Mr. A. B. Netherby, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, in this city, will leave on Saturday next for Nelson, B. C. to manage the branch of the above bank in that city. While Mr. Netherby's many friends will be pleased at his well merited promotion, yet they will regret his departure from among us, for he has been a very popular official and citizen since coming to this city, somewhat over two years ago. ORDERS FOR WOMEN

MANY DECORATIONS FOR MERIT ARE OPEN TO LADIES.

Most Nations Have Orders For Bestowed Upon Women Who Distinguish Themselves on the Field of Battle, in the Hospitals, For Charitable Work and For Distinguished Service of Many Kinds.

The decoration of the Royal Red Cross which King Edward recently conferred upon Queen Elena of Italy for her conduct at Messina, is one of many orders of merit that may be won and worn by women. The oldest of these is the Order of the Axe, established in the twelfth century by the last Duke of Barcelona, Ramon Berenguer. Its establishment was inspired by the devoted courage of the Spanish women in repelling the Moors, with whom the Spaniards were then engaged in a life and death struggle.

The first order in recognition of women's personal bravery on the field of battle was founded in Russia. In the battle of Pruth, when Peter the Great led the Russian army against the Turks defeat seemed almost inevitable. For long the fortunes of the Russian Empire hung in the balance, and the Emperor declared afterward that if he had not been accompanied by Catherine the entire army would have been decimated.

On the conclusion of peace Peter instituted the Order of Liberty and bestowed it upon his wife. During his lifetime it was conferred on no one else, but in 1797 Paul I. modified its character so that it might be conferred upon the higher nobility connected with the imperial house. Each member was especially charged with the care, manners and morals of a pupil in the royal household. It is now the Order of Catherine.

The most highly prized order for women in Germany is that of Louisa, established in 1815 by Frederick William III. It was to commemorate the self-sacrifice of the women of Germany during the Napoleonic campaign—which terminated at Waterloo. The women of Prussia then sold their jewels and rings to raise money for the soldiery, and many accompanied the army into the field of battle to minister to the wounded and dying.

After the Franco-Prussian war the Service Cross for Women and Girls was established, in recognition of their aid during the war.

The Legion of Honor is now the only French order left, all others having been abolished during the revolution. It was established first as the order of the Eagle by Napoleon in 1802. The first woman to wear it was Marie Jeanne Schellink. In 1792 she enlisted in the Second Belgian Battalion and went through several campaigns, in the course of which she was wounded more than once. After the battle of Austerlitz she was made a lieutenant-colonel and was decorated with the order by Napoleon himself.

Noble work in the cause of humanity entitles a woman to the Order of Bidonia, which was established in 1870 by King John of Saxony.

The Cross of Mary was founded to encourage service among the sick and wounded in time of war. The decoration is that of the Teutonic knights, and was originally limited to members of the Catholic faith, but that limitation no longer obtains.

In England there are three orders conferred on women. In 1811, when Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India, she founded the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, which may be conferred upon princesses of the royal house and wives and female relatives of Indian princes, and of the holders of high office in India, such as the viceroy and commander-in-chief, etc.

The Royal Family Order of Victoria and Albert, founded in 1893, explains itself. The third British woman's order is that of the Royal Red Cross, founded just fifty years ago as an acknowledgment of services in nursing the sick and wounded.

The Order of Merit, instituted by King Edward in 1902, is really a man's order, but it was conferred on Miss Florence Nightingale.

The Ladies' Order of St. Anne at Munich was founded by the widow of the Emperor Maximilian III. In 1783, and originally was composed of ten women who could prove sixteen generations of nobility. There are now three classes with twenty-five members in the first, forty-two in the second, and a third class to which daughters of military officers are eligible.

The order of the Starry Cross was founded by the Empress Elizabeth of Austria in 1808. After a great fire had destroyed the imperial palace there was found in the ruins a little crucifix said to contain a relic of the true cross. According to the traditions of the family, it had been seen by and protected the Emperor Maximilian in an arduous campaign against the Turks. It was preserved in a casket of crystal and enamel, and after the great fire was entirely unharmed.

Out of gratitude for this miraculous preservation, the Empress decided to commemorate the event by establishing an order for ladies. Pope Clement IX. confirmed the order and entrusted the spiritual management to the Prince Bishop of Vienna. The order is conferred only on ladies of royal blood who have done notable work for the relief of the poor and among the sick in hospitals.

