ever relieved me like Peruna. It keeps me from taking cold.

"With the exception of some deafness I am feeling perfectly cured. I am forty-six years old.

"I feel that words are inadequate to express my praise for Peruna."

Catarrh in Bad Form.

Mrs. Jennie Darling, R. F. D. 1, Smyrna Mills, Maine, writes: "I was unable to do my work for four years, as I had catarrh in a bad form. I coughed incessantly, and got so weak and was confined to my bed.

"Peruna came to my relief and by faithfully using it, I am able to do my work. Peruna is the best medicine that I ever took."

Sweets for Children.

They are good.

And they are bad.

That means use discretion.

They should not be given between meals.

Sucking at candy is a simply murderous indulgence.

A bonbon given at dessert harms no healthy child.

A sweet fruit makes a delicious part of the breakfast.

Milk or cream, but not much sugar, is given with the breakfast cereal.

Honey on bread is a delicious item for breakfast, supper, dinner dessert, or, if necessary, a half-way-between-meals treat.

However, if chidlren are healthy and have good, regular meals, they should need little except water between meals.

Long Lost Wedding Ring Recovered.

Mrs. Ruby Hayes again is in possession of her wedding ring, which she lost 25 years ago.

Immediately after her marriage she lost the ring, which was recovered five years later, only to be lost a second time within a short time. Yesterday her husband was repairing the trough in his yard, and digging up a spadeful of dirt he saw a shining article, which he found was the wedding ring.—Beverly correspondence Philadelphia Record.

RECIPES

Chocolate Mousse—Set a bowl containing a quart of cream within a larger one holding fine cracked ice and whip to a light froth. Scrape fine one ounce of chocolate and cook in a small saucepan over the fire with three tablespoonfuls of sugar and one of boiling water until smooth and glossy. Add a scant cup of sugar and the whipped cream, stir gently until all the ingredients are well mixed and then turn into a three-quart mold, which should be packed in ice and salt. Throw a piece of carpet over the tub and set in a cool place for three or four hours. It must not be stirred until ready to take up, else the soft mossy ("mousse") appearance will be destroyed. This will make enough to serve 12 persons. Serve in dainty cups of china and glass. If flavoring is desired a mixture of vanilla and cinnamon is considered best. This is the flavoring the Mexicans always use with their preparations of chocolate.

Cranberry Marmalade—Wash three quarts of cranberries, barely cover with water and cook until the berries are tender. Press through a sieve and add to this juice and pulp six pounds of warm sugar, two pounds of seeded and chopped raisins and four large, very clean oranges. The oranges should be minced fine, thus using skin and pulp, but the seeds should be picked out. Cook until thick and turn into glass jars. The orange skins must be cooked until thoroughly tender.

Fried Chicken—Chicken may be the piece de resistance. Procure young, plump broilers. Cut into pieces, wash and leave them in salt water while a half pound of fat salt pork is cooked in a spider until the grease is all fried out. Remove the pork crisps, wipe the chicken dry with a soft cloth, sprinkle with pepper, roll in flour and fry slowly in the pork until a delicate brown.

An older fowl needs parboiling or steaming before frying.

Cream of Wheat with Bananas—When a quart of cream of wheat is ready to serve quickly, chop five bananas, sweeten with a little confectioner's sugar, add a teaspoon of lemon juice and pass through a sieve. Serve this with the wheat, with or without cream.

Baked Hamburg with Bacon—Put two or three slices of bacon in a baking dish. Put over this chopped raw meat, season with suet, pepper and mustard, with a little onion juice; add a little more bacon on top. Bake in a moderate oven an hour. Then brown one tablespoonful of flour, and the juice of a lemon and one tablespoonful of currant jelly. Pour this around the meat and bake ten minutes longer.

Apple Omelet—Stew six large apples. Beat very smooth while hot, adding one tablespoonful of buter, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, a grating of nutmeg and one-half teaspoonful of rose extract. When entirely cold add four eggs, beaten very light, whites and yokes separately. First add the yolks, then the whites, and put in a deep dish, which has been warmed and buttered. Bake in a moderate oven to a delicate brown.

Sweet Potato and Oyster Croquettes—To two cupfuls of cold mashed sweet potatoes add one cupful of oysters which have been cut in pieces and one cupful of sweet milk. Stir in two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. Form into balls, roll in beaten egg, then in crumbs, and fry in deep fat.

Creamed Oysters and Fish—One cup white sauce, two cups cold flaked fish, one large cup of oysters. Butter a baking dish, put in layers of fish and oysters (season with salt and pepper), then white sauce. Cover with cracker or bread crumbs and bake until a rich brown.

Apple-Orange Marmalade—One-half peck of apples cut in small pieces without peeling. Barely cover with water and cook until soft. Peel just the yellow rind from three oranges, then remove the white part and put the yellow peel and oranges through the grinder. Add this to the strained apple juice and measure before boiling. Boil 30 minutes and add same quantity of sugar as measured liquid and boil hard for five minutes or until it drops thick from a spoon. This wil make about twenty glasses.

EFFECT OF COMET.

Government Report Says Wanderer Left Cosmical Dust Behind.

As soon as it was certain that Halley's comet would pass between the earth and the sun, and the earth itself pass through the tail or close to it, extensive preparations were made by the government for observing any phenomena that might result. The results of these observations are included in a report by W. J. Humphreys of the Hydrographic office. In his report he says:

Astronomical observatories, some occupied only this particular purpose watched for the transit across the sun, while magnetic observatories secured special records. In addition to this, Professor Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau, sent a circular letter to some 200 meteorological stations in the United States and the West Indies, asking that special observations be taken of auroral displays, meteoric trails, Bishop's ring, color of the sun and sky, twilight phenomena, luminous clouds, zodiacal light, gegenschein, solar and lunar halos, and coronas, "and all other appearances that may seem unusual and worth noting."

The results, so far as reported, are as follows:

1. Moderate magnetic disturbances and rather feeble auroras, were observed, but it seems probable that they were connected witht a large sun spot that appeared about the same time, rather than the comet.

2. No trace of the nucleus was seen against the sun during its transit. There is, then in the head or nucleus of this comet no large opaque single mass, but beyond this, transit observations told little.

3. About 10 per cent. of the meteorological stations in the United States reported solar halos, coronas, parhelia, or other marked optical phenomena. Similar appearances were also seen in some parts of Europe. In several cases the rings and the twilight phenomena closely resembled those seen after the eruptions of Kragato and Mont Pele.

"The most that we can say," the report adds, "is that the comet's tail left a perceptible amount of cosmical dust in the earth's atmosphere."

Scratched Until I Tore The Flesh

"It was in the latter end of the year 1908 that a nasty itch came through my skin, and I scratched it until I tore the flesh. I tried several ointments to no effect. I went to a skin hospital. They advised me to go to the ——— Hospital, but I refused. I could not sleep with the constant itch. I was that way until on or about the month of January. One day I chanced to see in the papers a case like mine, but I gave it no credence. At last I said, 'I will try the Cuticura Remedies.' With the first wash and Cuticura Ointment I used, I found their effects. I got one box of the Ointment more, and in less than one week the skin was all right, and left no traces after it. I have not had a return of the same since, and I shall always praise the Cuticura Remedies as being the means of my cure."

(Signed) JOHN TYRRELL,
94, Scotland Road, Liverpool.

In a further letter Mr. Tyrrell adds: "The first appearance of my skin eczema was a burning itch which I tore and left my body, legs and arms one mass of sores. It caused sleepless nights, but now I can sleep as well as ever."

FIRE.

(Montreal Star).

When you go to bed at night,
And you've scarce put out the light,
So it seems,
There's a clang that breaks the hush,
There's a flurish; there's a rush
In your dreams.
Through the window there's a glow,
People running to and fro!
Ever nigher
Grows the din and flows the smoke
And you whisper as you choke:
"There's a fire!"
When you settle down to work
(Knowing well you mustn't shirk
Even though
You are sleepy and you're tired,
For you'll jolly well be fired
If you go),
Then there comes the office boy,
On his face a fearful joy,
And he's spryer
As he tells you with a grin:
(Knowing well the funk you're in):
"There's a fire!"

When you seat yourself at tea,
And the business cares you flee,
Seeking rest;
When you notice not Time's flight,
While you sup and while you bite,
Then—I'm blest!
If the fire reels don't go by,
And the clangor and the cry
Rises higher,
Then the faces all look blank,
Served and servers loses their rank,
There's a fire!
Moral: If a fearful fate you'd flee,
Be a mermaid in the sea!

A girl of 20 is ever so much older than a boy of the same age." "Sure. I know a girl of 20 whose family Bible shows that she was born in 1880."—Cleveland Leader.

TREE GROWING.

Forestry Branch Will Give Advice and Seed.

Why not grow your own maple and ash trees for yourself, if you want to make forest plantations, or even to plant shade trees? Anyone who has had any experience in gardening can do this without difficulty and the trees, when they come to be planted, will not have to meet the risk of a long journey by railway and possible delays which may injure, or even kill them. The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior will gladly give advice in the matter, and even send the seed free, as long as their supply holds out.

