100 Per Cent Co-Operation Sure

After listening to a very definite and carefully prepared report framed by the select growers' committee, which had been prepared after numerous interviews with local growers, and following the meeting of the Staples' growers and the attendant conference of Manager Staples with the directors of Creston Fruit Growers' Union, the meeting of Valley growers on Saturday afternoon readily adopted the report submitted, along with an accompanying resolution calling upon the growers to attend the adjourned annual meeting of Creston Fruit Growers Union, Ltd., on the 21st, to elect directorsand attend to such other matters as will give force and effect to the committee's recommendations.

Briefly stated the committee advises that the Co-Operative Growers contract be not signed, but that a new contract along pretty much the same lines be drafted into which will go clauses that will safeguard certain local interests, and that when local growers have signed the new contract then the Co Operative Growers are to be approached with a view to having these concessions granted before Creston joins up with the big, new co operative concern.

What is asked is that in view of the fact that Creston is prepared to do its own financing in every direction, local growers shall not be compelled to pay the proposed charge of five cents a box to provide a fund wherewith to buy out the packing houses and business of independent shippers in the Okanagan; nor the one cent a box that the new co-operative intends to charge in order to create a reserve fund.

Creston asks that the Valley should do its own selling and collecting in an area that is generally conceded to be the home market, provided always that Creston prices will be set to correspond with the prices charged for similar commodities by the big co-operative. On such an arrangement being carried out Creston feels that it should not have to pay four cents a box which is the probable assessment if a sub central were established anywhere to take care of the Kootenay shipments. On sales that the Co Operative Growers make of Creston stuff it is agreeable that the usual brokerage charges will be paid by Creston selling agency.

Briefly stated these are the points on which Creston is standing aloof. In a letter read to the meeting from the Co-Operative Growers assurance was given that the temporary committee of ten would recommend to the permanent directors and manager that Creston should be accorded full advantage of lower freight rates enjoyed, and the committee of ten also believed that it was advisable to have a representative at Creston who would act as a sales manager under the big Co Operative supervision, so that on these two points there is already possibility of the concession asked for being granted.

On the point of not pooling with outside points opinion was quite unanimous that Creston had a good case for insisting on a Creston pool for Valley products only. A very peculiar situation obtains at other Kootenay points in the assembling of fruit, which is not of the same high quality as Creston grows, and no one could see the wisdom of Creston helping to bear a burden that was not rightly ours, particularly when we were able and willing to go on our own.

The meeting was presided over by C. F. Hayes, who was chosen for that position at the opening of the session, and following his few introductory remarks the select committee's report was read and explained by the committee chairman, C. B. Garland, who also read the letter from the committee of ten, as well as a telegram from Union president Guy Constable, now at Vernon, which stated that so far only 70 per cent. of the whole B.C. tonnage had been signed, and advising that things were beginning to take the desired Creston turn, and by all means not to delay signing contracts.

In addition to reading the committee's recommendations Mr. Garland very clearly elucidated what might be contentious points, making it quite clear that while the Co Operative contract might be construed as meaning certain things, yet it did not expressly state the things desired, and for that reason should not be signed. He and the other members of the committee heartily concurred in the report made, and had no hesitation in saying that after listening to growers individually, as well as collectively at the Staples growers' meeting along with the ar-

Mrs. Pete Lombardo, is a Cranbrook visitor a few days this week.

Mrs. Jones of Kuskanook was a Sirdar and Creston week-end visitor.

Mrs. Cani was a visitor at Nelson a couple of days last week, returning on Saturday.

BIRTH—At Cranbrook hospital, on March 16th, to Mr. and Mrs. James Mannerino, a son.

The yard crew is now working at night's, starting at 8 o'clock, in order to let work train have things all to themselves in the daytime at the Landing fill.

Mrs. C. M. Goodman was here a few days last week packing up the balance of their household effects, and left again on Saturday for Lumberton, where they are now located.

Vice President Coleman and party arrived at Kootenay Landing on Saturday evening, leaving almost immediately by special train for Cranbrook, with Conductor Greaves and Engineer Joe Sarvis in charge.

Joe Lombardo, who has been on the tug Valhalla, running into Kootenay Landing, has quit the tug and is now located here on the roundhouse staff. He and Mrs. Lombardo will reside here permanently. Joe is a son of Pete Lombardo, section foreman, but has resided at Proctor for some time.

Richard Dennes, Sr., left on Thurs day for his home in England, intending to sail from St. John, N.B., on the 23rd. A number of friends were at the station to see him off and wish him a safe journey. Mr. and Mrs. Dennes, jr., accompanied him as far as Kitchener.

The steam shovel is at work at the cut, just west of the section house, getting out material to fill in at Kootenay Landing. They will make a fill of about 1000 feet of trestle, and figure it will take two months to do it. Mike McCarthy is in charge of the shovel, and Conductor Briggs in charge of the train.

Gus Omer, an employee of the McCabe bridge crew, met with a very serious accident on Monday afternoon. While working on the trestle near Athara he fell off the structure alighting on his back on the ice about thirty feet below. Foreman McCabe immediately took the speeder to Creston for Dr. Henderson who arrived later in the afternoon and gave the injured man every possible attention. He was very severely injured internally and on Tuesday was taken to the Cranbrook hospital, accompanied by Ed. Storm.

The evangelistic services, now being held in the Presbyterian Church, have grown in attendance and interest from day to day. A most enjoyable feature is the singing by the local choirs. Under the leadership of the visitors they have attained remarkable proficiency, and the selections rendered from night to night have been greatly appreciated by large audiences. Not only have seats from the Methodist Church been requisitioned, but planks have also had to be used to provide accommodation for the many who are attending.

The gatherings are characterized by quiet power and there is an entire absence of the sensational. Rev. Mr. Robinson has had Dominion-wide experience and from his travels in many lands is able to bring telling illustrations to augment the power of his message.

Miss Niven's solos are being greatly appreciated by all who have attended, and the work of the pianist is also remarkable and enjoyable.

The services continue until Wednesday, March 28th. On Friday night Mr. Robinson's subject will be "Old Ken's Round Up", a stirring tale of the lumber and mining camps of western Canada, a story that should be heard by everyone.

