The Charm of Soft Fabric

New frocks are soft and fluttery with flowered materials and flares. The frock presented here is sure to take the eye of the miss and little woman. First, because of its arresting simplicity of line, and second, because of the loveliness of its material. A wide ribbon sash is tied at the low waistline, where rippling skirt joins slender bodice. The batteau neck is finished with a narrow binding of the same plain material as the flaring sleeves. No. 1254 is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 4¾ yards 36-inch figured crepe, and ⅜ yard plain georgette crepe; ribbon for sash 2¾ yards 5 inches wide. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

The Training Of Children

Valuable Work Being Carried On For Welfare of Children in Saskatchewan

Ten or twelve years ago two English ladies specially trained in Sunday School work came to Saskatchewan to see what they could do for the children of the prairies by giving them instruction in religion. After giving some years to this work in a restricted area they conceived the idea of carrying the Sunday School to the children widely scattered on the prairies and for this purpose a van was built and equipped, and since 1920 this van has been travelling about the southern part of the province of Saskatchewan, gathering children together and teaching them as far as possible something about the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. This work was begun in 1920. Now, there are vans doing a similar work in all the prairie provinces and in British Columbia. The children so taught in the summer are enrolled as members of the Sunday School by post and so they are kept in touch with those truths which concern their moral and religious welfare.

But Miss Bosanquet was not content with this; she felt that something more should be done and so she gave the sum of $15,000 to start a girls' school for the children of parents who wanted to give their children a religious as well as a secular education. The school was started in Regina in 1914 under the direction of the Diocese of Qu'Appelle and the work is carried on under the care of the Sisters of St. John the Divine, a Canadian Order of the Church of England in Canada. The school has grown in numbers and a good sound education is given by very competent teachers to fit our girls to take their part in building up our country on a sound religious basis. The children are well cared for and every provision made for their happiness and well-being. The school is in the beautiful grounds of St. Chad's College and would well repay a visit by anyone interested in the welfare of children and their moral and religious training.

The Canadian Legion

Charter of Incorporation Has Been Granted By Letters Patent

Letters patent incorporating "The Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League" have been issued by the secretary of state, according to an announcement sent out by legion headquarters. Through the charter of incorporation the legion is empowered to "establish, organize and regulate provincial, district and local bodies or commands and branches, in convenient centres throughout Canada and elsewhere," and to establish parallel organizations to be known as ladies' auxiliaries.

The charter of incorporation gives legal effect to the work of the unification that has been proceeding among Canadian veterans' organizations since the visit of Field Marshal Earl Haig, grand president of the British Empire Service League, to Canada last year.

The original intention of the legion was to seek a royal charter by special act of parliament, but the dissolution of parliament made it necessary to alter this proposal. Application then was made for a charter under the Companies Act.

To Exhibit At U. S. Fair

Alberta To Be Represented At Big State Fair At Sioux City, Iowa

Alberta is to be represented at one of the big state fairs across the line this year, arrangements being now under way for an extensive exhibit at Sioux City, Iowa, where the states of Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska will hold their annual inter-state fair during the week beginning Sept. 19. The exhibit will be prepared at once, and will be made up of grains and grasses, both sheaf and threshed; coal, tar, sand and illustrative material. It will be shown in the government's own exhibition tent, a good location for which has been promised on the fair grounds.

Condensed Milk Absolutely Pure

Value of Condensed Milk As A Guardian of Health

The value of condensed milk as a guardian of health was curiously demonstrated by an item in the London Daily Mail recently, one sentence in the article reading:

"The complete replacement of fresh milk by condensed milk has notably reduced tuberculosis."

The story had to deal with the activities of the London Zoological Society and was reporting on the health of the animals. Many animals, especially those with cloven hooves, were liable to epidemics of bovine tuberculosis. The antelopes seemed to die of nothing else. Yet they lived under very good conditions and were given generous daily draughts of fresh milk. Then the fresh milk was cut off and the tinned variety substituted. A marked improvement followed and tubercle has been stamped out in the antelope paddocks. The Borden Company Limited, who put up Eagle Brand condensed Milk, have long advocated it as an infant food on the ground of its being absolutely pure as well as uniform. This incident would seem to bear out the statement that, save for mother's milk, there is no milk so safe for the infant as Eagle Brand.

Miller's Worm Powders are a prompt relief from the attacks of worms in children. They are powerful in their action and, while leaving nothing to be desired as a worm expellant, have an invigorating effect upon the youthful system, remedying fever, biliousness, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, and other ailments that follow disorders caused by worms in the stomach and bowels.

Memorial Tablet At Zeebrugge

To the gallant exploit of British sailors in 1918, a tablet on the Mole at Zeebrugge, was unveiled by Prince Charles, the second son of King Albert of Belgium. Mrs. Gibbs, mother of the commander who lost his life in the raid on the Mole, placed flowers beneath the tablet.

Early Navigating At Coast

Ships Ply Since 1868 From London to Victoria, B.C.

As early as 1868, ships were plying directly between Great Britain and British Columbia, according to Captain R. G. Parkhurst, who in an interview with the Vancouver Province, told something of the early history of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company.

In 1868, he said, bills of lading showed that "the good ship Spirit of the Age loaded freight for Victoria, Vancouver Island." Most of the ships made the run round the Horn, but there were instances of cargoes being billed from London to Victoria via Aspinwall, the Panama railway, the Pacific Mail and the North Pacific Transportation company.

