CRESTON, B.C. FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1921

No. 9

Erickson

W. H. Kemp left a few days ago for Vernon, accompanied by his son, Aubrey, who is remaining there to attend a boys' school in that town.

Mrs. Boyd is spending a few days with friends in Fernie this week, while Mr. Boyd is away on a business trip to Nelson.

Miss Melva Cartwright and Miss Dorothy McKowan of Cranbrook are Easter visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Cartwright.

Erickson bid goodbye to one of its older and highly respected citizens on Friday, when Henry Hamilton left for Telkwa in the Bulkley valley, where he intends making his home in future, with Mrs. Hamilton, to follow as soon as he secures a place. En route he will spend a few days with his daughter at Red Deer, Alta.

Staples Fruit Company, Ltd., loaded out a car of apples this week, the shipment going to Medicine Hat, Alta. The J. M. Craigie ranch supplied the biggest half of the car.

The need of the added station accommodation the United Farmers are after is being demonstrated almost every week. On Monday night the westbound way freight had to set out a car here, the station shed, not being big enough to accommodate the lot.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klingensmith of Yakk are spending a couple of weeks here, occupying the residence on the E. Klingensmith ranch.

Miss Ruby Lister, who is home for the Easter holidays from school at Calgary, Alta., is a guest of Mrs. R. J. Long a few days this week.

Erickson Presbyterians may look for a call from Rev. J. A. James, who will be visiting in this section next week.

B. Dods and S. Scott have just finished laying a pipe line from Goat mountain, and now have a plentiful of water.

Mr. and Mrs. Holder, who have just recently arrived from the Old Country are guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. Leveque. Mr. Holder is a veteran of the great war, and his intention is to go in for fruit farming in this section. Mr. Holder has had previous experience in the fruit industry having been in the game in the well-known Niagara peninsula—the garden of Ontario—and will be a most welcome addition to the community.

A visit from road foreman Harris would be most timely. The roads are in great shape for the scraper or drag to put in condition for easy travelling—something that has been out of the question for at least a month past.

President Littlejohn along with secretary Birney and Messrs. Harrison, Leveque, Palmer, Long and Craigie, constituted a United Farmers delegation that waited on the C.P.R. Supt. Hall at the station here on Tuesday last, pointing out to him the necessity for the immediate erection of a new station at Erickson. Between them a very strong case was made out, and the justice of their demands was admitted by the superintendent, but as he had had the matter up with the head officials of the company and they had refused to appropriate the money needed for a new station, he was unable to promise them what they asked. However, he assured that for this season added freight shed accommodation would be provided, doors would be put in at the back of the existing shed so as to expedite unloading, and the roof projected over the side to afford protection when handling stuff in wet weather. A couple more trucks will be provided as well as scales, and the road to and from the station will be widened and otherwise improved, so that no inconvenience will be experienced in getting at or from the depot with any sized load.

Lister

Miss Austed, principal of Lister school, is at her home in Trail for the Easter holidays, and is accompanied by Miss Nellie Chalmers. Miss Brown teacher at Huscroft, is at Nelson for the vacation.

Lister people who will readily recall Mr. and Mrs. Bagg, who left the camp late last fall, along with the latter's sister, Miss Vernon, will bear with interest of the marriage of the latter at Nelson a few days ago to Mr. Turpin, in a union which at which the bride and groom were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wright, who have the proud distinction of being the parents of the first native daughter of Lister, who arrived early in 1920, have again achieved fame by being parents to the first 1921 boy born in the camp, the young son arriving on the 19th.

The Ladies' Auxiliary dance on Saturday night attracted the usual turnout with Jimmy Turnley in charge of the floor, and J. Noble at the player piano, which is again supplying music for the dances.

The United Farmers have their April meeting on Friday night, one of features of which will be a report from the delegates who were at Canyon on Saturday for the cooperative association conference.

C. H. Phillips, who has been at Kimberley for a few days, has returned to Lister.

Misses Ruby and Vera Lister are home from college at Calgary for the Easter vacation at their home here.

All the available men are now busy at fencing operations, a big push being made to get the fences up on all twenty-acre tracts in the camp.

Real spring weather prevailed here for Easter. Even mosquitoes were in evidence, according to Mrs. John Bird.

Following is the standing of the pupils of Lister public school for the month of March:

Division I—Miss A. C. Austed, Principal.

Highest Standing—Senior Fourth—Frank Alexander, Beale Frampton, Junior Fourth—Murielle Millington, Ernest Stevens, Jenny Chalmers, Senior Third—Doris Millington, Frances Malthouse, Cora Frampton, Second Reader—Dorothy Weston, Alex. Mitchell, John Malthouse.

Division II—Miss Edna S. Holmes, Teacher.

Highest Standing: First Reader—Peter McKay, George Chudley, A. Class—Fred Weston, Charlie Malthouse, Jack Bird, B. Class—Doreen Butler, George Frampton, Fred Yebbry, C. Class—Albert Weston, Lucy Lye, Margaret Chalmers.

Perfect Attendance—Margaret Chalmers, Charlie Malthouse, Agnes Sinclair, Albert Weston, Fred Weston.

Sirdar

The finish-up on the Sirdar-Kuskanook road is now under way, a crew being busy at the Ruzzo ranch, where no work had been done previously pending an agreement being reached permitting the government to construct the highway across the Passauze property.

The policy of strict economy the C.P.R. is pursuing is strikingly evidenced here in the laying off of the McCabe bridge repair crew, which has been operating at the landing and up down the line for the last five years.

Jack McDiarmid and Harry Hughes are the first to sample the 1921 fishing, and both had fair luck at catching char.

Engineer H. Brock is firmly convinced that spring is here. While on the westbound run on Sunday the engine whistle suddenly died, the lumber of a grass snake sunning itself at Curzon that the reptile dropped from the rock cut onto the engine boiler only to be jolted off there to the running board, where Hughie got the last sight of it.

Yardmaster Lohsby, who has been off work since December on account of having to take hospital treatment at Cranbrook for a pair of troublesome feet, is expected to resume his old position about the first of the month.

Mr. Lane continues to make satisfactory progress at the Cranbrook hospital, but she is not expected to be able to leave that institution for some little time yet.

Geoffrey Spence of Hawell is an Easter visitor here with his sister, Miss Hene Spence.

Mr. Anderson of the bridge crew was among winners of the turkey pulled last week by the Sirdar.

The Kill Bore Club had another of their successful games on Saturday night at the schoolhouse, with Mr. and Mrs. Chappman and Mr. Price furnishing the music. The out-of-town guests included Mrs. McCabe and Mrs. Williams.

Latest word as to the big fill at the Landing is to the effect that the work is again postponed for at least another three months.

Rev. J. S. Mahood took his final Church of England service here on Sunday night, when he had the best turnout seen at Sirdar for years, and with the schoolhouse appropriately decorated and good congregational singing the service will be long remembered. He was tendered a send-off reception at Creston on Monday night, Mr. and Mrs. Loasby being the Sirdar representatives at the function.

Wynndel

J. J. Grady loaded out a car of posts for prairie points on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooke and family arrived from Spokane on Friday, and are spending a short holiday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grady.

Sunday afternoon, April 3rd, Rev. J. A. James will have a baptismal service at the schoolhouse. The church worship will take the form of a children's service as well.

H. A. Bathie, Jr., left on Saturday for Cranbrook, where he will look over a team of horses for R. C. Eakin, and bring them back to Duck Creek via the overland route.

Conservatives, Attention!

The Creston District Conservative Association will hold an ordinary General Meeting at Mallandaine's Hall, on Thursday, April 7 at EIGHT p.m.

G. A. M. YOUNG, Secy. Treas.

Frank Bakum, who has been working for the Bachman tie outfit, returned to Calgary on Thursday last.

The provincial engineer has been busy the past week staking out the road west the Davis' ranch to connect with the Sirdar road.

About 25 people from here took in the dance at Creston on Tuesday and everyone heartily agrees that it was the best dance ever held in Creston. Their fondness for good music is shown in the fact that all the Wynndel crowd were on the floor for every dance.

