MR. McBRIDE WEDS

Our good friend, Mr Peter McBride, who for some years has been manufacturing the staff of life for this community in Marocchi's Bakery, and diversifying the fare of the citizens of Cumberland with fat raisins and abundant currants in their cake, made one cake recently in which the interst of his patrons was not the chief ingredient. That cake was a gem. It was compounded with his utmost skill and spiced with the most wonderful combination of flavors his art could dictate. He covered it with a snowy armor of artistic design and bullet-proof thickness. Then he had it secretly conveyed to the snug little home he bought recently from our late townsman, Orm Stevens, while all the world wondered what a confirmed old bachelor could want with such a cosy little home. He had come back from his recent visit to Scotland with such hopeful light in his eyes that we all thought was the alluring vista of long years of single blessedness before him which gave the spring to his step and sweetness to his smile. But as soon as he had that cake safely stowed away he made a quiet visit to Vancouver where he met Miss Barbara Sang, of Holensburg, Scotland, who had come out from the Old Land just for that meeting. They were quietly married and as quietly slipped up to Cumberland a week a ago to cut that cake in the snug little home on Penrith Avenue, where the happy couple have the best wishes of the community for a long and happy life among us. Score one for Peter.

Some of our Liberal brethren die hard.

RECIPROCITY GRAFT

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 22.—When Champ Clark, speaker of the National House of Representatives, arrived today to be the guest of the state fair, he was asked if his supposed humorous remarks about annexation at a banquet some time ago had not aided in the defeat of the reciprocity proposition by Canada yesterday. Mr. Clark wrote the following statement. "My remarks about anexation did not do half as much to defeat reciprocity in Canada as did President Taft's speech in which he insisted on hurrying up agreeing to reciprocity in this country before Great Britain could establish her imperial policy of a tariff with preferential rates for the colonies. "He and I were both quoted by the anti-reciprocity crowd in Canada, he more than I, but the chances are that the quotations from his speeches and mine did not have half so much to do with defeating reciprocity as did the corruption funds sent from both this country and Great Britain into Canada.

Ottawa, Sept 22.—It is rumored here that Geo. H. Cowan, ex M. P., will be requested to re-enter the political arena by Hon. R L Borden, and in the event of him doing so, a seat will be opened and a portfolio probably that of minister of interior, will be given the former member for Vancouver.

They are afraid they will wake up and find that it was only a dream.

Harvest Home Anniversary will be celebrated in the Methodist church next Sunday. There will be the usual appropriate and "tasty" decorative display, and special music is being prepared by the choir.

RALLY DAY BANQUET

Annual Rally Day was observed by Grace Methodist Sunday School last Sunday. There was an attendance of over a hundred at the school in the afternoon, and at the evening service a large representation of the parents and friends gathered to join with the children in the special programme commemorative of the hundredth anniversary of the death of Robert Raikes. Mr. A. B. Boyer delivered a pointed address on "Why Robert Raikes started a Sunday School," and Doctor Gillespie gave an interesting talk on "The Man, and his Work," incidentally referring to some conditions prevailing today, notably Sabbath desecration and pugilism, in which we are a hundred years behind the times. The singing of the little ones was a particularly enjoyable feature of the service.

Next day the children gathered again at the church for their annual banquet and a good time, followee by a lantern entertainment in the evening which broulit a crowded house and was much appreciated.

TERRIBLE DISASTER

Toulon, France, Sept. 25.—Fire broke out early today in the hold of the battleship Liberte, counted one of the finest vessels in the French navy. The explosion which followed wrecked the ship and killed nearly half of her crew of 703 officers and men. The fire was discovered at 5 5 o'clock. At first it did not appear to be serious, but it gained a quick advantage over the squad of sailors who tried to extinguish it, and suddenly without warning it reached the magazines, which had not been flooded on account of the apparently trifling nature of the blaze.

FOUND—A bunch of keys. Apply this office.

If Ross should win out, some here would drop dead with the shock.

STILL IN DOUBT

Duncan Ross is reported by the Victoria Times of the 26th, to be leading by 192 votes with five polls on the Skeena to be heard from, and the Colonist of the same date has it that Mr. Clements is leading by 63.—Both elected.

Halifax, Sept. 24.—Mr. R. L. Borden's majority in Halifax is now definitely set down as 198. Hon. A. K. McLean, Liberal, has carried the second seat. Mr. A. B. Crosby, Mr. Borden's running mate, was at the foot of the poll.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—"I will stay with the boys." Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave his decision as to the future to a few newspapermen in the office which he will soon leave. "You'll come and see me in the other office I hope." The "other office" is the small room at the southwest corner of the main building which belongs by tradition to the leader of the opposition.

The Round-Up

A Romance of Arizona

Novelized From Edmund Day's Melodrama

By JOHN MURRAY and MILLS MILLER

The ruddy faced sheriff blushed to the roots of his auburn hair.

"Much obliged, but I ain't fixed up fer a weddin'," and he looked down at his travel stained breeches, tucked in riding boots white with alkali dust, and felt of his buttonless waistcoat and gingham shirt open at the throat, with the bandanna handkerchief around his neck in lieu of both collar and tie.

Polly assured him that he would do very well as he was; that for her part she "wouldn't want no better dressed man than him" to be present at her own wedding, not even "the feller I am goin' to hitch up to," whereat Slim Hoover was greatly set at ease.

Polly was bounding up the plazza steps to tell Echo of the accession to her party when Hoover held up his hand. A terrifying suggestion had flashed through his mind.

"Hold on a minute!" he exclaimed, and, turning to Allen, he asked anxiously, "Does this here guest of honor have to kiss the bride?"

The question was so foreign to the serious topic which had just been under discussion that every one laughed in relief of the nervous tension.

Allen's fun loving nature at once bubbled to the surface. With an air of assumed anger he said to the sheriff:

"Of course; every guest has to do it." Then, turning to the cowboys, he asked, "Is there any one here as holds out strong objection to kissin' my daughter?"

"Not me," laughed Sagebrush. "I'm here to go the limit."

"I'm an experienced kisser, I am," said Parenthesis. "I don't lose no chance at practice."

"I'll take two, please," simpered Fresno.

Show Low interrupted the general sally which followed this remark, saying, "I strings my chips along with Fresno."

"Slim's afraid of females!" drawled Polly provokingly.

"Oh, thunder!" exclaimed Slim to Polly. "No, I ain't, nothin' of the sort. I'm a peaceful man, I am. I never likes to start no trouble."

"Get out! What's one kiss?" laughed Allen.

"I've seen a big jack pot of trouble opened by chippin' in just one kiss," wisely remarked the sheriff.

Sagebrush at this point announced decisively, "The bride has got to be kissed."

Slim tried to break through the group and enter the house, thinking that by making such a move he would divert their attention and that in the excitement of the wedding he could avoid kissing the bride, an ordeal which to him was more terrible than facing the worst gun fighter in Arizona.

"I deputize you to do the kissin' for me," Slim said to Parenthesis, who had laid his hand on the sheriff's shoulder to detain him.

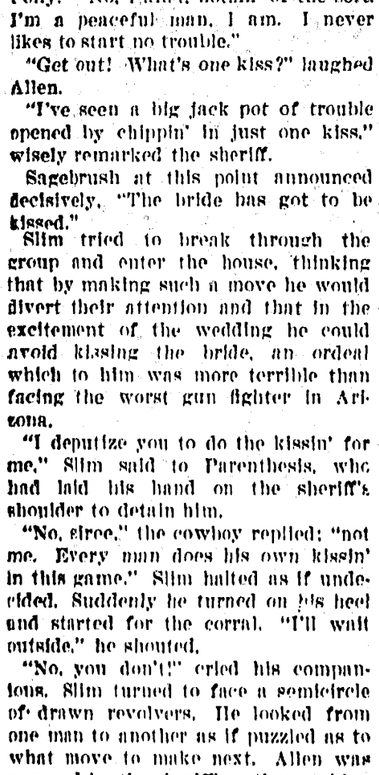
"No, siree," the cowboy replied; "not me. Every man does his own kissin' in this game." Slim halted as if undecided. Suddenly he turned on his heel and started for the corral. "I'll wait outside," he shouted.

"No, you don't!" cried his companions. Slim turned to face a semicircle of drawn revolvers. He looked from one man to another as if puzzled as to what move to make next. Allen was annoyed by the sheriff's actions, taking it as an insult that Hoover would not kiss his daughter, although he had started to twit the sheriff in the beginning.

"You ain't goin' to insult me an' mine that way. No man sidesteps kissin' one of my kids," he said angrily.

Slim was plaintively apologetic. "I ain't kissed a female since I was a yearlin'."

"Time you started," snapped Polly.



"No, you don't!" cried his companions.

"You kiss the bride or I take it outside," said Allen, thoroughly aroused.

"Well, if you put it that way I'll do it," gasped Slim in desperation.

The agreement restored the boys to their good nature.

"You will have to put blinders on me, though, an' back me up," cautioned Hoover.

"We'll hog tie you an' sit on your head," laughed Sagebrush as the guests entered the house.

CHAPTER VI.

AFTER fording Sweetwater river several times to throw pursuit off the track Buck McKee and Bud Lane entered an arroyo to rest their mounts and hold council as to their future movements. During the flight both had been silent. McKee was busy revolving plans for escape in his mind, and Bud was brooding over the tragic ending of the lawless adventure into which he had been led by his companion.