To Obtain Longest Mileage

Best Tires Should Be Placed On Rear Wheels

To obtain the longest mileage, the two best tires on a car should be placed on the rear wheels. Some drivers assert that the best tires belong on the front to minimize the danger from blowouts and the risk of losing control of the car, but this hazard is considered negligible, and the real fault usually lies in the driver losing his head. The spare should replace the more worn of the rear tires at the end of several thousand miles of driving. On new cars, all tires may remain as originally placed for several thousand miles, then the front ones should be put on the rear wheels.

The Terror of Asthma comes like a thief in the night with its dreadful throttling, robbing its victim of breath. It seems beyond the power of human aid to relieve until one trial is made of that remarkable preparation, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy. Then relief comes with a rush. Life becomes worth living, and, if the remedy be used persistently, the disease is put permanently to rout. Take no substitute.

Italian Immigrants Arrive

Among a total of 576 third-class travellers who were landed at Quebec recently, off the steamship Ascania, was a party of 150 Italian immigrants, the largest single group of this nationality to be landed at Quebec this year. They will be employed on the land in Ontario, the prairie provinces and British Columbia. The remainder of the third-class passengers on the liner consisted largely of Poles, Hungarians and other central Europeans, all on their way to the western provinces.

Splendid Safety Record On Canadian National

Congratulations From Workmen's Compensation Board of Manitoba

Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, is the recipient of a letter of congratulation from the commissioner of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Manitoba in which high praise is accorded the safety measures practiced by the company and its employees.

Chas. K. Newcombe, the commissioner, writes from the office of the board in Winnipeg to Sir Henry:

"We have just completed a check of accidents reported for six months ended June 30, 1926, and I wish to congratulate the Canadian National Railways upon the excellent showing made.

"The accidents reported to this office by the Canadian National Railways during the six months ending June 30, 1924, numbered 1,084, three of these being fatalities. During the corresponding period of 1925 this total was reduced to 872. During the six months ending June 30, 1926, 778 accidents were reported. This would seem to indicate a very gratifying state of affairs—especially as our records show an increasing accident frequency in all other classifications save one—and the Manitoba Compensation Board wishes to congratulate those in charge of safety work upon your system.

Insurance Agent: Don't you want your office furnishings insured against theft?

Boss: Yes, all except the clock. Everybody watches that.

A Wonderful Camera

More Wonderful in Some Ways Than the Human Body

There is a camera in London which is capable of recording pictures at the rate of 300,000 a minute. Strange that man can make machines more wonderful in some ways than the human body. The human eye, in comparison with the camera, cannot receive more than thirty impressions in a second. The new camera is 150 times as fast. Let a vase be blown up by a charge of powder and this speedy camera will take a picture of the explosion which will show the particles of the vase being blown from the centre.

Shall we not have a camera some day which will detect the madly whirling atoms and electrons? Shall we not have a machine which will show us what the scientists already know—that matter is force?

When we have learned to use atomic energy the steam age will seem as out of date as the stone age.—Grove Patterson in Duluth Herald.

"Shall we begin with Roddy?" Brandon asked, and they did. Joanna sought him out on the floor as Brandon explained him—drawing for her a curious picture of a wastrel—but a picture she classified as of a romantic idler in a colorful domain.

A bachelor lodge at Palm Beach where he was host to that company of women whose husbands labor at home for the money with which their wives blossom gorgeously and recklessly—beneath the Florida palms, and make their plays at Bailey's, America's great gambling rooms; a wooer of debutantes whose names shone golden in the purlieus of society, and the amused dabbler among the studio moths of New York's Greenwich Village; a sportsman in England, where he hunted, occasionally, with the hounds of a country lord, and a beau-gallant patron of all the beauty and the bizarre that is France.

"A woman need never fear of being seen with our Roddy in attendance upon her," Brandon added to his general description. "His affairs are so many no one keeps track of them or becomes interested in a new one. He adds just the proper perspective to any young woman's background, for to be admired by Roddy is a cachet of extremely romantic worthiness."

"But his business—doesn't he really do anything?" Joanna wanted to know.

"He's of a family, you know. Inherited money. I believe he would explain that it is the duty of heirs who can to help those of the generation who can't to pay the price of their pleasures. That keeps him moderately fond of youth—young youth, such as your's, or seasoned youth, such as Yvonne's.

"If you are of the mind to be amused, you will find Roddy most amiable."

Joanna thought Brandon was challenging her, but he gave no sign of it. She pondered, a minute, the miracle of that cryptic declaration of Kenilworth's at the edge of the dance floor, "I shall play for you, too!" spoken to her, Joanna, by one who was unimpressed even by such exquisite women as—Yvonne, for example! A tempest of exhilaration surged within her. In a flash the realization that had so far eluded her, of what had been spread before her by her mysterious money, echoed across her brain. Her heart, which had never lost its uneasiness since her first summons to Graydon's office, became suddenly buoyant. Something in which she was the stake—that was what Kenilworth had called it—was going on about her, but whatever its portents, it already had brought to her two men with quiet, suave promise that they would lay siege to her, that they would sue for the favors of her! And these men—not the dancing boys, "as light in their heads as they try to be on their feet," she had described them to Graydon, but men of the world, of the world where jewels were real, where gaiety was genuine, where romance need not be marred by the sordidness of constant make-believe! The world that was without the restraints of meagerness.

"And Yvonne?" she suddenly asked Brandon. "I wonder if ever I shall be like her?"

Brandon's question came quickly. Afterwards Joanna remembered this, and that it reminded her of Eggleston's quickness to ask her, "What else?" when she promised to buy something else than dancing pumps.

