Presbyterian Concert.

The large audience which greeted the performance given by the Presbyterian Church last Thursday night was in no wise disappointed, for the program was an excellent one. A very pleasing prelude to the entertainment were the two films very kindly ran off by Manager McNeill of the moving picure show, "The Quarryman," and "Rubber Heels,"

Rev D McGillivray at the close of a few brief opening remarks, called upon the following: The Misses Frame, instrumental duet, which elicited a most hearty encore. Mr Pearson sang 'Anchored' and for encore, 'Soldier's Dream.' Mr Stenhouse recited 'The Miner's Revenge,' and for encore 'Bowl About.' Miss Hunden sang 'The songs my mother used to sin,' very sweetly. Mr Barron delighted the audience with his well chosen violin selections. Mr Pearson again favored with a vocal solo which brought the first part of the programme to a close.

The second part consisted of the three-act farce entitled "Dutch Jake" which caused much amusement from start to finish, the characters being well sustained.

The entire entainment was a decided success and netted a nice little sum towards the manse fund.

It looks as if the coming municipal contest will be the most interesting one in the history of the city. We need some life and interest infused into them.

The following Pictures will be shown at Cumberland Hall, this week:—"The Price of Fame," "The Cloisters Touch," "The Countess Revenge" "In the Serpents Power" "Fruit Growing Irrigation Scene" "Mountain Blizzard." Manager McNeil of the moving picture show, has made arrangements with Essany Film Company, for the Baseball Championship Series—Philadelphia Americans vs Chicago Nationals. This wonderful Extra, is but a short time released, and will be shown here in the near future The Essany Film Company have exclusive right in Canada.

Family Cured of Eczema

By Cuticura Remedies

"The Cuticura treatment has absolutely cured me and family of eczema which I, my wife and two-year-old child had for eight months. It started with small pimples on the head of my child which gradually broke out in sores, and it was not long before I and my wife got the same. Our heads were one mass of sores, we could not sleep and the itching was terrible. We suffered for eight months. We tried different kinds of ointments and medicine but it did us no good and soon it began to break out on our bodies until a friend who had the same trouble told me about Cuticura of which I used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent, and I was surprised. After the first few days our heads began to heal and in two months we were absolutely cured of this terrible eczema."

(Signed) EUGENE POTTHOFF,

No stronger evidence than this could be given of the success and economy of the Cuticura Remedies in the treatment of torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp, of infants, children and adults. THE HOPE OF RECIPROCITY.

The following editorial is taken from the Calgary Optimist. It is characteristic of the expressions of The Optimist on the lines of aid for the Western agricultural interests. The Optimist, although a young paper, has made a reputation for straightforward, plain speech in behalf of the interests upon which, more than all other, the prosperity of the West depends. It is a powerful journal, and in the solution of political and economic problems is coming to be a factor of no uncertain influence:

THE HOPE OF RECIPROCITY

THE time is approaching when negotiations between Canada and the United States will be begun looking toward reciprocity. It will be a great day for Canada if the negotiations succeed. It may not be so great a day for Eastern Canada, which hopes to manufacture untold millions for the West, but the Western man who expects to buy the goods, can see nothing but cheaper agricultural implements as a benefit of reciprocity, reduced tariff, free trade, or whatever it is that results from the negotiations. The duty on machinery runs from 18 per cent. upward. For many classes of machinery it is as high as 33 per cent. Take an engine outfit for which you have to pay $4,400, practically one-third of the amount is tariff, paid supposedly on behalf of the Eastern manufacturer to "protect" his business. By what law of God or man can such a hold-up of one end of the country for the benefit of the other be justified? Canada never was anything until the Western wheat fields began to bloom. Although of the same age as the United States, its total population was not equal to the one city of New York. But then the West was discovered and an era of growth and expansion began. Thousands by thousands the farmers flocked into the West and Canada came to be recognized as the greatest daughter of the Empire. Canada's greatness is in the West. That West is and for years to come will be agricultural. Under the existing system, regardless of whether the manufactured articles comes from Eastern Canada or the States, its price is increased by from 20 to 35 per cent. on account of the tariff. When you come to figure the grand totals, this condition means that every year of the years to come Alberta will pay for the "protection" of Eastern manufacturers, enough to build a pork packing plant, or within a few years, to own the elevators. Of course this is good business for Eastern Canada, but it is directly at the expense of the West, and the benefits resulting in the way of a home market and the like, will not be compensation enough.

What Alberta wants today and for years to come, is cheap manufactured goods and more people. Reciprocity will bring them. Reduced tariff will bring them. Then we want reciprocity or reduced tariff. When we get the population you can depend upon it that we will get the factories, tariff or no tariff. And, tariff or no tariff, we will not get the factories until we do have the population. And all the people in all the mills in all Canada will never provide an adequate home market for the wheat that even Alberta can grow.

The farmers want cheaper machines, and any political party that does not supply that want is going to find itself down and out. It is not a question of politics, but a question of business. The high tariff so far is merely an exemplification of the law of the survival of the strongest. The manufacturers have been keener at manipulation, and the farmers, the consumer of the West, whether farmer or what, has not bothered. To date we have not been strong enough to bother, but the Premier felt our strength this summer, and from this year the fight will be for reduction. If the East will not grant it, then the West will take the question from them and along with it, the control of the affairs of this great Dominion.

Canada cannot afford to overlook an opportunity to remove a stone from the path of its developers; and the man who develops the land is of far greater value than the one who builds a mill.

PRIMATE OF ENGLAND.

Dr. Lang Is the Youngest Archbishop Since the Middle Ages.

Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York and Primate of England, is not only the youngest archbishop in Great Britain, but the youngest who has been raised to that dignity in that country since the Middle Ages. He is the son of Principal Lang, of Aberdeen University, who has acted with distinction as moderator of the Church of Scotland and as president of the Council of Presbyterian Churches. The son left Scotland, however, to enter Balliol College at Oxford, where he soon became noted as an athlete, being specially devoted to football. In his studies his interest in sociology and economics naturally led him into the debating field, and he won the honor of being elected president of the renowned Oxford Union, that training ground of so many great Parliamentary leaders. This position may well have been the turning point in his career, for later he was appointed secretary of a committee to investigate social conditions in London's East End.

What he learned by actual observation, combined with his academic interest in social questions, caused him to resolve upon a political career as the most effective way of bringing about the changes he thought were necessary. Soon after leaving Oxford he found that his income could not stand the strain of politics, so he turned to the law and entered the Inner Temple, London, although during the years of his reading there he found time to work for improvement in slum life. His friends naturally enough predicted a brilliant and useful career for him as a barrister, but after he had passed all his examinations he withdrew his name from the list of those to be called to the Bar. He had arrived at a final decision as to his life work and had chosen the ministry.

He soon received an opportunity to put into practice his plans for the betterment of the poor, for he was given charge of the large church at Portsea near Portsmouth, where he found plenty of work for a dozen curates as well as himself in social service. Merited recognition of his labors came eight years ago, when he was appointed Bishop of Stepney, a district in London including many of the poorest quarters, where as a young student he had first become interested in the social problem.

From this squalid and rocky vineyard he was promoted to the archbishopric of York, where he draws a salary of $50,000 a year.

The Granary of the World.

We have so long been accustomed to call the northwestern States the "granary of the world" that it comes as a surprise to be told that that title is soon to pass to the wheat-[illegible] Such is the confident assertion of many prominent Canadians, and if figures afford any proof they have ample reason for so saying. Canada has 25,000,000 acres upon which wheat may be grown, or five times the wheat land now cultivated in the United States; her crop amounts to [illegible] per acre, far in advance of our average, 13 bushels; our growing population will eventually consume all the wheat we can raise, and it is not unlikely that we shall have to call on Canada for supplies.

