THE CORNER STORE, DUNSMUIR AVENUE

A meeting of miners and their wives was held in Cumberland Hall on Tuesday evening to discuss the matter of sending or not sending their children to school. A large majority of those who spoke on the question were in favor of keeping the children at school, especially the mothers, who could not see what good could be accomplished or how it would help matters out to keep them away. No action was taken, the matter being left to the discretion of the parents.

George Richardson and Alex Maxwell left by Sunday's boat for Vancouver.

There must be fully a hundred provincial police and specials in town and vicinity.

COURT OF REVISION

A Court of Revision to revise the voters list for the city of Cumberland, will be held in the City Council Chambers on Tuesday, Dec. 10th, 1912 at 7.30 p. m.

A. McKINNON, C. M. C.
City Hall, Nov. 1912.

Some of of the outside papers have us down as being a hot bunch up this way.

The charge against Connors, Goodwin, Taylor and Hill, for assault on J. Thompson and wife, was tried before J. P's Bate and Willard on Monday. They were all committed for trial. No defence was entered. The case against T. Tapella in connection with last Monday week's affair in front of Kiersted's blacksmith shop, which came up before Magistrate Abrams on Saturday, was adjourned until Thursday, as was the case against two women for assault.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

The following is quoted from the Victoria Week;—"The Week is authorized to announce that the Western Fuel Company of Nanaimo, has changed hands. It has been acquired by a London Company, which has just issued a prospectus setting forth the record and prospects of the Company and announcing its future policy. The capital is $7,500,000, a very moderate amount and one which compares favorably with the capital of the Canadian Collieries, Ltd., especially when one remembers that the output is practically the same. Mr. Thomas Stockett, who has been General Manager of the Company for nearly ten years, is being retained and promoted to the important position of Managing Director. Mr. Stockett is a gentleman of the highest professional attainments and personal character and and has well earned the honourable distinction conferred upon him. Under his guidance the future of the Company is assured.

That remarkable Year Book on Storms, Weather, Earthquakes and Astronomy, The Rev. Ir Hicks Almanac for 1913, the finest and best ever issued, is now ready. Send only 35c to Word and Works Publishing Company, 3401 Franklin Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., and you will receive a copy propaid, also one copy of the Rev Ir Hicks Magazine, Word and Works.

Mr. T. Bickle and his daughter, Miss Louisa Bickle arrived from Victoria on Tuesday.

Sunday's outgoing train was well filled with passengers.

Victoria, Nov. 23.—Conditions in the strike zone of which Cumberland is the centre were somewhat better yesterday, according to reports received at the attorney general's department through Superintendent Campbell. On Thursday considerable disorder prevailed, men and women (wives, daughters and female sympathizers) jeering those workers who have returned to their employment, breaking a few windows and otherwise disturbing the peace of the town. No arrests were made, Chief Constable Stephenson contenting himself with issueing a warning. Nearly one hundred special police are now in charge.—Ex.

Vancouver, Nov. 22.—At the ceremonial session of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine now being held here, Stephen Jones, of Victoria, chief rabban, made the most significant speech of the evening in response to the toast to Gizeh temple. He appealed to all the nobles to assist in the completion of the $50,000 temple which is now being erected in Victoria, and reminded them that this temple should be made as handsome as possible, as Gizeh Temple had now 515 members, and was second largest temple in Canada. Forty two nobles from Victoria attended in a body, many of them accompanied by their wives, and almost every city in British Columbia was represented at the session. Many visitors attended from Nile Temple, Seattle, and Afifi Temple, Tacoma, and the initiation and banquet was one of the most successful and best attended gatherings of Shriners held in the Pacific Northwest.—Ex.

POLICE COURT.

Peter Shearer appeared before Messrs Shaw and Willard, J. P's on Tuesday, to answer to a charge of assault preferred against him by Chief Constable Stephenson. Upon being asked how he pleaded, he replied, guilty. The prosecution on behalf of the police, was conducted by Mr. Shoebotham, who stated, that from circumstances that he did not then wish to enter into, and as the defendant had very wisely pleaded guilty to the charge, he would not press for a heavy penalty, but that this fact was not to be taken as a precedent in any way, for in the event of a repetition either by the defendant or any other person, he would strongly urge for the fullest penalty the law allowed, as the government was determined that the law should be observed in Cumberland, and that no citizen should be deterred from walking the streets without molestation of any kind. The accused was fined $10 and costs, which was paid.

Frank Farrington, of Illinois. U. S., member of the International Board of the U. M. W. of A., delivered an address in Cumberland Hall on Saturday night, under the auspices of the local U. M. W. of A. He is a fine speaker, and gave some excellent advice, advising order and coolness during this strike. He informed his audience as to the conditions existing among the coal miners of West Virginia, where they have no unions, in contrast with miners in the states which have unions. He stated that the condition of the West Virginia miner was little better than that of a slave. Addresses were also delivered by Messrs Foster and Irving The women who were present seemed to be as deeply interested in the addresses as the men, if not more so. Mr. J. Naylor presided.

Contrast the opinions of Revs. Father Vaughan and Ross on Socialism in Cotton's Weekly of Nov. 14th. It is worth reading.

Coroner Abrams visited Rock Bay last week to hold an inquest on two loggers, who died from the effects of drinking wood alcohol.

Chief Stephenson has been approached by the leaders of the Union, requesting him not to prefer any more charges against anyone, and they would guarantee there would be no more trouble. He has the matter under consideration.

Hugh Miller's residence at Happy Valley, was totally destroyed by fire at about 1 o'clock on Sunday morning The fire was caused by the upsetting of a coal oil lamp. The contents of the house were destroyed with the building. This is hard luck for Mr. Miller, especially at this time of the year. The U. M. M. W. of A. at a meeting on Sunday night voted $100.00 toward his relief. There was no insurance.

Mr. J. W. Little, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. James Abrams, died at Vancouver on Wednesday last. He died while undergoing a second operation for stomach trouble. Mr. and Mrs. Abrams and Miss Queenie Abrams left for Vancouver on Sunday to attend the funeral, which took place on Monday.

Mr. Little was a well-known business man of Vancouver.

It is now "Chief" Harry Creech, and Harry is tickled about it.

Self-controlled? He might be so outwardly, but what manner of self-control was that which could hunger for another man's death, in order that he might marry the other man's wife? Tomlinson interrupted his train of thought.

You'd better come and see that fellow at once, he said dragging himself from his chair. He's been on the ramp for the last two hours; now he's fairy quiet. But I tell you fairly, Dynecourt, I've had a devil of a time with him. I daren't leave him alone for a minute. Looks a quiet sedate enough chap, too. What on earth sent him off his head?

Even sedate people sometimes go off their heads, was the evasive reply, and the two men did not speak again until, having crossed the hall and walked down a long corridor, they entered a room at its furthest end. A rough-looking man was seated at the table reading a newspaper, and crouched in an armchair by the window, his eyes fixed upon the sunset, sat Soames. He was very quiet, his face wore an expression of profound melancholy bordering on despair, and he was so absorbed in his own meditations that he did not turn from the window when the doctors entered.

Quieter? Tomlinson asked the rough attendant in a whisper.

He's quiet enough now, the man answered gruffly; he's been giving me beans, I can tell you. Wore himself out, that's what he's done.

Moved by an impulse of pity, Dynecourt walked across the room to the chair by the window, and put a hand gently on the lawyer's shoulder. At his touch Soames started violently, and looked up at him with a mingling of fear and perplexity which slowly turned to recognition.

Why—it's— Dynecourt! he said, seizing and grasping the other hand. Thank God you've come! I—do you know—I believe, —his voice sank to a dreadful whisper—I believe—I believe I've been mad, but I'm not mad any more, and I've got to tell you—to tell you.

CHAPTER XXIII

Soames Escapes

To tell me what? Dynecourt's tones were very gentle, that first impulse of pity that had directed him to step towards the wretched man still swayed his heart: he was sorry for Soames sorrier than he had been for anybody for a long, long time.

I can't say things to you with those other fellows in here, the lawyer answered, glancing uneasily at Tomlinson and the attendant. They'll make you think I am mad again, he whispered. I—I'm not mad now; I'm sane—dreadfully sane — dreadfully sane, he repeated in a dreary monotone.

Do you mind leaving me alone with Mr. Soames for a few minutes, Tomlinson? Dynecourt said. I want to have a little chat with him, and I'll come into your study afterwards.

Tomlinson came forward and whispered in Dynecourt's ear.

I'm not prepared to say it is safe for you to stay alone in here with him. He was a raving maniac an hour ago, and will probably be the same again in another hour.

I think I can manage him, Dynecourt spoke curtly in low tones. I had to tackle him alone all last night. Tomlinson shrugged his shoulders, laughed shortly, and with his uncouth servant slouched out of the room, leaving Oliver and Soames alone together.

The lawyer's head had sunk upon his breast, the animation which at sight of Dynecourt had temporarily lighted his features had died away, his eyes looked dull and heavy. He sat hunched up in an attitude beckoning profound misery, and his hands moved backwards and forwards with restless twitching movements that seemed to imply some deep distress of mind.

