Chapter 34

ORDE now took steps to deflect into the channel recently dredged to Stearn's bayou the mass of the logs racing downstream from Redding. He estimated that he had still two hours or so in which to do the work.

This at first he succeeded in doing, and very successfully as affecting the pressure on the jam below. To the crew working in the channel dredged through to Stearn's bayou the affair was that of driving a rather narrow and swift stream, only exaggerated. A large proportion of the timbers found their way into the bayou. Those that continued on down the river could hardly have much effect on the jam. As yet only the advance of the big jam had arrived at the dredged channel.

"We can't keep this up when the main body hits us!" Orde panted to Jim Denning. "We'll have to do more pile driver work."

He made a rapid excursion to the Boom camp, whence he returned with thirty or forty men.

"Here, boys," said he, "you can keep these logs moving in this channel for a couple of hours."

Orde now returned to the jam, where, on the pile driver, the tugs and the booms he set methodically to strengthening the defenses.

But shortly the water began to rise again, this time fairly by leaps. For the hundredth time the frail wooden defenses opposed to millions of pounds were tested to the very extreme of their endurance. The network of chains and cables tightened, drawing ever nearer the snapping point. Suddenly, almost without warning, the situation had become desperate.

He shook his fist against the menacing logs.

And for the first time Orde completely lost his poise and became fluently profane. He shook his fist against the menacing logs; he apostrophied the river, the high water, the jam, the deserters, Newmark and his illness, ending in a general anathema against any and all streams, logs and floods.

"Well," said Tom North, "he's good and mad this time."

At the dredged channel Orde saw the rivermen standing idle, and, half blind with anger, he burst upon them. Then he stopped short and stared.

Square across the dredged channel and completely blocking it lay a single span of an iron bridge. Behind it the logs had, of course, piled up in a jam, which dammed back the water.

"Where in h— did that drop from?" cried Orde.

"Come down on top the jam," explained a riverman.

Orde, suddenly fallen into a cold rage, stared at the obstruction, both fists clinched at his side.

"That about settles it," said Welton.

"Settle!" cried Orde. "I should think not!"

Welton smiled quaintly.

"Don't you know when you're licked?"

"Licked, h—!" said Orde. "We've just begun to fight."

"What can you do?"

"I'll blow her up with powder"

"Ever try to to blow up iron?"

"There must be some way."

"Oh, there is," replied Welton, "of course—take her apart bolt by bolt and nut by nut."

"Send for the wrenches, then!" snapped Orde.

"But it would take days. It would be too late. It would do no good."

"Perhaps not," interrupted Orde, "but it will be doing something, anyway. Look here, Welton, are you game? If you'll get that bridge out in two days I'll hold the jam."

"You can't hold that jam two hours."

"That's my business. Will you send for lanterns and wrenches and keep this crew working?"

"I will," said Welton.

During the next two days the old scenes were all reilved, with back of them the weight of the struggle that had gone before. Pines belonging to divers and protesting owners were felled and sharpened. Even the inviolate government supply was commandeered.

Then all at once, as though a faucet had been turned off, the floods slackened.

"They've opened the channel," said Orde dully. His voice sounded to himself very far away. He felt himself moving in strange and distorted surroundings. He heard himself repeating to each of a number of wavering, gigantic figures the talismanic words that had accomplished the dissolution of the earth for himself, "They've opened the channel." At last he felt hard planks beneath his feet, and, shaking his head with an effort, he made out the pilothouse of the Sprite and a hollow eyed man leaning against it. "They've opened the channel, Marsh," he repeated. "I guess that'll be all." Then quite slowly he sank to the deck, sound asleep.

* * * * * * * *

When Newmark left, in the early stages of the jam, he gave scant thought to the errand on which he had ostensibly departed. Whether or not Orde got a supply of piles was to him a matter of indifference. His hope, or, rather, preference, was that the jam should go out, but he saw clearly that Orde, blinded by the swift action of the struggle, was as yet unable to perceive. Even should the riverman succeed in stopping the jam the extraordinary expenses incidental to the defense and to the subsequent salvaging, untangling and sorting would more than eat up the profits of the drive. Orde would then be forced to ask for an extension of time on his notes.

On arriving in Monrovia he drove to his own house. To Mallock he issued orders.

"Go to the office and tell them I am ill," said he, "and then hunt up Mr. Heinzman. I want to see him immediately."

The German entered rather red and breathless, surprised to find Newmark at home.

"Heinzman," said he, "in three weeks at the latest Orde will come to you asking for a renewal of the notes you hold against our firm. You must refuse to make such a renewal."

"All righdt," agreed Heinzman.

"He'll probably offer you a higher interest. You must refuse that. Then when the notes are overdue you must begin suit in foreclosure."

"All righdt," repeated Heinzman, a little listlessly. "Do you think he vill hold that jam? I got lots of logs in that jam. If it goes out I vill lose a heap of money."

"Well, you'll make quite a heap on this deal," said Newmark carelessly.

"Suppose he holds it," said Heinzman, pausing. "I hate like the mischief to joomp on him."

Newmark looked at the German sharply. "I suppose you know just how deep you're in this?"

"Oh, I ain't backing oudt," negatived Heinzman—"not a bit."

Little by little the water went down. The pressure, already considerably relieved by the channel into Stearn's bayou, slackened every hour. Orde, still half-dazed with his long-delayed sleep, drove back along the marsh road to town. Orde began to review the situation. As Newmark had accurately foreseen, he came almost immediately to a realization that the firm would not be able to meet the notes given to Heinzman. Orde had depended on the profits from the season's drive to enable him to make up the necessary amount. Those profits would be greatly diminished if not wiped out entirely by the expenses, both regular and irregular, incurred in holding the jam.

"I'll have to get an extension of time," said Orde to himself. "Of course Joe will let me have more time on my own personal note to the firm. And Heinzman surely ought to. I saved a lot of his logs in that jam. And if he doesn't want to I guess an offer of a little higher interest will fetch him."

Finally he pulled up opposite the Orde house, sprang up the walk and into the front door.

"Hello, sweetheart!" he called cheerily.

The echoes alone answered him. He cried again and yet again, with a growing feeling of disappointment that Carroll should happen to be from home. A moment later Mary, the Irish servant girl, came through the dining room, caught sight of Orde, threw her apron over her head and burst into extravagant demonstrations of grief.

"What is it, Mary?" he asked very quietly.

But the girl only wept the louder. Orde sprang forward to shower her with questions. These elicited nothing but broken and incoherent fragments concerning "the missus," "oh, the sad day!" At this moment Bobby appeared from the direction of the kitchen. Orde, frantic with alarm, fell upon his son. Bobby could only mumble something about "smallpox" and "took mamma away with doctor."

"Where, where?" cried Orde.

At this moment a calm, dry voice broke through the turmoil. Orde looked up to see Dr. McMullen standing in the doorway.

"It's all right," said the doctor! "Your wife was exposed to smallpox and is at my house to avoid the danger of spreading contagion. She is not ill."

"Where was she exposed?"

"Down at Heinzman's. You know—or perhaps you don't—that old Heinzman is the worst sort of anti-vaccination crank. Well, he's reaped the reward."

"Has he smallpox?" asked Orde.

"No; his daughter Mina. Lord knows where she got it. Mrs. Orde happened to be with her when she was taken with the symptoms that begin the disease. As a neighborly deed she remained with the girl. Of course no one could tell it was smallpox at that time. Next day, however, the characteristic rash appeared on the thighs and armpits. I telegraphed to Redding for a nurse. Until she came Mrs. Orde stayed by like a brick. Don't know what I should have done without her."

"When was this?" asked Orde.

"Seven days ago."

"How is Mina getting on?"

"She'll get well. I suppose I'll have old Heinzman on my hands, though. Emotional old fool. Rushed right in when he heard his daughter was sick. Couldn't keep him out. And he's been with her or near her ever since."

"I'm going to step up to your house and see Mrs. Orde."

"You can telephone her," said the doctor.

He called up Dr. McMullen's house on the telephone.

"You're a dear, brave girl, and I'm proud of you," said Orde.

"Nonsense! There was no danger at all. I'd been vaccinated recently. And somebody had to take care of poor Mina until we could get help. How's Bobby?"

After lunch Orde went downtown to his office. Newmark came in. "Hello, Joe!" said Orde, with a slight constraint. "Too bad you got sick just at that time. We needed you."

"You know I'd have been there if possible."

"Well, we had a lively time, you bet, all right, and got through about by the skin of our teeth." He arose and walked over to Newmark's desk, on the edge of which he perched. "It's cost us considerable. I'll have to get an extension on those notes."

"What's that" asked Newmark quickly.

"What's that?" asked Newmark quickly.

"I don't believe I'll be able to meet those notes. So many things have happened"—

"But," broke in Newmark, "the firm certainly cannot do so. I've been relying on your assurance that you would take them up personally. Our resources are all tied up."

"Can't we raise anything more on the nothern peninsula timber?" asked Orde.