Staples—Union Growers Combine

For 1923, at any rate, Creston will have but one fruit selling agency. The good work of consolidating the Union and Staples Fruit Company growers under the control of Creston Fruit Growers Union, Limited, was concluded at the adjourned annual meeting of the Union on Wednesday afternoon, which was preceded by another big meeting of all the growers at which the basis of amalgamation was arranged, along the lines suggested by the select growers committee at the meeting on Saturday afternoon.

Wednesday's session reaffirmed its decision to stay out of the Co-Operative Growers, Limited, unless the special terms demanded by Creston are conceded, and that the local ranchers mean business in both getting together in one organization, as well as having these concessions from the Co-Operative, is indicated in the signing up of 75 per cent. of the Valley tonnage on an agreement to that effect.

With this good stroke of business done the adjourned annual Union meeting was proceeded with with Vice-President James Adlard in the chair, President Constable not having as yet returned from Vernon. The only feature of the Union session was the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President—James Compton.
Vice president—Frank Putnam.
Directors—R. B. Staples, R. J. Long, G. E. VanAckeran, Jas. Adlard and E. E. Cartwright.

Before adjournment was taken votes of thanks were tendered retiring president Constable and the board secretary, W. G. Littlejohn, as well as the retiring directors.

At a directors meeting on Wednesday night R. B. Staples was the unanimous choice for manager, and he will immediately take charge of Union affairs, Staples Fruit Company, Limited, being due to retire from the field at the end of the month.

Alice Siding

Mrs. J. W. Parkin left on Sunday for a short holiday visit with friends in Michel.

W. H. Hilton had the bad luck to lose his work horse on Wednesday last. The animal acquired such a severe attack of staggers from eating rushes that it had to be shot.

There is considerable sickness in this locality at present. Mrs. H. F. Wood's case necessitating the attendance of Dr. Henderson.

The young people of Alice Siding were amongst those entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Winch, Creston, on Tuesday night, music and dancing being the features of the evening.

Motorists are having considerable trouble making the grade at the Constable hill these times. On Wednesday night last a party of Wynndel people being autoed home from Creston could get no further and had to hoof it tee rest of the way.

R. Stewart has been busy hauling lumber from Wynndel for a modern poultry house he intends erecting on the ranch this spring.

Dick Smith is busy at present with slashing operations along the right of way for a new fence he is going to build around the ranch.

Most everyone is busy at pruning operations at present and all report the trees having wintered well. Everyone knocked off for Saturday afternoon last to attend the big growers meeting at Creston.

Messrs. Rhodes, Jackson and Anderson report a winter's cut of about 1500 ties, about 000 of which have been shipped but hauling is held up at present due to the poor travelling.

Reed & Mather are waiting for the frost to come out of the ground to finish installing their irrigation system. They have still about 1000 feet of iron main pipe to put in.

FOR SALE—One Spray motor; One 3500 pound truck; one pony, and one span of mares. J. Attwood, Creston.

EGGS FOR HATCHING—Purebred White Wyandotte setting eggs, from good winter layers, $1.25 per setting of 14 eggs. Carl Wigen, Wynndel.

Amateur Mit and Mat Work Pleases

Admirers of amateur boxing and wrestling had a great night's sport on Saturday at the patriotic boxing and wrestling tournament at the Grand Theatre, in aid of the Soldiers' Memorial Fund, the spacious auditorium being filled with well over 200 ring fans, amongst whom was quite a sprinkling of ladies.

The affair was put on under the direct management of R. B. Staples, who was ably assisted by Jimmy Lochead, who not only took part in the night's programme, but also did great work during the past three weeks in developing much of the local talent, and the ten events carded went off without a hitch anywhere.

The presence of Alex. Stewart a Nelson youth of considerable ring experience, along with "Red" Larson and L. Lewis of Kitchener, and Charlie Smith of Porthill, added considerable to the excitement of the evening, and enabled the management to put on an evening's bill that gave everybody their money's worth.

In the wrestling department the Indian rivals, Joe Goodman and Andrew Alex. were seen in action, with the latter successfully defending the Kootenay Valley championship, which he wrested from Goodman at the tournament a year ago. Andrew won in two straight falls, victory coming in the first bout in eight minutes, whilst in the latter fifteen minutes was required to bring victory. On points Goodman would have been declared the winner, as he did most of the work, but unable to pin his rival despite numerous likely looking holds he got on him.

Bert Nelson and Fred Hale gave a fine exhibition of mat work, with the former showing the most class, although Hale scored the only fall, pinning Nelson after about three minutes of speedy effort. In the second bout Nelson had all the best of it and to the judges scored a fall on his opponent which the referee failed to allow.

In the boxing preliminaries, which were staged between the wrestling features, Jack Norris and Frank Crawford went at it hammer and tongs every second of their three one-minute rounds. Hitting was fast and furious with no clinches or sparring for wind. Crawford was possibly the showiest of the pair, but there was no stopping Norris and the judges' decision of a draw was immensely popular.

The second preliminary produced a likely looking juvenile in Luke Castonguay, who hooked up with Donald Spiers for three one-minute periods. Luke has the classiest kind of a left that was working to great advantage throughout, and it was only the agressive tactics of Spiers that entitled him to the draw that was declared.

Jerry Castonguay and Dean Peairs figured in the third preliminary in which honors were quite even, although the go lacked speed and hitting that featured the two previous prelims.

Jimmy Lochead sparred three two-minute rounds with Ted Staples in which the latter showed considerable improvement over his showing with Hetherington a year ago, whilst the fine all round work in defence and offence by Lochead impressed the large crowd that the Valley's bantamweight is going stronger than a year ago when he readily put away Harry Brown, the Lister bruiser.

In the intermission the crowd roared when Dick Bevan appeared in the ring with a challenge to meet Hughie McCreath in a ten round go at catch weights, but which defi the Bruce county stalwart was unable to accept.

Canute Anderson and Ted Payne amused the crowd immensely in their two-minute go at blindfold boxing in which the referee got the most of the punishment going.