You wanted to tell me something? Dynecourt said at last, watching him intently for a few moments.

Wanted to tell you something? the miserable man said, frowning with the effort to collect his rambling thoughts and looking vacantly into the other's face. Tell you—oh! it's Dynecourt. His accents took on a note of relief. I thought it was that ruffian who has been on guard all day, or that other drunken brute. Look here, why am I here? That's what I want to know? Why am I here, being watched as a mouse is watched by a cat. Tell me why—

You know you weren't very well, Dynecourt's voice was very gentle, and my friend Tomlinson has a—well, it is a Home for people who aren't well.

Soames glanced up at him with a leer.

You mean people who are as mad as hatters, he said, though I've never been able to understand myself why hatters should be any more than mad than other people. Do you understand it?

O! it's only a saying. Dynecourt spoke cheerfully, seating himself by Soames' side. I thought you would be better down here in the quiet than in all the racket of town. It was I who sent you here.

Oh, was it? Then I wish to heaven!—but I haven't told you yet what I've got to tell you. The blustering tones in which his sentence had begun died into a tremulous whine. Dynecourt, for God's sake listen to me! I'm as sane now as you are, but I was mad. I know I was mad, because his face—you know whose face I mean—peeped at me from every corner And it wouldn't have done that if I wasn't mad.

Well, well, you are not mad now; try not to worry about what's past and gone. Try—

Ah! but I can't forget. All day I've seen him. All day he's followed me, in and out, up and down, with his dead face scowling at me. And now I've only got rid of him at last because I've promised him I'll make a clean breast of what I did.

Promised him—that you—

That I'll tell the truth, Soames broke in. A little while ago I should have bluffed it out, but now—I can't bluff any more. I can't stand seeing Tritton everywhere—everywhere, I tell you! he cried excitedly. And it's no use my telling him I never meant to kill him. He won't believe me. I only quieted him when I promised to make a clean breast of everything.

A clean breast of everything! That would mean—Dynecourt's brain whirled as he looked out at the veil of evening light over the trees. Everything, would mean the whole story of his bargain with Soames, and the thought of that transaction being dragged into the light of day was unendurable. Soames' confession too, would set Miles Hernesley free, and he was not sure that he wished Miles Hernesley to be set free, even though Dorothy—ah, even though Dorothy had written and implored him to help her. There was the rub. Dorothy's appealing letter tore at his heart-strings on the one hand, whilst on the other they were tugged hard by his passion for her. But, if his transaction with Soames once came to Dorothy's ears, she would never have anything more to do with him; of that he was quite certain. Therefore it was more than ever imperative to silence Soames, and hinder that confession for which the guilty man longed. But again, if Soames confessed, and if he could in any way make it appear that he had been instrumental in bringing about the confession, Dorothy would know that her appeal had taken effect, and Dorothy would never forget her gratitude to him. If he could contrive that Soames should confess—and escape justice? If a trial could be avoided, with all the examination and cross-examination that must drag every fact before the public; if, when Soames had eased his soul by confession, he Oliver, could get him away—why then he would have acted upon Dorothy's appeal and yet—

You see I'm a broken man, Soames' tremulous accents cut short the line of thought. I no more meant to be a murderer than you meant to be one, Dynecourt started. How often he had committed murder in his heart by wishing Miles Hernesley dead and out of his way! But I killed him—you'd better let me write it all down now. I'm not mad any more, I killed him and nobody else ought to suffer for what I did. I shan't get that money now. Dynecourt—you'll get it right enough when you marry Lady Hernesley. But I shan't have my share. It was the money that made a criminal of me; if I hadn't wanted that accursed money I should never have wanted Tritton out of the way.

His weary voice rambled on monotonously, but the ring of sincerity in his accents told Dynecourt that, at least for once in his life the astute lawyer was no longer speaking with the intention to deceive. He was telling the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Life has been intolerable since—since the day I met him in the lane, the slow, monotonous voice continued. I would rather give myself up now and have done with it than go on enduring such horrors. He shivered. Can't you take me to the police station right away, and let me give myself up!

Virginia—Well, he seems to be able to make an honest living.

Cynthia—Yes, but heavens! who wants to marry a man of that kind nowadays?

There never was a man so insignificant that he could not be annoying.

There is an auditor in every man's life to frequently check him up.

Terrible Itching Got Little Sleep

Mr. T. Williams, Winnipeg.

Until Cuticura Remedies Cured Him

Those who have suffered long and hopelessly from torturing skin eruptions will read with interest this letter from Mr. T. Williams, 115 Pacific Ave., Winnipeg (dated Jan. 14, 1911): "The Cuticura Remedies certainly did work finely and I am thankful that there [illegible] three months ago a terrible itching commenced on my body. I could not understand it. It gradually grew worse and covered a large portion of my body. There was also a slight eruption of the skin, sort of a rash. I suffered greatly with the itching and at night time I had little sleep. I tried one or two remedies which did no good, and then I tried Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. In about ten days I was completely cured."

For more than a generation the Cuticura Remedies have afforded the speediest and most economical treatment for itching, burning, scaly and bleeding skin and scalp humors, of young and old. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, with 32-p. book on the care of the skin and treatment of its affections, send a postal to the Potter Drug & Chem. Never Asked a Fee

A granite shaft erected by popular subscription soon will mark the grave of Dr. Joseph Dawson, a physician who never asked a fee.

Dawson was buried in the little town cemetery two years ago, but his grave always has been unmarked. Nobody knew just when Dawson came. He arrived with one friend—a collie dog and soon established a wide practice. Those who wished to pay for his services could do so, but he never insisted on a fee. What money he did not use for the actual necessities of life he gave to charity. To the curious he said:

I came here from California. There I have a wife and child. I like your town and I'm going to stay here.

For 10 years Dawson lived with his dog as a sole companion. When he died the tribute paid to him was: "He had more friends than any man in the country."

Long Standing Asthma.—Many have suffered so long from asthma and have tried so many so-called remedies they think that there is no real help for them. They should read the letters received by the manufacturers of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy from hundreds of cases once as desperate as their own. Even in long-neglected cases this famous preparation brings prompt help.

General Booth's Will

By his will the late General Booth has left not only all that was vested in him as General, but also his private property amounting to £487 19s to the Salvation Army, while the property (now valued at £5,295) which the late Henry Reed left for the General's private use—and which had enabled the General to live without drawing anything from the Army funds—has been divided among his children—Bramwell, Catherine, Marian, Herbert, Eva and Lucy. Personal mementoes were left to all his children and children-in-law.

Members of the House of Commons when they light-heartedly assented at the beginning of the season to the reappointment of the select committee to inquire in the expenditure on stationery and printing for the House of Commons and the Public Service generally did not presumably anticipate that some of their own little Parliamentary foibles would be ruthlessly exposed to the public gaze by their colleagues.

Few people will disagree when they learn that $45,000 worth of paper is used at Westminster every year and that of this sum $10,000 is for special papers to suit individual preferences.

Blocking Traffic

There were times when McFee gloried in the fact that he was the father of nine children, even if they were on the lines of the proverbial human stepladder, but on the day when he was taking them out for a walk he felt chargrined.

He was walking along at a fairly good gait when he was halted by a policeman, who asked:

I say, you, what you been doin'?

Nothing, replied McFee. Why?

Well what's the crowd following you for?

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmeleee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

Bill was Game

Bill had been attending a banquet of his lodge. It was early when he got home—very early—along about 5.30 a.m. He didn't know how in thunder he could explain it to Mrs. Bill. So he took off his shoes and tiptoed very carefully.

But Mrs. Bill heard him. What time did you get home last night? she asked sleepily. About twelve, he answered hurriedly.

What are you getting up so early for? asked Mrs. Bill.

Bill was all in for sleep, but he arose to the occasion. My tooth is aching like fury and I'm going over to the drug store to get something for it, he said, putting on his shoes again.

From My Hunting Day Book

The Musson Book Company, Limited have been honored by the Crown Prince of Germany's instructions to issue immediately a translation of his volume "From My Hunting Day Book" in Canada.

In this book, the preliminary announcement of which has existed the utmost interest, the German Crown Prince records his sporting experience in Europe and America the work has been produced throughout under the most careful supervision of the Crown Prince himself, and is illustrated by a large number of photographs taken by the Crown Princess and the author.

The future Emperor of Germany tells of his adventures in a particularly bright and pleasing manner. While modestly disclaiming in his introduction, any pretentions to literary merit he writes of himself as a man who loves genuine sport, and to whom the poetry and grandeur of Nature are in inexhaustible source of delight and joy.

The book is more than a volume of sporting reminiscences for from time to time digressing from his subject, the Crown Prince speaks with considerable frankness of his inclinations and his reading, of his friendships and his dislikes. Canadian readers will be especially interested in the account of his experiences in India and among a shooting party in Scotland.

"New Rivers of the North" by Hulbert Footner, makes no pretence to be a scientific work. The author seeks only to share the delight of two amateurs in descending streams of which no man could say what lay around the next bend, and to convey a sense of the pleasure one feels in beholding sights that have not been published to the world at large. The story is a daily record of the experiences of two men who launched themselves into the wilderness without guides, and after travelling some 3,000 miles in a 12-foot collapsible boat, brought home an unexplored river and a new cataract to take its place among the wonders of Canada.

