INSTITUTE MEETS

Farmers Elect Officers and Pass Resolutions--Good Essays Read

The annual meeting of the Grand Forks Farmers' institute was held in the city hall last evening, there being a good attendance of members. President C. S. Galloway presided.

The secretary's report showed that during the year there had been held eight meetings of the institute, seven in Grand Forks and one in Cascade.

The treasurer's report showed that the total receipts for the year had been $40.90, while the expenditures were $29.10, leaving a balance of $11.80 in the treasury.

In his annual report, Secretary Clark said that the institute now had 72 members. The institute had been the direct cause of the organization of several kindred bodies, such as the Fruit Growers' association, the Poultry association, and the Agricultural association. The latter organization had made it possible to hold our first annual fair, which had demonstrated the agricultural possibilities of the valley and brought fame to the district. He felt sure that during the next year an irrigation system would be installed in the valley. He urged everybody to put their shoulders to wheel and make a united effort to double the membership of the institute.

Messrs. A. B. Tweedle and J. T. Lawrence were appointed auditors, with instructions to audit the books of the institute and report at the present meeting. After performing their duties they certified the books correct, and their report was approved.

A vote of thanks was tendered the city for the use of the hall; also to the press for courtesies extended.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, James Rooke; vice-president, A. B. Tweedle; secretary-treasurer, J. D. Honsberger; directors, Fred Clark, J. T. Lawrence, C. C. Heaven, C. S. Galloway, E. O. Almas and James Burr. C. S. Galloway was elected delegate to the Central Farmers' institute, which meets in Victoria next month.

On motion, it was decided that the directors should hold a session after adjournment for the purpose of preparing resolutions to be submitted to the Central institute.

The president thought the institute should make an effort to secure one of the packing schools which the department intends to establish throughout the province. He did not think there would be any difficulty in securing the required number of pupils.

J. T. Lawrence read an essay on "The Importance of Farmers' Institutes," which was followed by a paper on "Irrigation," by A. B. Tweedle. Both these gentlemen treated their subjects very exhaustively, and they were highly complimented for their able efforts. Both papers will be printed in full in our next issue.

On motion of Messrs. Honsberger and Lawrence, the institute endorsed the request of the Grand Forks Agricultural association for a special government grant of $5000 for the improvement of the fair grounds.

On motion of Messrs. Lawrence and Tweedle, the institute endorsed the board of trade's request for a grant for a foot bridge across the Kettle river at First street.

The institute then adjourned, and the directors met to consider resolutions to be submitted to the Central institute.

Mr. Wormsley, late of Nelson, is now cashier at the Great Northern station in this city.

H. N. Morrison, wife and daughter, of Toronto, arrived in the city yesterday, and will in future make their home in the valley. Mr. Morrison is a brother of our local jeweler. He was attracted to this city last summer by reports of the superior quality of the fruit grown here. After investigating our resources, he purchased a tract of land near the greenhouses. This he has had cleared, and will plant it to fruit trees next spring.

The transfer books will not be closed. The disbursement will amount to $150,000. This is the twelfth dividend of the Granby Consolidated. An incipient blaze was discovered on the roof of Peter Pare's barber shop this morning. Mr. Pare immediately removed his Airedale Terrier to a place of safety, and then extinguished the fire with a teaspoonful of hot water. He has since taken out a life insurance policy on the dog.

Miss Johnstone, matron, and Miss McLean, nurse, of the staff of the Phoenix general hospital, have resigned. Miss Johnstone goes to Honolulu, while Miss McLean will go to Calgary.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stephens, of Calgary, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Stephens' parents in this city. Mr. Stephens was formerly engaged in business in this city. He is one of the star hockey players of Canada. He came here expecting to be able to engage in the exhilarating sport with his old friends, and feels quite chagrined because baseball is better suited to the present climate in the Boundary.

W. B. Fleming has been appointed manager of the Greenwood hockey team. Billy Hood is captain.

The campaign for the substitution of the Canada Temperance Act for the present British Columbia liquor license law, in the counties of Prince Rupert and Chilliwack, ended on Tuesday in a rejection of the proposition of the prohibitionists in both cases, with adverse majorities of 103 and 85 respectively. This was the first attempt at a prohibitory law in the province.

The ratepayers of Greenwood are circulating a petition asking Duncan McIntosh to again be a candidate for the mayoralty.

The West Kootenay Farmers' institute, of Nelson, has decided to petition the government to pass legislation enabling the ranchers of a locality to issue debentures to put in local irrigation systems, the payments to be collected by the government in taxes.

There are now twenty-two men employed on the Greenwood-Phoenix tunnel.

The annual meeting of the Kettle Valley Rifle association will be held in the city hall on Tuesday night, December 20th, at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to attend.

BIG MINING DEAL

Spokane Capitalists Take a Three-Year Lease on Mollie Gibson

The Mollie Gibson group, consisting of the Blue Grouse, Mollie Gibson, Manchuria, Grey Eagle and Irish Nellie mineral claims, situated between Paulson and Coryell, in the Burnt Basin district, has been taken over by a syndicate of Spokane capitalists, on a three-year lease and bond, given by the owners, John B. Singer and John McNelly, of Ross land. The deal was put through by O. M. Harvey, of Nelson. The figure at which the bond was taken in the neighborhood of $60,000. The syndicate taking over the property will, it is understood, subject it to thorough development. The property is not far from the head of Christina lake, and the Paulson-Coryell wagon road passes through it.