This recommendation is made in the annual report of the Superintendent of Forestry, which forms part of the annual report of the Department of the Interior, lately issued.

One caution must, however, be given. The seed used should always, if possible, be that taken from trees grown in the Canadian Northwest. Seed obtained from the eastern provinces of the Dominion, or even from the prairie states, cannot be depended on to produce good, hardy trees.

A recent experience of the Forestry Branch gives good evidence of this. In 1906 the crop of Manitoba maple seed was a failure throughout the Canadian prairie provinces. The supply of seed for sowing the following spring had to be obtained from Dakota, and this was duly sown in the spring of 1907.

Trees which sprang from this seed were sent out in the spring of 1908, and many reports have been subsequently received of these having been badly "winter-killed." In some cases the entire tree, roots and top, was killed during the severe weather; sometimes only the tops were killed.

Usually the Manitoba maple has been found a hardy tree in almost every part of the West, that so many have died in this case is doubtless due to the fact that the seed from which they originated was obtained from regions farther south. Some years ago the Branch had a similar, though not so disastrous, experience with elm seed obtained in the east. Sometimes, of course, when the supply of western seed fails, seed from the east must be used even with the accompanying risk of failure.

The work of the Branch in the free distribution of trees continues to develop. The number of trees sent out from the Indian Head nursery has for several years remained practically stationary at about two and a half million annually. The capacity of the nursery has been almost, if not quite, reached, and if trees are to be distributed in greater numbers either the present nursery must be enlarged or new ones will have to be established.

The number of applicants for trees has considerably increased, namely, from 2,010 in 1909 to 3,173, in 1910 (nearly 60 per cent.) At the same time the average number of trees to each applicant has had to be cut down; in 1908 the average number of trees sent to each was 1,400, but in 1910 only 800 could be sent to each applicant. In 1909 the number of new applications received was 2,235; in 1910 the number of these was 3,832.

Many other interesting facts regarding this and other aspects of the forestry work of the Dominion Forest Service are given in the report mentioned. Copies may be had free of charge on application to R. H. Campbell, Superinten-

BIBLE AND ALMANAC.

Revised Version of the Story of the Symbolic Pack of Cards.

A private soldier named Richard Lee was taken before the Magistrate at Glasgow, Scotland, for playing cards during divine service. A sergeant commanded the soldiers at the church, and when the parson had read the prayers he took the text. Those who had Bibles took them out, but this particular soldier had neither Bible nor prayer book, but pulled out a pack of cards and spread them before him. Seeing this, the sergeant told him to put up the cards, as a place of worship was no place for them. The remark attracted the attention of the constable, and as Richard Lee did not put up the cards when told to do so he was taken before the beak.

"What is the charge?" asked the magistrate.

"Playing cards in church."

"Can you offer any excuse for your conduct?" demanded the magistrate. "What have you to say for yourself?"

"I have been," answered the soldier, "about six weeks on the march, and having neither Bible nor Common Prayer Book have been amusing myself with tracing some resemblance in a pack of cards, and have found in them an almanac also."

"Indeed!" explained the magistrate. "Explain yourself."

Spreading out the cards before him, the soldier began:

"When I see the ace it reminds me that there is but one God. The deuce reminds me of the Father and the Son. The trey recalls Father, Son and Holy Ghost. When I see the four it reminds me of the four evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. When I see the five it reminds me of the wise virgins that trimmed their lamps. There were ten in all, but the five foolish ones were shut out, leaving only the five. When I see the six it recalls the six days in which were made heaven and earth, and the seven reminds me of the seventh day on which God rested from His work and hallowed it. When I see the eight it reminds me of the eight righteous persons who were saved when God destroyed the world, Noah and his wife, his three sons and their wives. The nine reminds me of the nine lepers that were cleansed by our Saviour, there being nine out of ten that never returned thanks. When I see the ten it reminds me of the Ten Commandments which God handed down to Moses on tables of stone. When I see the king it reminds me of King Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived. The queen reminds me of the Queen of Sheba, who visited him, and who brought with her fifty boys and fifty girls all dressed as boys, to see if King Solomon could tell which were which. Solomon sent for water for them to wash with after their journey, and the girls washed to the elbows, the boys to the wrists, so that was easy."

"Very good indeed for the Bible," remarked the magistrate. "What resemblance have you traced to the almanac?"

"The four suits are the four seasons. The thirteen cards in each suit are the weeks in a quarter. The fifty-two cards in the pack are the weeks in a year. The twelve picture cards are the twelve months, and the total number of pips on the cards in the pack are 365, which is the number of days in a year."

"Very good," observed the magistrate. "I perceive that there is one card you have overlooked, and that is the knave. Of whom or what does that remind you?"

"At present of the constable that brought me here," was the prompt reply, and the prisoner was immediately discharged.

Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

THE SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

Figures do not lie, and those gathered tell of an infant mortality that is as astonishing as it is shocking. Statistics issued by the New York Milk Commission show that there are in the Island of Manhattan alone 12,5000 babies whose mothers, either because of hunger, weakness, employment or some other equally distressing reason, are unable to nurse them. Those babies need help. They are sickly, feeble and delicate. Of the 123,433 babies born in New York in 1909, one-eighth died under twelve months. This slaughter of the innocents reaches fearful proportions during the hot summer months, when, at times, the death harvest is 3,000 per month. These were the figures of July, 1908.

In addition to the heat, ignorance, poverty and adulterated food contribute to the general distress. Immigrant mothers born and raised in the provinces of sunny Italy, or spacious Russia, are at a loss when huddled together in crowded tenements where, in accordance with discoveries made at the recent census, as many as 350 persons live in one house.

The report of the Tenement House Department for the quarter ending June 30 last year, states that there are in Manhattan 118,211 living-rooms in tenement houses without adequate light, and 36,825 without windows. It is not wise to juggle with figures, but from what is known of congestion in New York an average of three children for each dark room would be a conservative estimate. This would force the conclusion that there are to-day 485,108 children deprived of air and light in the largest and richest city in America. Adulterated food is another factor which has to be considered.—Hyman Strunsky, in The Christian Herald.

From a bachelor's point of view, when a baby isn't crying there must be something the matter with it.

EXPRESS COMPANIES MUST TRIM RATES

Whilst the Creston Board of Trade have been taking up the question of rates with the Express Co., from the local view point and with regard to fruit rates from Creston only, various business organizations throughout the country have been agitating sucessfully for an inquiry into Express rates in general. As the result of investigation, the Express companies have been considerably shaken up. Among the allegations made were statements that these transport companies were in the habit of padding their expenses, thus reducing the profits artificially, and enabling them to argue these apparent small returns on their watered capital, as an excuse for the extortionate rates.

As the result of investigation, the Railway Commission has ruled that Express rates are too high throughout the Dominion, and the companies have been given one month to fyle fresh reduced rate schedules for the approval of the Commission.

The news of this energetic action by the Commission will be greeted with a chorus of approval by the burdened fruit growers of the Creston Valley. The Growers Association, Farmers Institute and Board of Trade should take the necessary steps by means of suitable resolutions, to express their approval of such action, and press upon the Commissioners the necessity of particularly scrutinizing those sections of the new tariff relating to the rates between B. C. and the Prairie points, with a view to the Canadian Companies being compelled to assist the growers of British Columbia and the consumers of Canada, from whom they receive their charters, by quoting to all points. rates at least as favorable as those granted by American Roads to our competitors in the U.S.

The Canadian markets belong, by every right, to the Canadian growers, and the Canadian Express Companies must be called upon to do their share towards helping the growers to get and to hold them.

OUR MOVING DAY

The House Mover is getting in his fell work,—it being "Moving Day," at the Review office. Before our next issue is out, we shall, all well, be safely housed on the lot near to the Drug Store, where—when the offices and front have been added to the building—Creston will possess a newspaper office worthy of the town.

The Creston Review, in spite of the breakdowns incident to all machine productions, has always appeared on time, and we hope our patrons will not be too hard on us—who are but mortal, and printers at that—if we are late next issue, owing to any unexpected hitch in the moving.

In the meantime, from breakdowns, snags and jumps, all misadventures stumps and bumps, good Lord deliver us!

THAT SCOTT ACT

Discussing the question of the Scott Act, at present a live issue in Saskatoon, the "Pioneer" of that city says: We have not much confidence in the value of local option as a means of checking the evils of the drink traffic. We are inclined to think, with reference to this, as with some other evils of the day, that what is wanted is more character and less law; more good ethics, and less personal interference.

Facts about Creston, B. C.

Location

ON the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, where the line leaves the enclosing mountains and comes out into the broad fertile valley of the Lower Kootenay.

Area

BETWEEN 30 and 40 thousand acres of bench Fruit Lands, the best in British Columbia for growing Apples, Pears, Plums, Cherries, etc. In addition to the above are the broad, flat-bottom hay meadow lands of the Kootenay Valley, consisting of 35,000 acres—the largest continuous area of good fruit lands in the Interior of B.C.

