Wynndel Growers Elect Directors

Three Retiring Members Again Chosen—1933 Returns Compare Favorably With Other Districts—Transportation Talk

The annual meeting of the Co-Operative Fruit Growers Association of Wynndel was held in the community hall Tuesday evening. President John Wigen presided. Minutes of annual meeting and the succeeding extraordinary general meeting were read and adopted. Balance sheet was read and after some questions that were asked had been answered, th financial statement was adopted.

The matter of buying pipe was discussed, and the various charges. Stabilization prices were brought up, and prices paid were compared with the prices set. Correspondence read, and report on prices paid for fruit by va ious associations throughout the province indicated that Wynndel had fared possibly the best of them all.

Before directors were nominated the chairman spoke of the successful handling for many years, and hoped the shareholders would elect to office men capable of keeping up the good work. Seven names were placed in nomination for the board of management, and the three retiring members were reelected for a two-year term. They are E. Uri, John Wigen and J. G. Abbott.

E. Uri spoke of transportation of the fruit and stated it might be advisable to use freight service this year. The difference in freight and express charges was discussed, and whether truck service would be profitable or possible.

The matter of revising the by-laws was introduced and it was moved and seconded that the directors act as committee of revision, and have them registered. E. Uri spoke on possible control prices on fruit this season, and it was decided that when something definite was known to call a meeting of the growers.

Sales of Flour and Feed Show a Gain of 200 Tons—More Eggs Handled—Prices Realized are Satisfactory—New Officers.

Great activity in all branches of their services, and a marked increase in the volume of business done, featured the directors' reports submitted Wednesday afternoon at the fifth annual meeting of Creston Farmers' Institute.

The retiring president, W H. Hilton, commenting on the long and varied list of prpduce handled said that, in his opinion, the prices realized over the greater part of the list had been fairly satisfactory. Flour and feed sales showed an increase for the year of 200 tons, and egg receipts also indicated a gain. The total for the year was 34,500 dozens. Officers elected to the board for 1934 are:

President—W. S. McAlpine.
Vice-President—F. H. Jackson.
Secretary—P. R. Truscott.
Executive—W. H. Hilton, J. P. Cook.

Mr. Hilton, who has rendered invaluable services to the Institute during the past two years, in his capacity as president, desired to retire from this office. P. R. Truscott was subsequently appointed secretary to the Institute.

The meeting expressed approval of the price level maintained at the store, which was held to be consistent with the farm services offered. In the discussion which followed it was held that no time should be lost by the Institute in endeavoring to implement the new Marketing legislation now before the house at Ottawa should this act become law.

Suggest Game Season Changes

Would Have Later Deer Season —Doe Kill Opening Period— Favor Bounty on Coyotes— —Lengthen Pheasant Season

Creston Valley Rod and Gun Club had one of the most active and useful sessions in its recent history at the March meeting on Monday night, which was well attended and was in charge of President Chas. Sutcliffe. That interest is being revived in the club was shown in four applications for membership from Dr. McKenzie. W. Donaldson, Chas. Holmes and Alex. Ross—all of which were accepted.

During the month it was reported that 20 pheasan s—half of which were male birds—had been released at four points in the district—South Creston, at Erickson, near the L. Leveque ranch; near the Robt. Stark ranch, and near President Sutcliffe's.

Too, earlier in the month 35,000 eyed eggs of eastern brook trout had been placed in Corn Creek, and a somewhat larger quantity of the same variety in Meadow Creek, at Kitchener.

Open seasons for big game were very thoroughly discussed and it was decided to ask the game board to this year open the deer season on October 1st, and close it at the middle of December. A two week open season on does was approved but it will be asked for at the opening of the season. The limit of deer will be the same as in 1933.

A longer pheasant season was favored, preferably from October 18th to 18th both days included. Shooting from 6.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. with a bag limit of two cock birds. A one day open season on Hungarian partridge, October 18th, will be asked for, with a bag limit of two birds and same hours as for pheasants.

In another letter the game board will be asked to pay a bounty on coyotes. This year the club will sponsor a crow kill of one day, April 28th, and the committee to make arrangements will consist of all members present Monday night, who will meet on April 27th to announce what arrangements have been made.

Radio Broadcast Features Creston

Reeve Jackson is Heard Over KHQ, Spokane, in 'Northwest on Parade'—Talk Comes Over Fine—Boost for Valley.

By long odds the most widespread and effective advertising Creston and district has ever received was accorded the valley on Friday night last when over Spokane radio station KHQ, Creston was featured in the Davenport Hotel's half-hour presentation of "Northwest on Parade," with the feature talk given by Reeve F. H. Jackson, from material supplied him by the chairman of Creston board of trade publicity committee. In addition to the boost effectively given by the reeve, the editor of KHQ, Mr. Elston Wyckoff, also read what is termed the Davenport Hotel's tribute to Creston, which was compiled from a mass of information supplied him by the publicity committee chairman. Between the two of them a radio audience that included most every radio owner in eastern B.C. as well as many thousands of listeners-in all across Alberta and western Saskatchewan, heard a comprehensive story of the district's growth from the day the late J. C. Rykert opened the customs port of Rykerts, in 1883, until to-day

Mr. Wyckoff's "tribute" confined itself almost exclusively to events between the coming of the late Mr. Rykerts and and the arrival of C.P.R. steel in 1898. Pioneers of those days, who are still resident at Creston, and their achievements were recounted, as well as features of the before-'98 educational, religious and commercial life of the community

Reeve Jackson's talk had to do with development since 1900, dealing chiefly with the expansion in the fruit industry, as well as detailing other outstanding features of the whole district, such as irrigation, the power development at Goat River canyon, fruit handling facilities, marketing and railway and transportation advantages. For the village he did not overlook the favorable tax rate, light and water systems, schools, churches, industries, amusements, etc.

It was the reeve's first talk over the air waves, and on all hands he is being complimented on his splendid effort. His voice came in clear and natural and with little sign of nervousness With only six minutes allowed him to present his message his recital had, of necessity, to be hurried, but notwithstanding the enforced speed it was readily followed and clearly understood.

