The weather of the past week has been ideal for haymaking, and everybody is busy at it. The crop is one of the heaviest the district has produced. If the price is good this season will prove a most prosperous one for the lowlanders.

Work was started this week on the rear and second-story addition to the office of The Walker Press. The walls will be of cement. J. N. Grant has the contract. The addition will give a 24x26 foot press room on the ground floor and a 7-room flat over the present building and rear addition.

The apple crop all over Eastern Canada will be a failure this year. Caterpillars and frost have been too much for the growers to combat. The crop in the Eastern townships is said to be the worst ever known. Consequently there should be a very fine market for the Okanagan crop, which is very good.

Frank Hassard finished cutting in his hay fields yesterday. He says the yield this year is a record one, much of the land giving three tons to the acre. Similar reports come from ranchers in the opposite direction. At the Hazelmere ranch the yield was so heavy in spots as to make it impossible to get through it with the mower.

The Vernon Growers' Union has made the first application for Government aid in connection with the co-operative organization of fruit growers in B. C. The loan asked for in this case was $40,000. It is expected that this loan will be held up for a few days and will go through by order in council when the other loans asked for by similar organizations are carried.

Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Brimacombe were on the afternoon train for the mainline Saturday evening. They were ticketed for Port Haney, where Mr. Brimacombe will take the management of the Bank of Montreal branch. Mr. Brimacombe was accountant of the Enderby branch of that bank for several years. From here he was promoted to the bank in Armstrong, and the promotion from accountant to manager is one upon which he is to be congratulated.

The burial of the body of the late John Moser took place at Mara last Saturday morning on the arrival of the train from the north. The time of burial was set for Friday, and a number of people attended from Enderby and the people of Mara were gathered at the station to take the body to the little village church and thence to the burial ground. But the body did not arrive. Through some mistake at the shipping point, Victoria, it failed to connect with the train at Vancouver, and did not arrive until the following day.

PREPARING TO START WORK

Mr. A. R. Mackenzie, son of the great railway promoter and head of the Mackenzie & Mann corporation, visited Enderby Tuesday, leaving for the mainline Wednesday evening. Mr. Mackenzie is making a thorough investigation of the Okanagan, taking a careful survey of every nook and corner, in order to get first-hand information on the possibilities of the Valley and the probable business offering for the proposed Couteau power and electrical company, taken over by the Mackenzie & Mann syndicate last year. To a Press representative, Mr. Mackenzie stated that while he had nothing definite to give for publication in relation to the company's plans, he intimated that the money market had now got down to a condition where they could look forward to starting work in three months' time. It was difficult, he said, to handle a proposition of as great magnitude as the one they had in hand, and the preliminary work required the most careful study and exhaustive investigation. His company had not lost a moment since the Couteau proposition was taken over by them. The past months had been devoted to investigating every phase of the undertaking. His present trip was to look into the probable business now offering. He had visited most of the Valley, and was convinced that even now the business was sufficient to warrant the company proceeding, and he believed work would start on a large scale before fall.

The matter of tram lines was not one with which Mr. Mackenzie was dealing, but he spoke very freely on the surety of the roads being built, and predicted that it would mean the making of the Okanagan.

THE GROWERS' ASSOCIATION

A meeting of those interested in the organization of the Enderby Growers' Association was held in the City Hall Saturday afternoon. Mr. Robertson, manager of the Central Selling Agency, was present. The meeting was called expressly to hear Mr. Robertson on points which were not clear to the members. The meeting brought out much information of service to the directors in their efforts to increase the membership.

Mr. Robertson reported satisfactory progress in the handling of this year's crop of fruit. The growers of the south end of the Valley have entered more unanimously into the Associations and are disposing of their output through the Central Selling Agency. In the northern end the growers are not as unanimous. At Armstrong particularly, the private shippers are buying from the growers and entering the markets in competition with the Central, the cash inducements of the private buyers appealing to the growers.

In this connection, Mr. Robertson said it was not for him to complain. If the growers were not disposed to give the Central Agency their unanimous support, the agency would operate for the good of the growers who did come into it, and in competition with the private selling houses and he believed the outcome of the season would demonstrate the value of co-operation in the handling of the Valley's output.