When McK... callously informed him that the agent had been killed in the encounter Bud was too horrified to speak. A dry sob arose in his throat at the thought of his old friend lying dead all alone in the station. His first impulse was to turn back to Florence and surrender himself to the sheriff. Had this entailed the punishment of himself alone he would have done so, but he still retained a blind loyalty in his associate and principal in the crime. Murder, it seemed, was to be expected when one took the law in his own hands to right an injustice. He didn't clearly understand it. It was his first experience with a killing. The heartlessness of McKee both awed and horrified him. Evidently the half breed was accustomed to such actions. It appeared to be entirely justified in his code. So Bud followed in dull silence the masterful man who had involved him in the fearful deed.

When they dismounted, however, his pent-up emotion burst forth.

"You said there would be no killing," he gasped, passing his hand wearily across his forehead as if to wipe out the memory of the crime.

"Well, what did the old fool pull his gun fer?" grumbled McKee petulantly, as if Terrill were the aggressor in the encounter.

Bud threw himself wearily on the ground.

"I'd give the rest of my life to undo today's work," he groaned, speaking more to himself than to his companion.

McKee heard him. His anger began to rise. If Bud weakened detection was certain. Flight back to Texas must be started without delay. If he could strengthen the will of the boy

"Shoot if you want to!"

either by promises of reward or fear of punishment the chances of detection would lessen as the days passed.

"And that will be about twenty-four hours if you don't keep quiet. Why didn't he put up his hands when I hollered? He starts to wrastle an' pull his gun, an' I had to nail him." McKee shuddered in spite of his bravado.

Pulling himself together with an apparent effort, he continued: "We'll hold the money fer a spell, not spend a cent uv it till this thing blows over. They'll never git us. Here; we'll divide it."

"Keep it all. I never want to touch a penny of it," said Bud earnestly, moving along the ground to place a greater distance between him and the murderer.

"Thanks. But you don't git out uv yer part in the holdup that easy. Take yer share or I'll blow it into you," said McKee, pulling his revolver.

Bud, with an effort, arose and walked over to Buck. With clinched fists, in agonized tones, he cried: "Shoot if you want to! I wish I'd never seen you! You dragged me into this! You made me your accomplice in a murder!"

McKee looked at him in amazement. This phase of human character was new to him, trained as he had been on the border, where men rarely suffered with remorse and still more rarely displayed it.

"Shucks! I killed him. You didn't have no hand in it," answered Buck. "This hain't my first killin'. I guess Buck McKee's pretty well known in some sections. I took all the chances. I did the killin'. You git half. Now, brace up an' take yer medicine straight."

"But I didn't want to take the money for myself," replied Bud as if to soothe his conscience. "Oh, Buck, why didn't you let me alone?" he continued as the thought of his position again overwhelmed him.

Buck gasped at the shifting of the full blame upon his shoulders.

"Well, I'll be darned!" he muttered. "You make me sick, kid." His voice rose in anger and disgust. "Why, to hear you talk one would think you wuz the only one had right feelin's. I'm goin' to take my share an' start a decent life. I'm goin' back to Texas an' open a saloon. You take yer hair, marry yer gal an' settle down right here. 'Ole Man' Terrill's dead. Nothin' will bring him back, an' you might as well git the good uv the money. It's Slim Hoover's, anyhow. If Jack Payson can marry yer brother Dick's gal on Dick's money—fer there's no hope uv stoppin' that now—you can cut Slim out with Polly on Slim's salary. Aw, take the money!" And McKee pressed half of the bills into Bud's lax fingers.

The young man's hand closed upon them mechanically. A vague thought that he might some day make restitution conspired with McKee's insidious appeal to his hatred and jealousy to induce him to retain the blood money, and he thrust it within an inside pocket of his loose waistcoat.

"Now," said McKee, thoroughly satisfied that he had involved Bud in the crime too deeply for him to confess his share in it, "we'll shake hands an' say 'Adois.' Slim Hoover's probably on our track by this time, but I reckon he'll be some mixed in the trail around the mesa an' give the job up as a bad one when he reaches the river. I'll show up on the Lazy K, where the whole outfit will swear I've been fer two days if Hoover picks on me as one uv the men he's been follerin'. You're safe. Nobody 'd put killin' anybody on to you, let alone yer ole frien' Terrill. Why, you ain't a man yet, Bud, though I don't say it to disurrudge you. You've made a start, an' some day you won't think no more'n me uv killin' a feller what stan's in yer way. I shouldn't be so turribly su'prised if Jack Payson got what's comin' to him some day. But what have you got there, Bud?" he inquired as he saw the young man holding a letter he had withdrawn from the pocket into which he had put the bills.

"Letter I got in Florence yesterday when I was too full to read it," said Bud. He opened it. "Why, it's from Polly!" he exclaimed. "It's an invite—by God, it's an invite to Jack and Echo's wedding! It's tomorrow! The scoundrel has hurried the thing up for fear Dick will get back in time to stop it! Buck McKee, I believe you're right! I could kill Jack Payson with no more pity than I would a rattler or Gila monster!"

At this exhibition of hatred by his companion a new thought flashed suddenly through the Satanic mind of the half breed. It involved an entire change of his plans, but the devilish daring of the conception was irresistible.

"Say," he broke in, with seeming irrelevance, "don't Payson ride a pacin' mare?"

"Yes," answered Bud. "What of it?"

"Oh, nothin'," said McKee. "It jes' struck me as sorter funny—Payson an' pacin', don't you see"—

Bud was mystified. Had his companion gone daft?

McKee saw instantly that it would be very easy to fix the charge of murdering the station agent upon Payson. The ranchman had evidently left the station a short time before the murder and had gone straight south to the Sweetwater. Unless it had become confused with their own tracks the trail would be a plain one owing to the fact that it was made by a pacing horse, and the pursuit would undoubtedly follow this.

Payson rode the only pacing horse in the Sweetwater and Bar One outfits, and it was certain to come to light from Terrill's receipts that he had been with the agent about the time of the killing. The motive for the robbery would be evident. Payson was in need of $3,000 to pay off the mortgage on his ranch.

McKee said to Bud: "I've changed my mind. I think I'll see a little fun before I break fer Texas. I'll go with you to the weddin'."

"But you have had no invite," objected Bud.

"Oh, I reckon they'll take me along in yers! I know too much fer Payson to object to me too strenuous."

(To be continued.)

Ready For All-Comers.

Mr. Clement Edwards, M.P., who triumphantly survived a stormy scene at a meeting at Tonypandy, in the Rhondda strike area, recently, was lionized at the British House of Commons two days later. From lunch till tea he "held court" on the terrace and spent the time in receiving the congratulations of confreres and giving demonstrations of the famous "knee-dip" — a wrestling throw — by which he saved an awkward situation.

He hurled an intruder from the platform, and when the police arrived, some seventy strong, he assured them: "It is all right, we can manage this affair ourselves." When he found himself outside the hall Mr. Edwards saw that, in addition to the police, the military had been called out! A lane was formed for him through the crowd, but he refused the proffered protection, and mingled with the crowd.

CORONATION PICTURES.

How the Picture Theatres Obtained the Views.

Thousands of Canadians are viewing the coronation procession at the electric theatres and are "following the King" at the Nickels. Does anyone imagine the trouble and expense that it costs to produce these cinematograph films. Here is how the thing is done. The best places along the route were eagerly sought after by the various cinematograph companies, and the sites go naturally to the highest bidder.

How are these films taken and shown on the screen so quickly. It is largely a question of organization. Each company has a number of operators placed in various positions along the route, and directly one has exposed the film and taken that part of the procession falling to his share the film is handed to a messenger who is waiting, and away he goes as rapidly as possible back to the place where they are to be developed. Here a batch of men are waiting.

The method of developing is as follows. The film is first placed on a roll at the head of a long tank. It is then electrically unrolled and passes down a narrow trough containing the developer, and gradually, as the film passes along, you see the picture appearing.

At the time it reaches the end of the tank that part of the film is developed. It runs underneath into a bath of water, then comes back again through another trough of hypo, which fixes and washes it again, and finally it passes through a weak solution of glycerine. It is then taken into a room and very carefully unrolled and artificially dried. Here it is looked through, parts that are not required being cut off and any spots or defection carefully touched up.

The titles are made by means of a glass slide. It is then photographed on a piece of film by artificial light, and when the desired number of titles to each part of film has been reached the artificial light automatically goes out.

When these things are completed a positive has to be taken in the same way as an ordinary photograph. This is done by placing an unexposed film together with the negative and printed by artificial light. The ray of light is made to fall directly on to the picture like the light that comes from a magnifying-glass being held to the sun.

Both films unroll themselves together, receiving the light on each individual picture. The negative film rolls itself up while the positive runs through the developing tank already described.

A full-length film is 1,000 feet, and contains no fewer than 16,000 pictures. The whole developing process for a film of this length takes about one hour and three-quarters.

Peer and Playwright.