An Exhibition Of Childhood

London is to witness a most unique exhibition when, on April 19, will open a display of relics of "Children throughout the Ages", acclaimed as the most comprehensive portrayal of child life down the centuries ever presented to the public. The event derives significance as much from the historic value of the various exhibits, as from the purpose to which the proceeds are to be devoted. The beneficiary will be one of London's most deserving charities.

The relics to be displayed link child life with the dim remote ages of the past, the oldest exhibit being a Chinese doll said to date from 600 B.C. From that far distance down the years, the varying fancies of children, the toys which brought them pleasure, the garments they wore, the furniture which decked their nurseries and playrooms, all will be traceable in the array of exhibits from the pre-Christian era down to the end of the reign of Queen Victoria.

Queen Elizabeth's christening robe, her cap and mittens, a portrait of her as a baby (by Holbein), will be on show. A shirt worn by Charles I. as a child of two, his boyhood's brocade coat, will find prominent place in the display beside Oliver Cromwell's christening robe. Here then that historic enmity which ended so tragically for the monarch is made to symbolize the transitory nature of human passions and, transformed, serves the charitable purposes of to-day. Napoleon, too, will be represented, not in a manifestation of childish desire but rather in evidence of that other love which great and lowly have in common, and which is, of course, as old as childhood is. The present given by the Emperor Napoleon to his infant son, the King of Rome, has been obtained as an exhibit.

Perambulators and cradles and such adjuncts of childhood that flourished in the seventeenth century, have been collected to augment the display. Children's furniture from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries will be shown, as well as a display of British and foreign children's clothes, hats, shoes and gloves of the same period, early games, cards and jig-saw puzzles, playbooks and lesson books. A series of rooms is being arranged to depict child scenes of bygone days with inevitable wax figures in the Madame Tussaud tradition. There will be portrayed in similar fashion a Kate Greenaway scene, a Victorian Sunday, the ancient nanny and the modern nurse.

The British royal family, as usual where charity is the object, is according wholehearted support to the exhibition. Queen Mary is contributing playthings of her own childhood, and toys which enthralled the young Prince of Wales, his brothers and sisters. Two gold rattles given by Queen Victoria to the Prince of Wales also have been offered, and considerable interest will attach to an exhibit of the immature efforts of the Prince and his brother, the Duke of York, as artists. It is said these efforts are just as atrocious in result and effect as any of less exalted youth.

Perhaps one of the most interesting of the relics to be exhibited, however, has no connection whatever with the childhood of the great or the near-great. It is a pewter feeding bottle, believed to date back to about 1750. It was discovered in possession of a farmer who was using it to feed his lambs. Probably no more fitting place could be found for this memento of a bygone period and a long-forgotten childhood than alongside the relics of royal youth and palace playrooms. It is a striking reminder of that strange democracy of the very young, that constant symbol of the "great levellers"—childhood and death—and it is to be hoped that as such, in these transitional days, it will be interpreted by those privileged to patronize the exhibition.

There is a timely moral lesson, too, in the story recently told by one of the better known financial journals. It happened that a shabbily dressed, ostensibly poor, elderly woman entered the classic portals of a large uptown bank in New York, and told the uniformed guard she desired to open an account. She was shown to the new account department where three officers of the bank were more intent upon the approaching lunch hour than upon new business, particularly business which came in such inauspicious garb. As it happened, lunch won, and the woman was left to the manager.

After stating her mission, the old lady asked to see a statement of the bank's financial position, much to the surprise of the manager who was accustomed to having the institution's financial status taken for granted, particularly by small depositors. However, he presented the requested statement, answered courteously some startlingly intelligent and pertinent questions, which satisfactorily received, brought the intimation the lady wished to open an account. She gave her name and other necessary information, and casually, for he expected a small initial sum, he asked: "How much do you wish to deposit?"

"Thirty-one thousand dollars", replied the old lady, equally casually, as she proceeded to count out the money in bills of various denominations.

Strange Accidents At Sea

Ships' Officers Give Accounts Of Two Unusual Collisions

Recalling strange accidents at sea, officers of the steamer Beechpark, at Saint John, gave first-hand accounts of two unusual collisions.

Chief Engineer David Thomson was with the Volumnia when that ship carried troops across the English Channel in war days. Travelling without lights, troop-carriers proceeded at full speed over courses ordered clear by the admiralty. A stocky trawler returning from the banks had not heard the warning and unwittingly crossed the troopship's track.

"It was the first time an iron ship was cut in two," said Thomson. "We struck the big trawler broadsides, plowed right through the hull and out the other side. From the port I got a fleeting glance of the stern half sinking."

Only five of the crew of 39 were rescued, and one died soon after. "The confused survivors wouldn't believe it. They couldn't understand why we had not foundered also."

Capt. Will Masson told how the steamer Montpark, a famous Q-boat during the war, met a strange end while under his command in 1919. A crash occurred while the Montpark was feeling its way through poor visibility one night a few days out from the Tyne mouth. Capt. Masson saw the bow of another ship protruding into his own, heard terse orders in a foreign language, and watched the unknown vessel back away into the mist.

The Montpark sinking, its crew jumped into the sea. Capt. Masson and a few seamen were rescued from a life-raft the following evening, but other members of the crew were never found and the ship which left them helpless was never identified.

British Flight Squadron

Suggestion Is Made That A Visit To Canada Should Be Undertaken

A suggestion was made in the British House of Commons that the United Kingdom send to Canada detachments or flights of airplanes to "show the flag" in the Dominion. The planes would be sent aboard a naval aircraft carrier.

Discussion of the proposal arose during the debate on the air estimates when Oliver E. Simmonds, Duddeston Conservative and aircraft manufacturer, told the house Canada had never seen a squadron of British planes, although every year squadrons of machines from the United States made exhibition flights to Canadian air pageants.

Mr. Simmonds said he was in Ottawa early this year and heard hope expressed that the Royal Air Force would "show the flag" in Canada. He asked that the air ministry consider the matter.

Sir Philip Sassoon, minister for air, described the suggestion as "very interesting."

Progress For Persia

Mechanization Of Old Handicraft Industries Looks Like Mistake

And now the shah of Persia has evolved a five-year plan! Progress is to make its debut through the mechanization of the ancient handicraft industries that have created so many delights for collectors. Great carpet and rug factories will rear their looms where patient hands have labored after the traditions and the patterns of the centuries.