Alex. Stewart of Nelson and Sanders Castonguay of Creston had the crowd on its toes all the way through the three rounds they figured in. The latter conceded the Nelson boxer a few pounds and by speed and clever foot work had easily the best of the

"That's a horse of another color." Rexhill appeared aroused, at last. "I remember the old fellow. He must be nearly ready for the bone yard by this time anyhow. Saddle it on him, if you can. Wade's devoted to him. He'd do as much for Santry as for himself, maybe more."

"I've heard about that kind of devotion," the agent sneered, "but I've to see a sample of it."

"Well, you may before long. Your first proposition's no good anyway. It would simply further antagonize Wade's friends. It's quite possible, though, that Santry might have been mixed up in such a brawl. Get him arrested, and then we'll let Wade know, gradually, that our influence is at his command, for a price. I've no objection to that—none at all. By Heaven, we've got to do something."

"We'll do it all right. I'll have a warrant sworn out."

"Meanwhile, Race, go easy with those sheep. Wade was telling me about them, and as a matter of fact of strategy, I had to pretend that I would help him. Move them across the Divide until we see what comes of this Santry affair. I can't go too heavy with the boy right at the start."

"All right." Moran arose. "The sheep don't count much now anyway."

"I don't mind saying, Race," Senator Rexhill observed, a trifle pompously, "that you've done pretty well so far. If you stick to it, you'll not find me ungrateful when the battle is over. You'll be entitled to your reward."

Moran hesitated, seeming to summon courage to say something.

"Maybe you've guessed the reward I'll ask, Senator," he said slowly. "There are some things that mean more to a man than mere money. I'm thinking of Miss Helen."

Rexhill found some difficulty in placing his gaze so that it would appear to naturally fall elsewhere than on Moran. He was mortified by a sense of shame that he could not deal squarely with this aspirant for his daughter's hand. He had been sincere in saying that he would never barter her to further his own interests, but so much hung in the balance here that until the issue really arose he feared to pass upon it. He felt himself stultified by this truth.

"I haven't spoken to her, Senator, because the time has not come, and just now she's too much occupied elsewhere, perhaps. But all my hopes are fixed on her, sir, and when the time does come, I trust you'll not oppose them."

Rexhill coughed to hide what his face might otherwise have shown.

"Well, Race," he said, with a choking sensation that was new to him, "you know what I think of you. As for the rest, well, that will depend entirely upon Helen."

CHAPTER VI.

Murder

"How do you think you'd like to live in Crawling Water?"

Wade looked whimsically at Helen, as she picked her way with the grace of a kitten through the dust of the main street. Carefully though she walked, her shoes and the bottom of her skirt were covered with dust, and gray with it.

"I shouldn't like it," she said, with a little moue. "I don't see why you stay here. You aren't going to always, are you?"

"I reckon it's likely."

"Not—for always?" She had stopped and was looking up into his face with delicious dismay. "That would be awful."

"Most of my friends, and all of my business interests are here. Besides, I have a kind of pride in growing up with this country. Back in the East, things have been settled for so long that a man's only a cog in a machine. Out here, a fellow has a sense of ownership, even in the hills. I think it's because he gets closer to the soil, until he comes to love it and to be almost a part of it."

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed the girl. "That sounds fine, but the reality isn't up to my anticipation of it."

Wade laughed in his hearty way.

"That's only because you haven't been here long enough, Helen."

"There are things that are splendid about the West," she generously admitted. "Its vastness and wholesomeness, and especially its men. I'm sure that's why I first liked you, Gordon, because you were different—not like the general run of young men in the East."

"Oh, there are lots of good men East, too."

"Not so very many. At least, I have seen very few who were at all worth while. There's one, Maxwell Frayne, who has been plaguing me for months; but I don't care for him—much." She was closely watching him as she spoke, and she smiled when he started.

"You'd better not."

"But if I really thought you meant to stay here all the time, I'm sure I'd love him devotedly. Now"—she eyed him mischeviously—"I think this would be a nice place to call home, don't you know, just for fun, and then spend most of the time in New York and London. See that man staring at me!"

"How, staring at you?"

Wade turned and looked in the direction she indicated, surprised at the suggestion that she was being annoyed in Crawling Water, where chivalry to women ran high.

"Oh, he didn't mean anything, I daresay."

"They're friends of mine, and curious, perhaps." He referred to a group of cattle men, across the street, who did seem to be staring and talking, with some indecision in their attitude. "I wonder if anything can have happened? Oh, I guess not. Well, what would I do in London?"

"I didn't say anything about you being in London, did I?"

"Well, it's safe to say that where you were, I'd want to be, at any rate. Haven't I made two trips to Chicago for no real reason except to see you?" he demanded, fast slipping into the thralldom of her fascination.

She viewed him through half-closed eyes, knowing that the pose has always allured him.

"Don't you think you'd be kept busy looking after me?" she playfully asked. "Seriously, I hate an idle man, but I don't know what you'd find to do there. What a question. You'd have to have investments that would take you over every year or two."

"Now you're trying to make a city man of me," he said, half in jest. "Besides,"—a dogged note crept into his voice—"I'd have the right to expect something of you, wouldn't I?"

"Not the right, but the privilege," she answered softly.

"This is where the Purnells live." He turned her into the pathway to the door. "This is what I'd like, a neat little home like this, with a couple of kiddies and some dogs. Then I could spend my out-door time at the ranch."

Before Helen could reply to this, Mrs. Purnell appeared on the threshold to welcome them, but to Wade's surprise, she told them that Dorothy was not there.

"Oh, I'm so sorry," said Helen, with intense relief.

"I don't know where she went either," the mother went on. "She was out for a few minutes soon after you left, Gordon. Then she came back and called out something to me, but I didn't catch what she said. Before I knew what she was doing she had saddled her pony and ridden off. But come right in. I don't think she'll be gone long."

They entered and Helen, graciously choosing to overlook the fact that this was evidently Wade's second visit there within a very short time, sought to bestow him with her fastfulness to Mrs. Purnell. She would have been amazed could she have guessed that she was actually arousing him to resentment. He felt somehow, that she was patronizing their hostess, who was a woman of refinement, even if she lacked the artificiality of manner that Helen affected. He was sincerely glad when the visit came to an end.