"The Gods of the Mountain," the short play by Lord Dunsany which has been produced at the Haymarket Theatre, London, is not the first dramatic effort of this young peer, who is head of the great Irish family of Plunkett. He has several other plays and books to his credit, and, indeed, has acquired considerable reputation as a litterateur. As a soldier and and sportsman too he has won distinction, and has proved himself a genial host at Dunsany Castle, which is near Tara, famous in Irish song and story. Among his lordship's stock of stories is one concerning an old Irish woman, who, failing to receive from a large patent medicine firm a sample of pills, for which she had applied, went to the postoffice to inquire why the letter (which she believed to have been posted) had not reached her. She was served with the customary form on which particulars of her grievance must be stated, and after the words, "nature of complaint," she ingenuously wrote "biliousness."

The One Who Wasn't Whipped.

It was in a large school, and one of the boys had committed some grave infraction of discipline. The teacher announced that he would thrash the whole class if some one did not tell him who had committed the offence. All were silent, and he began with the first boy and thrashed every one in the class until finally he reached the last one. Then he said, "Now, if you will tell me who did this I won't thrash you." "All right, sir; I did it," was the reply.

A MODERN NIMROD.

Sir Henry Seton-Karr Has a Long Record as a Big Game Hunter.

Sir Henry Seton-Karr has sailed on a big game and business tour in Rhodesia which will last until late in the year. He has been in the world for fifty-eight years, and has managed to see a fair portion of its surface and not a little of what lies immediately under it. The wandering taint, he will tell you, has always been strong in his Scottish blood. His father found home life too irksome at an early age, and entering the Indian Civil Service, rose to be commissioner at Baroda during the Mutiny fighting. Sir Henry was an under-graduate at Oxford when he brought down his first stag in Norway. Since then he has shot an immense variety of big game in many countries.

Sir Henry, it may be mentioned, is no lover of Zoos. To kill an animal "clean" is not reprehensible. But to condemn a grizzly to solitary confinement for life in a small cage is, he declares, an extreme form of refined and civilized cruelty. "The saddest sight of the kind that I know in London is to watch the grizzly, his claws worn to the quick, restlessly pacing behind ten feet of iron bars; or to see the Golden Eagle, whose natural home is space, sitting in a cage, a lump of solitary misery. The eagle should be killed and stuffed. For the grizzly half an acre of well-fenced ground, piled with rocks and some trees, might faintly justify captivity, but not a ten foot den."

Sir Henry once claimed that he had discovered the Garden of Eden. He was lion-hunting at the time, and one day in the course of his wanderings stumbled upon a paleolithic instrument. After a careful examination of it he came to the conclusion that he was standing in the veritable Garden of Eden where Adam partook of the forbidden fruit, and he suggested that it was within the bounds of possibility that in the collection of prehistoric articles which he unearthed was the very spade Adam used.

Sir Henry is probably the only man in England who can claim to be able to write with three pens at once—two in his right and one in his left.

Hick's Funniest Experience.

The popular English actor, who sailed for South Africa recently with his equally popular wife, Miss Ellaline Terriss, was interviewed some time ago by a Welsh reporter, when the following dialogue took place: "Do you know," said the actor, "I can tell I'm in a Welsh theatre by the rain coming through the roof. See the 'Leek'!" "How long have you been on the stage?" "I have annoyed the people for twenty-four years." "And may I ask your age, because the girls will be interested?" "Yes; I am forty." "What is your funniest experience?" "Being interviewed." "Anything else?" "Yes; I took my wife's part in 'The Dashing Little Duke' one afternoon, and as I was coming out to my cab to go to the Coliseum I was made up as Scrooge. A coster stood on the kerb, and he said, 'Law lumme, hasn't he aged!' Another time I drove up to the theatre in Dublin, and was humming a tune when I got out. An old Irishwoman, who had failed to get in, heard me, and said, 'Begorra, if that is how he sings I am glad I didn't go in.'"

Plant Defies Mosquitoes.

Sir George Birdwood is convinced that certain sub-tropical basils keep away mosquitoes, and has advanced various proofs to show that they do so. Writing recently to state his belief in the powers of the plant, he remarked that one of the two facts of present pertinence is "the presence of the plant, set upon, or planted into, the four-horned altar within the forecourt, or the front garden, of every Hindu house. . . . where every morning 'the mother of the house' is to be seen performing pradakshina, or the worship of the plant, by circumambulating it with the right hand always next to it—the while she over and over again invokes the blessing of the Lord Vishnu on 'the father of the house' and on 'the holy family' of their sons and daughters — that is, prays for less and less 'malaria' and more and more 'buonaria.'"

Kilkenny Castle.

Kilkenny castle is one of the oldest inhabited houses in the world, many of the rooms being much as they were 800 years ago.

For the Children

A Remarkable Dog That Really Speaks Words.

There have been many so called speaking dogs—that is, dogs who have been trained to give a certain number of barks to indicate certain wants—but this remarkable dog can really speak, although its vocabulary is limited as yet to about ten words.

The wonderful gift that enables the dog to articulate was discovered quite accidentally by its owner, Herr Hermann Ebers, a German royal gamekeeper. One day the dog was begging at the table and his master asked him (in German, of course), "What will you have?" The dog answered "haben" (have), and since then has been taught eight or nine other words. His name is Don, and this word he can say very distinctly, also "rube" (quiet) and "hunger" (hunger). That he can really articulate has been proved not only by the fact that he does speak the words, but also by examination by scientists.

A Smart Trick.

Every child likes to do tricks, and the more mystifying the trick the better he likes to do it. I will tell you a good one to show to your friends.

Throw a ring or coin into a basin full of water and tell them you are going to recover the object with your hand, but that you will not wet it in the least.

In order so to do it will suffice to sprinkle the surface of the liquid with some powder which has no attraction for the water and will not adhere to it—something that water will not wet. Powdered lycopodium, which you will find in almost every drug store, is just the thing.

Having thrown a half handful of this preparation on the surface of the water, plunge your hand in boldly, recover your prey and show the spectators that your hand is as dry as ever it was in your life. The reason of this is that the lycopodium has formed a veritable glove around your hand and fingers, for which the water has not had the least affinity, any more than for the feathers of ducks and other water birds. You know that these may dive into the deep ever so often before your eyes and come up as dry as before, thanks to the peculiar oil secreted by their feathers.—Magical Experiments.

The Difference.

One of the professors in a college of Western Canada was talking about the difference between science and poetry.

"There must always be a gulf between the fancies of poetry and the attitude of the scientist. For instance, the language of love is the language of poetry. As Shakespeare has said: 'The lunatic the lover and the poet are of imagination all compact.' The lover would not dare to address the lady of his choice in the terms of science. It is all very well to call a young woman the star of your life. But what would happen if you addressed her as the electric bulb of your existence? You may call the moments you spend with her the golden age; but if you referred to her as the most auriferous influence of your life, she would not appreciate it. Keep to the poets when you wish to succeed in sentiment."

Baby Nearly Died with Itching Rash

Mrs. M. C. Maitland, of Jasper, Ont., tells in the following letter of her child's remarkable cure by the Cuticura Remedies:

"When my boy was about three months old his head broke out with a rash which was very itchy and ran a watery fluid. We tried everything we could but he got worse all the time, till it spread to his arms, legs, and then to his entire body. He got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran and a thin yellowish stuff would be all over his pillow in the morning. I had to put mittens on his hands to prevent him tearing his skin. He was almost a skeleton and his little hands were thin like claws.

"He was bad about eight months when we tried Cuticura Remedies. I had not laid him down in his cradle in the daytime for a long while. I washed him with Cuticura Soap and put on one application of Cuticura Ointment and he was so soothed that he could sleep. You don't know how glad I was he felt better. It took one box of Cuticura Ointment and pretty near one cake of Cuticura Soap to cure him. I think our boy would have died but for the Cuticura Remedies and I shall always remain a firm friend of them. He was cured more than twenty years ago and there has been no return of the trouble."

(Signed) Mrs. M. C. MAITLAND, Jasper, Ont.

No more convincing proof of the efficacy and economy of the Cuticura Remedies could be given. As in this instance, a single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. Send for free Cuticura Booklet on skin and scalp diseases.

In the treatment of summer complaints the most effective remedy that can be used is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It is a standard preparation, and many people employ it in preference to other preparations. It is a highly concentrated medicine and its sedative and curative qualities are beyond question. It has been a popular medicine for many years and thousands can attest its superior qualities in overcoming dysentery and kindred complaints.

POISONS THEIR HOBBY.

Curious Race in the Malay Forests Is Expert In Death.

Away among the deep forests in the heart of the Malay Peninsula there dwells a singular people, whose curious habits are only partially understood. An Italian explorer found them so interesting that he spent fifteen years in studying their habits and customs, and has some wonderful stories to relate about the Sacai.

They live in a barbarous state, spending most of their time in gathering poisons from plants, which they prepare according to secrets known only to themselves, for protection against their enemies and for bringing down their quarry in the chase.

But what proves most attractive to the natives is the great variety of poisonous plants. They speak about the different poisons as familiarly and as often as we speak about the weather, and the discovery of a new kind or combination is hailed as an event of the greatest importance.

The reason for this is because the poison is used in killing game and catching fish, and for the preservation of their independence, the various concoctions being mixed according to the resisting power of the object for which they are intended.

Thus, for instance, the hunter would never think of wasting a strong poison on a small animal, he considered unworthy of such an honorable distinction. Besides, he must study to bring down such game as he afterward uses for food with poisons which will in no way affect him.