"You ought to know we can't!" cried Newmark, with an appearance of growing excitement. "The last seventy-five thousand we borrowed for me finishes that."

"Can't you take up part of your note?"

"My note comes due in 1885," rejoined Newmark, with cold disgust. "I expect to take it up then. But I can't until then. I hadn't expected anything like this."

"Well, don't get hot," said Orde vaguely. "I only thought that northern peninsula stuff might be worth saving any way we could figure it."

"...th saving!" snorted Newmark.

"... keep your hair on," said O... on whom Newmark's manner ... beginning to have its effect, as Newmark intended it should. "You have my Boom company stock as security."

"Pretty security for the loss of a tract like the upper peninsula timber! I thought you'd surely be able to pay it," retorted Newmark, now secure in the position of putting Orde entirely in the wrong.

"Well, I expected to pay it, and I'll pay it yet," rejoined Orde. "I think Heinzman will renew the notes."

Harnessing the Ottawa.

The Public Works Department at Ottawa, having turned its attention to conserving the water flow of the Ottawa River for the benefit of power users, water supply, etc., has made considerable progress in the work. An examination of the water conditions in the 57,000 square miles of watershed has been made, and a continuous record of the flow of the river has been plotted since the year 1844. A special report made on the subject rehearses the fact that development of the Chaudiere Falls on the Quebec side was first made in 1800, but no general use of the falls on both Quebec and Ontario sides was made till the year 1855, when small power was developed. After 1900, when the majority of old wooden lumber mills were wiped out, new industries requiring more power took their place. The manufacture of electric energy was constantly increasing, and also the power required for pulp grinding. The owners were finally driven, as the report states, to build the dam across the falls or central portion of the river so that during low stages, the water could be stopped running to waste and turned through their wheels. With the demand constantly on the increase, there is at present and has been a great shortage of water in the spring season, and the Public Works Department is going ahead with the plan of creating reservoirs large enough to hold all or part of this flood water for use during autumn.

The work is one of vast magnitude, requiring much expert and scientific work and calculation, but the results are to secure the maximum water power of the Ottawa River, with its tributaries and lake chains.

Keep on the Sunny Side.

There are only two kinds of people in the world—the people who live in the shadow and gloom and those who live on the sunny side of the streets.

These shadowed ones are sometimes called pessimists; sometimes, people of melancholy temperament; sometimes they are called disagreeable people; but, wherever they go, their characteristic is that their shadow always travels on before them.

These people never bear their own burdens, but expose all their wounds to others. They are so busy looking down for pitfalls and sharp stones and thorns on which to step that they do not even know that there are any stars in the sky.

These folk live on the wrong side of the street. And yet it is only 20 feet across to the other sidewalk, where sunshine always lies.

Freezing Water.

It is said that the sudden expansive force exerted by water at the moment of freezing is probably as much as 30,000 pounds per square inch.

FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE

LONDON'S NEWEST SPECTACLE IS A HUGE AFFAIR.

A Colossal Pageant Involving Fifteen Thousand Persons Will Depict the History of the British People From the Earliest Days Down to the Present—Preparations Are Under Management of Frank Lascelles.

A colossal task is nearing completion at the Crystal Palace, London. Within a space of 250 acres the whole of the British Empire is being represented by hundreds of buildings, scenery, and exhibits. The Festival of Empire, as the great exhibition which will be opened from May to October has been called, is the most ambitious effort which has ever been made to ... the vastness and possibilities of our overseas dominions. In addition there will be a great pageant, in which 15,000 performers will take part, illustrating the Empire's history and development from the very earliest down to the present time. The colonies have subscribed thousands of pounds towards the expenses, and thousands of men have been employed on a patriotic project in every way worthy of the coronation year of His Majesty King George V.

"The public," said Mr. Frank Lascelles, Master of the Festival—who was in charge of the Quebec festivities and is known all the world over for the magnificence of the pageants he has organized—to a newspaperman the other day, "have little idea of the enormous work which has been involved in producing this great Festival of Empire. The colonies have been ransacked for ideas, and for many months past we have been cooperating with the various colonial Governments in order to make the festival thoroughly representative in every way. And it is really surprising how people in this country have entered into the idea with zest and enthusiasm. Take the 15,000 amateur performers, for instance, who are to take part in the great pageant. Not only are they buying their costumes and paying for their railway fares during the run of the festival, but they are willingly bearing the expenses entailed by six or seven weeks' rehearsals. It is a splendid illustration, is it not, of the patriotism which has been instilled by this great idea?"

And the gigantic and thoroughness with which this pageant is being carried out is strikingly illustrated by the facts and figures which Mr. Lascelles kindly provided. An amphitheatre for 10,000 spectators has been erected, and for considerably over a year hundreds of skilled workmen have been engaged in preparing costumes and properties; and in every case the utmost care has been taken to ensure historical correctness, even to the minutest details. By loan and purchase Mr. Lascelles has secured twenty historical state coaches, including one which belonged to Queen Victoria, and another which was the property of Napoleon III. A thousand horses and cattle, 400 complete suits of armor, nearly 7,000 weapons and close upon 10,000 helmets and shields—these are a few of the properties which will be used during the great pageant of the Festival of Empire.

"But, of course," said Mr. Lascelles "whilst the pageant is one of the central features of the festival it by no means stands alone. In the grounds there will be some 300 buildings, ranging from the $200,000 reproduction of the Parliament Buildings of Ottawa, Canada, to decorative kiosks. All the colonial buildings will be exact reproductions of the Parliament Houses of the respective colonies, and in each case will be two-thirds of the size of the originals. Altogether these various Government buildings cost well over $500,000, and I might mention that Canada alone is spending no less than $350,000 on the various projects for representing that vast colony at the Crystal Palace.

"What is the total cost? Well, it is difficult to say at the present time. The committee of the Festival of Empire has spent over $1,500,000 already and this is quite apart from the money expended by the various colonies themselves."

The reporter asked for some details of the expenditure.

"In the first place," said Mr. Lascelles, "we are paying close upon 6,000 workpeople engaged on the preparations for the festival. Then there is some $150,000 worth of machinery and $300,000 expended on the erection of a mile and a half of electric railway, which we have termed the All Red Route, and which will run through the various scenes of the Empire, as depicted in the grounds of the Crystal Palace. A two-minute service will be maintained throughout the day by ten cars, and on each train guides will explain details and objects of interest en route as the train takes the visitors on a tour embracing Newfoundland, Canada, Jamaica, Malay States, India, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa.

"Perhaps one of the most interesting facts regarding the realistic representation of South Africa on the All Red Route is that visitors will be able to see gold and diamond mines in full operation. The De Beers Company are spending $10,000 on the representation of a South African diamond mine, and I might mention that Canada alone is spending no less than $350,000 on the various projects for representing that vast colony at the Crystal Palace.

"Six hundred stands are being erected on the inside of the Palace, and there will be an unrivalled collection of British arts and industries. By the way, I might mention that one of the largest statues in the world will be erected in the centre of the Crystal Palace terrace—namely, a statue of the King, 60 feet high, dominating, as it were, His Majesty's Empire in miniature."

London will be the holiday city of the world this year, and it is safe to affirm that millions of visitors will find their way to the Crystal Palace to witness the wonders of this great Festival of Empire.

WILLS THAT BEWILDER.

Testators Who Give Their Executors Some Tantalizing Tasks.

A report that has just been issued by the British Charity Commissioners throws a light on the eccentricity shown in many wills that leave money to charities. Some testators give their executors the most perplexing tasks.

One recent will, for instance, gave £25,000 into the hands of executors to distribute in the relief of suffering, with the curious qualification that nothing was to be given to hospitals, dispensaries, or medical societies, nor to churches nor to religious charities. One wonders what channels the puzzled executors will find for the money.

But wills even more curious have been made. Some years ago the Rev. Zachary Boyd died, childless, leaving behind him in manuscript a rhymed translation he had made of the Bible. In this translation the disciples, prophets, prophetesses, etc., are referred to as "ladies" and "gentlemen." In the will a sum of money was left to a Scotch university on condition it had this translation printed and distributed among the students. The university did not see its way to accept.

An interesting bequest was made ten years ago to a lady. Her husband instructed the trustees to pay her, as long as she remained a widow, a sum of money every year equal to her weight in gold. As she was rather of substantial build, this worked out each year to between eleven and twelve hundred ounces troy. And gold is worth nearly four pounds an ounce.

One might have expected the lady to diet, but she did not. The only security she took against any possible loss in weight was to charge half-a-crown admission to the annual weighing-in ceremony.

Some testators show a grim humor. A Yorkshire farmer, who died towards the end of last century, left instructions that every lady of his acquaintance who attended the funeral should receive three hundred pounds, and every gentleman two hundred. Four hundred invitations were to be sent out, and the funeral was to be at eight in the morning. It was winter, and the weather is not usually very pleasant at eight on a winter's morning, a fact which the dying man had counted on. (He had, of course, left instructions that the will was not to be made public till after the funeral.) Out of the four hundred invited only nine turned up! The rest were soon sorry they had not been more energetic.

