Instantly Killed.

One Man Instantly Killed and Another Injured in Northfield Mine.

Nanaimo, Nov. 17—A sad accident occured last night in Northfield mine when Enricco Bunoffe an Indian aged 23 was killed by a fall of rock, A boy named Archibald Milligan was also injured but not seriously. Renoffe was rope rider and Milligan a winch boy and from what can be learned of the the accident it appears that he went with half a car of timber through place where roof was only three feet high consequently the men were working there and while going through on their hands and knees in the act of putting up drop one noticed a small piece of rock hanging from the roof and taking hold of a pike attempted to pull around the curve and upended the the rock. The rock again slipped and caught Benoffe penetrating his skull. Death was almost instantaneous.—This is the first fatal accident in Northfield mine.

MAGNETIC DISTURBANCES

A remarkable outbreak on the sun was observed at Oxford, Eng last Saturday. An inflame shot out at the rate of 12,000 miles a minute until it reached light of 325,000 miles at 12.10 when it broke into fragments and disappeared.

Sun spots and solar disturbances have been observed for some days past. It was predicted that that it would reach the greatest attitude about the mibdle of this month and they would probably lead to violent magnetic disturbances, however according to Prof. Pickering of Harvard observatory there is no cause for alarm.

Nanaimo, Nov. 17—The Nanaimo Vancouver Coal Mining Co. owners of the coal measures near Little Mountain which are now being developed as rapidly as possibl will make application to Council at once for use of foreshore of a portion of Newcastle towsite with permission to constuct a wharf to be used for coal shipping purposes. The Company has now two shifts at work on the property and a fine seam of coal has already been uncovered which gives promise of a bright future for the owners of the property,

The many friends of Mr. J. A. Pritchard, Courtenay, will be pleased to learn that he has recovered so far as to be able to be removed to his home at Comox

On the 18th of October while engaged as foreman for the Victoria Lumber and Manufacturing Co, at the camp at Courtenay. He had occasion to ride across the country to a neighboring ranch, and his horse being a young and spirited one was going at a rapid pace when she stumbled and fell. The horse immediately got up and turning round started off on a gallop, kicking as she went. Mr. Pritchard's right foot was fast in the stirrup but very fortunately he was conscious and immediately tried to free himself by kicking with his other foot which he finally succeeded in doing but not until he had been dragged more than 400 feet and kicked pretty badly Fortunately a neighbor drove up with a rig and took the wounded man to the camp when Dr. Millard was promptly in attendance. It was found that he had several ribs broken and had sustained rather serious injuries. On the following day he was removed to the Comox District Hospital at Cumberland where after a stay of more than three weeks under the capable treatment of Dr. Millard and the most careful nursing of Miss Mounce (matron of the hospital) and her capable staff of nurses he is now on a fair way to recovery.

Mr. Pritchard is well known along the east coast of Vancouver Island, having been engaged in the lumber business at different points all the way from Chemainus to Seymour Narrows

A speedy return to health and strength is the most sincere wish of his many friends.

NOTICE is hereby given that, 30 days after date, I intend to apply to the Hon. Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works for a license to prospect for coal and petroleum on the following described lands; Commencing at a post planted on the beach at the north-east corner of the Indian Reserve in Comox Harbour, known as Section 4, Comox District, being an Indian Reserve, containing 155 acres.

Dated the 8th day of October, 1907.

TUESDAY, NOV. 19, 1907.

At present there are those who would imbue the youthful mind with the Imperial spirit by having the Union Jack raised on the school grounds before the opening of the school each morning and then lowering it again after school is called. If raised at all why not display the flag during the full number of school hours, so as to further impress the youthful mind. But why raise the flag at all each day. It would be a duty added to the now very numerous ones of the principal of a large school, or the one teacher of a small country school, and would it really be an advantage after all? It is claimed that it would make the boys and girls respect the flag a great deal more and make more patriotic men and women than at the present time. What is the matter with the present patriotism?

There is a tendency nowadays to regard the flag as a fetich to be worship rather than an emblem to be kept worthy of respect. The raising of the flag with our cousins across the border has reared a nation of flag-worshippers, and often narrows down to the narrowness that even on national holidays no flag should fly except the Stars and Stripes in the United States. In Canada we do not want flag-worshippers; patriotic citizens will be all that is required; and if patriotism is to be taught in our schoools more thoroughly the raising and lowering of the flag each morning will not secure the desired end and teach the duty of the young citizen to the state.