Granby official recently visited Rossland in connection with the Cliff mine, lately acquired by the Granby company, and it is said that they were perfectly satisfied with the work being done at the property. They also went through the Le Roi mine. There is an impression in Rossland that if the Granby people can be shown that they can get 400 tons per day of the right kind of fluxing ore from the Le Roi, that property will soon be working again.

The British Columbia Copper company recently paid the C.P.R. $16,000 for freight in one week.

The new stamp milling and concentrating plant at the school of mines at the University of Washington is now in readiness for the short course for practical mining men, which begins on January 4 and lasts for three months. The mines building has been newly equipped with assay furnaces, additional balances, power-driven sampling equipment, drafting tables and all modern laboratory conveniences. No examinations are required for entrance to the short course, and the studies are so arranged that any person interested in mining may follow them regardless of his previous training. There are no charges except for books and materials actually used. A full description of the course may be obtained from Dean Milnor Roberts, University of Washington, Seattle. Instruction is given by seven different departments under the following subjects: The mineral industry, mining, fire assaying, metallurgy, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, mining law, surveying, forge and field trips to mines, mills and smelters.

VALUATION BOARD

Accounts Passed for Work on Midway & Vernon Grade

A Victoria dispatch says that the report of the valuation board assessing the price of the taken-over ten miles of the Midway & Vernon grade and passing the accounts for labor, team hire, and supplies in connection with that abandoned enterprise has been presented to the government. The disbursements provided for in settlement of the accounts are now being made, $63,000 being distributed, which will come as a welcome Christmas box to those interested, many of whom never expected to be paid. The valuers have passed all legitimate claims for payment in full, after authentication and audit. Provision is only made in the empowering legislation under which the board was created for payment of accounts arising in the construction of the ten-mile section from Midway to Erick creek. Other claims aggregating $10,000 or $15,000 are held in respect to that portion of the never completed line out of Rock creek, which has not been taken over by the Kettle Valley line and which that company could not consequently in fairness be asked to satisfy.

Death of L. McAdam

L. McAdam, who recently purchased C. S. Galloway's ranch, and who moved to his property with his wife a couple of weeks ago, died at his home near this city on Thursday of blood poisoning after a brief illness. Deceased was about 35 years of age, and leaves a wife to mourn his loss. He was a native of New Zealand, and a brother of his is now on his way to this country. The funeral will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning from the family residence.

lic matters being eagerly sought after by many of the foremost papers of the country.

Our subject was born at Hill Top House, West Bromick, West Staffordshire, Eng., in March, 1859, being a son of John and Charlotte Beddoe, of that place. He was educated at the Marshall High School and Jackson College and he came to Canada in 1876 and for a time studied law with Chancellor Groyne, of London, Ont. He was a director for a time of the Press Alliance Limited, of London, Eng., and for a short period editor of the Alaska Miner, Juneau. He went from there to Dawson and was editor at different periods of The Dawson Daily News, The Yukon World, and The Yukon Mining Journal and was engaged in several bitter political controversies that attracted much attention in political circles throughout Canada and made our subject quite a number of political enemies. His writing being keenly critical and strongly personal stirred up several sensations and a number of savage reprisals from political opponents.

Earl's Faith In Doctors.

Before leaving India in November the Earl and Countess of Minto intend going on a shooting expedition in the vicinity of Agra. Lord Minto is probably the finest all-round sportsman in the peerage. As a young man at Cambridge he was so devoted to sport that he took his degree in a riding costume covered by an academic gown. Immediately after the ceremony he leaped into a saddle and galloped off to the racecourse, where he arrived just in time to win the University Steeplechase. Ever since then his success as a sportsman has been remarkable. Indeed, there are few outdoor diversions in which he does not excel, for he is a fine snot, a fearless rider, a good oarsman, and a keen angler. As a soldier Lord Minto has been through many rousing scenes. He fought with the Turkish army in 1837, he was with Lord Roberts in Afghanistan two years later, and served as Chief of Staff to Gen. Middleton against Riel in the Canadian Rebellion of 1885. Added to this, he helped to extinguish burning Paris after the Commune, and was implicated with the Carlists on the Spanish frontier. Probably the most extraordinary event in Lord Minto's varied and interesting life, however, was the breaking of his neck, and recovering after having been completely given up by the doctors. Lady Minto was a daughter of the late Gen. Charles Grey, who was a favorite Private Secretary to Queen Victoria. Since her marriage Lady Minto has shared in many of her husband's adventures. Once she journeyed with him from Ottawa to Montreal a distance of over 100 miles in Canadian canoes, and camped out at night. On another occasion she caused a sensation by riding on the cowcatcher of a locomotive in far-away Klondike.

WHY LORDS ARE TORIES.

A Great Many Liberals Have Changed Their Point of View.

In connection with any proposals by the Liberal party for reforming the House of Lords it has always been urged against them that the peers of their creating have no sooner taken their seats in the Upper House than their principles undergo an acute reversal, and they themselves become steady supporters of the status quo, their successors in the peerage becoming frankly Conservative, writes J. K. Lamont in The Graphic. That this tendency is continually at work in the case of most of the Liberal peers admits of practically no argument. Of the members of the House of Lords only seventy-five voted for the budget in November last, as against 350 for its rejection, so we may take the former figure as the voting strength of the Liberal party in the Second Chamber, though one of their political organs claims 93. This danger cannot have been far absent from the minds of those responsible for the ultimate selection of the "five hundred" new peers suggested to be created. The double difficulty of selecting suitable nominees from among the many applicants for the doubtful honor, and of trusting to their "sane-mindedness" when they got to the Upper House, must have gone far towards the present conference. It is extremely doubtful indeed if such a wholesale creation of peers was ever within the actual range of practical politics.