A former Earl of Stafford left his wife in his will the sole sum of forty-five brass halfpennies. His wife—a Frenchwoman—had not, he declared, made him happy, and this was the only revenge in his power.

Some thirty years ago a patriotic American, called Sanborn, bequeathed $5,000 to a priest of his acquaintance to see that the dead man's skin was made into two drumheads, and two of his bones into drumsticks. Every year, on June 2nd, the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker's Hill, a drummer was to march up the hill drumming to a band that played "Yankee Doodle." But this curious display of patriotism was made for only five years. The authorities then stepped in and stopped it.

"No, Sir, No!"

In "Anglo-American Memories," by George W. Smalley, there is a story of King Edward and his friend the late Duke of Devonshire, when the former was still Prince of Wales and the latter Marquis of Hartington. They were both taking the waters at Homburg, and over dinner one evening had this colloquy:

"Hartington, you ought not to be drinking all that champagne."

"No, sir; I know I oughtn't."

"Then why do you do it?"

"Well, sir, I have made up my mind that I had rather be ill now and then than always taking care of myself."

"Oh, you think that now, but when the gout comes what do you think then?"

"Sir, if you will ask me then I will tell you. I do not anticipate."

An M.P. Who Interviewed Cannibals.

Extraordinary indeed have been the experiences of Alan H. Burgoyne, North Kensington's M.P. in the British House of Commons. He has walked through Manchuria from Pekin to Port Arthur; he knows the heart of China; and during the last Russian war he was imprisoned for five days in a fortress as a spy. He has climbed the Japanese sacred mountain, Fujiyama, in the record time of seven hours; he has journeyed through New Guinea, Siam, Ceylon, and Mexico; he has interviewed cannibals and written thrilling war stories for boys; and has taken tea with Raisuli. In short, he has accomplished in a few years things which most men fail to achieve in a lifetime.

Bananas In Australia.

Queensland banana growers are rejoicing. The weekly shipments of bananas to the south have risen from 3,000 bunches weekly to 8,000, and prices have risen as well. One man in the north this season cleared $10,000 from ten acres of fruit. His crop was 4,000 cases, and he was fortunate to strike a good market, getting $2.50 per case, so that his profit was greater than his whole outlay. The exports from Queensland will probably reach 15,000 bunches, as the fruit matures during the next six weeks.

Disappointed Tigers.

A comical little story comes from Melbourne. A parachutist named Selphe enlivened the proceedings at a fete by ascending in a balloon and descending per parachute. He came down in the Melbourne Zoo, and had the narrowest possible shave of landing in the open-topped enclosure containing the tigers. The disappointment of the tigers was most touching. They are now constantly gazing heavenwards, says a contemporary, lest they should be unprepared for the next parachutist from the skies.

DEATH IN THE PULPIT

SALVATIONIST ADOPTS NOVEL PLAN TO IMPRESS HEARERS.

Captain Brodie, of London, Eng., Has Just Preached a Series of Sermons on Death, Appearing Before His Congregation In Grave Clothes, Surmounted by a Helmet Shaped Like a Skull.

In these days of dramatic presentations of religious instruction and the introduction of so many things formerly considered foreign to the pulpit, a London Salvation Army preacher has finally reached a climax. Captain Brodie appeared in an Army hall some time ago garbed in grave clothes and with a head-piece made to represent a skull and preached a sermon on "Death."

PREACHER IN DEATH GARB.

The effect of his costume was tremendous and the sermon grew into a series of addresses on the subject, which if they have not awakened London to a serious consideration of the matter, have at least provided it with something to talk about.

Captain Brodie says that most persons speedily forget what they hear, but that they remember what they see; consequently he wished to appeal to the eye in order to make his words memorable to his congregation. He wanted his hearers to think about death and the hereafter, and if his gruesome costume has had that effect it was justifiable.

Sir Philip Magnus, Tree-Planter.

Sir Philip Magnus, the well-known educationist, who has been entertained at a banquet at the Hotel Cecil, London, by the graduates of the University of London, whom he represents at Westminster, is a Londoner by birth, and has been associated with the university all his life.

He has written a great deal on various technical subjects, and his first book, "Lesson in Elementary Mechanics," was an immediate success. Although in his seventieth year, Sir Philip is still full of energy, and when he can snatch a little leisure he amuses himself by tree-planting in the fine grounds of his house in Surrey.

During his long career as an educationist Sir Philip has had many amusing experiences. Once he visited a certain continental school and asked the director to allow him to see the practical working of the institution. "No; you must excuse me," replied the director. "You see, I am just recovering from an attack of scarlet fever, and must not get too near the boys!"

Rubbing It Into Robson.

Here is an amusing story concerning Lord Robson. It was after he had been appointed Attorney-General, in 1908, that he one day entered a smoking-room at the House of Commons in a state of great enthusiasm. Seeing a friend sitting there with another gentleman, Sir William remarked to him that Mr. Lowther was quite the best Speaker under whom he had sat. Noticing that the friend was rather quiet, Sir William inquired what was the matter, and the answer came in a stage whisper, "Be careful what you say; that is Mr. Gully with me!" The Attorney-General fled! Meeting another friend walking along the corridor, he remarked to him: "I fear that I have put my foot in it dreadfully. I said to —— that the present Speaker was the best I ever sat under, and there was the late Speaker's son sitting a yard off me!" "Well, Robson, said the friend, "I don't know that you have made things much better. Allow me to introduce Mr. Peel!"

In the Diocese.

Related by marriage to the Lyttelton family, Dr. Talbot, the new Bishop of Winchester, shares their enthusiasm for cricket, and the story has often been told how, on one occasion, annoyed by a bowler's frequent wides, he said, "Please keep the bowling in the parish." The next ball took him plump in the waistband, and the bowler quietly observed, "I think that's in the diocese, my lord." Talbot is a thin figure of a man, and slightly lame. The story is told that, when he was walking in Leeds one day, a workman near him said to his mate, "He's weak i' the legs, isn't he?" "Yes," said the other man, "but he's strong enough i' the head."

Dog Cured by Waters.

Among the remarkable "cures" effected at Buxton, England, there is no more interesting case than that of a little dog. The "patient" suffered from rheumatism, but has now completely recovered, thank to the unfailing regularity with which it "took the waters" daily. This dog is so much a creature of habit that it will not pass the St. Ann's pump now until it has taken its usual dose.

In the treatment of summer complaints, the most effective remedy that can be used is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It is a standard preparation, and many people employ it in preference to other preparations. It is a highly concentrated medicine and its sedative and curative qualities are beyond question. It has been a popular medicine for many years and thousands can attest its superior qualities in overcoming dysentery and kindred complaints.

C. P. R. Floral Department

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co.'s floral department is sending out over 100,000 packages of seeds this spring to the agents, sectionmen and employees living on the company's property, and who are cultivating flowers around their buildings.

This department was established nearly twenty years ago in a very modest way and has grown, like the railway into colossal proportions. The Canadian Pacific Railway company want the best in the flower line as well as in everything else, and no quarter of the globe is too remote to seek for novelties, and no flower seeds or bulbs too expensive to be grown by the great railway company's flower lovers.

As usual, the flower lovers all over the continent have been asking for their seeds, and this year promises to be a banner one in gardens and lawns across Canada.

The great success of this plan is that every employee who has an opportunity, deems it a profitable pleasure to grow flowers, not only for the benefit of himself and family, but for the beautifying of the railway line and the improvement of civic conditions in every village, town or city. Last year prizes were given all over the system for the best flower gardens and the competition was very keen. Prizes will also be given this year, and in addition, prizes will be given for the best photographs of railway gardens on the Canadian Pacific Railway system.

The Irrigation Department is decorating its grounds with flower gardens and the forestry department in the west is taking keen interest in the subject. In addition to growing flowers many agents in the west grow vegetables and have little experimental farms at their stations.

GIROUARD'S RECREATIONS.

Late Judge Was Deeply Interested in Annals of Quebec Parishes.

The late Mr. Justice Girouard, in addition to being a jurist of high distinction, was a literary man of considerable attainment. After retiring from politics his chief recreation was the study and compilation of the annals of those Lake St. Louis parishes among which his family had their rise, and to which he himself returned to make his summer home at "Quatre Vents" in Dorval. The volume "Lake St. Louis," is one of the most fascinating in the whole realm of Canadiana. The English edition, sumptuously bound and illustrated, was published by the author as a memorial to his son, Desire H. Girouard, a young man of the utmost promise, who died shortly after completing the translation of the father's French version. It is, says a Montreal writer, rather a collection of pamphlets than a systematic work of history, for the labors of the Bench did not allow the eminent justice to become also a historian. In its preparation he ransacked the archives of the Dominion Government and personally inspected every building and landmark of importance on the western half of the Island of Montreal which bore evidence of having survived from pioneer times, and, moreover, he had exceptional facilities of access to the records of the ecclesiastical foundation. He may be said to have augmented the work of Parkman.