Soil and Climate

UNEXCELLED Not in the Dry Belt. Owing to the large bodies of water in the vicinity the annual precipitation is large, the average being 29 inches. Summer frosts absolutely unknown, owing to the excellent air drainage through the valley. Produces the highest quality of fruit and vegetable products, as is evidenced by the 9 special prizes out of 14 exhibits taken by Creston fruit at the Spokane Apple Show, 1908, in competition with the principal Apple Growing Districts of the U.S.A. an also a "clean sweep" of first prizes at the Garden Produce and Fruit Show, Cranbrook, 1909

Shipping Facilities

CRESTON is 6 hours nearer the market than any other fruit-growing district in South-East Kootenay, and products can be placed on the markets in the Coal and Wheat Fields of the Canadian North-West without transhipment. Strawberries shipped at noon arrive at coal towns and parts of prairie country the same day.

Social Advantages

THREE Schools, four Churches, four Fraternal Lodges, good Hotels, first-class Stores, up-to-date Telephone System with lines all over the district, Chartered Bank, four Saw Mills, Town Waterworks.

BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

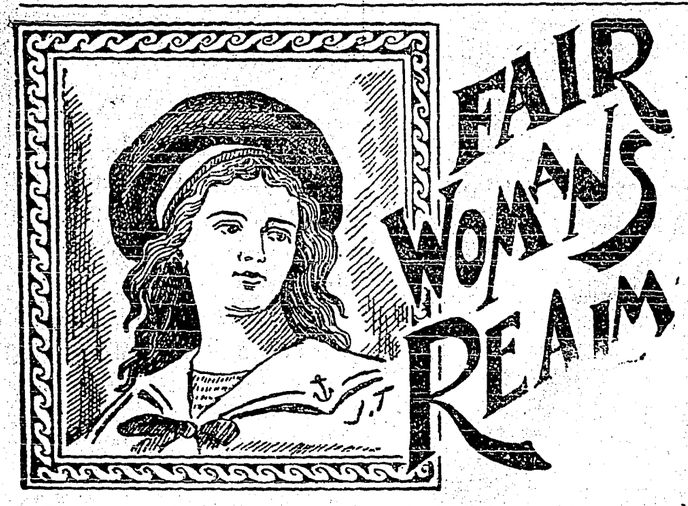
CHARLES MOORE, Applicant
G. A. M. YOUNG, Agent.



The gown entire, or the one-piece gown, as it is generally known—in reality quite as often two pieces—is all-important in this winter's wardrobe. Later on it will be worn under the fur coat. At the moment, unless the ray be unseasonably cool, the gown is worn without any undergarment, and consequently is finished in accordance with that idea.

The simple little frock, for that is another name given it, requires to be most carefully made, for its very simplicity makes every fault visible, and there is singularly little trimming that is considered correct with its simplicity and which can be relied upon to cover up defects—there are folds and scant flounces, but these, as well as the cut and fit of the gown itself, are expected to be perfection. All of which seems quite discouraging at first, but the fashions of this season are all alike in one particular, that when once understood they are easily carried out, and that exaggeration of any model is never smart—probably because the fashions are in themselves so exaggerated.

There is no fixed rule as to materials of which these gowns are made; cloth, cashmere, satin, and the finer weaves of serge are all in style, and, later, just a little later, velvet and velveteen of the softest weave will be used. The rough materials are not smart for this purpose—they are too thick and heavy to be comfortable to wear when houses are heated, and are, besides, difficult to make up becomingly in any style when there is a question of fitting at all tight. The smooth cloths and the cashmeres are charming and most suitable, and there is an apparently endless choice to be had in color and weight. If warmth is desired a waist can be worn under the gown, for ones of the favorite designs is in reality a sort of coat cut out at the neck, with rather short sleeves, or guimpe and undersleeves can be worn, or, as has been said, a waist if the aditional warmth be required.

Shirt Skirts Popular.

While the effect is that of a gown made in one piece, there are quite as many, if not more, that have skirts and waists separate, and the belt, which is one of the noticeable points of this season's fashions, can equally well finish off the waist or be merely an addition to the one-piece gown. Just a little higher than the normal waist line is the favorite style, but there are many waists with rather a long waisted effect in front, more on the order of the fashionable line of three or four seasons past, while the line from the shoulder to bust is much longer than last year. A sense of proportion is one of the great factors in successful dressmaking. With the waist line abnormally high the line from the shoulder to bust must be shorter than where the waist line is lowered. The successful dressmaker understands this and modifies or exaggerates for each and every individual customer, and then serenely receives compliments upon her skill—compliments bestowed upon the general effect without the slightest realization of the thought and time bestowed to secure the result.

Again must it be repeated that the skirts are made short. In this particular case, a gown to be worn in the street, the short skirt is to be advocated as a sensible fashion; the same gown is, however, also worn indoors, and then the short skirt is not nearly so attractive, for somehow in the house a woman looks far better with a trailing skirt than with the best cut short gown ever designed. But Fashion still decrees short skirts, and so she is obeyed. It may be that we are becoming more accustomed to the straight, narrow skirt and the waist of fulness in front, for certainly the most critical of individuals would admit the smart appearance of these same gowns finished around the hem with a bias fold of the same material, or better, with a fold of velvet, and with the straight flat panel down the front. Two bias scant flounces, each headed with a band of the material, is another style that is popular and sometimes more becoming, while the too severe and scant effect at the back is modified with a scant box pleat of the same material as the gown or with the fold of velvet. Velvet used as trimming is always effective and it will be extensively fashionable this winter, used as has been described, or combined with cloth, just as cloth has been combined with voile de soie. It looks equally well with cloth or with satin, but the latter material has been so fashionable all summer that the cloth or cashmere is really smarter.

The Fashionable Colors.

Gray is a fashionable color at the moment, and for these simple gowns there is nothing more attractive or more generally becoming. Not the dark stone gray, but a much lighter, silver gray shade. This can be made with velvet of the same shade or the sharp contrast of black velvet can be used, or all one material will work out well. Brown is also fashionable, a tobacco brown, but brown is a dangerous color to recommend too generally. If the shade is not just right or if it is unbecoming no matter how well the gown is made it will not be satisfactory. The lighter shades are safer; and tan shades combined with dark brown velvet are very smart. A certain shade of mole gray is very smart this winter and combined with either moleskin or sealskin is remarkably becoming, the gray of the moleskin and the brown of the sealskin each blending well with the shade of gray. A touch of deep crimson, green, blue or yellow is the color contrast introduced, and the most becoming of the three should be chosen. Black velvet with this shade of gray is not successful; it is one of the few colors that cannot be combined with black satisfactorily, and even the added touch of color does not solve the difficulty Blue, the royal blue, as it is called, has been so fashionable these many months it was not expected its popularity would continue through the winter, but there are many exceedingly attractive blue cloth gowns to be seen, combined with black as a general rule or trimmed with darker blue velvet if velvet is chosen for the trimming.

Once again is that most useful fashion the all black gown before the public, and there are few women who can resist its charm. A smart all black gown is so extremely smart, rarely if ever unbecoming and capable of so mnay variations, and is suitable for so many different occasions. And the black materials this winter are so varied in texture and so beautiful in finish it is difficult at first glance to discern whether the satin finished cloth is cloth or satin, and it hangs in such soft, graceful lines and can so easily be made to fit the figure. In itself it needs little or no trimming, but it looks well made up with velvet or with satin of the combining with another material is desired. Cashmere de soie, one of the fashionable fabrics of the season, while charmingly effective in the new shades of color, is most satisfactory in black. To wear under a fur coat in midwinter the simple black gown is bound to be most popular, and it is safe to assert every woman will include one in the outfit she is now planning.

Crepon Again in Favor.

Crepon, so fashionable years ago, is among the new materials now receiving marked attention. The so-called silk crepon is not, as might be supposed, a light weight crepe, but looks and feels like a silk finished cloth, often with a line in it. It is quite lustrous and has almost a satin sheen and some warmth. It is a most effective material and for the one piece simple gown is delightful, while to wear with a velvet or fur coat is is more practical than anything. A dark blue, trimmed with black silk braid and with a blue velvet coat, a shade deeper in color, is a most popular model. There are lighter weights of crepon more like heavy silk crepe that are used for tea gowns and house gowns of all descriptions but are not heavy enough for street wear. Among them are many with the changeable effects, a pinkish mauve shading into green being a great favorite and extremely new. The material does not require much trimming, deserves its popularity, but at the same time in the lighter weight is only practical for the house during the winter season.

A. T. Ashmore.

ELABORATE LACE COLLAR.

For the dressier frocks of light weight cloth or silk these smart little yokes are particularly appropriate. This one is a combination of wide Val. and narrow cluny insertion and wide Val. lace. The yoke is edged with the ever-present frill, and the extended jabot covers the left side fastening of the dress.

WHAT CHICAGO WOMEN WEAR; AFTERNOON GOWNS OF AUTUMN.

(Jane English, in Chicago Tribune.)

The recent club and art receptions and other large public affairs which have characterized the social calendars have given the first glimpse of the afternoon gowns of the autumn. At the opening of the annual American oil and sculpture, for instance, the society women who went as assistants for the afternoon were most handsomely gowned.

Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, but recently returned from Europe, wore a stunning costume of a crepelike silk in one of the new blues, which had a good sized white dot running through it as a design. The skirt was made with a deep flounce at the knees and was simple in detail, but the bodice was elaborate. The upper half of the bodice was of beautiful cream lace, the lower of the silk. The sleeves reached the elbow and were of the lace finished with a band of the silk. Across the shoulders and on down to the end of the sleeves ran a broad black velvet ribbon. The black velvet ribbon was used in the front; the side bands ran from the waist line over the shoulder and on down to the waist in the back. This crossing of the velvet bands made a square yoke effect of the lace of the upper bodice.

Over all of this was the season's inevitable "coat" of tissue. In this instance it was black chiffon, which opened wide around the arms and, falling well down over the skirt, was outlined in the black velvet ribbon. A big blue velvet turban with a brim slightly turned all the way around had a Madame Sherry crown of black chiffon, and was trimmed in black plumes.

Walking Frock of Cream Material.

Mrs. J. T. Harahan wore a walking frock of cream material which was similar to the old silk bolting cloth of mill days. The lower skirt just escaped the floor and was finished with two deep tucks. A long Russian skirt came within ten inches or so of the bottom and was finished with a twelve inch band of embroidery in Alice blue done on the cloth of the dress. A plain waist with Dutch neck was almost solid back and front with the blue embroidery, and the elbow sleeves also were embroidered in the blue, The frock was made into one piece by means of a narrow shirred belt. The hat worn with this costume was large and of black satin with a binding of black velvet. At the side it was trimmed with an immense cluster of tan cross aigrettes.

Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor made her first appearance at a large public affair since returning from Europe also on that afternoon. She wore a black satin gown, the skirt of such tightness that it fitted over the hips without a wrinkle, and caught at the ankles still more narrowly. Down the back ran a deep box plait trimmed with a fine soutache braid at either edge. The bodice was one of the new slip-off-the-shoulder-without-seam affairs, the lower half of the satin, the upper and sleeves of chiffon tucked and built over blue. A round yoke of white lace finished the costume.

Mrs. David Wegg's costume was of black satin with a surplice bodice front opening over white lace and bordered with black Chantilly caught down with jet. The lower sleeves also were of the white lace.

Mrs. Burton Hanson wore a foulard of lavender with a little crinkly line of lilac running through it. There was a round yoke of white lace piped with lilac velvet, and down either side were used wide bands of lilac embroidery. Similar bands formed a front panel—rather bordered a panel of the silk—and just below either knee there was a fanlike insert of the silk.

Design of Silver and Old Rose.

Mrs. Martin Ryerson wore a remarkable gown of Alice blue satin with an embroidered design of silver and old rose in large pattern. This embroidered satin was used to the knees, where it joined a deep band of plain satin of the same color as the background of the upper satin. Over the upper portion of the skirt fell a full drape of Alice blue chiffon, the fullness gathered into a large cord at the bottom, the sides running to a point over the plain satin. The bodice was of the embroidered satin veiled in chiffon, over a square yoke of cream lace in the back and a long lace point in front. The upper sleeve carried out the satin and chiffon design, the lower was of lace. A draped toque of brown velvet with a large flat owl's eye and feathers at the side was worn with the gown.

Still another wonderful costume was worn by Mrs. William R. Linn. This had a narrow undergown—or skirt—of black velvet on a yoke of Persian silk, in which silver, gold and scarlet played a color part against a background of black. Over this was draped a tunic of blue chiffon, which opened in front. The bodice was an intricate mixture of the different materials of the gown. The lace formed a round yoke in front and a V in the back, the throat cut out as if for a semi-evening gown. Over this was worn a collar and yoke of fine tulle bound with white satin, the lower portion forming a flare over the lace.

Down the right back of the bodice was a surplice effect of the black velvet bordered with silver lace and a deep girdle of the silver lace, black velvet and Persian silk completed the costume. A small black velvet hat with narrow turned down brim had for its trimming a wreath of large, white velvet flowers.

This round front yoke and pointed back is one of the popular fads of the year. At an affair given a fortnight ago Miss Cecille Murphy appeared in a gown of peacock blue satin, over which fell a tissue drape of peacock green, reaching the knees. The gown is for the evening, and was cut round in front and a low V in the back. A big black plumed hat completed this stunning outfit.

Attractive Gown of Dotted Mull.

Mrs. Josiah McRoberts is wearing an attractive white mull with big black dots in it, which is made with a deep knee flounce of black chiffon over the mull. A band of the chiffon passes around the full bodice also.

Mrs. J. Arnold Scudder is wearing a rose costume, the bodice almost entirely of rose lace, and with it a big black hat encircled with a tan plume. Miss May Allport wears a white satin gown covered with a black spangled tunic, and with it a big black hat turned at one side and trimmed with coque feathers. Mrs. Harry Gordon Selfridge has appeared in a gown of smoke gray crepe over which falls full panels of chiffon of the same color shirred into points at the bottom and finished with gray bead embroidery and tassels. At the waist there is a suggestion of rose velvet, and this, too, is carried out in the bodice, which rounds over a yoke of gold lace.

And two more Chicago women fresh from Europe with wonderful gowns were Mrs. Frank G. Logan and her daughter Mrs. Charles Munroe. Mrs. Logan wore pink chiffon over white, the skirt made with shirred yoke and draped or caught up with bands of pink satin. The chiffon overgown opened down the front of the skirt, only to be caught together again with heavy pink embroidery, which resembled big silk dots fastened together. The same embroidery decorated the sleeves and bodice. Mrs. Munroe's gown was of golden brown chiffon heavily embroidered in chenille of the same color. The skirt was finished with an overskirt which was short in front and swept to good length in the back. Down the left side of the bodice fell a cascade of white Chantilly lace, and there was a gold fishnet yoke, shallow. A full coat of brown chiffon was outlined with marabout.

FREAKISH MILLINERY OF TO-DAY.

The millinery of the moment can only be described as freakish, for surely never before was the head of woman covered with such incongruities.

Not content with stimulating the appearance of mushrooms, sugar loaves, and variegated birds' nests, the latest hat is the aeroplane, with large outstanding wings adorning the back of the hat, and set at the jauntiest angle imaginable.

The reign of the winged hat, soberly and decorously adorned with wings covering the crown and part of the brim, is apparently over, for the wings must be made freakish to look smart, so following on the aeroplane hat we have the hat which can only be described as a winged Mercury, with two seductive looking wings planted at the back of the crown of a large black hat, shaped exactly like the wings which adorn the ankles of the famous Mercury statue.

There is no accounting for taste, for even if a woman knows she does not look well in a hat pulled down over her eyes until half her face is hidden, that hat she will wear because it is the fashion.

One of the most startling millinery freaks seen was a blue velvet toque which can best be described as a bedizened sugar loaf.

The cone part of this sugar loaf toque was of wedgwood blue velvet, while a deep band of steel embroidered lace formed the lower part, and hanging from this was a tiny fringe of steel beads which would adorn the forehead Gainsborough wise. The toque, it should be added, completely covered all signs of hair and hid the wearer's left eye entirely.

Other toques of the moment have crowns ascending skywards. So high and so full are these velvet crowns rising from a band of bizarre embroidery that they give a top-heavy appearance to the unfortunate wearer.

VEST POCKET EDITION OF PERFECT WOMAN LOOKS LIKE A REAL BOY ON THE STAGE.

KATHLEEN CLIFFORD.

New York.—Who ever heard of a person being seven-eighths of a woman?

Yet Kathleen Clifford is seven-eighths of a perfectly formed woman.

She is one of the hits of the present vaudeville season in her "boy impersonations," but so adroitly does she play the part that her audiences would find it difficult to believe that beneath her gay and fashionable made attire there is hidden a veritable vest pocket edition of a perfectly formed woman.

Prof. Sargent and Miss Anna Wood, who recently measured 2,000 American college girls, in their effort to find the average of feminine physical perfection, gave a standard weherby Miss Clifford was measured. Here is the tabulation:

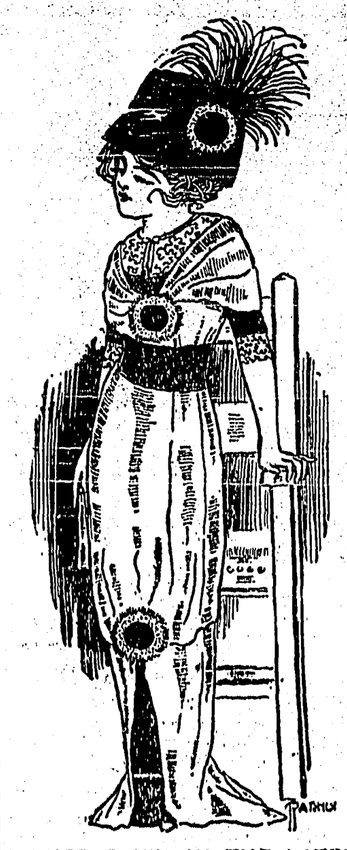
	Perfect Woman.	Miss Clifford.
Height	63.0 inches	58.0 inches
Neck	12.1 inches	10.9 inches
Waist	24.5 inches	20.0 inches
Hips	35.4 inches	31.7 inches
Calf	13.3 inches	12.0 inches
Upper arm ..	10.1 inches	8.0 inches
Thigh	21.4 inches	17.5 inches
Forearm	9.2 inches	7.7 inches

TWO HOMEMADE GIFTS.