Mr. Robertson explained that the Central was a selling agency. It was an institution endorsed by the government through which its members were enabled to dispose of their output. The agency did not wish to corner the output, nor the market, but simply was a medium between the growers and the markets through which the produce and fruit could be sold. It was in existence only as a selling organization. It did not wish to handle anything the individual grower could handle himself. It did not control the local market, and members were privileged to sell to the local market, but not to local selling organizations which entered the outside markets in competition with the co-operative selling agency.

He advised the local directors to keep down expenses this season, and handle the output of the association members as economically as possible. He was prepared to handle such fruit as the local association could get together. He advised the members to place their orders with the local secretary, Mr. S. Teece, for all the paper, boxes and other supplies as early as possible, and he was particularly emphatic in requiring the best of selection and care in the packing of the fruit which they were to put through the Central. All fruit men who require these supplies should communicate with Mr. Teece.

A cruising party from Kamloops spent last Friday and Saturday in Enderby. They came in their private yachts, and consisted of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Clementine and family in the 35-ft. cruising yacht "Clementine," and Mr. and Mrs. H. Sholton and family, in the 30-ft. cruiser "Peter Pan." Mr. Sholton is fish inspector of the interior. They are spending several weeks cruising about the lakes and streams. The trip from Mara lake to Enderby up the Spallumcheen was one of the most enjoyable, they said, on the cruise, and they were surprised that there were so few boats here to take advantage of the river.

SOMETHING TO TIE TO

We do not know whether it is through lack of judgment or just a matter of indifference, but certainly Enderby has adopted the poorest policy imaginable to encourage the country people to come this way to do their trading. Every tie-post on Cliff street has been removed, and there are none on the side streets. There is, in fact, no place in town where a farmer can drive up and tie his horses. There is not a shed where the horses can be sheltered from the hot sunshine of summer or the storms of winter. While it may not be wise to line Cliff street with tie posts, yet this would be far more reasonable, from the standpoint of business and public utility than to wipe the street tie posts out altogether. At the present time our ranchers tie to the telephone company's poles, which is contrary to law and should be prevented by the city constable. And yet, with no other place to tie, what can they be expected to do? If a city the size of Vernon can permit tieing on the main business street, and provide tie posts for the convenience of those driving in from the country, surely we can afford to permit it and provide for it in Enderby—either this or place a tie shed at some convenient point in the city.

K. OF P. IN VERNON

Three auto loads of local Knights of Pythias made the trip to Vernon Sunday afternoon to participate with the Vernon brethren in their annual church-going exercises. It was a most enjoyable trip, all report, and the turn out of Pythians was a most inspiring one. There were 80 in line and the Vernon Fire Brigade band headed the procession. The line of march was from the Pythian hall to All Saint's Church, where the Rev. Cummings Ching delivered the address. The church was packed, and the service strongly appealed to all. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Ching said he was proud to have the privilege of addressing the congregation on an order with such noble principles as founded Pythianism.

PUBLICITY MAKING GOOD

Two thousand five hundred pieces of literature intended to keep Vernon in the public eye, are leaving Vernon during the current week. Four families, numbering 18 persons, arrived in Vernon during the past three weeks, besides a number of single men and women, all of whom are working. Records prove that these people came in response to the direct appeal of the Publicity Commissioner to them, and the wisdom of the Board of Trade in appointing one man to take over the securing of new settlers, industries and capital is being amply demonstrated by the increased number of enquiries now reaching the Board and the office of the Commissioner.—Vernon News.

BOOZE FIGHTING OFFICERS

The militia officers who were severely, but justly reprimanded by the Hon. Minister of Militia, Colonel Sam Hughes, at a banquet in Halifax last week, have raised a great hullabaloo about the roasting they received, but on sober second thought these officers, if they have the brains they are credited with having, will sneak away and hide themselves. No man is a gentleman, whatever else he may be, who will attend a temperance banquet and sneak booze to the tables. He is worse than a barroom bum, no matter how much gold lace and brass buttons he may adorn his beastly body with. Business men, military men, men of all classes worthy of the name, will recognize at once the justice and the timeliness of Colonel Hughes' remarks, and the sooner the militia of Canada frees itself of these booze-fighting "officers" the sooner it will become a proficient arm in the protection of the nation. Resign? Why certainly resign, and God speed them in their going!

