Death Summons 'Piper' Ross

Had Reached 80th Year—Army Service Lengthy and Varied—20 Years at Portsmouth Dockyard—Military Funeral.

In the death of Francis McBain Ross, who passed away on Monday, death has taken another of Creston's highly respected citizens and one with a record of service for the empire that is somewhat rare in these days in western Canada.

Deceased, who was in his 80th year, was a native of Inverness, Scotland, in which city he was born in 1855. He was educated at Bremner school in that city and later joined the Argyle and Southern Highlanders and embarked for duty at Ceylon and Singapore. He was next with the municipal police force at Shanghai where he remained for about 15 years, and then joined a contingent for service in the Boer war and was in South Africa until 1900. From then until 1920 he was assistant mechanical engineer at Portsmouth dock yard in England. He was married in 1886 at Southsea, Portsmouth to Miss Diana Mills, and in 1920 the family left for Canada, taking up residence at Canyon for a few months, and coming on to Creston in the fall of that year, and have resided here ever since.

Befitting his splendid military service the funeral, on Wednesday was in charge of Creston Valley Post Canadian Legion. The service at Trinity Church was taken by the pastor, Rev. Andrew H. Walker. The palbearers were J. B. Holder, John Hall, H. A. Powell, A. W. Sinclair, Ed. Gardiner and D. Learmonth, with the march to the cemetery headed by Piper Leslie of Nelson, a vet eren of the Gordon Highlanders, who played the "Flowers of the Forest" lament at the graveside, and Last Post and Reville were sounded by Bugler Cox. Many friends were out to pay their last respects but by request there were no flowers.

Although of a decidedly retiring disposition, "Piper" Ross, as deceased was so familiarly known here, was in great demand for military exercises and at Scotch festivities were his ability with the pipes and his fund of diversified stories of travel and army life made him a well deserved favorite, and his familiar figure will be missed in Creston.

He is survived by his wife, and four daughters, Mrs. J. Wareham, Detroit, Mich; Mrs. H. Bentley, Liverpool and Mrs. H. Hills, Portsmouth, England, and Mrs. George Davies from Port Moody B.C., and two sons, Francis, Edinburg, Scotland, and Allister at home, to whom is extended the sincere sympathy of the community in the great loss they have sustained.

McIntosh Buying Steady to Date

Movement to Domestic and Export Markets Satisfactory to Date—Crop Heavy to Fancy Unwrapped Popular.

Friday morning last was opening date for shipment on McIntosh Reds and the total movement from all points in the Creston Valley was 17 carloads, which is pretty much on a par with opening day movement in 1934.

At all the packing houses Macs have the right of way, and are likely to be to the fore until the middle of the month. With their new rotary graders the Exchange and Long, Allan & Long, Limited, account for a total daily pack of five carloads, and both firms report an outgo of not less than two carloads each daily, and so far they have no trouble keeping the warehouses fairly well cleaned up. Just how long this will continue is not quite certain as to date, the big demand is for the oldtime household pack (now unwrapped Cee), but the crop as a whole is running more than 60 per cent. fancy.

By the end of the week Jonathans, Winter Banana and Grimes Golden will be on the picking list, and unirrigated lands are finding the prolonged dry spell maturing the Delicious and in order to prevent loss from drop picking of this variety has commenced in some orchards.

At the Exchange thirty cars of Macs had rolled up to Tuesday evening. Five of these had gone to export and the balance had been marketed at points Winnipeg and west. Manager Cooper states that the Macs coming in to date are grading almost 75 per cent to fancy, with hardly more than 15 per cent to supply the splendid demand for unwrapped. He expects the crop of this popular red variety will all be in by early next week, but it will be at least the middle of the month before the graders are clear of them

Long, Allan & Long, Limited, report a satisfactory clearance of the McIntosh. They have two cars to export and the balance has been disposed of chiefly at Swift Current, Sask., and points west of there. Letters and orders reaching the firm convince that the local Macs are of a superior color to the offerings from the Okanagan. Manager Allan estimates the crop running around 60 per cent. to fancy. What prunes there are coming are not in any too good demand. The Wealthies are all gone as well as the plums, but limited quantities of the latter varieties of pears are still arriving Wynndel basketball fans had a meeting Friday evening at the hall E. Uri and Fred Martello are acting as managers. Lewis Abbott is secretary-treasurer. Nothing definite was arranged but the first practice was held Tuesday evening.