Cynically minded people might find a reason for the reforming conviction of a Liberal peer giving way to Conservatism in the answer of Browning's humbly born Pope, when asked as to why he had taken down his fisherman-father's net. "Son, it has caught the fish." We can scarcely, however, accept that theory as sufficient. Although the Liberal party has for many years been identified with the reform of the Upper House, it is only the extremists of the party who have committed themselves to a policy of wholesale extermination, with which the moderate minds of both the great parties of the state have no sympathy. After all, the division line between Conservative and Liberal is very narrow.

Apart from this conservative outlook there is for the majority of peers, by whichever party created, a more personal and, perhaps, more powerful attitude towards the House of Lords,—the ambition to found a family. As Mr. Jenks tells us, "the desire to hand a great position over to one's children is one of the deepest instincts of average humanity"; and that desire, coupled with a preference for a male heir, is responsible for many a world tragedy, from the patriarchal days of Abraham and Hagar to the imperial days of Caesar Augustus and Scribonia and the heartless conduct of Napoleon to the despised Josephine. It is also a curious fact that the old patriarchal idea of the family has lingered longer in the upper strata of society than in the lower or democratic. The latter, always impatient of control, even as children, owe no obedience to their parents but that exacted by brute force. In the former, and perhaps especially when the head of the family has some distinctive honor, such as a peerage, all the younger branches look up to the possessor of the family honor as the head, the paterfamilias, with an admitted right of moral supervision over the conduct of each; while he in turn is bound to give to all his protection and aid. A striking instance of this occurred a very few years ago, when the Duke of Marlborough, as head of the Churchill family, repudiated aspersions cast by a daily newspaper on Lord Randolph Churchill in the course of a review of the present Home Secretary's record of his father's life. The ambition of Nelson was "a peerage or Westminster Abbey," and so long as human nature is constituted as it is, there will never be any dearth of men with a like ambition.

Only 32 Left of Nob. 600.

There are believed to be only 32 survivors of the rank and file who took part in the historic charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava, and of these 22 are in necessitous circumstances. The oldest is 86 years of age, and but for philanthropic effort he and his companions would have had their last days overshadowed by want. It is thirteen years since T. H. Roberts of 1 and 2 Plough court, E.C., London, established the Balaclava Light Brigade Charge Survivors' Relief Fund. At the banquet then held 74 attended, and it was discovered that several of them were spending their last days in workhouses, forgotten and neglected. In the intervening years more than half these heroes have gone to their rest. The work of aiding the veterans lost a sympathizer and supporter in the death of Florence Nightingale. The money which goes to these neglected heroes is well spent. They are sent weekly pensions by post, and when at length the "Last Post" sounds each of the old men receives a decent funeral.

YOU CAN SEE HOW IT HEALS

No Question or Doubt as to the Healing Power of

Dr. Chase's Ointment

To people who have used internal treatment in an effort to cure eczema it is almost beyond belief what benefit can be obtained by a few applications of this soothing, healing ointment.

It is seldom that the cause of eczema can be determined, but one thing is certain, the itching must be stopped and the sores healed up.

These results are secured by the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. The itching is relieved almost instantly, and you will be surprised at the healing which will take place overnight.

A little patience and persistent treatment with Dr. Chase's Ointment will give you more practical and definite results than a whole lot of dosing with internal medicines. You can see how the Ointment heals. The other is guesswork.

Mr. Geo. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes:—"I wish to communicate to you the great benefit I received from using Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. For years I suffered with a great skin disease on my head, a sort of eczema. I tried four doctors, giving each a fair trial, but got no better. In fact the disease spread to my left arm.

"I saw Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised and began using it. Persistent use of this treatment has entirely cured me, and I give you a statement of my case with pleasure, as I hope thereby to induce some other sufferer to try the same Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Because this ointment has made its world-wide reputation by curing the most severe and long-standing cases of eczema and piles is no reason why you should overlook its scores of uses in the relief of itching and irritation of the skin.

"Real letters, darling?" inquired mamma, smiling. "But wherever did you get the real letters from?"

"Out of your wardrobe drawer," responded Willie. "Those old ones tied up with pink ribbon."—Answers.

JEWELLED BOOKS.

Volumes Bound in Gold and Set With Precious Stones.

There was an ancient legend to the effect that the famous "Golden Fleece" was a book covered in sheepskin, teaching the transmutation of the baser metals into pure gold.

The Roman scrolls were adorned with bosses of gold or gems, and their leaves having been smoothed with pumice were scented with cedar oil. The Byzantine emperors were great patrons of books and "the Byzantine coatings" or book covers were famous for their magnificence; they were of gold, silver, copper, gilt, set with jewels, and these massive tones were carried in imperial processions.

"The Silver Book" of Ulphilas, Bishop of Moesia, a translation of the Gospels, was rebuked by St. Jerome. "Your books are covered with precious stones," said he, "while Christ died naked, before the gate of His temple"; which has been compared to the saying of Sadi, the Persian poet, concerning the Mohammedan scriptures: "The Koran was given to reform the conduct of men, and men have only thought of embellishing its pages."

The books produced in the early centuries of the middle ages were of remarkable beauty, inwardly and outwardly; religious manuscripts were enriched by illuminations within, while their covers were of silver, gold and enamel encrusted with gems. They were bestowed as splendid gifts by bishops and princes on monastic houses and churches, where they were laid on the altar or chained to a desk.