"You must come again," said Mrs. Purnell, in a spirit of friendliness.

"So glad to have met you," Helen replied. "I hope to have the pleasure of meeting your daughter, too, before we leave Crawling Water."

"They're splendid women, both of them," Wade remarked, as they walked back toward the centre of the town.

"Oh, yes," Helen agreed, without much spirit. "Nice, comfortable home people, I suppose."

"Best kind in the world."

"Gordon!" Helen laughed good-naturedly, facing him as she walked. "What in the world has been the matter with you to-day? We usually get on so well together, and to-day, if I do say it, only my unwillingness to quarrel has kept us from it."

"Surely, I haven't . . ."

"Maybe not. Maybe I imagined it. But Crawling Water is a lot more real than London, to my way of thinking."

"You haven't been to London."

"I'm not likely to go, either," he retorted.

Her red lips curled in a way that seemed to indicate that she thought he would go. Already, she was planning to get him out of Crawling Water and beyond the influence of Dorothy Purnell.

As they turned into the main street again, a man leaving a group near the livery stable, and mounting a horse, rode toward them.

"I wonder what's up now?" Wade muttered, recognizing the horseman as one of the Trowbridge outfit.

"Mr. Wade. Just a minute." With the grace of a Centaur, the rider swung his mount in beside them and doffed his hat. "Two of Jensen's herders have been shot. I thought you ought to know about it."

"What?" The ranch owner's jaw dropped at the news.

"It's true, sir. Word just came in."

"Thanks, Barker." Wade pulled himself together, as the restless pony raced back to the barn. "I must go, Helen," he went on, turning to the girl at his side. "There's been fighting—murder, perhaps—out near the ranch. Santry will need me." He was uneasy lest the old plainsman should have been concerned in the shooting.

"You'll take me to the hotel?"

"Of course, yes! Would you mind walking a little faster?" They quickened their pace. "I'm sorry, Helen; but I must hurry to the ranch." Even at that moment he could not but reflect that there would have been no need to take Dorothy home. Somehow, the ways of the East seemed to fit less and less aptly into the life of Crawling Water.

On his way to the livery stable after his horse, Wade did some rapid thinking. Santry might have been concerned in the shooting, but his employer thought not. The old fellow had promised to stay at home, and his word was as good as another man's bond. It was too bad, certainly, that the thing should have happened just when Senator Rexhill's promised aid had seemed in a fairy way to settle this controversy. Now, the whole thing was more upset than ever, for Moran and Rexhill could hardly be blamed if they backed up their own men, especially if the herders had been blameless, as was probably the case. Yet if the Senator did this, Wade knew that a bloody little war would be the outcome.

"Where's Trowbridge, Barker?" he asked of the cowpuncher, whom he found waiting at the stable.

"At the ranch, I think."

Power From South Jutland

THE HUMAN FACTORY

Its Motive Power is Rich, Red Blood

The human body is the busiest factory in the world. There is no eight-hour day, no slack season, no holidays, no cessation of its labor at any time. Day and night, work is carried on in the workshop of your body and it never ceases until the engine—your heart—stops forever.

The factory of your body has its motive power without which it would cease at once. That power is rich, red, healthy blood, which keeps your whole system efficient and which drives away all disease that may attack it. Often, however, the blood begins to fail and becomes thin and poor. It becomes loaded with waste and charged with poisons. Then it is that your bodily workshop goes wrong; your physical machinery becomes disorganized, and you fall ill. You become anaemic, perhaps the nerves break down, or you begin to suffer from indigestion, neuralgia, general debility, with pains in the back, head or side. In this condition of bloodlessness Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what you need. Their one mission is to make rich, red blood which brings health and energy to every part of the body. Mr. Raymond Webber, Welland, Ont., tells what these pills did for him as follows:—"My blood was thin and watery, and I was in a badly run-down condition. Pimples broke out on my body which caused me much discomfort. I would catch cold easily, which aggravated my condition. My brother advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking about eight boxes I felt that I was again a well man. I have since recommended the pills with good results to others."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for 2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Gun Men

Law Enforcement the Only Real Protection to the Citizen

Sir Basil Thomson, former Chief of Scotland Yard, recently in Chicago, said what most Americans knew to be true. An English crook does not work with a gun. If he is caught with it he goes in for life. He stays in for life. For this reason the English citizen keeps his life when assaulted by a crook. The English are called a law-abiding people. They make their laws stick against criminals. That would seem to be the easiest possible way to be law abiding. It does not cost the peaceful citizen anything and it adds much to the pleasure, profit and length of life. Americans evidently prefer that there should be no prohibition of the manufacture of the one-hand gun, no real penalty for the carrying of it, and a doubtful penalty for the use of it. The majority of Americans are as law-abiding as the majority of Englishmen, but they are not law-enforcing.—Chicago Tribune.

Credit and Exchange

In spite of all the mad outbreaks of the Government during the last few years we have to our credit the facts that we were the first country to balance our budget, the first to reduce taxation, the first to meet an external debt and the first to suggest scaling down the sums still owing to us. There is a point where the exchange reflects a country's credit beyond anything else, and our financial soundness, judged by such evidence as those we have suggested, is becoming more clear to the world.—Manchester Guardian.

Fertile Land in The Pas

Reclamation of Many Acres of Land in the Carrot River Valley

Three survey parties connected with the Canadian Branch of Interior have just returned from the Carrot River valley triangle, adajacent to The Pas. Three years have now been spent obtaining information on the reclamation of some eight hundred thousand acres of land in the Carrot River valley, which is reported by these engineers to be the richest and most fertile soil known in Western Canada. It is understood that further reconnaissance survey work will be proceeded with this summer in the vicinity of the Demasbire rapids on the Saskatchewan River, at the head of Lake Winnipeg. Here, it is claimed by experts, locks will be so constructed as to regulate the entire flooded area tributary to the Saskatchewan River as far west as Prince Albert. The drop the water would have at these rapids is about 25 feet which is said to be ample for the successful drainage of the whole Carrot River valley triangle.