At the Women's Institute meeting on September 20th a guessing contest was held at which Mrs. Doug. Butterfield was the winner of the parcel, a pair of pillowslips. Several had the correct contents and a draw had to be resorted to to decide the winner.

The secretary's report of the Women's Institute fall fair shows that with all accounts paid there is a credit balance of about $40. This does not seem a very large return for the amount of work involved, but when the $125 cash paid out in prizes and about $125 in merchandise is distributed in the district is taken into consideration it convinces the effort is worth while.

An interesting event was that of Friday afternoon at the hall when the high school class had a debate. The subject, Resolved, "That Grade 9 have no home work." Oline Uri and Sid. Davidge sponsored the afirmative with Jennie Pearson and Ronald Wall taking the negative. For a first appearance under such circumstances the debators made a good showing. The judges were Mrs. Dunseath, Mrs. Wigen and Miss D. Butterfield. They commended both sides, but gave the decision in favor of the negative. Congratulations are due Principal Martello for his successful initial effort by his pupils at public speaking. After the debate the school girls served tea with Mrs. M. McGregor and Mrs. M. Hagen superintending, at a charge of 15 cents, proceeds to be used for buying reference books and addition to the school library. The intake was $9.50. The turnout was good and should encourage the pupils to continue this work.

Legion Secretary Visits

From Friday to Saturday, Robert Macnicol, Secretary of the Provincial Command Canadian Legion, was guest of the local post, and Friday evening there was a large gathering of Legion and Auxillary members in his honor at the Legion Hall. Mr. Macnicol complimented the local branch on general progress, and especially on the new home acquired since his last visit, two years ago. The visitor, who is on a tour of interior points, which will take him as far as the Peace River B.C. Block, gave a summary of the Hyndman report, and stated that more sympathetic consideration was now given to applicants for pension than heretofore. According to figures given the Legion, with its 1000 odd branches is the largest fraternal order in the Dominion. At the conclusion of Mr. Macnicol's address, which was heartily applauded, an excellent lunch was served by the Womens Auxillary.

Hoop League Elects Officers

E. Marriott is New President—League has Substantial Surplus—Wynndel Entry Doubtful—Hope Commence Play 18th.

Basketball players were out in large numbers on Friday night for the annual meeting of Creston Commercial Basketball League at the town hall with the league vice president, Doug. Co.rie, in charge in the absence of President Frank P. Levirs, who is now located at Kimberley.

There was a letter from Mr. Levirs briefly outlining the league se son and giving a sketch of basketball which is this year commencing its fifth year of league play. In the letter, too, were certain recommendations which the meeting referred to the incoming executive for consideration.

The balance sheet was submitted by Adam Robertson and showed the season to have been quite a prosperous one. After all expenses are paid there is a balance of almost $130. In this surplus is the one dollar per head which was assessed on all the players a year ago to help defray the cost of raising the beams in Park paviiion, which work was never undertaken.

Officers elected for 1935-36 are: President, E. Marriott; vice-president, Frank V. Staples; secretary-treasurer, Ben Crawford. Two other members will be named to complete the executive—a representative from the men's and ladies' division. The fees for the coming season were fixed at not to exceed $2.

The new executive was asked by the meeting to consider paying the referees a nominal sum per game, and also to have in mind a nominal h noroarium for the secretary-treasurer who, in his latter capacity, has a very important duty to perform and account for. It is expected the caretaker will also be paid a small salary, and in view of splendid voluntary work done in this connection by Bill and Ardrey Weir they will be given first chance of taking on the work. It was decided the league should have a constitution of its own and the executive will draft this and submit it at a general meeting before the middle of the month.

Teams are to be registered with the league secretaey by October 10th, and it is hoped to open the league season about the 18th. From present appearances the ladies' division will have the same lineup as last season: Creston Review, Cecil Moore's, Creston Motors and Pharmacy but in the men's division there is doubt, as yet, as to an entry from Wynndel. This year it is possible Wynndel will have a league of its own and will not have an entry at Creston. With Fred Martello now resident at that point basketball is going stronger than ever and there is said to be plenty of material for four boys' teams. Wynndel, too had a disastrous time of it financially last season in its Creston league venture. With no league games played at that point the team had no means of raising funds with which to pay the cost of travelling to Creston regularly for matches in the local organization.