Such chained books were named "Catenati"; a rough outer covering protecting them of dark skin, or seal-skin, and later of "chrevotin," a sort of leather, or "sandal," a coarse silk. Such coverings were also called "chemises," as a "chemise of sandal wood." These rare books were also placed in caskets, in shrines or "capsae"; in Ireland they were laid in satchels, otherwise named "polaires," or "Tiagha Ubur," and the Celtic bookbinding possessed a peculiar beauty of its own.

There were secular bookbinders in the middle ages who gradually formed themselves into guilds of craftsmen, but the monks alone united the arts of composition, calligraphy, illumination, bookbinding, setting of jewels, enamelling and work on leather, silver and gold in one artist. The monasteries of Kenilworth and Sitten were granted unlimited rights of hunting that they might obtain "stag hide" for binding their books.

The European princes were great book lovers, and songs of their collections are famous, though now dispersed far and wide, sometimes reappearing as treasures cast up on the shores of time in some museum or library. Charlemagne was a great patron of bookbinding, surrounding himself with Italian workmen; Theodind, Queen of the Lombards, presented a magnificent Gospel, overlaid with gold, silver and jewels, to the Cathedral of Monza.

The Dukes of Burgundy were renowned for their libraries. The "Boccaccio" of Charles the Bold was bound in red velvet set with five large rubies; another Burgundian book was velvet-bound set with 58 pearls of great size, with a small "silver instrument" for turning the pages. "Pippes" were also attached to some of these costly tomes; they were little bars of silver or gold, forming "supports for markers," sometimes the "pippe" was set with rubies, while the numerous markers were adorned with pearls. The library of Philip the Good of Burgundy in the 15th century surpassed all the European book collections of the time; it contained nearly 10,000 volumes, nearly all richly illuminated on vellum, with bindings of damask satin and velvet encrusted with jewels, with clasps of chased gold and gems. Bruges, where the ducal court was held, was filled with literary craftsmen, and some of their splendid productions are still to be seen in the Belgian Royal Library.

Henry VI. of England possessed a fine library. Lady Jane Grey, Mary Queen of Scots and Catherine de Medicis were all book lovers; the Scottish Queen usually had her books bound in black, but one notable volume was covered in red velvet, clasped with platinum and studded with jewels.

In 1853 the French King, Henry III., passed a law prohibiting the wearing of jewels by the middle class, with special permission to adorn their missals and devotional books with diamonds; they might have four diamonds on their book covers, the nobles five and the princes any number. In the middle of the 18th century, when Buda was sacked by the Turks, magnificent manuscripts were ruined for their jewels.

Freemasonry in India.

Lord Amphilil, speaking at the banquet following the consecration of the Star of India Lodge at Freemason's Hall, London, said he was profoundly impressed with the importance of Freemasonry in India. It was absolutely the only effective means that existed in India for promoting social feeling among all classes in India, whether Englishman, Hindu, Mahomedan, or Parsi.

The Unknown.

A Frenchman attended a Burns celebration. At the end of the jollification a friend asked him if he had enjoyed himself. "Why," said he, with the characteristic French shrug and upturned hands, "it was magnificent. The haggis was good, the whiskey was very good, the singing was good, but who was Mr. Auld Langsyne? Was he a Scottish chief?"

HOW TO CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A Great Sufferer from Indigestion Tells How She Was Cured

Stomach trouble is a general name for all forms of indigestion, whether great pain after eating, belching of wind, heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, or the sharp pains that often make you think you have heart trouble. There are two things noticeable in indigestion. One is that doctors always find indigestion a prominent symptom in a bloodless run-down state. The other, that sufferers usually find relief when a tonic is taken that restores the general health. With out a doubt stomach trouble is simply stomach weakness, and the cure is to make the stomach strong enough to digest food without trouble. Any other treatment is patchwork and cannot cure. As the processes of digestion are controlled by the blood and nerves, the stomach that is too weak to digest food needs a tonic to give it strength. And in all the world there is no better tonic than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new, rich red blood, tone the nerves and so strengthen the stomach and all the bodily functions. We submit the following as proof that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble. Mrs. John Graf, Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., says: "For years I suffered great torture from indigestion. I took many different medicines, but instead of benefitting me I was growing worse all the time, till my stomach got so bad I could neither eat nor drink without pain. Even cold water would cause me suffering. Nor did I get any relief when the stomach was empty, as I still suffered from a horrid burning pain. I went to Edmonton and consulted one of the best doctors there, but he told me that he could do nothing for me, that all I could do was to diet. For some time I took only hot water and a small piece of brown bread for my meals, but even that did not help me and I got so weak and run down that I despaired of ever being well again. I bought a so-called electric belt and wore it for six months, but it was simply money wasted. Then one day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did not know they were intended to cure indigestion, but being assured that they were, decided to try them. I soon found the Pills helping me, but my condition was so bad when I began using them that I continued taking the Pills for about five months before I felt that I was completely cured. Then I could eat any kind of food, and although more than two years have passed since my cure, I have not since had the least sign of the trouble. I can most heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from this terrible trouble."

Where Men are "Pretty."

A British investigator is ungallant enough to state that the reason why women are as a rule of a beauty not attained by man lies in the fact that they are more indolent and not so prone to "exercise their brains" as men are. Intellectual labors and assiduous attention to business are, according to this authority, matters extremely prejudicial to the development of physical beauty.