If the death of his son Desire was a profound disappointment to the father who had justifiably cherished the highest hopes of a great career for him, the brilliant success of his other son, Edouard (now Sir Edouard Percy Cranwell Girouard) crowned his later years with complete happiness. Edouard had all the family adventurousness, and the Dominion of Canada did not seem a large enough field for his ambitions when the Imperial British service called him. His name is now a household word in all parts of the Empire, and he is probably the most widely-known of French-Canadians, with the sole exception of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Up to the very end the relation of father and son was of the most intimate and beautiful kind. Though their field lay far apart, and they seldom met, they kept up an exceedingly detailed and regular correspondence.

Progressive Calgary.

The estimate of directory compilers place Calgary's population at 55,330. Directory figures are inclined to be just a little bit high. But allowance being made for this, the fact remains of extraordinary development taking place in the Alberta city. We have before us a document of the Board of Trade of Calgary issued in the year 1907. This pamphlet is beautifully and fetchingly illustrated. It is a cheerful, optimistic booklet, bold in its praise of Calgary's automobiles, and kine, and business blocks. How out of date it is! Calgary of 1907 was a city of but 22,000 souls. Is it that she has more than doubled her population in three years? The same directory authorities who have been referred to in this article assert that the increase of people drifting in during 1910 was 9,000 more than in 1909. Figure out the per cent. yourself. It has been stated that the Board of Trade's publication of 1907 is out of date. Its figures are now only archives; but the spirit which breathes is as true of Calgary to-day as of Calgary three years ago. Calgary is still the haven of the green-capped Englishman striking out West. There is still fat prize stock in Cow Town. The aroma of the plains Indians is there—some say—growing faint.—Courier.

Mercury Troubles.

Frost-bitten men are dropping into Edmonton these days. The trails are cold, the nights are long, the snow is deep—all of which may tend to confirm certain phases of Western conditions, sketched by a certain literary lady, who recently got into a brawl with Trade. According to despatches in Edmonton papers, the extreme rigor of northern temperature this year has kept many a mother's mail from its destination in the frontier places. When snowshoes have to break trail for the dogs, "it's very charming weather."

Played Truant

A boy twelve years old, with an air of melancholy resignation, went to his teacher and handed in the following note from his mother, before taking his seat:

"Dear sir: Please excuse James for not being present yesterday.

"He played truant, but you needn't whip him for it, as the boy he played truant with and him fell out, and he licked James; and a man they threw stones at caught him and licked him; and the driver of a cart they hung onto licked him; and the owner of a cat they chased licked him. Then I licked him when he came home, after which his father licked him; and I had to give him another for being impudent to me for telling his father. So you needn't lick him until next time.

"He thinks he will attend regularly in future."—Dundee Advertiser.

13 WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Came Away No Better and Then Two Boxes of Zam-Buk Worked Complete Cure.

Mr. Fred. Mason, the well known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N. B., says:—"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. I tried various remedies but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for 13 weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial, and although I had little hope of it doing me good, I took the advice. Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was cured."

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, sore feet, blisters, insect stings, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. Zam-Buk Soap should also be used for washing all wounds, eczemous patches and sores. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c per tablet or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

GRAND OLD MAN OF THE PRAIRIES

DECLARES HE OWES HIS SPLENDID HEALTH TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Suffered for twenty-five years from Rheumatism and Kidney Disease—Three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new man of him.

Swift Current, Sask. (Special).—Seventy-six years of age, but strong and healthy, Mr. J. P. Lackey of this place is one of the grand old men of the prairies. But Mr. Lackey has not always enjoyed his present health. "For twenty-five years," he says, "I suffered from Rheumatism, which I inherited. I was nervous. My limbs would swell and I had a severe pain across the back. I also had a heavy dragging sensation across the loins. I am a well man to-day and I attribute it all to three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. My Rheumatism and Kidney Disease have entirely disappeared."

Mr. Lackey is showing his appreciation of Dodd's Kidney Pills by buying them and presenting them to his friends. He has joined the great army of those who have learned from their own experience that as a giver of new life to old and young Dodd's Kidney Pills stand without an equal.

The Tablets cannot possibly do harm even to the newborn babe. They contain none of those poisonous drugs which make the so-called "soothing" mixtures so dangerous to the welfare of the little one. They are a scientific medicine prepared by one of the greatest specialists on childhood ailments and should be kept in every home where there are babies or small children. Mrs. Fred. Then read in these remarkable letters proof of what Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have done, throughout the world, for just such cases as yours.

Canada

When my boy was about three months old, his head broke out with a rash which was very itchy and ran a watery fluid. We tried everything we could but he got worse all the time, till it spread to his arms, legs and then to his entire body. He got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran. I had to put mittens on his hands to prevent him tearing his skin. He was so weak and run down that he took fainting spells as if he were dying. He was almost a skeleton and his little hands were thin like claws.

He was bad about eight months when we tried Cuticura Remedies. I had not laid him down in his cradle in the daytime for a long while. I washed him with Cuticura Soap and put on one application of Cuticura Ointment and he was so soothed that he could sleep. You don't know how glad I was he felt better. It took one box of Cuticura Ointment and pretty near one cake of Cuticura Soap to cure him. I think our boy would have died but for the Cuticura Remedies and I shall always remain a firm friend of them. There has been no return of the trouble. (Signed) Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ontario.

Australia

The trouble that affected my little girl started in her head like ringworm. Then it went all over her head. The head swelled, and it went in the form of matter and all the hair came off. It was very itchy. She could not sleep, and I began to think she would never get better. I tried a lot of advertised remedies but all to no avail. She was like this for over three months until I tried a pot of Cuticura Ointment. I had not used that pot before she was completely cured. The hair grew again, and you would never know that there had been anything wrong with her head. (Signed) Mrs. P. J. Collins, Merlwood, Humffray St. N., Ballarat East, Victoria.

United States

I have a little baby almost a year old. When it was two months old it got eczema on top of both her hands, on her face and inside her nose and mouth. She refused to drink and one of her eyes almost closed up. A hard crust formed and would crack open and the blood ran out. It itched so frightfully that the poor little girl could not rest. We had to keep mitts on her hands to keep her from scratching at her face and her mother was forced to sit in a rocking chair with the baby day and night. We had a very good doctor and he did all that he possibly could to relieve the baby's torture but the results were not what we had looked for.

We got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and in three days the crusts began to come off. In a week there was no more scab and now the baby is cured without a mark, sleeps soundly in her cradle and her parents in their bed, with no more sleepless nights because of the baby's suffering. "Cuticura" seems a wonderful remedy for this disease and any one having eczema should not delay in getting it. (Signed) Henry M. Fogel, R.F.D. 1, Bath, Pa.

England

If it had not been for Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I think my baby would never have gotten over her eczema. For five months she was covered with it, beginning with her head, and going right down to her feet. It started with white pimples, then they filled up, burst, and started to run, and she gradually got worse until she was red-raw all over her body. When we washed her, she used to bleed. We had her under the doctor's care for seven weeks, but he did her only temporary good, then she would be as bad as ever, suffering terribly with itching and burning.

Then the Cuticura Remedies were recommended to us by our friends. We got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and the first box gave her great relief. From that time the pimples started to dry up and fall off in little white scabs. Baby was always worse when she got warm in bed until we started with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and then she began to rest. We used to be awake all night with her, and nothing did her any good, but since using Cuticura Remedies we can rest all night. We used only two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and two cakes of Cuticura Soap, and they cured her completely of her eczema. (Signed) Mrs. Drewell, The Grange, Aldwark, Alne, nr. York.

Scotland

When our little boy Andrew was four months old, little red spots came on his head and face. Then they spread all over his head, so I took him to my doctor and he gave me an ointment to use. The spots became broken sores, and the ointment didn't do any good. Then I took him to the hospital. They gave me ointment which did no good. He was then a mass of sores on the head and face, and the child was suffering dreadfully. He would scratch the sores till they bled, so we had to tie his hands. The child was crying all the time with the terrible sore.

Then I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised, and tried them. I saw a great difference in a few days, the sores healed up quickly, so I kept on using Cuticura Soap and Ointment perhaps every other day. Now the child is completely cured, he is healthy and sleeps well. He suffered for about seventeen months before I tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We had given him up as hopeless, and someone said he would be better dead, his suffering was so terrible. I was almost out of my mind, for I could get no sleep for him always crying. Cuticura Soap and Ointment did him a world of good, and now there isn't a mark on him. (Signed) Mrs. Greig, 2a Windmill Lane, Edinburgh.

MADE WELL AND STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto.—I gladly give you my testimonial in favor of your wonderful medicines. Last October I wrote to you for advice as I was completely run down, had bearing down sensation in the lower part of bowels, backache, and pain in the side. I also suffered terribly from gas.

After receiving your directions, I followed them closely and am now entirely free from pain in back and bowels, and am stronger in every way.