Punished

Jones saw Tomkins coming towards him, and he noticed that his countenance looked as though it had been through a very bad time indeed.

"I say, old chap," he said with alarm, "Whatever is the matter with your face?"

"Well, replied Tomkins, "I was walking down the street yesterday, reading a letter—foolish thing to do, of course—but I was punished for it. A workman coming the opposite way lurched up against me, hit me in the mouth with a pickaxe, and knocked a tooth out!"

"Oh! that was quite a dental operation, wasn't it?" commented Jones, who must have his little joke.

"Well, no! He said it was an exe-i-dental operation!"

"Oh, that's too thin!"

"Not exactly, it was tooth out!"

DEATH AFTER A SCRATCH.

Morris Quatzam, an eleven year-old Windsor boy, fell off his bicycle and scratched his wrist. He thought nothing of the injury, but blood poison set in and he is dead.

Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breach in the skin, a battle royal ensues between them and certain organisms in our blood.

The way to avoid serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful, yet painless germ-killer and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

As soon as applied to a sore or a cut Zam-Buk stops the pain and smarting. That is why it is so popular with children.

The flesh thus soothed and purified, the wound is made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore, and new healthy tissue is built up in a quick, painless and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing antiseptic, soothing and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. It is not only a unique healing balm, but it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns, eczema, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Harmful imitations should be always refused.

A gentleman living in the country once kept a dog which showed a too pronounced tendency to embed its teeth into other people's property—personal or otherwise—and therefore [illegible] walking up the drive one morning he had a shrewd inkling his pet terrier must have been misbehaving himself, for on ordinary occasions he and his neighbor were not on speaking terms.

"I have called to see you about your dog," said the neighbor on being shown into the [illegible] "he has bitten my mother-in-law severely in the leg."

"Very sorry, I'm sure," replied the dog's owner; "but I really can't see how I'm to blame—you'd better sue me."

"Sue you! What on earth for?" said the visitor, hurriedly. "I want to buy your dog."

"Why did Cashier De Frye turn so pale when he tipped the waiter?"

"He recognized him as one of the bank's big depositors."

Must Use Better Tobacco

Mrs. Newrich—Suzanne, tell Robert, the butler, that if he must smoke in the kitchen he must use better tobacco.

Suzanne—I did tell him, but he sez they're the best cigars master has.

Mr. R.—"There, I've let my cigar go out. Do you know that it spoils a cigar, no matter how good it is, if you allow it to go out."

Mrs. B.—"Yes, a cigar is a good deal like a man in that respect."

Shiloh's Cure
quickly stops coughs, cures colds, heals the throat and lungs. . . . 25 cents.

Sissy Down—I don't fancy that young Spriggs. He is absolutely colorless.

Irene Bow—But they say he knows how to paint the town red.

"What's that noise?"

"Why, that's something taken from Wagner."

"Well, Wagner seems to be giving it up mighty hard."

Hope for the Chronic Dyspeptic.—Through lack of consideration of the body's needs many persons allow disorders of the digestive apparatus to endure until they become chronic, filling days and nights with suffering. To these a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended as a sure and speedy way to regain health. These pills are specially compounded to combat dyspepsia and the many ills that follow in its train and they are successful always.

A little boy, one day at dinner, gazed at his father's face a long while, and then said:—

"Papa, what makes your nose so dreadful red?"

"The east wind, of course," the father answered, with gruff haste. "Pass that Jug of beer, and don't talk so much."

Then, from the other end of the table, the boy's mother said, sweetly:—

"Yes, Tommy, pass your father the east wind, and be careful not to spill any on the table cloth."

The Bright Side

"What do you think of the two candidates?" asked one elector of another.

"What do I think of them?" was the reply.

"Well, when I look at them I'm thankful only one of them can get in."

Among the late Bishop Foss's anecdotes about prayer there was one concerning a very original Norristown preacher.

This preacher in the course of a long prayer one Sunday night, recounted the many misfortunes and evils that had befallen him in the course of his long life. Then, sighing heavily, he prayed:—

"Thou hast tried me with affliction, with bereavement, and with sorrow of many kinds. If thou art obliged to try me again, Lord, try me with the burden of wealth."

Unexpected Gifts

Mrs. Newhouse was patiently instructing her maid of all work as to the proper names of certain articles.

"And Bridget," she said at one time, "these are ewers—ewers—don't call them jugs any more."

"Sure, an' I won't ma'am," said Bridget, joyously. "An' is all them little basins mine, too, ma'am?"—Youth's Companion.

SCHOOL FROCKS FOR YOUNG GIRLS

SEPTEMBER spells school to children who are anxious to return, and suggests fall sewing to the mothers who are aware that a well-planned outfit will carry the youngsters through the "dear old golden rule days" with ease and attractive appearance.

You will notice that the simplicity that should characterize children's dresses is evident in these practical models from Paris. As for the materials, serge and linen are washable and good looking, and form good backgrounds upon which the suggestion of trimming is placed. Checked and striped fabrics rival the plain colors, and the introduction of washable guimpes and undersleeves gives promise of freshness. Blue serge is shown on the first little girl. The bodice and skirt are comparatively plain, the entire effect depending upon the straps that are stitched on the skirt in horizontal bands and used to outline the top of the modified yoke line.

Tiny gilt buttons are used, while the soutache effectively simulates buttonholes on cuffs and bodice, and crosses on the belt to suggest a buckle. Slightly full sleeves of figured swiss are gathered into cuffs. The guimpe is separate.

Coarse blue basket weave cheviot is the next frock for the smaller girl. A broad panel effect is shown in front; the side pieces are extended into bell-shaped sleeves, while through slots at each side of the front a scarlet belt is run. This echoes the color note of the trimming, for scarlet linen is used for the circular band at the top and as a finish for the sleeves. On this are huge conventional roses in different shades of blue soutache, with a sprinkling of hand embroidery done in linen thread.

In the 14-year-old model you will see striped material used effectively in combination with coarse linen. The bodice is made of two widths of material joined in the center, for allowance must be made for the sleeves. Notice the modified lower line, edged with braid. The square yoke is decorated with black velvet and buttons, and the sailor collar turns back from each side, and gives a square of white linen as relief to the black and white costume. Tucked sheer linen forms the yoke and undersleeves. Braid is used on the skirt to repeat the line of the sleeves. This, by the way, is always an excellent plan for trimming any dress.

Silver buttons trim the dark olive green frock of the central figure. A double line on the front pleat and at the front of the deep hem effect give an effective decoration. Six of the dull silver buttons outline the sleeve. The tucked yoke and sleeves are of batiste, and a band of Japanese embroidery outlines the top, showing variations of the green colors with a touch of old gold.

With a lace-trimmed blouse the next model, which suggests the Russian, is worn. Bands of the same material outline the yoke line, the armholes and the divided peplum. A hint of the military is given by the ornament of embroidery and cord at the front. With this is worn a leather belt. In reality, it is almost a coat suit, giving warmth for cool autumn days, yet the completeness of a dress.

Stripes, the latest cry from Paris, are shown on the little frock that depends on the directions of the lines for ornamentation, for simplicity characterizes the practical, copyable model. Two bands of stripes outline a front panel and suggest a square neck. The cuffs of the three-quarter sleeves are edged with the same width of serge. Embroidery forms the guimpe.

Last of all, a dark-colored wool crepon with bands of embroidery on skirt and sleeves and a modified round yoke held in place by buttons and braid. A little frill of lace gives a touch of white at the top. The guimpe is of tucked linen, quite sheer. In this frock the skirt is pleated and the waist line concealed by the leather belt that must be considered a necessity in a little girl's outfit.

Here is a variety of practical suggestions that mothers surely ought to follow and daughters should be proud to exploit. So follow the lead, and send the young girls to school along an attractive modistic way.