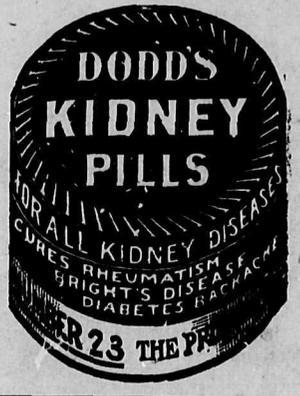

In support of his theory this Briton points to the Zaros, a tribe of British India. Among them, it appears, women hold the place that in other countries is pre-empted by men. The Zaro woman manages the affairs of state, engages in business on her own account and does not restrict herself in the narrow field of woman elsewhere. On the other hand, the Zaro man has nothing to do but cook the meals and look after the children. The natural result of all this, says our scientist, is that the men of this singular tribe are "very pretty" and the women unusually plain.

Has Thirteen Toes.

A hen, the property of a gentleman at Pannal, has hatched a chicken with quite a superior scratching equipment. The happy bird has three legs, the third of which has two feet, and the toes total thirteen. Despite this unlucky number, the chicken so far appears to be strong and healthy, and uses each of its three legs effectively.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1910

The Grand Forks climate is in a class by itself, and it is a class that can be rated No. 1. It has no competitor in any other section of Canada. Here it is a week before Christmas, and the green garden grass is in urgent need of amputation by the refractory lawn mower! It is certainly classy—excuse the slang; we meant to say classical—weather.

The municipal political pot has not even commenced to simmer yet. The weather at present is evidently too warm for such violent exercise. But there is no reason why it should not soon start to boil. To obtain a good civic government, the citizens must take an interest in local politics; and a good local government is of more importance to the rate-payers of the city than a good provincial or federal government.

There is too much money spent in attempting to attain foolish objects. Millions of dollars have been squandered, and hundreds of lives lost, in the search for the north pole—and yet none of us would like to make an affidavit that it has really been discovered. The same tragedy is now being enacted in an endeavor to reach the south pole. The finding of half a poles will not benefit the world as much as the discovery of a prospect hole in the Boundary country would.

A newspaper has been started by the inmates of the Mattawan (N.Y.) insane asylum. Judging from telegraphic reports, the paper's salutory is not half as crazy as the majority of political speeches.

NEWS OF THE CITY

E. B. Cale, an expert poultryman of Vancouver, addressed the members of the Grand Forks Poultry association in the city hall on Monday night, his subject being "Mating and Breeding." There was a large attendance, and the practical advice given by the speaker was highly appreciated by all.

A board of investigation and conciliation, under the Industrial Disputes Act, has been appointed to inquire into matters in dispute between the Crows Nest Pass Coal company and its employees.

The prize fight in Phoenix last night between V. McDavis, of this city, and Scotty Lackie, of Phoenix, advertised as a 15-round contest, was, it is said, stopped by the mayor in the fifth round. Lackie was given the decision. A special train was chartered from this city to Phoenix last night at a cost of $150. Three persons made the journey of the hill. Prize fights sometimes come high, but apparently some people must have them.

Dr. Kingston returned on Thursday from a week's trip to the coast cities.

G. W. Wooster, treasurer of the Granby company, made a business trip to Nelson this week.

The Misses H. and K. Draper have resigned from the staff of public school teachers. Miss Huestes and Miss Elliott have been engaged by the school board to take their places.

W. B. Bower, of the Eastern Townships bank, is confined to his home by illness.

City Clerk McCallum has recovered from his recent illness.

Monday, December 26, and Monday, January 2, have been proclaimed public holidays by the provincial government.

John McKie has been confined to his home by illness during the past week.

The public school closed at noon today for the Christmas holidays. An excellent program was carried out in Miss Olding's room. A large number of parents were present. They all expressed satisfaction at the able manner in which the little children were managed by their teacher.

F. W. McLane and Norman McLeod, of Greenwood, and S. T. Larsen, of Rock Creek, attended a meeting of the Boundary Chapter of Royal Arch Masons in this city last night.

Archie Scott returned to the city this week from Lloydminster, Alta., where he has taken up a homestead.

Sure Signs of Kidney Trouble

If your back is constantly aching and if you experience dull shooting pains, your kidneys are out of order. If your urine is thick and cloudy or your passages frequent scanty and painful, your kidneys and bladder are out of order. Neglect quickly brings on rheumatism, diabetes, lumbago, sciatica, etc.

Mrs. John Wagner, of 110 Hollis St., Halifax, N. S., says: "Dull shooting pains would catch me across the small part of my back and extend into my shoulders and neck, often causing me to suffer with severe headaches and spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes and everything would turn black. I would fall to the floor and be unable to get up again without assistance. A friend told me of Booth's Kidney Pills and I began their use. The first box gave me relief and I am now well and strong."

All druggists sell Booth's Kidney Pills, 50c a box with a guarantee to relieve or your money back. They are the world's greatest specific for kidney and bladder trouble. Postpaid from the proprietors, The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by H. E. Woodland & Co.

Falling Hair

Mrs. Jas. Harris, of Wappella, Sask., says:

"I have found Parisian Sage to be the best scalp and hair tonic and dressing I have ever used. My hair had been coming out in combs full and was very dry and brittle and the scalp was always itching and full of dandruff. I have used two bottles of Parisian Sage and it has stopped my hair from falling, the itching and dandruff have disappeared and my hair is fine and soft and glossy. I would not be without this fine hair tonic for many times the price."

For women, men or children Parisian Sage is without any doubt the finest preparation for the hair. Daintily perfumed, it is free from grease or stickiness, and ought to be where every member of the family could use it daily. Large bottle 50 cents from all druggists or from the proprietors, The Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package. Sold and guaranteed by H. E. Woodland & Co.