I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby was born, and I recommend it highly to all pregnant women.—MRS. F. VANDBY, 92 Logan Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Another Woman Cured

Maple Creek, Sask.—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I am now in perfect health. I was troubled with pains every month. I know other women who suffer as I did and I will gladly recommend your medicine to them. You may publish this if you think it will help others.—MRS. F. E. COOK, Maple Creek, Sask.

A NEW PAVEMENT.

"The Iron Road" Is Arousing a Great Deal of Attention.

Borough councils of London have developed a sudden interest in what is called the "iron" road, and the national road board is equally alive to the possible revolutionary importance of the innovation. Several lengths were laid in Fulham some months ago, and Francis Wood, the borough engineer, declares that the results are more favorable than anybody concerned dared hope.

The principal countries of the world are besieging the London authorities for information, while engineers in the English provinces and in Scotland and Ireland are showing the liveliest interest.

"I am convinced," said Mr. Wood, who is the pioneer in this kind of construction, "that the iron road is the road of the future. One of its best features is its hygienic effect on the districts in which it is in use. Fulham has become decidedly healthier. Nearly 6,000 tons less of mud and dirt have been removed from the paved areas recently than during the corresponding period when the roads were of macadam.

"So smooth is the pavement that children returning from school may be seen chalking their sums on it. The effect of clean streets in the poorer neighborhoods has been to make the inhabitants ashamed of their dirty homes and bring them up to the standard of cleanliness outside.

"The new road promises a great reduction in taxes, for while it costs 84 cents a yard compared with 48 cents for macadam it lasts seventy or eighty years, or probably five times as long.

"In the manufacture of the new material sand and granite are shoveled into holders and automatically passed over hot cylinders, which thoroughly dry them. Then the two constituents are separated and left to await the arrival of bitumen or binding material, a black, flaky substance of volcanic production brought from Trinidad. The bitumen is put in tanks, melted and fluxed. Petroleum is then poured into a funnel-shaped contrivance with proportions of the dried sand and gravel. The whole is mixed by machinery consisting of grinding iron teeth. Below the mixer carts wait to carry away the material for use."

Famous Soldier-Diplomat's Inches.

Few members of the diplomatic service have had a more successful career than Sir Claude Macdonald, British Ambassador at the Japanese court, who will be home, to attend the coronation.

During his period as British minister at Pekin, Sir Claude conducted the whole of the negotiations with the Tsung-li-Yamen over the concessions which were just then being wrested from the Chinese Government, with Russia and Germany as powerful competitors. A few years later he was still at the same post when the Boxer rebellion broke out in the Chinese capital, and when the most gruesome reports of the murder of the entire foreign colony began to reach this country. Sir Claude was at the time appointed to the charge of the foreign Legation quarter, such was the confidence reposed in him by the representatives of the Great Powers.

An old Uppingham boy, Sir Claude entered the 74th Highlanders in 1872, and among the principal events in his military career were the Egyptian campaign of 1882, the Soudan operations of two years later, and the operations against the Brass River natives.

Sir Claude stands 6 feet 3 inches in his stockings.

"Old King Coal."

There are many people in Newcastle who remember Lord Joicey, whose valuable pictures at his Welsh seat were the object of a burglar's raid recently, working as a young clerk in his uncle's office. Now he is probably the largest coal-owner in the world, who has justified his nickname of "Old King Coal" by having enshrined on his coat of arms two pit ponies and two miners' picks. Some idea of the extent of Lord Joicey's resources may be gathered when it is mentioned that a year or two ago his firm took a lease of Lord Durham's pits at $5,500,000. And the capital expenditure was paid out of the profits within two years. Lord Joicey, who is the son of a Newcastle engineer, sat in the House of Commons for twenty years, and when the present Government came into power he was rewarded with a peerage.

Too Sensitive.

It was the first night after the show. The leading woman's mother was downcast.

"What's the trouble, dear?" asked the leading woman in surprise. "I made a brilliant hit to-night."

The old lady was surprised.

"Did you, Sophie? I heard the audience shouting 'Play right! Play right!' and I thought you had failed."

And the leading woman laughed in amusement.

"Why, my dear, they were shouting 'Playwright! Playwright!'"

A Peculiar Hobby.

The popular rector of St. Peter's, Walworth, Canon Horsley, has not only made a hobby of collecting burglars' tools, but he also collects snails. At the vicarage at Walworth he has a great number of snails' shells, all arranged and classified, and he very enthusiastically calls the attention of the visitor to their beautiful markings. When holiday-making, the canon spends a great deal of time collecting snails.

He Wrote For Money.

A father remonstrated with his son, an Oxford undergraduate, for wasting his time in writing for local papers and cited Dr. Johnson as saying that a man who wrote except for money was a fool.

The son wrote back immediately:

You Can Cure Chest Colds

And Bronchitis by Using DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE if You Get the Genuine

The mere mention of pneumonia and consumption causes a person to shudder, but a cold is such a common thing that it is too often left alone until these other ailments develop from it.

You can readily cure throat and chest colds, croup and bronchitis, by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This medicine is both thorough and far-reaching in its influence on the system. For this reason its merits are well known and its sales enormous.

But there are at least four imitations of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. And imitations are always a little cheaper, how else would they sell. They are never sold on their own merit but on the merit of the article they imitate.

Their likeness is in name only, and when you are in need of medicine you don't want to depend on a name or imitation. Every bottle of the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. 25 cents a bottle, family size 60 cents; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Oil of the People.—Many oils have come and gone, but Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil continues to maintain its position and increase its sphere of usefulness each year. Its sterling qualities have brought it to the front and kept it there, and it can truly be called the oil of the people. Thousands have benefited by it and would use no other preparation.

Eight or nine women, assembled at a luncheon, were discussing ailments and operations, as eight or nine, or one or two, or sixty or seventy women will. The talk ran through angina pectoris, torpid liver, tuberculosis, and kindred happy topics.

They Soothe Excited Nerves.—Nervous affections are usually attributable to defective digestion as the stomach dominates the nerve centres. There is no sedative like them and in the correction of irregularities of the digestive processes, no preparation has done so effective work, as can be testified to by thousands.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

IN THE SPRING MOST PEOPLE NEED A TONIC MEDICINE

If you want the best of health and new strength in the spring you must build up your blood with a tonic medicine. Following the long, indoor winter months most people feel depressed and easily tired. This means that the blood is impure and watery. It is this state of the blood that causes pimples and unsightly eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp, stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite, frequent headaches and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired out, ailing men, women and children. If you are feeling out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent by mail at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"In some of the provincial theatres the arrangements and construction are absurdly old-fashioned," remarked a conceited actor. "Last week, for instance, I was playing Hamlet at Seaport. PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

ARE you going to build that new horseblock, sidewalk or dairy house of cement? Then insist on your dealer supplying you with the "CANADA" Cement. Not only will this ensure your getting a pure, uniform and strictly high-grade cement, that will guarantee the lifelong permanency of the thing you build, but it will also entitle you to enter our Prize Contest. And in this contest you stand a good chance of winning a prize that will perhaps more than pay you for the cost of the work. Every farmer in Canada who uses "CANADA" Cement is eligible to compete. Four prizes will be awarded in each Province and these prizes will be divided as follows:

PRIZE "A"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who will use during 1911 the greatest number of barrels of "CANADA" Cement.

PRIZE "B"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who uses "CANADA" Cement on his farm in 1911 for the greatest number of purposes.

PRIZE "C"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with the photograph showing the best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement.

PRIZE "D"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who submits the best and most complete description, of how any particular piece of work shown by photograph sent in, was done.

Notice how we have purposely planned and imposed certain necessary conditions in order to give large and small users of cement an equal opportunity.

As an illustration of this: In prizes "C" and "D," the quantity of cement used has no bearing whatever on the result. The farmer who sends us the best photograph of as small a thing as a watering trough or a gate post, has as much chance for prize "C" as a man who sends a photograph of a house—and the same applies to prize "D."

Don't hold back from entering because you think you don't know anything about concrete work. It's very simple. Besides, we have a 160-page book that we will send you free on request, which tells you all about concrete and how to make and use it. In this book, you'll find complete instructions for the making of almost everything you can think of in the way of farm utilities, floors, vats, troughs, stairs, posts, etc.

This free book—entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"—will not only inform you—it will also greatly interest you. So send for it anyway, whether you intend to try for one of the prizes or not.

"HE WOULD A-WOOING GO"

"What she naturally expects."

"She will surely expect a solitaire."

AGAIN it is a masculine correspondent who supplies the topic for our familiar talk with the constituency of both sexes.

"Housemothers and housefathers, business women and business men, housemaids and salesladies 'who wouldn't be housemaids 'pon no account whatsoever,' if it were to save their immortal souls, school children and babies—all have a share of your motherly care and counsel and are commended to the consideration of the big family of which you are the benignant head.

"Why are we left out in the cold—the young fellows who would 'a-courting go,' if we could afford it? The youth of the ballad—

"'Would a-courting go,
Whether his mother liked or no.'