"Do you want to be like Yvonne?" was what Brandon asked.

"I think there is no girl I know who would not give her soul—almost—to be like her," Joanna replied, so softly, and suddenly wistful, that Brandon knew she was, indeed, echoing a deep yearning. "You see," she went on, "she is the model we all try to copy. So I suppose she must have all the good things of life that we try to get little tastes of. I don't know just how to say what I mean, but I know that the store had a copy of one of Yvonne Coutant's dresses, one time, and that I spoiled four yards of two dollar silk trying to imitate it. But I couldn't do it. I didn't know how. And even the store dressmakers couldn't get the right hang to it. They couldn't know how, either."

"And you think Yvonne knows how—how to be what you have wanted to be?"

"That is it! I hadn't reasoned it out, before, but I know that's it. She must know how, or she wouldn't be making the best of life."

The ghost of a smile that gave cynical expression to Brandon's face came to the curve of his lips. For a moment he watched the girl, watched her eyes leaping about the room, watched them when they rested on Yvonne when she traced her among the dancers, and when they hovered about Kenilworth. Then he murmured:

"A good many people in the world would have a different analysis of Yvonne Coutant's recipe for what you term making the best of her life. Some would pass a different judgment than 'she knows how.'"

Joanna regarded him with her defences quivering at her finger tips. "Of course they would—some would!" she indignantly agreed. "People are always finding fault if you are not just like they are, or like they think you ought to be. What is one's life for, if not to be enjoyed?"

"And having a good time isn't necessarily being wrong about it, you know! Is it?"

He met her plea for understanding promptly. "I can imagine no better bargain than unfettered conscience allied with an unhampered pursuit of one's own desires, and old-fashioned critics be hanged!"

"Well," Joanna considered, "that sounds as if you mean that I have the right idea about things, so I suppose it's all right. Anyhow I don't see why people can't say their prayers with a smile as well as they can with a grouch!"

To that sentiment," Brandon proposed, "I suggest another cocktail." He produced Kenilworth's silver flask from under a serviette and filled her glass. She smiled across at him, while she sipped, and felt that she had put up another good battle for the rights of youth.

When Kenilworth and Yvonne were again at the table Kenilworth begged Joanna to tell him "if Brandon wrapped me in scandal and delivered me as a broken idol" while they were dancing.

"That is something I shall have to consider," Joanna returned. "He told me you were not at all dangerous, or, at least he gave me that impression. I shan't be at all afraid of you."

"And that is both a promise and a challenge. I accept both!"

Joanna's pulses raced when Yvonne proposed to her that she come to her own place and make it her home. "For a time, anyway. You will want to be getting away from your old atmosphere, you know, and I shall love to have you with me—as long as you wish."

What Kenilworth had said flashed across her mind, his prediction of just this invitation. She fancied that she caught a flicker of his eyelids when she glanced at him. For one brief instant the vision of John framed itself among her thoughts, but it faded quickly when she had shaken her head a little, to drive it away. Any thought of John had become unpleasant. It aroused defiance inside of her, rebelliousness. Always when he appeared in her mind, she saw herself, at first, going up to him, her face lifted, her lips held pleadingly, for the greeting greeting that had been so customary between them. This sort of vision hurt, though. The phrase that ran so often across her brain would come back—"Would that fit in, now?" This time it was the thought of John coming to her and finding her with Yvonne. There was something about that which wasn't right." So she gave that little shake of the head and drove John away.

Music Of the Elements

Orchestral Effect Produced By Wind Under Certain Conditions

We are so accustomed to man-made music that we seldom realize that the elements have ways of producing music of their own. In the Malay States there are fields of bamboo that in certain conditions make a volume of sound that from afar strikes the ear like a huge orchestra of flutes. The effect is caused by a small worm which bores holes in the bamboo stems; the wind, blowing through the holes, produces an astonishing variety of notes that sometimes blend in one great open-air symphony.

Another form of outdoor orchestra is to be found on the Scottish coast, where the sand, in sme districts, produces distinct musical notes when walked on or struck by a stick.

Water, in certain circumstances, is capable of yielding extremely pleasing musical effects, a fact realized by the ancient Greeks, who had a number of musical instruments operated solely by water. Certain North American tribes of Indians make music by filling buffalo hides with water and beating them with sticks.

Little Helps For This Week

When I awake I am still with Thee.—Ps. cxxxix., 18.

Still, still with Thee when purple morning breaketh,

Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee!

I would ever awake with God. My first thoughts are for Him, who hath made the night for rest and the day for work, and who hath blessed both. If my heart be early seasoned with His presence, it will savor of Him all the day.

How London Zoo Started

Natural History Enthusiasts Responsible For Present Valuable Collection

The London Zoological Society originally consisted of fifteen natural history enthusiasts, who met at regular intervals to discuss animals.

Eventually they decided to rent a site in Regent's Park, where fish could be reared, waterfowl bred, and a small menagerie of animals kept—the beginning of the Zoo.

Today the collection numbers some thousands of animals, birds and other creatures—and is worth untold wealth.

The first animals to be brought from abroad by one of the Zoo's emissaries—who nowadays comb the world for specimens—were those captured in the Falkland Islands by a keeper named Lecomte.

When he returned with one sea lion, a wolf, a goose and two gulls, everyone went wild with excitement, and Lecomte became the hero of the hour.

The Zoo's first hippopotamus, a species of animal that has always been one of the biggest "draws," arrived in Regent's Park just three-quarters of a century ago.