O. J. Wigen unloaded a car of pipe on Wednesday morning to be used on his overhead irrigation extension.

The United Farmers held their March 23rd postponed meeting on Wednesday night of this week. Many important items of business were discussed. Secretary Butterfield, however, is not yet home from the coast.

John Burns and Fred Johnson of the Winlaw staff spent the week-end in Nelson, returning on Tuesday.

Mr. J. B. Rudd left on Wednesday on a short visit to friends in Bellvue, Alta.

Land clearing operations are now in full swing in this section and several farmers are busy shooting stumps, while the country is full of smoke from the fires of the slashings.

A. H. Rudd reports having seen and shot the first gopher of the season on Monday. They certainly have made a very early appearance this year.

Canyon City

R. Harris has a couple of teams at work doing some much appreciated grubbing on the Canyon side of the trail to the new highway.

The United Farmers meet at regular sessions on Saturday night, when there will be a round-table talk on co-operation, and those attending last Saturday's conference on that question will also present a report.

John Wood, who was home for the Easter week-end, left on Monday on his return to Birchbank.

The Easter Monday apron sale and afternoon tea, along with the dance at night, netted the United Farmers piapo fund $40—and was just as big a success socially. The music for the dance was by the Sherwood orchestra.

Joe Stinson of Erickson has the contract of putting a wire fence around Frank Putnam's 14 acres at the corner, which will be planted to potatoes this year.

There are just about enough logs in the yard to keep the sawmill going this week, when operations will cease for at least the spring and summer.

Wynndel, Creston, Erickson and Lister locals of the United Farmers sent a total of almost twenty delegates to the conference here on Saturday when the matter of starting a cooperative selling association was discussed and by a vote of 20 to 7 it was decided to launch such an undertaking, with headquarters at Erickson. A meeting will be held at that point on the 13th, when the matter will be finally disposed of.

W. Searle is the first to commence ploughing operations, being busy in that line on Tuesday. Despite all the snow and rain he finds none too much dampness even at depth of 18 inches.

Pending the adoption of the government's policy of giving a 25 per cent. rebate on stumping powder, land clearing operations are held up in this section.

Mrs. Barnhardt of Glenlily was an Easter visitor with her parents, Mr. Mrs. F. Knott.

BIRTH—To Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McInnis, a son, on March 25th.

Fruit growers and business men are being canvassed for $30,000, with which to erect a big two story fruit proof warehouse, which the Co-Operative Growers agree to rent at a price that will net the shareholders in the building not less than 10 per cent. per annum.

Kitchener

Miss Selma Gunderson was an Easter visitor at Cranbrook, taking in the hospital ball on Monday evening.

W. J. Boyd of Erickson was a between-trains visitor here on Monday.

Little Miss Helen Heise of Cranbrook is an Easter visitor here with Miss Clara Hunt.

Mrs. Henderson and children of Creston were visitors here this week, guests of Mrs. Hunt.

The proprietors of the McConnell restaurant entertained at a dance on Saturday night, and all present report a most enjoyable time.

Homer Geroux, who has been away on a visit to friends in the Eastern States, arrived home on Saturday.

Miss Edith and Victor Geroux are visiting with friends in Fernie.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Smith have gone to Creston, where they will reside in future.

Alice Siding

Mr. Churchill is the latest convert to the theory that there will be no more winter weather. He reports seeing bobolinks on Meadowview ranch last Thursday.

Mrs. F. Ash left on Tuesday for Nelson, where she is visiting friends for a few days.

Sam O'Neil, with his wife and family arrived a few days ago from Ireland, and will be employed on the Compton ranch this season. He is a son-in-law of John Marshall on the Scotty Todd place.

R. Alderson of Hosmer was here for the first of the week, on an inspection of the late Andy Miller ranch, which he purchased about a year ago, and which is now in charge of J. Kelly.

B. Shuster who got home a few days ago, after being on the sick list for ten days while on a visit to Sirdar, is around again and busy at land clearing operations.

W. A. McMurtrie has just completed the removal of a packing shed on to his ranch adjoining the Norris & Wood place.

Victor Grundy is spending the Easter holidays with his mother at Sirdar.

Leslie McMurtrie left on Monday for Cranbrook, and the current report is that he is to be married before returning from his little jaunt eastward.

Last Sunday was missionary day at Kaslo Methodist church, and the Westons of that town came through with a collection of $100.

"Straight on to my room, Pop," whispered Dorkin. "Now," he said, after Timberley had been placed on the bed, "you go on back to the lake, Pop, and help the boys bring in the prisoners. I've got to do what I can for this wounded man."

"Hump!" snorted the settler, and strode from the room.

Dorkin bent above the unconscious Timberley and sought for his hurt. He found that the bullet had grazed the skull, inflicting a nasty scalp wound. It relieved him to find it no worse. He washed and bandaged the wound, then he poured a teaspoonful of brandy down the man's throat.

Slowly, Timberley came back to consciousness and opened his eyes. They fell wonderingly on Dorkin, and a smile crossed his white lips.

"Everything pays, sometimes," he whispered, and closed his eyes again.

From the window Dorkin saw his men returning with the prisoners. Glancing down to see that the wounded man was comfortable, he went out to meet them.

Timberley lay very still, and the white-faced girl, who crept silently into the room, thought him dead, and fell on her knees beside him, with a low cry.

He turned his head slowly, and his eyes opened wide with wonder.

"Edna," he whispered.

"Oh, Tom, Tom, my beloved," she sobbed. "You're not dead? Oh, thank God!"

She lifted his nerveless hand and crushed it to her lips. "Tom," she cried, "I love you in spite of all your wickedness, and I can't live without you."

"That's good news, Edna," he sighed—"wonderful news—perhaps I have died or am dreaming—Edna," he whispered, "if you are really there, put your face down close against mine—Ah, God, then you are real—real, and I am not dreaming. And—and you do love me?"

He was holding her head between his shaking hands, following that long kiss, and feasting his eyes on her glad face and golden hair.

"In spite of everything, I love you, Tom," she told him joyfully. She bent lower and kissed him again, then drew up as a step sounded outside the door.

Dorkin came hastily in, hesitating, with a word of apology, as he found Edna there.

There was a world of pity in his eyes, turned upon her, and not the slightest note of anger or resentment in his tones as he bent above the wounded man, and asked, "Better, Timberley?"

"Thanks, yes, I—can't begin to tell you how much better," answered Timberley, his eyes glowing up at the radiant face of the girl.

Dorkin turned abruptly away. "You must look upon this place as your own until you are all right again," he told him. "I'm glad," he added, hesitatingly, as he turned to leave, "it was not serious."

Just outside the cabin he met

Danny Farney. The boy's face was drawn and troubled. "Dorkin," he cried, "I've just found a wounded man in the woods. It's Timberley."

Dorkin grasped him by the wrist. "Timberley is in there, Danny," he explained, motioning towards the cabin. Danny gazed, spell-bound. "He is?" he gasped. "Well, who, then, is the other man, Dorkin?"

"One of Dalton's trappers, no doubt," answered Dorkin. "How was he dressed, Danny?"

"That's the funny part of it," frowned the lad. "He was dressed like Timberley allers dressed. Tweed clothes an' wide felt hat. Maybe you best come down thar an' see him fer yourself. He's jest 'bout gone."

Dorkin nodded and followed Danny down the trail. In the open glade of the forest, they came to the wounded man. Dorkin stepped forward and glanced down at the greying face.

"Savage!" he muttered. Then, turning to the boy, he said, "Please leave me alone with him, Danny." The lad, glad to get away, plunged back to the trail.

The dying man opened his eyes. "Savage," said Dorkin sternly, "what's the meaning of this? Why are you dressed in those clothes? Whom are you impersonating?"

The wounded man smiled. "Timberley," he answered faintly. "And why in the name of God?"

Dorkin cried, "Ask him."

Dorkin turned. Behind him stood Mr. Dayton. "He was shaking like a leaf. His eyes were dull and staring. 'That man knows,' gasped Savage. 'He paid me to do it.'"

Dorkin twisted about on Dayton. "You hear what he said?" he cried in amazement. "Now, what have you to say?"