Jeanne Hyon—Paris

A DRESS FORM MADE UP AT HOME

THE girl who makes her own clothes is ever in a state of utter despair when it comes to getting them fitted properly. Now, much has been written and said about fixing up dress forms, but not enough.

To begin with, take your hip and bust measurements. Then buy a form, which costs about 50 or 60 cents. This you want more for a foundation than for its shape in itself; for, candidly, their shape is their own and no more like that of a mortal being than man is like the moon. In buying, get according to hip measure; and do not buy one the hip measure of which is larger than your own, unless it is the smallest size made, getting from one-half inch to one inch smaller. Always bear in mind that you can fill out easier than you can cut out.

In taking your hip measure, draw the tape around the very largest part of your body, which should be from ten to twelve inches below the waist line, or about where the placket would end.

Now have a tight-fitted basque lining made; don't mind how many seams it has, and see that it fits you just so from your neck down to the point above mentioned. Carry the shoulder line out to the very edge of the arm, and, if possible, have it made over a new corset and fitted over as few clothes as possible in the way of underskirts, etc.

After you have your basque fitted and the seams sewed up with a very small machine stitch, proceed to fit it over your form. Nine cases out of ten it will be a far fit, but that doesn't matter. By the time you have finished filling in you are liable to find that the neck line of your new form will be about two inches above that of the foundation form, and the same way with the waist line. In adjusting this lining, use the bust line of the form as a guide. Buy about two rolls of padding cotton, which costs about 5 cents a roll. You may not need that much; you may need more. Now commence to fill in, not in big pieces, but in little bits, so that your lines will be smooth, packing in firmly but not too tightly. Take particular note of any peculiarities you may have, one shoulder higher than the other, or one hip, or maybe one side of the bust needs a little more attention than the other. It is all a question of judgment. Be careful to fill in under the arms, across the back, both at the shoulders and at the waist line. After you have finished and fastened up the front (sewing this with small stitches by hand) take measurements of your new form and compare with your own. If you find it in any way smaller, open up the front and fill in a little more. In this case, better to have it a quarter inch too large than a quarter inch too small.

Next, have it mounted on a stand, getting a carpenter to do the job, unless you have some one around the house who could do it for you. A stand on the order of those used to hold up chewing-gum cases is about what you need, having the cross pieces at the base a trifle smaller. Let the stand be big enough that the completed form will be your own height. A form of this kind you will find of benefit too great to be expressed in words, not only for fitting, but for draping and designing waists.

Now for the girl whose hip measure runs smaller than the smallest form sold; the writer will tell what she did with one for herself. It was about an inch too large, and when it came to fitting skirts, was absolutely no good. The largest bumps seemed to come on the side; so with a saw I cut out a long V-shaped piece, about a half inch at the bottom and tapering up to about four inches. A piece like this was cut from each side. As these forms are made of pressed paper, it was hard to fix on how to fasten the parts together, so I took three pieces of narrow tape, about four or five inches long, and with pins pulled the parts together and pinned the tapes over, running the pins toward the cut, right into the form. Now, if you should be rather flat in the back and large at the side, the same method might be tried in the back, only be careful how you cut, measuring carefully before. When you fit your lining, you could fill out any little cavities that might arise from the cutting.

In fastening the lining around the bottom, use pins, as the paper is too soft to take tacks, and it would be an utter impossibility to sew.

Use a very good, closely woven lining material for your basque.

To those who must cut the form to meet measurements, great care must be taken when the form is being adjusted to the stand that the severed parts are not pulled apart.

Long Coats

A NOTABLE innovation this summer is the light, long coat for evening wear chiefly, but seen frequently in walking and driving styles. The principal materials are foulard, pongee and tussah, with a sprinkling of linen and very lightweight cloths.

These coats are cut straight, without any curve at the waist. They fit tightly about the shoulders, however, and do not give at all a kimono effect. They are narrow about the bottom, having no [illegible] into a strap or a wide band, or the coat is cut at the knees and a straight flounce added.

Many of them have square or round sailor collars, some of them long enough to reach the waist line. Some of them have very long revers also, but the [illegible] of course, showing the vest of the bodice.

Sleeves are very loose, especially for evening wear. Usually they have deep turnback cuffs in a material and color to match the collar and revers.

New Combinations

THE latest in color combinations is a dark red and a rather bright blue combined so as to give the effect of the mottled purple. This is very smart indeed, but be careful not to trim with either of these colors; black is the best, or some neutral shade.

An English Boudoir Cap

THE so-called English breakfast cap is in reality a boudoir cap. We, in this country, know very little of this pretty article belonging to the well-dressed Englishwoman; to the best-dressed Englishwoman, let us say, for it is well known now to copy of this little headpiece and how to wear it with its most appropriate setting.

The breakfast cap is by no means a dress affair, but merely regarded by the English—as is the matinee by the French—as a thing not to wear in public. They belong in the boudoir, in milady's own apartment, where she probably is breakfasting.

The well-dressed and petted woman is the same the world over, and it is an evidence of her special care that she chooses to cover her head during this leisurely breakfast.

Her gown is cataloged as "night dress," but its beauty of material and something in its cut and general manufacture place it in a class between the American lingerie dress and the French woman's negligee.

A close little model for the boudoir cap is shown in one of the pictures. A characteristic frill makes a becoming frame for the face, while the back is a mere puff of allover and valenciennes lace.

CHAPTER V.

A YEAR passed since the eventful night for Wheeler Brand when Nolan made him managing editor of the Advance. In these months Brand made a showing with the paper that was never dreamed of by the owners preceding as being within the range of possibility. Made absolute master of the paper and consequently dictator of its policy, the young man set a pace that the paper's rivals found difficult to equal, much less to outstrip. His exposure of the scandals in the exclusive world of high life insurance finance has thus far proved the most vital reform of his administration. As a result of this crusade, which drove a half dozen leading officials from almost as many companies, the president of the United States stated publicly that "the vast life insurance business of this country is now on the soundest financial basis it has ever had."

But Wheeler Brand in the press of stirring events had not forgotten Judge Barteimy. In fact, certain activities of that estimable individual were just now under close scrutiny by the one time reporter, who, if he could be prevailed on to speak concerning it, might possibly observe that the judge was very soon to have an opportunity to make a few explanations which would be received with undoubted interest by the public. The young editor's suit for the hand of Judith Barteimy might be said, since we are dealing with a judge's family, to be in statu quo. She was still waiting for him "to become sane," as she had expressed herself to him. A girl of lofty principles and of decided strength of character, she could not see his duty from his viewpoint. Perhaps it was all quite natural, quite womanly, quite daughterly, that she should subscribe absolutely to her father's side in the momentous case of "JUDGE BARTELMY VERSUS THE PEOPLE, WHEELER BRAND AND THE ADVANCE."

She was loyal to her father, and she was trying to be loyal to her lover, and the task was becoming more and more difficult. Yet she waited, and Wheeler Brand waited, and each prayed that the other would end the ordeal and heal two breaking hearts.

Today we find Wheeler Brand proceeding toward the luxurious Nolan home on a fashionable residential thoroughfare to visit the proprietor of the paper to hand him a statement of the Advance's progress, to discuss matters of editorial policy and to confer regarding a certain development concerning Judge Barteimy.