A Demon Bowler

For many years Brown and Baggs had been cricketers, and each thought he was a better player than his friend. At last Brown challenged Baggs to meet him in a single-wicket match and the wager was accepted.

Brown batted first, and made nineteen runs. Then Baggs took his stand against Brown's bowling. Brown's bowling was so erratic that it was impossible for anyone to play it. Half an hour passed, then an hour, and Baggs had not scored. At last the batsman flung down his bat in disgust.

I'm going home to tea, he growled. Go on bowling, and if you hit the wicket I'm out.

When Baggs returned from tea he found the stumps drawn, and the friend they had appointed as umpire waiting patiently for him.

You've won, he said.

What do you mean? I haven't said Baggs.

Yes, you have, repeated the umpire. Brown bowled thirty wides. You've won by eleven runs.

A Leader's Responsibility

If you want to realize your importance, says Robert Burdett, just put your finger in a bowl of water, take it out and look at the hole. It is said, there is very little difference between one man and another, but that little is very important.

A man is said to stand on a little pedestal of his own who makes the most of what is given him. A man who stands on a pedestal is looked up to—is a leader. A leader is one to whom some one looks for guidance. When the guidance is wrong some one suffers: When the guidance is right some one is made happier—hence a leader's responsibility.

The weight of a leader's responsibility is not determined by the prominence of his leadership. It is of little concern to him whether he be a guide block to receive ropes or a driving wheel to a great engine. The important is this, is he in his own place doing his own work, filling his own sphere, and holding his own post in the battle of life? It is of life's certainties—the absolute dependence one upon another.

What would be the force of value of a great locomotive but for the fire that burns unnoticed beneath the boiler? What would be the speed of the great ocean liner but for the stokers who keep up the steam pressure? The full realisation of dependence and the keen consciousness of the power of example are elements that are always present when anything important is achieved.

That Was All

A Western farmer, a Dane, applied for naturalization papers. The judge asked him: Are you satisfied with the general conditions of the country?

Yas, drawled the Dane.

Does the Government suit you? queried the judge.

Yas, yas, only I would like to see more rain, replied the farmer.

He was very affable and free with his opinions, was this young man, but that was about all he was free with. To the man who had carried his not unheavy bag to the little countryside station he had given one whole nickel.

Notwithstanding the forlorn look on the man's face, he still continued to chat in an easy manner.

I shall never forget, he continued, the splendor of the scenery when I was in Switzerland. It was an education to see the sun rise, tipping the hills with gold—

Ah, interrupted the man who had toiled with his bag. Them 'ills was luckier than me, weren't they?

If it were not for just one little thing, I once heard an inventor say, I would have the greatest invention in the world. That one little thing is the trouble in every man's life.

More About The Loading Platform

The present generation of Western farmers will never know the difficulties and vexations experienced by their predecessors in the earlier years when no one could get a carload of grain shipped in bulk except by loading it through an elevator. The system forced the majority of farmers to sell their grain to the elevator owners at arbitrary prices, and oft times to submit to heavy dockage and other annoyances, causing continual dissatisfaction. Now however the distribution of cars as fixed by the Grain Act, and the use of the loading platform, provide facilities which enable the farmer to secure satisfactory treatment in the disposal of his grain, and the highest market prices at time of sale. Every farmer therefore, should more and more endeavor to use the loading platform in shipping his grain to the terminal elevators. It is the safeguard of the farmers' freedom in disposing of his grain to the best advantage for himself. If farmers refrain from using the loading platform freely, it might result in its being done away with, because railway companies and elevator owners are strongly opposed to it. It is easy to understand why elevator people desire the loading platform abolished. The railway people on their part say it delays the loading of cars and helps to cause car shortage. This we know to be nonsense, because frequently after cars are loaded whether with grain, coal lumber or other merchandise, they are sidetracked for days and even weeks instead of being promptly moved forward to destination. It is engine shortage and shortage of competent train men that mostly causes grain blockades on railways and not lack of cars. Let every farmer therefore, do all he can to use the loading platform and become an independent shipper. In subsequent advertisements we will state in detail the savings and other advantages of direct loading into cars compared with loading through elevators.

We handle the farmers grain strictly on commission, make liberal advances on car bills of lading, supervise the grading at time cars are inspected, secure the highest prices at time of sale and make prompt returns when sold. Write us for shipping instructions and market information.

Meddlesome People

Mules are about the most worthy animals I know anything about. They work hard, and live on half that a horse requires. I never knew a mule to kick anyone, or run away, yet no one ever looks at a mule without saying, 'Whoa there!'

What He Would Say

His Riverence—What have you done with the pig you stole from Widow Ryan?

Murphy—Killed it an' ate it, yer riverence.

His Riverence—Ah, Murphy, whatever will you be able to say when you are brought face to face with Widow Ryan and the pig on Judgment Day?

Muhpry—Oh, I'll just say: Why, Mrs. Ryan, there's your pig.—The Sketch.

Castor oil is said to be the best medicine there is. Curiously enough it is the worst to take.

Nuff Said

And you like chicken, Sam?

Gee! Ah certainly does, boss.

And you get 'em once in a while?

Oh, sure, boss. Ah gets 'em.

How do you get 'em Sam?

Well, boss, you know dat ol' sayin' Love will find de way.

Not Now

Who's the rummy you've just brought in? inquired the police sergeant.

He says he's a congressman, responded the patrolman.

What district?

I asked 'im that an' he said he was a congressman at large.

Well, he isn't! snapped the sergeant. Look him up!

MOTHERS!
DO YOU KNOW

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. Ask those who have proved it.

Strike Situation More Favorable

The Department of Labor's record shows the influence of labor disputes upon industrial conditions during August to have been not so serious as during July, fewer disputes being recorded as in existence. An improvement too, over July conditions is seen in the fact that of the seventeen disputes which commenced during August a definite termination occurred in the case of eleven. Transportation in different sections was considerably interfered with by strikes; these were, however, of short duration in most cases and conditions were generally normal towards the end of the month. About 9,500 employees were involved in trade disputes during August.

George S. Lyon

Gea. S. Lyon of Toronto, the new Canadian golf champion, has had a remarkable career in the world of sport, having won high renown in cricket as well as in golfing circles, a feat which is seldom accomplished, for the style of swing required for success with the bat is seldom conducive to proficiency with the club. On six previous occasions Lyon has been amateur champion of Canada—in 1898, 1900, 1903, 1905, 1906 and 1907. As the winner of the championship three years in succession, Lyon won outright the Aberdeen trophy. In 1904 and again in 1910 he was runner up for the amateur championship, being also runner up for the open championship in the latter year. In 1904, Lyon was the Olympic champion at St. Louis. He has had considerable success, too, in the English amateur championship. He got as far as the fourth round in the competition at Prestwick, in 1905, when he was knocked out on the last green by the late George Willrie. In the 1908 championship at Sandwich he completed five rounds of the competition.

Lyon's cricketing feats, also, are no less remarkable. He holds the Canadian batting record, with the huge score of 238, not out—a feat accomplished 17 years ago, and never equalled. He was captain of the Canadian team which opposed Lord Hawke's XI, and also led the national combination which met the United States. The veteran athlete has also numerous other international honors to his credit.

It is seventeen years since the champion commenced golf, and his style is still typical of that engendered by the old gutta-percha ball of those days. Mr. Lyon was born in Richmond, Ontario, in 1858, and was educated at the local grammar school there.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss

A student of the works of English novelists has declared that Scotland is still an unknown land to most of them. They make a mess of it when they attempt the dialect or introduce allusions (social, topical, general) about what they are still pleased to term the land o' cakes.

One, for example represented a character as singing a Jacobite song and accompanying himself on the bagpipes. Another introduced an organ (always called, of course, a kist o' whistles) into a Free Kirk within ten years of the Disruption of 1843, whilst a third required several hours to transport his hero from Edinburgh to Leith.

SCIATICA AND LUMBAGO

SUFFERED FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AND COULD GET NO RELIEF

Now Tells of the Wonderful Results Obtained by the Use of

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Sciatica, neuralgia and sciatic rheumatism are the result of a rundown nervous system. For this reason all treatments must necessarily fail which do not build up the nervous system.

Mr. Collins suffered for twenty-five years and never was able to obtain satisfactory treatment until he began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. While the Nerve Food forms new blood and restores the exhausted nervous system, the Kidney-Liver Pills invigorate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpoth, Ont., writes: "It affords me pleasure to be able to speak favorably of two of Dr. Chases' medicines—the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a sufferer for twenty-five years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried almost all the medicines I could hear of, without one particle of benefit, until I commenced to use Dr. Chase's. I noticed an improvement before I had used two boxes, and the benefits obtained by continued use have been wonderful. I have so much confidence in these two medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends, and I have yet to hear of a single case in which they failed to give satisfaction.

Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

To Bar Suffragettes

The intimation of the English suffragettes that they may come to Canada and inaugurate here practices similar to those that in the Old Country have annoyed their opponents without furthering their own cause, has evidently led our Federal Government to consider the proposed invasion, judging from the reports from Ottawa, announcing that the suffragettes will be barred out as undesirables.

The immigration laws as well as the public domain, fall within the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior, and it, therefore will be the officers of this Department who will have to stand on the wharves of our Atlantic ports and along our southern frontier and turn back the militant advocates of "votes for women."

Possibly a suffragette with a record—one who has rendered the cause distinguished service by smashing windows or attempting arson, who has been in courts and possibly in prison and who has suffered martyrdom by refusing to eat—possibly such a person might be held to come within the meaning of the term 'undesirable,' but before being absolutely certain upon that point it would be well to wait and hear what the courts have to say about it, for it is more than likely that, if an attempt is made to deport a suffragette on this ground, the case will get into the courts before it is disposed of; and many of these acts of Parliament are so severely handled by the courts that they scarcely know themselves when the match is concluded.

Tongue Twisters

Now that they are talking of having a department for stammerers under the management of the Board of Education, some people are wondering what will be taken as the limit which shall mark a stammerer from a person who has only an occasional stutter on certain words.

If anything of the kind is done it is probable that some learned doctors will devise a system of tests for the powers of speech, just as they do now for the powers of sight. Some day we may see children asked to stand up and repeat something like this:—

She sells sea-shells on the seashore,
The shells she sells are sea shells, I'm sure.
So if she sells sea shells on the seashore,
Then I'm sure she sells seashore shells.

Here is another one that should prove an excellent test of a smooth-running tongue:

Kimbo Kemble kicked his kinsman's kettle,
Did Kimbo Kemble kick his kinsman's kettle?
If Kimbo Kimble kicked his kinsman's kettle
Where's the kinsman's kettle that Kimbo Kemble kicked?

Simple and Sure.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is so simple in application that a child can understand the instructions. Used as a liniment the only direction is to rub, and when used as a dressing to apply. The directions are so plain and unmistakable that they are readily understood by young or old.

Rather Thin

Two men, one of them very short, were passing through a station toward the train gates, when the bigger one was heard to say:

I've took a half ticket for ye, George, yer so little ye'll pass all right

But, protested George, how about my beard? And he twiddled his thin beard nervously.

Oh, rejoined the other, tell 'em it's a mole.

What Education May Do

Abraham Lincoln walking fifteen miles across country to borrow a volume of the statutes of Illinois and then reading it by the light of pine knots is a striking contrast to the conditions that exist in this era of public schools, public libraries and lecture courses. The road to education is an easy one today. There is little excuse for the one who neglects it.

The most obstinate corns and warts fail to resist Holloway's Corn Cure. Try it.

Dear Sirs,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes, so badly that I thought I would be disfigured for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected, a few applications completely curing the irritation, and preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keep off the mosquitoes.

The Human Yardstick

What you been doing to get tired? demanded the other.

Well, explained the thin one, drawing a deep breath, over to Brother Smith's dey are measuring de house for some new carpets. Dey haven't got no yawdstick and I's just exactly six feet tall. So to oblige Brother Smith, I's been a layin' down and a-gettin' up all over deir house.

HARD TO SEE
Even When the Facts are Plain

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see.

Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of tea and coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take some drugs and—keep on drinking tea or coffee.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household, writes a lady. "It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of languor and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and way out of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether to the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritive beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest.

The Last of the Mona Lisa

The following from the Paris correspondent of "Truth" throws an interesting light on the scandal of the Louvre—the loss of Mona Lisa.

I think I have at last learned the truth as to the fate of the Gioncondo. It is melancholy news: 'Iasciate ogni speranza.' We shall never again see Leonardo da Vinci's famous picture. One might wish it had been stolen for then there would have been hope for its reappearance. The fact is, I learn, that it never left the Louvre; it perished there. A photographer's employee, wishing to avenge himself on the world at large for what he thought his wrongful dismissal, imagined a piece of sabotage worthy of a twentieth century Herostrates; he spread the contents of a phial of sulphuric acid over the portrait of Mona Lisa.

From another source I have heard further particulars. I do not vouch for them with the same certainty but regard them, nevertheless, as highly probable. The vitriol outrage on the Gioconda was committed a year or two before the world learnt of the theft. The picture supposed to have been stolen was, in fact, a copy. As long as there was any hope of restoring the original the substitute was left in the familiar frame under a glass pane. This piece of plate glass was inserted a year or two before the theft. When all hopes of restoring the original were given up, and when certain visitors were beginning to whisper their doubts about the picture under the glazed frame the substitute was taken out and very likely thrown into the fire. Possibly the original panel, a worthless piece of wood, met the same fate.

According to dispatches from Edmonton, contracts for the material required in the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific's new $1,500,000 hotel in that place during the coming year, will shortly be awarded by Mr. Ed. Wilmann of the Canadian Stewart Co., of Montreal who has secured tenders from a number of local firms. Tenders from firms in Winnipeg and Toronto have also to be considered. Excavation is expected to be commenced within the next few days. The specifications call for 12,000 barrels of cement, 6,000 yards of sand, 10,000 yards of gravel and 1,500,000 bricks. The contracts for millwork, plumbing, heating and ventilation, roofing, sheet metal work and iron work will also be awarded in the near future.

After a woman has married a man to reform him and succeeds, it sometimes happens that another woman comes along and spoils all the good work with a smile.

Too Much

Doesn't your choir sing at the prison any more?

No, several of the prisoners objected on the ground that it wasn't included in their sentences.

Amusing Ads

Like the funny answers given by the school child, which have become known as howlers, the advertisements in daily papers are often extremely though unintentionally funny. In those advertisements the meaning is usually clear, but the construction has given a funny turn to the idea expressed.

A clothing house advertised: Blue men's striped shirts at 39 cents.

The Want advertisement column appears the richest field of fun as is shown by the following advertisements, many of which appeared in Canadian papers:

Wanted—A waitress to sleep at home; no Sunday work.

Wanted—An experienced man to run a saw mill out of town.

A young lady wishes her passage to Europe. Willing to take care of children and a good sailor.

Wanted, for—— Methodist church, an organist, and boy to blow the same.

Wanted for Alberta, a man to take care of horses who can speak German.

Wanted—Women to sew buttons on the top flat of the —— building.

Wanted, a dog by a young man with pointed ears.

Wanted—Experienced nurse for bottled baby.

Wanted—A boy to be inside and partly outside the store.

Said the man in the aisle to the man sitting down: You ought to stand up and give that seat to me. I am the tiredest man in America. I have just taken part in a 60-mile motor-paced bicycle race.

Said the man in the seat to the man in the aisle: You have nothing on me in the line of exhaustion. Maybe you rode the race, but I sat and watched it.

At a recent birthday party a young lady began a song:

The autumn days have come; ten thousand leaves are falling.

She began too high. Ten thousand—she screamed and then stopped.

Start her at five thousand cried an auctioneer who was present.

She (flattering with eyes and voice)—Arthur dear, I find we will need a few things to make our little household more serviceable.

He—Well, what is it now?

She—Well, for instance, we need a new hat for me!

He Forgot

My dear, would you have time to sew a button on for me before you go?

I've told you before, Alfred, Jane will do it for you. Please remember you married a typewriter, not a sewing machine.

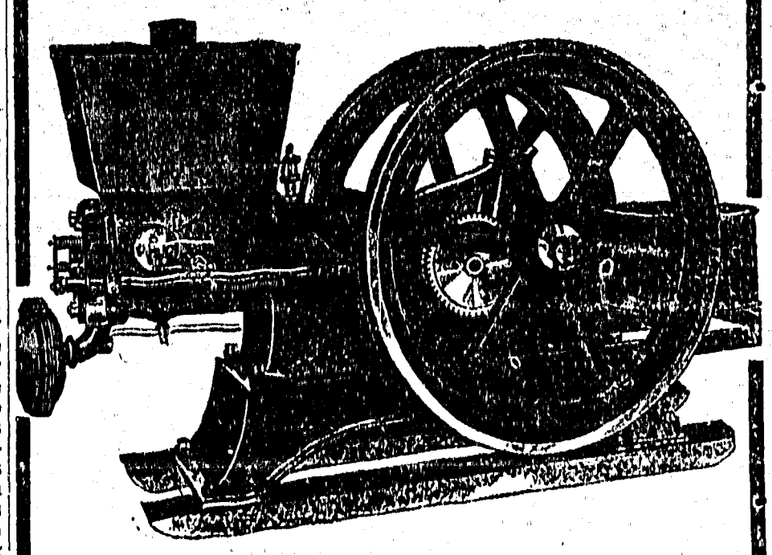
This Engine Will Prove A Good Servant to You

In this "Gas Power Age" the EATON Gasoline Engine stands out as a leading example of simplicity and excellence.

There is scarcely a limit to the ways in which a gasoline engine can help you around the farm, and you will find it hard to locate an engine sold at anywhere near the price which will do the work as satisfactorily as the EATON.