Growing among the rank grasses and on the trunks of the trees, and mingling with creeping flowers, are so many posionous plants that the traveler must be constantly on the lookout to avoid them. Some are so deadly that even the odor arising from them is overpowering, causing serious illness; others cause skin diseases and painful swellings of the body if their leaves chance to touch ever so lightly the hands or other exposed parts.

In spite of his extraordinary passion for concocting poisons, the Sacai is a thorough gentleman in the chase and a worthy foeman to meet. He is a big-hearted fellow, having none of the barbarous methods of other inhabitants of the Malay Peninsula, whose greatest pleasure is to torture a fallen foe. When he poisons an arrow his object is to cause death as quickly and as painlessly as possible.

He seems to be particularly happy in his domestic affairs. Husband and wife live happily together, and quarreling or ill-treatment is practically unknown among them. In the event of a mother-in-law upsetting the peace of the home by interfering with its arrangements, the young couple adopt the wise plan of pulling down their hut and building a new one at a respectable distance from the cause of disturbance.—Chambers' Journal.

Primrose Day.

Primrose Day, the anniversary of the death of Lord Beaconsfield, was recently celebrated in England. The statue of the statesmen was well-nigh buried in primroses, and large numbers of people carried them throughout the day. Probably Lord Beaconsfield would be much surprised if he knew that his memory was associated with the primrose, or indeed with any particular flower. The cult arose in a rather curious way. Queen Victoria sent a wreath of primroses to the funeral. On the accompanying card and in her own handwriting were the words "His favorite flower." Queen Victoria was sufficiently Victorian to use italics with great liberality, as of course the accented pronoum referred to the Prince Consort and not at all to Lord Beaconsfield, but the public jumped to the conclusion that the Queen had special knowledge of the dead statesman's floral preferences, and so the primrose became the symbol of the Beaconsfield cult. And, after all, what does it matter?

A Famous Artist Who Fasts.

Perhaps the most remarkable fact concerning Mr. John H. F. Bacon, A.R.A., who is to paint the Westminster Abbey coronation picture, is that when working he practically starves himself. Like the poet Shelley, Mr. Bacon can live on a very spare diet. When he was painting his famous picture, "Forgiven"—which depicts an old man ill in bed speaking words of forgiveness to an erring daughter, who, in the agony of her confession, has fallen on her knees on the floor before him—he used to take so little breakfast before starting that, to quote his own words, "I always suffered acutely from hunger, which acted on the brain and so made the work a great strain." Another of Mr. Bacon's successful pictures, "The Young Widow," was practically painted on nothing more substantial than bread and butter and tea and an apple for lunch.

Threatening a Prince.

Like many other people, Prince Arthur of Connaught is of opinion that sport is becoming too spectacular, and that it would be of great benefit to the country if some of the thousands who watch others play would take a part in the games themselves. "It is only," he said recently, "by following them as a recreation that we can hope to maintain the fine physique of the British race. Unfortunately it is the tendency of the age for men and boys to watch other people play instead of playing themselves. When I was at Eton I was told that unless I played football five times a week I should probably find standing easier than sitting."

A Miners' Church.

One of the most remarkable places of worship in the world is the miners' chapel in Mynddd Menigdd Colliery, Swansea, where for more than fifty years the workers have each morning assembled for worship. This sanctuary is situated close to the bottom of the shaft. The only light is that obtained from a solitary Davy safety lamp hung over the pulpit from the ceiling, and the oldest miner in the colliery is generally chosen to officiate.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

SCARCITY OF FEED

The intense heat without rain has made feed scarce, and it will be necessary to use every pound of coarse fodder available. Straw, cornstalks and even coarse hay are not easily assimilated, which means considerable waste of feed and impaired thrift of the animal. The addition of a small quantity of Herbageum will enable the animal to thoroughly assimilate even the coarse foods, and whey becomes a valuable feed for calves and pigs when seasoned with Herbageum. Whey contains considerable nourishment, but of itself is not easily digested.

Fasting might not be so bad, but we would hate to be starved to death on lettuce sandwiches.

Small but Potent.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are small, but they are effective in action. Their fine qualities as a corrector of stomach troubles are known to thousands and they are in demand everywhere by those who know what a safe and simple remedy they are. They need no introduction to those acquainted with them, but to those who may not know them they are presented as the best preparation on the market for disorders of the stomach.

Baby Eczema for Three Years

Three Doctors and Scores of Treatments Failed

The Dreadful Itching Was Stopped and the Sores Healed by

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Here is an illustration of the wonderful control which Dr. Chase's Ointment has over torturing, itching eczema. By its soothing influence it stops the itching, and it heals the sores as if by magic.

Mrs. Wm. Miller, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"My daughter, Mary, when six months old contracted eczema, and for three years the disease baffled all treatment. Her case was one of the worst that had ever come under my notice, and she apparently suffered what no pen could ever describe. I had three different doctors attend her, all to no purpose whatever, and all kinds of balms, lotions and soaps were tried, with no results.

"Finally I decided to try Dr. Chase's Ointment and to my surprise she immediately began to improve, and was completely cured of that long-standing disease. That was four years ago, when we lived at Cornwall, Ont., and as not a symptom has shown itself since, the cure must be permanent. With a grateful heart I give this testimony to the great value of Dr. Chase's Ointment."

In scores of ways Dr. Chase's Ointment is useful in every home to allay skin irritations and heal and cure sores, wounds and ulcers. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

BACK TO CHARLES I.

Historic Letter Recently Sold in London for a Big Sum.

A letter of Edmund Waller, the celebrated English poet, dated Paris, May 5, 1648, addressed to John Evelyn, the diarist, and referring to Waller's banishment for participation in a plot to restore Charles I. to the throne, brought $470 at Sotheby's in London a few days ago. It is a full-page folio letter. In it Waller says:

"Yours of the 20th of April, together with your brother's, I received, assuring you that nothing could have made me wait so longe, but the want of occasion to serve you; so that, contenting myself to heare weekly of you, in your's to Sir Richard, and to commend myself to your memory and the continuance of your favor, in his (which I hope he has not fayled to do), I have spared to give you a worldly trouble . . . This enclosed I have sent concealed, because you, as well as he, should see the reasons why you were not so fully satisfyed, in what he desireth, at first, as now you are like to be.

"For your poore servant (since you do friendly invite me to trouble you) if you can see anything to any of your noble kinsmen or friends, in Parliament, to give me leave to returne, to gather up the pecies of my wract fortune, tis all I desire."

Waller narrowly escaped having his head chopped off by Charles I.'s enemies. The fact that he was a cousin of John Hampden and by marriage a connection of Oliver Cromwell probably saved his life. In the conflict between King Charles and the Commons he was at first enlisted on the side of the latter.

In February, 1643, he was one of the commissioners appointed to treat with the King at Oxford. Charles received him graciously, and it was during the poet's stay at Oxford that what was known as "Waller's Plot" was conceived. On his return to London he became the channel through which the adherents of Charles at Oxford communicated with his friends in London.

The edict of the plot was to secure that city for the king, to seize upon the defences, the magazine, and the tower, from which the Earl of Bath was to be liberated and made the general of Charles' forces. The king was to be informed of the hour of the rising and was to be, with a force of 3,000 men, within fifteen miles of London's walls.

One Roe, a clerk of Nathaniel Tomkins, brother-in-law of Waller, betrayed the conspirators. Tomkins and Richard Chaloner, a wealthy linen draper, were hanged in front of their own doors. Waller was fined $50,000 and banished the realm. It was not until Nov. 27, 1651, that the House of Commons revoked his sentence of banishment, and ordered a pardon to be prepared for him. He was elected to Parliament in 1661, and remained a member until his death, Oct. 21, 1687. He became a great favorite at the courts of Charles II. and James II.

King of British Shipping.

A fleet of no fewer than 231 steamers is controlled by Sir Owen Phillips. He is chairman of a number of shipping companies, including the Elder-Dempster line, and the manner in which of late years he has engineered shipping deals, acquiring not single vessels, but whole fleets, furnishes a remarkable story of enterprise and energy. A short time ago, for instance, he arranged the purchase of the Pacific Steam Navigation Co., involving a million and a half sterling, the fleet comprising forty-four liners, while another purchase was the Morocco line, a favorite tourist service. Sir Owen is one of the famous trio of tall brothers who sat in Parliament together. He stands six feet seven inches in his stockings, while his brothers, Col. Ivor Phillips and Lord St. Davis, formerly Mr. Wynford Phillips, are six feet four inches and six feet three inches respectively.

Political Jeremiahs.

The following anecdote concerning the present Chancellor of the British Exchequer appears in Dr. Farquharson's Reminiscences. Mr. Lloyd-George was speaking at a Liberal meeting not a hundred miles from Redhill, Surrey, of the unfulfilled prophecies and promises of a certain statesman, and quite accidentally he stretched his arm right over the head of Sir Jeremiah Colman, one of the local pillars of Liberalism, who was sitting close to him on the platform. "We have had enough of those political Jeremiahs," he cried out. The audience rose to the joke and laughed and clapped vociferously. And, perhaps for the first time in his life, the little Welshman stood completely nonplussed, for it was not until the meeting was over that he found out where the humor had come in.