At the Nolan home a reception had been announced, hundreds of invitations sent out, but the responses did not encourage Mrs. Nolan in her social aspirations. Society passed her by. That was the whole story in brief. Society, as usual, was ever so much pleased with itself and was too busy to include Mrs. Nolan, Phyllis and Sylvester in its diversions. The husband and father cared very little for society, had no time for it, but he fondly loved the courageous, warm hearted woman who had uncomplainingly shared with him the onerous hardships of his early days, and it was his desire to gratify her ambitions as well as those of his daughter. The fortune he had plucked from Nevada's flinty bosom enabled him to be generous, and he smiled approvingly on every new extravagance of Mrs. Michael Nolan. Therefore if she was socially ambitious she must have her way and be allowed to carry on her campaign for recognition in whatever fashion she chose. Certainly the home he had established was a fitting vantage ground from which to wage a war of dollars against the precipitous entanglements with which the city's Four Hundred had encircled its camp. Palatial in size, the Nolan residence was equally palatial in its furnishings, and only the magic word [illegible] of a single member of the magic realm of "the aristocracy" was necessary to send monogrammed cotelles in long lines to the Nolan doors, to fill the costly rooms with distinguished faces, to fill to overflowing with happiness the yearning heart of [illegible]

But the word had not yet been spoken.

It was now late in the afternoon at the Nolan home. Phyllis walked across the drawing room, irritation plainly marking her pretty pink and white face. The music of a string orchestra stationed in the conservatory ceased. She addressed a servant who stood at attention at a door at the right which led to the dining room.

"Fitcher," she said discouragedly, "I don't think any one else will come, so tell the musicians they can go."

"Yes, Miss Phyllis."

At this point Mrs. Nolan came storming in, carrying a huge bunch of hothouse grapes in her hand.

"Fitcher, I noticed those caterer men are drinking all the champagne, and I want it stopped," she ordered loudly.

Fitcher bowed and went out.

"If our guests won't come here to drink it, at least we will drink it ourselves," Mrs. Nolan announced to Phyllis. "Well, we have done it—sent out 400 cards, and who's been here that anybody wants to see? This is the second time we've gone to all this trouble and expense for nothing and nobody, and if you'll take my advice it will be the last."

"Mamma, Fitcher will hear," the girl protested.

The mother bit a grape from the bunch. She deposited the skin and stones in a Sevres vase on the marble mantel.

"Phyllis, what did you have to pay that musician?" she asked.

"Well, his price is a thousand dollars."

"Good gracious!"

"But I got him for $750. I promised the Advance would help him."

"Seven fifty for playing twice. I'd rather hear the band." Mrs. Nolan bit off another grape.

"You don't understand, mamma. Everybody's wild over that violinist."

"It seems there wasn't nobody wild enough to come here."

"There wasn't 'anybody,'" spoke Phyllis, correcting her mother.

"Well, was there?" retorted the mother as she dropped the grape skin in another vase.

"Oh, dear," Phyllis wailed disconsolately as she seated herself before a small stand, "don't rub it in, mamma! I can't help it."

"Now, who's blaming you, child?" consoled the mother. "There, don't cry. I'm not so disappointed about myself, but I can't bear to see you snubbed right and left. You are good enough to go with any of these people, and you shall too. It's that newspaper that's at the bottom of it. People won't have it, or us because of it, and I mean to tell your father so too. And that's why these 'at homes' is no good."

"Are no good, mamma," tearfully.

"Well, are they? It would have been better to put your $750 into suffragetting. That's what gets you in with the right people not that I care to vote, but I don't want the men to say I can't."

Sylvester Dolan interrupted the conversation between mother and daughter by appearing before them with his bosom friend, Max Powell, who believed himself to have the makings of a master poet. It was with deepest pride that the Nolan son presented Powell, long haired, sallow faced and seedily dressed, to his mother and sister. Sallow faced? Indeed, his countenance had that sickly greenish yellow hue that comes from long devouring of the muses and long abstinence from the devouring of food.

"Nobody was wild enough to come here."

"Hello, mamma!" he cried enthusiastically. "Here's a friend of mine I want you to know—Mr. Powell, the poet."

"How do you do, Mr. Powell? You look as if it would be easy for you to write poetry. Do you know, poetry just sets me wild!"

Sylvester patted Powell on the back. "Well, this lad's going to make a big noise in poetry some day, Phyllis, you must have heard of Powell. My sister, old man!"

"Won't you have a cup of tea, Mr. Powell?" invited Mrs. Nolan, visibly impressed by the presence of a poet at her home.

Powell started confusedly to utter his thanks. He did not seem overdelighted at the offer.

Sylvester saw the difficulty. "Tea," he exclaimed. "Absurd for Powell!"

Mrs. Nolan expressed her regret at not having any absinth and left the room, followed by Phyllis, to arrange for something for Powell to eat. "Poor fellow! He looks hungry," she whispered to Phyllis.

Sylvester caught the poet by the arm.

"One minute, Powow," he cautioned. "Be sure you don't mention anything to the folks about my little actress friend. I don't want them to know that I am going to take a crack at uplifting the stage. The little girl will be all right. She'll just [illegible] your libretto hum. She'll fill it with personality. Build up all those weak places. You know, Powow, there are some. Where's that poem for her? Finished yet?"

"Yes, it's here somewhere," fumbling in a pocket.

"Have you made it amorous for the little girl?"

"Judge for yourself. Of course I tried to write in your vein as well as I could, so that there would be no doubt to the authorship."

Sylvester read the lines:

Oh, Guenevere, how sweet my dear!
My spirit soars in dreams denied,
Worlds beyond worlds with thee, my bride—

"I don't like that much," he announced when he had finished. "Bride! Is it necessary to put that in writing? Besides, it don't sound as if I wrote it. Now, does it, Powow, old chap? Fess up."

"I hope it doesn't sound as if I wrote it."

"I thought you'd see it. Now, change that and it's a knockout drop. Can't you change it now? And I'll send it to the little girl tonight on a bed of orchids. Make it something beginning with 'ruby lips'—you know the sort of guff—and then here and there 'eyes like night, full of delight,' something on that order."

"Ruby, ruby—rougey lips!"

Powell sat and wrote for a few minutes. "Here," he finally said. Sylvester glanced over the shoulder of the rising young genius, who read aloud these inspiring words:

So bright and beaming are thine eyes
The very stars twink in surprise.
Thy hair so like the dusky night,
Thy kiss so vibrant with delight,
I thrill unto my finger tips,
Oh, ruby, ruby—rougey lips!

Powell literally writhed in agony as he listened to the doggerel.

"It's great!" cried Sylvester ecstatically. "And now come get your tea. Gee, I'd like to take a crack at being a poet!"

The two conspirators hurried into the dining room as Wheeler Brand and the owner of the Advance came into the drawing room.

"You're right, Wheeler; you're right," Nolan was saying. "This is a better showing than I hoped for. Look in your stocking next Christmas. There'll be something for you. When I got into the newspaper business, Brand, they told me it was the beginning of my finish, that it sucked ten fortunes down for every one it built and no middle aged man ever went into it and came out again without teeth marks all over him. But look at that." He held up a typewritten statement. "I'm richer for going in twice as much advertising as last year at this time."

Nolan seated himself on a settee.

"The big advertisers never pull their ads. so long as they are getting returns from them," put in Brand. "Look at Dupuy. Remember how he threatened us and how his clients took their ads. out for two months?"

"Yes, but they put them back again."

"Why? Because they [illegible] more than we need them," Brand [illegible]

"Well, he's got something up his sleeve now," remarked Nolan. "He telephoned that he would come to see me this afternoon."

"Are you going to see him?" Brand asked curiously.

"I thought I might as well. He'll be here. Maybe he wants to fire you again." The newspaper owner looked up at Brand and laughed heartily.

LONDON'S OIL FAKE.

Petroleum So Universally Evident Had Not Come From Ground.

There is still surviving in London, Ont., a gentleman who recalls a great oil fake that carried the western city by storm many years ago. He is Mr. James Egan, a prominent citizen, who is eighty-two years old.

