The Bowery and Centralia Football Teams Meet For the Second Time this Season

If Centralias Win they will be the Holders of the Challenge Cup

Tomorrow afternoon the Centralia and Bowery football teams come together in a game which ends the second of the series in the three-game league for the Dr. Wasson Challenge Cup.

The Shamrocks have been playing in hard luck all season and have had some close chances of winning, but late seems against them.

MORE TREES ARE DESTROYED

Wednesday evening some party who had nothing better to do, again visited Mr. I. Gould's shrub trees, which he has but recently procured from the nurseries of M. Henry, Vancouver, and completed their work of ruin, destroying all of the trees with the exception of three.

reported to the police, the identity of the miscreant was not discovered. Evidently the party or parties thought themselves perfectly safe in again visiting Mr. Gould, and Wednesday night attempted to complete their work. Needless to say if they are caught they will have to explain their actions in the police court.

THE USEFUL SCREEN.

So strongly is modern apartment life forcing the necessity for economizing space upon the up to date housekeeper that she is obliged to use every method to obtain it. Many business women who live and sleep in the same room and perhaps do a little cooking there, too, will find in the screen their greatest ally.

REGULAR LIVING.

First of all, one thing that nature won't stand is irregularity. We cannot safely bottle up sleep tonight for tomorrow night's use, nor force our stomachs one meal because we expect to eat sparingly the next, nor become exhausted in working night and day, expecting to make it up later.

BURNS CLUB WILL CELEBRATE ST. ANDREW'S DAY

The local Burns Club intend this year holding a smoker on the evening of November 20th, St. Andrew's Day, in the opera house. A general meeting of the club has been called for Wednesday evening next in the banquetting rooms of the opera house for the purpose of making final preparations for the smoker.

A woman over 70, possessing £100 is to be admitted into Newton (Devon) workhouse. Her relatives, who are also over seventy, are incapable of taking care of her.

Remarkable potatoes have been grown in the garden of Mr. D. Clarke, J.P., at High Wycombe, a few weighing six pounds each.

EAGLES ISSUE NOVEL INVITATIONS TO THEIR FRIENDS

The local Aerie of Eagles have issued the following original invitations, under seal of their order: Aquila, quae Oculum Acrew Babet.

In the matter of the application of the Brothers of said Aerie for a good time—Subpoena Duces Tecum. To Ladysmith Aerie No. 686, Greeting: You are hereby subpoenaed to appear before the above entitled Aerie at Eagle Hall, Ladysmith, B.C., on Wednesday, the 21st day of November, 1907, at 8.30 p.m. of said day and to show cause, if any you have, why you should not participate in the application to be then made for enjoyment, and to be a party to the order made upon said application.

BODY OF SAILOR HAS NOT YET BEEN RECOVERED

The body of the sailor, Paul Knappick, who was drowned near the big wharf here this week, has not yet been recovered, although Provincial Officer Cassidy has made a thorough search for it since the night of the fatality. Knappick, who was a young German 24 years of age, attempted to board his ship, the Tor-denskjold, from the wharf without the use of the gangplank. In the darkness he miscalculated the distance, dropping to a watery grave between the ship and the wharf. Although ropes and lanterns were lowered almost immediately, nothing was found but the unfortunate man's hat. He answered once to the calls of the searchers, but before he could be located probably succumbed to the influence of the cold waters and sank.

This is the second sailor who has lost his life here within the past three weeks, the other victim being one of the members of the crew of the bark Mohecan. Knappick fell in almost the same spot as did a sailor six years ago from the steamer Amur. The latter was drowned, although his body was recovered almost immediately. Search will be continued for Knappick's body, although it is hardly expected to terminate successfully owing to the strong tides. It may, however, be entangled in the piles, and rise to the surface after sufficient time has elapsed.

QUITS THE FIGHTING GAME

Amongst the many would-be fighters and "boxers" who have visited Ladysmith for the purpose of taking in some good money for the privilege of watching them get hammered, Kid Scaler will be remembered. He once made great preparations to pull off a fight in the local opera house, but he did not have enough spectators to pay hall rent, and the match was called off. Evidently the Kid has had enough of the fighting game, as the following from the Spokane Chronicle will show: No more fighting for Kid Scaler. The Kid has hung up his five-ounce gloves and a great blood-red "23" on the padded mitts tells what has happened.