Gone will be the features that made oriental-rug collecting a delight to those with incomes permitting it. No longer will variations in color tell of the exhaustion of some native dye mixture, or irregularities in pattern betray the advent of a new native weaver. The innovations that began with analine dyes and chemical washes will reach their climax in a uniformity that matches the best American "orientals."

Indeed, progress in Persia may mean no progress at all. Who will want a genuine oriental rug if it differs not a whit from the mechanized product of the occident?

While excavating for a new building in Kustendil, Bulgaria, workmen recently found an aqueduct in which the top-pipe sections could be removed for cleaning.

Passenger Train Pooling

Expected To Effect Big Saving Under Arrangement

The passenger train pooling arranged for in the Montreal-Toronto, Ottawa-Toronto and Montreal-Quebec services, as extended and effective from March 11, will produce a total saving of approximately 1,000,000 train miles per annum, divided about evenly between the C.N.R. and C.P.R. and on the basis of a conservative estimate will represent a saving to each company of approximately $500,000 per annum. This information was given in the House of Commons by Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, based on a telegram from Chairman C. P. Fullerton, of the C.N.R. board of trustees.

NATIONAL CATTLE MARKETING PLAN IS ADVOCATED

Ottawa.—A national cattle marketing scheme was urged before the Stevens committee of the House of Commons by a veteran rancher of the west, Roderick Macleay of High River, Alta. To save the cattle industry he suggested lowered freight rates on export shipments, encouragement of the United Kingdom market and, if necessary, government-imposed minimum prices for livestock.

It was livestock day before the committee, three members of the Ontario legislature, J. E. Jamieson, Howard Fraleigh and John A. Craig, presenting facts and opinions gathered in connection with operations of the Toronto stockyards.

It was charged there was no competitive bidding on the stockyards and that 99 per cent. of Ontario farmers would favor Dominion-operation of the yards.

Drovers, they said, were afraid to make open charges "for fear their heads will fall off."

Ontario farmers would favor changes in hog-grading regulations, the federal committee was assured, especially so as to permit segregation of the grades in the yard and open bidding. And farmers would favor also restraining packing plants from buying direct from producers and staying away from the stockyards until they saw what their requirements would be.

George H. Barr of Regina, representing the Saskatchewan livestock producers, was a brief witness. He said exchange fluctuations were the bane of western exporters, suggesting stabilization by agreement of all Empire currencies apart from gold backing and other external factors. If Canada could not secure Empire co-operation, it could fall back on a stabilization fund of its own, reimbursing exporters for the adverse rates.

Return To China

Aged Chinamen, Hit By Depression, Return To Canton

Canton, China.—Thousands of aged Chinese arriving at Canton from North America and other foreign ports are being given free transportation on to their native villages "so that they may die at their old homes," according to a statement from the Overseas Chinese Relief Bureau.

The latest official figures gave more than 13,000,000 Chinese living abroad, but within the last year thousands of them have returned to Canton because the world-wide depression robbed them of their jobs or cost them the loss of a lifetime of savings. Most of the returned emigrants have been away from 40 to 50 years and are penniless.

Racial Problem In Washington

Negroes Are Barred From House Restaurant By Manager

Washington. — The negro racial problem in the United States, always forming a dark and thunderous background to immediate economic troubles, has pushed forward again right in the United States capital. A big row is stewing up over refusal of P. Johnson, a former North Carolina state senator, who is now manager of the house restaurant, to permit serving of negroes who have attempted to patronize the place where representatives and their friends eat.

Conflagration In Japan

150,000 Persons Reported To Have Been Made Homeless

Tokyo.—At least 1,000 persons were known to have been killed in a fire which devoured three-fourths of the city of Hakodate, largest community in Japan north of Tokyo.

Twenty-five thousand buildings were destroyed and 150,000 persons were made homeless, according to figures in a message received by the minister of communications from the Hakodate wireless station on the outskirts of the ruined city.

The fire rode an equinoctial gale which whipped it into a night-long fury. The city was still burning after the sunrise hour, although the gale was reported abating.

Chimneys toppled by violent winds set fire to roofs, causing the general conflagration, reports said. Nearby suburbs also caught fire.

The Japanese army, navy and other government agencies were hastening to the scene to conduct relief work.

Electric plants were destroyed soon after the fire broke out and the city was thrown into darkness except for the lurid light of the flames.

One despatch said the city was a "living hell" and declared that "through the darkness the refugees were fleeing from death and were abandoning even the small bundles of possessions they carried from their homes."

Russia May Join League

Report Necessary Action To Be Taken In September

Paris.—It was learned in usually reliable circles that Soviet Russia has about decided to enter the League of Nations and may take the necessary action to do so at the September assembly.

It was said in diplomatic circles that soundings taken by Moscow leaders had convinced them that entry into the league would not only be welcome but that a seat on the league council was assured.

A final decision was said to be expected shortly since the necessary preliminary negotiations were likely to be complicated.

The Soviets must be officially recognized by such league members as Holland, Denmark, Finland and others with whom she has at present no diplomatic relations.

Ovation To Prince

Heir To Throne Sees Soccer Game At Wembley

London.—The Prince of Wales flew from Sonningdale to see a "cup final" of a new kind at Wembley stadium, where the classic soccer cup match will be played April 28.

It was the final of the London Occupational Soccer League tourney, the teams in which were drawn from the workless men of various metropolitan districts.

Five thousand spectators, mostly unemployed like the players, gave an ovation to the prince, who shook hands with the players on both Greenwich and Walthamstow teams and chatted with several of them.

Has Faith In West

Toronto.—"I never had more faith in western and northern Canada, and I firmly believe that the future of Canada lies there," declared Rev. W. G. Brown, of Saskatoon, former moderator of the Presbyterian church, in an address on Western Canada at the general board of missions.

Favors Titles If Earned

Ottawa.—"I will always be a plebian myself, but I am in favor of titles for Canadians, if they are restricted to those who really earn them," E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, observed in an interview here. Mr. Beatty made it plain, however, he is opposed to hereditary titles here.