"The 'fellow' of today would fain do the same, if his means permitted him to 'go the pace' set by custom. We should like to follow the example of our fathers, and obey the precepts of our mothers and put aside regularly from our salaries something toward setting up homes of our own in a not-distant future. Each of us dreams and plans—and would be glad to save—for a wife and home of his own.

"I know you frown down everything like irreverence, but you will let me plead that I don't mean to be irreverent in saying that whenever I dream and plan, I cannot help thinking of a hymn my mother used to sing to us Sunday evenings, about

"'Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood.'

"To me matrimony—and with the right woman (God bless her!)—stands for the 'sweet fields.' The 'swelling flood' is courtship and the cost thereof. Have you, in safe recesses of mature matronhood, an approximate idea of what a fellow must pay to conduct a courtship of modest proportions in this day and generation? If not, let me know of the extent of your ignorance, and I will give you figures—which are facts! and as stubborn as any you have compiled in your editorials upon the 'increased price of living.'

"I am the junior partner in a law office, with a moderate and variable income, which—there is reason to hope and believe—will increase with time.

"There is a girl—but that is another story! I may never tell it to you—or to anybody else, for that matter. Perhaps not even to her, for she knows what are the conventionalities—and has a right to expect that they shall be obeyed.

"I say, can't you, in nautical phrase, 'bear a hand' here? Weigh roses, theater tickets, bonbons, drives in hired vehicles and rides upon livery horses—and compare them sensibly with bread and butter, a snug home of one's own, and peace of mind. Pshaw! You can do better than I could advise you how to go about it. LEX (Philadelphia)."

I had just filed the above letter, after marking it "Use soon," when my attention was attracted to an evening paper lying upon my desk.

The folds were fresh, the sheet was smooth, but it had been opened and refolded, so that an inner page was uppermost.

And, believe it or not, as you like, you who are infidel in the matter of providential coincidence, right across the top of that inner page, I read this heading:

"Cost of Courtship Like the Cost of Living, Has Gone Up—And Girls Are to Blame."

Over against the audacious declaration was the likeness of the man who was responsible for it.

Arthur T. Vance, the well-known editor, has anticipated "Lex" in the arraignment of existing conditions relative to the ever-important matter thrust upon our consideration by the flaring headlines. In yellow journalism they are known as "scare heads." If Mr. Vance and "Lex" speak but half the truth, the title is no misnomer.

Here is Mr. Vance's contention:

"The cost of courtship has gone up along with the price of eggs and carrots and porterhouse steak.

"A girl today hates to have people think her fiance is 'cheap.' There are hundreds whose pride stands between them and inexpensive attentions.

"Yet courting is not really a matter of cost—but of the girl."

In the interview with the editor from which these sentences are extracted, he backs them up by statistics which make unnecessary the "figures which are FACTS," offered by our young lawyer.

The two witnesses are absolutely in accord in the statement made in this paragraph from the newspaper report:

"Many a young man never goes so far as consideration of the cost of matrimony. He is staggered by the mere prelude to the show—the cost of courtship."

Sweeping aside custom and conventionalities, as we would cobwebs which, catching upon our lashes, hinder our examination of the specimen under the microscope, let us come down to the "bottom fact" indicated by the evidence. If the girl be to blame for the social evil, she is guilty of commercialism, and of a sordid type. In plainer language, she rates the value of her suitor by what he pays out in cold cash for her, and not for the qualities of mind and heart which should recommend him to her favor.

I grant—before hearing her indignant protest—that she has never admitted the disgraceful truth to herself. She has simply fallen into the habit taught her by other women and the practice of men in general. I grant as cordially that it is passing pleasant to appear abroad with one's fiance, or one's, as yet, unacknowledged lover, and to receive visible and tangible tokens of his devotion in the form of flowers and other gifts. We all like it! The first wrong step is the failure to enter into a mutual understanding upon this head.

Mr. Vance says that a young fellow, drawing a salary of from $18 to $25 per week, must expend from $10 to $16 upon an evening's entertainment enjoyed in company with his betrothed if he would come up to what she naturally expects from him. Items—flowers, tickets, cab or taxi, and supper. I subjoin that, as few young ladies of like taste and expectations would go to a supper at a restaurant unaccompanied by a chaperon, the cost of the "good time" would be greater than the original estimate.

I grant, in the third place, and more vigorously than before, by virtue of a smart spice of indignant contempt, that no man in his senses should, in such circumstances, so much as dare to contemplate courtship of a woman who, cognizant of the amount of his income, would allow him to squander his whole week's salary upon three hours' amusement for her! I go further: Running over, in my mind, the young women with whom I am most intimately acquainted, I do not believe that one of these would countenance the extravagance. It has been my happiness to have a bountiful assortment of brothers and cousins, nephews and grandnephews, a son and five grandsons, who have afforded me ample opportunities for studying this matter in various phases and in all stages. It has likewise been my good fortune to have had intimate friends among young men all my life, and to enjoy the proud privilege of acting as confessor general to not a few of these.

Thirty years ago a young lawyer showed me the engagement ring he had that day bought. It was, to my surprise, of plain gold, with the simple inscription on the inside: "From — to —."

"But, my dear boy!" I remonstrated, "she will surely expect a diamond solitaire! This sort of thing is, to say the least, unconventional. I have known girls who would not let their engagements be announced for months—waiting until their respective fiances could afford to buy the 'regulation article.'"

His confident laugh was pleasant to hear:

"Mary is of a different sort. She knows to a penny what my income is, and that I am straining every nerve to lay aside enough to warrant us in marrying next June. It was she who positively forbade me to think of the diamond. And that when I told her I had the money in hand. She is the most sensible, as she is the dearest, woman alive."

If it were not too much like the stereotyped "Moral" tacked on to fable and Sunday school anecdote, I would tell of the number of diamonds now in "Mary's" jewelry case, and of the beautiful home in which "the most sensible and dearest woman alive" now lives.

Another young fellow, whose rich father would not have blamed him had he gone beyond his allowance, had he seen fit to do it, confided to me that his reason for falling in love with a certain girl was the sound good sense she showed in proposing that they should take the street cars when overtaken by a shower on the edge of town, instead of letting him telephone for a taxicab or carriage.

"She's the right sort! No nonsense about her!" he pronounced.

One more quotation from our editor:

"It's a game of bluff on both sides. The young man wants to pretend he has a bigger salary than is really coming to him. The girl desires to convey the impression that she is used to all the luxuries of life. On the one hand it's a bluff of business position; on the other, that of social position. And between two bluffs the pocketbook falls."

I do not recollect who is entitled to the credit of defining courtship as "a period of varying length, during which two people are engaged to the best of their ability, in the work of deceiving one another."

This mutual-bluff business proves him to have been a sage of the first quality. Another sage and poet reminds us:

"What a tangled web we weave
When first we practice to deceive,"

To practice a deception when one is morally sure that it will be exposed in due time, is the rankest of follies, a tangle that is bound to be all hard knots some day.

Another side of the mutual-bluff game that should be taken into account by every girl of ordinary humanity is the cruelty of imposing upon the man who admires and loves her the necessity of depriving himself of the comforts of daily life, or borrowing from a wealthier friend, or—as happens quite as often as either of these things—filching from funds entrusted to him the extra dollars that make up the difference between seats in the balcony and orchestra chairs, a taxicab and trolley car, a restaurant supper or a quiet return to the girl's home.

"Good sense in proposing that they take the street cars."

I digress slightly here to drop a word into the ear of our girl's mother. One woman I know insists that the young people shall come straight home after lecture, theater or concert. If there be several of them, all the better. They always find a little supper awaiting them in her dining room, and if she have not accompanied them, she meets them at the door with the brightest of welcomes.

Her three daughters are immensely popular in their set, and go much in society. I have silently computed, sometimes, how many hundreds of dollars she must have saved their escorts, first and last, by her ready and tactful hospitality.

It is less easy to deceive a visitor as to a girl's social position than for the young man to throw a bluff as to his salary. He cannot call often upon her without knowing in what circle she moves. She may know him for years without guessing at the amount of his income. There is no disgrace in beginning one's business life near the foot of the ladder. Our most-millionaire makes it his boast upon the platform, at public meetings held for his especial glorification, that he came to town at 17 with but 10 cents in his pocket, and slept for ten nights upon the benches in the park across which the row of skyscrapers he now owns casts a proud shadow in this year of our Lord. Without making what, in homely parlance, goes as "a poor mouth," be brave and manly enough to say, "I cannot afford to do all that I would to please and entertain you now. We must wait a while."