RETAIN YOUR VIGOR

This Can Only be Done by Keeping the Blood Rich and Red

If you would regain your vigor and ambition, keep your blood and nerves in good condition. Anaemia, or thin blood lowers the vitality, starves the nerves and causes a general run-down condition. When the blood is thin the skin loses its color, the shoulders droop and weight is lost. The victim of anaemia loses appetite, suffers from indigestion, headaches and sleeplessness, and is nervous and exhausted after slight exertion. If you have any of these symptoms do not delay but begin treatment now with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and you will be gratified with the prompt improvement in your conditon. Among the thousands who have found new health through the use of this medicine is Mrs. Herbert Nagle, Ludlow, N.B., who says:—"I had not been feeling well for some time and was gradually growing weaker. I would take dizzy spells and often faint. I was subject to severe headaches and found it hard to do my work. I took doctor's medicine for some time, but it did me no good, and I was still growing weaker. In this condition I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in a short time found they were helping me. I continued the use of the pills for a while longer, and found that the trouble that had bothered me was gone and I was once more a well woman."

Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your druggist's or write The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent post paid at 50 cents a box.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, OCT. 8

Apple Market Situation

By D. McNAIR, Sales Manager Associated Growers of B.C.

It has been common knowledge to all connected with the fruit industry that there should be a very large crop this year. This is true of all fruit producing sections of the United States and Canada, with the exception of Ontario. All shippers have felt that their capabilities would be taxed to the limit to dispose of the entrie vol ume.

It was further felt that, with the increased buying power of the Prairie, which was in evidence during the early part of the season, and by imposing certain restrictions such as the elimination of the lower grades and poorer sizes, that we would be able to dispose advantageously of British Columbia's crop. There have been conditions arise during the past three weeks or more which have added to the complexity of our problem and it is necessary for us to apprise all Growers of these and enlist your help in the handliug of the situa tion.

About September 1st, when there were still 50,000 unshipped Wealthies, a period of wet, and most inclement weather set in and same has prevailed in the three Prairie Provinces ever since. In the Calgary territory over eight inches of rain fell, which is more than they have ever before had in such a short space of time. This general rainfall was followed by snow and this in turn has been followed by frost which has registered as low as 20 degrees on C.P.R. mainline points. As a result grain harvestiong operations have been at a standstill during this period, excepting in the odd favored spot. Considerable damage has already been done to the grain crop, and the unharvested grain will be lowered several grades.

These conditions, as you can readily see, have been very discouraging to the Prairie farmer, who is our main customer, and he is now in very pessimistic frame of mind and very disinclned to apend money for other than actual necessities. Roads are almost impassable, which prevents even those who would be buyers of fruit from getting into towns. Fruit trading has therefore been halted in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and will remain so until favorable weather prevails again.

This means that if complete demoralization is to be averted, it is necessary for the shippers and growers to take care of their crops in some way until markets become more receptive. As shippers, we have just about reached the limit of our capacity. Our warehouses are overflowing with McIntosh, of which we have 300 to 350 cars still in the Valley unsold. Domestic orders are almost nil and we are only moving a few cars daily, at a time when we should be shipping 75 cars every twenty four hours. In such circumstances we are unable to receive and pack the later varieties as promptly as we would like. We earnestly recommend at this time that Growers assist by picking their crop and leaving it in the orchard, or otherwise protecting it until free shipping is resumed. Any other action will result in chaos and still further reduce, or possibly obliterate, returns which at the best will be none too large.

We are doing everythiug possible to cope with the situation by exporting a heavier percentage of the crop; exporting sizes and grades wich are not ordinarily moved to overseas markets, and removing from the domestic market all McIntosh Extras, Fancies, and "C" Grade 125s and smaller. To reduce the quantity of crate McIntosh we are, ag inst what would be our judgment in a normal year, packing "C" grade and exporting the smaller sizes which we all recognize is a long gamble. So as to handle Jona hans in their proper time, and as these are used extensively for export markets, we are permitting the packing of these for export in sizes 125s to 216s in Extra and Fancies, but have asked locals to hold loose all 113s and larger and crate stock. The latter are suitable only for the domestic market and with still so many McIntosh to go forward we consider it would be unwise to pack these in case it would mean re-packing a few weeks hence.

Now we ask for your fullest co operation with all our Locals in handling this unforeseen and unusual situation.

A great many have become restless and unduly excited as the result of fal e rumors which are always started in circulation during a stress period such as we are now going through. Utter disaster has been predicted and, as usual, criticism has been directed at the capabilities of ourselves and other shippers. One of the most damaging reports is to the effect that certain factions of the jobbers are not supporting the Okanagan. This is advanced as the reason for our present difficulties, but nothing could be farther from the truth. We can assure you that the jobbing trade as a whole, from Manitoba's eastern boundary to the Pacific Coast, since our Wealthy apples started moving, have supported the B.C. deal loyally, and have done their best to market maximum quantities. This is evidenced by the fact that up to September 22nd we have moved 1877 cars, as compared with 1168 cars up to the same date a year ago. As a further illustration we shipped in one week from September 6th to 11th inclusive, a total of 466 cars. If we add the other shippers' output for same period (estimated at 200 cars) we find that in a single week there were 600 cars absorbed by the Prairie, after allowing for export quantities. A large percentage of these cars are still in the basements of the jobber retailers. In fact the jobber has stayed by B.C. better than B.C. has stayed by him, as there are a great many instances where the jobber has purchased several car lots of fruit only to find his feet cut from under him by grower shippers and other unorganized shippers under-selling him. In this connection we are glad to state that the shippers who are members of the Sales Service, Ltd., have worked very closely with us during the past month, and we feel have done their share to lighten the load, by exporting in proportion to us and are today carrying quantities of stock in a similar ratio to ours. They have also stayed with us by refraining from rolling cars unsold, which policy it was necessary to put in effect ten days or so ago, if disaster was to be averted.