The Spokane boy who has ambitions, and not concealed ambitions, at that, to become champion has finally decided there are too many bumps on the hillside for him to clump any higher. He is going to quit. Furthermore, he is going to work and try to build up a competency for old age. He says he can make more at a trade that he has than he can at the fighting game, and he believes it is better for a man.

The whole truth of the matter is that Scaler is disgusted. He had a fight last Thursday night and holds that he won by all that was fair and right, but he got a draw. He was matched this month with Crowe. Crowe was killed the other day in a fight. He had the promise of a match with Hyland and Hanlon and Hanlon fought another man. He wanted to go up against the champions and the big ones would not give him a chance. He had earned the right to fight in that class and they said "skidoo."

There it is in just enough words to make it plain. That does not fittingly express the Kid's feelings, "at it is information to the public. Scaler wants the public to know he is out of the game and is now going to lead the simple life. He thinks he will live longer if he forgets the strenuous existence. "You can say in the Chronicle that I will fight no more. There is just one possibility and that is that I get against a big one. This is not probable, so just write my obituary, and say I am going to work," stated the Kid, and he didn't look happy. Kid Scaler has been fighting around Spokane for a long time and he has made a good record. He has fought 51 battles and has lost but three. One of these was against Louie Long early in his career. Another was to Berte Johnson on a foul and the other was a decision to Kid Fredericks, when the latter outweighed him 25 pounds.

"The Kid has lost three battles, has fought five draws, has won five times on decisions and has scored 39 knockouts. That is an enviable record and he closes the game when holding all the cards, but the Joker. The President of Blackburn District, of the Lancashire Congregational Union, in an address recently suggested the formation of a Guild whose rules should forbid the discussion of sporting matters on Sundays. He knew of Sunday School football committee who met on the Sabbath, he said, to fix up their matches, and of scholars who would not attend Sunday school unless they had the privilege of using the school billiard table on week days.

The biggest catch of herring on record at Scarborough for one night was landed recently by the Inverness vessel Bon Ami, and realized about £200. One hundred and eighty-eight thousand herrings—were sold, and a great quantity of herrings contained in the other nets were handed over to the Scotch steam drifter Glen-garry, which towed the lucky boat in.

Considerable delay was caused at a wedding at Ripley, Surrey, by forgetfulness on the part of the clergyman and the bridegroom. The bride months, when the men all leave the that the clergyman had forgotten the appointment and had to be sent for. It was next discovered that the bride groom had failed to bring the ring. Eventually everything was in readiness and the ceremony proceeded.

The yacht Moyana has returned to Tollesbury, Essex, with a string of twenty-seven winning flags, eighteen of which represent first-class prizes, and the best in her class for the season. She is owned by Mr. Leuehars, and is commanded by Captain Stephen Burbank. Her crew are all Tollesbury men, and two of them sailed in Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock II and Shamrock III.

The Mayor of Hull has presented the skipper of the Hull trawler Pough with a gold watch and the crew with a sum of money from the German Emperor for rescuing the crew of a German bark. The fishermen effected the rescue under perilous conditions in the North Sea, in heavy seas and a violent gale. The waves were washing over the bark when eleven of the crew were taken off.

GOULD'S CANAL AGAIN DISCUSSED

Council Decide to Complete Work on this Drain and put it in First Class Shape

Work will Cost in Neighborhood of $450 before Ditch is Entirely Piped

The principal business discussed at the council meeting Monday evening was the advisability of buying more piping and completing the drain along 1st Avenue and down Kitchen street, known as "Gould's Canal." Ald. Uren introduced the subject, and in doing so explained that it was necessary that something be done at once. Where the water finds an outlet from the ditch, just above the bridge on the Esplanade, the speaker stated that much damage is being done to the property of Mr. Gould, and it would be but a short time before more damage would result.

Ald. Campbell also thought the ditch should be attended to at once. He wanted, though, an estimate of the cost. While none present knew the exact length of the pipe required, it was thought that about $100.00 would do all the necessary work. Ald. Patterson did not want the council to be in too big a hurry about the matter. He thought next week, after an accurate estimate on the cost had been obtained, would be plenty of time. If it were going to cost $100.00 there would not be much money for street work.