At Friday night's meeting Wynndel's representatives were asked to submit a proposition that would be satisfactory to them and the league officials here will give it every consideration, all present feeling that Wynndel would be an asset to the league activities again this year.

The usual hearty vote of thanks was given the retiring officers, Mr. Levirs being especially commended for his work in various directions that helped materially in establishing basketball here.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, OCT. 4

HOME BREW

If the local basketball league is to have a men's section on a par with last season those in charge of the sport should be in generous mood when it comes to stating terms upon which teams may enter the league. Last season Wynndel quintette helped considerably in making the men's division interesting, but in making the trips to Creston to fulfil league engagements they incurred considerable expense that the club had no way of liquidating. With another season about to open they, quite naturally, are looking for a new deal that will at least enable them to compete without monetary loss to the players and, if possible, recoup them for the deficit sustained on last year's operations. All the fans want Wynndel in the league. They made things decidedly interesting in the 1935 section of league play, and with Fred Martelio for a coach and possibly in the lineup Wynndel promises to provide real opposition for the best Creston has to offer—and this is the kind of sport hoop patrons are wanting.

In addition to the purely financial angle it is well to remember Wynndel has a very fine hall for the sport and are just as anxious to see hoop squads in action as is Creston, all of which means that an effort should be made to give them their just share of the league fixtures, on the understanding that travelling expenses be paid when teams visit Wynndel, and when Wynndel visits Creston. So far as door receipts are concerned these belong to the league and can not be shared with individual teams, but such an arrangement will give Wynndel much real hoop sport. By way of helping them out with back debts and financing the present season it should be possible, with the consent of the league, to give Wynndel club an ample supply of exhibition games, the intake from which would belong to Wynndel after an agreed upon amount had been deducted for travel cost.

From what we could gather during and after the league annual meeting Wynndel is all pepped up to have a league of its own, which is real good news; they have the hall and the talent and certainly it's a great indoor winter sport, but the Review does not believe they will find the competition provided by their own squads as sufficient. Wynndel will want to see its talent in action against out iders and it seems to us the arrangement outiined above should provide this in quality and in the quantity desired, at a minimum cost. And when it comes to stacking up aga nst out of town aggregations there is a whole lote more "thrill" to an encounter if a league championship is at stake. Exhibition games are alright for sociability, but if you want some "kick" to the sport there is nothing like having something at stake like a league supremacy.

Talking about league basketball reminds that some familiar figures in the sport since its inception at Creston will be missing. Foremost among these will be Mr. and Mrs. Frank Levirs to whom must be accorded no small measure of credit for introducing and encouraging the sport locally. In an executive capacity with the league, as coach, as a member of the former-day centipede squad, as referee and various other ways, it is not going too far to say Mr. Levirs was the father of basketball in Creston, as well as active in directing affairs in the East Kootenay league. Mrs. Levirs has rendered an equally splendid service in fostering the sport amongst the ladies and more particularly the high school girls who attained league championship honors under her tutelage. For the past two seasons Mrs. Levirs has been with the Review quintette and her presence in the lineup had much to do with making the newspaper squad the lady champions of 1933-34 and 1934-35. Both gave untiring and entirely unselfish effort in connection with the sport and their removal from Creston is very genuinely regretted by all identified with the hoop game.

And while we are on this basketball broadcast it might be well to pay some attention to that part of Friday night's annual that seemed to be of the opinion that the village had a big money-maker in park pavilion and should be easing off rather than considering an advance in rental charges. When improvements under way are completed Creston will have an investment of $4000 in the pavilion. On this it is entitled to, say, six per cent. on its investment and 5 per cent. for depreciation, a total of $440, to which must be added insurance; making a necessary intake of about $500 to meet "overhead." According to the balance sheet for 1934 the revenue from all sources for last year was about $315. Provided any increase in rental (due recent improvements) is moderate both the basketball and badminton clubs should consider themselves more than fortunate in having such spacious playing quarters. The council is to be commended in the consideration it has shown these sports. Here's hoping the same progressive policy will continue, and now the interior has been so well looked after might we have attention to the exterior in the way of a long overdur coat of paint.

