Cranbrook Takes 9-2 Trimming

Creston Plays Best Ball in Years to Win Handily—Locals Have Great Day with Bat—Homer Over Curling Rink Features

Displaying the best brand of baseball seen here in the past five years, Creston had no trouble disposing of the Cranbrook aggregation by a 9-2 margin at Exhibition Park on Sunday afternoon before a fair-sized crowd.

Creston had it all over the visitors in every department of the game, everyone of the locals playing defensive ball that could hardly be excelled, and everyone of them hitting effectively. Cranbrook pitchers only had one strikeout to their credid, Miller, the first man up in the first innings, who went down on three pitched balls.

LaBelle went seven innings for Creston and backed by flawless support was never in difficulty. He had seven strikeouts to his credit. It was a big day for Herb Couling who along with great work at short, twirled the last two frames in impressive fashion—getting his three men in the eighth on five pitched balls—and finishing up the day's work with a home run over the curling rink in the eighth to score three runs. Dobie MacDonald had a perfect day at the bat, turning in five hits for as many times at bat. Hale was another effective clouter with a triple in the fourth. At second and third bases Miller and Art Couling were conspicious.

The veteran, "Scotty" Mitchell pitched the last three innings for Cranbrook but was even less effective than McRae who worked the initial half-dozen rouuds. The visitors infield was sloppy in spots but the outfield gave a good account of themselves. Moore was their most consistent hitter with three safe clouts on four trips to the pan. Lewis, with a triple to his credit, was the other outstanding batsman. The teams:

The umpiring was done by H. Corrie and Fred Briggs of Cranbrook, the effort of the latter being a feature of the contest. He called the balls and strikes, doing the job satisfactorily, calling them in real big league voice, with an emphasis on the s-t-r-i-k-e that caught the fancy of the fans.

Berry Yield May Be 34,000 Crates

This is Estimate of the District Horticulturist—Rains Benefit Raspberries—Cherries Suffer Slightly—Apples Still Drop.

For this time of year the weather has been remarkably cool and cloudy and of late with more frequent showers.

Strawberry shipment are just past the peak, but are expected to continue until around the 20th, diminishing gradually as the season advances. Wynndel has loaded 15 cars up to date and expects about 10 more. The showery weather has delayed picking but has caused little loss as the nights have been cool. The estimated yield of 34,000 crates for the valley is now expected will be slightly exceeded.

Raspberries have just made their appearance and will be coming in more rapidly for the next two weeks, the crop stands to benefit from the change of wearher.

Cherries also have just commenced as a few crates of both sour and sweet early varieties have been brought in lately Some Bings should be ready in a few days but will be in full volume in another week. If the rainy weather should continue some loss from splitting can be expected.

Gooseberries are about over, Red and black currants will soon be ready to pick.

Growers are busy thinning in the orchards, fruit very free from scab, but winter varieties are still dropping, early varieties are beginning to size more rapidly now, the set is light and picking will be quite late compared to last year's early start.

The local market is now well supplied with early vegetables, new potatoes being offered last week.

Most of the first cut of alfalfa is now under cover but hay making is now at a standstill until the weather clears, the cut was light but not coarse.

Tomatoes, peppers, and cucumbers are slow in maturing; it will be quite late before any shipments occur.

Alice Siding

W. Keirn is busy with the erection of a hay shed on his (Rose) ranch this week.

Miss Jean Armstrong is at present on a visit with relatives at Irvine and Elk water, Alberta.

Miss Helen Moore, who is home from umb erton, is a Sirdar visitor with the Misses Rogers this week.

Shipment of raspberries commenced from local ranches at the first of the week. Recent rains are making the early berries of excellent quality.

Posters are up for the school district ratepayers meeting to be held at the schoolhouse on Wednesday evening, June 17th. Victor Carr is the retiring trustee.

Misses M. Blinco and Kate Payne returned on Tuesday from a two weeks' visit at Salmon Arm and other Okanagan points. They were at Junior W.A. conference at the former place late in June.