Better teach the children something of "the patriotic dead"—of the King Harold, or the Nelson, or the Grace Darling, or the Laura Secord style of hero. Every child loves to be told of heroic deeds, and our history—both Canadian and English—is not wanting for heroes and heroines. Here should be the starting point rather than the hoisting of the Union Jack on the top-most pinnacle of the staff, and it will be much more successful in the teaching of patriotism; to respect the rights of others and the duties to our fellowman in the turmoil of everyday life. To build up a great nation in Canada—not a hysterical one—should be the aim of our schools.

Who are the objectionable citizens to Canada is a problem that is agitating the public mind to-day, and has floored the politicians on both sides of the house. British Columbians have given emphatic expression to opinion. The people of the prairie province say we want no more Douks While Toronto thinks that if the Salvation Army scheme is carried out it will reduce the wages of union men, but according to them the Oriental would be all right—he is required in the development of the West.

But another gentlemen—the Rev. Merton Smith, of Vancouver—has objection to another class of prospective citizen and asserts there is a well-laid plan to bring to Canada the thousands of French people who do not wish to remain in the mother country, France, after the disavowal of the Roman Catohlic church by the State. He contends that this threatens the best interests of the Dominion inasmuch as the strength of that denomination had recently increased to a remarkable extent throughout Canada.

Surely it ought to be enough to ask that Canada be whiteman's country and curtail all other objections unless it be that to keep out criminals. Allow a man to choose his religion.

Laurier is slated to visit the Pacific Coast. Oh, all ye Conservatives watch ye his smoke.

Sir Wilfred is getting more smooth and glib and if he has not kissed the Blarney stone some of his ancestors must have. Just listen. He was down in Halifax not long ago and the following is supposed to be a part of his speech from an eastern paper.

"It was quarter past ten when Sir Wilfrid rose. The Prime Minister began with pleasant admissions to Nova Scotia, which he spoke of as the banner provivce of Canada. Nova Scotia was the salt of Canada, and old Scotland was the salt of Europe. Not one Tory, he said, goes to Ottawa to mar the reputation of the province (Laughter). He used to tell Sir Charles Tupper that since the days of Athens there was never a country that, for so small a population, had produced so many famous men. In this galaxy the name of Fielding already was immortal. May Heaven be his bed, but may he long be kept out of it. (Laughter)."

Now speech like that ought to appeal to even the Conservatives and should make Sir Wilfrid's visit to the Coast where the "solid seven" reside, welcome.

It is asserted by an authority that the potato yield in the West of England will be 30 per cent at least below the average, disease being extremely prevalent in the majority of the districts.

A NEW GOLDENRULE.

Dr. Osler gives the following advice, which is the golden rule of success: "Study your fellow-man and fellow-woman and learn to manage them."

A GOOD START.

Two natives of the soil in a New England village were overheard discussing the prospects of one Jim Means, who had forsaken the factory for agricultural pursuits.

'I hear that Jim has gone to farmin',' said one of the village worthies.

'Yas, he has,' was the drawling reply, 'but he ain't went into it very steep yit He has hired a hoss for the season an' rented a keow an' borrowed a hen to put a settin' of eggs under an his folks have given him a peeg, but he ain't farmin' it on the scale I hear they do out West.'

'No,' asserted the other; 'still, he's got considerable of a start, an' ort to do well if his eggs hatch an' his peeg thrives, an' the keow is a good butter-maker ..."

get married right. I haven't any use for these impromptu weddings. "Let's go out and get an ice cream soda, and while we're about it we might as well tie up." That's the kind of stuff that fills the divorce courts and the newspapers with harrowing tales of unhappiness. Don't do that, dearie; it doesn't pay. Besides, I want to have you for my own a little longer, and when you do get married your old daddy wants to be there to be permitted to walk down the aisle of the church with you on his arm and to give you away while pride and sorrow and joy are rolling over one another in his heart. Yes, little girl, you have my consent, and may God ever bless you. Your affectionate father,

JOHN SNEED.

P. S.—I have just received a manly, sensible, modest letter from William—just the kind of letter I should want to get from my future son-in-law. It gives me the impression that his friends call him Bill, and I like that. If his name had been Reginald or Algernon I should have felt compelled to go home on the first train to look him over. J. Cutting Both Ways.

A company promoter who advertised for an office boy received a hundred replies. Out of the hundred he selected ten, who were asked to call at the office for a personal interview. His final choice fell upon a bright looking youth. "My boy," said the promoter, "I like your appearance and your manner very much. I think you may do for the place. Did you bring a character?"

"No, sir," replied the boy. "I can go home and get it."

"Very well. Come back tomorrow morning with it, an' if it is satisfactory I dare say I shall engage you."

Late that same afternoon the financier was surprised by the return of the candidate. "Well," he said cheerily, "have you got your character?"

"No," answered the boy, "but I've got yours, an' I ain't comin'!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

STARTING RIGHT.—Settling Down the Most Important Part of the Business—Happiness Is Made, Not Found. Don't Start Wrong by Making an Expensive Bridal Tour.