Ald. Uren thought it best to stop all street work and attend to this at once. He could see no benefits to be derived by delay. Ald. Patterson moved the matter be laid over for one week. No second being obtained, Ald. Uren again addressed the council. "If we do not attend to this at once," said the alderman, "a great deal of damage may be done. The bridge below, under which the water from the drain flows, is likely to be washed away, as its foundations are resting on sand, and the water is constantly washing this down. Another thing which is likely to happen is the blocking of the culvert leading under the railway tracks. If this were to happen, we would be in trouble."

"Do you think," asked Ald. Patterson, who evidently had not been much impressed with the possibilities suggested by Ald. Uren, "there is any danger of the shipping mill being washed away?" Ald. Uren did not think so, but he did think it were time something were being done to the ditch, and the sooner it was done the better. He could see no use of allowing the matter to stand over another week. It would have to be done anyway, and why not at once. Estimates could be obtained and the pipe ordered at once.

"You would think" remarked Ald. Patterson, who had the last word, "that you were expecting some ships in right away to sail down that canal, judging from the hurry you are in about it."

After more discussion, a motion was carried to the effect that the work be done at once. Since then estimates have been obtained and the pipes ordered. The work will cost in all about $150.00. The pipe will be eighteen-inch, and some fluming will have to be done to carry the water beneath the bridge on the Esplanade.

No other business of importance came before the council. Those present were: Acting Mayor Malone, Aids Patterson, Campbell and Uren.

BAZAAR TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY EVENING

DOGS ARE UNFORTUNATE

Last Sunday was a record day for dog killing on the railway between Duncan and Nanaimo. Upon the noon express pulling into Duncan a canine who did not know any better, attempted to frolic with the engine, with the result that the dog was run over and killed. Coming into Ladysmith a hunting dog belonging to Mr. A. McMurtrie jumped onto the rails in front of the engine, and although the animal escaped with its life, it is minus a tail, the latter being taken off by the wheels of the engine. Proceeding to South Wellington, the locomotive made its final killing of the day, this time killing two dogs belonging to Mr. McLachlan. While being taken off the train the animals in some manner got underneath the wheels, and one was killed outright, while the other after having its legs broken, had to be killed by its owner.

The bazaar to be held on next Tuesday evening in the opera house under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of the Church of England promises to be exceptionally successful. The ladies having charge of the programme have secured some first class talent, as the following programme will show: Song..... Mr. T. Lewis Orchestra..... Miss Butler Selection Song..... Mrs. Trehearne Violin Solo..... Miss L. Hermann Song..... Mrs. Drysdale Comic Song..... Mr. J. Anderson Piano Duett..... Misses Pannell Interval. Cornet Solo..... Mr. T. Whitcomb Song..... Mrs. Drysdale Recitation..... Miss L. Ingham Violin Solo..... Miss L. Hermann Song..... Mr. J. T. Lomas The musical programme commences at 7 1/2 o'clock. For further particulars of the bazaar, read the advertisement appearing in another column.

BEIT AND MARRIAGE.

Beit, the South African Croesus, who died not long ago, was said to be much averse to the marriage of young men in his employ. At one time his secretary asked for a holiday to get married. Mr. Beit replied: "If you get married I shan't want your services any more. You can't serve me as I want to be served and can't look after your wife as you ought to if you serve me properly. Come in later and let me know what you are going to do." Next day the secretary explained that he had determined to wed. His services were dispensed with then and there, but just before the wedding Mr. Beit sent for him and wished him success and handed him an envelope, not to be opened until after the wedding. It contained a cheque for $5,000 and a note admiring the young man's courage.—London Truth.

TO MEASURE MOLECULES.

An apparatus for measuring the seventy millionth part of an inch has been made by Dr. P. Shaw of Nottingham University, England, says Technical World Magazine. It works upon the principle of electric touch and consists of a fine micrometer screw and six levers. The apparatus is so sensitive and delicate that it is impossible to manipulate it before an audience. It is hung by rubber bands, covered with thick felt and must be worked at dead night, when there is no factory or traffic working. The smallest distance that this mechanism measures is about the distance between a solid and liquid molecule. Dr. Shaw's invention was first made in 1900, but its great improvements of late has made it the wonder of physicists throughout the world.