Jack Smith tried out the fishing at Summit Creek which opened on July 1st, during the past week, with considerable success. Fred and Jerry Alderson were over there on Sunday but were not quite as successful.

Kitchener

Dan McDonald, in charge of Kitchener airport is a Nelson visitor.

Mrs. Mason and son, Wilfred, of Kimberley, are renewing acquaintances here this week, guests of her daughter, Mrs W. J Cooper.

Cycling Across Canada

From Vancouver to Halifax on a cycle tour Cariboo Bill Anger and his partner, Dick Hercy, were at Creston on Monday. The pair have negotiated the worst part of the trip, after crossing Anarchist mountain, 4400 feet, Cascade mountain 5400 feet, and a nine mile climb at the first summit at Rossland. Cariboo Bill is a former newspaper man of LePas, and Winnipeg, Man. Dick Hercy is an advertising specialist of Vancouver. The pair expect to reach Halifax in October. They travel on two C.C.M. bicycles with side car on which they carry their equipment, including a tent and camping utensils. After spending a couple of days at the Lone Pine auto camp they left for Cranbrook. The former was here 18 months ago in his cabin on wheels and has been talking on "North of 53" from Winnipeg to the coast.

Wynndel Rolls 20 Cars Berries

Season's Peak Passed, Tuesday—Raspberries Moving—Bing Cherries Coming Saturday—Gooseberries in Demand.

Up till Thursday morning Wynndel Co-Operative Fruit Growers have rolled 20 straight carloads of strawberries and the peak of the season was estimated as at Tuesday. Wednesday morning the the Co-Op. there had its biggest single day movement, with an outgo of two express carloads, accounting for 1936 crates. Along with the cars there has been quite an l.c.l. tonnage and following the rainy weather at the end of the week some growers are looking for quite a heavy movement until possibly the 25th. Wynndel commenced shipping raspberries on Wednesday and is looking for a better crop than first expected, the winter injury to the canes is not as severe as originally predicted. Cherries will be on the move before the week is out.

At Creston Products, Limited, they will be sending out their first Bing cherries today, both F. Celli and Manager R. H. Stewart having this fruit ready to move this week. They report quite heavy supplies of strawberries and black currants, along with a few crates of Royal Anne cherries. The firm's chief concern at present is to get on with the construction of their warehouse. A second carload of lumber was unloaded Wednesday, and the carpenters will be busy today on the framework.

Manager W. McL. Cooper of Creston Co-Operative Fruit Exchange got back Friday morning from a visit to the jobbers at Swift Current, Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and Calgary, and with excellent prospects for a good grain harvest at all prairie points, wholesalers are confident of a much better demand for fruit than the past two seasons. Mr. Cooper found the table quite unanimous that bulk apples are not wanted this year. The firm is moving strawberries in volume, and report raspberries as coming stronger every day, as are also black currants. An unexpected feature to this year's fruit movement is the rather heavy demand for gooseberries.

Long, Allan & Long, Limited, report the strawberry movement as just past the peak, with a substantial volume moving from all points every night. Mr. Allan reports the strawberry pools as being closed and it is expected cheques will be mailed growers within a few days. Raspberries are moving and the outgo should be fairly strong by Sunday. This firm also reports a keen demand for gooseberries, black and red currants, which commodities have in the past year, been rather hard to dispose of at prices profitable to the grower.

While it will be a month or six weeks before any apples are moving, considerable activity is noted at Erickson this week Long, Allan & Long, Limited, have opened their large packing plant with foreman Fred Hale in charge. To handle a substantial increase in tonnage Mr. Allan advises that it will probably be necessary to get on with the erection of an addition to their warehouse, the dimensions of which will be 50 x 40 feet. In the meantime work is going on at removing the old grader in preparation for the installation of the firm's new rotary grader which is expected to arrive from Portland, Oregon shortly.