A slipper case and a sewing bag are delightful holiday gifts, which are easily made and very useful to the receiver. They may be made from any stray pieces of bright-colored silk, linen, chintz, satin, denim, or, in fact, any material of that kind; or, if desired, the slipper case may be developed in pink, flowered cretonne bound with dark green braid.

The loosely gathered sewing bag has an outside flap, which contains the needle book, and a pretty fancy is to embroider the owner's initials on the outside of the flap. Fancy brass rings are sewed on the upper edge, through which is run the ribbon which regulates the fulness about the top, and is used to hang it up by.

The slipper case, which is divided into compartments and stiffened by means of cardboard interlining, requires seven-eighths yard of material 22 inches wide, or five-eighths yard 36 inches wide; either with 2 3-4 yards of tape to bind and two hangers. The sewing bag needs 1 1-2 yards 22 or more inches wide, with 2 1-2 yards of braid and seven rings.



DINNER GOWN IN THE LATEST MODE.

A smart dinner gown is this, fashioned of broadcloth and trimmed with velvet—just enough of the latter to produdce a stunning effect. It's a creation mademoiselle or madam may wear with equal grace, provided one isn't too stout.

FASHION NOTES FROM PARIS SHOPS.

Velvet bags are in demand.

Velvet effects continue good style.

Opera bags are being shown in moire.

Walking dreses are three inches from the floor.

It is the season of furs, velvets and plushes galore.

Tailored costumes, velvet, satin, and fur toques are worn.

There is a good deal of embroidery done in soutache.

Many of the new gowns show the bib effect in the bodice.

Coat sleeves are exceedingly small, and tight at the wrist.

One sees a good many Persian blouses made of gauze or chiffon.

Artificial flowers will be worn much the evening gowns this winter.

Never have corduroys and velveteens been so decidedly the fashion.

Fabrics for combination with furs are velvet, chiffon, silk, satin, and moire.

Chiffon tunics have round bands of lace embroidered in gold at the bottom.

The gown in one piece which fastens up front or bock is in excellent style.

Ribbons are playing a prominent part in the trimming of some of the hats.

Of all gowns there is a lack of fullness at the hem and the train is eliminated.

Many all black costumes are relieved by bright colored satin heels on the shoes.

Among the trinkets for one's chatelaine are tiny lip rouge cases in silver and also in gold.

Satin scarfs are as popular as when they first appeared a month or so ago, but now it is velvet that is being used, and it is certainly rich and most becoming.

Slenderness in effect is the dominant note of all the winter styles in coats and suits.

Large bows are a favorite for extremely large hats and are often made of taffeta or satin.

Fabric handbags are seen in fancy silks over metal frames, with chain or silk cord handles.

Handwork, especially on heavy silks, is a characteristic touch of some of the velvet gowns.

The short jacket has the present call and is likely to continue in favor for some time to come.

Brown and tan suede leathers are being largely used in dress acessories with tailor made dresses.

Some of the newest overdresses of chiffon have scalloped edges instead of the simple hem of selvedge.

Mourning chains of gun metal or black enamel are to be had plain or set with either moonstones or pearls.

The accessories and closings for the fur coats are fancy frogs, buttons of braid, cords, loops, tassels, and other ornaments.

Paris seems to have gone utterly mad over everything Indian, a craze which originated with the famous Apache dance.

Pretty jabots and ruffles in white net, displaying a stamped pattern, are noticeable for their peculiar blending of white, gray and black tints.

Colored leather bags, about eight inches wide, are most fashionable—a moderate size somewhere between the small and the enormous bags.

Regarding materials for hats, velvet has first call; then follow moire, satin, corded silk, hat plush, beaver, Persian effects in silk, satin, and cloth of gold, various furs and plushes.

Several varieties in square mesh veilings are shown. Some of them are strong in effect, others are of the filet style, with the designs in orthodox figures, such as one sees in filet laces.

SEWING LACE.

Always sew lace with fine thread and never with silk, for the silk stitches are very noticeable. This is true, no matter how coarse the lace; silk will not sink into a fabric as thread will. This is a sewing hint given me recently by a prominent dressmaker, who expressed herself as "tired to death" of seeing quite plainly where her friends had sewed their lace chemisettes and hat-brim trimmings.

THE SHINE ON SERGE

Skirts, especially serge skirts, always become slick and shiny looking before they are nearly worn out.

To remedy this, place the skirt on a board and rub the shiny places with sandpaper, not too hard, but just enough to roughen the nap. After pressing the skirt will look as good as new.

TO MAKE GLOVES LAST.

To prolong the wear of cotton or silk gloves place a small piece of cotton wool in the tips of each finger and thumb. This will prevent the nails from rubbing them into holes so soon.

FOR PAPER PATTERNS.

Get a large Japanese lantern, hang it in the sewing room or any other convenient place and use it to hold light paper patterns. A lantern is durable and will hold a great many patterns.

TO EVEN A SKIRT EDGE

Finish the skirt at the top and put it on just as you would wear it. Rub chalk on the edge of the table and, standing against it, turn around so the chalk mark will encircle the skirt.

Take off the skirt and measure from the chalk mark an equal distance all around to the hem. Since the chalk mark is well below the hips, the difference in length will be above that.

IN FILLING SACHETS.

Fill the tiny bags with a mixed powder of iris and heliotrope and add a few peppercorns, which will both preserve the perfumed powder and bring out its sweet scent.

Right at Last

Her breath came forth in short, quick little pants, the color rose and waned on her cheeks, her eyes expanded, then hid themselves behind their long lashes; the music, the full meaning of his words fascinated, overwhelmed, took absolute possession of her; but she could not speak.

"And you, Joan," he asked, eagerly, humbly, "shall I tell you how you shall know whether you love me a little — just a little? Yes? Were you glad to see me the other night, or did it matter nothing to you that it was I who stood beside you instead of some other man? Are you glad to see me now? Would you be sorry if I said 'Good-by,' and you knew that I was going, never to return Tell me, Joan!"

Silent still, she looked out to sea, watching a curlew as it rose above the cliffs and soared over the down.

"No," he murmured, "you would not care! Then, indeed, you do not love me in the least, Joan, and never will. Love comes at first sight, or never at all! You do not love me, Joan! And it is good-by—and forever——" and his hands grew loose on hers.

With a faint little cry she turned to him, and her hand clasped his, but still held him off.

"Yes!" she panted. "I know! I love you! If—if all you say is true—I love you!"

He caught her to him, and she let her head rest upon his breast, but as his lips bent down to kiss her, put up her hands to keep them off, in simple maiden modesty.

"Oh, my darling!" he murmured, passionately. "Is it true? Can it be true? I have thought of this, dreamed of it, and has it come true? Joan, my darling! My love! Tell me once more! Whisper, 'Stuart, I love you!'"

Her head drooped lower for a moment, then she raised it till her lips were near his ear, and whispered the confession that cost her more than he could guess.

"Stuart, I love you!" and twice she repeated the sweet words, "I love you! I love you!"

His passionate kisses could no longer be kept back, and they rained upon her face and hair, until, trembling and alarmed, she strove to free herself, and then he soothed her back to courage again.

"Forgive me, Joan! I did not mean to frighten you! There, one kiss more, and I will be content for a time. But, oh, Joan, if you knew how happy I am!"

"Perhaps I can guess by my own heart," she said, with innocent frankness. "Ah, how strange it seems! And —and you have cared for me all this time"

"Yes," he said, fervently; "from the first; from the very first, Joan. My heart spoke plainly enough that night; it said aloud, 'Here is my mate.' But on I went, like an idiot and a clod. I would not listen! I would not believe! Fool that I was; I tried to argue it down! But——" He stopped and drew the hood around her tenderly, with an air of appropriation, which made her thrill through and through with a nameless delight.

There was silence for a moment, then she said, softly, as if see were communing with herself:

"I cannot understand why you should care for me; you who have seen the world, and have met so many beautiful ——" She stopped, and a little shudder ran throuhg her, a cold thrill of maidenly jealousy. "But perhaps you have loved—I am not the first——"

"You are the first in my heart, the first woman I ever really loved, Joan,' he said, answering her unfinished question with the alacrity of passion eager to please and satisfy. "The very first! You reign alone queen of my heart, Joan, and you——"

She looked up at him in simple faith and truth, and smiled a sweet, solemn smile.

"I did not know until to-night what love meant," she said, softly.

Presently she started.

"I must go," she said, reluctantly, almost sorrowfully, as Eve might have spoken when the hour arrived for her departure from her paradise.

He struck a match and looked at his watch, and while the light burned looked at her face with all a lover's passionate hunger.

"So soon!" he said. "We seem to have been here scarcely a minute. Let me wrap your cloak tightly around you. See!" and under the pretence he folded her in his arms for a moment. "Joan, to-morrow I will come for you, and we will come here again, stand on this very spot, and you shall tell me once more that you love me! How surprised Colonel Oliver and the two girls will be! And yet I don't think they will," and he laughed with a quiet enjoyment.