The old man trembled and tried to speak. At last he managed to articulate, "Yes, he speaks the truth. I paid him to do it."

"Why?"

"Because I was afraid of Timberley," shuddered the miserable banker. "He was a lawyer, and clever. My niece loved him. I had speculated with her money. I was afraid, if he married her, he would learn this, and that she would despise and hate me. By lies, I induced her to break her engagement with him. He followed us up here. I knew she still believed in him—I saw a chance to make him appear a villain in her eyes. Oh, God!" he wailed. "Why, why did I do it?"

In spite of the wrong he had done, Dorkin felt sorry for the poor, miserable wretch, grovelling before him.

Savage spoke. "Oh, he'll pay. He's payin' now. Everythin' pays sometime or other. I'm payin'."

This isn't the first crooked deal I've helped him out in," he panted. "Ask him about a minin' deal I did—his dirty work on a pulpwood deal, we'd planned to work together. You see—"

he explained—"it was a temptation for him. I was right here an' so was Timberley. A good sport, Timberley, big an' clean—he was your friend, too, an' had come to try an' warn you, this mornin'—we learned that from his Injun guide, Musko, but we knowed we could beat him here—an' did. I could have shot him, as I was gettin' away, but—why should I?—He was just comin' out of the woods when your men fired, an' he got the bullet intended for me—"

Well, I hope he hasn't had to pay—"

"No," said Dorkin, almost tenderly, "he is about to be paid, in full, for the part he has played, Savage."

The dying man sighed. "Old Abe Dalton got his," he chuckled; "I saw that. Darbo, the half-breed, got him. I saw Dalton whip Darbo one night, when I was playin' the part of Timberley, for the first time. Darbo said he'd do it. Dalton was bad medicine—tried to double-cross me, he did—poisoned your silver grey fox, just because he thought I was after her—oh, well—I wonder who it was got me?"

Dorkin knelt beside the dying man and asked, "Anything I can do, Savage?"

The filming eyes opened, and a faint smile came to the ash lips.

"Yes," he said, with a supreme effort, "you can tell Timberley I'm sorry. I sure did put him in bad with you—an' the gal who loved him. I'm just his size an' build, an' I got hold of clothes like his—I advertised him all through your Preserve—stole his card-case when he was bathin'—dropped card an' case where you could find 'em—"

Well, you can do that, you can just tell him I'm sorry. That's one thing—"

Other is, you can take my hand an' hold it fer a minute. You're big, an' square—an' human. Wished to Gawd—I had known it—sooner. That's all."

A quiver ran through the hand which Dorkin held. He placed it gently across the other, on the dead man's breast, and stood up.

Dayton was standing, white-faced and trembling, looking down on the victim of his sin. Dorkin touched his arm.

"Mr. Dayton," he said, "I don't envy you your feelings. You must know the enormity of the wrong you have committed. What I wish to tell you now is simply this. No one, except our two selves, knows that you are responsible for this terrible deception. I am willing to keep your secret. But—as the old man reached out a trembling hand towards him—"you must go up to the cabin and tell Timberley and your niece that you are responsible for their first estrangement. Will you do it?"

"I Feel as Tho' I Could Not Drag Thru the Day's Work" is the complaint of many a woman in the household, office or factory.

After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged-down by weaknesses of her sex—with eyes sunken, black circles and pale cheeks—such a woman is quickly restored to health by the Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce.

Changed, too, in looks, for after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the skin becomes clear, the eyes brighter, the cheeks plump. It is purely vegetable and contains no alcohol.

Druggists sell it in tablets or liquid, or send Doctor Pierce, at Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package.

BARRIE, ONTARIO.—"I was suffering from a run-down system some time ago, was unfit to perform my daily duties, and was advised to try Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I tried it, took two bottles, and was restored to my natural strength. I cannot praise Doctor Pierce's medicines too highly, and will be willing to write to anyone sending a stamped envelope."

—MRS. A. H. BISHOP, R. R. No. 1.

"I will, oh, yes, I will."

The old man turned eagerly away and tottered up the trail.

Dorkin gazed after him pityingly. It was not an easy task, that which the old man had to perform, he thought, and still, for the confessor there would be something well worth the winning, hope—satisfaction and peace of mind, at least. And love, such love as Edna and Timberley had been given, was kind. He sighed, as Timberley's words occurred to him. "Everything pays, sometime." Surely that old man, who had sinned, had paid and was paying. But this world, his world, which uncovers the soul of the transgressor before his eyes and forces him to look upon it, was quick to pity and strong to cure without leaving a scar.

Northern Grown Seed

Merchants Realizing the Value of Seed Matured in Northern Latitudes.

Canada is coming to the front as a source of "northern-grown" seed supply for the North American continent. Even English and French seed merchants, as well as American, are realizing the value of seed matured in northern latitudes, consequently are turning to Canada for supplies. Canadian registered seed grain, in particular, is in demand in the United States by virtue of its general superiority in quality and viability. Increased yields are usually the result, where it is used in more southerly latitudes.

At important seed exhibitions, Canadian registered seed grain has more than held its own with world competition. For instance: At the Chicago International Show, 1920, fifty-four prizes were awarded Canadian registered seed, in addition to securing special premiums for the best wheat and the best oats at the show.

Influenza Baffles Search

British Health Minister Says Cause is Still Unsolved.

In the report issued by the British Ministry of Health on the epidemic of influenza of 1918-19, it is stated that the cause of the disease is a problem "still unsolved." It is described as the "first intensive study of the great and devastating scourge that swept Europe and Asia and, during the space of a few months, claimed a larger number of victims than fell during the whole of the European war." It is stated that the immediate outlook is not such as to inspire confidence. Other diseases have been brought under control; influenza still eludes us, the Health Minister admits.

Prairie Grain Elevators

Upwards of 110,000,000 Bushels of Wheat Can Be Stored at One Time.

The number of grain elevators in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is no less than 3,600, according to the Hon. George Langley, Minister of Municipal Affairs for Saskatchewan. These elevators are on the average from 40 to 60 feet in height, and capable of storing from 20,000 to 30,000 bushels apiece. This means that upwards of 110,000,000 bushels of Western Canada's wheat crop can be stored at one time. The elevators are all licensed by, and are under the supervision of, the Board of Grain Commissioners of Canada.

From the Diary of A Hudson's Bay Clerk in the Seventies

CHASE OF A GRIZZLY BEAR—LOVE PHILTRES.

By O-GE-MAS-ES (Little Clerk).

(Copyrighted)

In a former article entitled Swan River to York Factory I had described the picturesque situation of Shoal River House at the north end of Swan Lake, the Swan River emptying into the south side of the lake. Here at the mouth of the river was a small settlement of half-breeds and Indians. It was the summer of 1874 and Mr. Angus MacBeth whom I had succeeded in charge of the post, had advanced some Indians rather heavily. These men were living at Duck Bay on Lake Winnipegosis and he did not see them before his departure, which was hurried. MacBeth had impressed on me before leaving about the importance of collecting these debts if at all possible, as there was an ugly rumor current in H. B. C. circles that postmasters were to be made responsible for outstanding accounts.

Being very busy getting the brigade of eight boats off to York, and then having other matters to attend to, it was finally well on in July before I was able to make the trip. There were no available men at the post, except my cook, Murdo, and after impressing on him to be extra careful of the company's property in my absence, I took my gun and bedding with some provisions and paddled over to the mouth of Swan River. Here I was fortunate in securing a very dark Indian, known as Black Ba'tese, who knew the country, but was a little lame, which did not matter as there was no particular rush. We left my small bark and took his double canoe, paddled across to the east side of the lake, cached our canoe, made up two small packs of bedding and provisions and started across what was called a summer portage, but a faint trail only showed in places. Late that evening we reached the shores of Winnipegosis and after firing a few shots to which there was no response, we made a thorough search and finally found an old canoe, which after the gum was patched a bit, would, Ba'tese thought, take us to the Indian camps. It was a leaky craft and I was kept busy between baling and paddling, but we made our destination all right and found the Indians at home. They did not look too well pleased at my appearance, for no doubt they thought with MacBeth leaving the debts might be forgotten. They were, however, hospitable enough, and we were guests of the headman whose name was A-ta-pis-ka-what. I noticed a smile on Ba'tese's face while dinner was being cooked, and in a hoarse whisper he asked me, "You like dog, you?" "Dog, what to eat you mean? Good heavens, no!" "Well," was his grinning reply, "that is what we are going to have for dinner. Ba'tese was right, and in a short time we received bountiful helpings of what I must say looked like very nice meat, and gathering up courage I tasted it, and there was nothing wrong about that. Still, there was the idea, so I simple toyed with my share. Our host noticing that I was not enjoying my dinner spoke to one of the girls, who shortly entered the tepee and placed beside us a splendid dish of ripe raspberries, it being berry season. But the vessel that they were in fascinated me, and I gazed and gazed at it. White, with yellow stripes, handle and all, the kind of china that is generally kept under the bed. Ba'tese, smiling again, whispered: "It is all right and has only been used for cooking; not what you think," and with that my suspicions were relieved and I made a hearty meal off the berries.