NASAL CATARRH AFFECTS HEARING.
MR. R. J. ARLESS.
FINDS RELIEF IN PERUNA.
Mr. R. J. Arless, 401 City Hall Ave., Montreal, Quebec, is an old gentleman of wide acquaintance, having served thirty-eight years in the General Post-office of Montreal, a record which speaks for itself. Concerning his use of Peruna, Mr. Arless says:
'I have been afflicted with nasal catarrh to such a degree that it affected my hearing.
'This was contracted some twenty years ago by being exposed to draughts and sudden changes of temperature.
'I have been under the treatment of specialists and have used many drugs recommended as specifics for catarrh in the head and throat—all to no purpose.
'About three years ago I was induced by a confere in office to try Peruna.
'After some hesitation, as I had doubts as to results after so many failures, I gave Peruna a trial, and am happy to state that after using eight or ten bottles of Peruna I am much improved in hearing, and in breathing through the nostrils.'

Another form of entertainment which causes a great deal of interest is to have a literary "at home" when each guest is expected to represent a well known book.
On arrival each guest must hand the hostess his or her card, on which is written the book they represent, and she in turn hands them a card on which are written the names of the guests, with a space left by the side of each. The object is to guess as many of the books represented as possible, and the one who fills up most of the spaces receives the prize.
No elaborate fancy costumes are necessary, but all that is required will be the addition of a faded rose to represent "The Rose of Yesterday," a girl in a white frock for "The Woman in White," or a scarlet frock for "The Woman in Scarlet," etc.

LUCK AND A WOMAN
"Close it up soon if you can," said the manager, "we have put some of our best men on the matter, but they can tell us nothing. If we don't manage to locate the cause of these robberies we might as well go out of business."
"I'll do what I can," promised Danvers, "but if Symes and Taylor have given up the case, I don't see where I get off."

Danvers looked about for a coign of vantage, hit upon a theatrical boarding house at the rear of the block. Here he obtained a rear room and for several nights he kept vigil. The moon was in its last quarter, and it was not always easy to keep watch, but he sat poring into the dusk, looking to see some one jump the line of fences and attack the houses from the rear. That the entrance was affected from the rear he was certain, because the watch at the front was too strict to be evaded.
It was the fifth night that, happening to look up, he perceived a shadow crossing the skyline of the houses. He rubbed his eyes that were drooping with sleep, but he still saw the shadow advancing toward the opposite roof.
"Can't have a flying machine," he muttered to himself. If they have it is no wonder the boys couldn't locate them. I guess I'll go up on the roof and have a better look.

THE AIR OF LONDON.
There is no fresh air in the heart of London according to the conclusions of a recent investigator. He says: "No evidence of ozone was anywhere apparent except at Brownswood park, in the northeast. It was from the northeast quarter the wind was blowing, and the air had lost all trace of ozone before it had reached Hyde park. At Bushey park, although practically a country district, no ozone was present in the air. London had not only abstracted the goodness out of the air that swept over it, but had added to it the exhalations from the breath and bodies of millions of human beings and tens of thousands of animals. Persons living within one or two mile radius of Charing Cross cannot have fresh air entering their dwellings at any time."

"Neither do I," admitted the manager frankly, "except that you seem to have fools' luck and sometimes that is better than good detective instinct."
Danvers bowed at the doubtful compliment and took himself off. There might be something in that theory. Since going to work for the burglary insurance people he had more than once stumbled against a clue that developed into a conviction.
But this promised to be a harder case than usual, and after he had interviewed the watchmen who were on the night job and the men who had been working on the case it seemed hopeless.
The burglary insurance included the services of a night watchman and a burglar alarm system. Nothing seemed to be the matter with either of these, and yet the block on Seaton place had been repeatedly robbed.
Of late a special patrolman had been assigned to the block, and all night long he had tramped from one end of the short street to the other. Seaton place was only a block long, a fashionable residence block, that offered rich returns to the men who had systematically looted the houses.
None had seen them go in or out, though strict watch had been kept. Once they had even placed a man in each back yard to make certain that no one could enter through the rear, and yet during that week of special precaution three of the houses had been robbed.
The owners were of the ultra-English set, who seldom came in town from their country places until after the opera season set in, and already the company stood to lose the better part of its capital in paying off its losses.