Quite one of the most exclusive orders is that of Maria Louisa of Spain, the membership of which is confined to the ladies of the royal house and thirty ladies of noble lineage.

The order of Isabella of Portugal is conferred on those who do good work among the poor. On the decoration appear the words, "Pauperum solatio" or "Consolation of the Poor."

The most notable decoration of the east is the order of Nishan Shikhat, conferred by the Sultan on distinguished English women during the Russo-Turkish war.

Seattle, June 21.—An average of twenty-five thousand visitors a day have gone through the turnstiles of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition since the opening day on June first. From all parts of the West people have been flocking to the Exhibition and from present indications the stream of delighted visitors is becoming larger rather than falling off. Up to Thursday, June 17 the total attendance had reached the 400,000 mark, a number equivalent to one third of the population of the state. The side-trips around Puget Sound and Lake Washington have attracted large numbers. Every day steamers, brightly decorated and laden with pleasure-seekers, are leaving the Exposition grounds on the innumerable excursions that are offered to different parts of the lake. The Victoria trip and the excursions to the beautiful Hood's canal on Puget Sound have also attracted many.

Next week, beginning June 27th, will be a gala week at the Exposition. Practically every day during the week will be occupied by some form of entertainment for special visitors.

Thousands of people come from Skagit Valley. All of the cities in that section are arranging to have special demonstrations. Their program includes many excellent features. The visitors are planning on a banquet and many other forms of entertainment, including a visit to the Pay Streak.

On Monday, June 28, Snohomish county will take charge of the celebrations at the Exposition. The cities Everett and Snohomish are planning on sending immense delegations of pleasure seeking visitors. The transportation lines between Seattle and Snohomish county are making special arrangements to handle the crowds. The day has been officially set aside as Snohomish County Day and also Everett Day and Snohomish Day. Prepared to take the Exposition by storm, several thousand people from that county will arrive in Seattle early Monday morning. They will be reinforced by other delegations during the day Tuesday will be also a day of special note at the Exposition. It has been set aside for Moscow, Idaho. The thousands of Idahoans who are in Seattle are planning on a fitting reception for the official delegation from that city. With this delegation will also come a large number of visitors from the surrounding cities. A convention which will be one of the largest held in Seattle during the Exposition will be that of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. The delegates will be entertained in the Big Hoo building built for this purpose by the Seattle lumbermen, on Tuesday. A large delegation from Kamloops is planning to celebrate Kamloops day on Tuesday.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Foolish spending is the father of poverty. Do not be ashamed of work. Work for the best salary or wages you can get, but work for half price rather than be idle. Be your own master, and do not let society or fashion swallow you individually—hat, coat and boots. Do not eat up or wear out all you can earn. Compel your selfish body to spare something for profits saved. Be stingy in your appetite, but merciful in others' necessities. Help yourself, and ask no help for yourself. See that you are proud, too! Let that pride be of the right kind. Be too proud to be lazy; too proud to be in company that you cannot keep up with in expense; too proud to be stingy.—Videtta.

Mrs. Hudson, late of Comox, died at the Catholic hospital, Portland, Oregon, on June 19th, according to a telegram received by the Rev. H. Merrens.

For tying a tin can to a colt's tail a man in Saskatchewan was recently fined $24. For tying a stick of dynamite to a black cat's tail recently in Manitoba a "smart Aleck" got his house partly wrecked and it cost him $500 to repair it. The cat still lives.

Did you ever notice how really beautiful gum chewing makes a girl appear? Take her de facto, and gazing steadily, one can not find a more ideal picture. With a sharp click! her teeth, so white and peevy, are clashing together as, with cowish glee, she masticates her end Then, too, one can note her health tinted, well-rounded cheeks as they grow a little more rotund, through the material assistance of a big "hunk" of gum. And really, who can imagine a fairer spectacle than that of her dainty upturned nose, as it gently rises and falls in wave-like undulations over the abyssal depth revealed at each pressure against the mass? Oh, how deliciously tempting that rosebud mouth is as the maiden fills it with a soft, pliable chunk, and champing like a festive goat revelling in the luxuries of the succulent tomato can, she greets you in tones husky with gum.—Videtta
