A school would be much appreciated at Crestwood, as a number of the farmers would bring in their families if education facilities were available.

Montreal Port

British Engineer Speaks Highly Of Efficiency Of Grain Handling Facilities

High praise for Montreal as a grain handling port was forthcoming recently from a noted authority.

"I think Montreal has the most efficient grain handling facilities of any port of the world," Sir Alexander Gibb, British engineer and expert on the construction and administration of ports, said following a four-hour inspection of the harbour. During that time he saw grain discharged from lake steamers, and from railway cars by the mechanical unloaders and the shakers. He followed the grain through the elevators, walking along miles of conveyors, and saw it loaded into ocean liners for carriage to some foreign port.

Explanations and Comments

Paul Cures a Cripple At Lystra, verses 8.11.—There is no mention of a synagogue here at Lystra; probably there was none, the Jews not being very numerous. Seeking a place of public resort where they might preach, Paul and Barnabas probably chose the marketplace. Here was a cripple, who, in all likelihood, was brought each day by his friends and left at the same place to beg, just as the lame man cured by Peter was left at the Gate Beautiful, Acts 3.2. Professor Ramsay notes the marked emphasis put upon this man's physical incapacity — "impotent in his feet," "a cripple from his mother's womb," "who never had walked," the three phrases which, like the beats of a hammer, compel the reader's attention.

This cripple heard Paul speak. The tense of the verb in Greek suggests repeatedly; on several occasions Paul had preached and the cripple near by had listened and had come to accept the truth. It may be that Paul told how Christ had performed many wonderful cures in other places, and the hope thus aroused in the cripple's heart began to manifest itself in his face so that Paul, fastening his eyes upon him and seeing that he had faith to be made whole, stopped his sermon, to say, with a loud voice, "Stand upright on thy feet." The cripple leaped up and walked.

Hailed As God, verses 11-13. — This miracle of healing electrified the whole city. Some one raised the cry, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men," and it was taken up by the crowd, and repeated in their native dialect, the speech of Lycaonia. And they called Paul "Mercury," and, probably because of his more commanding presence, they called Barnabas "Jupiter."

The Multitude Restrained From Their Purpose, verses 14-18.—It may have been the singing of the worshippers gathering before their abode that brought Paul and Barnabas forth. As soon as they became aware of the purpose of the crowd, "horror-stricken, and with garments rent to show by sign as well as by words their repudiation of such worship, they sprang into the midst of the crowd that they might put an end to the delusion of the people."

"Men!" they now cried (as Moffatt's translation forcibly expresses it), "what is this you are doing? We are but human—with natures like your own. The gospel which we are preaching to you is to turn from such futile ways, to the living God!" Then Paul preached his first recorded sermon to pagans.

The Attempt To Kill Paul, verses 19, 20.—This incident did not help the work of Paul. "The people went home shamefaced, feeling that they had made fools of themselves. Their mood was a hotbed for suspicion. If these men were not gods, then they healed the cripple by the power of the Evil One."

News had reached the jealous Jews of Pisidian Antioch, who had driven the apostles from their city, that they were preaching at Lystra. With other hostile Jews from Iconium they came to Lystra, and easily persuaded the people there to turn against Paul.

The fickle crowd proceeded to stone Paul and to drag him outside the city supposing him to be dead. In the catalogue of his sufferings which Paul gives in 2 Cor. 11.25, he says, "once I was stoned," and it may be that among "the marks of the Lord Jesus" which he bore in his body (Gal. 6.17), were the scars left by this attack. As the disciples stood around the unconscious Paul—his work had not been in vain, after all, for there were Christian disciples now in Lystra, Christians brave enough to defend him—Paul arose and went back into the city. His ability even to stand, after such cruel stoning, seems quite as much a miracle as had the cripple's standing on his feet. He was able the next day to go on with Barnabas to Derbe, several hours distant.

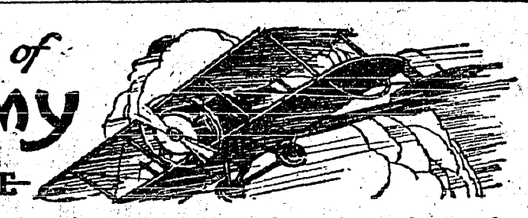
Queer Thing To Steal

Because tombstones attracted him, Juan Valadez must spend nine months in jail. He was found guilty of stealing tombstones from the municipal cemetery in Juarez, opposite El Paso, in Mexico.

"I don't know why I took them," Valadez said.

"You can think it over nine months," said the court.

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE



WHAT CAME BEFORE: Captain Jimmy is forced down on a deserted island while flying General Lu from China to Japan. They find no game, so decide to try their luck at fishing.

Early the next morning we kindled a huge bonfire on the bald peak of the island, and piled on plenty wet grass to make smoke. If any ship passed within miles, it would be sure to see our signal.

All day we gathered wood and piled it near, so we could make a big bright fire through the night. The interpreter and I went down to the shore to fish.

Taking a pin from my coat I made a rough fish hook. This I fastened to the end of a long cord, and cutting off a corner of General Lu's bright colored cloak, we had a home-made, but attractive fish-bait.

The interpreter begged for a chance to try his luck and I let him go first. We selected a little sandy cove, where the tides cut a deep hole between two rocks. At high tide the water formed a clear, round pool, shallow at the edge, but rapidly sloping down until the bottom disappeared among the green shadows.

The interpreter waded out to his waist, then dropped his bait into the pool. General Lu and I sat lazily on the shore and watched him. Suddenly he gave a quick yank—his pole bent almost double. A great silver fish leaped high in the air, and the battle was on.

General Lu sat still as a mummy, but I fought that fish all over again. Several times it rose to the surface and came down with a grand splash. Then we could see it scooting along just a few inches below water,—straight toward it's captor.

went the fish, bowling him over and tangling his legs in the line. Then both fish and Chinese submerged out of sight. A tremendous fuss and splashing began, after which the Chinese arose, dripping, with his prize clasped tightly in his arms.

The pair looked too funny for words. I began to laugh, when the General gave a sharp exclamation and pointed to the entrance of the cove.

For an instant I froze with dread. A sinister black fin, clove the smooth surface of the water like an arrow, rushing straight toward the unsuspecting Chinese. With a yell I grasped a short sword which General Lu still wore at his side, and plunged into the water between the rushing black fin and Hsu Fu.

The shark turned and made for me instead. The water reached my belt—too high for quick action. I waited for the one chance I knew would come. The shark turned on his back and opened his huge mouth to grab me, while row after row of gleaming teeth, sharp as razors, glittered menacingly.

I dodged to one side, and lunged at his smooth white stomach with my sword. In my excitement I only scratched him, and he turned again, mad as a whole nest of bumblebees. Murder shone in his little pig eyes as he rushed into the fight.