He stole out of the room and up the stairs to the roof. The trap was left open in pleasant weather to ventilate the stuffy halls, and as he climbed softly through the scuttle hole he almost lost his balance.
Standing on the edge of the roof was a second man, and even as Danvers looked he stepped over the edge of the roof and glided toward the opposite side.
There was the third figure, a woman's, and Danvers waited a moment to see if she, too, would essay to follow her companion's example, upon the air, but she made no effort and at last the detective slipped the opening and crept softly behind her.
With a bound he was upon her and had clapped his hand over her mouth before she could make an outcry. Even in the dim light he could recognize her as one of a trio of robbers he had noticed at the tables. More than once he had sought to attract her attention, for she was a remarkably pretty girl but the two men with her resented even a look, and kept such close guard over her that there had been no chance to make her acquaintance.
"Where are you up to?" he demanded.

A Fight With Tigers

Some years ago in company with Captain Wharton, an English naval officer, and a young midshipman named Lincoln, I decided to explore the forests of the Andes about Quito. While winding around Chinaborazo's base we were overtaken by a storm which was preceded by an atmosphere so suffocating and damp that the steel-work of our watches was covered with rust and the watches themselves stopped. We sought shelter in a spacious cavern discovered by one of our guides. The noise and raging of the storm continued with so much violence that we could not hear the sound of our own voices. Through the opening of the cave we could observe the singular scene without.

The highest cedar trees were struck down or bent like reeds; monkeys, parrots, and even serpents lay strewn upon the ground, killed by the rushing water or falling branches. The cave in which we had taken refuge was so extremely dark that if we moved a few paces from the entrance we could not see an inch before us. Suddenly we heard a singular growling or growling in the far end of the cavern which instantly fixed all our attention. Our daring and inconsiderate young friend Lincoln, together with my huntsman Frank, crept about upon their hands and knees and endeavored to discover whence the sound proceeded. They had not advanced far into the cavern before we heard them utter an exclamation of surprise, and they returned to us each carrying in his arms an animal singularly marked, and about the size of a cat, seemingly of great strength and power. Wharton had scarcely glanced at them when he exclaimed in consternation, "Good Heavens! We have come into a den of—"

He was interrupted by a fearful cry of dismay from our guides, who came rushing precipitately towards us, crying out, "A tiger! A tiger!" and at the same time with extraordinary rapidity they scrambled up a cedar tree which stood at the entrance of the cavern, and hid themselves among the branches. I grasped my firearms; Wharton called to us to assist him instantly in blocking up the mouth of the cave with an immense stone which, fortunately, lay near it.

The sense of approaching danger augmented our strength, for we now distinctly heard the growl of the ferocious animal, and we were lost beyond redemption if it reached the entrance before we could get it closed. Ere this was done we could distinctly see the tiger pouncing towards the spot and stooping in order to creep into his den by the narrow opening. At this fearful moment our exertions were successful, and the great stone kept the wild beast at bay. There was a small open space, however, left between the top of the entrance and the stone through which we could see the head of the animal illuminated by his glowing eyes, which he rolled, glaring with fury, upon us.

His frightful roaring, too penetrated to the depths of the cavern, and was answered by the hoarse growling of the cubs, which Lincoln and Frank had now tossed from them. Our ferocious enemy attempted first to remove the powerful stone with his claws, and then to push it with his head from its place, and the efforts, proving abortive only seemed to increase his wrath. He uttered a frightful howl, and his flaming eyes darted light into the darkness of our retreat.

"Now is the time to fire!" said Wharton, with his usual calmness. "Aim at his eyes!" Frank seized his double-barrelled gun and Lincoln his pistols. The former placed the muzzle within a few inches of the tiger, and Lincoln did the same. At Wharton's command they both drew their triggers at the same moment but no shot followed. The tiger, who seemed aware that the flash indicated an attack upon him, immediately turned back again and stationed himself in his former place. The powder in both pieces was wet; they, therefore, proceeded to draw the useless loading, whilst Wharton and myself hastened to seek our powder flask. It was so extremely dark that we were obliged to grope about the cave, and at last, coming into contact with the cubs, we soon discovered the canister we were looking for. Most unfortunately, however, the animals had pushed off the lid with their claws, and the powder had been strewn over the damp earth and rendered entirely useless. This discovery excited the greatest consternation.

"All is over now," said Wharton; "we have only to choose whether we shall die of hunger or open the entrance to the blood-thirsty monster, and so make a quicer end of the matter."