[Copyright, 1906, by Casper S. Yost.]

MY DEAR LITTLE GIRL,—I have just received your delightful letter telling me all about the preparations for your wedding. It carries me back to the time, some forty years ago, when your dear mother was making similar arrangements and I was doing a little stunt in the same line myself. In those days the fashions in joyous apparel for men were not so rigidly fixed as now. All your William will have to do is to raise the price. In my day it was different. To be sure, the cut of a man's coat and trousers and hat for such occasions didn't admit of much variation, but he had more latitude in the matter of color and goods, and as to waistcoasts, shirts and ties, he could go as far as he pleased without fracturing any rules bad enough to shock society. I vividly remember what a deuce of a time I had trying to decide between a bright yellow waistcoat covered with little blue flowers and a white one with black dots on it. I finally had to ask your mother's advice about it, and she favored the white one. Of course her preference settled the business, but my memory still lingers fondly on that yellow vest. I wore a ruffled shirt that it took my old colored mammy a whole day to iron and a blue necktie that made the little stars twinkle, it was so brilliant. Ah, my little girl, you can't imagine what a swell your daddy was when he was a youngster. Did I ever tell you about the time I had getting my bridal suit? I don't believe I ever did, and this is a most appropriate time to reveal to you one of the dark chapters of my life.

What a swell your daddy was.

There was only one tailor in our town, and he wasn't much of a tailor. Besides, he had a habit of looking on the wine, or its Missouri equivalent, when it was most inconvenient for his customers. His name was Johnson, but it wasn't Andy. He resembled Andy in his affection for certain brands of corn juice, but that was as far as the likeness went. Well, I had given Johnson pretty free range and oodles of time in the matter of my outfit, and I made it a point to call on him every day and give him a mild lecture on the evils of intemperance, particularly when wedding clothes were involved. I held him up pretty well, and he was getting along fine with the job until the day before the great one, when an old pal of his from Kentucky blew into town. Then Johnson fell, and so did my hopes. I was going home that night, with my feet in the tall grass and my head up in the solar system somewhere, as happy as a honeybee in June, when I met the tailor and the Kentuckian coming up the road. They were arm in arm, and the Appian way wouldn't have been wide enough for them to navigate without butting into the fences. They were vainly endeavoring to sing "We won't go home till morning," and I knew Johnson well enough to be satisfied that they wouldn't, nor the next day either, unless I got a move on myself. I changed my mind about going home. Instead I rounded up my best man elect, and together we started out on the trail. We found them still undecided as to whether the north or the south side of the road was the better for traveling, and we persuaded them to keep in the middle of it. It might shock you if I told you how we did it, but you must remember, my dear, that we were young and hot blooded and the situation warranted extreme measures. At any rate, we thought so, and we carried Johnson home on the soft side of a pine board. Lord, what a heavy man he was! My arms ache yet when I think of it. We left him to the willing and active ministrations of his wife, and before he could get out of bed the next morning we were with him again. Maybe we didn't stay with him that day, and maybe we didn't watch every stitch that his nervous fingers put into that [illegible] when he tried to break loose, but every time we forced him back to work. Even at that it was dark and one sleeve of my coat was only basted in when I rushed frantically to my room to dress. I got to your mother's home ten minutes late, and all during the ceremony I was in mortal terror of that coat sleeve [illegible] out.

Vanconver, Nov. 16—Tracked into his night's camp in the bush two members of the police posse which far weeks have been pressing him over snow capped hills north of Kamloops Harry Stout a murderer made a desperate effort to escape. He fired point blank at one of the two policemen who had tracked him and the second officer pulled his trigger so quickly that the two reports came almost together. The desperado was instantly killed, and the policeman escaped unhurt.

The tragedy of last night marked the end of a man hunt that stirred the north country as did the Tracey case in Washington.

Stout was wanted for the killing of Robert Williams the owner of a series of trading posts in Cariboo and the Big Bend country.

Stout had tried to escape from the district with two stolen horses and Williams had sought to arrest him. Williams was shot in cold blood. The whole country was aroused, and constable Fernie was sent out from Kamloops at the head of a police posse with the above result.

Cumberland, B. C. Nov 16.

To Editor of Cumberland NEWS.

Sir.-

Allow me space in your paper to ask a question to satisfy myself as a loyal Canadian subject and a citizen of Cumberland to satisfy my curosity and that of several others. Now that it has been thorongly discussed and almost finally decided that the Union Jack should be displayed above the Schools in British Columbia, why does not our local school fall in line and raise the flag. I believe there is a flag belonging to the school.

Thanking you for the space,

Yours truly,

A Citizen.