Up to the present, at least, it looks as if the apple grower is getting a break this year. It is more than a few years since the Duchess and Wealthys have brought such favorable prices, and with the board fixing the price on McIntosh at $1.20 and $1.10 f.o.b. for fancy, Creston's heaviest planted variety is off to a good start. In comparison with 1934 the whole marketing situation is also more hopeful. A year ago the B.C. crop ran heavy to big sizes that had to be sold on the domestic market. This year the crop is heavy to small sizes and the export market is just about the most favorable known for some time. Too, storage facilities in the Okanagan have been considerably enlarged and this will have a tendency to eliminate the rush of other seasons to sell at a sacrifice, if necessary, in order not to be short of storage for the later varieties. At Penticton the Herald is so enthused that it expects to see a smile on the grower's face this fall. Here's hoping.

Crop Estimates Too Conservative

Rodgers Box Factory Output to Date Proves This—Berry Yield Establishes an All Time Record—Pears Exceed.

Operations at the Chas. O. Rodgers box factory which fairly accurately guage fruit shipments from the valley, indicate, that all the early season estimates on the 1935 rop are on the low side

On berries the plant has had a make of about 50,000 strawberry crates, and in the neighborhood of 14.400 raspberry crates, both of which figures indicate a berry crop that is much in excess of any previous season, particularly the raspberries, which were suppos d to have suffered considerable frost injury. To cope with this betty business the plant has manufactured around one and a half million pint Hallocks.

On pears the make of boxes was more than 4000 in excess of original estimates and the make of appie boxes is considerably past the 100,000 mark and the McIntosh not yet all moved. Some increase of course, is to be looked for in the make of apple boxes as everything is boxed this year. In 1934 there was a big movment in the jumbo Crate.

The Rodgers plant is a scene of real activity these days. Last month 79 names were shown on the pay roll, and so far any falling off is slight and is confined to a slight layoff of girls who were operating the berry cup making machines.

The sawmill and box factory is employing 40 hands. A steady supply of logs is coming in from Ryan where the firm has about 30 employed at logging and shipping operations. The box factory is turning out from 5000 to 6000 boxes a day and the four girls operating the unitized top making machine are doing a little better than this.

The Rodgers plant has had a record year on the make of tin tops and bedding baskets. Of the former 400,000 have already been made about 50 per cent of which have been taken by wholesale firms at prairie centres, who have also taken the entire output of bedding baskets, which are for greenhouse business. In anticipation of a still further expansion in the demand the firm plans to continue operat ng the venner mill and the tin top machines this fall and will stock a 75,000 supply of these.

So long as it is possible to log on the Rodgers limit at Ryan the firm will continue to operate the sawmill. Mr. Rodgers reports an improved demand for lumber both locally as well as at prairie points and the intention is to fully stock the yard in anticipation of a steadily increasing trade.

SYNOPSIS

Nancy Nelson is a sub-deb, a gay, irresponsible girl of nineteen, with no care beyond the choice of her costume for her coming-out party. Suddenly, in the market crash, her indulgent father loses all he had, and his family is faced with the necessity of a simpler method of living. At this juncture a letter is received from an eccentric relative in Colorado, who offers the girl a home on what seems to be impossible conditions.

After much consideration Cousin Columbine's offer is accepted, and Nancy and Jack arrive at Pine Ridge.

Nancy set out one afternoon to climb to the top of a hill so as to obtain a view of the surrounding landscape and misses the path Aurora Tubbs had told her to follow. A truck comes along the road, driven by Matthew Adams, and she asks him which way to go. They ascend the hill, look around, and then go on to Cousin Columbine's. There Mark Adam tells Nancy that his brother Luke has broken his leg, and that Jack Nelson has been hired to help out while Luke's leg gets better. With Jack away, Nancy finds that she is lonesome, and having no books to read, the idea of starting a public library at Pine Ridge seems a good one, and Nance writes home to get her parents to send all the books they could spare and all they could induce others to let them have.