It is no doubt most aggravating to Growers who are connected with the regular shippers to see outside growers, who either ship their own apples, or patronize those shippers who will not assume their proper responsibilities for the handling of the crop, forging ahead with the harvesting and picking of their crops, thereby taking advantage of the stabilization and protection afforded the market by the organized growers, and selling at prices lower than we are asking, but which, in the end, may net them more money than you will get. Such operators do untold damage by quoting indiscriminately at lower prices and make no attempt whatever to market their varieties in rotation.

When there were large quantities of Wealthies unshipped, and the market was in a receptive mood for that variety, these shippers hurried out their McIntosh and today when there are over 500 cars of McIntosh in the hands of the regular shippers, these parasite shippers are quoting and shipping winter varieties, which only aggrevate the situation, as it results in removing the dealer's thought from McIntosh and makes him anxious to start operation in winters. In short the competition created within B.C. is by far more injurious than all the competition from the United States and Eastern Canada.

Possibly we should have taken this means of advising you earlier, but we have been hoping against hope that we could handle the situation without going to the grower, and we have also been procrastinating for the reason that we wanted to be able to give you some definite information and recommendation, but all we can tell you at the present time is that the packing and shipping of your crops entirely hinges on the weather in the three Prairie provinces, so please bear with us until there is some improvement, as even with all the assistance you can render it will be difficult enough to maintain markets and move the crop in an orderly manner.

Applications for pre-emptions are to be addressed to the Land Commissioner of the Land Recording Division, in which the land applied for is situated, and are made on printed forms, copies of which can be obtained from the Land Commissioner.

Pre-emptions must be occupied for five years and improvements made to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivating at least five acres, before a Crown Grant can be received.

For more detailed information see the Bulletin "How to Pre-empt Land."

Applications are received for purchase of vacant and unreserved Crown lands, not being timberland, for agricultural purposes; minimum price of first-class (arable) land is $5 per acre, and second-class (grazing) land $2.50 per acre. Further information regarding purchase or lease of Crown lands is given in Bulletin No. 10, Land Series, "Purchase and Lease of Crown Lands."

GRAZING

Under the Grazing Act the Province is divided into grazing districts and the range administered under a Grazing Commissioner. Free, or partially free permits are available for settlers, campers and travellers, up to ten head.

The young fish were put in at five different points on the lake, and if they thrive more of them will be taken.

Due to some of the properties advertised by the village as for sale for arrears of taxes being also advertised in the sale by the provincial collector at Nelson, the village tax sale on September 30th did not materialize. However the advertising of the sale was good business as it brought in $192 of revenues from some of the property included in the eleven scheduled for sale.

D. K. McDonald of Spokane was here on Thursday and Friday with a party of Big Bend, Wash., farmers, who were making an inspection of Creston Reclamation Company's holdings on the flats. The fine weather of the past week has been appreciated at Bonners Ferry, as it has enabled them to pretty well finish harvest. When the visitors were here at least 150 acres of wheat in District No. 1 was still uncut.

Home brews are dangerous

Dr. Frank McCoy
Eminent physician and authority on diet, says, in his book—
"The Fast Way to Health"

". . . HOME BREW BEERS produce a form of disease, which, when developed, seems almost impossible to cure. I have personally known of many cases of death which can be traced to this cause; where autopsy has shown that the liver has stopped functioning without any organic disease . . ."

BREWING is an exact science. Home made beers, made without the knowledge of the safeguards necessary to proper brewing and without ageing to insure complete fermentation, are dangerous. Drink pure beer that is scientifically brewed in a brewery; and preserve your health.

Why Many Homes Are Damp Inside

Builders agree that the dryness of a building depends largely on the insulating powers of its sheating paper.

Hercules is the only building paper which offers 100 per cent. protection against winds and dampness. Its hard protective surface is obtained by using an exclusive coating preparation that is absolutely involatile.

The reduced heating expenses more than offset the slight extra cost of Hercules

There Isn't Time

Preparing for a brief holiday at a summer cottage on one of our lovely Western lakes, the writer of this column tossed a few old magazines in his grip wherewith to pass an idle hour while lolling under the trees. Glancing through one of these his eye was caught by an article appearing under the heading which appears at the top of this column.

How often are people heard to exclaim, "I haven't time," or "There isn't time," uttered by way of excuse for not doing something which ought to be done. And how false and shallow such an excuse can be! The necessary time can always be found for the discharge of one's duties and obligations if the will to do is in evidence.

But on the other hand, it is perfectly true that "there isn't time" for many things upon which, nevertheless, countless people expend an enormous amount of very valuable time, resulting in pure waste.

Time may appear long and slow of movement when measured by centuries and the history of nations, but it is fast and fleeting when gauged by the life of individuals. Men who have lived long and very active lives filled with noteworthy achievements have at the close of their careers expressed their regrets in the words, "So much to do, so little done!"

Time, coupled with good health, is the most precious of gifts to mankind. Because the span of human life is brief, every moment should be put to the best possible use. Sufficient of it should be devoted to healthful pursuits and invigorating exercise and recreation in order that the body may be kept strong and physically fit to keep the mind alert and active and the body capable of the work it may be called upon to do. Only so can the best use be made of all the time allotted to the individual.