"The Simple Life Premier."

So Sir Wilfrid Laurier is known, for he is an early riser, practically a teetotaller, and is happier lunching on a bun and a glass of milk than on the most elaborate dainties. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's observation is so acute as to be almost uncanny. He never forgets a face or a voice. To the great delight of a page-boy, Sir Wilfrid recognized him as having been in a certain hotel when he last visited London. He speaks French like a cultured Parisian. Indeed, it was the first language he learned, not having tackled his native tongue till he was nearly twenty years old.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

A Standard Medicine.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, compounded of entirely vegetable substances known to have a revivifying and salutary effect upon the digestive organs, have through years of use attained so eminent a position that they rank as a standard medicine. The ailing should remember this. Simple in their composition, they can be assimilated by the weakest stomach, and are certain to have a healthful and agreeable effect on the sluggish digestive organs.

Are Your Children Properly Fed?

LET us talk about the right feeding of children. Of course, you want your children to grow up strong and healthy; you want to equip them for the battle of life with rugged constitutions and good red blood. Now, the first step is to see that they are properly fed. And these words "properly fed" mean much in the diet of children. For it isn't quantity that counts, but quality.

There is no better food under Heaven for growing children than plenty of first class bread and butter. They thrive on it, grow strong and fat and rugged. Their systems crave it because it is a complete, well-balanced food.

But the bread must be good—the very best, and the best is made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR which contains the full nutriment of the best Red Fyfe wheat—for only wheat of this character contains enough of the right quality gluten to balance the starch. Gluten makes bone and muscle, starch makes fat. It takes the right combination of both to make properly balanced bread.

Bread made from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is richest in blood building, muscle building, health building gluten. Children like it better and thrive better on it.

With "Royal Household" you need never have anything but the very best results for it is always the same, absolutely uniform, year in and year out and is just as good for Pastry as it is for Bread.

If parents knew this important difference between ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR and other flours they would never use any but "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD".

Send in your name and address also the name of your dealer to The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited, Winnipeg, and get that splendid book of tried Recipes called "Ogilvies' Book for a Cook." 124

NOTICE
An Outward Sign of Inward Quality
The splendid appearance of a "Fit-rite" suit is the result of the careful, honest way in which it is made. A handsome outward appearance is of no value, unless it has the sterling material underneath to back it up.
It is the care taken in this particular that makes the "Fit-rite" a good suit all through. The hidden parts are given the same attention the surface receives. It retains its shape because the shape and style are built right into it.
Look over a "Fit-rite" suit and examine the quality of the material and tailoring. It is an honest effort to supply good clothes at a reasonable price.

WHEN SUMMER COMES GUARD YOUR BABY

The summer months are the most dangerous of the year for the little one. The complaints of this season come so quickly that often a precious little life is beyond aid before the mother realizes baby is ill. Colic, diarrhoea and cholera infantum are all rife at this time. The mother must guard her baby's health every minute. She must be careful of his food and careful that his stomach is kept sweet and his bowels move regularly and freely. To do this nothing can equal Baby Own Tablets—they are mothers best friend at all times of the year, but more especially in the summer, when, if given occasionally, they act as a preventative of those dreaded summer troubles, or if they do come on suddenly the Tablets will just as quickly remove the cause and baby will soon be well again. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PROGRESS OF WIRELESS.

The System Is Rapidly Spreading All Over the World.

By the law of the land no vessel carrying fifty or more persons, including passengers and crew, may leave any port in the United States on a voyage of more than 200 miles after July 1 unless it is equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus capable of transmitting and receiving messages over a distance of at least 100 miles, day or night, in charge of a competent operator.

Even without the strong encouragement of the law, without any influence whatever beyond the cold logic of achievement, the world's installation of wireless telegraph apparatus had grown to a grand total of 1,520 stations on ship and shore, exclusive of foreign warships and amateur outfits, up to Oct. 1, 1910, according to a directory compiled by the United States navy department. Of this total 821 were on steamships, yachts and tugs throughout the world. Of the shore stations the United States had 206, of which eighty-eight were on the Atlantic and gulf coasts, forty-eight were on the great lakes, fifty-one on the Pacific coast, sixteen in Alaska and three in the interior. The United States navy had 344 ship and forty-seven shore stations, the army thirty shore and sixteen ship stations.

In 1909 the Marconi company transmitted between ship and shore messages aggregating 519,000 words. The transatlantic business ranges from 50,000 to 75,000 words a week. The British postoffice department reported that in the three months ending Oct. 1, 1910, twice as many wireless messages were sent and received as in any other corresponding period. As the first step toward establishing a ring of wireless stations completely encircling the United Kingdom the government has purchased the stations already in operation. The New Zealand government recently asked for bids for erecting five wireless stations, while fifteen new wireless stations now being constructed along the Amazon and Paraguay rivers in Brazil will be in operation before the end of the year.—Technical World Magazine.

MEN'S HATS MIGHTY DEAR.

That Is, For Those In the Fashionable Swim In New York.

New York men's hats cost more than New York women's hats, not in the first outlay, but in the maintenance. A woman pays from $5 to $30 for her elaborate hat, on the average, anchors it to her head, and there is stays, except when it is reposing in its home receptacle. But not so with a man. On certain occasions etiquette requires that he uncover his head, and that is when the expense of maintenance begins its insiduous work.

A bachelor of Gramercy park who takes his meals at restaurants has kept tab on his hat expense and made a report. He is an economical man in his dress, clothing himself well, but taking scrupulous care of his attire. He pays $5 for his derby hat and keeps it in good condition for six months. When he goes to a restaurant he always finds attendants ready to assist him in taking care of it. His bookkeeping shows that the hat he discarded on April 1 had cost him $35.80 in tips, which, added to the original cost, makes $40.80.

"Rather expensive hat, and I think that the Indians have a great advantage over us," was the bachelor's comment.—New York Herald.

Ireland Is Doing Pretty Well.

Ireland isn't so badly off as some reports that reach this country would indicate. A correspondent of the Chicago News writes that "figures have been compiled showing that the country possesses more than 24,000,000 hens and 250,000 goats. It is exporting nearly $20,000,000 worth of poultry produce, while England imports $35,000,000 worth of eggs." He adds that "Ireland, according to these figures, is becoming a second Denmark. The increase in poultry is due principally to the establishment of co-operative depots, which have steadily multiplied. The recently started society called the United Irish Women is rapidly becoming a force in the development of agriculture, and it is believed that the efforts of the organization will result in a greatly reduced emigration."

Has Your Dog a Visiting Card?

Visiting cards for dogs are among the latest freak novelties. They are used by women who take their dog pets with them when they visit houses where there are also pet animals. In a home where a little King Charles has all the attention and affection usually bestowed upon a child a card basket containing the engraved evidence of visits from Schnapps, Fifi, Jumbo, Tip, Lassie, Bijou, Aime and many other canine friends of little King. Many of these cards were added to the collection on one day when King had a reception. One card marked "Regrets" came from Sultan, a Maltese cat.

The Economical Swiss.

As a political institution the Swiss government is the most economical in Europe. The official salary of the president of the Swiss confederation is $3,000. The federal councillors, or members of the cabinet, and the heads of the different departments receive $3,000 a year during office. The state councillors of the cantons of Bale and Zurich are the best paid of their class, receiving $2,000 and $1,800 a year, respectively, while Lucerne and Schaffhausen come next, with $1,000 per annum.

BLED THEM WHITE.

The Treatment In Fever Cases Till Quinine Wrought a Change.

In 1832, when the French were conducting a campaign of conquest in Algeria, the mortality among the troops and colonists there was frightful. France was being continually called upon for fresh levies of men and youths to supply this terrible loss, chiefly from fever incidental to the climate.

At that time the practice of bleeding still prevailed. "Bleed them till they are white" was the injunction which Broussais, the head physician of the French, gave to his followers when the condition of the soldiers was reported to him.

At Bone in one year out of an effective force of 5,500 men, 1,100 died of illness in the hospital. Most of them had been "bled to the white."

At this time the effects of sulphate of quinine were known, but few physicians ventured to employ it. One, Maillot, had interested himself in the new remedy and, going to Bone in the medical service of the government, he resolved to see if it would not reduce the frightful mortality, which was one to every three and one-half men who entered the hospital.

At first he employed the quinine merely as an adjunct to the bleeding. He soon found that bleeding was killing the men and that quinine was saving them. Little by little he left off bleeding, to the great scandal of the medical profession.

Exactly in proportion as the bleeding ceased the deaths in the hospital decreased. In two years the deaths fell off from one in three and a half of all who entered the hospital to one in twenty and finally to one in forty-six.

Maillot, quite naturally enough, became an earnest opponent of bleeding, but he was so actively resisted and so ceaselessly vilified that he became embittered toward his colleagues.

Nearly thirty years passed before Maillot saw the complete triumph of his ideas. Doctors continued to bleed their patients heartily for all manner of ills. But in 1860 Maillot was made commander of the Legion of Honor and chief of the medical staff of the French army, and his influence, with others, in bringing about a virtual revolution in the practice of medicine was fully recognized.—Harper's Weekly.

Missed a Train That Was a Day Late.