Council Names New Fire Chief

Canute Anderson Appointed—Brigade to be Reorganized—Change System Electing Council—Issue Building Permits.

Considerable business of importance was transacted at the July meeting of the village council on Monday night, which was in charge of Reeve F. H. Jackson, with Councillors A. Comfort and C. Murrell in attendance. Accounts passed for payment totalled $462.

Canute Anderson, handyman, was appointed to replace A. Reed as chief of the fire brigade and deputy fire marshall. He was instructed to at once proceed with the formation of a brigade of not less than six members, and to arrange for regular practices. The council will give whatever practical support is needed. Fire protection matters in other directions were discussed, and included a letter from J. H. Thomas, the B.C. fire marshall, who outlined the powers of the council in connection with water supplies, etc. Mr. Oswald, the deputy fire marshall, is to be in this section about the middle of the month, when the whole question of fire protection will be gone into at a special meeting of the council.

The other outstanding feature was the decision to amend the latters patent under which the village was created in respect to the election of councillors. Hitherto a complete board of three members has been elected once in two years. The Village Act now permits an annual poll at which one member is elected—similar to the school board. At the election in January 1936, three members will be again chosen; the man with the biggest vote to serve for three years, and the candidate with the fewest votes will retire at the end of one year. There was a letter from the village solicitor, W. L. Bell, in this connection and his recommendations will be followed.

The council had a deputation from Creston and District Women's Institute, of Mrs. C. Murrel, and Mrs. Hayes, in connection with the effort the institute has launched as to cemetery facilities. The councillors agreed the move was a timely one and agreed to finance the rent of a hall at which the situation could be discussed at a meeting of all interested. The councillors will personally back any likely proposal and will represent the village at the meeting.

Permit to extend the present warehouse of Creston Co-Operative Fruit Exchange was granted, along with a permit for the new warehouse of Creston Products, Limited. In connection with permits the council points out that plans of sanitary arrangements at all new premises must be submitted and approved by Dr. Olivier, village health officer.

W. S. Weir, who recently acquired the Brousson residence and acreage on Grandview Heights, had a letter before the council and was present to discuss his proposition which was for the provision of road accomodation for a new house he wants to erect on his land at the east end of the unextended Vancouver street. In addition to this home he proposes to erect at least one other and the council agreed to pay him $150 for a strip of land about 150 feet long, part of which will be required for the new roadway. He was also given permit to erect the new house.

Residents on Victoria Avenue, whose sheds, etc., extend onto the road on Myrtle Avenue are to be given until September 30th to remove these obstructions. A sediment tester, which the handyman will be instructed to operate, is to be purchased so that a local check can be kept on village milk supply. F. F. C. Wasson, a dairy expert from Kelowna, will be here this month to give the handyman the necessary instruction. The proposal to secure a Babcock tester for similar work on the cream supply, was not favored.

Dr. Young, deputy minister of health, wrote that he was unable to advise as to formation of a drainage district, and advised the council to write other organized municipalities in the matter A new sidewalk was authorized for the short walk from Fourth street to the provincial, police office. Repairs are to be made to the planking of Park Road bridge. The handyman will look over the new warehouse of V. M. Vasseur at Fourte street and Park Road, and if the eaves do not shed the water on the sidewalk, a permit will be approved.

There was a joint letter from Creston badminton club and the basketball league officials, asking what work was planned at Park pavilion to better adapt the building for these sports. The clerk will write Mr. Carrie of Nelson, architect in charge of Creston's proposed new postoffice, and on his next visit to town he will be asked to report on the probable cost and best way to go about providing the desired improvements.

Boswell

Mrs. Jarvis of Cranbrook is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Home.

Mrs. E. Ginol was a visitor to Creston on Tuesday. making the trip by bus.

Mr. Whiteford of Cranbrook was a business visitor here at the weekend.

Mrs. Chas. Allan paid a visit to Creston by stage on Saturday, returning the same day.