"It was one of the most curious experiences that London ever had," says Mr. Egan. "The report went out that oil had been discovered nearly opposite Woodland cemetery. It seemed as if the whole of London was down there the first Sunday afternoon after the story got out. In holes in the ground there seemed to be no doubt that there was oil. People soaked their handkerchiefs in it and took them home that way as souvenirs. Champagne suppers and other celebrations helped the enthusiasm, and then the whole thing was shown up as a straight fake. It was a swindle, though it didn't get far enough for anybody to be seriously bitten. Some Yankees had come over, bored holes, loaded them with petroleum and waited for results. Happily for London, the results didn't materialize as they had hoped for. Or really, however, was extensive boring for oil, the outcome of which was to strike some sulphur wells, including the wells at the foot of Dundas street, and others on Adelaide street and in Petersville, now [illegible] The big swindle however, was most elaborate in its plans. Geologists were brought here to lecture who declared that London was situated over a regular basin of oil and that boring almost anywhere would reach it. Fakes were not so common then, as nowadays, and that will explain the degree to which the thing was carried before exposure came. I remember well the first time I ever saw petroleum used for lighting. It had been candle exclusively before that. At first people were afraid of the new kind of illuminating and, of course, it was not as safe as at present. One good result of the oil fever, however, was the opening up of the refineries here so industry which developed rapidly and for a good many years meant much to London. It is a great pity that those oil refineries ever left here."

THEATRICAL NEWS

Of Interest to People of the Canadian Northwest—Attractions to Appear in Winnipeg.

As Winnipeg is the big city of Western Canada, towards which all eyes are turned in matters of business and amusement, quite naturally as the theatre season opens the people of nearby cities and towns who visit the western metropolis frequently during the winter months read with interest what the managers of the Walker theatre, the Winnipeg, the Dominion, and other playhouses there are offering lovers of the drama, music and such forms of public entertainment.

To Manager C. P. Walker, who has now both the Walker theatre and the Winnipeg theatre under his direction, theatregoers give first attention, because he is the representative theatrical man of the Canadian Northwest. Much has been in the papers during the past summer of his connection with the National Theatre Owners' Association, which was formed in June, and which has so materially changed the situation in theatrical affairs since its formation. Previous to last June, and for some fifteen years past, Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger, theatrical booking agents, have practically ruled the theatre business of the United States and Canada, and although they were the agents of the various theatre owners and managers, they in reality got the business so under their control that they dictated terms and conditions to such an extent that not only the house managers suffered, but the theatregoing people as well, because the latter were not given the opportunity to see the foremost stars, plays and productions of England and America. Now, however, all that is changed. The theatre managers and owners have their bookings into their own hands and have opened their doors to any and all attractions, with the result in Manager's Walker's case, and all others, big stars and companies who have never before played smaller cities than New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, etc., have been induced to so arrange their routes as to include Winnipeg and similar cities.

Manager Walker is well satisfied with the situation and feels that now he can operate his two handsome theatres to the satisfaction of his patrons. The Walker Theatre he will devote permanently to high-class vaudeville, and because of the very great seating capacity of the house he will be able to provide expensive vaudeville programmes for lovers of that popular form of entertainment at just the same price formerly charged at the Dominion Theatre, when that house (which is now given over to a dramatic stock company) offered vaudeville. While in New York recently Mr. Walker arranged with William Morris, the noted International vaudeville manager to personally arrange the weekly change of bill for the Walker Theatre, and this in itself is a guarantee of superior quality and quantity of high-class vaudeville.

The Winnipeg theatre, which has been remodelled and is now a ground-floor house, with a large balcony and a separated gallery, being much more commodious and comfortable than formerly, Mr. Walker will devote to the big stars and productions of drama, musical comedy, extravaganza, etc. During the summer Mr. Walker has had the Winnipeg theatre redecorated and a new ventilating system installed.

Margaret Anglin, the noted Canadian emotional actress, very fittingly opened this, Manager Walker's fourteenth season of catering to the Winnipeg public with the performance of her new play, "The superb actress was followed by Mr. John Mason in Augustus Thomas' play, "The Witching House." Mr. Mason is one of the foremost actors on the American stage and Mr. Thomas' play was a great success. Then came Viola Allen in "The White Sister." Miss Allen's pictures have adorned the pages of many of the widely read magazines, just as Marion Crawford's story also found its way to the reading public through similar medium. Miss Allen is one of America's most brilliant emotional actresses and her company includes such eminent players as James O'Neill, Minna Gale and Henry Stanford. "The White Sister" was a beautiful production, under the management of Liebler & Company.

It will readily be seen that the theatrical season in Winnipeg started off with a boom with three such superb attractions and a little idea of there to follow as Winnipeg will undoubtedly be of interest to our readers, therefore we herewith give the list of bookings for the Winnipeg theatre recently announced by Manager Walker:

The Shuberts, who sent John Mason in "The Witching Hour," will send the following stars and companies: Mary Mannering in "A Man's Word"—first time in Western Canada; Maxine Elliott in last season's success, "The Inferior Sex," first appearance in Winnipeg; "Lulu's Husbands," the funny farce which ran all summer at Maxine Elliott's theatre, New York, Mabel Barrison and Harry Connor as stars; Louise Gunning in "Marcelle"; Eddie Foy and Edwin Carus in "Up and Down Broadway," which ran at the New York Casino all summer; all-star production of the "Mikado"; E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in Shakespearean repertoire, first time in Winnipeg; Bertha Kalih in "The Woman [illegible]" first time in the Canadian West. Madame Nazimova, the great Russian actress, in "Little Eyolf" and "Fairy Tales"; Forbes Robertson in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," first appearance in Winnipeg of this well-known English star. "The Lottery Man," the New York Bijou theatre comedy hit of last season; "The Chocolate Soldier, the Strauss operatic sensation; Guy Bates Post, late leading man of the celebrated New theatre, New York, in "The Nigger," one of the big productions of that theatre last season; Lew Fields, the musical comedy star; Jefferson D'Angelis in the comic opera "The Beauty Spot"; Frank Daniels in "The Belle of Brittany"; James T. Powers in "Havana," this is a big Casino success.

Daniel V. Arthur will offer Winnipeg patrons, Marie Cahill in a new musical comedy; Grace Van Studdiford in a comic opera specially written for her; De Wolf Hopper in his triumph, "A Matinee Idol," with Louise Dresser as a special feature.

"Seven Days," the Astor theatre comedy hit, will be sent by Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper.

Liebler & Co. have already sent Viola Allen and her star caste in "The White Sister," and they will further supply "The Fourth Estate," a powerful newspaper story which met with success last season when produced at the Grand Opera House, Chicago.

Gertrude Elliott in "The Dawn of To-morrow" is also under the Liebler management.

Other stars whose faces have become familiar to us through the various magazines and different publications which devote much space to things theatrical are:

William Faversham, who, will be seen in "The World and His Wife." Mr. Faversham is accompanied by his beautiful and gifted wife, Julie Opp, who has a strong role in this society play; Mabel Hite, the comedienne, in a new play; Robert Mantell in a series of Shakespearean plays, management of William A. Brady; Frederick Warde in a spectacular production of Shakespeare's little presented play, "Timon and Athens"; Grace George in "A Woman's Way"; Management of William A. Brady; Otis Harlan in the Daly theatre comedy hit, "Baby Mine"; "Billy," an new comedy; "The Dollar Mark," another new and strong play; Max Figman in "Mary Jane's Pa," management of John Cort; Louis Mann in "The Cheater"; The Lilliputian Circus, straight from all winter at the Hippodrome, New York, fifty small people—no freaks, wonderful performance; "Madame X.," the great French police play, management of Henry W. Savage, of "Merry Widow" and grand opera fame; "The Merry Widow," a Savage production; "The Little Samozel," another Savage company; "Miss Patsy," with Gertrude Quinlan as star, still another Savage attraction; May Irwin in "Mrs. Jim," first time in Canadian West; Margaret Illington in "Until Eternity"; "A Broken Idol," musical comedy hit; Mrs. Leslie Carter, in a new play; Arnold Daly, in a strong play; James K. Hackett, in a repertoire of romantic and standard dramas; Dustin Farnum, another idol of the ladies, in "Cameo Kirby"; "Alias Jimmy Valentine," a novel comedy-drama in which a criminal figures prominently. "The Midnight Sons," a musical comedy from the Broadway theatre; William Hodge in "The Man From Home," his original creation; Blanche Ring in "A Yankee Girl"; "Our New Minister," a new comedy with a pugilist for a hero; "The Newly Weds," a strange arrangement of the famous funny page pictures; "The City," Clyde Fitch's last and greatest play; "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," an old friend and a welcome one; "Paid in Full," Eugene Walter's powerful play which is already firmly established with the public; "The Flirting Princess," a musical comedy success, with Harry Bulger as star; "The Show Girl," another musical comedy.