When the Switz City division of the Illinois Central was built it was known as the Indiana and Illinois Southern. It was a narrow gauge road; the roadbed was bad, the engines and cars were built on a miniature scale, and, while there was a schedule, had a train been on time the fact would have been regarded as a miracle. The road was known as the "Try-Weakly." On one occasion Josiah McConnell desired to go to Switz City from Sullivan, but missed the train by a minute or two. The clock at the station showed that the train had left Sullivan five minutes ahead of time, and McConnell sued the railroad company for $5,000 damages. On a trial of the case it was proved beyond a doubt that the train McConnell missed should have gone the day before and was really twenty-three hours and fifty-five minutes late.

Lettres de Cachet.

Lettres de cachet was the name given in France to warrants sealed with the king's seal ordering persons to be thrown into prison or exiled. The first came into use about 1670 and shortly became one of the popular terrors of France. It is said that no less than 9,000 lettres de cachet were issued during the reign of Louis XIV, and 80,000 during the reign of Louis XV. In many cases these terrible documents were secretly sold and used as a source of illicit revenue. They were frequently signed in blank, and the holder of one of these royal terrors could write in the name of any person against whom he happened to have a grudge. The national assembly abolished this iniquitous privilege of issuing lettres de cachet on Nov. 1, 1789.

Juvenile Logic.

Little Mabel's mother was expecting Mabel's auntie on a visit. Just as she was almost due to arrive a telegram came, which read: "Missed train. Will start at same time tomorrow."

Mabel hurried home from school, expecting to greet her auntie, instead of which she was shown the telegram. She read it through carefully and laboriously, and then she remarked:

"How silly of auntie, mamma!"

"Why, dear?" inquired her mother.

"Well, don't you see that if she starts at the same time tomorrow she will miss the train again."—Illustrated Bits.

Absurd.

THE FLAX CROP

Has Changed Canada Into An Exporting Country

Inasmuch as economic history shows a protective tariff to have been the most successful policy in agricultural countries much older than Canada, for instance, Russia, France, Austria, Hungary, Belgium, Italy, Germany, Holland and United States, that sort of fiscal system should also be best for Canada. The Canadian farmer, especially in the West, has had the opportunity of seeing just exactly how Protection helped him in the flax industry. In the light of events since 1907, when a protective duty of 10 cents per bushel was placed on flax, it is interesting to record the prophetic words of a prominent Canadian speaking at Winnipeg in 1906. He said: "Our flax is shut out of the American market on account of a duty of 25 cents per bushel. Why do not our Canadian farmers ask our Government to place a duty on flax grown in Canada to give them the home market which they are justly entitled to? There is from one and a half to two million bushels of flaxseed consumed in Canada annually by our Canadian linseed oil crushers, and why should a million bushels or more of foreign seed be used instead of buying "Grown in Canada" flaxseed, and grown right here in the West, the best that can be produced?

"I wish to point out to the intelligent farmers of the West that the American farmers find flax more profitable to grow than wheat and I hope that, when revision of the tariff takes place, there will be a duty placed on flaxseed for the benefit of the farmer and that all flaxsed used in Canada will be "Grown in Canada."

These utterances have been, since, most fully vindicated. Up to 1907, flaxseed entered Canada free of duty, and as shown by the statistical record of exports and imports for 1905 and 1906, Canada was an importing country.

In 1905, imports were 176,887 bushels and exports were only 314 bushels.

In 1906 imports were 711,138 bushels for home consumption, and exports were only 2,824 bushels.

After the duty of 10 cents per bushel was placed against United States and other foreign countries, Canada became an exporting country. In 1908, imports were 495,154 bushels, and exports were 10,997 bushels. In 1909, imports steadily decreased to 288,468 bushels, and exports increased to 693,779. In 1910 imports of flax were only 4,344 bushels, while exports amounted to 1,997,648 bushels which had a value of $3,642,476.

Thus a protective duty has enriched the farmer in five years to the extent of over three and a half million dollars.

Her Duty

At the district school, up at "The Centre," there was a youngster by the name of Calvin Brown, who did not "get to the suds" any too often. A young lady fom Boston was teaching there that winter, and being of a rather dainty nature, Calvin was not one of her particular favorites; but as the weather was cold and Calvin's desk was away back from the stove, she did not say much about it.

But as spring came on, and the weather began to warm up, Calvin began to be a little "obtrusive." So finally she sent a note over to his mother asking her if it would be too much trouble for her to place Calvin in the tub for a night or two. The next morning Calvin brought the following note over from his mother:

"Deer Teecher: We pay you to teach Calvin, not to smell him."

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

ARE you going to build that new horseblock, sidewalk or dairy house of cement? Then insist on your dealer supplying you with the "CANADA" Cement. Not only will this ensure your getting a pure, uniform and strictly high-grade cement, that will guarantee the lifelong permanency of the thing you build, but it will also entitle you to enter our Prize Contest. And in this contest you stand a good chance of winning a prize that will perhaps more than p[illegible] you for the cost of the work. Every farmer in Canada who uses "CANADA" Cement is eligible to compete. Four prizes will be awarded in each Province and these prizes will be divided as follows:

PRIZE "A"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who will use during 1911 the greatest number of barrels of "CANADA" Cement.

PRIZE "B"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who uses "CANADA" Cement on his farm in 1911 for the greatest number of purposes.

PRIZE "C"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with the photograph showing the best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement.

PRIZE "D"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who submits the best and most complete description, of how any particular piece of work shown by photograph sent in, was done.

Notice how we have purposely planned and imposed certain necessary conditions in order to give large and small users of cement an equal opportunity.

As an illustration of this: In prizes "C" and "D," the quantity of cement used has no bearing whatever on the result. The farmer who sends us the best photograph of as small a thing as a watering trough or a gate post, has as much chance for prize "C" as a man who sends a photograph of a house—and the same applies to prize "D."

Don't hold back from entering because you think you don't know anything about concrete work. It's very simple. Besides, we have a 160-page book that we will send you free on request, which tells you all about concrete and how to make and use it. In this book, you'll find complete instructions for the making of almost everything you can think of in the way of farm utilities, floors, vats, troughs, stairs, posts, etc.

This free book—entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"—will not only inform you—it will also greatly interest you. So send for it anyway, whether you intend to try for one of the prizes or not.

The Girl Who Loved Him

Story of a Commencement Season

By Thomas R. Dean

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Commencement was but a couple of months away, and I was very busy getting my classes ready for the exercises, when Laura Warren, a senior of the Woman's college, remained after lecture one afternoon to ask me some questions about her graduation speech. Miss Warren was to have the salutatory oration, which is always spoken in Latin. She had become very proficient in the Latin language and literature and selected for the subject of her commencement oration "Augustus Caesar, the Founder of the Roman Empire."

"What, professor," she said, "do you think I would better hold up to the audience as the prominent feature of Augustus' character?"

"That, living in an age of magnificence and luxury, he personally maintained simplicity of living."

"He built or commenced that marvelous structure the palace of the Caesars."

"But lived and died in the house in which he was born. He never left it for its splendid additions."

Miss Warren did not seem to have heard my reply. She appeared to be thinking of something else. I asked her what was on her mind.

"Suppose," she replied, "instead of Augustus I take for my subject some pure, noble Roman woman, one with a love story in her life?"

"It would be a more interesting theme to your audience."

Miss Warren smiled. I asked what amused her.

"Professor," she replied, "it does not occur to you that my audience will not understand one word of my oration."

"Really, I did not think of that."

"You are so immersed in the affairs of the Romans that you live some sixteen or seventeen centuries ago. You are singularly oblivious to what goes on about you. You would be of great assistance to me in an oration on Augustus, but if I chose a theme based on the love of a Roman maiden you would be useless to me."

"Why so?" I asked, surprised.

"Because you know nothing about love. You do not even know that one of the students in this college loves you."

"Loves me?"

"She has given you her whole heart."

"Who is she?"

"You surely wouldn't have me betray the poor girl. But enough of this. I came to consult you about my oration and should not have spoken of a private matter. I shall not speak on 'Augustus. I have a topic, much used, it is true, but one that excites powerful emotions, 'a vestal virgin who loved and suffered the frightful penalty attached to the crime of a vestal's loving.'"

Miss Warren left me with a smile on her very attractive lips, left me a changed man. Up to this moment I had been so absorbed in the ancients that I had taken no thought of the moderns, and, as for the matter of love, I did not know what it meant. My pupil had awakened an interest in it that struck home. Some girl loved me. Why, I was thirty-five, bald, wore spectacles and was an acknowledged bookworm, a wizened specimen of a man without one attractive feature.

Miss Warren came up to me after lecture again in a few days to tell me that she would not select for her topic a vestal who broke her vows, but one who when the Roman people were going over to Christianity in crowds joined the throng. I told Miss Warren that if she vacillated among so many subjects she would have no oration at all. Instead of being impressed with my caution she laughed and submitted several more topics—"The Conspiracy of Catiline," "The Death of Jugertha," "Was Romulus a Myth?" If I favored one of these topics she inclined toward another. At last, finding it impossible to concentrate her mind on any one of them, I gave up trying. The truth is I wished to ask her again which one of the girls she had referred to in her former conversation with me, but I considered such a subject between professor and student interdicted, and, since she had refused to tell me before, I had no hope of her telling me now.