"You—you will tell them?" she said, faltoringly.

"I will not if you wish it, dearest," he said. "Let us wait until the day after to-morrow. It will seem all the sweeter, having our secret to ourselves."

"Yes," she assented, with a great uplifting of the heart. "Until the day after to-morrow, and they shall know," and she sighed faintly.

"And you will meet me to-morrow, dearest?" he said.

They had reached the skirts of the village, and the lights of the Elms shone ahead of them.

"Yes," she assented, obediently. "Where?"

"Come to the stile by the park," he said. "We shall be alone there; come early, Joan. I shall be there at eleven, and we can take a long walk, we two together and alone. And give me one parting kiss, Joan. Good-night, my darling—good night!"

He held her in his arms for a moment, his lips pressed to hers, and then she slid from his embrace "like a moonbeam," flitted away from him, and was lost in the shadows.

He waited until he heard the gate shut behind her, then turned and walked rapidly toward the Wold, his brain still hard at work.

"I will persuade her to marry me soon," he said, "and the Wold shall be made fit for her; there shall be music and laughter once more in the old place, and all shall go as merry as marriage bells. Oh, Joan, Joan, my simple, innocent darling, you have made a new man of Stuart Villiars."

And so, manufacturing good resolutions as he went, he unlocked the door and entered his lonely rooms to throw himself in a chair by the fire, and call up a sweet vision that only a few moments ago nestled against his heart.

If it be true that the road to hell is paved with good resolutions, how sadly and with what infinite despair must those who have reached the Dismal Gates look back upon the way they had trodden!

CHAPTER XII.

Joan opened the door softly, and as softly she stole along the passage. If she could only reach her room and be alone with the new, strange joy which suffused her whole being!

To be alone, and yet not alone —for would not his face, his voice, be always with her, night and day, from henceforth, and from henceforth to be welcomed by her, and hugged and cherished as something belonging to her—to her, Joan, the happiest of heaven's mortals?

She longed to reach her flowers and whisper her love to them; she longed to be at the open window, that she might look down at the spot where they had stood and the strange, sweet, almost painful joy had first come to her!

But evil chance had willed otherwise. As she reached the parlor door, the voices of the two girls were raised in unlovely shrillness over some dispute; the sound smote upon Joan's ears—filled with the music of her lover's voice—and made her shudder and hurry past; but the door was ajar, and Julia caught sight of her dress, and called to her in strident tones:

"Is that you, Joan? Come here."

She turned and slowly, reluctantly, pushed open the door and entered.

The two girls were seated at the round, rickety table, and the garish light of the ugly, cracked lamp fell upon a miscllaneous litter, conspicuous among which were a pair of wool work slippers and a hideous smoking-cap.

"Look here, Joan," said Emmeline, holding the hideous cap in a protesting kind of way. "Julia and I have been quarreling, as usual. It occurred to me the other day that, as Lord Villiars had been so extremely kind and—and—attentive——"

"He has spoken about twenty words to her," interpolated Julia, with a disagreeable sneer.

"That I ought to make some return. So I walked down to the village and got a pattern of a smoking-cap in canvas. I don't suppose he particularly wants a cap; but all the same, I thought it would look as if I were not insensible to his kindness. Well, I set to work and filled it in and made it up, but instead of keeping the thing to myself, I mentioned it, like an idiot, to Jue, and I need scarcely tell you, who know her so well, that she instantly went and copied my idea. Bought a pair of slippers, if you please! As if he hadn't enough slippers. And she must needs try and steal a march on me."

"I should be sorry to steal anything of yours, my dear Em!" remarked Julia, parenthetically.

There was something so grotesque, so comical in the scene that Joan, looking from the cap to the slippers, and from those objects of art to the inflamed faces of the girls, felt the spirit of mirth rising within her, and suddenly broke into a peal of laughter.

Like unfamiliar music the laugh ran through the room, and the girls, after staring at her in amazed silence, turned pale with anger and commenced to pour out the vials of their wrath upon her devoted head.

"Oh, you laugh, do you?" exclaimed Julia, starting up and clutching the slippers; "that is all the sympathy we get from you!"

"We are laughed at in our own house!" said Emmeline; "and by Joan. We have sunk low indeed. I suppose you will say that it doesn't matter whether Lord Villiars gets our presents or not?"

Joan might truthfully have answered in the affirmative, but stood silent.

"And I suppose you will say that he has not shown us any attention" said Julia; "and considering the shameless way in which you ran after him, it is wonderful that he has had the courage to speak to us at all."

Joan's color rose and fell.

"I wonder you haven't thought fit to make him a present," said Emmeline, with a sneer.

"I?" said Joan.

"Yes. I have no doubt that your self-conceit is equal to the occasion." The gray-green eyes scrutinized Joan's face as she spoke. "Where have you been to-night, Joan?"

"On the cliffs," said Joan, and her eyes drooped under the bold, cruel scrutiny.

"Have you been alone to-night?" demanded Emmeline, sharply.

"No, I have not been alone," said Joan, quietly, her eyes fixed on the lamp.

"Oh, indeed!" sneered Julia; "and who accompanied you, please?"

"I have been with Lord Villiars," she said.

The two girls turned green with jealous envy, and then pale with fury, and fixed her with the stare of a couple of basilisks.

Emmeline, as usual, was the first to speak.

"With—Lord—Villiars!" she exclaimed under her breath.

"To-night, at this time, on the cliffs!" gasped Julia. "And you can stand there and dare us like this. Joan, you are the most shameless girl in Christendom!"

"Shameless!" the word broke from her lips in a gasp.

"Yes, shameless! But there shall be an end to this. We don't choose that Lord Villiars should be hunted out of the place by you. Yes, hunted!" almost shricked Julia. "I'll tell papa! He shall send you away, and at once! You shall go to-morrow, or we will. Joan, you are an impostor!"

"An impostor!" repeated Joan, standing pale, yet firm in the girlish lamplight.

"Yes, an impostor. Oh, we are not deceived! We see what you are aiming at. But to-night's work settles it. You shall leave Deercombe to-morrow. Wait till papa comes home!"

Joan looked from one to the other, her beautiful face pale and sad and indignant.

The truth trembled on her lips. She felt as if she must cry aloud, "I am his! I am Lord Villiars' future wife!" but it seems to her as if the declaration would be simple sacrilege at such a time and to such as these.

She turned and walked to the door, the eyes of the girls following her with deep jealousy burning in each; then she paused, her lips parted as if she was going to speak, but instead she remained silent and passed out.

She went to her room, the sneers and fury of the girls pursuing her; and it was hours before she could forget them and recall the passionate voice and handsome face of her lover.

Pale and distrait, she came down to breakfast on the morrow, and amidst a dense silence took her place at the table.

The two girls shot a couple of venomous glances at her, then stared at their plates.

The colonel—who had lost heavily at loo at the club on the previous evening—growled at the toast and swore at the bacon, but carefully refrained from addressing her until he rose; then he said, in a would-be careless voice:

"Oh, Joan, by the way, you look as if you wanted a change. You have not been yourself lately. What do you say to going down to Marazion, in Cornwall?"

"Marazion?" said Joan, scarcely knowing what she was saying, her eyes fixed on her plate.

"Yes," she said, fumbling with his eyeglass, "Marazion—just the place for you. I know some people there who would take charge of you; of course, it will cost me something—lodgings are awfully dear now everywhere—but I don't mind. You'd better go to-morrow—the ten-eleven train. Look here, Joan; I've heard all about your goings on with Lord Villiars, and I'd better tell you at once that it's of no use—just a waste of time and energy. You're my ward, you know, and I shouldn't countenance or give my consent to—to—anything of the kind, even if Lord Villiars wished it; and from what I know of him, eh? Oh, look here, it's no use, you know—Julia and Em are both older than you are, and—eh? Better go to Marazion, Joan—you understand; stop there for three or four months, and—eh? I'll drive you over to catch the train to-morrow." And the colonel got up and left the room.

The two girls stared at her with a malicious smile, and Joan, drinking a cup of milk, got up quickly and silently left the room.

She went up to her room and looked out at the sea in deep, distracted thought.

CHAPTER XIII.

Joan could not hope to see Lord Villiars there. She could hear his voice, see his face no more—for four months were as good, or as bad, as eternity to her.

She pictured herself alone on the bleak Cornish coast and Lord Villiars miles away. No more meetings and walks on the cliffs, no sweet words or kisses fraught with love! For would not the colonel, prompted by the spiteful girls, put her under close espionage and watch? She would be a close prisoner wherever they sent her. So close that though her lover might be ever so near, she would not be permitted to see him.

Her heart, brave as it was, sank under the prospect, and was as heavy as lead as she put on the old frieze cloak and went down to the park.

She reached the stile, and a moment later Lord Villiars was by her side.

"My darling, and you have come!" he said, his strong arms thrown around her.

"Yes, I have come," she said, forcing a smile. "But it is for the last time."

"The last time!" he echoed, smoothing her soft, silky hair from her forehead. "What do you mean?"

"Colonel Oliver is going to send me to Marazion."

"To Marazion? Where on earth is that?" he exclaimed. "And why?"