INTEREST IN MINING DECLINING

There is not one-half the interest taken in mining in British Columbia that there used to be. And yet, the growth in the industry has been remarkably steady in recent years, and on the whole the industry is on a safer and more legitimate basis today than it ever was. The mining camps in the Kootenays and Cariboo seem to be turning out very satisfactory amounts of ore, and the annual output indicates a better calss of mining now than was practiced some years ago when the industry was attracting so much attention and foreign capital. To-day the mines are being worked by practical miners, and they are getting out the actual ore. The mines of British Columbia are making good. They are making big money for the men interested in them. They do not require to be boosted.

Ten years ago there was quite a different class of mining carried on in British Columbia. There were too many brokers interested in mining then—and too many "experts" whose great fund of knowledge consisted of writing glowing reports on prospects partly developed, upon the strength of which mining stock brokers "mined" the pockets of the people. To get dividends out of a piece of mining property, the work must be in the hands of men who know the value of persistent hard work with hammer and drill, and the management must be handled by men—practical men—on the ground, not by theorists five or six thousand miles away. It was this theoretical mine management that put the industry in such bad repute ten or twelve years ago. And then, when they could not make dividends out of the mine these theorists switched about and pulled them out of the pockets of the investing public by baiting their hooks with splendidly lithographed stock certificates.

That kind of mining is of necessity short-lived. It hurt British Columbia. Our precious metal mines are as rich today as they ever were. In fact, many have proved richer than was ever conceived of them, under recent years of practical work on them. That the industry will continue to grow in importance, and eventually will eclipse even the position of importance it held a dozen years ago, has always been recognized by men in a position to know the immense possibilities of the mining industry. The work of the past decade, and the experiences arising from it, have been of inestimable value. The industry has more to back it up now than flossy mining stock certificates.

In recent years the office of Minister of Mines has been held by Premier McBride. He has handled it in connection with his other duties. No doubt the Premier has done valiant service in this connection. While the industry was suffering from the evil effects of a period of over-capitalization and inflated values, to say nothing of the vilest of management, of ten years ago, Premier McBride acted the part of a good general in taking personal hold upon it and bringing it back to a sane basis. But it would appear that the time is ripe for a more progressive policy to be adopted by the Department of Mines. There is no doubt that if the department were placed in the hands of a man as familiar with mining as the Hon. W. R. Ross, Minister of Lands, is with timber, we should see in a year or two's time the industry developed as safely, and as permanently as Mr. Ross has developed the industry over which he presides.

EXPERIMENTAL FARMS

The Dominion Government has decided to establish an experimental farm at a point along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway between New Hazelton and Fort George as well as one in the Okanagan Valley.

The location of the farm in the Okanagan Valley will probably be on the west side of Okanagan lake, on what is now unused, Indian reserve land.

This was the official announcement made by Mr. J. H. Grisdale, director of Dominion Government experimental farms, to the Vancouver Province a few days ago. Mr. Grisdale is now at Summerland making the selection of the proposed farm, which will embrace from 100 to 150 acres of bench land.

The farm will be devoted to fruit, cattle and poultry. Mr. Grisdale stated that he would introduce pumping methods for irrigating the benches rising in terraces from the lake and will then be able to determine whether that method can be adopted in the district where the gravity system of irrigation is in vogue.

The Commonsense Man and the Commonsense Way of Business

Success lies in mutual service.

This great truth concerning the solidarity of the race marks a mental epoch in the onward and the upward march. It was hinted at pretty strongly in Seventeen Hundred Seventy-six, and carried into business as an experiment about Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-six.

It is no longer an experiment. The Spirit of the Times—the "Zeitgeist," to borrow a word from our German friends—is a constantly progressing entity.

The present Spirit of the Times is a kind unequaled in history. We have thousands upon thousands of men and women who are thinking great and noble thoughts and doing great and splendid work.

Very many of our big businessmen regard themselves as public servants.

Our "Zeitgeist" is sensative, restless, alert, impressionable, progressive, and is making for righteousness. The man who can imagine a better religion than now exists is allowed to throw his vision on the screen, and he who can formulate a better government than we now have is not hanged for his pains, but is allowed to express his dreams.

Public opinion rules. No law that is contrary to the "Zeitgeist" can be enforced. Judges construe, translate and interpret the laws to suit the Spirit of the Times.