But, let it be repeated and emphasized, there isn't time in even the longest life for some things. Sorrow comes to all at some time or other, but "there isn't time" to waste in brooding over one's sorrow and losses. To do so merely means to further shorten life.

There isn't time in this life for worry. Worry kills. It accomplishes nothing, but is wholly destructive and undermining. It is right, proper and altogether sensible and prudent to take thought of and for the future, but many people confuse this desirable trait with needless, senseless worry. "Life is too brief to hunt for grief, for thorns among the flowers."

Hurt we may be today by what friends or others say about us. We may be misjudged, our actions misrepresented, our words distorted. We may be maligned, slandered, and made the victims of false rumor. These things cut and hurt, but "there isn't time" to let them long annoy. Along with them there are also many things to make us happy and glad, and we need all the time there is for the bright and joyous things of life.

Life is too short for thoughts of malice, hatred and revenge. Wrongs may be inflicted upon us, but by pursuing the even tenor of our ways, the mouth of the slanderer will be closed and his evil words effectually answered. "Life isn't long, just time for song, and love, and things sublime. Be not concerned with thoughts that burned. Good friends, there isn't time."

People there are who are so busy in this life getting everything out of it which seems to them all-important and worthwhile that they can find no time to think of and prepare for a future life in which we all believe, while there are others so absorbed with thoughts of that future life that they become neglectful of the duties and responsibilities of this life and their obligations to others, and lead narrow, selfish lives in a continual atmosphere of gloom. Both are wrong. There isn't time for such misconceptions of the true meaning of life.

It would, for most of us, be time well spent if once in a while in the quiet of an evening hour we made a mental inventory of our days, and weeks, and months, and carefully classified under appropriate headings the use being made of the time allotted to us. Are we using this precious inheritance, which once neglected is immediately gone never to return, for the improvement of our minds, an increase in our talents and powers, and devoting all the best of which we are capable for the advancement of our age and race? Or are we wasting precious hours and days on matters and things for which, after all, nobody really has any time to spare?

Several Chinese generals have issued edicts imposing the death penalty on any soldier found smoking opium.

Observing Secrecy

Plan to Keep Anglo-American Liquor Agreement Secret

A controversy over publication of the new British-American rum agreement, just reached in London, is likely to develop in the United States if both governments persist in the present intention to keep the provisions secret.

Secretary of State Kellogg says that the agreement is neither a treaty nor a convention. If that construction is maintained the agreement would not have to go to the senate for ratification and therefore the senate would have no formal means of making the agreement public.

Big Family Of Settlers

Family From Minnsota Settle in the Humboldt District

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Stundebeck, from Minnesota, have recently settled in the Humboldt district with nine children ranging in age from two to 19 years. They bought 960 acres of farm land in this district and came with several thousand dollars in cash and effects and farm equipment valued at $3,500. They made the trip from their home in Minnesota in a motor car and motor truck on which was built a house large enough to hold the big family, which is the modern style of covered wagon or prairie schooner in which settlers of today make their migrations. In the old days the ox or mule-drawn covered wagon took days or weeks to cover long distances, whereas now the motor driven prairie schooner makes the journeys in hours or days.

The Vast And Varied Agricultural Possibilities Offered To The Settler In Canada

Canadian settlers are drawn from nearly every country in the world, and so vast and varied are the agricultural possibilities in Canada with respect to soils and climate that every settler should have little trouble in finding employment best suited to his particular taste or education.

The accompanying map will give some idea of the extent and distribution of Canada's fruit, ranching, dairying, wheat and mixed farming lands as they are to be found today.

The gardener can grow apples, peaches, pears and small fruit in the Niagara district of Ontario, or apples and small fruit in the Annapolis basin of Nova Scotia, and a variety of fruits in the Okanagan, Kootenay or New Westminster districts of the sunset province of British Columbia. The development of commercial nut trees is a recent and successful development in Southern Ontario and British Columbia.

In the foothills of Alberta, in some of the British Columbia valleys and in Southern Saskatchewan there can be obtained some of the finest ranching districts to be found the world over. When His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales decided on ranching as a recreative hobby, it was in the Canadian western foothills that he made his choice.

The jolly shepherd too can feed his flocks in the central parts of Nova Scotia, and in the grazing districts of Southern Saskatchewan, and Southern and Southwestern Alberta, as well as in the central highlands of British Columbia. Nearly every variety of sheep can be, and is being, raised on the prairies in Saskatchewan and Alberta; from the Karakule (Persian lamb) sheep near Calgary through the Lincoln, Leicester, Cotswold, Shropshire, Oxford and Hampshire, to the finer wooled Dorset, Southdown and Merino. A small number of Scotch Black Faces, Suffolks and Cheviots are also found throughout Canada, but their numbers are not increasing very materially.

The stronghold of the dairy farm has been Southern Ontario and Southern Quebec and rightly so, as these districts are suited to intensive farming and are near large markets and also shipping ports, where butter and cheese can be disposed of at remunerative prices. The prairie provinces are also making rapid strides in the production of butter, and their progress during the past few years has been nothing short of phenomenal. At a dairy show held in London, England, recently, an Edmonton dairy won the first prize in the salted butter class, and the second prize went to the Shoal Lake (Manitoba) Creamery. In the unsalted class a Regina creamery won the premier award.