You can use this Engine to drive a fanning mill and so avoid elevator dockage; you can do your own chopping; you can pump water all day at a cost of one gallon of gasoline. It will turn the washing machine or the cream separator, and it is the very engine for a sawing outfit.



The low-tension ignition of the EATON Engine is the simplest in use. You need not be an electrician to understand the wiring. The governor is simple and accurate. Bearings are heavily babbited. Engine is hopper cooled. Simplest type of mixer. The time-tested poppet valve system is used.

The EATON Engine is shipped on skids all ready to work. Each Engine is supplied with batteries, spark coil, sight feed, oil cup and compression grease cups, gasoline tank, starting crank, plain belt pulley, and a supply of cylinder oil, together with necessary tools.

Fine Engraving in Sepia of the Borden Cabinet

for Readers of the "News-Advertiser"

EVERYONE wants a picture of the members of the Government of Canada. The "News Advertiser" has had prepared for the exclusive use of its readers in this province a large engraved plate of Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden and his ministers.

The group is redrawn from the latest photographs of the eighteen Ministers, who compose the advisers of His Royal Highness the Governor-General It is printed in Sepia on heavy board ready for framing, and will be of the greatest educational value in the home, the school and the library.

The Prime Minister, HON. R. L. BORDEN, occupies a central position, and is shown standing at the head of the Council Table. Seated about him are his colleagues.

Dimly in the background the features of Sir John Macdonald look down on his successors.

How to Obtain the Picture

The Kinder Fate

She—It was dreadful. He rocked the boat and she was drowned.

He—Lucky girl! She might have escaped and married the idiot.

At a supper-party a certain young fluffy was sitting next a Scottish Duchess, and in order to gain her good graces affected a knowledge of the Scottish tongue, declaring there was [illegible] understand.

Rax me a sprew o' that bubbly-jock, replied the Duchess, scarcely moving a muscle of her face.

The exquisite looked appalled and then slunk away in confusion, while the commission was executed by a cavalier hailing from North of the Tweed.

The Duchess wanted a turkey wing.

Little and Big Religion

This story comes from Australia, where all conversation turns eventually to matters educational, because every parent is painfully anxious that his sons shall pass the standard which will free them from certain years of military service. A visitor was conversing with his host's small son, and opened, as a matter of course, with the words: Do you go to school now?

Yes.

And what do you learn? Reading, writing, sums?

Oh yes, and I learn religion, too.

Religion?

Yes, I learn the little religion which teaches that we all come from Adam. But my elder brother is in a higher class; he learns the big religion which teaches that we all come from monkeys.

All mothers can put away anxiety regarding their suffering children when they have Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator to give relief. Its effects are sure and lasting.

Put In Human Interest

An old negro preacher says the Atlanta Constitution, gave as his text De tree is known by its fruit, an' it's jes impossible to shake do possum down.

After the benediction an old brother said to him:

I neber knowed befo' dat such a text wuz in de Bible.

Well, admitted the preacher, it ain't down dat way I throwed in de possum to hit de intelligence of my congregation.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

A Bargain Offer

Coming this way ag'in? asked the justice of the peace, after he had fined Jimpson fifty dollars.

I'm afraid I'll have to, said Jimpson ruefully.

Wa-al, said the justice, stroking his chin whisker reflectively, preeaps I'd oughter tell ye that we sell a return fine ticket for seventy-five dollars, entitlin' ye to immunerty from arrest on the way back.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarhoea, dysentery and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A fortune is said to be awaiting the man who discovers a way of curing ham after the rind is removed. The skin, it seems, is badly wanted for leather, and about $3,000,000 worth of it is being wasted on hams every year in Great Britain and Ireland alone.

Uncontrollable

Your daughter has so much temperament.

I'm not sure what you call it. All I know is that her mother and I can't do anything with her.

The change of dietary that comes with spring and summer has the effect in weak stomachs of setting up inflammation, resulting in dysentery and cholera morbus. The abnormal condition will continue if not attended to and will cause an exhaustive drain on the system. The best available medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It clears the stomach and bowels of irritants, counteracts the inflammation and restores the organs to healthy action.

Dangerous Talk

Mother, I wish you wouldn't mention dishwashing when George is calling on me.

Why not, indeed?

I don't like it. It sounds common.

Common, eh? We have to eat, don't we?

Of course.

And George also knows that dishes have to be washed, therefore somebody has to wash them?

But mother—

What now?

If you keep on talking about it George may discover that you make father wipe them, and he may think the same thing is coming to him if he should propose to me.

Novel Experiment

An experiment new to Scotland is about to be tried at Wishaw, where a seven-day's campaign has been opened with the object of raising $35,000 wherewith to build and equip an up-to-date institute for the Young Men's Christian Association of the town.

A committee of 100 business men has been divided into teams of 10, each with a leader, and these will canvass the 2,000 people whose names are on a prepared list.

At the close of each day's [illegible] the teams will meet and report results and a huge clock erected outside the central rooms will duly record the progress of the campaign.

Mr. Gladstone's Gift

[illegible] Lord Lieutenant of Flintshire and Lord of the Manor, Hawarden Castel has just formally opened a public recreation ground at Hawarden, which he has presented to the parish council.

The ground, which is a little over two acres in extent, commands a lovely view of the Cheshire plains.

There was a large crowd of villagers present, including a procession of schoolchildren carrying flags and friendly society officials wearing regalia.

The Champlain Diary

At Dieppe in France, there is in the possession of a M. Feret one of the most remarkable books in the world. It is the old-fashioned handwriting of bygone ages, illustrated by little sketches, such as would be no credit to the untaught lad of ten years of age, and it contains a hundred and fifteen small pages. It is a journal of Samuel de Champlain, written about 1598.

Of course, such a treasure is beyond price but I cannot help wishing that the Canadian Government could in some fair manner become possessed of this diary, written by the real father of Canada. It is true there is not much of importance to Canada itself in this particular book, which contains a narrative of Champlain's work in, and impressions of the West Indies, Mexico, and Central America.

He was at Panama at one time and then and there conceived the idea that a ship canal across the Isthmus would greatly facilitate the operations of the world's commerce, and he says in this diary, the voyage to the South Sea would be shortened by more than fifteen hundred leagues.

It must be allowed to be a remarkable thing that Champlain should have suggested such a thing as the Panama Canal some three hundred and fifteen years before it was accomplished. Men of great deeds often are men of great vision, and Champlain's place is amogn the great men of the world's history.

In July and August, 1615, he was with a good deal of weariness of soul marking out with his own feet the subsequent route of another great canal, which I expect to live to see completed some of these years. It was the regular road from Georgian Bay to Montreal in those days, as it may be again some day, when the Georgian Bay Canal has been completed.

It was probably the tales of copper to be had on the shores of the lakes which caused Champlain to make the choice he did between the offers of the Montagnais to guide him to Hudson Bay, and the desires of the Hurons to show him the waters of the Great Lakes. He believed evidently in a way home to France by way of Hudson Bay, and was extremely anxious to visit the Arctic waters.

His dreams are coming true at last. The Hudson Bay Railway is actually under contract, the Panama Canal is approaching completion, and the Georgian Bay Canal is badly needed, and therefore will be built. Who can say that there is not a place for the man who dreams dreams and sees visions as well as for the practical men of action. It is little short of a miracle that the two qualities were combined in Samuel de Champlain.

But notice, Champlain's theory, though it was long in coming to fruition, was greater than his practice, and had to do with more enduring things. Canada will have its full chance to achieve its true greatness, when Champlain's dream, or rather his theories, have been worked out and we add to our other natural advantages, the Hudson Bay Railway, the Panama Canal route, and the Georgian Bay Canal.

Facts About Penny Postage

England was the first country to introduce penny postage for domestic letters. Sir Rowland Hill was the author of the penny-post system, which soon spread to other countries, as he was also the originator of the money order system and post-office savings banks. The uniform rate of one penny per letter for half an ounce weight was put into effect in 1840. Before that time postage rates in England had varied with the distance, except that in in 1839 a trial had been given of a uniform rate of four pence per letter. Stamped covers were introduced in 1840, and half-penny postal cards were issued in 1870. Street letter boxes were first used in England in 1855.

In the United States the post-office department was much slower in attaining domestic penny or two-cent postage. In 1845 the postage rate on letters was from five to ten cents, according to distance, and it was not until 1855 that the rate was reduced to three cents for distances under 3,000 miles. A uniform three-cent rate was adopted in 1863, and a two-cent rate in 1875. One of the first steps toward an international penny post was taken when the United States entered into agreements with Canada and Mexico whereby the two-cent letter rate was made to apply to those countries. Cuba, Panama and the city of Shanghai, China, and later Great Britain and Germany, now have postal conventions with the United States providing for a letter rate of two cents per ounce. There has been a great deal of agitation for a one-cent leter rate in the United States of late years, but in most respects the United States lags behind European nations in the matter of postal reforms. At the present time the postage rate on parcels from any point in the United States to Japan China, Austria, France, Germany, Great Britain, Sweden and other foreign countries is twelve cents per pound while the rate is sixteen cents per pound for a parcel mailed and delivered in the same city of the United States.