Miss Holding and Mr. Lowes of Vancouver are visiting Mr. and Mrs. N. Garvie, at Sanca.

Mrs. Garvie and daughter are home from Creston hospital, arriving at the end of the week.

Bears are numerous in the Bainbridge meadow. As many as six of them have been seen at one time.

S. S. Frank was a business visitor at Nelson last week, returning to Lockhart beach the following day.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham Brown of Deanshaven are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. D. Graham Brown.

Edgar Home and Geoff. Sidenius of Cranbrook spent the weekend at the formers summer home at Boswell.

Mr. Williamson of the weights and measurers department inspected all public weights in the district last week.

Gooseberries and strawberries are still going out to the jam factory Black Tartarian cherries have started to move in limited quantities.

George Soukeroff, who is operating the tie camp here, had a miraculous escape from death Wednesday evening. The car he was driving left the highway in the neighberhood of the Reed & Mather ranch, about four miles out from Creston, rolling down the bank almost 100 feet. George jumped clear and was uninjured. The car was salvaged by one of the company's trucks and returned to camp under its own power.

Miss A. Kingstone of Winnipeg, Man., who has been visiting in Alaska, arrived in Boswell on Monday to spend a few days with Mrs. C. Allan.

Mrs. Robert Gray, Margaret, Muriel and Bobby, arrived from Winnipeg, Man., on Sunday. They will stay at Destiny Bay for the summer months.

Preliminary work is proceeding on the new bridge over Goat Creek. When this is completed it will eliminate one of the most dangersus spots on the highway.

Rev. and Mrs. M. C. Percival, who have been holidaying at Destiny Bay, left on Tuesday for Nelson, to spend a few days, prior to returning to Creston.

Eric Trennaman badly cut his foot with a spud and was rushed to Creston by Percy Mackie. After having the injury dressed he was able to return home.

J. Howell cycled to Nelson on Tuesday last, returning at the end of the week. He had the bad luck to be attacked by a dog while on the trip. The dog had to be destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coote of Winnipeg, Man., announce the arrival of a daughter, Patricia Josephine. Mr. Coote ran the Nelson-Creston freight line, in company with Bunty Gray last winter.

Owing to the continued rain the Soukoroff tie camp has had to suspend operations the past few days. The mill is situated on a steep hillside which will quickly dry and work should be resumed shortly.

One of the worst electrical storms in many years passed over the district Friday night. No damage is reported, but the heavy rain, which accompanied it, prevented any lightning fires getting under way.

W. Lawson Hepher, while driving along the highway, was crowded off the road by a car from the opposite direction, near Goat Creek bridge. He hit the bank and took the running board off his car, and bent the fender badly. Nobody was hurt.

"It's gorgeous, isn't it?" breathed Nancy, truly impressed. "I—I'm sure I'm going to love this room."

Cousin Columbine smiled.

"It's our best, and I'm glad to see that you appreciate it. Jack will be next to you with only a door between. I sleep downstairs; and as I stated in my letter, Aurora goes home at night. Victor Tubbs is an invalid, or thinks he is, which amounts to the same thing, and his wife has supported him for years; a state of affairs that satisfies them both, though it makes me furious. However, it's none of my business; and if Aurora wants to work her fingers to the bone for such a lazy specimen, why worry, as Mark Adam would say? Now I'll leave you in peace. No doubt you'll prefer to unpack alone though Aurora was itching to see your wardrobe, and if she had, not so much as a safety pin would have escaped her eyes, and the account would have been spread from one end of Pine Ridge to the other before she slept tonight."

The old lady moved toward the door, then stopped to add: "If you need a lamp, the matches are in that tin box on the wall. Supper's at six sharp, so Aurora can get home to feed her precious Victor. There's water in the pitcher; but you may wash in the bathroom if you prefer."