"It is on the Cornish coast; and—and—because he—they—think that I am too—too—friendly with you!"

"Oh, they do! Let me look at you, Joan, my darling! You look pale. Have they been browbeating you?"

She was silent, her long white fingers toying with the great buttons on his shooting coat.

"Joan, they mean to make a prisoner of you! They mean to part us!"

"Oh, no!" she breathed, unconsciously pressing closer to him.

"Yes, that is what they mean to do, but they shall not! Only say the word—say it after me—'Stuart, they shall not; nothing shall separate us!'"

"Stuart," she repeated, "nothing shall separate us!"

"Good, my darling!" he said. "And now to put your oath into effect! Joan, are you brave enough to come with me, instead of going to Marazion?"

"To go with you instead of going to Marazion?" she echoed, looking up at him.

"Yes," he said. "Listen, Joan, my darling! Instead of going to Marazion, where you will be a prisoner, and shut up away from me, will you come to London with me and be my wife?"

"Your wife!" The words dropped from her lips syllable by syllable, and her cheeks flamed.

"Yes," he urged, "my wife! Say the word, Joan—my dear Joan—my darling! Say the word! See, I am at your feet!" and he knelt to her and kissed her hands.

And for answer she leaned over him and murmured:

"Yes, I will come!"

He stood silent for a moment or two, smoothing her hair as she nestled beside him, her dark eyes fixed on the sky, across which dark clouds were sweeping restlessly, and his quick brain was at work planning their flight.

Five minutes passed in absolute silence; then he said in a low voice, in which entreaty and command were skilfully mingled:

"Joan, you must be very brave, dearest! You will not be afraid?"

"Why should I be afraid?"

"Why, indeed! I am big enough to take care of you, certainly. But all the same, you will need all your courage. Is there an early—a very early train from here?"

"Yes, the mail train, at 4 o'clock."

"We shall have to go by that, dearest."

"Yes," she said unhesitatingly; "it will be quite dark."

"All the better," he said, gravely. "Listen to me, Joan. Are you brave enough to steal out of the house to-morrow at half-past three, and to come to the end of the lane by the hill? We can reach the station in half an hour or less, and be half way to London or further before they miss us."

A faint shudder ran through her.

"They cannot overtake us?" she whispered, the colonel's furious face and the two girls' bitter voices rising before her.

"Trust to me," he answered. "No, they cannot overtake us. They might telegraph, perhaps, but I can beat them even there," he added confidently.

He looked at his watch.

"I fear I must go now, darling," he said, reluctantly. "There are all sorts of arrangements to make; and—and we must not be seen together to-day, in case they should grow suspicious."

He held her for a moment, then released her, and watched her as her slim, girlish form sped up the slopes.

PLANK FELL ON HIM

Hamilton Man Badly Injured

Reuben Atherton, of 367 Ferguson avenue, Hamilton, an employee of the Otis Elevator Company, sustained serious injury while at work. A plank fell from a height on to his right foot, crushing it badly. He was taken home, where Zam-Buk was applied, with good result.

Telling his experience of the balm, he said: "After the doctor had dressed the damaged foot with some preparation of his own I was in great pain, and as day after day I seemed to get no relief I left off medical treatment and tried Zam-Buk. From the very first application I traced an improvement. Zam-Buk really seemed to act like magic, cleaning all the unhealthy matter from the wounds, drawing out all discoloration, inflammation and soreness; and started healing in quick time. In two weeks the toe and foot were well again. Zam-Buk Balm is certainly a wonderful healer, and I would not care to be without a box in the house. You can use the above statement in any papers, books or publications, as it may lead some other sufferer to use Zam-Buk and get relief as I did."

All workers should keep Zam-Buk handy. Applied to a cut or wound, it stops the pain, commences healing, and —what is equally fine—it prevents all possibility of blood-poisoning. Zam-Buk is equally good for skin diseases, and cures eczema, itch, ulcers, abscesses, varicose ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, varietc. It heals colds, cracks, chapped hands, frost bite; cures piles and all inflamed conditions of the skin and tissue. Fifty cents a box, from all druggists and stores, but avoid imitations and substitutes, some of which are highly dangerous, and none are beneficial.

GLAD TIDINGS FROM NOVA SCOTIA

Sure Relief For Suffering Women is Found in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Miss Kathleen Murphy Tells How She Sufferod and How Easy and Complete Was Her Cure by the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Tangier Mines, Halifax Co., N. S., Nov. 14.—(Special)—There is no longer any doubt that of the thousands of suffering women of Canada, nine out of every ten owe their troubles to Kidney Disease. For that reason it is glad tidings that Miss Kathleen Murphy, of this place, is sending out to her suffering sisters.

"My troubles started from a cold," says Miss Murphy in an interview. "I had pains in my head and back, and Rheumatism and Diabetes finally developed.

"Then I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cleared out my Rheumatism, cured my Kidney Disease and brought back my health.

"I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills, for I have given them a thorough test and found them to be all that is claimed for them."

The secret of health for women is to keep the kidneys strong and healthy. Healthy kidneys mean pure blood, abundant energy and a clear, healthy complexion. The one sure way to keep the kidneys healthy is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Keeping Dandelions From Lawns.

There are those who say the dandelion cannot be killed. I know better—I've tried it. I have a lawn 200 feet by 150 feet without a dandelion, and I didn't rip up my lawn, either.

How do I keep the dandelions out? I dig them out carefully every spring and keep a close watch for their reappearance during the summer, thus avoiding the seeding. Every spring I scatter plenty of blue grass seed on my lawn and thus supply it with seed that is lost to it by reason of frequent cutting.

Not only that, but when I am digging dandelions I have a pocket full of seed handy and drop a pinch of seed in each hole I make when I extract the dandelion from the sod. New grass grows up quickly, fills the hole and chokes the dandelion.—Denver Post.

HIS BAR EXAMINATION

(By H. H. Hudson.)

The state bar examination was in progress. The watchful eyes of the members of the examining committee were upon each candidate. The applicants were ambitious in the best sense. Many would be heard from in the years to come.

John Harding, esq., was one of the examiners. Harding was a broad man. One candidate before him enlisted his sympathy. This man was Victor Hope. There was a story back of the young mhan. Hope was a bank teller and had maintained a widowed mother while pursuing his studies. He had studied in an evening school.

"WHY DON'T YOU ATTEMPT TO ANSWER QUESTION 13?" HE AGAIN ASKED.

Another fact was also known to the examiner. Hope was in love with an attractive and deserving stenographer, who worked in a busy law office. While some of Hope's friends were somewhat skeptical Myrtle Willow had never lost faith in him. The world did not understand. The examiner did. A hero sat before him.

The Hon. John Harding observed the youth—a slave to ambition. Was it a good thing for a young man to be ambitious? Still, from such material as this the world had ever derived its greatest benefits.

The examiner stepped to the window. The squirrels were playing about the lawn which surrounded the capitol building. The autumn leaves were already falling. He remembered his experience in the years gone by. Time was a precious asset. He again pictured the group of boys he had known; the eager scanning of questions; the waiting for the posted bulletin in the hotel, which would seal their fate. Some of them were dead. The court records alone bore testimony to their zeal. The examiner realized the happiness which would come to the girl who had linked her future to the young man before him. Here was tragedy. Three years of patient study and anxiety, a counting of dimes—then failure? No, a thousand times no. He might save him and still be true to his trust.

The Hon. John Harding sauntered down the aisle. Victor Hope sat with his legs twisted about his chair. The tension of mind and body was apparent. Moisture stood on the brow of the courageous student. The examiner inspected his paper. Question 13 was unanswered. Ten minutes alone remained.

"And why don't you attempt to answer question 13?" asked Harding.

The eyes of the troubled student met his. "Because," was the reply, "I don't know whether to say yes or no."

The examiner paced up and down the aisle. It was a critical moment. Might there not be some suggestion that could be given—some hint that could be brought to bear without breach of trust on his part? He thought of the widow and the girl. How eagerly they would scan the list of those who passed in the evening papers. His brow contracted. This very question might lose Hope his degree. He pictured the failure and discouragement, with months of further toil and anxiety.

He glanced at his watch. Five minutes alone remained. He again stopped up to the desk.

"Why don't you attempt to answer question 13?" he again asked.

"I don't know whether to say yes or no," was again the reply of the desperate candidate.

"You don't know?" repeated the Hon. John Harding. "Didn't your girl know what to say when you asked her to marry you?"

When Harding looked over the papers the next day he found that the question had been answered in the affirmative. It further appeared that the correct answering of this question alone saved the standing of Victor Hope. Six months later Hope was appointed assistant to the United States district attorney, but his wife doesn't know to this day that she set the example which made her husband an honored and successful member of the bar.

GOOD HEALTH FOR YOUNG GIRLS

What Is Needed Is the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Perhaps you have already noticed that your daughter in her "teens" has developed a fitful temper, is restless and excitable. In that case remember that the march of years is leading her on to womanhood, and at this time a great responsibility rests upon you as parents. If your daughter is pale, complains of weakness and depression, feels "all tired out" after a little exertion; if she tells of headaches, or backaches, or pain in the side, do not disregard these warnings. Your daughter needs help for she is most probably anaemic —that is, bloodless.