While Switzerland has taken the lead in the movement for a world penny postage it is expected that the chambers of commerce of all the leading nations will fall in behind and will bring great influence to bear on the coming conference of the Universal Postal Union.

Then They Quarreled

Townsend Burton, Jr., was talking about a remarkable interview he gave out last month in California.

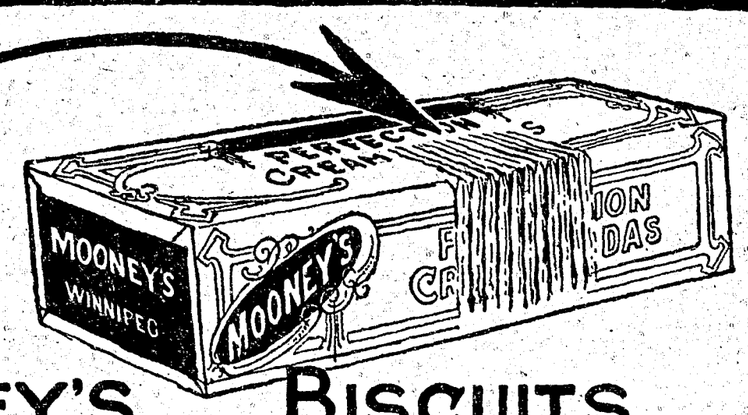
Of course, he said, that interview misinterpreted my real views. I am not the sort of man that interview made me out to be. In fact, the interview resembled Mrs. Smith's biscuit.

Young Mrs. Smith said at dinner: I made a big batch of these biscuits today.

Indeed you did, dear, her husband answered gravely.

Why, how do you know how big a batch I made? she cried in surprise.

I thought you said botch, said Mr. Smith.



MOONEY'S BISCUITS ARE THINNER

That makes them neater, crisper, daintier, more appetizing;

The one biscuit good enough to take the place of your own baking,

Fresh as the biscuits from your own oven.

Think what that means! Freedom from a broiling kitchen—leisure on the porch or in the parlor. Time to do the little knick-knacks that have been neglected.

MOONEY'S PERFECTION SODA BISCUITS

Are the creamiest, crispest crackers made.

They are baked in the big sanitary factory in Winnipeg—right at your very door.

Use MOONEY'S and be sure of a biscuit that is absolutely fresh; a biscuit that will satisfy the family,

In tempting packages or sealed tins as you prefer.

An eminent English counsel was cross-examining Mr. Siemens, the electrical expert, in a case in which there was a dispute about the working of some electrical plant.

I think, Mr. Siemens, that you have had a long experience with electricity?

That is so.

Well, now, I want you to tell me whether, in the course of all your experience, you have ever known electricity to be adulterated?

In only one instance.

When was that? asked the counsel eagerly.

In the phrase greased lightning, the expert replied.

Cabby In a Hurry

One day it was raining very heavily in Berlin, when a wealthy merchant on leaving the Exchange, hailed a cab and asked to be driven to a distant part of the city. On the way the merchant discovered that he had forgotten to put his purse in his pocket. What was to be done? On reaching his destination he got out of the cab and said to the driver:

Will you please give me a match? I have dropped a sovereign on the floor of the cab.

In the Smart Little Trap

The One Who Didn't Land Its Owner and the One Who Did.

By VIRGINIA LEILA WENTZ.

"And he has the smartest looking trap you ever saw, Madge! It's champagne colored and a perfect love. What do you bet I don't land him, trap and all, before the summer's flown by?"

Miss Irene Warden, a beauty (and aware of it), was writing to her girl chum concerning the bachelor who had just taken the big colonial house with the carriage road and iron archway which for several seasons now had abandoned hope of usefulness.

She was writing by an open window where the scent of the roses came up from the front garden. Beyond lay the pretty tree lined road over which the bachelor and his champagne colored traps had just flown by.

"Although I've told you his name is Horace Matlock," ran on Miss Warden's pen, "I haven't told you what he looks like. He's an old man, forty or fifty, I should say. His nose is rather too big, although people call him handsome, and he's a bit bald; but, then, I suppose most men who live in big houses and drive smart traps have big noses. What?" Miss Warden smiled a little soft smile into the glass above her dressing table and then bent over her portfolio again:

"Of course I'd prefer dear old Tom. He's young and stunning and sings college songs so beautifully; but, as you know, he hasn't a red! And I really must do something this summer, Madge. My already meager allowance will be cut considerably in the autumn, for in September pa's going to enter the matrimonial game himself—a horrid, designing widow too! So I must 'step lively,' in the parlance of street car officials.

"In point of fact, though," pursued the voluble pen, "it'll be pretty easy, plain sailing. I haven't a single good looking rival up in this out of the way place except old Professor Thornton's daughter, and she's the quietest poke of a girl—a regular stay at home. And as for dressing—well, Madge, you and I spend as much on our gloves and veils, I reckon, as she does on her whole outfit. That's what comes from having a bookworm for a father."

The next week in the little village postoffice a friend presented Mr. Horace Matlock to Miss Irene Warden. Apparently the meeting was by accident, but Miss Warden felt her smooth cheeks flush, and her habitual composure was rippled for a second, while, for his part, Mr. Matlock scarcely looked at her and, having passed a conventional "glad to meet you," lifted his hat politely and walked out to his smart little trap.

"I had on my chic voile, the one Aunt Tessie sent me from Paris, you know," wrote Miss Warden to Madge, "and my big white hat with flopping fuchsias. But it was all rank waste."

She couldn't understand it. Her dreams hadn't ended that way at all.

One day in the tiny idle little bank Horace Matlock stopped short as he recognized a stooped, gaunt figure with a patrician face.

"Why, it's Professor Thornton, isn't it?" he cried, stepping up to him with a cordially outstretched hand.

When Matlock years ago had entered Yale as a freshman Thornton had been tutoring, and quite a friendship had sprung up between them. Subsequently they had lost track of each other. But the satisfaction of the younger man in meeting the older one again was genuine.

"Poor old professor! How thin and worn and aged he's become!" thought Matlock as he drove the professor home to his modest little cottage.

Out in the cottage's side yard by the hollyhocks a girl was picking a great bunch of sweet peas for the lunch table. When she heard the smart little trap stop at the gate she looked quickly up from the blossoming vines and wondered. Who was the distinguished looking stranger? And where had he picked up dear daddy?

A few days later Matlock drove up to the cottage again. It was only decent, he told himself, that he should show the professor some attention and take him driving now and then. Perhaps some day also he would take the professor's daughter. He liked her. He liked the natural, unabashed way in which she had acknowledged her father's presentation of him, with her sleeves rolled up and her arms full of sweet peas; he liked the width between her eyes, the breadth of her brow, the lines of her mouth. She was less pretty than many young girls, but there was about her a freshness, a sweetness, that pleased him, and he had noticed that her figure in her simple little gown was well molded and slim.

One evening toward twilight, when out in the open lawn bats were whirling aimlessly and frolicsly, Matlock dropped in upon the professor to make him a little call. He had fetched him his afternoon mail as pretext. While they were sitting out on the porch from the shadowy little parlor came the first chords of Beethoven's beautiful "Moonlight Sonata."

"That's Cynthia," said Professor Thornton in answer to his guest's start of surprise. "She's never too tired, no matter how hard or long the day has been, to play that sonata for me in the evening. I love it above all other written music, and she never forgets."

Then while the three toads droned their harmonies he told Matlock a little about his daughter—how four years ago he had suffered a paralytic stroke and she had been obliged to leave school in her graduating year and nurse him night and day with untiring sweetness; how, when their slender income was exhausted a year back, she had begun to make use of her musical skill and give lessons on the piano. And when the professor told of Cynthia's triweekly trips to Adams, the nearest town, his silvered head went down on his coat sleeve, and in the gloaming behind the honeysuckles the two men were silent.

Presently they smoked their usual cigars and indulged in their usual conversation—newspaper topics chopped fine by individual opinion, a good deal of politics, a little of art and science. Last of all, Cynthia came out.

"Delighted!" she said, going prettily up to Matlock with outstretched hands. "While you two have been gossiping I've been remembering your weakness for tea and have drawn you a cup. Will you come in, or shall we have it out here?"

They went in. Near the little fern screened fireplace was a tea table, dainty in its array of polished silver and thin china. The hanging lamp shed the rich, soft glow of olive oil, and there was an air of intimate homelikeness about everything. Matlock had been a stranger to that sort of thing for so long that it sent a kind of thrill shivering through him. After all, to have a cozy tea table and a slim white hand to incline in yours—Cynthia's hands were slim and white enough as they moved along the china in the half light. He pulled a chair close for the professor and then sat down himself.

Before Horace Matlock went to bed that night he remembered that on the morrow Cynthia Thornton was to drive with him in his champagne colored trap. How it would harmonize with her soft hair before the ambitious sun touched it to gold! What a dear, womanly little treasure of girlish brightness she was anyhow!

Cynthia only returned from Adams the next day a half hour before her drive and was consequently a bit tired. She was not one to make conversation, and the quiet and beauty of the scenes stretched out before her made her very silent. Matlock, as he handled the reins watched both her and the landscape. There was a certain peace about them both. And peace was, above all things, what he wanted.