Every man who speaks out loud and clear is tinting the "Zeitgeist." Every man who expresses what he honestly thinks is true is changing the Spirit of the Times. Thinkers help other people think, for they formulate what others are thinking. No person writes or thinks alone—thought is in the air, but its expression is necessary to create a tangible Spirit of the Times. The value of the thinker who writes, or a writer who thinks, or a businessman who acts, is that he supplies arguments for the people, and confirms all who are on his wire in their opinions, often before unuttered.

The Brotherhood of Man is an idea now fully appreciated in business.

Commerce today stands for mutuality—reciprocity.

The American Department-stork has taken up lost motion, and given the people better goods at a lower price. It has been the inevitable, because it does the greatest good to the greatest number. It has worked for economy and length of days. It means Mutuality, Reciprocity—Brotherhood.

Every purchaser must be pleased. A child who buys a spool of thread is given the same courteous attention as the shrewdest buyer. The customer is made to feel that he is at home, that he is with strong and influential friends, that his interests are safeguarded. This matter of faith between buyer and seller is a new thing in the world.

But to give the people the things they want is not enough. You must show them what they want. The great modern store is a leader in taste. It is an educator. It stands for economy, color, proportion, harmony and increased happiness. It inspires the imagination by bringing from the far corners of the earth the products of the loom, workshop, farm, mine and studio. It displays these goods so that the public may come and examine them—compare, weigh, analyze, sift, decide and make them their own if they wish.

Employees who plot and plan for private gain are swabbing the greased chute that leads to limbo. Owners who run a business but to make money, neither make money nor do they last. Merchants can not make money on one transaction. Every sale must pave the way for further sales. We make our money out of our friends, for our enemies will not deal with us.

A transaction where both sides are not benefited is immoral. The modern businessman has taught us the following five things:

1. The value of honesty as a business asset.
2. The excellence of commerce as a civilizing influence.
3. That the interests of proprietor, public and employee are mutual.
4. That art, ethics, economics and education can and should move forward hand in hand.
5. That business righteousness is simply a form of common sense, a move toward self-preservation.

Oliver Wendell Holmes has left on record the statement that you could not throw a stone on Boston Common without caroming on three poets, two essayists, a reformer and a playwright.

Commonsense men are not so plentiful.

Commonsense men may vary in ability, but this is always true—they are safe men to deal with, whether drivers of drays, motormen, clerks, cashiers, conductors or presidents of railroads.

Paranoiacs are people who are suffering from fatty enlargement of the ego.

They demand obeisance, bouquets, compliments.

The paranoiac is the antithesis of the Commonsense Man. The paranoiac imagines he is being wronged, and that some one has it in for him, that the world is down on him. He has grievances, not principles.

Thieves have a habit of shouting that they have been robbed. Any one who steals your pickle-jar will call you a thief as long as he lives.

Commonsense men are not given to accusation.

The Commonsense Man is more interested in doing his work than in what other people will say about it.

He does not forever play to the gallery.

He acts his thought and thinks little of the thought.

The paranoiac, almost without exception, is one who has been made exempt from useful work. Matteawan has more than one such.

He has been petted, waited upon, coddled, cared for, laughed at and chuckled to.

The antique idea that the child must work for his parents until the day he was twenty-one, was a deal better for the youth than to let him get it into his head that his parents must work for him.

Nature intended that we should all be poor—that we should earn our bread every day before we eat it.

When you find the Commonsense Man you will find one who lives simply, no matter what his finances are.

Every man who thinks he has the world by the tail, and is about to snap its demnition head off for the delectation of himself and immediate friends, is unsafe, no matter how great his genius.

The Commonsense Man looks after just one individual, and that is the man under his own derby; he does not spend money until he earns it; he pays his way; he knows that nothing is ever given for nothing; he keeps his digits off other people's property.

When he does not know what to say, he says nothing; and when he does not know what to do, he does not do it.

Men who, by habit and nature, are untrue to a trust are dangerous just in proportion as they are clever.

I should like to see a university devoted to turning out safe men, instead of merely clever ones—commonsense men, instead of learned ones.

How would it do for a college to give one degree, and only one—the degree of C. M.?

Would it not be worth striving for, to have a college president say to you, "You will find him a commonsense man in everything he undertakes!"—Elbert Hubbard, in The Philistine magazine.