Nance and Matthew Adam go Christmas shopping in a neighboring town. On their return to Pine Ridge, Nance is amazed to see the Columbine residence all lit up, and asks Matthew if he knows why. He said: Let's go in and see. Then Nancy learns that she is having her debut, but in a different setting than had been planned for her in Boston.

Nancy's parents and friends gave their liberal support to her request for books, and a sizeable box arrived in due course. Father Adam painted a sign for the library, and the Adam boys worked on the shelves for the books and decorations to make the room look presentable.

Jack Nelson, Matthew Adam, and Nance go to the prairie home of Matthews' uncle for the ride, and after Nance and Jack leave for home, they are caught in a blizzard.

Now Go On With The Story

Where that empty milk can came from they never knew; but for a while it created not only diversion, but a feeble warmth that was dearly welcome. With the aid of a pocket knife Jack ripped the leather covering from the seats, and used excelsior stuffing for a fire. School books came next, but not until darkness was descending and all hope of seeing the missing driver was given up.

"I'd go for help," Jack told his sister grimly, "but even if the road weren't drifted, I'd never make it with night coming on. We've been here about four hours, haven't we? It seems a lifetime already, and these youngsters have been here a good while longer. If things aren't better in the morning I'll have to go, Nance. Have you noticed" (he lowered his voice), "those twins are getting drowsy, both of 'em; and so's Paul Evans. I can't tell whether they're just sleepy, or—or— Look here, sis! It's up to us to keep them moving!"

Darkness came fast; but slowly, terribly slowly, it seemed to Nance, hour after hopeless hour dragged on. Wild wind still raged about them, and at the back of the bus a snowdrift had collected, sifting in through the broken window and making their cramped space smaller still. Though all worked desperately to keep the fire burning, a sudden, especially fierce gust had blown it out; and there were no more matches. Jack had long since relinquished his sheep-lined jacket; and Nancy's knitted skirt was pinned securely about a shivering boy.

Pretense at games—prancing up and down the aisle—anything to keep blood circulating in those small, cold kiddies, was kept up valiantly; but as night descended the children who were not crying had dropped asleep, huddled together in a corner, and tears of fright and pity dimmed Nancy's eyes as she looked down at them.

Through that interminable night a grim and silent Jack kept moving constantly, stopping at every turn to rub the legs or arms of some small sleeper. Nancy, exhausted, sat for a time, holding within her coat a boy of seven who whimpered with the cold. Later, when a semblance of warmth returned to him and he dropped asleep, she too arose to move about the crowded quarters, and like her brother, chafe numb hands and feet.

Dawn came at last, and the storm had not abated.

"But we're alive," said Nance, teeth chattering as she tried to speak. "We're all alive."

Jack faced her suddenly. Almost it seemed that he was angry.

"And how long will we last? How long, I ask you?" He raised a foot and she saw a bare leg above the shoe. "I put my socks on Joey Miller three hours ago when you were nodding. That boy's all in, Nancy; and some of these little girls won't live the day through unless help reaches us. If we had food it might put new life into them; but every lunch pail's empty and—"

He stopped, silenced by a moan from some one in the huddled mass, and lifting a child, worked at her stiff legs in desperation. It was, Nance saw, the twin who wore her sweater; and suddenly the girl was pulling off her woollen stockings while Jack protested: "You keep those on, sis! Say, are you going crazy? Do you want to freeze to death? You're in your thin silk undies now. I know it. I saw you sneak out of that knitted thing a while ago. Damn you, Nance Nelson, you keep those stockings on!"

Nancy said nothing. Jack was, she understood, half crazed with anxiety for all those helpless children and herself as well. Slipping bare feet into her shoes again, she knelt to pull her warm hose over the icy legs of the small sufferer; while one of the girls, watching in silence, struggled out of her coat and buttoned it about her little sister.

Nance threw her a smile, a drawn, sad smile that Cousin Columbine wouldn't have recognized.

"Come help me, Evelyn," she said gently. "We must wake some of the little ones and keep them moving."

One after another they got them to their feet, those weary youngsters. Some, unable to understand, protested, weeping. Others did their brave best to help. It was nearly noon when, as the wind subsided, Jack said the words that struck terror to his sister's heart.