So saying, he placed himself close behind the stone, which for the moment defended us, and looked undauntedly upon the fearful eyes of the tiger. Lincoln raved, and Frank took some cord from his pocket and hastened to the farther end of the cave. I knew not what his design was, but I heard a low, stifled growling and the tiger, who had heard it also, became more restless and disturbed than ever. He reared backwards and forwards before the entrance of the cave in the most wild and impetuous manner, then stood still, and stretching out his neck in the direction of the forest, broke forth into a deafening howl. Our two Indian guides took advantage of this opportunity to discharge several arrows from the tree. He was struck more than once, but the light weapons bounded back harmless from his thick skin. At length, with a roar which was heard near the eye, and the arrow remained sticking in the wound. He now broke anew into the wildest fury, sprang at the tree and tore it with his claws. But having at length succeeded in getting rid of the arrow he became more calm, and laid himself down as before in front of the cave.

Frank now returned from the lower end of the den, and a glance showed us what he had been doing. He had strangled two of the cubs, and before we were aware of his intention he threw them through the opening to the tiger. No sooner did that animal perceive him than he gazed earnestly upon them and began to examine them closely, turning them cautiously from side to side. As soon as he became aware that they were dead he uttered so piercing a howl of sorrow that we were obliged to put our hands to our ears. When I censured my huntsman for the rashness and cruelty of the action, I perceived by his blunt and abrupt answers that he also had lost all hope of rescue and with it all sense of the ties between master and servant.

The thunder had now ceased and the storm had sunk to gentle gale, we could hear the songs of birds in the neighboring forest, and the sun was streaming among the wet branches. The tiger stretched himself down beside his dead whelps. He was a beautiful animal of great size and strength, and his limbs stretched out at full length displayed his immense power of muscle. All at once another roar was heard at a distance, and the tiger immediately rose and answered it with a mournful howl. A few minutes confirmed our worst fears, for another tiger, not quite so large as the first, came rapidly towards the spot where we were. "This enemy will prove more cruel than the other," said Wharton, "for this is the female, and she knows no pity for those who deprive her of her young."

The howls which the tigress gave when she had examined the bodies of her cubs surpassed every conception of the horrible, and the tiger mingled his mournful cries with hers. Suddenly her roaring was lowered to a hoarse growling, and we saw her anxiously stretch out her head and extend her nostrils, and look around as if in search of the murderers of her young. Her eyes quickly fell upon us, and she made a spring forward with the intention of penetrating to our place of safety. Perhaps she might have been enabled, by her immense strength, to push away the stone had we not with all our united power, held it against her. When she found that all her efforts

Poultry raising pays. People who tell you that there is no money in raising chickens—may have tried to make money in the business by using setting hens as hatchers, and they might as well have tried to locate a gold mine in the cabbage patch. The business of a hen is to lay eggs. As a hatcher and brooder, she is out-classed. That's the business of the Chatham Incubator and Brooder, and they do it perfectly and successfully.

The poultry business, properly conducted, pays far better than any other business for the amount of time and money invested.

Thousands of poultry-raisers—men and women all over Canada and the United States—have proved to their satisfaction that it is profitable to raise chicks with the

CHATHAM INCUBATOR AND BROODER.

"Yours is the first incubator I have used, and I wish to state I had 92 chicks out of 93 eggs. This was my first trial, and I am very pleased with my incubator and brooder. THOS. McNAUGHTON, Chatham, B. C."

"My first hatch came off. I got 170 fine chicks from 190 eggs. Who can beat that for the first trial, and so early in the spring. I am well pleased with my incubator, and if I could not get another money could not buy from me. Every farmer should have a No. 3 Chatham Incubator.—F. W. HAMMAR, Dunnville, Ont."

The incubator you furnished me works exceedingly well. It is easily operated, and only costs about 10 minutes attention every day. H. McGUIRE, MOOSE JAW, Assn., B. C.

The Chatham Incubator and Brooder is honestly constructed. There is no humbug about it. Every inch of material is thoroughly tested, the machine is built on right principles, the insulation is perfect, thermometer reliable, and the workmanship is the best.

The Chatham Incubator and Brooder is simple as well as scientific in construction—a woman or girl can operate the machine in their leisure moments.

were fruitless, she approached the tiger, and he rose and joined in her hollow roaring. They stood together for a few moments as if in consultation, and then suddenly went off at a rapid pace and disappeared from sight. Their howling died away in the distance, and then entirely ceased.