So passed the time till within a month of commencement. One day when I dismissed my class I called Miss Warren up to my desk and asked her how she was getting on with her oration. She smiled and said she was still hunting for a subject. I strove to impress upon her the necessity of a decision, whereupon she said she was thinking of taking for a theme a girl of Pompeii who loved a man and was pondering on a modest way to let him know it when the dreaded volcano of Vesurius opened, buried the city under ashes, and the man with it.

I looked so lugubrious at this indirect reference to my own case that Miss Warren smiled. That smile upset me. I didn't know whether I was a professor coaching a student or a man wth an unsolvable love problem to deal with. Was it sympathy for this unknown girl who loved me or was I in love with the unknown girl? Nonsense! How could I be in love with an unknown person?

I was conscious of appearing a fool while Miss Warren stood looking at the floor in that respectful attitude which a student is supposed to maintain in the presence of a professor. At the same time there remained a tiny curve at the corners of her mouth and a soft look in her eye that puzzled and at the same time made me feel very queer.

"Select my topic for me, professor," she said. "I will use any you name, and I am sure that with the feeling ever present that it is your choice I shall write a good oration."

I wondered what she meant by that.

"In that case I will choose the one you first named, 'Augustus Caesar.'"

From this time Miss Warren took hold of the matter seriously. She consulted me constantly, and as I saw her oration grow up under my encouragement and influenced here and there by my suggestions my interest in the young oratress constantly increased. I forgot about the girl who had honored me with her love and began to wish that Miss Warren might stand in her place.

On commencement day, when the salutatorian stood up in the attire of a girl graduate—spotless white—and in a melodious voice spoke in a language that died many centuries ago, I listened in rapt attention. I was familiar with it all, but as I listened to the words come forth, every one enunciated musically, it seemed to me that no language has ever been so beautiful, so impressive, as that of Cicero and of Horace.

Once only the speaker cast her eyes down upon me, sitting with other members of the faculty just beneath her, when uttering a sentence in which she had made an error and which I had corrected for her. Instead of the Latin word "amare," "to love," she had used the word "amavi," "I have loved." Her beautiful orbs sank to mine only for a moment, then were raised to the throng.

I could not but be astonished that an oration so beautifully delivered and so well composed should have produced so little effect. But when I remembered that I and possibly one or two others alone understood what the speaker was talking about my surprise faded into a regret that the audience could not have enjoyed it as I did.

I did not see Miss Warren after the delivery of her speech, but called upon her that evening—before her intended departure—to congratulate her upon its merits. I found her expecting me, and so enthusiastic was I over her effort of the day that, taking her hand to express my enthusiasm, I found it difficult to release it. When I did so she led me to seats where we could sit side by side, and I went over her oration, repeating sentence after sentence in rapture.

I was surprised that she did not show evidence of being especially pleased at my encomiums. She listened somewhat impatiently to them and when I rested for breath said:

"Do you wish me to tell you before I go the name of that girl who has given you her heart?"

"No; I don't."

We were sitting close together, she bending forward, toying with some ornamental work on the skirt of her dress, so that my eyes fell upon the curves of her waist. Something—I know not what—got into my arm, and without my consent it dropped upon the waist. For a moment I was frightened; but, seeing that she paid no attention to what I had done, I took courage.

What else occurred during that eventful evening I consider too sacred to give. I have written it out in a dead language, which no one but myself is likely to understand. Before we parted I said to her:

"Since we are betrothed, perhaps you may not object to tell me who is the girl who has given me her heart."

"Don't trouble yourself about her," she replied. "She is not worthy of so guileless a man."

All this happened years ago, and I have since learned how stupid I was not to even suspect that the salutatorian of that year, having become attached to a bookworm, was obliged to turn his attention from the dead languages to herself or leave him to his books. She cared not for Augustus or the vestals or any other of the persons she proposed to make her theme. There was a living person of more importance to her than even the dead emperor. That person, I am proud to say, was the bookworm—myself.

PLANT CULTURE.

Don't Do the Watering Act in the Evening Just Before Dark.

The following article was prepared by representatives of the national council of horticulture to stimulate interest in gardening:

While plants can stand great extremes in temperature, corresponding extremes in moisture surely will tend to ruin if not to kill the strongest of them. Water should be given only when needed, then in such quantity that the soil is soaked. Soft stemmed plants, especially those with large leaves, need much more water than hard wooded, slow growing varieties, and, while the former kind easily recover from drought, the latter usually suffer permanent injury from extremes.

Heavy clayey soils sour easily, while light loamy soils dry out quickly, and unless carefully watched the plants in such soil soon will wilt. In either case it is better to water thoroughly and only when needed than to water sparingly and often.

The season and time of day should be considered in watering. Plants not in active growth should be watered sparingly until they have regained their foliage. Watering in the evening, just before dark, will greatly aid the growth of fungous diseases, as the foliage will continue wet through the night. It also causes "damping off" of young cuttings and plants. Never water during heavy, cloudy weather.

PHYSICAL STRAINS.

Men Over Forty-five Should Take No Excessive Exercise.

The physical decay of men over forty must be more frequently mentioned lest we forget the fact that our physique was evolved for only thirty-five or forty years of strenuous use, says American Medicine. It was not so long ago that forty-five was extreme old age—counting time in the large way of evolution. Lengthening of life has been possible only because civilization has let up the physical strains, so if we continue them we must expect to break as of old.

Athletes stop their efforts merely because they are beaten by younger men, but the nonathletic seem to think that it is necessary to keep up excessive exercise, though the tissues simply cannot stand it. There is, then, no mystery in the large number of damaged hearts now being found, and they will continue to increase in number and severity until the medical profession succeeds in impressing the lesson.

Let us repeat it over and over again until every man over forty or forty-five realizes that he has lived his allotted time of physical vigor and must ease up the strains to retain his health. There is no reason except abuse why so many men break at fifty-five or sixty. They should be healthy until seventy or seventy-five, and it is our duty to show how.

Musical Sounds and Noise.

It is a curious fact that musical sounds fly farther and are heard at a greater distance than those which are more loud and noisy. If we go on the outside of a town during a fair at the distance of a mile we hear the musical instruments, but the din of the multitude, which is so overpowering in the place, can scarcely be heard, the noise dying on the spot. To those who are conversant with the power of musical instruments the following observations will be understood: The violins made at Cremona about the year 1600 are superior in tone to any of a later date, age seeming to dispossess them of their noisy qualities and leaving nothing but the pure tone. If a modern violin is played by the side of one of those instruments it will appear much the louder of the two, but on receding a hundred paces when compared with the Cremona it will scarcely be heard. —London Globe.

The Nebular Hypothesis.

The nebular hypothesis is the name generally given to the theory put forth by the celebrated Laplace in "Systeme du Monde" in the year 1796. His idea was that the solar system was evolved mechanically from a vast diffused revolving nebula, and that nebulae were the early stages in the formation of planets and their satellites by cooling, condensation and contraction, according to certain laws of mathematics. This theory was accepted by Sir William Herschel and, though at first bitterly opposed in many quarters, is now generally accepted by astronomers and scholars and is taught in most schools and colleges.—New York American.

"Have you spoken of our love to your mother yet?"

"Not yet," murmured the dear girl. "Mother has noticed that I've been acting queer of late, but she thinks it's biliousness."—Pittsburg Post.

GOLF IN THE SOUTH.

The Game Was Played in Charleston as Early as 1788.

Golf was played in Charleston as far back as 1788. In the City Gazette or Daily Advertiser of Sept. 27, 1791, appears the following notice:

"Anniversary of the South Carolina Golf club will be held at Williams' coffee house on Thursday, 29th inst., when members are requested to attend at 2 o'clock precisely, that the business of the club may be transacted before dinner."

For several years following may be found calls for the anniversary meetings to be held at "the clubhouse on Harleston's green," a tract of land south of Boundary (now Calhoun) street, between the present Coming and Rutledge streets.

The fact that it was the anniversary meeting in 1791 would show that the club had been organized before that date, but unfortunately the file of newspapers in the Charleston library is not complete for some years just prior, and one finds no earlier notices of meetings or mention of the club. But in the same journal of Sept. 18, 1788, there is an advertisement of an auction sale of a farm on Charleston Neck, between three and four miles from the city, adjoining Cochran's shipyard, bounding in part on Shipyard creek, which, after describing the different items of property included in the sale, states that "there is lately erected that pleasing and genteel amusement, the golf baan." This certainly indicates that golf was one of the local amusements of that day.

The word "baan" (English-Dutch dictionary) means path, walk, way, etc., and golf, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, is derived from the Dutch "kolf," a club, and the game is doubtless of Dutch origin and introduced into Scotland about 1450.—Charleston News and Courier.

RIGHT ON THE JOB.

He Didn't Believe in Letting the Place Seek the Man.

A little story of success starting with the use of want ads. is contained in Business and the Bookkeeper. A Minneapolis manufacturer explains his liking for men who, even if they lack certain important qualities, have "initiative and originality."

The manufacturer, who at the time of which he spoke was just out of college, in Chicago and out of work, answered an advertisement offering a position, addressing, as instructed, "T24." He inclosed his reply in a large red envelope that could be seen and recognized at a distance. He was in the newspaper office early the following morning. In one of the boxes in which replies to advertisements were kept he saw his red envelope. He waited three hours until the letter in that box was given to a man calling for them. He followed the man to a west side factory. As the messenger laid the bunch of letters on the manager's desk the job hunter was standing by it.