This time I drove my sword straight down his throat. With a great whirl and a splash he closed his teeth on the blade and darted out of the cove, leaving a thin red line in the water after him.

Meanwhile the Chinese rushed for the beach yelling strange sounding things at the top of his voice, and the beautiful silver fish swam slowly out to sea, with a reproachful look on its face, and a contemptuous wiggle of its tail. "Fine lot you know about fishing" it seemed to say.

After that General Lu was quite huffy about the loss of his sword. Soon the sun sank into the sea like a great golden ball, and we made a hugh bright fire up on the rock to attract any ships that might pass in the night.

Depression Has Not Affected Some Lines

Tobacco, Bathing Suit, and Fishing Tackle Industries Report Big Sales

The ill wind of depression is rolling up good-sized profits for more than one American industry.

Cigarette makers and bathing suits, fishing tackle and small arms and ammunition manufacturers, for instance, report to the Department of Commerce that sales this year exceed even those of the years when a depression was something to read about in the history books.

Wags say cigarette consumption increased because the country is trying to be nonchalant.

But a Commerce Department statistician suggests that many working men who could not smoke on their jobs have plenty of time for it now. Most opinion however, is that the gain rests on the fact that tobacco for many is the cheapest of pleasures.

As for bathing suits, families that used to pack off to Europe, or tour the National Parks, or visit big resorts are going to the old swimming holes it is believed.

Certainly steamship bookings have been drastically curtailed and the attendance at National Parks has slumped. But at least one bathing suit manufacturer reports larger profits than before.

Larger sales of fishing tackle and arms are not so easily explained. Increased leisure may be a factor, but officials believe in some places the search for fish and game is inspired by a real necessity of cutting down food bills and a desire to make a little money from the sale of pelts.

F. P. Fisher, the Ohio oil expert who has been engaged by the Alberta Government to enquire into the conservation problem in the Turner Valley oil and gas fields, is now well advanced in the preliminaries of his work, making a thorough survey of the situation with a view to working out a definite and adequate plan for preventing wastage and for properly controlling the flow from present and prospective wells.

PIPER WINS DISTINCTION

The distinction of having piped before two reigning Siamese monarchs went to Piper William Campbell, of New Westminster, B.C., after King Prajadhipok, incognito as Prince Sukhodaya, officially opened the Banff Highland Gathering on Thursday, August 27, at Banff Springs Hotel. In 1894, when King Chuldalongkorn, of Siam, father of the present Siamese ruler, visited England, Piper "Willie" Campbell was special piper to Her Majesty Queen Victoria and in that capacity accompanied the two sovereigns wherever they went. In the picture (right) which appeared in the London Graphic of 1894, King Chuldalongkorn is shown with Queen Victoria. Piper Campbell is in the left of the same picture. On the extreme left he is shown photographed at Banff, where he has attended the annual Highland Gatherings since their inauguration.

"If we had a Nancy, and—and a mother . . ."

She looked up at him with pleading eys. Halliday winced, and Uncle Sim said tactfully: "I don't doubt, little girl, but what Sonny'd be real proud to lend you his mother, and his little sister, too, most any time. And you got a daddy you think a whole heap of, or my name ain't Simeon Augustus Bartlett."

The child looked up at Halliday with a smile that was sweet as a caress.

"Martha Halliday," called Julie from the window, "you got to come right in now and get ready if you're goin' to church with me."

"Seems like Julie Nipps is gettin' pretty regular in her devotions," commented Simeon dryly. "Ain't seen her miss a Sunday in three weeks."

"It's her perm'nent wave," Martha explained soberly. "She says there's no use having it if you don't go somewhere to show it off. It cost twenty-five dollars 'sides her carfares to Summerfield."

"Well, well," chuckled Simeon, "it would be a pity if the Lord was to overlook it after Julie's goin' to all that expense. I've heard o' some strange things bein' the cause o' salvation, Halliday, but I do'no but havin' yer hair crimped, is the strangest yet. You run along, child, and get ready like Julie says. 'Tain't everyone has the chance to go to church along beside an expensive head like that."

"When I grow up I'm going to have one, too," Martha announced soberly.

"You won't need one," smiled Halliday, rumpling her curls with a tender hand. "Your good fairy gave you one when you were born."

"You don't get perm'nent waves from fairies," said Martha, with feminine scorn for his ignorance. "You get 'em at the hairdresser's in Summerfield."

Halliday's laugh carried across the garden to where Nick sat on the porch worshiping his daughter, while Gay lay in the hammock beside him. He was holding the baby with all the ease of a veteran father, and saying "Young lady, if you don't grow up the image of your mother, I'll disown you."

Gay smiled.

"Better be careful what you threaten, Daddy. She has her father's straight, aristocratic nose."

"You can't tell about noses this soon," said Nick, grinning. "But anyhow, I'll forgive her the nose so long as she keeps your eyes. Wonder what's happening across the way. I haven't heard Halliday laugh like that in a dog's age."

He spoke of it again that evening, when Uncle Sim was indulging in a pre-bedtime smoke in company with their neighbor. The night was still with the stillness of a summer Sunday, and occasionally the rumble of the old man's chuckle was carried to them on the air.

"Halliday's got a firm ally in Uncle Sim," said Nick. "A year ago who would have dreamed of such a thing? But there's a big change in Halliday. He told me the other day that he was heartily ashamed of some of the stories he's published, though at the time he thought them merely realistic! He's writing a book now—a child's book. Just imagine it! It's something he invented for Martha's benefit, and she begged him to write it down. That little girl has done a lot for him; but I've an idea that his reformation's not wholly due to her."

Gay did not speak. She was visioning the night when Halliday had said goodbye to her, before starting out on what had seemed like a hopeless quest. He had called her "a light in the dark." He had kissed her hands, gently and reverently, to be sure, but not as one kisses the hands of a sister or a friend. Gay knew what had changed James Halliday; but, since it was his secret . . . .

Nick was saying, quietly: "Do you know what I think has changed him, Gay? I think it's you."

She started, visibly.

"Why—why should you think that?"

"Just a hunch, that's all. He's been unhappy, and knowing you—seeing what a woman can be, dear—well, it would mean a lot to a lonely man like Halliday."

A fugitive smile hovered on Gay's lips.

"Isn't it possible that you overrate my virtues? I wonder" (there was the least bit of a pause), "I wonder when Mrs. Halliday is coming back."

It was the first time she had mentioned Angela, and Nick himself had no desire to speak of her. Now he said: "Not at present. Never to Bakersville, I think. That's what I gathered from something Halliday said."

"You don't mean they've separated?"

