Low Rate of Mortality

Ap official return showing the status of wounded at the various hospitals in France has just been issued, and indicates a surprisingly low rate of mortality. It shows that 489,733 wounded treated in the ambulances and hospitals between September 15 and November 30, of whom 54.5 per cent, have returned to the front, 24.5 per cent, are proparing to return after convalescence; 17 per cent. are still under treatment, 1.48 per cent. are permanently crippled for service; and 2.48 per cent, only have died.

There are at present 3,968 hospitals in full swing, with 360,000 beds, which is considered more than adequate for possible requirements.

Yield of Grain Crops

Official Report of the Value of Domin-Ion Crops in 1914

The census and statistics office has issued its final report on the yield and value of field crops in 1914. The report states that, in marked contrast to 1913, the season proved particularly unfavorable to the growth of grain. Persistent drought throughout the greater part of the northwest provinces resulted in a yield per acre of the chief cereals lower than in any season since 1910 and lower than the average of the six years ended 1913. In Ontario and Quebec, though the grain crops suffered from a dry season, the conditions were not so unfavorable, whilst in the Maritime provinces a favorable season resulted in good returns. For the whole of Canada the area

For the whole of Canada the area estimated to be sown to field crops was 25,102,175 acres, as compared with 35,375,430 acres in 1913; but owing to the drought the total productive area in 1914 was reduced to 33,440,075 acres. Upon this area the total productive of main company to bushels area. TENTERS acres. For all field crops, including root and fodder crops, the total value amounts to $639,081,300, as compared with $552,771,500 in 1912, the increase of $86,280,000 being chiefly due to the enhancement of prices, which has thus more than counterbal. Former Empress of France Converts Her English Estate Into Hospital and Awalts Outcome of Great Struggle Among the hundreds of recent pic-tures showing the British soldier on the march, ir the trenches, in camp and in hospital, says the Youths' Companion, were two taken on the same beautiful estate, now, by the generosity of its owner, a hospital for wounded and convalescent officers. The owner is a very old lady, and the pictures show har in the mourning that she always wears, leaning on a crutch staff and talking with some bright faced, bandaged young fellows out under the trees in their wheel chairs. The estate is at Farnborough, and the weman is Eugenie, once Empress of France, now for more than forty years an exile in England."

During these long years the world has heard so little of her that it is hard to remember that she is still alive, but before the disastrous culimination of the Franco-Prussian war -"My war" she used to be accused of calling it—she was one of the world's greatest figures. With the single exception of Queen Victoria, she was then the most conspicuous woman in Europe, and her beauty, grace and elegance, her natural gayety and even her fashionable follies united to make her a far more dazzling figure than the British queen, with all her undoubted solid virtues.

No splendor, there are plenty of other witnesses to testify, could overwhelm the perfect complexion, intensely blue eyes with dark lashes, rich chestnut hair and cameolike features of this enthroned beauty. It is strange indeed to think that after Louis Napoleon, Wilhelm I., Bismarck, Von Moltke, all the dominating figures of the Franco-Prussian war have been dust these many years, the bowed black shadow of that delicate loveliness still survives, watching and waiting, with Germany and France at death grips once again. But it is not "her" war now, and although Germany is mightler than ever, France is no longer a corrupt and tottering empire, but a vigorous young republic, and she does not fight alone. Whatever the end may be, it will be strange if those blue eyes that years and tears have dimmed survive to look upon it.

The Scientific Kilt

Scottish Highlanders who take a patriotic=pride=in=the=kll;-will=begratified at the high praise given by Grant Ramsay to that portion of their national wardrobe. Lecturing "The Clothing and Equipment of the Soldier," Mr. Ramsay declared that the kilt is the most scientifically built garment in the British army, and that besides having a martial appearance it is a splendid marching dress. The notion that the kilt is cold for the wearer was dismissed as a popular fallacy. It "contains the body-heat well, and it has this fur-ther advantage, that, being pleated, there are three thicknesses of cloth conserving the : at when the soldier is standing at rest. There is only one thickness, however, when marching and the pleats are thrown out, and this is just when the wearer is developing excess of heat and requires to keep cool." Generally, the British soldier is well clothed. The materials are excellent-in some cases too close in texture, and, in fact, too good. But the design of the garments is scientifically at fault because it does not sufficiently recognize the great value of air in clothing. Air is light, it is a good non-conductor of heat, and it is also a disinfectant. "Wh;, then," Mr. Pamsay asked, "is this ignored in the close fitting clothing of our soldiers?"

Empress Aiding the Allies How We Study Bacteria

For the study of bacteria we have to cultivate them. When we are going to find out the germs that are in material such as pus, or urine of sputum we sow some of it in the tube and then put it in an incubator at the temperature best suited to its growth. These incubators are generally made of some form of metal and have double walls of that material Between walls water is placed and heat is put underneath the incubator and the temperature is regulated by special means. Most bacteria grow or multiply best about body temperature but some will grow at very low temperatures and even if frozen in ice will grow when ice melts if we give them heat and suitable material to feed on. Some bacteria like the typhoid have the faculty of moving about in water by means of very fine roots that are attached all over their surface and are continually moving like the branches of a tree in a breeze. Other bacteria when the food is scarce or when the heat is strong have the power to shrivel up and form a thick capsule or shell like the hull of grain or seeds and can stay that way just as seeds do over winter. They will grow again by bursting their shell when they get the proper heat and moisture and food in exactly the same way as seeds do when the warm April sun comes and the rains prepare the soil for our crops.