Sig. Bonci, the famous Italian tenor, from the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, and who is said to be the greatest of all lyric operatic tenors, has been secured for a recital by Mr. Walker.

The Glasgow Choir, an organization of Scottish singers, touring America for the first time, will be heard at the Winnipeg Theatre soon. As they stand very high with their own people of Scotland they are sure of a warm welcome from the Scots on this side of the ocean, also from other lovers of music.

The foregoing indicates very clearly that there will be "something doing" in Winnipeg in theatricals this season, and that visitors to that city will not find the evenings hanging heavily on their hands. It also proves that Manager Walker and his fellow members of the National Theatre Owners' Association have done well in banding together for their protection and for the advancement of the interests of their patrons.

Only Made The Fire

An Irish lawyer who used to have an extensive practice in the criminal courts was once engaged to defend a Jew charged with setting fire to his shop. He felt so confident of being able to have his client acquitted that he put him in the witness box.

"Now, my good man," he began, "remember you are on your oath. You stand here charged with a terrible crime. I want you to look the jurymen in the face and tell them you are not guilty of this cowardly deed. Are you or are you not guilty of this charge of arson?"

The Jew, who had never heard the word arson used before, and thinking it was some new charge, tried to save himself. In a thoroughly frightened tone he answered:

"No, your Honor, I am not guilty of arson. All I done vos to make der fire."

Now They Don't Speak

Sanderson was on a visit to Simpkins, and, in due course, naturally, he was shown the family album.

"Yes," said Simpkins, as he turned the leaves, "that's my wife's second cousin's Aunt Susan. Poor old soul! She had the most remarkable nose I ever saw. It was the shape of a note of interrogation. And that's Cousin James; and that's a friend of ours; and that [illegible] Oh, now, who do you think that is?"

"Don't know," said Sanderson.

"Well, that's my wife's first husband, my boy!"

"Is he, what a perfectly brainless-looking ass! But, excuse me, old fellow, I didn't know your wife was a widow when you married her."

"She wasn't," said Simpkins stiffly. "That, sir, is a portrait of myself at the age of twenty."

How England Banished Flies.

An authority on health has this to say regarding the house fly:

The fly can be got rid of. This fact was proved in England, where 50 years ago, flies were a nuisance and as great a danger as they are now in Anberica. To-day, broadly speaking, England is so thoroughly rid of flies that the English rarely screen their houses. How did the English do it? As we must do it—by each family keeping its house clean. Screens will keep flies out of a house and flypaper will kill them. But neither gets at the cause. There is only one way to do away with flies, and that is to keep clean the places where they breed and love to feed.

Manure heaps of horses and cattle should be kept in covered pits, bins or flyproof closets, and stables and pens must be kept clean of manure.

Outside lavatories should be kept clean and all excrement covered up or drenched with poisons, lime or oil.

Kitchen refuse should be placed in closely, cleanly kept garbage cans.

All decaying matter should be buried or burned.

All receptacles, such as cuspidores, should be kept clean.

Until we are clean ourselves we cannot keep healthy, and until we keep our houses clean we cannot keep away the flies.

If there are flies around or in your house, either you or your neighbor is careless with regard to absolute cleanliness. And until the flies are got rid of, as they can be with care and watchfulness, a positive danger to your wife and children confronts you.

The Need of Preparation.

In the home of Lord ——, in Scotland, Lady —— was showing to Mrs. Torrey the robes she wore at the coronation. As she was showing her these robes she said: "There was a singular thing happened at the coronation. Right near me a lady come in, a member of the nobility, whose rank nobody questioned. But," she said, "we had all been instructed just what to wear and just how to come in. This lady came in beautifully dressed, but she did not have on the prescribed garment.

"One of the marshals came down and called her out. She said she was a titled lady, but sternly the marshal called her out. 'You have not on the prescribed robe,' and she had to leave the abbey in disgrace."—The Rev. R. A. Torrey, D.D., in The Christian Herald.

Sir Francis Laking's Holiday Rules.

Sir Francis Laking, one of the King's physicians-in-ordinary, who has been seriously indisposed, has long been one of royalty's most trusted medical advisers. He has been described as the embodiment of medical common sense. One of the first principles of his medical teaching embraces the manifold virtues of rest, and another is that of letting a patient do, so far as possible, what his inclinations prompt. To those of his patients who are about to go off for a holiday he says: "Don't over-exert yourself; don't let the good air and change of scene make you eat too heartily, walk too long, or shorten your hours of sleep." For Sir Francis has always been the apostle of moderation.

A Radical Change.

"Do I have to exchange wedding presents in the department from which they were purchased?"

"Not at all," said the floorwalker.

"Thank you," said the bride. "I want to trade a china vase for a frying pan."

Eczema Is Not a Blood Disease

For this reason internal treatment fails to cure—Success of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Experience with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment will soon convince anyone that Eczema is a disease of the skin and not of the blood.

A large percentage of the cures brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment are after the patient has become tired of tedious internal treatment with no apparent result.

Apply Dr. Chase's Ointment and it is not long until there is relief from the dreadful itching and a beginning of the process of healing up the sores. When you have tested this soothing, healing ointment you will wonder why you ever wasted time with internal treatment for eczema.

Mr. A. D. Macauley, Starnoway, Que., writes:—"I had itching eczema on my leg for over five years and tried many remedies and several Doctors without benefit. Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me completely."

Mrs. Chas. Gilbert, Haystack, Placentia Bay, Nfld., writes:—"I was a sufferer from salt rheum for ten years and was cured by eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. I am heartily thankful for this cure, and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to other sufferers."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is wonderfully sothing and healing. By its antiseptic powers it cleans out the sores, stops the agonizing itching and soon sets up the process of healing which means thorough cure, if the treatment is persisted in.

Why not get the cure started today? If you are a sufferer from eczema or any form of itching skin disease you will thank the day you heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment. 60 cts. a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto, Canada. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

Flash Life in the Suburbs

Citymutt—Do you have electricity in Stayhurst?

Subdub—Yes, when there's a thunderstorm.

Recognized as the leading specific for the destruction of worms, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has proved a boon to suffering children everywhere. It seldom fails.

A teacher in a Midland town is noted for his patriotic ferver. One day in class, while in a particularly uplifted mood, he turned to one of his pupils, an average boy of twelve.

"Now, Tommy," said he, "tell us what you would think if you saw the Union Jack waving proudly over the field of battle."

"I should think," replied Tommy, "that the wind was blowing."

ST. VITUS DANCE

A Striking Example of Its Cure by The Tonic Treatment.

St. Vitus dance is the commonest form of nerve trouble which afflicts children, because of the great demands made on the body by growth and development, and there is the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment, that the nervous debility which leads to St. Vitus dance.