Homeseekers Should Come to Enderby

BECAUSE it is one of the healthiest spots on earth, only two children and no adults having died of disease in the last eight years.

BECAUSE, when you arrive, the Board of Trade will take you in hand and make you feel at home and see that you are satisfactorily settled.

BECAUSE you will find here all the advantages and beauties of a magnificent river, ever green hills, grassy meadows and cool, delightful valleys.

BECAUSE if you prefer a home-site on the hills, in groves of birch and alder, cedar and pine, overlooking the river and valleys, you will find it here most ideally located.

BECAUSE we have the purest of water piped to every home from a sparkling mountain stream, a perfect system of electric lighting, and an abundant supply of wood.

BECAUSE, if you are a person of means, and wish to make a home for yourself on the banks of the soft-flowing Spallumcheen, you will find good roads already leading to the site, and all the materials necessary to build close at hand.

BECAUSE you will find here all the advantages to be found any place else in the Valley, and none of the disadvantages.

BECAUSE there is work to be had by anyone looking for it, in the mills, in the lumber camps, on the farm, in the lumber yards, in the brick yards, in the building trades or the orchards.

BECAUSE fruits, hay, vegetables and grain grow to perfection here without irrigation.

BECAUSE Enderby has never been boomed, therefore you can buy at reasonable prices and be sure of doubling your money.

BECAUSE you will find the religious, educational and social advantages all you could wish.

BUT upon Nature, in upon himself, back through the mists that shroud the past, forward into the darkness that overhangs the future, turns the restless desire that arises when the animal wants slumber in satisfaction. Beneath things he seeks the law: he would know how the globe was forged and the stars were hung, and trace to their origins the springs of life. And then, as the man develops his nobler nature, there arises the desire higher yet—the passion of passions, the hope of hopes—the desire that he, even he, may somehow aid in making life better and brighter, in destroying want and sin, sorrow and shame. He masters and curbs the animal; he turns his back upon the feast and renounces the place of power; he leaves it to others to accumulate wealth, to gratify pleasant tastes, to bask themselves in the warm sunshine of the brief day. He works for those he never saw and never can see; for a fame, or maybe for a scant justice, that can only come along after the clods have rattled upon his coffin-lid. He toils in the advance where it is cold, and there is little cheer from men, and the stones are sharp and the brambles thick. Amid the scoffs of the present and the sneers that stab like knives, he builds for the future, he cuts the trail that progressive humanity may hereafter broaden into a high road. Into higher, grander spheres desire mounts and beckons, and a star that rises in the East leads him on. Lo! the pulses of the man throb with the yearnings of the god—he would aid in the process of the suns!—Henry George.

A DESERVED REBUKE

"I have nothing to apologize for. I said nothing at the dinner which could offend any man at the dinner who behaved himself, or any man of the permanent force or militia of Canada who conducts himself as a soldier should."

These are the remarks of the Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, minister of militia, following the threat that several prominent officers of the Halifax and Toronto militia would resign unless an apology was forthcoming from Colonel Hughes for certain remarks made by him in his speech at a temperance banquet in Halifax. At this banquet a waiter was bribed to fill vichy water bottles with whisky, from which the offending officers are said to have drank copiously during the evening.

At this gathering when General Sir Ian Hamilton started to speak the interruptions are said to have been most disconcerting and their character thoroughly alcoholic.

The interruptions reached such a stage that General Hamilton felt compelled to cut his remarks short, and finally sat down with his speech only half delivered.

Dr. McKay, superintendent of education for Nova Scotia, who has done a great deal to promote the cadet movement, was interrupted time after time, but hung to his task and finished his speech.

Colonel Hughes calmly told his guests that there was no place in the Canadian militia or permanent force for men who were wastrels or barroom loafers. He said further that in the matter of promotion and discipline he would make no distinction between the permanent force and the militia, and that those who could not behave themselves as gentlemen and soldiers had better get out while the going was good.