The next day Miss Warden wrote to her girl chum again:

"In the beginning of the summer, Madge, dear, I wrote you that a certain matrimonial venture would be 'easy, plain sailing.' Alas! I'm afraid I shall never find port—not at least with my bachelor up on the hill. And in the name of wonders, who of all people do you suppose has taken the wind out of my sails? Cynthia Thornton, the old bookworm's daughter! He had her out driving in that little beauty of a trap three times during the last week to my knowledge! I'm afraid Cupid isn't very kind to me. You'll find I'll die an old maid after all, unless Tom"—

At this point Miss Warden's pretty teeth absently caught the top of her penholder, while she looked dreamily toward the sunny, tree lined street. Then she began to hum.

As she started on the fourth bar of her song a champagne colored trap skimmed by. In it was the charming bachelor, and by his side was Cynthia Thornton.

Animals Seen in the Sea.

Many land animals and birds have their titles taken from dwellers in the deep sea. Perhaps the most curious is the sea mouse, which does not resemble the land mouse in the slightest. It is a worm of curious shape and lives on land beyond the tide mark. Often, however, it is thrown up on the beach by storms.

The sea otter, whose fur is remarkably valuable, resembles more its cousin on land. It is, however, very rarely found, being mainly confined to the coast of the northern Pacific.

Another funny inhabitant of the sea is the sea owl. It is not a bird at all, but a fish. Its more common name is the lump sucker. Its curiously formed mouth, by which it fastens itself to the rocks, resembles that of an owl; hence the name.

Then the sea snake—not to be confused with the mythical sea serpent—the sea slug, the sea lion, the sea spider, the seagull, the sea wolf and many others are all named from land types, but in many cases it is only some peculiar characteristic that gives them their title.—Pearson's

The First Locomotive in Maine.

The first locomotive used in the state of Maine came from England, having been built at the works of Robert Stephenson & Co. in the year 1835, and made its first trip over the Bangor, Oldtown and Milford railroad on Aug. 19, 1837. This road was then generally known as the "Penobscot road," and the track was made of wooden rails strapped with iron. The shackles used to connect the engine and cars were made of three thicknesses of sole or belt leather held together by copper rivets and had a hole in each end so as to hook over an upright stationary pin bolted or driven into a rigid beam extending from the end of the car. It is said that for a time the engine was run in opposition to a six ox team employed by a Bangor lumber dealer who was not willing to pay the rates charged on the railroad, and it was not until the management of the line came to what he considered fair charges that he turned his traffic over to it.

TREATMENT FOR CUTS ON HORSES.

When a horse gets a barb wire cut do not apply axle grease or any greasy substance, writes A. S. Alexander, M. D. C., in the Farm Journal. Wash the part clean. Clip off the hair around the wound and then wash again to get rid of hair and any foreign substance that may have lodged in the wound. If necessary to remove sand, earth or cinders from a wound, due to a fall, for instance, use clean cotton batting or absorbent cotton and not a sponge. A sponge becomes dirty and readily infects a wound. Each day use fresh absorbent cotton to do any cleansing necessary in treating a wound or sore. When the wound has been cleansed do not put in stitches (sutures) if the wound is deep or ragged or in a place that will not be perfectly at rest when the horse is standing, walking, lying down or rising. It therefore is useless to stitch a wound in front of the hock joint or on the thin skin in the bend of any joint or in the skin and muscles of the rear parts which are strained and used in rising. Often a horse suffers a wide open wound of the skin and the muscles at the side of the tail inflicted by the kick of the horse in the next stall. This wound rarely can be sutured successfully. The stitches tear out when the horse gets up, and the wound is made worse than before. Tie up the animal so that he cannot lie down when such a wound has to be treated. It may then be sutured if the muscles are not deeply cut. The wound then should be wetted often with white lotion, or a dry dusting powder may be applied twice a day.

The Percheron was first introduced into America about fifty years ago, and it seems to be growing in favor. The breed is known for its characteristic gray color. However, black is coming into favor as a color, and the bays, roans and chestnuts may be found. The Percheron is a massive, heavily muscled animal, from 16 to 17.2 hands high, weighing usually from 1,600 to 2,200 pounds. The Percheron has good action, although it is said that the stride is not so showy nor quite so active as that of the Clydesdale.

A cheap dusting powder is made by mixing together equal parts of slaked lime, sulphur and charcoal. Run this through a flour sifter to make it fine. This is a good powder to dust on large sores. In fly time add a dram of iodoform per ounce and the flies will be kept off. A more expensive dusting powder for use on sores and wounds may be made by mixing together one dram of iodoform and seven drams of boric acid. This is good powder to use on a wound of the hoof head (coronet). Such wounds should not be stitched. Cleanse them, clip away the hair, dust freely with the powder, then cover with cotton batting or absorbent cotton and bandage snugly. Renew the dressing once daily. If there is a big wound and a flap of skin a callous bunch is likely to remain when the wound has healed. This can be largely prevented by placing a flat wad of oakum over the first turn or two of the bandage immediately upon the flap and wound and then bandaging tightly to cause pressure upon the part.

When a horse gets a nail prick, and such wounds are very common and serious, always have the wound cut down upon to give vent to any blood, serum or pus which should come away. Even the slight nail wound should be so handled. After the cutting saturate the wound with a one five-hundredths solution of corrosive sublimate and then cover with the last prescribed dusting powder, absorbent cotton and bandage. Renew the dressing daily. If pus issues from the wound be careful to cut away every part of the undermun horn or sole; then swab with the corrosive sublimate solution and use dusting powder and cotton and bandage once a day. Pouring turpentine in a nail prick does not suffice. The slight wound may be followed by lockjaw. The treatment we have prescribed prevents that disease.

The Silo For Beef Production.

Heretofore the only chance for profit in winter feeding of cattle has been in the margin between the prices of the feeders in the fall and the finished beeves in the spring. This margin had to more than compensate for the loss on the gains put on in the feed lot. If the cost of production could be so reduced that the gains secured would pay the cost of production the chief element of uncertainty would be eliminated. This is where the silo makes good. Not only does it save the entire crop, but it reduces the feeding cost to a profitable basis.

Milk With Dry Hands.

Never milk the cow with wet hands. No more filthy habit is indulged in than that of milking on the hand in order to strip the teat. Milking should always be done with a full, dry hand.

A PROPOSAL.

To the Summer Girl, Who Sets One's Heart Awhirl.

[From an admirer who isn't too exacting.]

Summer girl, oh, summer girl, you have set my heart awhirl! With your lips so cherry red you've completely turned my head. To your alabaster brow I make everlasting vow, and the gold glint of your hair is my joy and my despair.

Summer girl, oh, summer girl, you are fit for belted earl! (If the earl I chance to see you can bet he'll belted be!) You are fit to grace a throne, for Love's empire's all your own, and no monarch would disdain such a queen to share his reign.

Summer girl, oh, summer girl, you oyster you're the pearl! Who can dance like unto thee? Every step is poetry. When you laugh or when you sing 'tis like angels murmuring. When the gardens you pass by, roses weep in jealousy.

Summer girl, oh, summer girl, who'd not love thee is a churl! Who'd deride thee is a crab, with a spirit drear and drab. Who, indeed, could criticise one possessed of azure eyes like to those twin orbs of thine, with their depths so crystalline?

Summer girl, oh, summer girl, at thy feet my all I hurl! I care not how many swains lie imprisoned in your chains, let me have for my small part just one-twentieth of your heart. Let me be your fiance every other Saturday.—Judge.

"But suppose some ugly drunken men should try to tear our clothes, throw missiles at us and threaten us with bodily harm?"

"Oh, in that case you'll call on the police to show themselves gentlemen and protect you."—Buffalo Express.

For One Thing.

A WONDERFUL INDIAN BOY.

James Thorpe, One of the Heroes of the Olympic Games.

I want to tell you a few intimate facts about James Thorpe, the twenty-five-year-old Indian boy who, at the conclusion of the recent Olympic games, was presented to King Gustav of Sweden and heard that monarch say, "You, sir, are the most wonderful athlete in the world." It was no idle or merely polite compliment, but a plain statement of fact, and every one of us sons of Uncle Sam should rejoice that the honor has fallen to a real, dyed in the wool native—an American redskin!

Four years ago, when Thorpe entered Carlisle, he was just an unknown Indian. He had never competed in athletic track sports, though he had played a little football and baseball. He did excel as a hunter and was known among the "home folks" as an excellent shot. Long trips on the trail and weeks of camping out and roughing it added speed and endurance to his natural wonderful physical make-up. Today he is the winner of both the pentathlon and the decathlon, recognized for over 2,000 years as the most important events in the Olympic list.

As an all round athlete he is supreme, his record eclipsing even the great performances of the wonderful Martin Sheridan. Thorpe is a Sac and Fox Indian, was born in Oklahoma, and it was from Sprague, in that state, that he entered Carlisle. He stands over six feet in height, weighs about 178 pounds stripped and is "hard as nails." At Carlisle he soon distinguished himself by his athletic prowess, but on the football field was looked upon as a marvel. Coach Warner says he is the best halfback he has ever seen, and the whole football world knows of his wonderful ability to kick goals. He is the captain of this year's eleven. Thorpe is also a crackerjack player at hockey, tennis, lacrosse, handball and basketball and on the baseball field can not only cover most any position, but has pitched well enough to have received offers from the major leagues.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

GROWING DIAMONDS.