After our repast with all its surprises I went fully into the question of trade. The amount due the company was some £86, and to my surprise and delight nearly the whole amount was put up in furs. Bear skins, beaver, otter, mink, fisher and marten all figured in it as well as musquash; prime furs all evidently killed in the spring. The fine fur alone made two bulky little packs, so we decided to leave the muskrats as they were heavy, with a promise that they would be brought in later to the post. They took us over to the mainland in the morning and, having arranged our packs (mine being a good deal the lightest) off we went for home. Ba'tese's lameness and his heavy pack now began to tell and I could make very much better time. The walking was good, the soil being sandy, and there was little under-brush. On coming over we had noted many bear tracks as Bruin no doubt had gathered in for a berry feast, for bears are proverbially fond of berries. In addition to the raspberries the ridges were covered in places with blueberry bushes. I would walk fast, leave Ba'tese a good distance, then slip my pack and feast on berries until he caught me up.

The day had clouded over and a light drizzle commenced to fall. I was carrying my gun and had some bullets handy in a buckskin shot pouch in case of sighting any big game. I was some distance ahead making for a ridge which promised blueberries, when I noted a huge bear track going in our direction and evidently very fresh. The tracks are very much like a human foot, only the heel is narrower and the claws make deeper indentations. Just as I reached the berries and was stooping down to gather a handful, something moved right ahead of me, and as I crouched and stared it resolved itself into a large grizzly colored bear with its hand quarters towards me and busy gathering in the berries with his forepaws. He was a monster all right and my hair stood up with excitement. Tugging at the strings of my shot pouch, I pulled them into a hard knot. While I was working at them so as to slip a bullet in my gun, Ba'tese was getting closer and I cautiously raised my hand for him to stop and crouch. He did so, but, alas, as he stooped down, on the top of his pack was our copper tea kettle with two pots, and these rattled. Up jumped the bear and stood facing me. Such a brute, taller than I was, and no doubt the same one I had just tracked. It was too late to get my bullets, so without putting my gun to my shoulder, I pulled both barrels, aiming at his heart. Snap, snap, they went, the caps evidently damp with the rain, though I had the nipples covered. The bear wheeled and dashed off the ridge, and I, like a madcap, threw my gun down and ran after him. Ba'tese throwing off his pack ran after me shouting: "Stop, Ogemases, stop! Grey bear, bad bear!" For a hundred yards or so I ran him fairly even, but there was a thicket and into this he bolted and that was the last we saw of him. On walking back to meet Ba'tese, who came up breathless, he poured out a torrent of words in broken English and French, mixed with Cree, the tenor of which I gathered to be something like this: "What a mad fool you are! Don't you know if you had caught the bear he would probably have killed us both," again repeating the words, "Bad bear, grey bear." I replied that I had never heard of a grey bear. "Oh," he said, "white men have another name for it, plenty on the plains and in the mountains." "Grizzly bear," I suggested. "Yes, that is the kind," and then I began to feel frightened.

Agricultural Professors Are Poorly Paid

Department of Agriculture Winning War Against Destructive Insects.

Ottawa.—In the discussion of the agriculture estimates in the House in committee of supply, Hon. Dr. Tolmie, in defending the proposed vote of $180,000, an increase of $10,000 over 1920, for the enforcement of the destructive insect and pest act, said that the department was making remarkable headway in this regard.

J. A. Maharg (Maple Creek) expressed the view that the salary scale paid to technical experts in the agricultural department was far below that paid corresponding employees in other departments. File clerks, he maintained, in some branches, received more than professors of agriculture. Seeming discrepancies between the salaries paid certain employees were cited by Opposition members. One of these was the case of a translator who received $1,500 per annum, while a junior translator received $1,550. Dr. Tolmie explained that this was the result of civil service classification clashing with a special act providing for an appointment.

Trade Agreement With Russia

Great Britain Signs Treaty With Russian Socialist Soviet Republic.

London.—The trade agreement under which commercial relations will be resumed by Great Britain and Russia and which were signed here, is essentially the same as the draft taken to Moscow by Leonid Krassin, Soviet minister of trade and commerce, in January the most important terms of which follow:

Each party agrees to refrain from hostile action or propaganda outside its borders against the other's insinuations or giving assistance or encouragement to any propaganda outside its own borders. The Soviet Government particularly agrees to refrain from any encouragement of Asiatic peoples to action against British interests, especially in Asia Minor, Persia, Afghanistan and India.

British subjects in Russia and Russians in Great Britain will be permitted to return to their homes if they so desire.

Each agrees not to impose any form of blockade against the other or any discrimination against trade not imposed on other foreign countries.

Ships in each other's harbors shall receive the treatment usually accorded foreign merchant ships by commercial nations.

No Further Work on Hudson's Bay Railway This Year

Present Time Not Propitious For Heavy Expenditures, and Work Must Wait Until Conditions Improve.

Ottawa.—There is to be no further work on the Hudson Bay Railway this year. On this Dr. Reid was emphatic in the House. J. A. Campbell (Nelson, Man.), had a resolution asking the government to resume work on the railway. Hon. T. A. Crerar supported the idea, but said the present time was not propitious for further heavy outlays.

Mr. Campbell declared that the government appeared to have forgotten its promises. After spending $23,000,000 on the road it appeared to have been abandoned.

There were important resources in the district traversed by the road, and the people of the west were demanding that it be completed. There seemed to be interests responsible for the government's present attitude and those interests were not showing their hands.

Financial stringency, Dr. Reid replied was the only reason for construction work on the railway having been held up. It was postponed only until conditions were more favorable. Dr. Reid reminded Mr. Campbell that when 310 miles of the line were operated with a bi-weekly train service, the revenue was not sufficient to pay the train crews wages. "If money were available this year," said Dr. Reid, "I would use it to extend some railway in the west to the territories which have been suffering so long, and give them relief, instead of continuing the Hudson Bay Railway at the present time."

Thomas Hay (Selkirk), moved in amendment that completion of the Hudson Bay line be carried out when conditions permitted and that the road be completed as soon as possible. This carried and debate on the resolution as amended was adjourned.

Germany Protests Occupation

Declares Versailles Treaty Gives Allies No Ground For Invasion.

Berlin.—In a protest to the League of Nations against the infliction of penalties, the German Government claims that the only provisions in the treaty affecting this question are Paragraph eighteen of appendix, two to part eight, and the concluding sections of Article 429 and Article 430. These, it is declared, do not admit of any fresh occupations of German soil beyond the territory west of the Rhine and the bridgeheads.

The German Government further contends that there has been no infringement of obligations justifying the infliction of the economic sanctions, and argues that the levy against German goods is in contradiction to the renunciation by the British, Italian and Belgian Governments of Paragraph 10 of the appendix to the treaty.

The League of Nations is requested to initiate mediation proceedings and to see that the forcible measures the Allies have undertaken be immediately stopped.

Tax On German Goods.

London.—The House of Commons, with the consent of the government decided that the German Reparations Bill, providing for a levy of 50 per cent. on the purchase price of imported German goods, shall not come into effect until March 31. The measure passed its second reading in the Commons.