The fruit and dairy farms have, however, been vastly eclipsed by the fame of the western wheat fields. Perhaps no other natural product, whether of agricultural, forest, mineral or marine origin, has exercised such vitalizing influence upon the economic life of Canada in recent years. Wheat has been the most powerful factor in attracting population and capital to the Dominion, in bringing virgin areas under cultivation, in widening the market for domestic manufacturing, mining and other industries, in building up the volume and value of export trade, and in creating the purchasing power necessary to finance Canada's heavy imports of textiles, iron and steel, sugar, coal and other essentials which, for various reasons, are drawn wholly or largely from abroad. The statistics of yearly crops give but a faint picture of the manner in which wheat has impelled the material progress of Canada. When Western Canada finaly captured the faith of the land seeker, when the delusions respecting its climate and fertility were definitely swept away, population and railways advanced more rapidly than they had ever before invaded a new country. In the period 1901-1921 the territory embraced by the present provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan increased eightfold in population, and the occupied farm lands spread over some 85,000,000 acres.

But it is not to fruit, ranching, dairy or even wheat farming that the settler and farmer are now turning their attention, but to mixed farming. This is becoming more and more noticeable as the years go by and the country is becoming more densely populated. The large wheat fields of the west near the larger centres of population, as for example near Winnipeg, Portage la Prairie, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton, are giving place to the dairy and mixed farm, where milk, butter, to a limited extent cheese, pork, mutton, eggs, poultry and grain are produced and give steady employment and income the year round, instead of a summer of rush and a winter of leisure. The principle of the mixed farm has spread through every province from coast to coast, more particularly where the farms have to be cleared of bush and are consequently smaller.

Bees Like Sweet Clover

No Nectar Is Wasted From This Valuable Pasturage

There is no doubt regarding the value of sweet clover as a bee pasturage. When ensiling a crop of sweet clover at Weldwood Farm the field was literally covered with millions of honey bees, and they stayed with the fresh sheaves until the last of them went into the silo. The bees seemed to be doing their best to prevent the destruction of so much valuable nectar.—Farmer's Advocate.

Reducing Weight

One of the grave mistakes common to overweight persons is to decide suddenly that their superfluous flesh must be removed quickly. Reduction in weight should proceed slowly. It is impossible to maintain health on a drastic reducing programme. One cannot expect to take off in two months what it has taken years to put on and survive the experience in perfect health.—Liberty.

George Spence, former member for Maple Creek, and first president of the Saskatchewan Registered Seed Grain Growers' Association retired from the latter when the seed growers held their annual meeting. W. J. F. Warren, Belbeck, Sask., past vice-president was elected president. M. P. Tullis, Saskatchewan field crops' commissioner, was re-elected secretary and general manager, and W. J. Mantle was elected treasurer.

Members of the pool stated at the close of the meeting that a fine feeling of co-operation had prevailed throughout the gathering and that they believed the success of the pool was assured.

Modern Ideas In Old Book

Early Work on Kindness to Animals Is Being Reprinted

A treatize entitled, "The Rights of Animals," prepared by Herman Daggett in 1791 as a thesis in taking the master's degree at Providence College, now Brown University, has just been reprinted by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

It was printed at Sag Harbor, Long Island, in 1792, and is said to be the first American work on humanitarianism ever published. Copies are so rare that it has remained unknown except to a few collectors. As an ethical treatize, the work is considered of such excellence that it has been reprinted for free distribution, according to the introduction by Edward P. Buffet, in the hope that the sympathies aroused by it may not be "limited to the readers' own pet animals," but may awaken humane efforts in another cause, the abolition of the steel trap.

Record Gold Output

Gold and Platinum Produced in Canada in Increasing Quantities

A record quantity of gold is being produced in Canada. Figures recently issued by the Canadian Government bureau of statistics show that in 1925 the output was 1,735,735 fine ounces worth $35,880,826. This was an increase of 210,353 fine ounces over the 1925 production.

In 1925 Canada produced a total of 8,698 fine ounces of platinum worth $1,028,192. Of other metals in the platinum group, palladium, rhodium, iridium, etc., the Dominion's output that year was 8,288 fine ounces valued at $648,969.

The bulk was mined in Ontario, which province produced 1,461,039 fine ounces. British Columbia was second with 219,227 ounces; the Yukon produced 47,817 ounces; Manitoba, 4,424 ounces; and Nova Scotia and Quebec, 1,600 ounces apiece.

Of the platinum, 8,692 ounces was derived from Canadian ores treated in British and United States refineries. Practically all of this came from copper-nickel ores in the Sudbury district.

Butter Awards At Regina

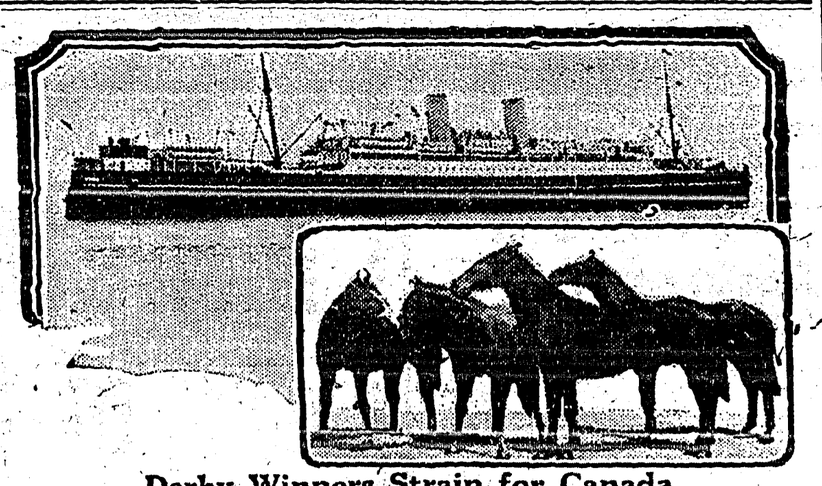
Inter-Provincial Blue Ribbon Competition At Regina Exhibition

The Motherwell trophy representing the inter-provincial blue ribbon in creamery butter awards at the Regina exhibition was won by the Crescent Creamery Company, of Brandon, Man., after this company had scored first place in the Manitoba section for the provincial sweepstakes, with Belmont Creamery in second place.