She was gone at last, leaving Nance rather breathless with instructions. Jack had departed to his own quarters, and the girl stood quite still, looking about curiously. She had meant the view, of course, when she told Cousin Columbine that she loved the room. Now, sitting down suddenly on a straight, uncomfortable "bedroom chair," she wondered how it was possible to get so many ugly things into one place.

The bed! Towering black walnut, ornately carved. It was cold comfort to remember that her grandfather had had one almost as hideous at Edgemere. A bureau to match; even a washstand, behind which hung a square of linen to protect the wall paper. Hadn't she heard somewhere that they were called "splashers" in the dark ages when people used such things?

Nancy arose to regard this curious antique on which, embroidered in red cotton, was an infant splashing happily in a wash bowl, with the words, "Our Darling," below it. Horrors! Must she live with that monstrous baby for months and months? Must she wash in that bowl—even brush her teeth into it?

The girl could have wept for her own tiled dressing room; then remembered that it was hers no longer anyway. She turned slowly to observe a marble-topped table between the windows—a patent rocking chair upholstered in flowered carpet—a shelf above the air-tight stove on which stood two blue vases and what appeared to be a mound of mineral specimens mysteriously glued together, with a clock in the centre, a silent timepiece now, probably useless save as an "ornament."

Nancy's eyes lifted to the wall paper, a nondescript, faded tan, which, she decided, "might be worse," But the pictures (only two, thank goodness!) were simply terrible: an oil painting of a deformed looking kitten playing with a ball of yarn, and a steel engraving of General Grant. Could anything be more depressing.

As if to get away from all these objects, Nance moved to a window, half sick at thought of the long weeks ahead. Night was descending, and even the Peak, rising now against a gloomy sky, looked austere and forbidding. All the excitement of their arrival—the elation she had felt during the wonderful ride in Mark Adam's flivver—her interest in this new part of her own country—even the girl's sense of humor, were lost in an attack of overwhelming homesickness.

Aunt Louise had been right, she told herself. They shouldn't have come so far away. This terrible room! What would the girls at home think if they could see that washstand? And the pin-cushion. Why it was bigger than a boudoir pillow! And what in the world was she going to do with herself when the duties that Cousin Columbine imposed were finished? There would be nothing—absolutely no way to kill time. This thought, to pleasure-loving Nancy Nelson was appalling—not to be endured. Her unhappy eyes, resting on Pike's Peak, saw only a closet filled with dancing frocks, and a white fur wrap that she had never worn. She had to wink to keep the tears out of her eyes as she vowed audibly:

"I'll write to-night and tell Dad everything. Didn't he say that homesickness might as well be fatal? He'll understand. He'll send for me if he has to borrow money for the ticket. Jack will call me a slacker, but who cares? I just can't stand it here. I'd almost rather die than stay. What can there possibly be to interest a girl like me in a dreadful, ramshackle, down-at-the-heels settlement like Pine Ridge, Colorado?"

Later Nancy was to realize that as she stood there, oblivious to everything save self-pity, she hadn't known what sort of girl she was.

CHAPTER VIII.

"There's nothing," observed Jack from the door of his north-east bedroom, "like good, thick, sirloin steak to bolster up a morale that's slipping. Remember that, Sis."

It was eleven at night, and Nancy, attired in a wadded dressing gown of crimson silk, turned from the bureau to ask coldly: "May I inquire whose morale you have in mind?"

Her brother smiled as he investigated the patent rocking chair.

"I'm no moron, Nance. I knew when I found you staring out of the window in the dusk, that you were planning your escape. That's why I opened the door into that frigid hall. The aroma of broiling steak was in the air and I felt sure it would revive that fainting spirit—stiffen the backbone—stir your pioneer blood—"

"Hush up," warned Nancy. "Our voices will disturb Cousin Columbine, and she admitted sitting up to an unheard of hour. Say!" the girl came nearer, whispering: "Did you ever see anything more—more soul destroying than this room?"

Jack grinned, gesturing with a thumb toward his own quarters.