The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus dance should lead parents to give their children this great blood-building medicine at the first signs of the approach of the disease. Palor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demands made upon them. Mrs. A. Winters, Virden, Man., says: "When my little girl was six years old she was attacked with scarlatina, which was followed by St. Vitus dance. Her limbs would jerk and twitch. Her speech became affected, and at last she became so bad that she could scarcely walk, and we hardly dared trust her alone. She was under the care of a doctor, but in spite of this was steadily growing worse, and we feared that we would lose her. As Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured her older sister of anaemia I decided to try them again. After the use of a few boxes, to our great joy, we found they were helping her, and in the course of a few weeks more her power of speech fully returned, and she could walk and go about as well as any child, and she has been well and healthy since. When illness come to any one of our family now, we never call in a doctor, but simply use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never disappoint us."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Wanted the Usual Signal

The play was Mazeppa, the strongest scene of which is when the heroine is strapped to the back of a wild horse, which is driven off among the mountains, to dash itself to pieces.

For this scene it was usual to hire a horse from the nearest livery stables. One evening, however, at a London suburb, the horse refused to move. Every expedient was tried, but budge it wouldn't.

The hostler at the wings, however, grasped the situation. The words, "Let loose the untamed fiery steed" had been said for the third time, when from the wings came: "Right away, higher up," followed by the regulation two stamps of the foot given by the average 'bus conductor.

The poor old 'bus horse walked slowly off, amid shrieks of laughter.

"The only thing I can find to say about you is that your washing bill is far too extravagant. Last week you had six blouses in the wash. Why, Jane, my daughter never sends more than two!"

"Ah, that may be, mum," replied Jane, "but I 'ave to! Your daughter's sweetheart is a bank clerk, while my young man is a chimbly sweep. It makes a difference, mum."

The Only Common Accident

Apropos of the season of Atlantic travel, Captain Simon P. Lea, said the other day in New York:

"Yes, what with these wonderful new ships—the biggest, the most palatial, and the fastest that the world has ever seen—an Atlantic passage is now a real joy.

"A steerage passenger the other day was met at the dock by a cousin.

"'Well, man,' said the cousin to the immigrant, 'I'm glad to see ye. Did ye have a safe passage?'

"'Oh, yes, very safe, very pleasant, I assure ye,' the immigrant answered. 'The only accident I heard of was that the ship had broke her record.'"

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Dear Sirs,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disfigured for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

Yours truly,

She Objected

An old Irish woman recently had her first ride in an electric tramcar. She had taken her ticket, and was shortly afterwards asked by an inspector to show it to him. To the other passengers' amusement, he said:

"Ticket, yer honour! Shure, I don't sell 'em!"

"I know that, my good woman," said the inspector; "but it is your own ticket I want to see."

She replied:

"Me ticket is it you want? Faith then, you'll not get it. You may buy one for yourself, same as I did."

SCOTLAND YARD.

Its Council of Sleuths Is a Thing Dreaded by Evil-Doers.

In the great, rather grim, red-brick building which, like a medieval fortress, dominates the Thames, within a stone's throw of the Houses of Parliament, there is a large, barely-furnished room, which holds more secrets than any other in London, with the possible exception of the the room of Cabinet mysteries. It is the nerve centre of England's great and complex detective system, which controls the currents radiating all the world over for the discovery of crime; and it is in this secret chamber that the mysterious Council of Seven hold their meetings to unravel the tangled skeins of tragedy.

If walls could speak, the walls of this room could unfold stories of romance, tragedy, and mystery such as would drive the writers of fiction to despair; for there is no form of crime which has not been dissected and laid bare there in all its complex and naked hideousness. But walls are dumb; and so are the members of this secret Council, who recognize that silence is one of their most powerful weapons.

This Council has not long been in existence; in fact, it is practically unknown to the outside world. It is only a short time since it occurred to the authorities of New Scotland Yard that, in place of casual conferences between detectives engaged in the solution of some problem of crime, it would be well to appoint a body of their cleverest detectives—men of acute and astute brains, with long experience of crime and criminals—to combine their efforts in solving the principal mysteries; and, as might be expected, the plan has worked admirably.

The greatest care has naturally been taken in choosing men for this responsible work. It was important that the Council should, as far as possible, cover the whole range of crime The detective who has specialized in murder or burglary may know little of, say, coiners and begging-letter imposters; and thus the leading expert in each of the principal branches of crime was chosen—men who know practically all that is to be known about their own branch and its professors, and whose names even are a terror to evil-doers the whole world over.

But let us see how this Council works. Suppose that a mysterious murder has taken place in London. Within a few minutes after it has been reported to the nearest police station the detective-inspector and his assistants are on the spot making investigations. Meanwhile the news has been flashed to New Scotland Yard; and almost before the local men have well commenced their inquiries a member of the Council—the man whose special province it is—appears on the scene and takes charge of the operations.

If the problem is a fairly simple one, as it often is, and the murderer is speedily run to earth, the services of the Council are naturally not required. But if there is no sufficient clue to the assassin, or he has made his escape good, the Council is at once summoned, and takes the case in hand.

All the available evidence is placed before it and thoroughly sifted, deductions are made, a plan of campaign is drawn up, and the whole of the complicated and far-reaching machinery of Scotland Yard is set to work under the collective guidance of the cleverest detective brains in England. How energetically and thoroughly the Council does its work has been shown in the recent Crippen case, in which a closely-meshed net was in a few days thrown round the world for the capture of the criminal.

Schools for Baroda.

A small, dark man, accompanied by two beautiful women in eastern dress and with a train of olive-skinned dependents, landed in England the other day. No one who saw him land or who watched his pleasant, modest demeanor on board during the voyage from America would have guessed that he was the ruler over 2,000,000 people, the richest, one of the most enlightened, and one of the most powerful of the princes of the native states of India. The Gaekwar of Baroda is a great admirer of English institutions. He has been especially struck with the quiet, friendly charm of its country life. "One object of my journey," he said, "is to add to my knowledge of educational methods and ideals. Baroda is the only state in India where schools are free and compulsory. I established them because I am sure that it is useless to expect any real progress among the Indian people until they are less ignorant."

A Singular Request.

A peculiar fate is said to overhang the family of the late Sir Julian Goldsmid. An ancestor of his, so says the legend, once gave shelter to a rabbi, who at his death left to him a bequest of a mysterious box which was on no account to be opened until after the customary seven days of mourning. If opened before that time a curse would fall upon the family. Curiosity got the better of superstition, and the box was opened before the seven days were up. In it was found a document which said that as the injunction of the rabbi had not been heeded no future owner of the estate would be succeeded by a son. And [illegible] enough, has been the case ever since.

Cheetahs Train For the Hunt.

Trained cheetahs are used in Persia and India in much the same manner that hounds are used in European and North American countries. The game they are used to hunt is principally deer and antelope. The cheetah is an animal with black and brown spots resembling a leopard, but longer in body and limb. The Indian princes keep packs of them for the hunt. The heads of the hunting cheetahs are usually covered with a hood until within 200 yards of the game. The hoods are then removed, and the animals creep stealthily toward the herd and, having approached as near as possible, pounce upon their prey, killing with one blow of the paw.

ELLIS BROS. - Toronto

LOADED WITH SPLENDOR.

Fearful and Wonderful Attire and a Trying Ceremony.

Association with royalty may be gratifying to the spirit, but it is often uncomfortable to the body. A description of the ceremony which F. Harrison Smith had to go through when he received a royal honor from King John, predecessor of the late King Menelik, is told in "Through Abyssinia" and sounds most uninviting. The author was an envoy from Queen Victoria:

"In a very hot tent were arranged all the insignia about to be bestowed on me. Having taken off my uniform coat, I thrust my legs, already clothed in a pair of field boots and velvet cord riding breeches, into a pair of capacious pantaloons of French silk embroidered in gold and lined with red. A silk shirt, also embroidered and lined, was put on and confined at the waist with a silk sash. Then came the shuma and over this a fur cape of lion's mane. By this time it was difficult to move or breathe.