For the Motherwell trophy the Manitoba companies were in competition with Central Creamery, Calgary, who took the first prize, and Edmonton Pure Butter Company, second prize in the Alberta section, and in the Saskatchewan section, the Lloydminster branch of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Creameries was first and the Regina branch of the same company, second.

Cat Walks 65 Miles to Old Home

A 65-mile trek meant little to Tommy, a pet cat owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Birkel, who moved from Danville to Lewiston, Pa., several weeks ago. A few days after the family moved the cat disappeared, and when Birkel was in Danville he found the cat had returned to the former home and was being cared for by neighbors awaiting his master's arrival.



Derby Winners Strain for Canada

Twenty-five thoroughbreds coming from all parts of Great Britain and Ireland were unloaded from the Canadian Pacific liner Metagama in Montreal recently for dispatch to the Mullans breeding and training ranch near Winnipeg, where they went by fast freight later. Several of them were finely bred animals, counting winners of the English Derby and Grand National in their strain.

Interviewed at the wharf, A. Mullans, owner and shipper of the horses, said they had been collected all over England and Ireland, brought together at Dublin and thence sent to Southampton for shipment to Canada by the Metagama. They had, he said, come through the voyage in first-class condition and after a few weeks' training and acclimating, would be ready in some cases to race. Mr. Mullans has been in the thoroughbred raising industry for some five years past on his ranch near Winnipeg. The horses in this shipment are both steeplechasers and flat runners. They are for the most part three-year-olds and are all registered in the English stud book. They comprise one stallion, 16 mares and eight geldings.

Among them are included the following: Aurania, three-year-old, by Ybro (own brother to Grand Parade, winner of the English Derby) out of Padam's Pride. Nellie's Pet, 3-year-old, by Cygnus (sire of winner of Scottish Derby last year) out of La Lis, a winner of races in England. Maghery, 3-year-old, also by Ybro, brother to Grand Parade. Master Michael, two-year-old, who breeds back to Troytown, a Grand National winner. Dentan, two-year-old, who comes of the same breeding as Coronach, winner of this year's English Derby.

Dominion Land System Of Survey Has Proven To Be The Most Desirable In Every Way

Nowadays one hears of community settlements and the advantages of grouping settlers in such a way that they will get the most out of the amenities of modern civilization. But to carry the idea to its extreme so that the farms radiate from a central community, has always brought forth objections on account of the difficulty of working land laid out in triangular shape or any other form departing from the square or rectangle. Even the rectangle is sometimes considered objectionable if the length greatly exceeds the breadth as the distance the farmer would have to travel to get to his work at the rear end of the farm would then be too great.

To trace the rectangular farm to its beginning carries us back to the days of the ancient Romans. It is recorded that the system of division of lands by meridians and parallels was handed to the Romans by the Etruscans, the first people who really practiced agriculture in Italy. The division of land by these two lines had a religious and mythical foundation. The unit of square measure was the "jugerum," which was approximately five-eighths of an English acre. In sub-dividing the lands of a colony, squares of 200 "jugera" were often used. Each of these was called a "centuria" and was 2,400 feet square, or a little more than three-quarters of the size of the quarter-section farm unit of Western Canada. They were further divided into the individual holdings, which ranged from two to ten jugera or larger.

The rectangular system of survey based on meridians and parallels, with sections one mile square, and six-mile square townships numbered in ranges, was first instituted in America in 1785 by act of the congress of the United States, providing for surveys of the public lands. The first surveys were in Ohio, where a principal meridian, was established and at right angles thereto a base line from which the outlines of townships were projected. As the survey was extended, principal meridians and base lines were laid out in each state until at present there are over 30 meridians and almost as many base lines.

There has been a great deal of speculation as to who introduced this system of subdivision of land into America. One theory is that it was Colonel Bouquet, who in 1764 was asked by General Gage to report on a system of subdividing land for settlement in the vicinity of Fort Pitt. Thomas Hutchins was the surveyor who assisted General Bouquet, and was the first to actually apply the system when in 1785 he was delegated to stake out public lands in the state of Ohio. If Colonel Bouquet originated the rectangular system in America, then it may be said that the idea came directly from Italy, for although born in Switzerland, this officer served under the King of Sardinia in Italy before coming to this country.

No doubt one of the fundamental reasons for the adoption of the rectangular system in America was on account of the simplicity it offered in the description and registration of land. Where townships are laid out from meridians and base lines a definite geographic position is allotted to each township whether it is surveyed today or in the future. The townships fit together with a few fractional parcels.

The rectangular system of survey by sections, townships and ranges, based on astronomical north-south and east-west lines was selected for the subdivision of Western Canada. This Dominion land system of survey has proved to be most economical for the purpose and is the most comprehensive uniform system of survey in the world. Under it about two hundred million acres of land have already been surveyed by the Topographical Survey, Department of the Interior. Plans of more than 7,000 townships have been printed—the official documents accepted in all courts as adequate descriptions of land.—Moose Jaw Times.