Interesting British Youth in Canada

Full Summer Course at Agricultural Schools in Alberta

A direct stimulus to British-Canadian immigration, particularly in turning the minds of England's youth, agriculturally inclined, towards farming opportunity in Canada, is contained in the announcement that Mr. E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is awarding a full summer course at the agricultural schools of Alberta to the four prize winners of the Young Farmers' Clubs of Great Britain. Few schemes, so far devised with an encouragement of desirable immigration in view, are calculated to have the permanent and lasting effect of this one, with the best and most accurate knowledge of farming conditions in the Canadian West implanted by Canada's foremost agricultural experts in youthful minds cultivated to assimilate it, and capable of dissemipating their impressions among the youth of Great Britain.

The four selected boys will arrive in Canada early enough to commence their summer course at the Alberta agricultural schools in May. They will be given as thorough and comprehensive an impression of Western Canadian agricultural conditions as possible in the time, visiting different areas and such agricultural fairs and exhibitions as offer. They will return to England in the fall, where arrangements have been made for them to write up their experiences in the agricultural press of the British Isles.

The benefits which may follow in the wake of this scheme are manifold. No phase of Canadian immigration has in the past, produced such excellent results as that of young boys from England who have grown up with the land and rapidly absorbed its ideas and ideals. Could the settlement be induced of those with expert agricultural knowledge and experience in their formulative years, a tide of very valuable colonists might set in. For the main part agricultural students in the British Isles are farmers' sons, and this dissemination of authentic information on Western Canada conditions in a class Canada has always considered most eminently desirable as settlers, cannot but be productive of satisfactory results.

AT 73 SHE THANKS TANLAC FOR HEALTH

Has Found It Quick and Unfailing Source of Relief Says Calgary Woman

That Tanlac is the ideal strength and body builder for elderly people has been conclusively proved by the statements of those who have tested its remarkable merits. Further evidence of this fact is furnished by the experience of Mrs. C. J. Harris, 226 15th Ave., East, Calgary, Alberta, who is now seventy-three years of age.

"Tanlac has been my stand-by now for three or four years," says Mrs. Harris. "Before I knew about it I had been losing weight and feeling all run-down for a long time. My nerves were bad, I couldn't sleep and just seemed to be on a general decline. My strength and energy nearly all left me and some days I could hardly get around at all.

"It was astonishing how quickly Tanlac had me feeling right again. I began to pick right up and finished my fourth bottle feeling fine. Now whenever I begin to feel the least bit tired or run-down I just get a bottle of Tanlac and soon I am all right again."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35-million bottles sold.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, MAR. 23

Now is the Accepted Time

For a town that has not, of late, been in the habit of taking its religious life seriously it is a bit remarkable to hear references to the amount of good that is being done by the Rev. F. A. Robinson and his assistants at the evangelistic services that are in progress at St. Stephen's Church, in which both the Methodist and Presbyterian congregations are co-operating.

While the penitent-bench feature of the oldtime revival is absent, none the less is believed to be the good accomplished by the workers in charge, and with some the belief prevails that the effect will be more lasting than is generally the case with these over-night public conversions—more especially with the young.

In the way of doing good to individuals, much that is praiseworthy will be accomplished. But what of the future? In a few days the evangelist and his helpers will be no longer with us, and is the seed that they have sown likely to come to fullest fruition if the divided state Creston finds itself in spiritually is permitted to continue, particularly with the Methodist section of the community, which finds itself pastorless, and likely to be in that state for some weeks to come; for reasons there is no occasion to state here.

For at least a week previous to the opening of this evangelistic campaign the Presbyterians and Methodists were able to unite in special services of prayer and intercession for the success of the Robinson evangel—and with excellent results.

For at least three Sundays and five nights a week, for almost three weeks, they have been able to be of one accord in one place in an endeavor to deepen the spiritual life of the Valley.

Methodist musicians have occupied places alongside Presbyterians in the latter's church, and the children have been able to gather for three Sundays under one roof to take their Sunday school instruction, and certainly none have been the worse for it.

A Methodist piano has been used to help out the service of praise, and seats from the Methodist Church have been used in the kirk, and Methodist and Presbyterian have sat cheek by jowl, and both inwardly and outwardly have exclaimed that it has been good for them to be there—indiscriminately mixed though they were.

But on the 28th, if present arrangements hold, the evangelist and his helpers will be gone, and what then? Are the seats that were no respectors of persons during the special services to be carted back to their former sectarian abode?

And the vocalists who felt so much at home singing the praises of the Almighty together; are they, on April 1st, to be pouring forth their notes for the benefit of Presbyterian or Methodist ears exclusively?

And the youngsters, are they to be cooped up in hatfuls in separate edifices, and given to believe that the big time and the good time they had in common for three Sundays was really a bad thing after all?

The Presbyterians and Methodists of Creston have done themselves proud in putting over the present evangelistic campaign, but what is the world going to say if they don't in future practice what they have been preaching and practising to such excellent advantage for a three weeks' period?

If by united effort in prayer and intercession the Almighty has made it possible to worship him unitedly in all the fulness of beauty and holiness for three weeks, surely He who is able to save by many or by few can continue the good work indefinitely if the two uniting denominations will approach the bigger work in the same energetic fashion they went at the evangelistic effort. Surely it is not again to be a case, in the present spiritual extremity of the town, of "another littlespurt, and the ingathering of a few," and let it go at that.

It has been very truly said that "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," and if there was ever a time when this excellent axiom held good it is right now in Creston, and if, after following the excellent results that have been achieved by united effort, the old order of things is resorted to one might not be putting it too strong in observing that it may be more tolerable for Felix and Festus in the day of judgment than for those who pass up the present opportunity "to show that as christians they really do love one another, and that regardless of any so-called doctrinal difference or social likes and dislikes, in things spiritual they can gather around one and the same common altar and pay their respects to the Father of all.

How much longer the christian conscience of the community can go on taking missionary money to pay for Creston's spiritual guidance when there are enough and to spare to finance their own religious obligations, and thereby make available many hundreds of dollars, that now come here from home mission boards, for real and needed missionary work, is beyond the comprehension of the Review.

By way of encouragement it might be stated that at Grand Forks, where there is no Presbyterian pastor, the Gazette tells that an effort is under way to bring about union in that town. Why not a similar move at Creston, where the situation, denominationally considered, is reversed?