"You should see mine! Not even a view, my dear; and it lacks this handsome walnut furniture." The boy's eyes shone with merriment; and though she wouldn't have believed such a proceeding possible a few hours earlier, Nance laughed a little. She didn't realize that after a leave of absence her sense of humor was returning, but she knew that something made her feel better.

"It was a wonderful supper, wasn't it?" she murmured.

"Trust you to appreciate it! And what swell china! I wish Aunt Lou could see it."

"It came from Denver in 18—well, eighteen-something-or-other, anyway. There's a complete dinner set. Imagine choosing that awful green-brown pattern! And Cousin Columbine's so proud of it, too. How on earth does she remember the date that everything was purchased?"

Jack shook his head, remarking in muffled tones: "She's a wonder, isn't she? Who else would have thought of cooking up that letter as a—what did she call it? Character test? You've got an awful lot to live up to, Sis, if you ask me. Hop into bed. I'll open the windows. And don't forget that breakfast's at seven sharp."

Sleep did not come quickly to Nance that night. She lay there under a patchwork quilt (whose weight, she wrote Aunt Judy later, was "almost crushing"), and thought about the evening that had just passed. There must be some truth in Jack's statement regarding the sirloin steak. What else could account for her more cheerful frame of mind? For Nance had been ravenous despite that slice of chocolate cake—the ugly, green-brown china, and a lamp in the centre of the table that was homely enough to ruin almost anybody's appetite.

There was no doubt that Aurora could cook a steak; and with unexpected tact, Jack had done most of the talking, leaving his sister free to get herself in hand after what she now called her "brain storm." And when Aurora had gone, Jack carried that awful lamp into the sitting room and Cousin Columbine remarked casually, though her eyes twinkled: "I suppose you're thinking me an outrageous humbug. Sit down, my dears, while I confess."

This confession with its illuminating detours into the past, had kept Columbine Nelson talking until long after her customary bedtime.

"I'm going clear back to the beginning," she explained, "so you'll understand, if possible, just why I posed as a tottering old relic, too frail to stay alone at night. The truth is, there's nothing to be afraid of here, and if there were I wouldn't turn a hair. To one who can remember the Indian troubles of 1868, and as a child has hidden for hours in fear of hostile savages, well—you can readily see why an ordinary prowler would be tame in comparison!"

She looked up, smiling; while Jack, eyes popping out of his head, exclaimed: "You really lived through things like that?"

"Why not?" asked the old lady calmly. "This was nothing but wilderness when I was born. As you've heard tell, my first home was a covered wagon which, naturally, I don't remember. I do remember a house with a dirt floor and a stone fireplace in one corner, however; and dimly recall the furniture made from poles and rough-hewn lumber. It was home, and nothing to be ashamed of because no one else nearby had anything better."

"But wasn't it frightfully cold?" said Nancy. "A dirt floor, I mean?"

"I suppose it must have been—at this altitude; but Mother took care that I shouldn't suffer, of course. I can remember being tucked up on the bed with quilts all 'round me, watching the snow swirl against a tiny window, and loving it—I was so warm and cosy! It was my mother who suffered. Men can stand hardships better than women; and even in those days Father seemed always to be—well, my dears, to express it as you would, he seemed to be having the time of his young life."

"Did that cabin stand where this house does now?" Jack questioned.

"Very nearly. It was a bleak spot then. Except for the big pine beside the barn, Father platned every tree himself after he built the mansion.

"But why, when there was plenty of land to choose from, didn't you build back in the woods where it was sheltered?"

"Fear of two things," responded Cousin Columbine. "Fire, and Indians. If the savages were to attack us, we at least had a chance to see them approaching if we were in the open. And a forest fire's a terrible thing in the wilderness, Jack. I recall when I was a tiny girl, watching one at night with my courageous little mother. We were all alone, Father having gone to California Gulch in search of gold. Looking back on those times, I don't see how she endured his absences, even though there were other cabins not far away. That fire was a terrifying sight, my dears. It must have been miles off, but looked almost near enough to touch. The growth was very thick and tall just there, and the flames seemed to leap from tree to tree, and as they reached the top, shoot up into the air, far up, higher than you'd believe possible, before subsiding. I have never forgotten it."