"I believe they don't call it a separation; but it amounts to the same thing. She's going abroad for the winter anyhow, and Halliday's to stay here with Martha. She—I——" Nick hesitated and flushed a little. "You were right about Mrs. Halliday, Gay. She's not to be trusted."

Gay's hand slipped into his.

"Is that all you have to tell me, dear old boy?"

He looked at her, laughing in a way that would have reassured even a doubting wife, and Gay was very far from being that.

"Are you expecting a tale of intrigue and treachery, my dear? Well, there was intrigue, perhaps, on her part, but no treachery on mine. Do you remember when Uncle Sim expounded the laws of a happy marriage to us? He said if ever I made a fool of myself that I was to own up and you'd forgive me."

"And you made a fool of yourself, Nick?"

"No; that is, not a noticeable fool; but will you forgive me just the same?"

"For what?"

"For not seeing through the lady in the first place."

She smiled.

"What opened your eyes at last?"

Nick looked thoughtfully into space.

"I think," he said slowly, as if he were trying to get at the real truth, "I think that first it was a kiss. Later——"

"A kiss! Nick, you—you——"

Nick grinned.

"Don't get excited, Gay. It was she kissed me; an absolutely surprising and unsolicited caress. It—'flabbergasted' me, as Uncle Sim would say. I vowed that night I'd tell you all about it. Hence this confession."

"And—later?"

He turned, meeting her eyes squarely..

"We won't go into that." Unknown to himself Nick's voice had taken on an unfamiliar harshness. "It was only a scene—a scene between Mrs. Halliday, her husband, and myself. It showed me just what she was; and I tell you Gay, James Halliday needs all the sympathy you can give him. I can't say any more about it. I can't even think of it, and stay calm. Some day, perhaps, I'll tell you. Not now. All I ask is that you believe that I've done nothing to be ashamed of."

"I never believed anything else, Nick; only I wondered——"

"Don't wonder."

He drew her close for a long moment, and kissed her gently. After her journey into a land of doubt and fear, she seemed something exquisitely dear and fragile to him. He said, quietly: "Gay—you should have told me about the baby. It would have saved——"

"I know," she broke in hurriedly, "I know; but I couldn't foresee the things that were to happen, could I? And I was worried about you, Nick. You weren't yourself. Mr. Maxwell saw it as well as I. We knew you needed a change—a chance to get away from all perplexities and worries. Besides, I wanted you to feel free, dear. I have always wanted you to feel free. You shared your freedom with me so generously. I said to myself the day we went away together, when I was tying up that ridiculous bandanna, that whatever happened I must never by word or look mar the joy of your adventure.

"And Life's an adventure to you, Nick—the whole of it. It's just as that, somehow, we have to travel. I've tried, honestly, to help make it the happy highway she wanted you to know; but I've sometimes thought" (Gay smiled, a smile that illumined her face softly like candle-light) "I've sometimes feared, Nick, that I've been responsible for a good deal of dust along the way!"

He met her smile with eyes that were wholly serious.

"Dust! I'd say you were the brook that quenched my burning thirst. You have never failed me. Gay. You never will; nor shall I fail you. I've had time to think in these weeks when you've seemed so frail that I've been almost afraid to look at you for fear I'd see you blow away. I've threshed out this freedom business from A to Z. And I know at last that freedom is not the ability to answer the call of the road at a moment's notice. It's not the shifting of life's responsibilities to other shoulders. It's something within ourselves—this freedom; and once we know it—once we honestly believe it—we are free!"

A silence followed before Gay said gently: "I've known that for a long time, Nick. I could have told you, of course; but—but I thought you'd be happier to find it out yourself."

Nick answered, his voice a bit unsteady: "You are a very understanding person, Gay."

It was dark now on the little porch, and very peaceful. Dim stars shone faintly above; and the air from the garden was sweet with the fragrance of summer. A breeze sprang out of the West, stirring the leaves in the tree-tops; and far in the distance, heat-lightning brightened the sky.

Gay rested her cheek contentedly against Nick's shoulder. He smiled, moving his arm to bring her closer, while through the evening stillness came the echo of Uncle Sim's big laugh.

"It's a great old world!" said Nick.

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

SYMBOLS

Not the cloud, or the wave, or the bough
Is the thing that I love,
Though I linger till dusk turns to dark
As the sky's pageants move.
Though I find in the voice of the sea
Always comfort and peace,
And that deep in the forest's green aisles,
Care will grant me release.

Through the glory of cloud-flight I look
To the glory beyond,
And I seek for the stars in the sky,
Not the stars in the pond.
Not earth's beauties before me that move,
But hid beauties I guess;
And it is not loved hands that I love,
But the love they express!

Drakes Of Modern Times

Men Recently Sailed Across Atlantic In Small Boats

Ten little sailboats set out from Newport on July 4 on a race across the ocean to The Lizard, off Plymouth. The winner, the 63-foot "Dorade," ran into Plymouth Harbour, almost exactly seventeen days out from this side. One of the others had to signal to a passing liner for supplies and to have two of her crew taken off after a storm that partially dismasted her. Having got what she needed, she set off again to make up for lost time.

To set sail across the North Atlantic in a fifty-foot yawl calls for a lot of courage to begin with. There are wicked summer storms that shake up even the biggest liners and in which these cockleshells would seem to have but the smallest chance of survival. To cross in seventeen days, some of them of light airs, means not only courage but the willingness to take every chance.

We marvel at the courage of the men of old who crossed the Western Ocean in their tiny ships, but the British and American skippers are their worthy successors. The ocean has not changed since 1492 and a 50-foot yacht in the grip of its wrath would be just as helpless as a "Golden Hind" or a "Santa Maria." We still have our Drakes, our de Gamas and our Magellans, even in what is said to be a softer age.

Persian Balm is magical in creating alluring complexions. A little gentle rubbing and your skin is invigorated and touched with the true beauty of youth. Charmingly fragrant. Delightful to use. Cools and caresses the skin. Relieves all roughness and chafing caused by weather conditions. Tones and stimulates. Enhances and protects the loveliest complexion. Unrivalled as a perfect aid to beauty and charm.

Annual Meeting Of Canadian Clubs Will Not Be Held This Year

Announcement that the annual meeting of the Association of Canadian Clubs, scheduled to have been held in Regina, September 11 and 12, will not take place, came from Graham Spry, the association's national secretary.

While no official reason for the decision was given out, it is understood that due to prevailing economic conditions the affiliated clubs of the association agreed to a recommendation of the national executive that this year's sessions be eliminated.

According to a report made by Mr. Spry at a recent executive meeting, the association is concluding a most successful year. There are now affiliated with the association 94 of the 105 active Canadian clubs from coast to coast.