In order to spare the pride, too, of one of the suggested uniting denominations, it might be well to recall that the mission board last week announced that there would be $200,000.00 less for home missions this year than last. Why not get together and possibly spare them the necessity of enforcing such a course of action here?

On Saturday the farmers of Creston Valley were able to unanimously adopt a policy whereby they will co-operate 100 per cent. strong in an effort to better their worldly lot. In commercial circles the move is ever in the same direction. Under the present somewhat favorable state of affairs in the local religious realm it is unthinkable that we are to have a continuance of the present competitive system whereby Creston Valley is spiritually over-fed—thanks to the generosity of the home mission officials—while the heathen continue to bow down to wood and stone; denied the hearing of the gospel in part through Creston's selfishness in matters spiritual.

Now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation, and if Creston Presbyterians and Methodists pass up the present opportunity to come together, whilst the Robinson revival may be reckoned quite an individual success, so far as the community is concerned it will be quite a failure.

And lest the Anglican friends should consider that the united church movement has nothing to do with them, we would very deferentially observe that it is high time they were casting off their garments of semi-exclusiveness and lending a hand in a much-needed demonstration that Christ's command to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature" could not possibly mean that competitive systems were to be set up in Canada, at any rate, causing denominational competition and incidentally fine livings with comparative comfort in many cases and the heathen world to a very large extent yet ignorant of the gospel story.

guments advanced at the Staples-Union conference, that the bese possible course of action would be to follow the committee's report.

The chairman next called on Jas. Adlard to speak on behalf of Creston Fruit Growers Union directors, and he heartily endorsed the report submitted. Speaking for his growers R. B. Staples also endorsed the proposals. They were quite in accord with those adopted by the Staples growers meeting on Monday, and represented in that way the sentiment of at least 50 per cent. of the Valley tonnage.

For convenience of adoption of the select committee report the essence of the agreement had been conpressed into seven points, and these were then submitted to the meeting serriatum, with opportunity given for discussion and questions before each clause was declared approved on a standing vote in which none dissented. The seven points adopted are:

1. That the members of this local be not required to pay the 5c. and 1c. per box referred to in paragraph 4 and 46 of the Membership and Marketing Agreement respectively.

2. That this local should not be required to pool its fruit with that of any other district, under a district name.

3. That this local shall not be required to pay towards the expense or creation or creating a sub central.

4. That this local shall be free to make sales of produce.

5. That the local and special advantages—geographical, freight and otherwise—be preserved to this community.

6. That proceeds of sales made through the Co Operative organization on account of this local shall be paid directly to this local and not through the central.

7. That the local shall act with the Co-Operative to the best advantage of both, particularly in the holding up and standardizing of grade and produce, and in the stabilizing of prices.

The recommendation is also made that the directors in submitting the proposals to the Co-Operative make every endeavor that this local shall be permitted to use the O.K. brand on its products.

With an exceptionally lucid explanation by Chairman Garland, followed by the unqualified approval of representatives of both the Union and Staples Fruit Company, none of the clauses evoked very much discussion.

Amidst great applause a vote of thanks to the select committee, as well as the previous committee which carried on from the time of the Taylor-Harmon meeting until two weeks ago, was adopted, and the closing feature of a session that has united the growers of Creston Valley in one co-operative selling organization was the adoption of the following resolution:

Whereas this meeting is of the opinion that the growers of this district can co-operate 100 per cent. on the basis recommended by the committee;

And whereas this meeting is of the opinion that such co-operation is absolutely essential to the district;

And whereas this meeting is of the opinion that such co operation can be most economically and advantageously obtained by using the facilities by way of buildings and equipment of Creston Fruit Growers Union, Limited;

And whereas a new board of directors and executive of the said Creston Fruit Growers Union, Limited, will be elected on Wednesday, March 21st;

Now be it resolved that this meeting carry out the recommendations presented by the committee and that the members present at this meeting pledge themselves to sign an agreement in the terms recommdnded by the committee, and that the new directors and executive of the Creston Fruit Growers Union, Limited, be requested to carry out the recommendations of the committee.

With 100 per cent. co operation assured by this arrangement the proposal is to operate under the name of Creston Fruit Growers Union, and all possible speed will be made at getting the new contract signed and negotiations opened with the Co Operative at Vernon.

argument for the first two rounds. Stewart, who was in the pink of condition, showed his real class in the third round and had he had about another minute to come and go on would most likely have got the decision with a k.o. By repeated clinches, Castonguay negotiated the third round and well deserved the decision gained on points.

Charlie ("Sailor") Smith made the mistake of his life when he tried to put "Red" Larson out with his rush tactics in the opening round. Smith, who was plainly not in condition, certainly made it snappy for some seconds, but when Larson realized what Smith was attempting to put over he came back in the same vigorous fashion and after about two minutes of heavyweight mixing he sent Smith to the floor for a count of six, and half a minute later landed his opponent in the solar plexus, and it was some seconds after the fateful ten before the sailor came to. Larson is certainly a pretty battler to watch in action. He is a clean, upstanding fighter, fresh looking and always alert, whose every move indicates confidence born of considerable ring experience.

Fred Benham and L. Lewis of Kitchener gave a great three rounds of clean cut ring work. Benham was the speedier of the pair and had a defence that his opponent found it hard to penetrate. Lewis, however, always looked a dangerous opponent with the necessary punch to do great execution when opportunity presented. The judge's decision went to Benham by a narrow margin.

The officials of the evening were: Judges—Major Mallandaine and Campbell Blair. Timekeepers—C. G. Bennett and Jas. Cherrington. Wrestling referee—Alf. Palmer. Corp. Smith was the third man in the ring with the three preliminaries, whilst A. C. Pierson handled the Stewart-Castonguay go. Alex. Stewart, sr., of Nelson handled the two final bouts, all the officials giving excellent satisfaction.