This Process Is Scientific, but Not Alarmingly Satisfactory.

Dr. W. von Bolton has been trying to grow diamonds. At a recent congress of the German Bunsen society he described the decomposition of illuminating gas under the action of sodium amalgam, which precipitated the carbon in the form of black coal and, it seemed, of diamonds, but these were in too small quantity to permit of analysis. Dr. von Bolton determined to obtain a greater quantity by making diamonds grow on some other substance.

The Scientific American says he placed fifty grams of 14 per cent sodium amalgam in a long testing tube and coated the upper layer with a diluted water glass solution, over which he spread amorphous diamond powder. The tube was kept at a temperature of 100 degrees centigrade in a water bath, after which a slow current of moistened illuminating gas was introduced. The amalgam was allowed to give off its mercury vapor for one month, when very little black carbon had been separated, but on the layer covered with diamond powder many particles of high brilliancy were found.

The contents of the tube were boiled in a platinum crucible with a mixture of fluoric and sulphuric acids. The microscope revealed that the amorphous powder had been converted into brilliant crystals, true diamonds, still too small, however, to allow of analysis.

Banana Flour.

Banana flour specially prepared as a tonic food is making its appearance in Paris. Within a recent period this fruit was but little used in France, and even now its consumption is limited. However, measures are being taken to increase the importation, and it is said that seventy vessels were recently fitted up for bringing the fruit to Europe. Banana flour has a much more extended use in England than on the continent, but efforts are now made to introduce it in France owing to its great nutritious value.

Landowners of London.

The county council has completed an accurate survey of the whole area of London and finds that the actual number of landowners in London is just under 35,000. The survey further shows that the largest landowners in London are not private individuals, but great public corporations—namely, the crown, the ecclesiastical commissioners, the London county council and the city corporation.—London Spectator.

Travels of a Life Preserver.

A life preserver which had drifted 12,000 miles from the coast of Japan to Scotland has been received at San Francisco by Captain Robert Dollar. It floated from the Stanley Dollar, which went aground in Yokohama harbor in September, 1905. It is believed to have drifted through the Northwest passage, the first authentic record of such an occurrence, and was picked up near the Shetland islands last September.

Unable to Eat Old Motors.

The motorcar is making itself felt in a new way in Paris. There are a great many horse meat butchers in France, and they are finding that they cannot find sufficient old horses to supply their customers. They have decided to appeal to the government to facilitate the importation of horses from abroad. —Chicago Tribune.

Points for Mothers

Memory in Children.

Much to the easement of our social amenities, the precocious child has gone out of fashion. No longer have we to stifle yawns and to smile while our fingers tingle from a desire to smack as a baby prodigy recites Shakespeare or makes grandiloquent speeches or gives impromptu scale practice on the piano.

In fact, the tendency is the other way. We are on the upswell of a Rousseau movement, and the dear babies are being turned out to do gardening and to cultivate powers of observation apart from books and pen and ink. The nursery has become a menagerie and botanical museum, and that her boy or girl of seven is ignorant of the alphabet is the latest and proudest boast of the loving mother.

A change all to the good surely did it not seemingly take as much time, trouble and teaching to keep up a condition of book ignorance as of book knowledge.

What is considered brain development in a child is nearly always a matter of memory and adaptability, just a parrot-like quality strongly developed. The child just remembers and imitates.

One has this shown very clearly in the historical records of royalties. Where the young prince or princess has, through the pressure of state affairs, been obliged to live surrounded by diplomatists and ministers, the child has picked up the jargon in the most astonishing fashion.

Is it not on record that when Mary, queen of Scots, as a child of eight years, met her mother at Rouen, the little queen's reply to the maternal caresses was the inquiry, "What factions continued to exist in the noble families of Scotland?" and "whether the English still harassed her native country; whether worship remained pure and the prelates and clergy did their duty?"

At eleven she quotes Plutarch, and at twelve she writes an essay on the demeanor and duties of princes couched in the language of an elderly statesman. Yet, though a brilliant woman, who can say that Mary Stuart's later life was remarkable in wisdom and diplomacy? Her precocity was just the repetition of the sentiments and expressions she heard about her.

And might not one hazard the opinion that the weighting of the memory destroys other faculties and gives a reason why the precocious child so early becomes a distinct rocket—its light and fizzle and glare all ended before maturity is reached. Perhaps it is this consciousness which makes us all have a feeling of pity for the precocious child and to rejoice so heartily that juvenile displays no longer shadow our afternoons. In some things at least we make for progress.

Books For the Little Folks.

Nowadays nobody remembers a book entitled "Sandford and Merton," and nobody reads "The Parent's Assistant," yet once upon a time these two musty, tiresome, goody goody books were considered by wise and proper grownups to be appropriate and beneficial reading for their boys and girls.

All of which proves the fallacy of hankering for "the good old days." We should be grateful for our wonderfully progressive twentieth century that sends "Sandford and Merton" and "The Parent's Assistant" disappearing beneath an almost bewildering avalanche of charming juvenile publications and be glad that our boys and girls are provided with books written to meet the needs of their natures and imaginations.

Perhaps the worthiest progress has been made in the books that are now written for very little folks, for those children who are just beginning to discover the wondrous delight of reading themselves. They must have books wherein the print is large, the language simple and the illustrations attractive. And these have been given to them. Not only Grimm's and Andersen's fairy tales have been retold, but Kingsley's "Water Babies," "Robinson Crusoe," "Stories of King Arthur's Knights" and "Undine" have been issued in delightful little volumes devised to suit very young readers.

Besides these, there are many story books and picture books that are marvels of workmanship and cleverness. Among these can be recommended Brooke's "Johnny Crow's Garden," Blaisdell's "Tommy Tinker Book," Beatrix Potter's "Tale of Peter Rabbit" and "Tale of Squirrel Nutkin," Holbrook's "Hiawatha Primer" and Chase's "Children of the Wigwam."

Exercise For the Baby.

After the baby is a few weeks old it exercises its own muscles by kicking, reaching and crowing. Every little sound it makes exercises its lungs. For this reason it is not harmful for a baby to cry a moderate amount every day. Of course violent crying should be avoided if possible, as there always is danger from an overstrain. When the baby is a few weeks old it begins to throw its arms and legs about. Then it should be allowed to lie on its back when awake and exercise as it desires. The clothing should be arranged so as not to interfere with its free movements. There is no more perfect picture of health than that of a growing baby lying on its back, kicking and crowing contentedly.

CUMBERLAND BRANCH.....W. T. WHITE, M

Woodrow Wilson In a Mutshell

He is 56 years old.

He has a charming and beautiful wife and three charming daughters.

His daughters all look much more like him than their mother. They are all grown and unmarried.

His first name is "Thomas," but he has not used it for many years. They called him Tommy in college.

He does not use tobacco. He drinks a little wine sometimes and a Scotch highball when very tired. Buttermilk is his favorite beverage.

He is nearly blind in his right eye as the result of an accident in youth. When reading he holds a monocle in front of the damaged eye.

His favorite recreation is golf, but he walks much.

He never drinks ice-water.

Sleeps from 9 to 12 hours out of every 24.

Likes automobiling, but often goes to sleep in the motor.

He is a shorthand and typewriting expert. Writes all his speeches, lectures and books that way. He uses the Graham system of shorthand.

He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 177 pounds.

He can run a half-mile at a good pace without losing his "wind."

Dislikes military display.

Except for a few thousand dollars which he saved from his salary as President of Princeton, he has no money or property.

Considers "13" his lucky number. There are thirteen letters in his name, and in his thirteenth year as professor at Princeton he was elected its thirteenth President.

Likes to go to the theatre, prefers comedy or light opera.

His best speeches are impromptu.

He has enormous ears and large mouth, with large irregular & somewhat discolored teeth.

He wears eyeglasses all the time.

Was a good baseball and football player when a young man.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

NOTICE is hereby given that the partnership firm conducted by E. C. Emde and Arthur Denton, under the firm name and style of "B. C. Garage," was on the 22nd day of November 1912, duly dissolved. The business will in future be carried on under the name and style of "B. C. Garage," by John Thomson and Arthur Denton in partnership. All debts due the former firm must be paid forthwith to Messrs Thomson & Denton. All debts against the former firm must be presented to Messrs Thomson & Denton, who will pay the same in so far as their liability may thereto extend, under and by virtue of the agreement entered into by them with the former firm.

JOHN THOMSON
ARTHUR DENTON
E. C. EMDE.

Dated November 27th, 1912

E. C. Emde has sold out his interest in the B. C. Garage to John Thomson and Arthur Denton. Andrew Thomson will be one of the active men in the new firm, and a finer and more obliging young man never trod the streets of Cumberland. We wish the new firm every success. Mr. Emde expects to leave shortly on an extended visit to his old home in the United States.