HIGH SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

The result of the High School entrance examination, which was held on the 25th, 26th and 27th of June, at the thirty high school centres throughout the Province, have just been announced by the Department of Education. The total number of candidates was 2,101, out of which 1,114 were successful. The honor of securing first place rests with Veta M. Steel, of Armstrong, who secured 819 marks out of a possible 1100. Another honor also comes to Armstrong. Our sister city stands first in the list of thirty high school centres in the number of pupils passed out of the number of candidates trying. Out of 25 trying, 19 passedf

Enderby makes a big jump toward the head of the list this year. It is number six on the list of 30. Out of 16 trying, 10 passed: Herbert E. Blanchard, 670; Hugh E. Mowat, 658; Margaret M. Hartry, 657; Ernest E. Grant, 633; Dapid S. Mowat, 620; Jean G. Polson, 602; Kate C. Nichol, 591; Theodore Adams, 577; Willie T. Faulkner, 567; Edna G. McMahon, 554

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN COMING

No matter how often one has witnessed the production of Uncle Tom's Cabin, the story never grows old, and the play always draws a crowd.

The great Stetson production of this favorite melo-drama will be put on at the Enderby Opera House Saturday evening, Aug. 2nd. To faithfully depict the actual scenes in that part of the South with which the story deals, Manager Washburn uses in his production of Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin, a whipping post which was in service on a Red River plantation for many years prior to the rebellion. One of the big scenes of this production is the Swanee river by moonlight. By the aid of lately invented mechanical and electrical devices, actual scenes for miles along the stream, made famous in song and story, are unfolded to the eye in all their mid-summer beauty. The setting is said to be one of the most beautiful and realistic stage pictures ever produced.

BURNING THE SLASHING

The freedom from forest fires this season throughout British Columbia has given the fire wardens of the Forestry Department an opportunity to make a special study of the different sources of fire dangers with a view to the introduction of still further preventative measures. Strong efforts will be made to get all owners of timber limits to dispose of their slash this autumn. This refuse has in the past proved the starting point of the majority of forest fires, as it is found all over the province where ever there are logging or contractors camps, wherever clearings for settlements have been in progress, and along the route of new roads or trails. This summer, especially in some of the coast logging camps, efforts have been made to dispose of slash and the result will undoubtedly prove highly satisfactory. The Forestry Department will give its aid wherever possible, and this is the main object of the special study which fire wardens are making in the province this year.

JUST THINK OF IT

A Four Hundred Dollar Piano Absolutely Given Away

That advertising is now a science is again demonstrated practically to the buying public of this section by the wonderful advertising system now employed by the most enterprising business house of W. J. Woods, who are giving away ABSOLUTELY FREE to some one of their customers on Dec. 31st the beautiful Parlor Grand Piano which is now on exhibition at their store. The Piano costs FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS and is a HIGH-CLASS instrument in every respect, GUARANTEED by the makers for TEN YEARS. JUST THINK OF IT! A Four Hundred Dollar Piano to be GIVEN AWAY! A few years ago, if a merchant was to do such a thing he would be considered a fit subject for an asylum, but conditions have changed, yet in the face of the enormous sum spent in advertising, the fact of W. J. Woods giving away a $400.00 piano is a stupendous undertaking and it clearly indicates their desire to be "always up to and a little ahead" of the spirit of the times.

Every purchaser of $1.00 worth of goods from any department of their store will receive a coupon good for 100 votes on the piano. The person presenting the largest number of votes to them on Dec. 31st will receive the piano absolutely free. No favors will be shown and every person will receive an equal chance. The reputation enjoyed by W. J. Woods for "square dealing" insures this fact. We think the buying people will appreciate this extremely liberal offer on the part of W. J. Woods, and, as predicted, there has been a lively scramble for votes.

BELL BLOCK, ENDERBY

"Fire Blight," Its Deadly Work and How Best to Get Control of It

A circular recently issued by the Department of Agriculture, by Mr. W. H. Brittain, B.S.A., pathologist and entomologist, on fire blight contains much information that should be in the hands of every fruit grower in the district. "The fire or pear blight," says the writer, "has been known for many years as a serious disease of apples, pears, and occasionally quinces. Lately the disease has been reported as attacking plums and apricots. In some districts the disease has wiped out whole pear-orchards and caused more loss to the fruit-growers than all other factors combined. In British Columbia it has proved a very serious disease of the apple.