A good word is due Messrs. Lewis, Larson, Stewart and Smith for lending a hand on this occasion. The quartette gave their services purely for the love of the sport and in every way proved themselves sportsmen of high calibre. There was quite a large contingent down from Kitchener to see their favorites in action, whilst from Nelson came Alex. Stewart, sr., and Messrs. Kirby and Fererno, the latter a Nelson battler who was looking Lewis over, with a view to taking him on in a ten round fight at Nelson next month.

The affair was quite a success financially. After taking care of all the expenses about $75 was turned over to treasurer Bennett to apply on the debt remaining on the soldier monument.

Take Down The Bars!

An Ottawa despatch appearing recently in the press sets forth the disturbing fact that for the nine months ending December 31st last, immigration to Canada decreased 25 per cent. as compared with the corresponding nine months of 1921. All classes of immigration were affected, British immigrants numbering 8,000 less, United States 6,000, and other countries 6,000, a total decline of 20,000.

This is the result four years after the war was concluded under the restrictive laws imposed on the country by reason of war and after-war conditions. If certain countries in Europe wish to act as if the war is still in progress, we in Canada can hardly prevent it, but surely in our own interests we should rescind our war enactments and strive with all our might to restore, as far as possible, the normal conditions and activities of peace.

Fortunately, evidence is not lacking that, whatever the leaders of organized labor unions may say or do, the masses of the Canadian people are awakening to the fact that, instead of being benefitted, they are being victimized through the present virtual prohibition of immigration to Canada.

Nobody in his senses advocates the removal of all bars to immigration and a return to conditions which at one time prevailed. There must continue to be strict and absolute prohibition of the entry into Canada of the physically unfit, of the criminal class, and mentally unsound, the moral degenerates, and those professionally agitators of the communistic and "Red" groups. Canada offers no place for such, who could only be a source of weakness and not of strength, terrible and expensive liabilities and not national assets.

But the present policy of refusing admittance to all but those who agree and are able to at once settle on the land or engage in service as domestics calls for immediate modification. Not only does the existing law practically shut out all others, but for years there has been a popular belief that Canada should confine its efforts to the obtaining of these two classes among people of the Anglo-Saxon race, and principally from the British Isles. Yet it is a well known fact that the number of available immigrants from the British Isles of the agricultural and domestic class is extremely limited. In other words, we are willing to accept what we cannot get and refuse to take good workers in other walks of life.

The trouble with agriculture in Canada today is the high cost of production and marketing. There is little prospect of the selling price of agricultural products increasing to a figure sufficiently large to bear these heavy costs and yet leave a reasonable margin of profit to the farmer. Betterment can only be effected through a reduction in production and marketing costs. How is such betterment to be brought about so long as the entire labor market is kept as a close preserve for organized labor, and the immigration policy is dictated by and framed to suit the labor leaders?

Railway and other transportation charges cannot be materially reduced so long as our public service companies are compelled to grant unreasonably short hours, pay unreasonably high wages, employ several men to do the work of which one is capable, and are largely precluded from recruiting new and efficient employees through the engagement of apprentices? How can the costs of implements, clothing, building materials of all kinds, and other prime necessities of the farmer be lowered when the supply of common laborers so essential to the carrying on of any and all industry is completely shut off?

At the recent annual convention of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, some home truths were stated by G. F. Chipman, editor of the Grain Growers' Guide, in regard to this subject. He urged selective immigration as necessary, but immigration selected to meet all the needs of Canada. Present economic conditions, Mr. Chipman pointed out, were the result of the boom which prevailed prior to the war, followed by the war with its fictitious prosperity. During that period of inflation we had created a plant in the shape of railways, industries, public buildings and services, all on borrowed money, capable of taking care of a much larger population than Western Canada possessed.

The burden is too great for the present small population. The created plant should be worked to full capacity, and that desirable and necessary condition can only be brought about through increase in population, and that increase must be obtained through immigration.

Common labor is necessary if skilled labor is to be provided with remunerative and steady employment. Population is essential if there is to be a sufficiently large buying power to consume the products of labor. Yet present immigration laws have but one effect upon the supply of common labor—depletes it. The source of common labor largely has been immigration of sturdy, ambitious workers from others nations where opportunities are limited or almost entirely withheld from the masses. These men and women came to Canada in the past glad to work, able to work and grateful for the opportunity. Canada absorbed them in the past and was prosperous. Their immigration now would assist in bringing about a revival of business. Why, then, close the door to them?

Men, Money and Management

Lack of Wise Management Invariably Means Failure

In a recent address before thousands of railway employees, President C. H. Markham, of the Illinois Central Railroad, broke away from the stereotype phrase of "capital and labor" and referred to this phase of the industrial world as "Men and money partners in the transportation business." The Financial Post says this is a great improvement over the usual form of expression and helps us to do some clear thinking on this subject.

Wage earners and the money invested in any enterprise are, indeed, partners in that business, but, as Commercial West points out, there is a third element which is necessary to insure success and that is, management. Lack of wise management means failure, even though plenty of money is available and workers most efficient. The manager may come from the so-called capitalist class, or he may work up from the ranks of the wage earner, and the latter course is much more common than the other. The manager, strictly speaking, is neither laborer nor capitalist. His strength is neither in his hands nor in his bank roll, but rather in his mental efficiency.

Time and patience will enable a person to overcome almost any obstacle.

Ontario Farmers Severely Criticize Motion Picture Shows

Provincial fair associations are discussing general improvements of rural fairs and the elimination of undesirable features in Ontario. More than a score of delegates from Perth, Huron and Middlesex counties, representing 15 of the leading agricultural societies of Ontario, attended District No. 8 meeting and spoke in this strain. Motion pictures have come in for strong criticism, delegates voicing the opinion that movies had had a greater adverse effect on children than many of the games of chance and skill which make the rounds of the Ontario fairs. A proposal was made the association to request Hon. Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer, to place a heavier tax on movies.