Free Seed Distribution

By instruction of the honorable minister of agriculture a distribution is being made this season by samples of superior sorts of grain and potatoes to Canadian farmers for the improvement of seed. The stock for distribution has been secured mainly from the experimental farms at Indian Head, Sask., Brandon, Man., and Ottawa, Ont. The samples consist of oats, spring wheat, barley, field peas, Indian corn (for ensilage only), and potatoes. The quantity of oats sent is 4 lbs., and of wheat or barley 5 lbs., sufficient in each case to sow one-twentieth of an acre. The samples of Indian corn, peas and potatoes weigh 3 lbs. each. A quantity of each of the following varieties has been secured for this distribution:

Oats—Banner, Abundance, Danish Island, Wide-Awake, Thousand Dollar, Improved Ligowo—all white varieties.

Wheat—Red varieties, Marquis and Early Red Fife (early beardless sorts of high baking strength), Red Fife (beardless), Preston and Huron (early, bearded). White varieties, White Fife (beardless), Bobs (early, beardless).

Barley—Six-rowed, Mensury and Manchurian (a selection from Mensury). Two-rowed, Standwell and Invincible.

Field Peas—Arthur and Golden Vine.

Indian Corn (for ensilage)—Early sorts, Angel of Midnight, Compton's Early and Longfellow. Late varieties, Selected Leaming, Early Mastodon, and White Cap Yellow Dent.

Potatoes—Early varieties, Rochester Rose, and Irish Cobbler. Medium to late varieties, Gold Coin, Carman No. 1, and Money Maker. The later varieties are, as a rule, more productive than the earlier kind.

Only one sample can be sent to each applicant, hence if an individual receives a sample of oats he cannot also receive one of wheat, barley, peas, Indian corn or potatoes. Applications on printed cards or sheets, or lists of names from one individual, or applications for more than one sample for one household, cannot be entertained. The samples will be sent free of charge through the mail.

Applications should be addressed to the Dominion Cerealist, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, and may be sent in any time from the 1st of December to the 10th of February, after which the lists will be closed, so that the samples asked for may be sent out in good time. Applicants should mention the variety they prefer, with a second sort as an alternative. Applications will be filled in the order in which they are received, so long as the supply of seed lasts. Farmers are advised to apply early to avoid possible disappointment. Those applying for Indian corn or potatoes should bear in mind that the corn is not usually distributed until April, and that potatoes cannot be mailed until danger from frost in transit is over. No postage is required on mail matter addressed to the Experimental Farm, Ottawa?

W. M. SAUNDERS,
Director of Experimental Farms.

Some people would rather take the first train and change cars than wait ten minutes for a train that goes through without change.

Mi-o-na, an Excellent Stomach Remedy

Mrs. J. R. Whyte, Killarney, Man., who says: "I have found great comfort and relief from Mi-o-na. I had been greatly troubled for months with heartburn and a heavy burning feeling in my stomach. A fair meal would disturb me so much that I would have to sit up at night—the food would sour on my stomach and form a gas which would cause belching and dizzy spells. These distressing troubles disappeared after using Mi-o-na, and I shall always speak highly of this excellent stomach remedy."

Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble over written. It gives quick relief and cures permanently. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Two years ago, the doctor made forty-four calls on me and then said he had done all he could for me. I was suffering with intense Kidney Trouble and severe inflammation had set in. Two other doctors were consulted and agreed that nothing could be done to help me.

On the recommendation of a neighbor, I took "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me. To-day, I take "Fruit-a-tives" as my only medicine. I am in excellent health and "Fruit-a-tives" is the medicine that cured me after I had been at death's door for months.

I am glad to be able to give you this testimonial. It may benefit some other woman suffering as I suffered, as I believe that I would not be alive to-day had I not used "Fruit-a-tives."

Sloppy, leaky wooden troughs, or clean, durable Concrete?

Wooden drinking troughs are about as reliable as the weather.

They are short-lived and require replacing every few years—not to mention continual patching to keep them in repair.

The best of wood cannot withstand, for long, constant dampness and soaking. Its tendency to rapid decay soon shows itself in leaks and stagnant pools of water around trough.

Contrast with this the durability, cleanliness and well-ordered appearance of Concrete.

THE TRAPPED DESPERADO.

A Woman Enters into the Work of Catching Him.

By MARY EDMONDS.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Half a dozen men were scrambling over rocks, fallen trees, underbrush and such debris as will get wedged in a narrow defile, slowly making their way upward and onward. Coming to an open space just big enough to hold a 10 by 12 cabin, they saw a woman standing before the door watching their approach.

"Have any o' you men seen Hank Speer down that a-way?" she asked.

"No," replied one of the party; "we haven't saw Speer."

The woman looked disappointed. "What y' want with him?" asked the other.

"I want to kill him."

"What's he done to you?"

"What's he done? Done 'nough. He brought me up here, tellin' me he had a fine house and lots o' sheep. I hadn't never been here and didn't know nothin' at all about what kind of a kentry it was. This mis'able but's the fine house he was talkin' about, and the sheep is all up on the divide. They haven't been tamed yet. I tole him what I thort of a man who'd treat a woman that a-way. He jist tuk up a piece o' brushwood and was goin' to brain me with it when I lit out. He follered me a spell, but it's mighty thick up here, and he lost me. When I come back he was gone. Say, y' sure y' hain't seen nothin' of him down thar?"

"Air you Speer's wife?"

"Waal, there warn't no un to marry us when we come up here."

"Do you want us to find him for you?"

"Reckon I do, and when y' find him I want y' to hold him while I shoot him."