"My discomfort was increased by having a silver gilt amulet fastened on my right forearm. On the left was hung a rhinoceros hide shield covered with dark blue silk ornamented with silver gilt, while into my almost powerless hands were thrust two inconveniently long spears. A gold ornament, the badge of the Order of Solomon, was hung on my neck.

"I had to lead a gayly-trapped horse to the door of the king's hut and bow to his majesty the king of Zion. This I accomplished to the admiration of the spectators. Transferring my horse to my groom and my shield and spear to my servant, I returned to shake hands with the king.

"By this time I was in a profuse perspiration, which was not remarkable, as I had on two nearly complete suits of clothes, besides a lion's skin surtout. I omitted to mention my sword, which was rigidly strapped to my waist on the right side and which made sitting down difficult. But I triumphed over all these difficulties.

"When the ceremony was over I received many compliments. My interpreter told me that all the spectators declared I was made to wear such a costume. They always say that. It produces dollars sometimes.

"It was not easy to mount my horse in such fearful and wonderful attire. But I managed it, and I rode off with a light heart and a splitting headache, and when I reached my abode I speedily divested myself of my splendor."

Oldest County Cricketer.

On Aug. 16 Lord Hawke celebrated his fiftieth birthday, and every true lover of the national summer game will wish him "many happy returns of the day." For twenty-five years he has captained the Yorkshire team, and made it one of the most powerful elevens in the country. He is undoubtedly the most popular cricketer in England, and has specially endeared himself to Yorkshire professionals on account of the keen interest he has always taken in their welfare. He is godfather to most of their children, and out of the season he has each professional in turn, with his wife and family, if such exist, to stay with him at Wighill Park, Tadcaster.

It is stated that among his lordship's personal possessions there is, perhaps, nothing quite so interesting or so highly valued as a little, well-worn edition of the English Prayer-book. This has belonged to Lord Hawke since he was a child, and on its interleaved pages is entered a careful record of every Sunday he has spent abroad throughout his life. As Lord Hawke has been an almost constant traveler, the diary covers a good many pages.—Tit-Bits.

His Favorite Whisky.

Clarence C. Chipman, Winnipeg, commissioner of the Hudson Bay Co., is a good teller of stories. Also he has a splendid eye for business, so sometimes his stories do a little boosting for the huge organization with which he is connected.

His latest story is about a friend of his, a very prominent officer of the army, who was recently thrown from his horse while playing polo and badly injured. Friends hurried to help him, and one obtained some whisky.

"Here's some whisky for you," was the word spoken to the injured man who, lying stretched out, seemed all but conscious.

And according to Mr. Chipman, the sufferer raised his head, opened his eyes and inquired, "Is it Hudson Bay Scotch?"

Slavery In England.

Slavery existed in England without any mitigating features worth speaking of until the time of the wars of the roses. Bracton, the famous lawyer of the time of Henry III., informs us that the condition of slaves was fearful. It was indeed slavery, pure and simple. All the goods a slave acquired belonged to his master, who could take them from him whenever he pleased, the slave having no redress at law; hence the impossibility of a man's purchasing his own freedom. The only hope for the slave was to try to get into one of the walled towns when he became free, the townsmen protecting him merely on the condition of his helping them fight the nobles.

Conscience Money.

"Conscience money" in Great Britain now amounts to thousands of pounds annually. The first sum noted was on March 30, 1789, when £1,-000 was carried to the public account in consequence of a note received by the chancellor. The writer with troubled soul implored him, "as an honest man, to consider the money the property of the nation and to be so just as to apply it to the use of the state in such a manner that the nation may not suffer by its having been detained and thus to ease the conscience of an honest man."

By the Card.

"Will Brother Jones kindly lead?" was asked by the pastor at the beginning of the prayer service.

Waking with a start at the mention of his name, the deacon almost broke up the service by replying, "I led last time; it's your turn; what's trumps?"

COMMUNICATIONS.

EDITOR NEWS:—Kindly allow me spice for a few remarks re the epidemic of scarlet fever which the Health Officer has now almost under control, It has been said in both our papers that the fever was due to the poor sewerage. While this may be true in part a greater danger lies in the old fashioned and ignorant belief that precautions are unnecessary as it is only a child's disease and all children must have it. Therefore due to this ignorance, or due to carelessness, they are instrumental in spreading this disease through the schools and other places to almost every house in town. Now, there is no more truth in that old fallacy than there would be in saying that all children must have a wooden leg. If you expose a child to fever it will most likely develop the disease, and the same if you expose the child's leg to danger and have it cut off it will require the wooden leg. In the old days scarlet fever was considered dangerous, many deaths of both young and old being due to its ravages. And it is only due to better skill and knowledge by our present day doctors that it has become a mild disease, and if the Health Officer was strictly obeyed the disease would soon be eliminated from our town. Strict enforcement of quarantine, good sewerage and cleanliness around the premises are the only help the Health Officer requires to enable him to drive away the disease, and it is the duty of every man, woman and child to assist him in seeing that his instructions are obeyed and ignorance and carelessness done away with. Also any violation of his orders should be strictly punished by the city officials for the benefit of our community. Yours, etc.

HEALTH FOR THE CHILDREN.

EDITOR NEWS:—I would like to ask the editor of the Islander a few questions through your valuable paper, and I dare him to truthfully answer the same.

1. Why does he omit in his platform all questions of morality?

2. Why did not the Citizens' League hold a public meeting for the naming of candidates for the municipal election?

3. Have any of the men proposed and accepted by them been at any time convicted for violation of the law?

4. Is a law-breaker a fit representative for the city?

5. Were not two of the men proposed and accepted largely responsibl for the defeat of the sewerage by-law?

6. What grudge does he owe the temperance cause?

7. Who skips out at pay-day omitting to pay his bills? Is it the temperance man?

8. Who pay the hearse bills, the printing bills, the store bills, or any other bills? Does the drunk?

9. Do the owners of property advertise for drunks to rent the same?

10. Why does Midnight Philosopher (Smithe) say his deductions of the Temperance Cause are against it, and yet at the same time make a boast of his own temperance?

Awaiting his reply, I remain,
Yours, etc., for
STRAIGHTFORWARD HONEST, LAW ABIDING REPRESENTATIVES FOR THE CITY.

EDITOR NEWS.—I think to most of your readers would be thankful to your correspondent "Ratepayer" for his excellent letter in your last issue. He hit the bull's eye when he says "it is to be hoped that some of those who opposed the by-law would think of offering their services for either mayor or alderman."

If these persons acted from ignorance they are not worth voting for, and if they did it from malice and purposely it was criminal to perpetuate conditions that are a risk to the health and even lives of any resident in the city, especially the children

It is well known that the most misleading statements were made to influence a certain element amongst the electors and that written pressure was brought to bear on others on election day, in short, everything possible to defeat the by-law and throw that $9,000 back in the face of the government, which our member, Mr. Manson, heartily assisted by Mayor Macdonald were successful in securing, had the by-law carried as it would have been only for the tactics employed by the persons-in-question.

Bosia Sylvia, a young Italian, was terribly injured by the accidental discharge of his gun, while hunting on Thursday last, near No. 5 mine, The unfortunate man was crossing a log, when the gun was discharged, inflicting ghastly wounds in the lower portion of his body, exposing his intestines in a shocking manner. Fortunately some men in the near vicinity heard his cries for help, and speedily came to his assistance, and brought the injured man to the hospital, where everything that surgical science could suggest was done to alleviate his suffering. An operation was immediately performed, in which a large part of the intestines were removed. The doctors entertain no hope of his recovery. He has a wife and two children living in Italy.

As we go to press we are informed that the injured man has succumbed to his injuries.