Each of these little bacteria grows or multiplies by swelling up and dividing into two, these two each divide, and so on. With some microbes that occur, every twenty minitues, so one can easily understand how bacteria can grow fast, for instance in a can of milk standing in the warm sun by the roadside or in a station platform on a summer day. And why shouldn't they? You have there the germs to start with. You have the milk which is used in the laboratory for growing some bacteria as it makes an excellent culture material, and you have the can acting as an incubator and the sun to keep it at a good temperature for their growth. If by any chance the water used to rinse the cans came from a well polluted by surface water which has just washed past a privy or a barnyard you may have sown ty phoid germs and given to a neighbor hood an epidemic of typhoid.

Needs A Tonic

"Almost everyone—man, woman and child—needs a toric at sometime. It is often said that a man is lazy because he takes little or no interest in his work; but the truth is he is not well. He needs a tonic. The same is true of a woman who does not hustle over her home work, but only feels fit to be in .ed. She is not merely tired, but ill. A dull pain in the head or back, poor appetite, loss of streng h with low spirits and loss of interest in life show that you need a tonic to brace up the nerves and give you a craving that, if the worst happens his new lease of life. The proof is that when the right tonic is taken all ac trouble quickly disappears. cording to Late Census Dakota is demonstrated by its emarkable growth during the past three years. In the fall of 1911 there were slightly over 3,000 acres in the entire state. An alfalfa census of the state taken just before the holidays by countles showed that there here now 90,000 acres in this crop in the state.

The rapidity with which the acreage in this state has increased is due largely to the carris of the Better Farming association which was organized three years ago. As striking proof of this the increased alfalfa acreage is largely in the counties which had representatives of the state association,

From the number of inquiries concerning seed and the proper method of preparing the soil, the indications are there will be thousands of additional acres put in alfalfa in the coming spring. Representatives of the better farming movement insist the people of North Dakota are just beginning to appreciate the importance and value of the crop and troy predict the acreage will be increased rapidly each season.

Too Much War News

Importance of Titanic Struggle Not Fully Appreciated by Unthinking Class

Certain light minded persons seem to have criticized New York papers for devoting so much space to news from the theatre of war. It is doubtful, however, if any intelligent reader with anything approaching an adequate conception of the importance of this titanic struggle in history and in human affairs deplores the fact that space is given to every item of significant news concerning the war. It is not only the most terrible but the most momentous drama enacted on earth since our planet rolled formless and void in space. Tens of thousands of books will be written on it in centuries yet unborn, and when it lies as far in the past as the war of Troy, or as Marathon and Salamis lie behind us now, it will still be regarded as the crucial point in human history and the chronology of mankind may be dated from this year 1914 when an old order perished and a new age or dispensation began on earth. It is our privilege, far removed from the maelstrom of woe and in a land which bbtains the fullest narrative of events as they occur, to watch this drama of the ages unfolded and to live through events of which the future will read in fascinated horror.

A dozen cables, a thousand wires and the whole ambient ether are throbbing with the story of the vials of the wrath of God that are being outpoured on the world; yet child-minded people complain that their papers tell too much about it. They had better go out in their back yards and play horse with the children, or at all events keep the evidence of their mental vacuity out of sight and out of the public prints.—Rochester Post

Management of the Winter Pig Brings the Best Results

The pigs found about some farmers at this season of the year may be kept under almost all conditions. Everything with the exception of those intended to be retained as breeding stock should be ready for the market by the time the spring pigs arrive. An animal of this kind should be given all the feed it can consume, and anything short of this is unprofitable. This simply means that the pigs should be fed all they can eat and clean up readily twice a day. It is best never to allow any feed to be left in the trough from one feeding time till the next, as it will simply be a waste and of no benefit to the ani-

The question of feed is one of great moment. The available feed supply with a great many consists mostly of ear corn. More or less of the waste from vegetable and fruit cellars can find its way to the pig pens to food advantage. Ear corn ground fine makes excellent feed for pigs, and when mixed with an equal part of best quality of wheat bran, scalded or cooked, if possible, and fed somewhat thick, will be found one of the best growing and flesh-forming rations. Oatment may be added to very good advantage and the quality of the pork benefited.

The pigs as found in the different neighborhoods will vary much in quality, and it is a good plan to cull out and market the ripest ones as they come on. This plan has the advantage of giving the owner some money to use. Much of the ear torn may be fed as it is on the cob. I have always possible, dump in a lot of skim milk. This not only helps to make a very palatable feed, but a very nutritious combination.

It will pay to keep a plentiful supply of charcoal, ashes and salt in reach of the pigs at all times. A feature that is very necessary is to keep the pigs in a healthy conditon, and Another thing to be considered is

Ascension Island Ranks as a Man-o'

Ascension Island, situated about The Kind of Feed and Care That midway between Brazil and the Congo, is a valuable half-way house on the Cape route, its position on the main track making it especially useful as a provisioning place for ships on their homeward way.

Physically, Ascension is a desola-tion of extinct volcanoes and lava fields, but the prevailing fresh southeast trade winds make its climate very healthy, and a sanitorium built on Green Mountain, which dominates the island, is a refuge for men invalided from the coast of West Africa. Discovered on Ascension Day, 1501. (thence its name), the island was uninhabited until the British government occupied it as a military station in 1815, during the confinament of Napoleon in the island of St. Helena,

Now it is under the direct control of the admiralty, and is ader rigid discipline, being ruled by a resident neval officer, exactly as if it were a man-o'-war anchored in mid-Atlantic with a "crew" of about 400 naval officers and families, seamen, marines and the sturdy Grain Coast "Krumen," who are such excellent laborers and sailors and the best surfboatmen in the world.