Red Deer Farmer Tells of Auto Trip

Party of Four Motor to Creston and Return via Banff—Travel 1100 Miles and Spend $22.45 on Camps, Gas and Oil.

One of the most interesting accounts of a trip from central Alberta via the Crows Nest route to Creston and return over the Banff-Windermere road has been written to the Red Deer, Alberta, Advocate, by J. W. Christian, who made a visit with Erickson friends early in the summer, doing his travelling in company with Ralph and Geo. Wilkins and Telford Kirkland, also of Red Deer. In writing his home town paper Mr. Christian says, in part:

To the Editor of the Advocate:

Dear Sir:—We habitually associate "cheap" with 'nasty" and not without cause, so I should like to bring to your notice and the notice of my fellow farmars an experience which I had recently that was cheap but altogether delightful. I speak of a trip by car to Creston, B.C., and points in the Kootenay, and other National Parks, which four of us took and enjoyed together.

Now, most of our farmers are more or less fed-up with things today and are sadly in need of a rest and change of scenery, but suggest such a thing to the majority and you will get laughed at for your pains, simply because it seems an impossibility nnder present conditions on account of lack of funds. I thought the same way, but was forced to take a business trip to Canyon and tried to use the occasion as a holiday, too, with the result that I am amazed with the wealth of scenery to be had and the cheapness and convenience of travel by car.

The cost being the deciding factor, maybe, if anyone contemplating a trip, I will mention that first. We travelled over 1,100 miles and the cost for gas, oil and camping privileges was $22.45. We were away eight days, which works out af 70c. per head per day, plus food sufficient of which we took with us, only b ying bread and milk as required. We left Red Deer at 10 a.m. one Saturday, and reached High River that night, camping in a nice little public camp near the entrance to the town. We had spent several hours in Turner Valley, which is a sight one should not miss; the length and breadth of the valley was something we had not expected, and the numerous derricks and noisy flares made an inferno scene not easily forgotren, while the heat, light and energy being wasted filled one with helpless regret. From High River to Macleod in the rain, but the thing that struck us most was the backwardness of the crops and the forwardness of the weeds; for miles on end the roadsides and ditches are a mass of Canada thistle, while whole fields of slinkweek are not uncommon.

We spent most of Sunday in Macleod visiting relatives, moving on the next morning by way of Pincher Creek, Blairmor (noted for its coal mines); Frank, with its tragic slide and buried town, which is a sad introduction to the mountains of Livingstone range through which we passed via Crows Nest. Fernie is a fine little town with its paved streets; we were tempted to call on Chief Anderson, but figured he had enough to do, as the population appeared numerous and unemployed. Cranbrook, too, is a well paved and orderly town, but as we were out to see the country more especially, we pushed on within ten miles of Yahk, where we found a natural camping place by the roadside, the road, railway and river running side by side at this point. We had had a wonderful day passing by mountains two miles high, over roads that were perfect though often cut into the breast of the mountainside, while down below could be seen the narrow ribbon of railway strung with jewels of lakes and rivers. We awoke the next morning almost frozen, and cooked our breakfast in grand solitude. By noon we had reached our business objective, Canyon, and in the evening pulled on to Creston to visit Mr "Jim" Murphy and family, from whom we received a royal welcome. So full was "Jim" of Creston Valley opportunities and prospects, and so ready to impart information that the good wife had much to do to get him to stop talking long enough to eat his supper, the main item of which, to us, a sumptuous strawberry shortcrke. We were readily induced to stay overnight, and enjoyed in full the opportunity to look over different farms (ranches I believe they are called), and while we wondered how one could make a living on such a small holding (ten acres, usually), it was firmly impressed on us by what we saw that not only could they, but that they enjoyed life doing so to a far greater extent than the majority of us do around Red Deer on our broad acres. We joined a gooseberry-picking "bee" after supper, where we learnt and 'felt' a few points about the game first hand; in fact, we felt the points for days after. Before leaving Creston the next mo ning, we visited other old-time Poplar Ridgites, and were made to feel like crimi als sneaking away, so warm were their invitations to stay a few days. However, we proceeded on our way along the trail of the previous day, returning to Cranbrook, on to Fort Steele and Fairmont Hot Springs, a little beyond which we made camp for the night by the roadside. Here at least one member of the party was made a trifle uneasy by the sniffing of a bear around the tent, but on investigation it proved to be a dog. From there we were subjected to beautiful vistas, stupendous sights and marvelous natural architecture until our senses fairly reeled. Sinclair Canyon, that magnificient western portal of the Rockies, compelled us to stop and take several deep breaths and the inevitable picture. Passing through, one follows a winding valley with towering peaks on either hand, the turbulent Sinclair River by the road making a musical setting that could not be improved upon. Registering at the official gateway to Kootenay Park, we visited the Radium Hot Springs with its baths and swimming pool at a natural temperature of over 100 degrees; proceeding by Sin lair Pass we saw a beautiful little lake called Olive on account of its color. Now one drops down to Kootenay Valley in great sweeps, affording some wonberful panoramic views. Then by a straight road between tall and slender pines, which may tempt one to try a little speeding, the roads are so fine; however, the speed limit is 30 m.p.h. in the parks, and "red coats" are on patrol at all times. Many miles of road has oiled surface. The road from Firlands to Castle is full of interest, but undoubtedly Marble Canyon is king of them all. It is about 2,000 feet long 200 feet deep, cut out in the course of centuries by the waters of Tohumn Creek, a most impressive and (at its head where the waters rush down a pothole and dissappear from view) breath-taking scene. Nine bridges span the canyon, allowing one to look sheer down into the dark abyssmal depth. Don't go if you are subject to nightmare. The road now climbs again to Vermilion Summit, with an elevation of 5,600 feet. After passing Storm Mountain on the right, the road descends by generous curves to Bow Valley. The mountains here seem alive and following one, turning this way and that, showing a new angle, a bare shoulder, a snow-shawled head; finally that magnificent pile Castle Mountain, appears at the end of the road and one must turn east to Banff or west to Golden. Taking the west we soon reach the Switchbacks where it is advisable to get into low to go down, not so much on account of the grade as the view. Further along one gets a splendid view of Mt. Temple, one of the loftiest peaks of the range.