To "Lex" and his class I submit as a morsel of matronly, common sensical and affectionate advice—take the "not impossible she"—("Her" is grammatical; but the other is a literal quotation, and sounds better to my ear) take the girl of your "other story" into friendly confidence at some convenient time. You need not name the precise number of dollars and cents that come to you weekly or monthly. But when you are sufficiently well acquainted with her to invite her to go to the theater or a concert with you, give her to understand—tactfully and laughingly—that you are not a Croesus, and must go slowly if you hope to rise in your profession. Ask her to be as frank with you as you are with her, and to tell you if she would prefer to stay quietly at home on some appointed evening, or go with you into the balcony of a first-class theater and see a "star" from that altitude. She can see and hear there as well as from the best box in the house. Tell her that you have tried this again and again, and in as good company as she will find below stairs. Make a jest of the whole expedition, if you like. The chances are even that she will confess to similar "larks" in company with other girls, or that her cousins, who are young married people, and obliged to be economical, have coaxed her to go upstairs with them, and that she enjoyed the frolic immensely. For, after all, the number of those who can afford to buy every week two, and three and four dollar tickets for a "show" is not so large as people who throw social bluffs would have you imagine.

As to flowers—a half-opened rose and bud, lighted up by a feathery spray of fern, will cost you 25 cents, and be a more refined offering at the shrine of your divinity than a tight wad of violets, for which you would pay a dollar. Mr. Vance says truly that you cannot give "street flowers" at 50 cents a bunch. But there is a very happy medium between these and the box of flowers he names as the alternative.

Be consistent throughout, and you can never be absurd or undignified.

It is odd to one on the outside of the orbit in which courtships are carried on to note how soon the economies, at which the enamored pair blush to hint before the wedding day, come into play afterward as topics of constant discussions. There is even poetry in the theme to some apprehensions when once the twain are made one. There is humor in the situation to others. As for example:

A big farewell dinner was given to a celebrated actress in New York last winter.

"I didn't see you there," remarked one literary man to another, next day. "Didn't you get a ticket?"

"Yes! accompanied by the information that I might pay $10 a plate. As I could not go without my wife, I stayed at home. My dear fellow, that $20 would keep us in dinners for a month."

The truth is that the speaker is fairly well to do, and rising rapidly toward fame, if not toward fortune. He is too sensible to throw money away upon a state dinner that might be spent to better purpose — that better purpose being something that would bring to him more abiding satisfaction.

Assert your right, as a man and a brother, to do the same. And the girl of the other story—which we trust may soon be the real and present told in "the old, sweet way"—will honor and love you the more for the true manliness which dictated your line of action and the courage that held you to it.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

From a Poor Mother

I CANNOT express my indignation at the contents of "Dame Van Winkle's" letter. Why lump the whole lot of "poor mothers" together any more than the school children?

My two children are half-fed and half-clothed, not because I am lazy or ignorant of the value of different food products, but because I am one of the very poor.

It is an insult to hundreds of Philadelphia mothers to say, "What class of mothers does not read 'The Housemothers' Exchange.'"

We are so poor that your paper is the only reading matter we can buy. My husband and I are as hungry for a magazine as our children are for an orange; and as my husband came home out of work last week, I suppose we shall be nearly for more than magazines before long.

Our poverty is not due to laziness, drink, nor to lack of ambition. It is the result of labor conditions as they now exist. I know, positively, that behind clean windows and neat shades there are more empty stomachs and brave hearts than "the other half" dream of. Cannot you give poor mothers a talk some time?

That is, if you can grasp the situation of becoming real people again to us in seven days.

You know we pay as much for the paper as the more fortunate do. Yet my motto is "Hope."

J. D. B. (Germantown, Pa.).

I wish it were practicable for me to transfer to this sheet a facsimile of the letter I print instead. The handwriting is exquisite in form and clearness, with the unmistakable stamp of the educated woman in every line of the composition.

And brave though she is, there is a moan in the indignant protest against what to her sore heart seems cruel injustice. May I remind her that the letter which so stirred her mother-soul has no reference—especially—to Philadelphia women? It is from the pen of a New York state woman and is critical of my objections to cold luncheons for school children. I quote the concluding sentences which have wrought up one mother into fierce rebellion of the writer's strictures:

"The half-fed, half-clothed children of the very poor are another proposition. They should be considered from a charitable standpoint.

"I may add, that class of mothers does not read the Housemothers' Exchange.

"Don't lump the whole lot of public school children together because some mothers are too poor and others too lazy to care properly for their children."

I entreat our protesting member to dismiss the suspicion that such as herself can, by the widest stretch of imagination, be supposed to fall under the head of the lazy or the ignorant parent. By her own admission, she is poor in this world's goods—or that kind of "good" that may be bought with money. She has a husband who is willing to work; who is sober and intelligent, and who sympathizes in her intellectual tastes. Her children are still living, and they have a chance of bettering the family fortunes in a country where few prosperous men are born rich, I add, and with significance, where rickets are too often a curse in the second generation to be regarded as an unalloyed blessing.

Those empty stomachs and brave hearts behind clean windows and neat shades belong to a class of all upon God's earth the most worthy of relief. If it were practicable, I should be willing to "stump" the United States for a year to collect funds for the indigent who toil and suffer hunger and cold, and make no moan except in the ear of him who, for some reason which is and must ever remain a mystery to us, their fellowbeings, permits them to carry weight until they lay it down at the tomb.

A clever paper appeared in one of our magazines a year ago, the title of which has haunted me ever since, "The Halfway Poor."

Our correspondent of the stout heart belongs to what we might call "The Three-Quarters Poor." Were my ebullioned society for the relief of the silent "poor" in operation, she should not have to say again that her children are half-fed and half-clothed; her husband should be set to work without waiting for the "prosperity" that is to give "a job" to every idle artisan and clerk who now walks the streets, seeking for honest employment and finding none.

And all this we would do without exposing their unmerited poverty to curious eyes.

Since this cannot be under existing conditions of labor and so-called charity, we of the Exchange can at least satisfy the hunger for magazines and other reading matter without wounding or annoying our member.

Her address is in my hands, and it will be passed over confidentially to any one who may desire to send magazines and books through our Circulating Library to this worthy family.

Cannot Ask for Clothes

It brings actual and acute pain to my heart to say to "Mary" (Wilmington, Del.) that the rules of the Exchange do not permit us to ask for clothing—new or second hand. We distribute hundreds of garments yearly, the donations of our visitors who investigate cases of distress brought to our notice. We cannot solicit such things.

Otherwise, I should gladly lay before our members the sad story of the motherless children (eight in number) of whom she writes so feelingly. I particularly regret our inability to help a youth who is feebly convalescent after a spell of typhoid fever. We have a liberal and intelligent chapter of our order in Wilmington. Will not some of them write for the address of "Mary" (Wilmington, Del.), and learn from her particulars of the moving tale?

Recipe for Rose Beads

I take pleasure in sending recipe for rose beads, requested by "Mrs. G. W. B." (Los Angeles, Cal.).

If you would have them very sweet, get the petals of the most fragrant roses—such as American beauties and Duchesse—grind them to pulp in a food chopper, and put this, with all the juices, into an iron kettle. This is to turn the pulp black, which none but an iron kettle will do. When it is of the consistency of dough with cooking, it is ready to mold into beads. Have ready a clean board a foot square or thereabouts, and plenty of pins. Break off a bit of the paste of the size you want for a bead, and roll in the palms of your hands until it is round. Stick a pin through it, and run the point into the board, taking care the bead does not touch the latter. That would flatten and mark the shape of the head. Leave the beads thus impaled until they are thoroughly dry. If you wish to polish them, take a tiny bit of vaseline in the palm of your hand and rub the hands together until only a suspicion of grease shows. Pick a bead from a pin and roll between the palms until every particle of vaseline has disappeared. If you prefer the dull finish, leave the beads as they are when taken from the pins.

String them as your taste dictates. Some alternate them with small gold or colored beads. Others leave the string all black. When you are not wearing them, keep in a closed box or case to preserve the fragrance.

I wish all success to her who tries this.

AN ANAHEIMER (Anaheim, Cal.).

You have done us a wonderfully good turn in contributing a recipe for which we have sought in vain for some years. The process is so simple that no rose-grower need fear to try it, and in this day of necklaces, many and varied, there will be numerous readers eager to possess the fragrant beads that suggest "the perfumes of Araby."

Salad Recipes

Please let me know if you have a book of salad recipes you can confidently recommend to me. Or where one may be procured and at what price. Mrs. J. B. (Taft, Cal.).

I have none in my library of cookbooks, nor do I know of one that is up to date and comprehensive. I shall be glad to supply you with the title of any really excellent manual upon salad-making of which I receive information from correspondents.

Salt-Rising Bread

A capital letter, the one fault of which is that it is altogether too long for our page, gives a graphic account of the writer's struggle with a recipe for salt-rising bread.

We tried the recipe of "Mrs. H. J. R." (Mills, Pa.). When half through, we were not sure about several things. We just guessed at it, and—wonder of wonders!—it was good! My husband thought it fine, and I was enraptured, for neither my maid nor I had ever made a loaf of bread before in our lives.

The recipe says, "Two tablespoonfuls of salt, two of sugar, salt and flour."

Well, how much salt and flour, for instance, for two small loaves?

She says again, "Mix in the meal-raising and warm water, according to quantity of bread to be made."