Mounties Hold Island

Ottawa.—Two members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are stationed on Ellesmere Island for the sole purpose of retaining possession of that place for the British crown, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, minister of justice, told W. T. Lucas (U.F.A., Camrose) in the House of Commons.

REFUGEE FROM VIENNA

Self-exiled from Austria, Max Winter, former vice-mayor of Vienna, one of the leaders of the Austrian Socialist Party, is pictured as he arrived at New York. Many Socialist leaders fled the country after the party was outlawed. Winter is the first to arrive on this continent.

Widen Liquor Act

For Freer Sale Of Beer And Wine In Ontario

Toronto.—The Ontario government moved to provide for freer sale of beer and wine in the province. In the dying moments of a dreary session the government surprised the legislature into frenzied applause with presentation of the long-waited and much discussed bill.

The measure provides:

1. Sale of beer and wine with meals in dining rooms in standard hotels and such other places, which would include restaurants and clubs, as the board may decide.
2. Sale of beer by the glass in refreshment rooms in standard hotels, and in Veterans' and labor union clubs.
3. Full control will be maintained by the liquor control board.
4. The board may dispense with the present permit system.
5. The board may permit advertising in newspapers and by radio.
6. The board may grant permits for the consumption of beer and wine at banquets.

Favors National Bank

Resolution Will Be Considered By B.C. Legislature

Victoria.—The British Columbia legislature will consider a resolution which would, if passed, place it on record as favoring a national banking system for the purpose of making national, provincial and municipal credit available for governmental expenditure.

The public accounts committee adopted a resolution to this effect. The matter was brought up by G. G. McGeer, K.C. (Lib., Vancouver-Burrard). Private financing would not be affected.

Bombing In Berlin

Explosion Wrecks Taxi Of Jewish Owner Of Motion Picture Theatre

Berlin.—A tin can filled with high explosives was hurled on the famous Unter Den Linden and wrecked a taxi containing David Oliver, Jewish owner of a motion picture theatre.

First reports which raced through Berlin that the bombing was an attempt to assassinate Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and close associate of Chancellor Hitler, were denied. Evidence indicated it was a plot against the life of Oliver.

The automobile was wrecked, near the intersection of the avenue with the Wilhelmstrasse, and Oliver's chauffeur was seriously injured.

Members of the family of the theatre owner, a native of Austria but for 35 years a resident of Berlin, refused ot discuss the affair. He was "at home," it was said.

It was at his theatre recently that anti-Jewish demonstrations resulted in the banning of the film, "Catherine The Great," featuring Elizabeth Bergner, a Jewess.

Rumors that Goering had been seen to drive past the corner shortly before the explosion lent color to the story that he was the intended victim, but these met a vigorous denial from police.

The premier, they said, was attending the ceremonies opening a ship lock at Niederfinow at the time. Police offered 5,000 marks (about $1.985) reward for information to clear up the mysterious explosion.

Could Render Good Service

Senate Well Fitted To Carry On Inquiries States Buchanan

Ottawa.—The senate could render good service by carrying on inquiries, Senator W. A. Buchanan told the upper house in continuing the debate on the suggestion that more legislation be initiated there. Inquiries should be held into unemployment and immigration. No legislative body in Canada had the experience of the senate and was, therefore, fitted for such work.

Senator Buchanan described the contribution the senate had made to the pockets of the farmers of Western Canada by safeguarding rates on flour and wheat in the Crow's Nest Pass agreement. A frequent criticism of the senate was that it was made up of reactionaries. If this were true the senate would have taken the part of the railways in 1919, but did not and saved the preferential rates for western farmers.

When the Klondike railway proposal was rejected by the senate, the late Sir Clifford Sifton had said he would not test public opinion on any measure rejected by the senate.

May Cut Interest On Loans

Toronto.—The Globe said in a despatch from its Ottawa correspondent that considerable progress was evident in the government proposal to obtain agreement from loan companies for reduction of interest rates on loans to farmers.

PRINCE GEORGE REACHES CAPE TOWN

STATE CONTROL OF RADIO STILL IN THE FUTURE

Ottawa.—Complete nationalization of radio broadcasting was still in the distant future and taking over by the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission of the 60-odd privately-owned stations remained only a "pious hope," Hector Charlesworth, chairman of the commission, told the radio commission of the House of Commons.

In the meantime, so that those in isolated districts may not be deprived of good radio, new licenses for privately-owned stations have been granted.

Financial stringency had prevented full development of radio along the lines laid down by the legislation of 1932, Mr. Charlesworth said, but a vast improvement had been made and further development would result as revenues permitted.

To W. A. Beynon (Conservative, Moose Jaw), who asked if it were true that a Regina station had been ordered to spend $16,000 to put the plant in order, or close up, Mr. Charlesworth said that was not quite the proper picture.

The station had been advised of certain improvements necessary and he expected the owners would be glad to make them.

Mr. Charlesworth corrected a statement he made on his last appearance respecting the readers of Canadian newspapers.

On that occasion, speaking of news broadcasts, Mr. Charlesworth was quoted as saying 80 per cent. of the people of Canada never saw a daily paper.

"Apparently that was what I said, but it was certainly not what I intended to say," Mr. Charlesworth declared. "What I meant was that 80 per cent. of the people did not see an afternoon paper until after the evening news broadcast."

Budget Surplus

Britain Expects Further Increase At End Of Fiscal Year

London.—Another increase in the current surplus was recorded, with the end of the fiscal year only 11 days away, bolstering the expectation of a budget surplus of around $150,000,000.

Latest figures, those for last week, showed revenue exceeded expenditures $34,000,000, bringing the current surplus to $110,000,000, after including the United States War Debt fund and sinking fund payments, which were not provided for in the budget a year ago.

The current surplus of $110,000,000 compares with a current deficit of $200,000,000 at this date a year ago.

Train Wreck In Russia

Thirty-Three Persons Are Reported Killed And Sixty-Eight Injured

Moscow. — Thirty-three persons were killed and 68 injured in the wreck of two trains near Sverdlovsk. The wreck occurred nine days ago, but word of it did not become public here until recently.

Despatches said a local passenger train, travelling at high speed, ran through a closed semaphore at Tavatul, and collided with a freight train.

The responsible employees are already on trial.

This is the fourth such catastrophe reported within a month.