A Healthy Province

During the year which ended in June last British Columbia increased its population by more than four thousand. There were more than nine thousand births and less than five thousand deaths. The increase in the former and the decrease in the latter surpassed the favorable relative proportion of the year previous.

These are interesting and important figures and indicate a healthy Province. It is proof that British Columbia's Board of Health has nothing to regret in the course it has pursued in an effort to bring the people to a realization of the value of the human asset. Although it may not take all the credit for this excellent showing the statistics themselves provide tangible evidence of the efficacy of the educational pro-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Overlooking Our Duty?

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR,—Supplementing "Footlighters" excellent report of the Dramatic Company's production of "Tony, the Convict," at the Grand on Monday last, might I call attention to the manner in which audiences invariably respond to the singing of God Save the King. Anyone who imagines that Creston people are not patriotic would do well to forget it, at the same time the fact that our audiences fail to stand to attention while the king is being sung is to be regretted, and gives the wrong impression. As matters stand it would appear that about fifty per cent of those who attend the theatre as soon as they hear the first chord of the national anthem make a rush for the door. Possibly they may whisper on the way, "Them's my sentiments" but this hardly fills the bill, especially when so many school children are in attendance. Why not everyone stand at attention until the orchestra stops playing or the singing is ended? There is always plenty of time to reach for hats, put on rubbers, and get outside before the last taxi has been engaged. FOOTLIGHTER, JR.

Memorial Library Building?

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR,—Several letters have appeared in your columns on the subject of the Soldiers' Memorial, and it seems unfortunate that there should be so much difference of opinion. At the public meeting that was called to consider the memorial before votes were taken one leading citizen expressed the matter well when he said that while he had his own preference for a building he would cheerfully fall in with the views of a majority whatever those views were. As we know, the majority decided in favor of a stone monument, and a large number who would have preferred a building sacrificed their wishes and fell in with this idea. The committee appointed, however, have found great difficulty in the way of a stone monument. No one wants a poor monument, unworthy of their town, therefore if the majority cannot put up a worthy monument, surely it is not too much to ask them what the minority have to offer in the way of a building. When a library is suggested Mr. Bevan writes as though he and his friends could get up a special memorial of their own. Is this playing the sportsman? Is it pulling together? No one wants two or three memorials, but what we do want is that all Creston Valley should join in one memorial, whatever it may be. Circumstances have changed since the public meeting was held; then a gloomy picture was drawn of a derelict building falling into dis-repair, with no one responsible for its condition, and no funds for its upkeep; no wonder the view prevailed of an artistic monument of imperishable stone. Now that view seems to fail, and the Creston Public Library has come forward offering to take responsibility and provide funds for the repair of a library memorial building if it be put up. At the same time it should be clearly understood that nothing has been done, and nothing can be done, until the Memorial Committee call a public meeting, and until all the subscribers in the Valley have been consulted. A local architect has generously designed for us an exceedingly handsome building; in part concrete but mostly wood. It provides a mere corner for the library as at present constituted; the rest of the space may be for other purposes. It provides a home for the machine guns, and a home for two brass plates, and whatever memorial of the war that may be selected and got together. There is nothing to hinder the Veterans or any others with imagination or interest from advising how such a building might be made truly memorial to those who made the great sacrifice. In passing we may add that any memorial is a true memorial; whether it be statue or column or building or mere inscription, which makes us think again the thoughts of 1914, or which reminds us of the heroic dead. Too many marble piles to-day call for the stare of curiosity; nothing more. In conclusion, we of the library board have made a fair offer; an offer to take up a burden rather than a benefit. A poor stone monument would have no dignity; a handsome memorial library would at least have that, and would at the same time do good in and for Creston. If that is a crime we are cheerful criminals, and we hope Messrs. Buttfield and Bevan will join us. CRESTON AND DISTRICT PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARD.

A Convincin' Cuss

A. R. Swanson, who was delegate-at-large at the "United Farmers" convention at Vancouver last month, made quite a favorable impression on that gathering if one may judge by newspaper reports. The Daily Province reporter sizes him up in this way: "Swanson of Creston was not after honors, but made a great impression on all. He is a big man; nervous, of few words. Yet he has such sincerity that when he comes to the front of the house and asks earnestly for a thing he gets it every time."

When Bearcat Went Dry

The story of "When Bearcat Went Dry," which will have a special showing at the Grand on Monday night, has an appeal for every red blooded citizen. Its scenes are laid in the Kentucky Cumberland, where the elements of life are rugged, and where majesty and meagreness endure side by side.

"Bearcat" is the nickname given to the young boy, who is the hero of the picture. He returns from his exile, whither he had been driven by revenue officers who are seeking out illicit stills. As the boy looks down from the mountainside he sees Blossom, the girl he loves, in another man's arms. From that day on there is war to the knife between Bearcat and Henderson yet when the time comes for his revenge the boy tries to save his enemies' life in one of the most thrilling scenes ever depicted on the screen.

Henderson is dying from wounds he received in a fight where Bearcat, too, is terribly wounded in trying to save his life. As the boy bends over to hear what he thinks are the last words of the man who stole the affections of the girl he loves and hears him say, "I'm dying." Bearcat says, "I hope ter God yer air, but afore ye dies yer goin' ter be married. Maybe I'm dyin' too—I don't know—but I aims to last long enough ter stand up with yer first."

The terrible mistake was righted in the end, and Bearcat and Blossom fulfilled the prophecy made on the mountain side that summer evening: "When I've done somethin' worth doin', and when ye're a little bit older yourself, Blossom, you're goin' ter marry me, an' we're goin' ter dwell ther—together."

Plan Co-operative Selling at Erickson

The first likely-looking move to establish a much talked of co-operative selling concern, which will in due course include a modern general store, was accomplished at Canyon City on Saturday afternoon, when twenty-seven Valley citizens, representing the five locals of the United Farmers, met for the purpose of taking action in the matter.

The gathering was presided over by W. G. Littlejohn, president of the Erickson local, while T. R. Mawson of Canyon was chosen as secretary. Practically all present were of the opinion that a co-operative association of this sort was desirable, but several of the delegates expressed doubt as to the desirability of taking immediate action; six months later being cited as a more likely time, from the financial standpoint, to launch the enterprise. However, after the whole situation had been thoroughly discussed the matter was put to a vote and by a margin of 20 to 7 it was decided to get on with the project, subject, of course, to the matter being acceptable to the majority of the membership of the Wynndel, Creston, Erickson, Canyon and Lister locals, all of which will convene meetings to ascertain the feelings of individual members, after which Saturday's delegates will re-assemble at Erickson to proceed with permanent organization.

The new organization will be known as the Erickson Co-operative Association, and headquarters will be at Erickson. No definite announcement was made as to the store; that is, whether an effort will be made to purchase the present McLeod retail concern, or whether a brand new store will be opened in premises that may at present be available or in a store building to be erected.

Neither was the price at which shares in the association will be sold at fixed upon. $100 a share was suggested, but the general impression was that $25 per share would be a more attractive figure. However, between now and the next meeting an effort will be made to discuss the proposition with all who are known to favor the organization of the co-operative association so that at the next meeting all the details of the project may be intelligently discussed and disposed of.

Imports of hay into the Valley this winter have broken all previous records. Between the several selling agencies and individual buying it is calculated that almost 100 cars of this kind of feed have been shipped into the Valley in the past five months.

Why "Auto-Shoes"?

We figure that any automobile casing has a right to be called a "tire"—whether it's good, bad or indifferent. And we agree with the opinion that an exceptionally good casing deserves a distinctive name.

Ames Holden "Auto-Shoes" are miles better in performance than ordinary tires. That has been proved to our satisfaction. So we think it's a good idea to identify such unusual mileage givers by an easy-to-remember name—"Auto-Shoes."

The main purpose of the name is to help you to get cheaper mileage. The guarantee behind Ames Holden "Auto-Shoes" insures that you get it. If necessity for adjustment should ever arise you will find that you will get satisfaction without trouble or red tape.