After crossing Pipestone River the road turns to the left across Bow River and a three-mile climb brings one to lovely Lake Louise. This is a most beautiful place, and while most of us have seen pictures of it, it must be seen to realize what scenic beauty really is. Getting back to the main road, the next item of interest is the great divide where one may have one foot in Alberta and the other in B.C. Here the waters are divided, one stream emptying into the Atlantic eventually, and the other into the Pacific. A monument is also here to the memory of Sir James Hector, the discoverer of this pass, as well as the Vermilion Pass. Soon after leaving here the road utilizes the old C.P.R. right-of-way, the C.P.R. having built the famous spirit tunnels to avoid the steep grade to Field; entrance to the tunnel may be seen from the road. The road from here on is most spectacular looking down the Kicking Horse Valley and crossing Kicking Horse Canyon. Eight miles from the divide is Yoko Park camping grounds, which is a favorite place for visitors. While here we received an early morking call from two deer, followed by a visit from a bear. It was very amusing to watch the bear pry the lids from the garbage cans and sit astride a log to further his investigations. He mistook a camera for something to eat, so expect the picture will be more of a cave than a bear. Many side trips can be made from here, and the one to the natural bridge shonld n t be overlooked. Here the most timid or those subject to vertigo may look on the mably swirling waters at close range and in safety, and it certainly is a sight to see these waters like human nature when uncontrolled with passion, envy and strife, changed until it is not recognizable as such. From here one may visit Emerald Lake, the antithesis of the waters just described, calm, placid, peaceful in the extreme, of a beautiful emerald green. On the return trip to Banff one may visit Talualuluan Falls gushing out of the side of a mountain to fall 1,000 feet below. A switchback road on the way to the falls has a grade of 200 feet in 1700 safety devices being placed at each turn. Still another canyon may be seen on the way, Johnson Canyon, over 100 feet high and very narrow. Hole-in-the-wall Mountain, Pilot Mountain and Cascade Mountain are other commanding sentinals along the road.

Arriviug in Banff, with its camping ground of 4,000 sites, one may settle down for days of interesting sight-seeing. The zoo, museum, fisheries, animal paddocks, hot springs, etc.

The 1931 plum and prune crop at Grand Forks will be very light.

Home-Taught Fears

What has been described by one writer as "far and away the most conclusive tests of character ever made, since Adam and Eve reared Cain and Abel and made a moral success of one boy and a moral failure of the other," were the elaborate studies recently undertaken by two professors of Columbia and Yale Universities. These scientists tested the character attitudes of over 10,000 school children from eight to sixteen years old, under "normal" school and home conditions. The children did not even know they were being scientifically studied. The net result of these intricate and reliable tests was to show that among agencies in having the greatest influence in building human character, the "home" outweighed the school, the church, the Sunday School, the movies and sports all combined.

This is fact number one for parents to consider. The second in importance is where and how home influence and training makes or mars the child life within its walls. There are three phases of home life out of which are developed the emotional patterns or habits which will make boys and girls into self-reliant men and women, able to meet an imperfect world with high ideals of their own. These phases are, first, the attitude between husband and wife; second, the attitude of sisters and brothers toward each other; and third, the attitude of parents toward children.

Let us take a look at the way in which these home attitudes foster the one emotional attitude which affects our lives more than any other and extends as a sort of background through nearly all the others. This is self-confidence as opposed to fear—not fear of some special thing but a rather generalized fear of life itself.

Vast numbers of people who will face death on a moment's notice, who go through all sorts of real dangers without a quaver, have yet a sort of underlying fear of life's possibilities that seldom leaves them. It is easy to fall into these generalized fears, and there are thousands of ways in which parents actually teach this state of mind to their children. One of the amazing discoveries made by doctors during the examinations in the World War was, that so many perfectly healthy young men had all their lives been convinced that they had heart or kidney trouble or some similar malady and had feared to undertake arduous occupation for that reason. In nearly all cases their fears had been started by hearing symptoms discussed at home.

What is "fear" anyhow? Well, the scientists have done a world of work in the last thirty years on fear, and they find there are three distinct kinds. The first is natural or biological fear—the kind that preserves you from natural perils; the second is intelligent or constructive fear—the kind you get from sound, healthful education; and the third is pathological fear— destructive fear that comes from a wrong view of life, from wrong comparisons of yourself with other people, from wrong attitudes toward your job, and from telling yourself constantly you are not as important as others. As a rule there are just three people who ever tell you you are no good—your parents, your brothers or sisters, and yourself. And nine times out of ten you have begun to tell yourself you are no good because your mother, or father, or brother, or sister, in some way first destroyed your self-confidence.

For example, you hear many people assert they are naturally afraid of lightning, or burglars, or something of the sort. This is not true, because there are but two things that people are "naturally afraid of." The first is a loud noise, and the second is the sense of falling. Dr. John Watson and his students have tried in hundreds of ways to frightened babies, but these are the only two ways in which they have succeeded.

Many mothers say, "My child has always been afraid of the dark." Oh, no, the mother taught it to be afraid. She put the babe to bed and went out and slammed the door, or talked loudly, or scolded, or dropped a basin on the floor. Or, when it got a little older, the mother talked about being afraid of the dark herself, or told the child something dreadful that was likely to happen in the dark.

And it is just this way that children are taught to be afraid of life. Parents need to be taught on the many ways in which they actually teach their children to be afraid of life by shielding them from responsibility. They are missing the greatest educational opportunity this world offers when they fail to put as much responsibility on the child as he can reasonably carry just as early in life as is possible. In this way you build up habits of success instead of habits of failure, courage habits instead of habits of fearing life and dodging its responsibilities.

This has nothing contrary to the duty of teaching the children the second kind of fear—intelligent fear—which is merely teaching them good judgment in avoiding dangers and destructive habits. This kind of fear is merely the negative side of character building and should be carried through to the constructive or positive side—that is, to the development of ideals and ambitions, of goals to be reached and battles to be won. The greatest duty of parents is to fill their children's minds with the belief that they can meet these duties and battles with satisfaction and success.

When intelligent fear is carried to the point of exaggeration it becomes the third fear—diseased or pathological fear. The way out is to develop logical judgment of our own powers and those of our friends. When this is done honestly, when you think "in detail" of your own powers of body and mind and compare them with these same qualities in others, you will be astonished to find that you are superior in most respects to the very people you have taught yourself to be afraid of.

But the great lesson for parents is, that all these attitudes, both destructive and constructive, are chiefly developed in the home. And since Nature has given us but two inborn fears, and all others are learned, and since the home is the greatest agency in the world for teaching all our emotional attitudes, the very large question every family should answer is, "Are we as parents or brothers and sisters teaching ourselves and one another to meet life with fear, self-depreciation and doubt, or are we trying to be a daily inspiration to one another to meet life with the self-confidence and good cheer that calls out each one's best energies?"

The answer to these questions will have more effect on the happiness and success of every member of the family than anything that ever has been or ever will be taught in school or college.

Could Not Check the Summer Complaint

A Few Doses Did It

DR. FOWLER'S EXT. OF WILD STRAWBERRY

Mrs. R. Coulter, 918-11th Ave. E., Calgary, Alta., writes:—"Last summer my youngest son was very bad with summer complaint, and everything he ate he would vomit, and he got so thin I became very much worried. I could not get the discharges checked, so I went to the druggist and he gave me a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and told me it would stop the trouble if anything would. After I had given the boy the first few doses I noticed the discharges were being checked, and it was not long before he was well again."