Does she mean the meal-raising and warm water that are together already "working" in a bowl from the day before, as she directed—"soda, cornmeal and potato water"—all, or part of it? Or does she mean by "meal-raising" the entire contents of the bowl already prepared, and enough warm water besides to make the dough? We put in all the raising we had made, and then added more warm water to make the dough of the right consistency. Was that right?

She did not say how much potato water to use, nor how long to bake the bread. I wish I could find out about these things, for I should like to make good salt-rising bread. Two small loaves are enough for us.

I know this letter is too long to be printed entire. Maybe you can print enough of it to help me to find out exactly how to make the bread.

CONSTANT READER (Omaha, Neb.).

Pending the answer of "Mrs. B. J. R." suppose you make it again exactly as you and your maid made it before? You were successful in the trial trip. Try a second along the same lines. It is a pity that John should have to wait for another editor of his favorite loaf until the member from Pennsylvania can read your queries and respond through the Corner. What woman has done the same woman can do again.

K. R. S. (Chicago).

Your requests are referred to housemothers in general; the second to our competent corps of German cooks.

"Back to the Soil"

The German economist who visited Kansas City told the truth, as we know it here, and told it well. There are too many people in towns and too few in the country. We will have the problem instead of the solution as long as women would rather live in cities than on the farms.

The doctrine of "back to the soil" may be preached to the men until talkers are black in the face; and even if many of the men are converted and can get access to the land, they won't go there unless women go, too, and willingly. Yet farm life is not what it used to be. One can be comfortable and contented if one will interest one's self.

I append a few recipes I know to be good. Good, sweet lard, home rendered, is all right for cakes of all kinds.

Mocha Filling

Pour 4 tablespoonfuls of boiling coffee over 2 of cocoa and a piece of butter the size of an English walnut. Thicken to the desired consistency with about a cupful of powdered sugar. Flavor with vanilla.

It will not harden.

Custard Pie

Beat 3 large eggs or 4 small, yolks and whites together, and when they are light and smooth add 6 tablespoonfuls of sugar, 1 tablespoonful of butter, 3 cupfuls of milk, a few grains of salt, and flavor with both nutmeg and vanilla.

Wend the ingredients thoroughly and heat to lukewarmth. Then pour the mixture into a dish lined with a good crust of pastry and set into a quick oven, that the pastry may bake before the custard has time to soak into it. Now allow the oven to cool off somewhat, and when the custard is set (which should be in about half an hour) remove at once from the oven.

This will make a large pie, with a deep jellylike custard filling.

I have other recipes for pies with milk and egg filling which we think delicious.

I tried the recipe for ginger snaps, in which the molasses was brought to a boil and soda added. The recipe called for no shortening, but I added some, and the "snaps" were delicious.

C. E. M. (Franklin Grove, Ill.).

Had I used the recipe for ginger snaps I, too, should have added a little butter. Otherwise, they would hardly have been crisp enough to "snap." But there's no accounting for tastes. A woman writes to me for directions for making her waffles crisp, when, in our opinion, the waffle should be soft. When tough or hard, it is uneatable. At least so we think.

Rose Petals

I read in the Exchange a while ago under the heading, "An Ancient Art Revived," an inquiry how to make beads from rose leaves.

My trouble is to get the petals to begin with.

And I should like to hear more, and in detail, of that rhubarb cure.

Finally, won't the beauty editor give me that magic shampoo recipe, made from some (to me unknown) root?

I am a new reader and not conversant with the rules respecting correspondence.

H. H. A. (Decatur, Ill.).

You are heartily welcomed to our Family Circle.

As to rose petals, if you cannot get them "when green leaves come again," and buds and blossoms with them, and your friends have gardens of their own, engage them to save the petals of full-blown roses for you as they fall. Or leave an order with your florist for the waste petals of those he cannot sell.

The member who told of rhubarb will go further into particulars before long. She will do this [illegible]

Your appeal to the Exchange for a shampoo from the beauty editor is excusable, because you are frankly ignorant of our rules. I have nothing to do with the care of hair or of the skin so far as taking care of the complexion goes—or atoning for the want of it. The work of the Exchange is entirely separate from the department ably managed by the beauty editor.

Another rule enjoins that every communication shall be accompanied by the real name and full address of the writer. You will write to us again, now that you are initiated into the order?

P S—We Do Repairing

Coronation Day was very quietly observed in this city, the majority of our citizens celebrating out of town, either at No. 7 or at the Sunday school picnics held at Millard's and Royston beaches. A most enjoyable time is reported at each of these places. We would liked to have seen Cumberland enter more into the spirit of the day, with a more liberal display of flags and bunting. A confire at night would not have cost much, as we have an abundance of the necessary, which we are sure the Company would have been only too pleased to donate, for the asking. Cumberland did not do herself much honor on this auspicious occasion, nor was her apathy or indifference complimentary to our king. Taking it all in all, we think our city could have done considerably better.

Coronation Day at No. 7 mine.

The committee who had charge of the arrangements for the games at No. 7 mine on Thursday, June 22nd, beg to thank the ladies of No. 7 for the very generous donations of cakes, etc., also the business men of Cumberland who subscribed very liberally towards making the day a great success. We also desire to thank the members of the Cumberland band for their attendance and for the very excellent selections rendered during the afternoon. Great credit is also due to the ladies' committee, Mesdames Jas. Gray, Wm. Duncan, Tony Gaichan, for the very able manner in which they discharged their duties as hostesses.

A large number of people were present from Cumberland. After the sports were over dancing was indulged in in the dining room kindly given by Mr. Blatchford.

The sum of $65.10 was collected which was spent in giving every child at No. 7 a present, according to their ages. About $9.00 were given as prize money, and the following is a list of the prize winners:—

Boys' race, 9 to 11 years, 1st, Robert Gray; 2nd, Felix Bararra

Girls' race, 10 to 12 years, 1st, Charlotte Jaynes; 2nd, Emma Gaichan.

Boys' race, 6 to 8 years, 1st, Wm. Menzies; 2nd, John Brown

Girls' race 6 to 8 years, 1st, Edith Whyte; 2nd, Flo Gaichan.

Boys' race, 4 to 6 years, 1st, Wm. McAllister, 2nd, W Brown.

Chinks' race, Sing Lee.

Standing jump, Chas. Powell

Hop-step-and-jump, Thomas Cairney.

Married ladies' race, 1st, Mrs David Gray; 2nd, Mrs Felix Barama; 3rd, Mrs Thos. Beveridge.

Young ladies' race, 1st, Miss Leoman; 2nd, Miss Hayman.

One very interesting feature in the games was the interest taken in the teams who took part in the tug-of-war. There were five teams entered. The names of the successful team were as follows: M Molesick, Thos Beveridge, Geo Archibald, D Paterson.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Statesman.

It must by accounts received be a source of great pleasure to all loyal Canadians of all parties, political or otherwise, to know that their representative at the Imperial conference, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, stands head and shoulders in influence above any other representative there, as evidenced by the fact that what he proposes is generally adopted and what he opposes is generally withdrawn after full discussion. He is specially honored by all public men from His Majesty down, and all the newspapers that carry any weight in the United Kingdom, of whatever party, whilst not always agreeing with his views in some respects, refer to him as easily the most commanding personality at the conference, some going so far as to say that his absence would have been a national loss, materially detracting from the importance of the Imperial questions under discussion, his long experience and ripe judgment of colonial interests fitting him in an unique degree for protecting and safeguarding them so that they shall have their due share in shaping the Imperial policy of the Empire, for the upholding and defending of which they will then be at the service of that Empire to the utmost extent of their power and ability—to their last man and their bottom dollar, if necessary.

Some pessimists are disposed to mourn over the "declining spirituality" of the churches. What do they say of an educated ministry contented with a clerk's wages? What is the inspiration that sends an honor graduate in philosophy and classics to a draughty parsonage with a leaky roof? What fervor of the soul is it which impels a man of scholarly tastes to dwell forever on the edge of financial embarrassment? Many such must necessarily be well paid hereafter, for they are paid poorly enough here. Still they are no complaining.—Toronto News.

Coronation Dance at Comox.

One of the most successful dances ever held in Comox was given on June 22nd by the young ladies of the district. The hall was most beautifully and tastefully decorated with flags and bunting. To add variety to the usual dances, songs suitable to the occasion were renderd by Miss McDonald and Messrs Hillier and Sackville, and last, but not least, Mr J. B. Holmes gave a speech and recitation in his inimitable style, which was received with thunderous applause.

The flower stall was a great attraction, and purchasers many and liberal. The refreshments were tempting and delicious, and particularly well served. Fortune telling added greatly to the amusement of the evening, the gypsy like all the rest of that class did you at every turn, selling fortunes—one for ten cents, special reduction of two for 25c.

The proceeds are to be given to the Anti-Tuberculosis Soc'y.

Special praise is due to Miss Wilson who originated the entertainment, and to all the young ladies who so ably assisted her.