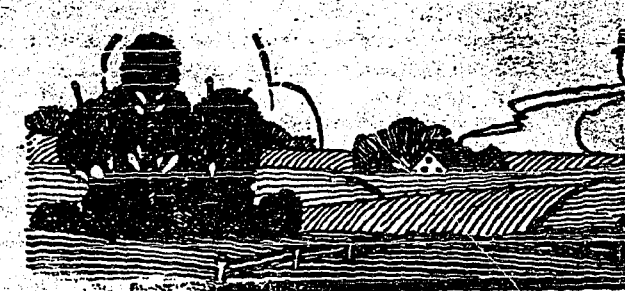

They are the principal advantages that go with the name Ames Holden "Auto-Shoes." Drop in and let us show you the tires themselves.

"We will wait for them here," he said. "When they land, each of you will remain in the position in which he has been placed. I will demand that they throw down their arms and surrender. If they refuse, and fire, we will return their fire. But, boys," he adjured, "they mustn't get past us."

"They'll not!" came in a growl as from one man.

"And remember, let them fire first." He glanced about him, and motioned Danny Farney a little apart from the others.

"Danny," he said—and there was a note in his voice that the boy had never heard before—"to-night I want you to bury all personal enmity against Dalton, and fight toe to toe with me and the others, for our World. Don't shoot, unless you have to. God knows, this thing is terrible enough to have to do, without letting passion and bloodlust master us."

"Just as you say, Dorkin," Danny replied. "I wasn't aimin' ter take any chance till Sagawa comes back, anyway."

"That's right, Danny. Now you keep this position, and I'll place the others. Then I'm going up to the cabins for a moment or so." He reached for the lad's hand and gripped it in his.

Fifteen minutes later, having stationed his men, Dorkin went up to the cabin. He found the patient, much improved, Edna sitting beside him. Mrs. LaPeer had given over going to the Settlement. She had not wanted to go, in the first place, and welcomed the excuse of having visitors to keep her at home.

Dorkin remained a short time talking to his guests. "By the way," he remarked, as he turned to go, "if you happen to hear shooting during the night, do not be concerned. Word has reached us that a wolf-pack is in the region of the Preserve, and to-night we are going to stay awake on the chance of a shot." And bidding them good-night and pleasant dreams, he passed out.

As he stepped from the cabin, Willow came from the shadows and confronted him.

"Dorkin," she said, "is Dalton an' his men comin' to-night?"

"Who told you they were, Willow?" he asked in surprise.

"Nobody told me. I know, that's all. What did you do with my rifle?" she demanded.

"I put it away, Willow."

"Why?"

"Because I was afraid you might hurt somebody."

She threw back her head, and laughed the old, defiant laugh he used to hear.

"Well, why shouldn't I hurt somebody?" she asked. "That's what the rest of you intend doin', if you have to, ain't it?"

Dorkin shook his head. "But you mustn't run into danger, Willow, the Wisp," he admonished. "I want you to promise me that you will go into the cabin, and stay there till morning."

"Well, I shan't do it!"

She stamped her foot on the sward and tossed her head angrily.

He turned away. All right, Willow, he said. "Of course, I can't make you. But I would feel so much better if I knew you were safe, inside. That's all."

She caught his arm as he turned to go.

"I'm right sorry, Dorkin," she choked. "I'll go in. I'll do whatever you say."

"Thanks, Willow, the Wisp."

"Then, good-bye, and God keep you safe."

She reached up and drew his face down against her own wet cheek.

"It's your little pal speakin', Dorkin," she whispered, and kissed him.

CHAPTER XXI

To the watchers in the forest the night passed slowly. Midnight came, but no sign of the raiders. The hours dragged by, and still no dip of paddle came to listening ears, to vigilant eyes, no shadowy shapes of canoes stealing across the lake.

Then, just as darkness was giving place to dawn, they came. Dorkin, standing in a thicket of birch, close beside the trail, glimpsed them first, and gave the sharp cluck of a partridge, the signal agreed upon to let the other know.

But there was no other sound except the faint click of rifle-hammers being drawn back, and the low hoot of a horned owl, oblivious to their presence.

The canoes came on, abreast, five of them, with two men to a canoe. They beached simultaneously, and the paddlers leaped noiselessly out, and grouped upon the shore.

Once more there sounded the cluck of the disturbed partridge. The little owl gave a startled hoot, and sailed off on soft, silent wings.

The raiders, grouped closely together, were, apparently, receiving their final instructions from the leader.

"You, Bill, Jake and Ben," Dalton was saying, in guarded tones, "look after firing the cabins when we have drawn Dorkin, and whoever else he has with him, away. You, Speers and Hanley, take this sack and get that old silver grey and her puppies. You other boys know what animals you're to get hold of."

Fifteen yards away Dorkin's voice rang out. "Up with your hands! We have ten rifles trained on you and we'll shoot if you move."

A sound, something like a gasp, came from the surprised raiders.

Then Dalton's voice shouted, "It's a bluff, men!"

But all, with the exception of himself and one other, had obeyed that crisp command.

"Bluff, hell!" growled one, his hands high in the air. "That feller never bluffs."

Dorkin stepped from the thicket, with presented rifle. "Dalton," he said quietly, "it's no use, I've got you and your band dead to rights. Throw down that gun."

In answer Dalton pitched his rifle forward, firing from the hip. The bullet grazed Dorkin's cheek.

Then, cutting the lifting shadows of the lake, there came a streak of flame, and from a canoe, in which sat two men, a small-calibre rifle barked.

Dalton sank slowly down on the rocks, and lay still. The trappers had stepped out from the woods and ranged themselves up alongside of Dorkin.

A voice among Dalton's men cried, "Everybody run for it!" But before they could act on the suggestion, Dorkin's men closed in on them.

One of them, however, a big man, dressed in grey tweeds and wearing a felt hat, broke through the guard and leaped for the forest, turning at its edge to fire at the men who pursued him. They returned his fire just as he entered the protecting timber.

As the pursuers turned to rejoin their comrades, a form reeled back from the trees and sprawled on the open.

"Wall, we got him, arter all!" cried Pa Washburn. "Dorkin," he called, "when ye get them yellor-backs tied up secure, would ye mind comin' over here and see if you know who this feller is, as we've plunked!"

The prisoners were being securely bound, hand and foot.

"I'll make up my mind later just what I'll do with you," Dorkin informed them as he turned away towards Washburn.

"Man, down, you say, Pop?" he asked as he came up. "Too bad, but not near as bad as I feared it might be. Where is he?"

"He's layin' up thar, jest outside the woods, Dorkin. Come along an' I'll show you."

The faint flush of dawn was spreading in the eastern sky and the shadows were lifting from lake and forest, as Dorkin bent over the still form on the ground, and turned it over so that he could see the face.

"Timberley!" he gasped. "Good God!"

"Timberley!" echoed the settler. "By crissal but it's a sudden end to a chap that's gone wrong."

"Pop," said Dorkin quietly, "take his feet and help me carry him up to my cabin. No, not in that direction,

"All right, Dorkin; I've got my half secure, you jest lead the way. Did ye say he was gone?" asked the settler anxiously.

"No, he isn't dead—not yet. Can you stand a little faster pace, Pop?"

"Me? I can go as fast as you like. Speed up."

In a short time they reached the cabin. They found Mr. Dayton up and dressed, though pale and shaky. LaPeer's wife was trying her best to quiet his agitation. Edna, she informed Dorkin, in answer to his quick question, was in her room, and Willow had gone out, she didn't know where.

Dorkin had taken the precaution to cover Timberley's face with his handkerchief. Beyond giving the wounded man a startled look, the banker paid no attention. He seemed to be in a dazed condition.

20,000 Children Die Violent Deaths

Red Cross Figures of Fatal Accidents In U.S. Are Alarming.

Figures compiled by the Red Cross prove that in the United States, 20,000 children, under fourteen years of age, each, meet violent deaths. Burns, falls, automobile and other vehicular accidents, drowning and poisoning exact the heaviest toll of child life. Forty per cent. of the children who die before reaching their fifth birthday are killed accidentally, while almost 20 per cent. of the deaths claiming those between five and fourteen result from accidents, the compilation showed. After fourteen, accidents cause proportionately fewer deaths. First-aid instruction given swimmers throughout the country by the Red Cross had reduced drowning fatalities from 10,000 to 5,000 annually, the statement said.