Air Mail Service To Aklavik Necessary

Paying Its Way and Must Not Be Abandoned

Whatever happens to the prairie mail that to Aklavik simply must not be abandoned. It was stated by Mr. Veniot, former postmaster-general that under the old system of delivering mail by dog teams in winter and by boat in summer, it took many weeks to reach its destination and even then the service cost the department $41,000 a year. Contracts for delivery by airplane called for only some $6,000 additional and instead of giving people of the far north mail once or twice a year they have been receiving several deliveries each winter. It was further stated that the northern air service under a two-cent rate today is paying its way and has a surplus. These facts should remove the Aklavik service from any general plan of cutting out the air mails.—Edmonton Journal.

ACIDITY FOR 10 YEARS

Before he Found the Remedy

Many people endure suffering unnecessarily. This man did. If he had known ten years ago what he knows to-day, he would have been spared a great deal of suffering.

"I feel I must write a few lines in appreciation of your Kruschen Salts. I have suffered for 10 years from chronic acidity of the stomach. I tried nearly everything, until I was advised by a friend to try Kruschen, which I have taken for the last two months, and I am pleased to say I have had no return of the acidity."—W. B.

Kruschen Salts swiftly neutralises acid, takes all the torment out of it, and gently expels it from the system. And by stimulating your organs of elimination to perfect regular action, Kruschen will prevent this harmful acid from ever accumulating again. After that you'll experience no more misery after meals. Kruschen will keep your inside clean and serene. Pure and invigorated blood will be sent coursing to every part of your body. You'll feel wonderfully energetic and well. As healthy and hearty as it is humanly possible to feel.

A Matter Of Taste

Canadian ice-cream is delicious but Canadian coffee "almost undrinkable," in the opinion of a group of British cadets who have been attending rifle meets in this country. The cadets said they liked Canada "immensely", and that everyone would endeavour to come back.

Externally Or Internally, It Is Good—When applied externally by brisk rubbing, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil opens the pores and penetrates the tissue, touching the seat of the trouble and immediately affording relief. Administered internally, it will still the irritation in the throat which induces coughing and will relieve affections of the bronchial tubes and respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

Butter Production

Butter production in Western Canada last year increased by 1,161,424 pounds; the total output being 47,424,201 pounds.

Worms in children work havoc. These pests attack the tender lining of the intestines and, if left to pursue their ravages undisturbed, will ultimately perforate the wall, because these worms are of the hook variety that cling to and feed upon the interior surface. Miller's Worm Powders will not only exterminate these worms, of whatever variety, but will serve to repair the injury they have done.

The Proven Asthma Remedy. Since asthma existed there has been no lack of much heralded remedies, but they have proved short lived and worthless. The ever-growing reputation of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has given it a place in the field of medicine which no other can approach. It has never been pushed by sensational methods, but has simply gone on effecting relief and making new converts.

Nations Will Uphold Britain

Prestige Must Be Safeguarded Or World Will Suffer

Engrossed as we are in our own troubles in Canada, we may not realize how very serious is the situation in the Mother Country. Yet the outward signs, visible to the world, are sufficiently alarming. We may be sure, when a Labour Prime Minister must not only interrupt his own holiday but feels it necessary to call into council the leaders of the Conservative and Liberal Parties to devise emergency measures to meet an imminent crisis, that the crisis is grave and, indeed, almost desperate.

British stability is a world asset. If anything serious were to happen to the age-long leader of world finance and trade, the whole world would suffer. It is inconceivable under such circumstances that the prestige of British institutions will not be safeguarded by all the power which the leaders of finance in other nations can bring to bear. Some of them may not relish the opportunity to rush to the rescue of the Colossus of other years—but they will rush. They dare not permit anything really dangerous to occur.—Montreal Star.

Scientists Sample Arctic Sea Bottom

Interesting Report Received By Radiogram From Submarine "Nautilus"

A copyrighted radiogram from the submarine "Nautilus" to the New York American tells how scientists aboard the vessel have sampled the bottom of the Arctic Ocean 5,220 feet from the surface.

The result, says the radiogram from Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, commander of the North Pole submarine expedition, was a column of Arctic mud 17 inches long and one inch thick. It was "brown from the surface for 15 inches and then pale blue, representing the deposits in polar waters of hundreds of thousands or perhaps hundreds of millions of years.

Saskatoon Fair

Operating Loss This Year Shows Decrease Over That Of 1930

Operating loss on the 1931 Saskatoon Exhibition, including all fixed charges against the exhibition board, amounted to $18,848.43, it was announced at a meeting of the finance committee. This shows a substantial decrease over the exhibition loss in 1930.

Total attendance was 66,853, with 39,786 attending the grandstand.

In view of conditions this operating loss was considered very reasonable and the exhibition management has operated about $5,000 under the amount budgeted in 1930.

Ontario Mines

Output Shows Decrease In First Six Months Of Year

The value of Ontario mineral output for the first six months of 1931 shows a 12.04 per cent. decrease over the same period last year, the half-yearly report of the Provincial Department of Mines shows. At the same time, gold production of the province reached the record total of $20,608,196.

Production to the end of June this year amounted to $50,927,740, as compared with $58,236,562 for the corresponding period of 1930.

SUPPORT ASKED BY BALDWIN FOR THE NEW CABINET

London, England.—Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservative Party and president of the council in the new three-party government, appealed to every Conservative member of parliament to support the emergency cabinet's financial legislation.

"The forthcoming session is to be one of the most critical in our history," Mr. Baldwin said in a letter sent to all of his parliamentary followers. "I beg of you at whatever personal sacrifice, to be present on the appointed days and to give your consistent support to the government to enable them to pass the necessary financial legislation.

"Failure to do your duty throughout this crisis would be dishonourable to us as a party and disastrous to the national interests."

The Conservative leader's appeal was issued as the cabinet continued its battle to balance the budget. After a three-hour session it was announced, the ministers had completed their labors in connection with the economy section of the national plan and that their forthcoming deliberations would be mainly concerned with the financial question—that is, new taxes.

Stress was placed on the great progress made, and officials generally were optimistic that the new government has excellent prospects of "pulling England out of the hole" without visiting unusual sacrifices on the already over-burdened population.

It was believed a vote of confidence would be sought almost at the opening of the House or at least after two days' debate on certain resolutions which must precede the budgetary proposals of the Government.

The Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen adopted a resolution repudiating the new government and urging the adoption of a definite Socialist policy by the Trade Union Congress and the Labor Party "with a view of changing the present credit system of the nation and combatting the power of capitalist financiers, both national and international."

Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, secretary for the Dominions, who resigned from his official position with the National Union of Railwaymen before being dismissed, was angry when he heard that the organization had voted against giving him his pension.

"It's cruel, harsh and vindictive," he said. "It's not the railwaymen I knew."

Market For Wheat In China

Our Surplus Wheat Would Save Thousands Of Chinese Now Starving

Montreal, Que.—Canada's surplus wheat in elevators throughout the Dominion would save the lives of thousands of Chinese now starving in the areas flooded by the Yantse River and possibly be the means of furnishing a future outlet for Canadian wheat that would prove of great benefit to this country. Wong Han, prominent member of the Montreal Chinese colony, stated here.

He thought that there was an excellent market for the hard wheat of Canada in his homeland. "The Chinese," he explained, "will never eat bread to any great extent, as it is a food absolutely foreign to them and would require cooking equipment not found in the average Chinese home. Canadian wheat, however," he went on, "could be used freely in the preparation of Chinese dishes, such as the making of dumplings and noodles, and its use for this purpose would take millions of bushels of Canadian wheat yearly."

Requires Aid From Ottawa

The Pas, Man. — Premier John Bracken told The Pas Board of Trade that the province is unable to meet the entire cost of the Mafeking Highway, but that if The Pas can persuade the Federal Government to guarantee 50 per cent. of the cost of the road, work on it would start the next day.

Thirty-five years ago, the automobiles were set about 20 inches from the ground; whereas today the usual clearance is about 12 inches.

Duty On Magazines

Customs Tariff Now In Effect Affecting American Publications

Ottawa, Ont.—Nearly 450 periodicals are contained in the partial list, issued by the Department of National Revenue here, of magazines upon which a customs tariff will be imposed as from this date.

The department makes it clear that the list is not complete, and that a further list will be issued "when the necessary information is furnished to the department by publishers of other periodical publications."

Three sections and two sub-sections of the customs tariff—148B to 184D inclusive—are applicable to all magazines imported into Canada from foreign countries; for such publications from Great Britain and other parts of the British Empire are not affected, nor is there any provision for the imposition of a duty on the periodical publications issuing from trade treaty countries.

The list covers United States magazines exclusively. A number of those of the short story type are boosted in price, by reason of the new tax, to a cost that may cause their total disappearance from Canadian news stands. These came within the classification of "periodicals or newspapers consisting largely of fiction, etc."

Scientific publications, religious magazines and others devoted to comment on public and cultural affairs, and to travel and exploration, which carry articles of an educational character are listed free.

Wheat Shipment At Churchill

Workmen Cheer When First Train Load Of Wheat Arrives

Churchill.—The dream of 50 years of western Canada was realized when 24 cars of No. 1 Northern wheat arrived at this bay port en route to European markets. This is the first wheat ever to come over the Hudson Bay rails into the 2,500,000 bushel wheat elevator.

All the workmen for Carter-Halls-Aldinger, and the Department of Railway and canals were present when this epoch-making event took place. Eskimos and Indians, only dimly realizing the significance of the event, were present in large numbers. When it was definitely learned the wheat was the principal part of the cargo, cheers arose from the groups of workmen and the engineer blew loud blasts in answer.

General Disarmament

Legion Believes War Should Have No Place In Civilized World

Niagara Falls, Ont.—Reaffirming their belief that war has or should have no place in a civilized world and approving the campaign of the League of Nations Society in Canada to advance the cause of general disarmament, delegates to the Canadian Legion Convention unanimously passed a resolution to that effect. The resolution was qualified, however, as follows: "This resolution of approval is not, however, to be taken as approving of disarmament by individual nations, and expresses the opinion that it is the duty of Canada to maintain adequate defence forces."

Second Ship To Churchill

Will Pick Up 7,000 Tons Of Grain For Shipment To Europe

Montreal, Que.—The stout steamer "Warkworth" sailed from Montreal, September 1, for Churchill, Canada's new grain port on Hudson Bay, to pick up 7,000 tons of grain as an experimental shipment to Europe. The S.S. Farnworth sailed August 28, from Newcastle-on-Tyne for Churchill.

The "Farnworth" is expected to reach the port about September 12, with the "Warkworth" due about two days later. With but little ice in Hudson Bay, conditions appear to be favourable for the experiment, according to local shipping men.

Welfare Of Workers

Moscow, Russia.—Addressing the general conference of Moscow engineers, V. Kuybyshev, chairman of the state planning commission, declared that Soviet Russia, having virtually achieved its aim to industrialize the nation in less than five years, intends in 1932 to devote more attention to the welfare of workers and peasants.

Economic Situation

Solution Of Difficulty May Lay In Shortening Of Working Hours

Saskatoon, Sask.—Solution of the present situation lay perhaps in shortening of working hours while maintaining the present standard of living, stated Hon. Howard McConnell, Provincial Treasurer, when speaking to a local service club. Mr. McConnell dealt with the economic situation generally and stressed the need of great economy in the province. He predicted that revenue this year would fall far short of requirements, laying the blame for this largely at the door of the agricultural situation in the south of this province.

British Films

May Erect Chain Of Theatres In Canada To Show Pictures

Toronto, Ont.—British motion picture producers would find their way into the Canadian market regardless of the attitude of the Canadian motion picture industry, declared F. W. Fields, of Montreal, British Trade Commissioner in Canada, addressing a meeting under the auspices of the National Council of Women at the Canadian National Exhibition here.

If Canadian theatre owners were not more friendly to British pictures he predicted the erection of a chain of British theatres to show films from that country here.

Soporific Books

Dean Inge Would Have Doctors Prescribe Books For Insomnia

London, England.—Doctors should prescribe books by certain authors as a cure for insomnia, suggested Dean Inge, of St. Paul's, at the Library Association Convention here.

"I have often found my wife sleeping peacefully with one of my books upside down on her knee," Dean Inge said.

Young Wins Swim Marathon

Toronto Swimmer Defeats Field Of 180 Contestants

Toronto.—George Young, Toronto, who for years has sought vindication, found it today. Meeting Lake Ontario when the lake was at its cruelest, Young defied it. He smashed through cold, cold waters for 15 miles to win the world's professional swimming championship, $10,000 in cash and vindication in the eyes of Toronto's citizenry. In the last grueling drive, he crossed the finish line shortly after 7 o'clock, swam perhaps 20 feet farther, then collapsed. The lake had its way in the end—but not before George had proved beyond all doubt his superiority over a field of 180 contestants who started one of the cruelest, most brutal grinds in the history of swimming.

Young was leading by nearly a mile at the finish line, and all talk of his being a "front runner," the boy who quit under pressure, was set at rest by his performance. Gone, too, are the cutting and untrue remarks that the Catalina victory of 1927 was a "fluke."