"I'm ready to go to work," he said. The manager's reply was not "elegant," but in addition to being exclamatory it was interrogatory. How did he manage to present himself on the scene? The young man in need of the job pointed to his red envelope. The manager looked at it and looked at him. Then he turned to the messenger. "Find out who this young fellow is and put him to work," he said.

Discretion the Better Part.

Mr. Callahan had received a long tongue lashing from Mr. Hennessey, and his friends were urging on him the wisdom of vindicating his honor with his fists.

"But he's more than me equal," said Mr. Callahan dubiously, "and look at th' size of 'm."

"Sure an' you don't want folks to be sayn', 'Terry Callahan is a cowyard?'" demanded a reproachful friend.

"Well, I dunno," and Mr. Callahan gazed mournfully about him. "I'd rather that to 'ave 'em sayin day after termorrow, 'How natural Terry looks!'"—Metropolitan Magazine.

How a Hindu Uses Clocks.

The Hindu places a clock in his showrooms not because he ever desires to know what the hour is, but because a clock is a foreign curiosity. Instead, therefore, of contenting himself with one good clock he will perhaps have a dozen in one room. They are signs of his wealth, but they do not add to his comfort, for he is so indifferent to time that he measures it by the number of bamboo lengths the sun has traveled above the horizon.

Too Many Numbers.

"You have forgotten your name?" said the kind policeman.

"Yes," said the victim of aphasia. "You see, I overtaxed my memory trying to remember my name and my house number and my telephone number and my automobile number and the number of my dog's license all at once."—Washington Star.

He Lost Out.

"Yes, sir, he wuz afraid o' the banks bustin' on him, an' so he buried his money!"

"Has he got it yet?"

"No; he forgot to blaze the tree what it wuz, an' the man who owned the land put up a sign, 'No Trespassing on These Grounds.'"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"And the result?"

"Same old aviation news—a fine start and all of a sudden a fearful bump."—Exchange.

EMBROIDERED GOWNS.

They Are Fashionable in White and Colored Decorations.

GOWN IN EYELET EMBROIDERY.

This pretty gown, appropriate for a girl's graduation or for afternoon wear during the summer, is made of linen, heavily embroidered on skirt and waist. It is finished with a knotted girdle of velvet that falls halfway down the skirt.

Lingerie dresses are exceedingly pretty this year, and they are quite simple too. The girl with spare minutes on her hands may employ them profitably in beading a frock for summer. White is the most popular material, and the color scheme is given by colored beadwork or by embroidery that simulates beadwork. A little around the neck and sleeves, a line around the waist and, if you wish, a little more around the hem are quite sufficient.

The waist for the lingerie frock may be made with a square, round, pointed or just a collarless neck. The peasant sleeve is still correct, but it is getting shorter, an inch or so above the elbow being the preferred length.

Make your dress with a slightly raised waist line and wear a pretty sash.

GIRL'S MUSHROOM HAT.

Lace, Ribbons and Flowers Combined Make a Dainty Chapeau.

Mushroom hats of lace or embroidery are very popular for little girls. They may be easily fashioned by the amateur milliner, since no great skill is required in adjusting the soft lace over the wire frame. A few knots of ribbon or clusters of tiny flowers knotted here and there among the lace are the only trimming required. These hats are most appropriate for wear with white lingerie dresses.

Children's hats seem to be prettier than ever, whether we consider them in the rough and ready sailor shapes for morning wear or in the more elaborate creations for full dress. The headgear of even the tiny tots is picturesque. Bonnets for little ones are made of white liberty satin. They are close fitting, but the satin is full on the crown, the band around the face being plain. Embroidered side pieces are set in. The most attractive designs are tiny forget-me-not wreaths. Where the ribbon ties are set on there are rosettes of the white satin, in the center of which are tiny rosebuds.

Embroidered batiste caps have the tiniest bouquets of pink and blue flowers set on the left side of the front.

Old Gloves.

The palms of old kid gloves make very serviceable kneecaps, which can be stitched into children's stockings, thus avoiding constant darning, while the arms of long evening gloves make good pockets or handy receptacles for carrying a silver toilet set when its owner is on a journey.

Miss-statements of facts never do any good and in the end always react. We frankly concede that Reciprocity is beaten at the polls but still believe that Canada has missed a good thing, and feel convinced she will eventually come round to see her mistake and remedy it under some other name, probably at the hands of those now in office by opposing it. The turnover is so colossal that it ceases to be a party gain or loss. It is a national movement so unexpected and unlooked for that both the old parties are equally astounded, and the astonishment seems to have wiped out bitterness and recrimination. The people have spoken in a new voice and with a distinct tone which so far neither has grasped the keynote. Let us hope it is only the beginning of a new era in which the public voice will be of no uncertain sound and so distinct that parliament will consider the country's interests instead of partys', which all our best writers and thinkers are condoning, believing that the machine party tactics are a grave menace to the public good and eagerly seized upon by the pirates and buccaneers of politics to enrich themselves at the public expense.

May we hope that in future Canada will always seek out and elect honest representatives of worth, intelligence and business ability, to work out her great destiny without shame or reproach that we can all be proud of her and them. That, as our "Miss Canada," she can take her place among the nations, being welcomed with pride and respect.

It is said that Premier McBride is the greatest kicker in B. C. today, only that it is himself he is kicking, for allowing his modesty to prevent his running for the Dominion house. However his lack of faith in his own prophesy, must be his excuse and consolation.

There are consolations in all things. Mr. McBride's lost opportunity is a special providence to Mr. Borden. There is not room for two "Nestors" in the Conservative tent.

What the "Uncrowned King" of B. C. says, goes.

O Lord, build a stone wall between us, and put broken bottles on top of it, to keep us, thy chosen Conservative people in, and the wild and ungodly Tories out.

The agony is over, and we are on the way to recovery.

We certainly did get it in the neck.

The Conservatives here, did "whoop her up" all right, and they had good cause for it.

Badly disfigured, but still in the ring.

Cumberland, B C., Sept. 12th, 1911.

Sir Wilfred hasen't finished his work yet, as it is hoped and expected that he will still lead his party in the new parliament, for a session at least.

The Canadian Jew will have no dealings with the Samaritin Yankee.

Afraid the "Yankee", would come over and steal us while we slept.

Dick says that Tom camped on his trail for that two dollars.

Some of the voters looked at the deputy returning officer on Thursday, as if he were trying to do them up.

In the midst of your rejoicings, remember Cumberland's majority of 19 for Ross.

They have not all got back from "the tall timbers" yet.

"Roses will bloom again."

COMMUNICATIONS.

Editor NEWS:—

While Mr Douglas, one of my teamsters, was hauling a heavy load of oats to Cumberland last Tuesday he was overtaken on the hill by the provincial constable, Mr Davidson, in a buggy. At this point the road has recently been widened and owing to the heavy rain was to loose to take the heavy load over. Mr Davidson ordered him to pull out on this and let him pass. He replied that he could not without getting stuck, but would as soon as he got up where the road was firmer. Which he did. On reaching Cumberland Mr Davidson served him with a summons to appear at once before Mr. Abrams, who fined him $7.50, and then handed the money over to Mr Davidson. I would like to know if this man is paid a salary by the government, or does he adopt these contemptible ways to make it? There is a certain amount of courtesy that is cheerfully extended by every gentleman in passing a loaded team on the road and one would naturally expect this in a greater degree from a government official, if something was not not wanting. If the farmers of this district are going to be fined for trying to get their produce to market, up hills and over roads that are none too good, after paying taxes for 40 years to help build them, or going over a bridge faster than a walk to a fire, or for the doctor, we will soon doubt whether we are living in Russia or British Columbia.

Thanking you for the space,

A. B. CRAWFORD.

ROD AND GUN

The large and ever growing army of game bird hunters will find ample variety in stories dealing with their favorite recreation in the October issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock, Ont. From Newfoundland to British Columbia is a wide range and all is included in this one number, the difference in the sport enjoyed in the various Provinces being pleasantly conveyed in a series of stories dealing with actual occurrences in the field. Further variety is given by a finely illustrated story of the Cruise of the Papoose, a camping story, and some excellent verses. Geese, ducks and prairie chicken afford the very best of sport and their devotees tell of the complete enjoyment experienced in a way to make their confreres resolve to make similar trips with the same object in view. Wing shooting is a sportsmanlike occupation and with only a fair conservation there should be ample opportunities for all sportsmen in Canada to enjoy some of this fine recreation for an indefinite time to come. A more interesting number of this fine Magazine has never been issued.

Canadian Order Beavers

Organisers are now in the field in every town in Western Canada extending the scope of the first benevolent and fraternal order ever started in Western Canada. The aim of those organising the order is to make it a complete success and a credit to Canada as a whole and British Columbia in particular.

The annexation yelpers yelped to advantage this time.

In Memoriam

In Loving Memory of our dear son, John P. D. Walker, who died September 26th, 1910.

We saw him fading like a flower,
But could not make him stay.
We nursed him with our tenderest care,
Till God called him away.

Peaceful be thy rest, dear John,
'Tis sweet to breathe thy name.
In life we loved you ever dear,
In death we do the same.