Safety Of The World Depends On Amity Of The English-Speaking Peoples

Sir Auckland Geddes, in a recent speech at Washington, very pertinently stressed the urgent need for continued co-operation and friendship between Great Britain and the United States. Sir George Foster, ex-Secretary of State Colby, Dr. Charles A. Eaton and others equally well-known, have taken up an analogous chorus, pronouncing definite opinions that the safety of the world and civilization generally depends upon the whole-hearted amity of the English-speaking peoples. Rome was the greatest empire of the ancient world. The man who did most to make Rome was Octavius, nephew of Julius Caesar—famous throughout history. Augustus was possessed of supreme wisdom and knew when aggrandisement became synonymous with weakness, and that power resides in consolidation; in like manner the communion of Britain and the United States should tend to world strength. Sir Auckland Geddes has done yeoman service towards the strengthening of Anglo-American friendship since he went to Washington, and the United States people have recognized in him a representative with a combination of qualities which they have not failed to appreciate. Few men have proven themselves so well able to discharge the all-important position of ambassador at Washington—if we except Lord Bryce, Geddes has again given proof of an intimacy of understanding of American conditions and American ideals in his latest utterances. Both the United States and British Governments are fortunate in their diplomats, from the all-important aspect by which ambassadors are usually judged.

All reputable citizens in the United States, Canada and Great Britain have consistently advocated the cultivation of Anglo-American accord. Knowledge of each other and the manners and customs of the peoples of the two great English-speaking countries is solid foundation for that friendship and sympathy which we are all seeking to increase and fortify. A mere sentiment is not enough; it is essential that both move towards fuller comprehension, so that the bonds of real sympathy and substantial friendship may be drawn closer between two nations which most people hope and believe are destined to work as peaceful and potent collaborators in the advancement of the world's highest interests. It is a matter of considerable regret to the peoples of Britain and the United States that the measures of success achieved in the great war, invaluable as it was for the world, is less great than had been hoped. The German glorification of war for its own sake was a thing incomprehensible and revolting to the Anglo-Saxon public mind. The friendship of the United States is a possession to be prized, the more so because it is not lightly given, and therefore a great obligation of indebtedness is laid upon the peoples of the two countries for the excellent work performed for them through the Embassies. Britain and the United States have far beyond other nations an enlarged vision of mutualities of interest in world welfare, their history, geography and political evolution being conducive to the widening of their horizon; to the elevation of the general universal above the narrow and local.

It is this attitude, this enlightened view, that is the great asset of the two peoples, although its effectiveness depends upon the permanence of friendly relationships. The implication is that by their combined power they can enforce peace upon the world. We prefer to place this assumption on a sounder basis than that of force. The two great branches of English-speaking peoples have it in their power once they are in agreement to set up a standard of justice and fair play in international relations that no nation may disregard. Community of language, culture and ideals make for mutual respect and understanding. A hundred years of peace—unbroken even by serious differences that have arisen from time to time—give reason to hope that all disputes in future will yield to negotiation and compromise. The history of the relations between Canada and the United States is written so that all "who run may read," in our unfortified frontiers and in the peace, amity and mutual respect which has characterized all our relationships for more than a century. Canada understands both Britain and the United States, and it is clear that both countries have an interest in the welfare of this Dominion of an extremely vital character. The backbone of Anglo-American friendship and harmony is not an alliance, nor a conspiracy, nor a club with which to coerce, but an understanding that will set up the best of our joint traditions and ideals as the standard to be followed in solving their problems. If the Anglo-American entente can, therefore, be pursued to a successful issue no nation will challenge it, and certainly no nation need fear it. A habit of mind cherished for a century is not to be thrown off at short notice. Nothing should be allowed to impair the new warmth of friendly relations between the two great sections of English-speaking mankind.—The Montreal Gazette.

Shipbuilding in Germany

Output Greater in Year 1922 than Before the war

From the figures for the shipbuilding output in 1922 now available, it appears Germany has beaten all her previous records. Her output in 1922 was 625,000 tons, as compared with 500,000 tons in 1921, 140,000 tons in 1914, and 465,000 tons in 1913.

The German shipbuilding industry has not suffered from the general depression, and, owing to the low cost of production, and the light taxation in Germany, has become a most formidable competitor to the British and United States industries. Indeed ships for British owners are now being built in German yards because of the lower cost there.

The British output was 1,000,000 tons. The United States has now fallen below Germany in tonnage produced.

A New Plan To Assist The Western Agriculturist In Securing Farm Help

The problem of farm help which, year after year, in connection with the cultivation and harvesting of Western Canada's increasing crops, is a matter of such vital importance to the farmers, is to be aided by a new plan now proposed by the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has completed arrangements to utilize its widespread organization to provide such help from a number of overseas countries.

Briefly this plan is to invite farmers, through placing in their hands "Application for Help" forms, to set forth their requirements as to class and nationality of help required, when desired, class of work desired for, wages offered and other similar, necessary details. These forms are now in the hands of all company station agents and may be had on request.

The Governments of Great Britain, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Switzerland have expressed themselves as desirous of settling part of their surplus populations in Canada, and, realizing that this move is to their own and their nationals' best interests, have indicated their readiness to aid their migration.

Branch offices of the Canadian Pacific already pentrate these countries, where experienced and practical men who, have farmed in, and are familiar with, Wstern Canadian farming conditions will deal driectly with the many applicants they are now in touch with. They are in a position to judge of the suitability of the prospective helper—moral, metal and physical qualifications—and with a knowledge of the farmers' wants before them, bring the help to the farmer at the proper time and with a clear understanding of the obligations and requirements of each.

The farmer, therefore, will be able to secure competent hired help—male and female—from any of these countries, the idea being that in the majority of cases most farmers will prefer to hire one of their own countrymen; nor will the farmer be involved in the slightest outlay towards his prospective helper's travelling expenses, the help being delivered to him at his nearest railway station on or about the date required.

The benefits of this new project are calculated to be of a two-fold character, furnishing the agriculturists of Western Canada with the kind and nationality of farm help required and giving entrance to the Dominion of a number of immigrants of the highest type and most valuable qualities.

In the wish to induce movements of desirable people to Canada and provide work for them the moment they arrive, this scheme should develop an immigration which is of particular value as being carefully selected and directed. Further, it will be carried on without expense to the Dominion, while Canada will have the assurance of the settlement of these people where it needs them most.

In other words, the tide will assimilate as it arrives with the prospect that, with a certain amount of experience as hired help on Western Canadian farms, these people will eventually take farms for themselves and in a short time be added to Canada's producing agriculturists.