The men consulted in an undertone; then Quigley, who had carried on the conversation thus far, continued it.

"We're out suspectin' and don't want to waste no time, but if one kin do anything to sarve a lone woman as has been treated bad we don't mind doin' it—that is, if it don't take up too much time. Speer hain't gone down below, 'cause if he had we'd 'a' met him. He couldn't go up the divide on either side o' the crick, 'cause it would be too hard climbin'. Consenkently he must 'a' gone up the can'on. How far is it up to the top?"

"I dunno. Speer jist brought me here a spell ago."

"We kin git him for you, no doubt about that, for the can'on ends in a cliff he can't git over."

"Y' mustn't let on yer after him. He knows all about this yere gulch, and if he knowed y' wanted him he mought find a way out y' never heered about."

There was further consultation between the men while the woman stood on her porch waiting. She was an angular creature with frowzy hair and a dirty calico dress.

"How would it do," asked Quigley, "for you to go after him, pertend you was sorry for what you'd said to him and bring him back to yer cabin? We kin hide about here, and as soon as you git him inside we mought see that he done y' no harm, you doin' what you like with him."

"I wouldn't do it all. Reckon he's huntin' for me now to kill me."

While the men continued to confer the woman appeared to be thinking.

"I tell y' what," she said presently. "Ef one o' you'll lend me yer clothes I might go up the can'on, steal around Hank Speer, git above him and then, showin' up as a man, drive him down into yer clutches."

"That sounds well," said Quigley, and he asked the others what they thought of the proposition.

All agreed that since they were to help the woman she should do as much as possible in the matter. None of them seemed to relish climbing the rough ground between them and the upper end of the canyon. The man nearest the woman's height divested himself of his outer garments, and she retired and put them on.

"You better tell us," said Quigley, "before y' go what colored clothes Speer's wearin', so's we'll know the difference between y'."

"He hain't got but one woolen shirt and one pair breeches. The shirt is blue; the breeches is corduroy. His hat is black."

"All right," responded Quigley. "Take notice, boys, that the woman's shirt and breeches are gray and her hat almost the same color. We needn't mistake one for t'other."

The woman took a rifle from the hut and soon disappeared up the narrow gorge, leaving the men in occupation of the cabin.

"Waal," said Quigley, "reckon we got him purty sartin and without much trouble. A wildcat couldn't git out o' this can'on above us, and when he comes down all we got to do is to take him."

"We're in luck, sheriff," said Tom Bowles. "It's woth $100 apiece to climb over these rocks and underbrush. Y' done a cute trick in gittin' the woman's help. Considerin' we don't git nothin' but thanks for the job, I don't mind leavin' it to her."

"She may shoot him and save us the trouble o' hangin' him," said Enoch Darby, the man who had exchanged clothes.

"How d' y' know," asked Abe Williams, "she ain't foolin' us and goin' up thar to help him out in the fix he's in?"

"Oh, she's had a hard time with him," said the sheriff. "The women these jayhawkers take up with always do. Most of the men I've taken has been given away by their pardners. But it doesn't matter in this case. We've got him penned up in a place a painter couldn't git out of, and I don't see what she can do to help him if she wants to."

For two hours the sheriff's posse waited developments. Then a shot reverberated up the canyon.

"What'd I tell y'?" exclaimed Quigley. "The woman's tryin' to kill him."

"Like enough he's tryin' to kill her," said Darby.

"The kentry 'd be well rid o' both of 'em," put in Williams. "The women o' this kind is w'ose 'n the men."

The party listened for another shot, but heard none. They passed the time debating the probabilities concerning the one that had been fired. Some supposed the man had killed the woman, while others maintained that, she being in man's dress, he would not know her as his woman, whereas she would know him. Therefore, there being but one shot, it was probable she had caught sight of him and killed him.

"I'll bet any man $10," said Darby, "she's back within half an hour and reports him dead."

"If she does," said Williams, "I won't believe her. Easiest thing in the world for her to throw us off the track that a-way."

Abe Darby retorted, "Y' wouldn't believe Speer was dead if y' seen him lyin' before y' with a hole in his head."

"Not if a woman had anything to do with it," snarled Abe.

"Abe's right," said Tom Bowles. "Nobody can't tell nothin' about what a woman's a-goin' to do. My opinion is that this villain has treated his woman pretty much as she says he has, but it's my opinion, too, that instead of killin' him or runnin' him for us she'll git him out if she can."

"I'd like to know how she's a-goin' to do it," Quigley remarked earnestly. "Ef he kin git out o' the can'on at all he kin do it as well without her as with her. We got the bulge on him, seein' he's built his cabin on the only outlet. There's no pass on either side of us that a cat could get over."

It was not long after this that a stone was heard rolling a short distance up the canyon, leaping over rocks, thumping against tree trunks and finally falling into the creek. Every man jumped to his feet, seized the weapon he had laid aside and cocked it. They waited several minutes, when a shot rang out, and, looking up at a ledge on the opposite side of the canyon from that on which the bowlder had rolled, they saw a figure in light gray clothes such as had been lent to the woman pointing a rifle toward the spot from which the stone had rolled.

"Come on, boys!" shouted Quigley. "He's up there where she's p'intin' the gun."

Every man started up the canyon toward the spot indicated. Another shot rang out from the rifle on the ledge, after which the posse entered the brush and saw no more of the figure that fired it. Loose stones and dirt were dislodged as if by some one hurrying away. Quigley and his men pursued on, but the fugitive kept ahead of them. Finally they chased him into a pocket from which there was no escape. A figure in a dark blue shirt and corduroy trousers stood on a rock holding up his hands in token of surrender. Weapons were lowered, and the party advanced.