CHASE OF A GRIZZLY BEAR—LOVE PHILTRES.

By O-GE-MA-ES (Little Clerk).

(Copyrighted)

To follow up this bear's history, it was a bona fide grizzly all right. It had wandered in from the plains and was killed in a dramatic way shortly afterwards by an Indian named Schni who was paddling in Swan Lake with his young wife, and had been chasing a loon, so had his old flint lock gun loaded with ball. The day was very hot and the Indian's wife was thirsty. Close to them and a few yards in from shore was a beautiful spring of ice cold water which formed a deep pool. Taking the gun and a birch bark Rogan for the water, they made for the spring, and just as the Indian stooped down to fill the vessel he noted a reflection of a bear in the water, and looking up saw him standing on his hind legs just across the pool. The Indian fired and the bullet went right through his heart. Mr. Grizzly tumbled in the water, and he was such a size that they had to come for help to the post to get him out. I traded the skin, which was covered with scars, and being out of season was only fit for cart coverings. It was the largest hide I had ever seen, and I secured his claws and sent them east to my father.

To return to Ba'tese, we boiled our kettle and had a good dinner on the site of the bear episode. He would look at me curiously at times and mutter, "He must be a little mad." "No Ba'tese," but my father's people were Irish, and we let it go, at that. Late in the evening we reached our canoe and an hour's paddle took us to Ba'tese's cabin, where his wife (a very superior woman) kindly rigged me out in some dry clothes.

Next morning I settled up with him and the wind being fair, sailed home. My sail was an oddity, a seamless sack split down the centre with a light yard top and bottom, quite big enough for my small and cranky craft in a wind.

On reaching the post I found a number of women and children all feasting in the kitchen. This was strictly against the rules of the company, so I turned them out and rounded on Murdo, saying, "Is this the way you look after things in my absence?" His excuse was a queer one for these days. O-que-we-sez, an Indian widow, by no means a fascinating person, had bewitched him, and whatever she told him to do, that he had to do. I swore at his folly, told him to buck up and be a man and next time the lady called to try her games, kick her off the premises. He said he would try, in a doubtful sort of tone, but in a few days the same thing occurred, and I decided to send him to headquarters at Fort Ellis for his own good as well as the company's. So, exit Murdo.

Love Philtres.

I had a handsome moose skin jacket trimmed with otter fur, long fringes, and in fact the very latest thing in savagdom. That was getting soiled and I determined to have it washed and re-smoked, and thoroughly made over. Giving it to an old woman (named Mrs. Brass) who did my washing, which included moccasin making and mending, she took it carefully to pieces, and in doing so made a discovery. Sewed firmly in the facing of the coat was a small thin packet of a silver grey powder, and this she brought to me with a very shocked face, exclaiming: "Look, Ogemages, what I found in your coat," and shaking her head said, "Some bad girl tried to witch you and make you love her!" I laughed and said, "Well, she did not succeed, as I am quite fancy free at present and have no sweetheart." There was no sequel to this love philtre, nor did I ever discover who placed the powder in the coat.

Attempt to Poison.

There was a much more serious attempt made on a worthy man's life in the spring at this post. It was just about sugar time and the natives were tapping some ash-maple trees and occasionally bringing me in a little sugar or syrup. We had a large boat shed here, and it was customary to build at least two York boats yearly. On the last ice arrived Mr. Angus McLeod from Manitoba House, an experienced boat builder. He was a very fine fellow, married, with a nice little family, whom he had left at home. I did not wish to put Angus in the ordinary men's house, so had quarters fitted up for him in a small building just outside the gates of the post, where he was quite comfortable, and he at once got busy at the boats.

Some little time elapsed, and in one of my daily visits to the boathouse, I found Angus in low spirits, and on questioning him, found he was being bothered by an Indian woman of middle age who had entered his house on several occasions in the evening, and would evidently have liked him to pay her attention. He told her to go out, and this she did reluctantly, muttering to herself, and looking, Angus said, very wicked over it. I cheered him up and finally had him laughing over the incident. A day or two later we were walking down to the boathouse together when a little Indian girl approached, handed Angus a small piece of maple sugar and then ran off. Angus turned the sugar over and then handed it to me, saying: "It does not look very tempting." Just then a starved looking Indian dog passed us, and I whistled and chuckled him the sugar. Like train-dogs he never stopped to taste it, but swallowed it in a gulp and ran on towards the boathouse. Next morning Angus called at my office with a very grave face and asked me to accompany him. We walked towards the boathouse, and on the other side of it, just in the bush was our dog friend of yesterday, laying dead. Evidently the sugar must have contained a violent poison to have acted so quickly.

Angus was quite upset. He said he knew that squaw would have his life and wanted me to send him home at once, with the boats half finished. This, of course, was out of the question, and I finally decided to take him in my quarters and have him share my mess (though against rules), but it was most vital that the boats be ready for the trip to York at any cost.

On searching for the woman who had made overtures to him, she could not be found, having left hurriedly, and we all thought from a guilty conscience. It was a happy day for Angus McLeod when, having finished the boats, he left what he called the heathen hole.

Plea for Support of Militia

We Must Be Prepared for Emergencies, Says Gen. Burstall.

Calgary.—"A distinct duty reposes on those who are chief stockholders in this country to support the militia as it is their interests and their honor which is protected by the maintenance of such a force," declared Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Burstall, inspector-general of Canadian forces, at a luncheon given in his honor here.

"We should take warning from Russia," he said, "and have the militia prepared to deal with any trouble endangering the existence of the state if it became too astute for local police to handle."

Sir Henry defined Bolshevism as the rule of two or three men, aided by men "who have no stake in the country." Even an attempt at Bolshevism would warrant the existence of the militia, he declared.

Alberta Prize Beef Steers

Province Will Demonstrate Types of Cattle in Great Britain.

Edmonton.—A practical demonstration in England of the type of beef cattle now being produced in Alberta, will be made next May or June, when the Department of Agriculture of the province will ship overseas fifty or sixty of the best beef steers that can be obtained, including the steers from the University that won honors at Chicago and Guelph, these to be fully advertised and officially shown at Birkenhead during the ten days in quarantine before they have to be slaughtered.

This announcement was made by Hon. Duncan Marshall in the Legislature when a sum was considered in the estimates for this purpose.

Big Camp at Fort Norman

Fort Norman Oil Fields Have Become Quickly Populated.

Fairbanks, Alaska.—Daniel Cadzow, factor of Rampart House, one of the northernmost posts of the Hudson's Bay Fur Company here, states that Mounted Police patrols returning from their annual mail trips into the Fort MacPherson and Mackenzie River districts, declared an immense camp is being formed in the Fort Norman oil fields, with hundreds already en route and other awaiting the opening of spring traffic.

The Fort Norman field, Cadzow said, is 300 miles long and 200 miles wide, along the Mackenzie River, the oil-bearing area embracing 600,000 square miles. One well sunk by the Imperial Oil Company, gushed 1,000 barrels an hour at 800 feet, according to Cadzow's information, and arrangements are being made to pipe the oil to the nearest navigable stream.

The Canadian Government has two airships for communication with the oil fields.

Propose Formation of New Province Out of Yukon and Northern B.C.

Development of Resources is Drawing Large Population to the Northern Territory

Ottawa.—The formation of a new province of Canada consisting of all that portion of British Columbia which lies to the north of the 52nd parallel line north latitude and including the Yukon Territory, subject to the approval of a majority of the electors of all the territory mentioned as determined by a plebiscite, is being moved in the House of Commons by Col. C. W. Peck, V.C. (Skeena), and seconded by Dr. A. Thompson (Yukon).

Col. Peck's resolution reads:

(1) Whereas it has been the policy of Canada to establish new provinces as the country develops as was done by the creation of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta; and

(2) Whereas, the natural resources of Northern British Columbia and those of the Yukon are of a similar character; and

(3) Whereas, these resources are being developed and as a result the population of this territory is rapidly increasing; and

(4) Whereas, it is fully expected that the census to be taken this year will show sufficient population to warrant the creation of another province; and

(5) Whereas the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway created a natural political division;

(6) Resolved, that a new province be formed consisting of all that portion of British Columbia which lies to the north of the 52nd parallel of north latitude and including the Yukon Territory, subject to the approval of a majority of the electors of all the territory mentioned as determined by a plebiscite.