Nancy shivered; and Cousin Columbine continued: "So you see why we built in this bare place."

"And did your father find the gold?" Jack questioned.

"Not then. Not ever to any great amount. It was Leadville silver which built this mansion; but poor Mother never saw it. She died in 1874, when I was fifteen. A wonderful woman, my dears. She had the true pioneer spirit, but not the body to stand up under the pioneer hardships. She was only thirty-five when she left us to join my little brother who died in infancy."

WAS CONSTIPATED FOR 30 YEARS

Woman's Long Search for a Remedy

The trouble with most remedies for constipation, as this woman found, is that they give only temporary relief. Having at last found a permanent corrective, she writes to tell us about it:—

"For upwards of 30 years I was a victim of acute constipation. I tried practically everything that it was possible to try. I admit I was a chronic case, and every new remedy I tried helped for a day or two—after that I was just as bad as ever. Three months ago I took my first taste of Kruschen Salts, and every morning since, and every morning so long as I live, my first duty upon rising is my Kruschen. I honestly feel a different woman. My bowels act to the clock, and my friends remark how well I am looking. My only regret is that I didn't try Kruschen years ago."—(Mrs.) A. M.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintining a condition of internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your system is thus kept clear of those impurities which, allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

"What's wrong with this Mustard, Mary? It's very poor stuff!"

"Why John—

I thought I was getting a bargain—a big bag for 10c

"It's no bargain at any price! I'll bet you would get more actual mustard in 10c worth of Keen's than you would out of any 10c substitute. The extra bulk is only flour, ground up hulls and colouring matter!"

"You're right! From this time on I'm going to stick to Keen's."

Arrow Creek Berries Moving

20 Acres Bearing Strawberries—Some Apple Production, Along with Hay—Wiltse Has Large, Modern Fox Farm.

The Arrow Creek settlement is located to the east of Erickson, about six miles, with what might be termed the main Arrow Creek valley hemmed in by Goat Mountain on the west; Rolfe mountain on the north, and Iron mountain on the east.

Notable progress has been made in the past few years, which tends to make this section a more desirable one in which to locate. Good roads have been put in on both sides of the creek, enabling the residents to transport their products with the minimum of trouble.

Two years ago a school was opened after quite long drawn out negoations. W. H. Kolthammer, first principal, and still in charge, started with an attendance of nine pupils, and is now handling a total of 35 in all the grades. A small store, owned by Melvin Jorde, was operated for a short time but at present is closed. A postoffice is in prospect but, as yet, there is nothing definite as to its opening date.

20 Acres in Strawberries

Strawberry growing is the main industry in the district. There are about 20 acres planted. Trouble with spit bug is being encountered in some patches, and threatens to be serious. Tree fruits are not yet planted in any quantity. There are but three of these in evidence at present.

The Eby ranch, on the east side of the creek, is the oldest property in the district and has about four acres planted to orchard, set out almost 25 years ago. It is mostly in Wagener apples. Although the ranch has been left uncultivated for quite a number of years it is, this year, in good shape, and W. Ramm, now operating it, is looking forward to taking off quite a good crop. Fred Lewis is another orchard owner, with just under four acres planted to Delicious, McIntosh Reds and Wagener. This ranch is one of the largest property at Arrow Creek, and is producing strawberries, along with vegebables and hay. It is at present in charge of J. Clarkston.

Some Berry Growers

I. Wenger, on the west side, has an acre in orchard, but his feature crop i strawberries, for which his place is quite well known. Os. Arrowsmith is the largest landowner in the district. He is a big strawberry producer, with two acres in crop this year and with favorable weather will have one of the best yields ever taken off here. He has a considerable acreage in hay and an acre of potatoes which latter yield exceptionally well. He has 32 acres cleared and any visitor wishing to observe the productive capabilities of Arrow Creek should visit this ranch.