Next Step Is Recovery

Hamilton, Ont.—"This country has fought economic depression with courage and fortitude, the next great development is recovery," said Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, addressing the Hamilton, Brantford and district branches of the Canadian Manufacturers Association here.

Kiwanis Convention

Lethbridge.—D. H. Elton, K.C., governor of the Western Canada district, Kiwanis International, announced that the annual district convention will be held August 5-7. The convention will be held here.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, MAR. 30

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cemetery Management

Editor Review:

Sir,—May I ask the courtesy of your columns to direct public attention, and in particular that of the village council, to our cemetery.

I know little of the Creston Cemetery Company, other than that it was formed in the early history of Creston by certain of its pioneers to provide a lasting rest place for its dead, and that as a shareholder I have, God willing, a place therein when the time shall come.

From the day when we paid the last call on our shares to the present I know nothing of its operations or with whom lies the authority and the responsibility, but I know that time is taking its toll of those pioneers, and while the Cemetery Act makes adequate provisions in the public interest, does it not seem that the time is coming, if not now here, when the cemetery should be taken over by the village authorities.

While the company, under the Act, is shorn of profits and, from the nature of things is self supporting in principle, there are, of course, well defined limits to its capacity to improve its property under existing conditions. Were the cemetery to be taken over by the village no doubt some little more could be done from year to year to preserve and add to the scantity and sentiment associated with such places, while still retaining some measure of self- supporting feature.

Not ing beyond a change in authority and responsibility is thereby involved. Much has been done but the growth of this valley and the characteristics of its people would seem to dictate that either the company should be re-organised as a private venture with the rights of those originals and t eir descendants duly safegcarded, or the village should take the undertaking over as a definite responsibility in the main principles.

The Special Powers Act

In political circles some alarm has been created by the new attitude which the government has taken towards present conditions. We give our readers an editorial from the British Columbian, New Westminister, a newspaper which cannot be said to support the government at Victoria. It seems to measure up the situation fairly well.

"Premier Pattullo, in asking the legislature to pass his Special Powers Act, is merely taking a step which will enable his cabinet to deal with any matter arising during the next year without the necessity of calling a special session. He has a commanding majority in the house and any measure which his government introduced would be sure of passage. But so much time of each session is wasted in useless debate that it is difficult, if not impossible, to do a year's work in the short time the legislature is in session. With passage of the new act British Columbia will have a government which is capable of functioning in the fullest sense during the 12 months of the year.

"The Premier has no desire to become a "dictator." All ordinances, decrees and transactions under the act must be advertised in the British Columbia Gazette and all transactions under the act must be laid before the legislature within 15 days of the opening of the next session. If a majority of the members of the legislature do not think that Premier Pattullo has acted in the bes interests of the province, they can choose a new leader. The premier, in other words, will simply be acting as the managing director of a company, the company being the province of British Columbia. and if his fellow directors do not approve of his actions they can dispense with his services.

"The members of the present provincial government have been criticised for doing nothing to carry out their pre-election pledge of "Work and Wages." The first session of the legislature is almost over and no government undertaking which will better conditions in the province has been announced. Premier Pattullo does not desire to wait until the next session to introduce legislation which he has found it impossible to prepare in the short time since his election to office. Therefore he has asked to be given the necessary authority to carry out his plans after the legislature adjourns.

"Prem.er Pattullo and his cabinet as soon as the session is over, will be in a position to inaugurate their "Work and Wages" programme.

"Among other things thev can stimulate activity in the development of the vast natural resources of the province.

"They can end the present dispute between operators and employees in numerous logging camps, thus helping to put the lu.nbering industry back on its feet.

"They can secure for the farmer a fair return for his agricultral products.

"They can lend money to industries, enabling them to expand their opera ions and thus hire more employees.

"They hope to eliminate the dole in British Columbia by offering work and wages to those at present unemployed.

"They may not succeed but indications are that they will make an honest effort to carry out the promises which contributed in no small degree to their success at the polls last October."

A Rhyme About the 'Reps.'

A Rep. hoop team has our town;
A classy bunch are they;
Twice only they've been down,
And victories, what say, hey!

Marge, dark haired leader of the crew,
Has assigned herself to guard.
And believe me, when I tell you,
To get her sure is hard.

To pair with Marge is Mary,
A stalwart lassie she;
She often feels contrary
And takes them on her knee.

Nora is the centre,
You may think she's slow,
But come on out to see her;
She certainly can go.

Nellie is a forward,
A sterling player there,
Her dashing, flashing rushes
Keep the enemy in the air.

Margie is a sharpshooter;
She scores from anywhere;
And straight for the basket
The ball goes through the air.

Dot and Mollie are spares
But do not judge from that;
They are classy players,
And get them slim or fat.

More spares are Liz and Ada;
They comb their hair in curls,
But when they work, O boy!
Its harder far than girls.

Now, girls you've all been mentioned,
And there's not much to say;
I thank you very heartily,
You certainly can play

Fred Martello is the skipper;
He tells them how to pass and check,
And if no other way will do
He gets them by the neck.

Then, remember, Harry's chairman,
While Katie guards the purse,
And Earl manages and scribbles,
But my job—it's worse.

—Hoopster.

The military whist under the direction of the K.K. Klub on Wednesday evening last was quite a success. 18 tables were in pl y. Russia was the winning table, with 62 flags to its credit, and the players were M. Hagen, Lee Anderson, A. Lombardo and C. Payette. Belgium made but 23 flags and took the consolation prize. It was handled by Mr. and Mrs. Martello, Miss Eileen Heap and Syd. Rodgers, all of Sirdar. Supper was served and then a short dance to music by Messrs. Ness and Waldo of Creston.

Tennis club meeting was held in the hall Tuesday last and was very well attended. President John Wigen was in charge, A. E. Towson acting as secretary. The financial statement showed a small balance. Doug Butterfield was elected president; Ed. Hulme, vice-president, with D. Taylor, secretary. 12 men expressed their intention of joining and it looks as if tennis is to stage a comeback here Work is to commence at once in getting the court in shape and it is hoped to have it in shape by the end of the week.