Should you notice any of these signs, lose no time, but procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for her unhealthy girlhood is bound to lead to unhealthy womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich impoverished blood and by doing so they repair waste ad prevent disease. They give to sickly, drooping girls, health, brightness and charm, with color in the cheeks, bright eyes, a lightness of step and high spirits. A case typical of thousands cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is that of Miss Grace Cunningham, Winnipeg, Man., who says: "I really cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they have made me feel like a new girl. I was pale and almost bloodless and think that on an average I missed at least three school sessions a week, because I felt like a broken down person, and too weak to do anything. The doctor's medicine I took did little more than keep me in hope; it certainly did not cure me. Then I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they soon made me feel like a new person. Day by day I gained strength and color, and I have your medicine to thank for it."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Gems from Ruskin.

Consider whether we ought not to be more in the habit of seeking honor from our descendants than from our ancestors: thinking it better to be nobly remembered than to be nobly born; and striving so to live.

Do you think you can know yourself by looking into yourself? Never. You can know what you are only by looking out of yourself.

No man ever lived a right life who had not been chastened by a woman's love, strengthened by her courage and guided by her descretion.

Twenty people can gain money for one who can use it; and the vital question, for individual and for matron, is never "how much do they make?" but, "to what purpose do they spend?"

To give alms is nothing unless you give thought also; and therefore it is written, not "blessed is he that feedeth the poor," but, "blessed is he that considereth the poor.' And a little thought and a little kindness are often worth more than a great deal of money.

SHORT LIVED.

(Montreal Witness.)

Why are athletics so often comparatively short-lived We have seen over and over again the seemingly robust break down at fifty or thereabouts, and have learned that they had been strenuous runners or players in former years. Prof. Hugo Munsterburg, the Harvard psychologist, asks in connection with athletics and health, "Must it really be kept a secret that the dogma of physical exercise is a fabric of the imagination?" He goes on to say that millions of people are running wildly to catch a ball, lifting weights in fullest perspiration, trotting with gasping breath, and doing a hundred other useless stunts simply because a meaningless fashion has cruelly thrown them into such a habit.

Nightingales from China.

An interesting attempt to acclimatize the Chinese nightingales in Vienna was made last week, writes our correspondent, when thirty of the pretty green birds were set at liberty in the city park, where it is hoped they will take up their abode.

At the end of the week the park keeper counted twelve of them still in the neighborhood of the tree where they had been liberated. The remainder apparently are exploring Vienna. Reports of their visits have been received from several public gardens. If the birds stand the variations of the Viennese climate and agree to live in the parks a large number are to be imported.—London Daily Mail.

Apple Pie.

Hornets in the fence post, locusts on the gate,
Fiddles at the barn yard, why do you wait?
Onion face and cross-barred, covered if you like,
Apple pie army is a-comin' down the pike;
Apple pie, apple pie, cinnamon and spice,
Butter in the middle and a wee dream hid
Down in the sweet, deep juice and nice
Where the bubbles bounces and 'neath the brown, lid lid!

Baked ham cooling in the sideboard, yoh;
and sweet potatoes 'most done
Bumble bees drowsin' in the honeysuckle vine and butterflies bobbin' in the sun;
Fishermen hungrier than Prophet Job, the twilight in the glade,
Apple pie army on the homeward way with the old fishpole brigade;
Apple pie, apple pie, music if you will,
Cider in the third day, sparklin' bright;
More in the barrel and more in the mill,
And the old moon's full as a goat to-night!

Maryland's an apple and an apple pie, and the home of the pie is she;
There's a roast goose now in the oven, dear, and the duck looks good to me;
If we don't all burst and we don't die soon we'll never grow old or gray,
For the apple pie brings us the gift o' the green and the breath of the rose o' May
Annie pie, apple pie, hold up your plate,
Golden as butter, and the sweet lips sing;
Hornets in the fence posts, locusts at the gate
Mint in the patch by the old, cool spring!
—Baltimore Sun.

Grape Juice Punch.

This is excellent and has the merit of being non-alcoholic. Cook together one pound of sugar and half a pint of water until it spins a thread. Take from the fire and turn over a large cup of strong tea. Add the juice of six lemons and the same number of oranges, with a quart of grape juice, and stand aside overnight. When ready to serve add sliced fruits and the water, plain or mineral, with ice in the punch bowl. If desired, cut a half-pound of marshmallows into quarters and allow three to each glass.

Wrong Figure.

"What ails me, doctor, is that I have been burning too much midnight oil."

"Not at all, my young friend. It's a candle you are using, and you have been burning it at both ends."

CURE FOR ANTS.

A small quantity of tartar emetic, as much sugar, and cover with water. Put in a small dish or tin and set where the ants are found, and in a short time they will be gone.

A Real Surprise Party

Mr. and Mrs. D. Timmons received an unexpected pleasant surprise last Monday evening, when about fifty residents of the town and valley, gave them a surprise party. The time was most opportune, the spacious new dwelling was in fine trim for dancing, the partitions on the whole second floor being still down, leaving one large room, of which the merry-makers at once took possession, and round this they danced to their heart's content. The guests had thoughtfully provided refreshments in abundance, the music was of the first order, being provided by Messrs. Beam, Smith and Hamilton, whilst Miss R. Beam handled the guitar in an able manner. Mr. and Mrs. Timmons surpassed themselves in the role of hosts to their uninvited but welcome guests, and the fun was kept up until the early hours of the morning.

Mr. D. S. Timmons is arranging to place a 30-barrel tank on the outside of his new dwelling and a huge cistern in the cellar, and will have a complete waterworks system of his own. He is confident that sufficient water can be caught from the big roof to keep the tank well supplied with aqua the year round. This is an idea well worthy of the attention of any ranchers who may be in need of a water supply, and it might be well for any interested parties to call and inspect Mr. Timmons' water system when completed, and get pointers from this enterprising fruit grower.

Have you seen the assorted stock of Enamel ware at Ed. F. Johnson's hardware store on Fourth St? If not drop in and inspect for yourself.

See the Creston Drug and Book company's ad. in this issue regarding a special sale of China.

All the public schools in the Province opened again last Tuesday morning, January 2nd.

Saturday's K.V. train was derailed near the Arrowsmith ranch, and it was not until midnight that it was righted.

Tom Birt expects to leave for Calgary in a few days to accept a good position in the Alberta town.

A couple of days before Xmas when young Joe Quaife was boarding the westbound train, unbeknown to him he was followed by his faithful Scotch collie dog, "Biddie." The dog apparently remained on the platform, as it was not seen by its master. At Wynndel the dog was seen in the possession of a strange man, who had evidently taken a fancy to Miss Biddie. The dog is a yellow Scotch collie bitch, and had a leather collar with a plate on the upper side, and two brass teeth on each side of the collar, with a ring underneath. Young Joe Quaife is now on the warpath with a nice thick club for the unknown man who has got away with his pet dog.

A good Stock Saddle is being raffled at Sam Hatfield's. The saddle is worth $45, being brand new. Tickets at 50c. each can be obtained at Sam Hatfield's Pool Room. The raffle will take place during the Xmas week. For further particulars call on Sam Hatfield. Don't fail to take a chance on this raffle.

New Year Ball a Success.

The dance in the Auditorium Hall on Friday evening Dec. 30th, was one of the most successful of the social festivities which marked the Xmas holidays.

The hall was tastefully decorated with evergreens and emblems appropriate to the occasion. The Moyie orchestra acquitted themselves admirably; the floor was in perfect condition, and to these ideal accompaniments the beautiful young ladies of Creston and their gallant escorts imparted that living note which only youth, grace and bravery can supply, as they glided lightly through the dreamy waltzes, the stirring two steps, or the stately minuet.

At midnight supper was served, and the dancers lounged on the plush cushioned seats, whilst the boys of the "Murphy House" handed round the refreshments in a more than professional style.

One of Creston's most popular young bachelor's illuminated the box office with his smiling face. Andy Miller was a capable floor manager, and it was "Far too early in the morning" when the strains of the Home Sweet Home waltz intimated to the guests that the dance was over.

To Mr. F. J. Smyth, of the Moyie Leader, and his capable assistant, great credit is due for the high quality of the music supplied. As to who was the "belle of the ball," our representative is only mortal, but he ventured the opinion that there were enough belles present to make the chimes of old Saint Paul's sound like a barrel organ in comparison with the music of their smiles.

We hope that another such enjoyable dance will be given under the same auspices in the near future.

Women's Woes

CRESTON WOMEN ARE FINDING RELIEF AT LAST

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys.

Mrs. Edward Calwood, of 129, S. Harold street, Fort William, Ont., says:

"I suffered with dull, miserable pains, soreness across my back back and in my sides, for months. They would catch me so badly at times that I could scarcely move around. The kidney secretions had also been of a heavy color and contained a sediment. Then, I would have dizzy spells and altogether, felt generally run down. After using a number of remedies without finding relief, I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and am pleased to say, found them an excellent remedy. They have relieved me of the miserable pains and soreness in my back and have also cured of my other kidney trouble."