Ed. Cardinal also located on the west side, has a fine property and is now busy with the strawberry harvest He has quite a large hay crop. C. Staff, with five acres cleared, is cropping an acre of British Sovereign strawberries. O. Taylor, on the flat near the road, has about two acres in Van San strawberries.

To the extreme west, just above Wyndel, a great change has been wrought in the past couple of years, with a large number taking up property on what is known as the Mason subdivision. Very few strawberries are grown as yet, but vegetables thrive exceedingly well, as does also hay Those in this section are F. Stephenson, who has just finished clearing ten acres; John Brett, John Andrews, John Babich, Otto Hochne, T. Ackermannn, Rudolph and Russell Benson, Mrs. Wilmer, E. Bothamley and J. Zachodnik.

Herb Lewis is another of the larger owners and is this year expecting to have an excellent crop of hay. F. Edwards is in charge of this place. George Isles has about an acre planted to strawberries. Most of the owners in this area have plenty of water for irrigation and along with fruit some livestock is handled.

Progressive Fox Farming

Arrow Creek Fox Farm, as the name implies, is located on Arrow Creek at its junction with Goat river, and its parklike surroundings furnish ideal conditions for the raising of silver foxes, now produced in thousands in all parts of Canada. P. M. Wiltse, the owner, located here in 1931, and has shown marked progress since his arrival. The farm has 50 furring sheds, this type of shed proving the very best for developing fine pelts. The farm has 40 pairs of breeding stock and has a yearly pup production an average with all the better fox farms in the dominion. The largest single litter in 1935 was seven, and all of them first-class foxes.

Feed for the foxes is produced locally, consisting principally of aged horses. The feed house is equipped with an up-to-date meat and bone grinder and a ration consists of meat, eggs, cereal, milk and vegetables, this being all that is necessary to raise these hardy animals to maturity. Mr. Wiltse predicts that, as years go on, many small farmers will be handling a pair or more, and finding them equally profitable, and less work, than their flocks of pedigreed poultry.

Arrow Creek Irrigation Supply

In August, 1930, East Creston irrigation system was completed. It takes its water supply from Arrow Creek at a point a mile above the Winger ranch, where the water is dammed. Before the main line was laid easements had to be secured from several property owners. The system consists of a main line of about six miles, with 11 miles of laterals. Ever since starting the system has worked perfectly, and there have been few interruptions in service. Inspection of pipes reveals the fact that they are in as good condition as when first put in. The pipe for the system was manufactured by the B.C. Concrete Company, Limited, which operated a complete plant at the Arrow Creek bridge. Over the whole system 13,000 acre feet of water is used during an average year.

A large blast was shot off this week on the highway widening project just east of Sirdar and this part is now coming into shape fast with a fairly large crew and two caterpillars being engaged.

A crew is employed blasting away the rock at Goat Creek for the purpose of erecting a new bridge just where the highway passes under the lumber flume, and this will remove one of the sharpest curves on the highway.

Over 100 men are working with the Bayonne Mining Company in the different operations. Wet weather has greatly hampered maters but a large supply of ore has been brought out and is laying at Tye ready for shipment. With better weather conditions this mine will be on the shipping list in a large way, it is reported.

A pigeon race by some of the members of the Cranbrook Flying Homing Club preparitory to the big race from here on the 14th inst. had to be postponed on Sunday morning owing to inclement weather. In the big fly on 14th the route of flight will be up Kootenay Lake to Crawford Bay, thence past Hazel May Mountain and on to St. Mary's Lake and Cranbrook. Residents on the route are requested to protect these birds and to take charge of any injured or stray birds a special appeal being made to the youngsters in this regard. Notify either the Creston Review or the secretary of the Cranbrook Flying Homing Club if any birds are got.