"I'm going now, Nancy." His voice trembled a little. "As I see it, there's no other way. Keep up your courage; and for God's sake, Nance, keep fighting. Unless the wind starts up again I'll reach that ranch in a few hours."

"And—if you—don't?" 2118

Their eyes met, and Nance knew her brother realized how slim a chance he had. Her lips trembled; but he made a gesture toward the children.

"I know—but I can't let them die, Nancy, while there's a chance to save them. Bill," (turning to the boy who wore his jacket), "I'm going for help and it looks as if I'd have to take that coat. No, I won't need the socks" (as the little boy stooped bravely to remove them). "Tom Osgood, you keep the kiddies moving. I'm counting on you older ones to help."

"Look here," spoke up the boy suddenly, "you find a fence, Jack, and follow it if you can. Dad told me once that if ever I got caught out in a blizzard, to find a fence and just hang onto it. And if you run into a mail box you'll know a gate is somewhere near. Gosh! Jack, I—I sorter wish you wouldn't go."

Jack forced a smile.

"Now don't you worry, kid. I'll get there sure, so long as the wind stays quiet. You just help Nancy every way you can; and whatever happens, don't go to sleep. Keep thinking that by night we'll be safe home. Good—good-bye—every one."

He did not look at Nancy as he strode away. The girl knew that he did not dare to; and in another moment his tall form was blotted out. What fate would meet him, alone on those terrifying plains, she wondered, tears stinging her eyelids. And (with a clutch of fear), was the wind rising?

Time passed, interminable hours that seemed unending. The dreaded wind died down, returned, and died again, not to return. No one could say just when the blizzard ceased, for one by one the children were succumbing to the portentous drowsiness. Once Nance succumbed herself, to be aroused by the frantic, pounding fists of Tommy Osgood.

The cold was still intense when that second dusk approached the prairies; but the whimpering voices were hushed in an ominous silence. Most of the children had given up by now, completely spent with cold, and hunger, and even fright. For there had been strange happenings since Jack's departure. Twice they rejoiced at the sound of approaching horses, only to find that their ears must have deceived them. Two of the children had "seen" the schoolhouse, and, as the mirage faded, burst into tears of disappointment.

Working courageously on icy arms and legs, Nance knew, a sense of terror creeping through her, that she was giving out. Her eyelids kept closing against her will. At times it seemed impossible to drag them open. Her hand were numb; her bare legs curiously lifeless.

BRUCE—the GROWERS' BEST BET

Deciding who to vote for on October 14th is no easy matter for the Creston Valley orchardist. The fruit grower is quite firmly convinced the industry must have protection.

Protection has no place in the C. C. F. policy. The new party's slogan is produce for use only, so tariffs would be unnecessary with them.

Hon. H. H. Stevens is quite definite that existing tariffs must come down if Canadian trade is to be revived. Unfortunatley Mr. Stevens does not inform where he would make needed reductions.

Creston Valley orchardists have had experience selling their crops under Liberal rule, and are asked to compare prices received prior to 1930 (in which year the present administration came into office) with those obtained on their crop of 1931-32-33-34.

Taking it year in and year out the fruit grower has enjoyed reasonable prosperity under Liberal governments and this despite the fact that B.C. orchard districts have never had a friendly member at Ottawa while the Liberals were in power.

On October 14th Canada will elect a new government. Hope has all but vanished of Premier Bennett coming back. The C.C.F. and Social Credit parties are hopeless. Even if either elected all their candidates neither would have enongh to form a government.

As the campaign lengthens Mr. Stevens' sins are finding him out. He was a member of the Bennett cabinet from its inception in 1930 until October, 1934, and is equally responsible with other members of the cabinet for the unfortunate position in which Canada finds herself today. Mr. Stevens' betrayal, of his former associates is not proving popular with the rank and file of the Conservatives—the only quarter he can count on for support.

R. R. Bruce, the Liberal candidate, has been a resident of Kootenay East for 40 years. His prestige and experience need no emphasis. As a representative at Ottawa he will bring a wealth of experience of the type that will be necessary to assist in solving Canada's problems.

In your own best personal interests and to assure Canada stable government—

VOTE for R. R. BRUCE, Liberal Candidate