Anarchy Rampant in Germany Premier Lloyd George Attacks Socialism

Cities Are Reported to be in Throes of Revolution.

Berlin.—The mid-German industrial areas are again in the throes of anarchy in consequence of the Communists' determination to force a widespread general strike in protest against the Government's action in massing security police for the purpose of checking the rioting and plundering which have been going on for the past few days. The lignite districts near Mansfeld are the chief centre of the present disturbances, which not only extend to derailing trains by removing the track, but are spreading to serious bomb outrages upon the judiciary buildings in nearby cities and towns, including Leipzig, Dresden, Fribourg and Rodewische.

Armed bandits operating under the direction of the notorious "Robin-hood" Hoelz, who a year ago terrorized Vogtland, are carrying out hold-ups, robbing savings banks and otherwise spreading terror through the community by the destruction of industrial plants and the seizure of arms.

Dominion's Future Status

Hon. L. A. David Believes Canada Eventually Will Have Complete Independence.

Montreal.—Hon. L. A. David, provincial secretary, speaking before the Women's Canadian Club, as a representative of the French-Canadians in Canada, declared his belief that Canadians would eventually possess complete autonomy as a nation. He predicted that they would be dominated by a purely "Canadian mentality," compounded of the mental attitudes of the inhabitants of all her provinces, but quite free from imperialistic leanings or racial prejudices.

"I am not at present a separatist," said Mr. David, "but I believe that our country has at the present time the right to look forward toward the most perfect measure of autonomy it deems possible."

Demand of Teachers

Calgary Pedagogues Will Put Limit On Their Compromise.

Calgary.—Local Teachers' Alliance have practically decided that a fifty-fifty compromise on their salary demands would be as far as they would go in meeting the school board.

The teachers' original demands made increases totalling $177,000. The normal increases under the old schedule would have been $18,000. The board was willing to make increases to bring this to $40,000. The fifty-fifty compromise will be $88,000.

Says It Presents a Greater Menace to the Country Than War.

London.—A bitter attack on Socialism was made by the Prime Minister in a speech at a luncheon of "The new members of the Coalition Group," as the participants in the luncheon party were styled. "The military dangers which united the parties have disappeared," said Mr. Lloyd George, "but greater, more insidious, more permanent dangers still confront us. The great peril is the rise to power of a new party with new purposes of the most subversive character."

"It calls itself 'Labor.' It is really Socialist. It is tearing the parties to pieces on its way to tearing society to pieces. Those who are inclined to agree with Mr. Asquith and Lord Bantock that the Labor Party is a 'bogey' should read the Labor press for a week."

"Socialism is fighting to destroy everything that the great prophets and leaders of both parties—Unionist and Liberal—have labored for generations to upbuild. Parliamentary institutions are as much menaced as private interests and the rule of class organization is to be substituted for them."

B.C. Beer Problem

Near Beer Is Dealt a Death Blow in the Legislature.

Victoria.—By a vote of 31 to 23, the Legislature put the quietus to the now famous beer clause, when, in addition to refusing to accept the Mackenzie amendment designed to raise the limit for non-intoxicating liquors from one per cent. alcohol by weight to two per cent., it dealt near beer its death blow by adopting an amendment presented by M. B. Jackson, to the effect that no one, other than a Government vendor shall sell or deal in any liquid known or described as beer, near beer, or by any name whatever commonly used to describe malt or brewed liquor.

As a result of a two-hour discussion on the moderation bill, the measure was got through with and the committee rose reporting the bill complete with amendments.

That does not mean that the beer problem has been eliminated. The next move on the part of those who seek to have been sold in clubs, hotels, etc., will be an amendment presented when the bill comes up for approval on reports. Then it is stated a move will be made to insert a clause permitting beer of a standard strength to be sold 1 to 3 per cent. by weight of about 8 per cent. proof spirits.

The union Methodist Presbyterian service in the latter church on Sunday night attracted a crowd that filled all the available seating space, and much of the standing room, the attendance being in the neighborhood of 250. The church was prettily decorated with flowers and the address by Rev. J. A. James, and the music supplied by the Presbyterian choir, were most appropriate for such an Easter occasion.

Almost 90 couples were in evidence at the dance in the Mercantile Hall on Tuesday night, the music for which was supplied by the Banff dance orchestra. A special train brought some 40 guests from Sirdar and Wynndel.

Andrew when their only daughter, Miss Hazel, was united in marriage with Percy Boffey, in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The couple were unattended, but the bride, who wore a stylish costume of white crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of white carnations, was given away by her father, while the wedding march was played by Miss Edna Holmes. Following the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner, prior to which the young couple received the hearty congratulations of all the guests with whom they are highly esteemed judging by the many splendid wedding gifts received. Mr. and Mrs. Boffey will reside on the groom's ranch adjoining town and as both enjoy the friendship of a wide circle of acquaintances it goes without saying that best wishes are extended by all for a long, happy and prosperous wedded life.

Present Purse to Rev. J. S. Mahood

Successful even beyond the expectation of the most optimistic of its promoters was the reception tendered Rev. J. S. Mahood in the Parish Hall on Monday night, the noteworthy feature of which was the presentation to him of a purse containing $150.

While the arrangements for the affair were in the hands of a committee of members of Christ Church, whose efforts were ably supplemented by the Ladies' Guild of the church, the reception was in every sense of the term a citizens send-off, the 90 or more guests assembled representing every shade of religious belief as well as almost every point in the Valley.

The first part of the evening was devoted to whist, with some twenty tables of players in evidence, and this was followed by a short musical programme in which Mrs. Garland, Mr. Chorlton, Mr. Collis and Rev. Mr. Mahood contributed selections, and at the conclusion of which Major Mallandaine introduced the guest of the evening to the gathering in a view timely remarks in which he reviewed some of the outstanding occasions in which Mr. Mahood had lent a helpful hand in the secular affairs of the community; notably at patriotic services and functions of many sorts, the unveiling of the temporary soldiers' memorial, at board of trade banquets, and in connection with Masonic lodge matters. Just how much the guest's efforts had been appreciated was evidenced in the large and representative under-ominational gathering, and still more tangibly expressed in the purse which had been raised by a popular subscription to which all had been eager to contribute.

Mr. Henry Lyne followed Major Mallandaine and in a few carefully thought-out sentences commended the broad churchmanship and practical Christianity that Mr. Mahood unfailingly displayed. Not only had the services always been taken in a manner befitting the best traditions of the Anglican church, but it was remarkable that over a period of almost six years no regular service had been overlooked, and this despite physical, climatic and transportation conditions that on occasion were far from ideal. In and out of the pulpit Mr. Mahood had exemplified a citizenship worthy of emulation, and which had been an inspiration to those who came more closely in contact with him. Mr. Lyne concluded by presenting the purse on behalf and accompanied by the best wishes of the citizens of the Valley.

Rev. Mr. Mahood replied in particularly happy fashion. He had early in life adopted the principle of doing his duty as he saw it, and if such procedure gave cause for anyone to worry it was up to other people to do the worrying. That his policy was a workable one it seemed to him was forcefully demonstrated in the large and enthusiastic gathering of citizens that had gathered to honor him on this occasion. He appreciated the many kindly references to himself and his work by Major Mallandaine and Mr. Lyne and assured that the satisfaction his efforts had given in every direction had only been in the fulfilling of an obligation every man owed to the community of which was a part.

The gathering dispersed with the singing of He's a jolly good fellow, Auld Lang Syne and the national anthem—after the serving of a tasty lunch by the ladies of the Guild.

While only visiting Creston once in three weeks for the purpose of taking morning service at Christ Church it is remarkable the wide circle of friends Mr. Mahood has developed amongst members of all the denominations, all of whom will certainly miss his none too frequent trips to Valley points. He will continue to make his headquarters at Queen's Bay and now that he is giving up Creston, will be given additional congregations to handle in the parish of Kootenai of which he is in full charge.