Women Study Prospecting

Class Conducted At University Of Manitoba Is Growing

Ever widening their field of interest and activity, women of Winnipeg have entered the prospecting field. Seven women prospectors in embryo attended the first short course for miners conducted by Dr. G. M. Brownell of the geology department, University of Manitoba, and still more registered for the second section.

The first seven finished the initial lessons and received certificates from the department of mines. At present their knowledge is academic, but there has been some talk of an expedition in the spring for practical work.

One woman prospector is actually doing location work in Manitoba. She is Miss Kathleen Rice, honor graduate of Toronto University, who is located at Herb Lake. Miss Rice is a prospector in the real sense of the word, driving a team of huskies, wearing hob-nailed boots and well equipped to care for herself in the wildnerness.

Little Journeys In Science

SNOW

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

Snow, so common in Canada, is seldom found south of 36 deg. north latitude, except in regions modified by high altitudes. Snow consists of particles of frozen moisture which result when the air is cooled below the freezing temperature. A cluster of such crystals is called a snowflake. Hail and sleet are raindrops which have been frozen in their journey through the air, but snowflakes are produced when the vapor in the air crystallizes. A snowflake becomes larger in falling through the air because it condenses additional moisture in its descent. They are larger in mild weather than when it is very cold.

Snowflakes assume a great variety of beautiful forms and over a thousand different kinds have been observed. They are seen to the best advantage under the microscope when they are collected on a black surface. The finest forms are found in the polar regions. The star shape is the most common. Some come as hexagonal plates and others as hexagonal prisms.

The "snow line" is the edge of the area of perpetual snow, above which the ground is covered with snow all the time. The latitude regulates the altitude of the snow line. For example in the Himalayas, Lat. 31 deg. N., it is 17,000 feet; in the Rocky Mountains, Lat. 43 deg. N., 12,465 feet; in Norway, Lat. 70 deg. N., 3,400 feet. Generally, that side of a mountain range which is exposed to the prevalent wind has a lower snow line than the opposite side. In the polar regions the snow line approaches the level of the sea.

Snow is a non-conductor and thus it forms a protective covering for mother earth, keeping the temperature of the ground from dropping to an extent that would destroy seeds and plants. The snow melting on the mountains furnishes water for irrigating arid lands, and supplies the rivers with water in the summer. Glaciers are simply huge masses of ice and snow. The first mention of "red snow" was made by the great writer Aristotle, who discovered deposits of it on high mountain tops. In the Arctic regions it is most abundant and is due to very small vegetable organisms.

Newest Dental Chair

Patient Hears Music And Forgets About Being Afraid

A dental chair which its inventor believes the patient will climb into without dread was demonstrated in connection with the Chicago Dental Society's annual convention.

Dr. Elmer S. Best of Minneapolis said its development was due to experiments which revealed to him that music had powers also to charm away that mental shrinking with which most people regard their session in dentists' chairs.

Applying his idea, he has worked out a plan whereby a wire connection brings music from a cabinet through the dental chair's head piece to amplifiers which press against the patient's mastoid bones. The patient absorbs the music through the bones and the contrivance can be tuned so low that the music is inaudible in the room.

He said children became so completely interested in the music that frequently they have forgotten their teeth were being worked upon.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

APRIL 1

THE RISEN CHRIST

Golden Text: "If then ye were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God." Colossians 3:1.

Lesson: John 20:1-16.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 1:15-23.

Explanations And Comments

Mary Magdalene at the Tomb of Christ, verses 1, 2. On Sunday, the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene came early, while it was still dark, to the tomb where the body of Jesus had been laid on Friday. She is called Magdalene from the village of Magdala, north of Tiberias, which was her home: see Mark 16:9. There were others with her, as the "we" in the next verse indicates, and they had come to embalm the body of Jesus (Mt. 28:1; Mk. 16:1; Lk. 24:1. 10). A stone had been placed over the entrance of the tomb (Mt. 15:46) and sealed (Mt. 27:66). They found the stone removed.

Jesus Reveals Himself to Mary Magdalene, verses 14-16. "John's insight taught him first to conclude that his Lord had risen: Mary's want taught her Lord first to satisfy it," for as she turned she beheld Jesus standing. But she did not recognize him. The Synoptists (Mt. 28:17; Mk. 16:12; Lk. 24:16, 37) and John in 21:4 speak of his form as altered; Mary's eyes, moreover, were dim with tears. "Woman, why weepest thou, whom seekest thou?" Jesus questioned.

"They were the first words of the Risen Lord. It is so easy to imagine that the first utterance of the Conqueror of death would have been different—some command or rebuke to his apostles, some great declaration of victory. No; it is an inquiry concerning a woman's sorrow, and a womans quest. It is as if our Lord was declaring that, his own pain and grief forever past, he still cared more for the griefs and struggles of mankind than anything else." (R. C. Gillie).

"Mary," said Jesus, and "Rabboni," Master, she cried. Rabboni was the Galilean term for Rabbi. "There is much just in a name when pronounced by a person capable of feeling deeply. There may be more expressed in a name than could be expressed in volumes, just as there may be more in a moment than can be expressed in a lifetime. So it was when Jesus called Mary by name, and she called him Master" (Edward Everett Hale, Jr.).

"Touch me not," said Jesus as Mary would have grasped his feet in adoration. "The words were spoken to teach Mary that there was a far higher way of touching Christ than with the hand of flesh; the truer way to lay hold of Christ was by the grasp of faith" (Augustine). "For I am not yet ascended unto the Father," he added. The old, familiar fellowship was not to be renewed, only after his ascension a new and spiritual communion would be established between him and his followers. "But go"—you have gazed long enough at the empty tomb—"go and make known the wonderful fact that its Occupant has risen."

Proves The Workmanship

Three Men Can Lift Perfectly Balanced Bridge Span

There is another example of the excellence of British bridge building in Middlesbrough, in the north of England. This is a link in the new road between Yorkshire and Durham. It crosses the river Tees and has to allow large ships to pass up to Stockton. So the bridge span has to be 120 feet above the water level when fully raised. It is the lifting of this span that proves the workmanship, for it weighs 2,600 tons. At a test the balance proved so perfect that three men working by hand-power on ordinary hand-pulleys lifted this centre span to the top of the towers easily. Of course, the process of raising the span is to be achieved by electrical machinery, the manual labor is only an emergency measure, as a motor engine also can lift the 2,600 tons of steel.