We now began to entertain better hopes of our condition, but Wharton shook his head. "Do not flatter yourself," said he, "with the belief that these animals will let us escape out of their sight till they have had their revenge. The hours we have to live are numbered.

Nevertheless, there still appeared a chance of our rescue, for to our surprise we saw both our Indians standing before the entrance, and heard them call to us to seize the only possibility of flight, for that the tigers had gone around the height, possibly to seek another inlet to the cave. In the greatest haste the stone was pushed aside, and we stepped forth from what we had considered a living grave. Wharton was the last that left it; he was unwilling to lose his double-barrelled gun, and stopped to take it up. We now heard once more the roaring of the tigers, though at a distance, and precipitately struck into a side path. We had proceeded thus for about a quarter of an hour, when we found that our way led along the edge of a rocky cliff with innumerable fissures. Suddenly the Indians, who were before us, uttered one of their piercing shrieks, and we immediately became aware that the tigers were in pursuit of us. Utterly despairing, we rushed towards one of the gulfs in our way over which was thrown a bridge of reeds that sprang up and down at every step, and could be trodden with safety by the light foot of the Indians alone. Deep in the hollow below rushed an impetuous stream, and a thousand pointed and jagged rocks threatened destruction on every side. Lincoln, my huntsman, and myself passed over the chasm in safety, but Wharton was still in the middle of the waving bridge and endeavoring to steady himself, when both the tigers were seen to issue from the adjoining forest, and the moment they descried us they bounded toward us, roaring. Meanwhile Wharton had nearly gained the safe side of the gulf, and rest of us were clambering up the rocky cliff, except Lincoln, who remained at the reedy bridge to assist his friend to step upon firm ground. Wharton, though the ferocious animals were close upon him, never lost his courage nor presence of mind. As soon as he had gained the edge of the cliff, he knelt down and with his dirk divided the fastening by which the bridge was attached to the rock. He expected that an effectual barrier would thus be put to our pursuers. But he was mistaken. The tigress, without a moment's pause, rushed towards the chasm and attempted to bound over it. It was a fearful sight to see the mighty animal for a moment in the air above the abyss; but her strength was not equal to the distance, she fell into the gulf and before she reached the bottom she was torn into a thousand pieces by the jagged points of the rocks.

Her fate did not in the least dismay her companion; he followed her with an immense spring, and reached the opposite side, but only with his foreclaws, and thus he clung to the edge of the precipice, endeavoring to find a footing. The Indians again uttered a wild shriek as if all were lost. But Wharton, who was nearest the edge of the rock, advanced courageously towards the tiger and struck his dirk into the animal's breast. Maddened with pain, the furious beast collected all his strength, and fixing one of his hind legs upon the edge of the cliff, he seized Wharton by the thigh. The heroic man still preserved his fortitude he grasped the stem of a tree with his left hand to steady himself, while with his right he wrenched and violently turned the weapon in the breast of the tiger. All this was the work of an instant. The Indians, Frank, and myself hastened to his assistance; but Lincoln, already at his side, had seized the gun, which lay on the ground, and struck so powerful a blow with the butt end upon the head of the tiger, that the animal, stunned and overpowered, let go his hold and fell back into the abyss. The unhappy Lincoln, however, had not calculated on the force of his blow; he staggered forward, reeled upon the edge of the precipice, extended his hands to save himself, but in vain. For an instant he hovered over the gulf and then fell into it, to rise no more.

Poor Wharton was trying insensible on the brink. He was dreadfully torn but the Indians managed to stop the bleeding with a bandage of leaves, and he in process of time came round. Lincoln's body was eventually recovered, and amid the most unfeigned tokens of sorrow on the part of the natives, for the young fellow was a great favorite, his body was borne on a deer of tiger skins to the burial place of the tribe.—C. E. D. Black, in Cassell's magazine.

The flag of the United States may not be used for advertising purposes neither may the coats of arms of the several states, according to a decision of the court of appeals of the district of Columbia on an appeal taken by Cabn, Belt & Co. of Baltimore from the decision of the commissioner of patents refusing to register a trademark containing the coat of arms of the state of Maryland. The opinion was written by Justice McComas.—Washington Star.