Cause of the Disease

"The fire-blight is of bacterial origin. The organism causing it is a small rod-shaped body, measuring about 1-16,000 of an inch long and about 1-45,000 of an inch wide. This germ commonly enters the plant by way of the blossoms, where it multiplies in the nectaries of the flower and finally extends into the nearby twigs and leaves. It may enter growing shoots, limbs, or trunk through the agency of various insect pests. Having once gained admittance to the plant, the baccillus, if conditions are favorable, multiplies rapidly, feeding upon and destroying the cells of the inner bark and cambium. It winters over in the form of "hold-over" cankers on the limbs or trunk of affected trees.

"As a rule the disease makes its first appearance in the form of 'blossom-blight.' The tips, blossoms and leaves will be seen to wilt, becoming dark brown or black, and finally shrivel up, presenting a scorched appearance. The bark at first has a dark water-soaked look, but later it becomes hard and dry.

"In the twigs and smaller branches the disease is known as 'twig-blight.' Water-sprouts and other young rapidly growing shoots are particularly liable to attack. Where the disease is active, blisters will appear on the bark, through which will ooze a thick gummy substance light yellow in color at first, but hardening in the air it becomes dark red or brown. The leaves borne on such shoots have the characteristic scorched appearance. In many cases the disease is confined to the twig form and spreads no farther.

"Frequently, however, it enters the main limbs or trunk by passing down twigs or water-spouts. The bark will take on the water-soaked appearance and the gummy exude ooze from the affected part in large drops. Sometimes a canker of limited extent is formed around the base of the shoot down which the disease has passed. As the organism gradually dies out the bark loses its water-soaked appearance, and, becoming hard and tough, shrinks away from the healthy portion, frequently forming a crack or fissure between. In the apparently sound tissue outside this area a few germs may lurk to carry over the disease until another year. A further spread of the disease down the limbs or trunk, however, may sometimes occur. Extensive cankered areas will be developed and from cracks in the diseased tissue the yellow gum will drip abundantly. Sometimes a canker will appear considerably farther down on the limb than any other, while the bark between is, to all external appearances, perfectly healthy. Upon cutting away the bark, however, a fine line of diseased tissue will be found connecting the two. The form of the disease that affects main limbs and trunk is called 'body-blight.'

How the 'Blight' is Controlled

"The work of various investigators has shown that fire-blight is a controllable disease. If the following directions are faithfully followed from the start, no alarm need be occasioned by its appearance in any district.

"Immediately the disease appears the affected limb should be removed, the distance to cut being governed by the rapidity with which the disease is progressing. At least a foot below the visible signs of disease is none too much, and even more may be necessary. Immediate cutting out is essential, for once the disease has gained entrance to the trunk or main limbs, it is often next to impossible to save the tree. Where the disease has formed a canker around the base of a shoot, the bark should be cut away for at least 4 or 5 inches below the diseased area. All cutting tools used should be thoroughly disinfected after each cut by dipping or swabbing with some good disinfectant. Corrosive sublimate, 1-1000, is excellent for this purpose, and formalin, 1 pint diluted to 3 gallons with water, is also most satisfactory. The cut surfaces of the wood should also be swabbed with the disinfectant and large wounds painted over with a mixture of oil and lead, to prevent the entrance of wound parasites. All prunings from diseased trees should be gathered and burned at the time of cutting.

"As new infections may be continually taking place, it is not possible to control the disease entirely by this treatment. It is necessary to go carefully over the trees for at least three times after the leaves have fallen and cut away all blighted parts. To detect all cases of the disease where it is no longer active is not always easy. The darker color and withered condition of diseased bark is usually a good indication. Where a 'hold-over' canker has been formed, this can be detected by the color and by the crack that usually forms around it. As the suckers, which are often found at the base of a tree, are favorable channels for the entrance of the disease into the trunk, they should, as a measure of precaution, be removed in those districts where the disease occurs. A war of extermination should be carried on against aphides and leaf-hoppers, which should never be allowed to become numerous. Spray with Black Leaf 40 or Black Leaf as often as is necessary to hold them well in control.

"Summary of control measures:

"1. Cut out disease as it appears.

"2. Carefully examine trees and cut out cankers after the leaves have fallen.

"3. Gather and burn all prunings from diseased trees.

"4. Disinfect tools and cut surfaces of wood.

"5. Keep aphides and other insects in control.

"6. Endeavor to check a too rapid and sappy growth of the trees."