Weight Of Million In Gold

The weight of a million dollars in gold would depend upon the fineness of the gold and whether it were in form of gold coin or new gold. A million dollars in United States gold coins would weigh 53.50 ounces as there are 25.8 grains of nine-tenths fine gold to the dollar. At the present R.F.C. gold price it takes about 28,000 ounces of newly mined gold to be worth a million dollars.

What Motorists Pay In Taxes

Automobilists Contribute More Than 27 Per Cent. To Revenue

More than 27 per cent. of the total revenues collected by the governments of the different provinces of Canada is contributed by owners of automobiles in the form of taxes on gasoline and license fees. This information is disclosed in a report just issued by the Canadian government bureau of statistics.

The report states that the total amount paid by automobile owners to the provincial treasuries in the fiscal year 1932-33 was $45,499,458, of which gasoline taxes accounted for $24,948,280 and $20,551,173 was in license fees.

In the province of Ontario 35.9 per cent. of the total government revenue is paid by motorists; in Quebec, 32 per cent.; in Nova Scotia, 27.2 per cent.; in New Brunswick, 27.3 per cent.; in Alberta, 24.1 per cent.; in Prince Edward Island, 22.7 per cent.; in Saskatchewan, 19.8 per cent.; in British Columbia, 17 per cent. and in Manitoba, 15.45 per cent.

Economic Survey Of Land

Saskatchewan To Take Inventory Of All Land Resources

Plans for the conduct of a land economic survey to accumulate facts upon which to base future agricultural development of Saskatchewan was announced by Hon. J. F. Bryant, K.C., minister of public works.

"We propose taking an inventory," he said, "of all land resources as a basis of land use, in order to indicate the crop areas and their limits, and to classify soils on the basis of their agricultural value."

Occupied farm lands which are used for purposes for which they are not physically or economically adapted, and are no longer capable of yielding a reasonable return, he said, must be classified and used for the purpose for which they are best adapted, according to a carefully planned programme of land utilization.

"I have heard of only one man who was not spoilt by being lionized," remarked a wit.

"And who was he?" asked the "goat".

"The Prophet Daniel, sir," was the response.

WIFE'S DELIGHT AT HUSBAND'S LOSS

30 Pounds of Fat!

Here is something all wives of fat men will be glad to know. It is the experience of a woman whose husband recently weighed 230 lbs. She writes:—

"I really feel I must write and tell you that, after taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months, my husband has got his weight down from 230 lbs. to 200 lbs. This has been achieved by nothing else but Kruschen. I am too heavy also, and I started taking Kruschen only three weeks ago. Already I have got down from 153 lbs. to 144 lbs. We are delighted."—(Mrs.) C.

Kruschen combats the cause of fat by assisting the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Author of "Joretta," "Lipstick Girl" Etc.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impersonations. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Bowman and Weeks, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account is that of her foster father's company, which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster up lagging business. The critics were enthusiastic about her work, and Mr. Weeks offers her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospect of having it doubled. She goes to keep a dinner engagement with Peter. She tells Peter of her good fortune in securing employment. Mrs. Hoyt is also informed that Camilla has obtained work and is going to leave the Hoyt household. Avis Werth rents a studio on the same floor as Peter, and invites him to have lunch there. He accepts reluctantly, but is favorably impressed with his visit.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXXVI

In the meantime, Camilla was absorbed with her new work. She lived with, by and for it. She sketched and planned at the office all day, was on the alert for new ideas and characteristics in her public contacts. She visioned her Tiny Tots in their amusing exploits while she followed Rose's patient instructions regarding her share of the household tasks, went to sleep with them in her thoughts.

Of course, she thought about Peter, too; the thoughts squeezed in deliciously with the crowding, peremptory ones that demanded most of her attention, much as Peter's thoughts of Camilla trespassed into his working hours.

She saw him occasionally, too, but not as often as formerly. It would not always be like that, they told themselves and each other, with blithe words and wistful hearts. Just now, the paramount issue for each of them was to make a temporary success which would develop a greater future.

Camilla believed that if she made good in the first months of the Wheatheart Cereal campaign, the future would smooth itself out into days less arduous and anxious, when she might devote much more of herself and her time to Peter. The first terms of their marriage plans had been that nothing should interfere with their individual ambitions. Those terms were unequivocal and each adhered bravely to them, even though the effort cost them incalculable hours of loneliness and longing.

But, as every plan has its salient advantages, it has its weaknesses, also. It never occurred to either of them that the very stimulus of human companionship and relaxation of leisure hours which they were denying themselves in the satisfaction of each other, they were absorbing from others less gratifying.

While Camilla thought that she was contributing more inspiration to Peter's work by leaving him alone; and he believed that because he could not take care of her, he had no right to expect her to share his meager, anxious existence, had they only been as wise as they believed they were, she would have realized that nothing could have contributed so richly to his inspiration as herself, and he would have known that, loving him as she did, every meager, anxious hour of his life that she did not share was a precious jewel lost somewhere along the way to regret.

The first cloud of discord between them appeared on the horizon when she had been working at the office for a month and was gaining confidence in herself rapidly. She had arrived at the studio one Sunday afternoon earlier than Peter had expected her, and found him working on a large color advertisement for a transportation company. Her reactions were due not so much to the fact that he was doing the work, but to her surprise that he had said nothing to her about it and seemed reluctant even then to tell her about it.

He had kissed her rather perfunctorily in greeting and hastened to dispose of his work. Usually, he proceeded with whatever he was doing when she interrupted him.

"Did I disturb you by coming in early?" She was contrite. "I'm sorry. It was such a glorious afternoon and there wasn't another thing to do at the apartment—oh, I am getting to be a very efficient housekeeper—and I just couldn't wait longer to see you," she confessed finally.

"That's more like it," Peter laughed, clapping her to him suddenly and looking down into her deep eyes, tenderly. "Of course, your coming earlier doesn't disturb my work. It does me, though. You are more lovely every time I see you, and that isn't often enough, precious. I was only trying to keep busy so the time would pass more quickly until you came. How's everything?"