Generally speaking, races living at high altitudes have weaker and more highly pitched voices than those living in regions where the supply of oxygen is more plentiful. Thus among the Indians living on the plateaus between the ranges of the Andes, at an elevation of from ten to fourteen thousand feet, the men have voices like women and the women like children, and their singing is a shrill monotone. The Australian native has a weak voice, but a knack of sending it a long distance, and the lowest tribes African bushmen also possess weak voices. Of all human beings it would seem that the dwarf race discovered by Stanley in central Africa have, in point of volume and compass, the weakest of human voices, and this is only what one would expect from the feebleness of their physique generally.

UNCLAIMED BRITISH PRIZE MONEY.

The days when prize money was looked upon in the navy as an ordinary source of income are recalled by a notification from the Admiralty of money waiting to be claimed—the proceeds of bounties for the destruction of pirates and of the sale of slave ships.

There is a sum of £5,000 from the sale of slaving vessels captured in the '80's awaiting claimants, also a goodly amount of naval prize money and £2,800 bounty for the destruction of pirates which nobody applies for. Some of those to whom the money is due are, no doubt, still alive, but if they are dead they probably left descendants who if their names were advertised would be forth coming to substantiate their claims. As it is, there is little demand for the money in hand. During twelve months dealt in with the statement issued from Whitehall under £8 has been paid out.—Court Journal.

"Over here they have fastened them, and they are strong on the other side. It's easier to walk on a slack wire than on a tight one, you know. This gives just the right sag."

"But how do they bring the stuff back?" he persisted.

"Wait, and you'll see," she cautioned.

Danvers slipped behind a chimney, and presently the pair returned, pushing before them a wheelbarrow with a grooved wheel. One of them carried a Japanese umbrella with which he preserved their balance while the other pushed. They dumped their load on the roof and turned back. When they had disappeared down one of the scuttles on the other side, Danvers stepped out again.

"How long have you been with these men?" he demanded. "You don't look like that sort."

"They were with a circus," she explained. "I can gway with Jim (that's the smaller one. He watches me so that I do not have a chance to get away from him.)"

"Is this a regular trick?" he demanded. She shook her head.

"Business is bad this year. The boys can't get work. They were fooling one night on the roof and found that the wire was strong enough to bear them. They used to carry me in the wheelbarrow in the show, and they got the idea of robbing houses. They cut the alarm wire, and can come and go as they please. When the men were watching they walked right over their heads."

"I'd like to get after them," he said. "I could drive them down to the street where the watchman is."

"If you won't tell, I'll take you," she volunteered. "Don't be afraid, I can do it."

She caught up another parasol from the roof and spread it. "Ride pick-a-back," she demanded.

Danvers put his arms about her shoulder and raised his feet clear. Slowly she adjusted her weight to the wire and began to make her way across. Somewhere he had read that it would not do to look down, so he shut his eyes and hung on.

Once or twice the girl seemed to lose her balance, and for a moment worked the parasol violently while she regained it. Then she proceeded on again, and at last, with a sigh, she stepped off the wire, and Danvers opened his eyes.

They were on the further side and just beyond the open scuttle.

"Let me go back," pleaded the girl. "You must not know that I helped you or they will kill me when they get out. You must never tell how you made the trip. Pretend that you saw them and climbed a fire escape. I am going to be gone by the time you get back to the house."

"But how can I reward you?" he questioned.

She threw a glance at him. "I can get a divorce if I'm in a convent. My freedom is a rich reward."

She kissed her hand to him in imitation of the circus ring, and he watched with admiration as her little figure sped across the open. Then he dropped through the scuttle.

"Bull luck, I suppose," laughed the manager, when Danvers reported next morning.

"Just that," assented Danvers, "bull luck and a woman."

"But he would not explain the latter part, and the manager imagined it to be the girl he married on the strength of his increased pay."

An anecdote is told of Richard Seddon, the late premier of New Zealand. He was very active in sending troops to the assistance of Great Britain in the South African War. On one occasion he was taunted by an Opposition member with his readiness to sacrifice the lives of the colony's manhood. "You are ready enough to send our sons and brothers to be shot at, but"—was the opening of a taunt by his opponent, when the Premier broke in: "Sir, this morning I signed a commission for my own son. He will be shot at, too, and I have dared him to come back without a wound."