The prize winners were:

George Young, Toronto, first, $10,000.

Bill Goll, New York, second, $2,500.

Warren Anderson, Sydney, N.S., third, $1,000.

And these were the only swimmers to finish the ordeal.

An Epochal Event

Minister Of Railways May Witness First Grain Shipment From Churchill

Ottawa, Ont.—Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, may witness the first grain shipments to move from Churchill over the Hudson Bay route.

Arrangements have been rushed to permit two cargoes of wheat to be shipped about September 15 for Great Britain. Dr. Manion has not decided definitely whether he would be present but, officials of the Department of Railways and Canals will make the journey.

Costs Can Be Reduced

Finding Of Conference On Production Expenses Of Wheat

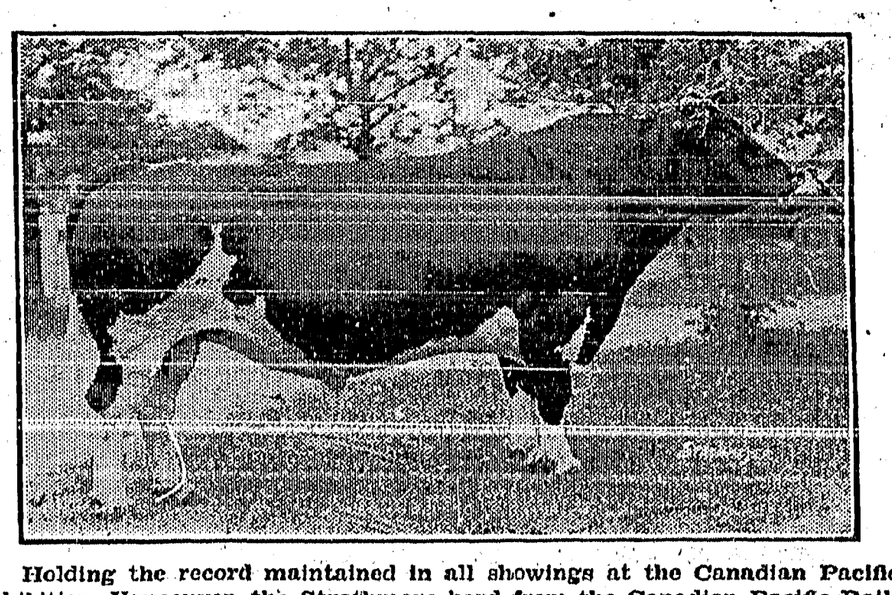
Calgary, Alberta.—Wheat producers attending conference here with a view to cutting down production expenses closed their sessions with the decision that costs can be reduced, and wheat will continue to be for many years to come the basic western crop.

The conference formed the second part of a two-day program, the first being field trials and tests of farm machinery at the Midnapore Hanch of Senator Patrick Burns.

Communistic Activities

Drumheller, Alberta.—Coal mine operators of the Drumheller field have been asked by Red Deer Valley unit No.. 90 of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, to make careful selection of employees because of Communist activities in the district.

GRAND CHAMPION



Holding the record maintained in all showings at the Canadian Pacific Exhibition, Vancouver, the Strathmore herd from the Canadian Pacific Railway's supply farm in Alberta proved unbeatable in the bull classes. "Gano Paul Bruce," awarded senior and grand championship for bulls at Vancouver, adds another red ribbon to his decorations from this season's major exhibitions. "Gano Paul Bruce" holds three firsts and the grand championship from Calgary, Saskatoon and Regina, and took second place at Edmonton. His record in 1930 made him first prize aged bull in Holstein classes at Vancouver, Victoria, Spokane International, Washington State Fair, Yakima; Interstate Fair, Puyallop, and Pacific International, Portland. Also in 1930 he claimed the grand championship at Spokane, Yakima and Puyallop. He goes now, with other Strathmore Farm exhibits to the north Pacific Coast fairs..

LEGION OPPOSED TO LEGALIZING SWEEPSTAKES

Niagara Falls, Ont.—The Dominion convention of the Canadian Legion expressed itself as opposed to the idea of legalizing sweepstakes in Canada. The convention adopted, with only one dissenting voice, a report of a special committee, advocating that no steps be taken for a change of the law regarding sweepstakes. The committee urged that the Dominion command be instructed to oppose, now and in the future, any attempts to alter this law.

It was also recommended that the proffered gift of $57,023 from the Army and Navy Veterans' Association of Canada, which, it was claimed, was wholly derived from sweepstakes, be returned forthwith to the donors.

The claim of an Alberta delegate that many branches in that province would be in open rebellion if the report was adopted was not heeded by other delegates. The Alberta man claimed if sweepstakes were legalized the legion ought to participate in them. Rev. E. R. Adye of Whitby, Ont., declared if the branches were ready to rebel because they could not have such a way of raising money, the legion would be better off without them.

Imperial war veterans were given consideration in a series of resolutions presented to the convention and given the approval of the gathering. One resolution urged that Imperial ex-service men resident in Canada for three years or more, be entitled to the benefits of the War Veterans' Allowance act and all social legislation in the way of relief to war veterans. It was also asked that men who had been transferred to the Imperial Army from the Canadian Army be given the same consideration as Canadian ex-service men.

Appointment by the British Government in each province of the Dominion, of a representative of the British Ministry of Pensions was urged by the convention.

A comprehensive and detailed report, reviewing the activities of the Canadian Legion since the last Dominion Convention at Regina, in November, 1929, was presented Wednesday morning, September 2, by Major J. R. Bowler, Dominion general secretary.

During the year from July, 1930, to July, 1931, the report shows 1,269 major pensions were recorded, while some 3,000 cases other than pension were recorded.

The report reviewed its activities in securing new pensions legislation, and the War Veterans' Allowance Act. Figures quoted in the report show that up to August 17, 1931, 7,654 applications for war veterans' allowance had been received, and that of these, 3,195 had been approved, and 3,700 declined, while 393 applicants were considered ineligible and 48 were withdrawn.

Vancouver was selected for the next annual convention of the Canadian Legion British Empire Service League, at the concluding session of the convention here. The Pacific Coast city defeated Ottawa and Port Arthur for the honour. The date of the 1932 gathering has not yet been decided.

New Freight Tariff Protested

Calgary Board Of Trade Draws Attention To New Ruling

Calgary, Alberta.—Protest to the Board of Railway Commissioners at Ottawa over the filing of a new tariff by railway companies which would make shippers pay freight on dead or crippled animals was made by the Board of Trade here.

The board claimed that a double charge could be made under the new tariff, but railway officials replied that the tariff had been in effect in Ontario for a year and no complaints raised.