"Wonderful, Peter. I'm sure my work is going over big—I just have a hunch it is, because I'm so happy over it, I guess. I am happier every day." Her face glowed with a reflection of her felicity.

As if a chill had suddenly cooled his ardor, Peter's eyes grew somber and a mask of gravity dropped down over his face. His words seemed to Camilla to come suddenly from far away. "The less you see of me, the happier you are." He laughed a little, but it was a mirthless attempt to conceal the bitterness of the jealous male who is helpless to defend himself. Such jealousy is always both unreasoning and unreasonable.

Peter drew away and began to gather up his working materials from the table with swift movements. Camilla wondered frantically if she only imagined the sudden change in his manner. She made a desperate effort to sound casual when she asked, taking off her hat and jacket, "What's this you are doing now?"

"Oh, nothing much," evasively.

"Something new, isn't it?" She approached the table and saw that the huge card was a soft-tone photograph of a bus terminal which Peter had been tinting with water colors. Camilla looked up at him inquiringly.

He flushed slightly and did not meet her eyes. "Oh, you will say it's kindergarten stuff compared with your advertising copy. I wasn't going to show it to you. I'm only doing it for the cash, so I can hold out with my work for the rest of the month."

"Why, of course—why shouldn't you do it, if you can spare the time? It looks fine—for what it is."

"For what it is," he agreed tonelessly.

"Why, Peter, what's the matter with you?"

"Oh," impatiently, "it tears me to pieces to have to grub like that for a little money. It isn't that I mind the extra work. I'd rather dig sewers, for that matter. Only I have to save my dignity—if any—by staying in the art line—if by any contortion of the imagination anyone could call that art." She knew that his bitter impatience was a culmination of overwork and anxiety. But the effort which she made to soothe his resentment was like touching a match to a fuse.

"Oh, Peter, it's a rotten shame that you have to humiliate your own pride and sacrifice your precious time for the sake of a few paltry dollars, while some people have so much wealth they can't even think up ways to use a fraction of it."

"No use to talk about that. The world's been like that ever since it was started long enough for some to get ahead in the race. Those in the rear are either poor runners or victims of circumstances one way or another. They're carrying too much lead or got a bad break. Some will catch up in time, some of the leaders get behind; but they can't all come in first, or even second or third."

"I know, but even a thoroughbred needs a fair chance. Too much of the time, the race is 'fixed'."

"Sometimes I feel that way, too, but I'm going to keep up the pace until I reach the tape and find out."

"Of course you will—and you may be the one to break it." She smiled encouragement and stroked his cheek fondly. He had dropped into a chair and pulled her down beside him as they often sat while they talked.

"But there is so much lack of balance and futile waste of real talent," she continued. "I was just thinking of the time Mother Hoyt was at her wits' end to know what to give dad for his birthday. Not that she particularly desired to give him anything, but it was one of her pet customs to remember anniversaries with impressive and appropriate gifts. He had everything and more than he needed. But she finaly hit upon the idea of a gold keytainer.

"I went with her to the jewelers' when she bought it, and remember that I thought it was silly to pay so much for a thing that looked no better than the average metal keytainer, though I was quite young then. It cost a hundred dollars, but that was only the beginning of the idea. She had his keys copied in solid gold to go with it and each of them engraved with his monogram. I believe the whole thing cost the trifling sum of five or six hundred dollars.

"Did he like it?" amused.

"He had to seem appreciative. But I'll bet he never used his keys again without thinking how many boxes of Wheatheart Cereal profit they represented."

"Well, you have to consider that from another viewpoint, too," he conceded. "I'll bet that jeweler and the locksmith who made the keys, and the metallurgists and all the workmen involved on down the line were thankful for her extravagant whim. Maybe there was even a poor, struggling sculptor somewhere along the line who profited a little by the transaction, indirectly. That's what wealth is for, to keep the ball rolling along so everyone can have a grab at it. That's what most of the trouble is now. Too many people have stopped playing the game and are waiting for the other fellow to begin while they watch from the sidelines."

"I'm glad you gave me the idea that the gold keytainer might have done someone good, after all. I never thought of it that way."

"Sure—like the fellow down the street here who runs the little flower shop. He was telling me yesterday that he used to count big on orders for the patients in the hospital across the park, but lots of those orders are killed now because someone got the idea that flowers were an extravagant luxury in the depression. They think they are being noble to refuse to accept flowers and have the money added to charity funds. Clubs, societies and individuals are taking it up. And where does that get 'em? More charity for the shiftless and less work for people who want to make an honest living! Funny how minds follow the leader blindly, like sheep. No matter what kind of a silly idea jumps over the fence, a whole flock follows."

"But don't you think that's rather sweet to know that the money which might have bought flowers for you that you don't need, is feeding some poor child?"

"No, I don't. Look here, what good does that do if the kid's father had been driving a truck for a florist and lost his job because everybody quit buying flowers? Not only the driver is involved, either. There's the florist and his employes, the growers and their gardeners, the seedsmen, the flower box manufacturers—it's endless. Suppose I worked in a flower shop or a greenhouse to get by while I'm studying. I've done almost everything. Its' all the same principle."

Camilla mused. "Why, that's right. I never thought of it that way before. No wonder the world gets mixed up every so often. It's an awful tangle, isn't it?"

"It's a million tangles all snarled up."

So far, the discussion had been impersonal enough, but it was Camilla's next remark that caused the spark.

Grandson Of Swedish King Gives Up Royal Rights

A romance like a fairy tale of fiction came true with the wedding of Sigvard, Prince of Sweden, Duke of Uppland and grandson of the Swedish king, to the beautiful Fraulein Erika Patzek, 22-year-old daughter of a Berlin industrialist.

The 26-year-old prince—like Lennart, his cousin — abandoned his princely rights for a romantic union with the German actress.

They were married in the large council chamber of Canton hall, instead of in the small registry office, despite the fact a municipal election was being held in the building.

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way to treat a cold. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get Aspirin Tablets. Aspirin is the trademark of The Bayer Company, Limited, and the name Bayer in the form of a cross, is on each tablet. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Aspirin Tablets dissolve so completely they leave no irritating particles. Get a box of 12 tablets or a bottle of 24 or 100 at any drug store.