"You cussed galoots!" cried Abe Williams. "It's the woman."

True enough she had changed clothes with the man she had volunteered to drive into their clutches, he had pretended to fire at himself to get them out of their position, and as soon as they had gone he had descended, taken the only available outlet past his cabin and was now running like a deer to a more open country. He had got too great a start from them to warrant their trying to overtake him, and they were not sufficiently energetic to make the attempt.

"Yer a mighty cute woman," said Quigley to her who had fooled him.

"Y' got t' git up purty early in the mornin' to ketch Mag Speer a-nappin'."

"Y' are married then?"

"Reckon I am married. Hank and I been married fifteen years."

"I tole y'," growled Abe Williams, "ef there was a woman in the case y'd git beat."

Grave of Maurice.

The Rev. John Frederick Denison Maurice, one of the most influential thinkers and social reformers of the middle of the last century, and a friend of Tennyson and Kingsley, passed away April 1, 1872, and was buried at Highgate. Yet, according to the Rev. J. Capel Hanbury, his grave cannot now be discovered.

"Some time ago," says Mr. Hanbury, writing to The Guardian, "I made a pilgrimage to Highgate cemetery to visit the grave of my reverend teacher, Professor F. D. Maurice. After considerable discussion as to the spelling of the name, the clerk gave me a ticket showing the situation and number of the grave. It was at the upper end of the cemetery, where the grass was high and the paths overgrown."

"After a long and fruitless search, thinking that my old eyes were at fault, I engaged the services of two of the workmen of the cemetery, and together we traversed the whole area indicated on my ticket. All in vain; the grave could not be found. It was poor consolation to be told by the clerk that no one ever asked where Mr. Maurice was buried, and it made me sad to think that the last earthly resting-place of a man to whom the Church of England is under such inestimable obligations should seem to be neglected and forgotten."

Commenting on the pain that will be caused to many by the fruitless search for the grave of Maurice, The Guardian recalls the inquiry directed to him by a lady, who asked, "Shall we know each other in Heaven?" to which he replied with the question: "Do we know each other on earth?" There are probably some of his friends who will attempt to rectify the lack of identification in Highgate.

Soldiers Were Stung.

At one of Britain's most important foreign forts the soldiers were once badly trapped, says a London paper in an article on the present spy scare in England.

It was known that a Teutonic spy was in the vicinity, bent on making plans, and so the sentry on a magazine, one moonlight night, kept eager watch, and soon was startled by a loud rustling in the adjacent trees. Going cautiously forward, he suddenly observed the figure of a man perched high on the bough of a tree, half hidden by the leaves.

The sentry's first impulse was to use the business-end of his bayonet; on second thought, he determined to constrain his captive to his uncomfortable perch all night. The idea was thoroughly to the taste of the relieving sentries, each of whom, during his two hours' duty, stood right under the tree, gazing exultantly at the figure aloft, and indulging in satirical remarks, anything but complimentary or consoling.

At dawn, a triumphant guard proceeded to dislodge the captive. He responded not to their taunts; he did not budge an inch. A private at once climbed aloft, and, in doing so, shook down a lifelike effigy!

By this clever ruse, the spy had effectually diverted attention whilst acquiring the information he required, and departed.

Two Days.

Oh, such a splendid outdoors day!
The sky is blue, the world is free,
The wild wind comes to romp with me.
To dine my kites
To treat-up heights
And snatch my hat and whirl away.
But yet I love an indoors day—
Don't you when everything is still—
For then I read my books until
The sun gets low
And shadows grow
And dance along the wall to play.

THE IMPERIAL CORPS.

King Edward's Horse Made Up From All Over Greater Britain.

It is not perhaps sufficiently known that there is in England a regiment which is a living symbol of the spirit of imperial unity — King Edward's Horse. Only a few days ago the regiment entertained at dinner the Queen's Own Canadian Rifles.

Started shortly after the South African war to commemorate the services of the Dominions in the war, the regiment was first known as the King's Colonists. It was considered that the finest memorial the overseas Dominions could raise to the late King was one to which they contributed their personal service. For that reason the present King quite recently approved the name of King Edward's Horse, the King's Over-Sea Dominions Regiment (Imperial Service). King George, who when Prince of Wales was hon. colonel of the regiment, is now its colonel-in-chief. The commanding officer is the able and active Lieutenant-Colonel H. Fortescue, for many years commander of the 17th Lancers.

King Edward's Horse is the one really imperial regiment in existence. It is recruited from over-seas sources, and for this reason has detachments in those centres where young men from the Dominions are mostly found — London and Liverpool—while there are detachments at Oxford and Cambridge which include a number of Rhodes scholars. The roll includes officers, non-commissioned officers and troopers not only from India, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, but also from Jamaica, Barbados, Trinidad, Bermuda, Bahamas, Mauritius, Burma, Ceylon, Hong Kong, Uganda, Tasmania, the Straits Settlements, and British Guiana.

The regiment is recruited entirely from men with the following qualifications who are resident in Great Britain for a period of not less than four years:—The parents must be resident or have been born in overseas Dominions or Crown Colonies; the recruit must have been born in the over-seas Dominions or Crown Colonies, or have resided there at least five years. The enlistment is for four years, but this can be curtailed at the discretion of the commanding officer in the event of the man returning home for good.

All the members are under a liability to serve, if ordered with the regiment as a whole, anywhere in the world in case of a national emergency. Uniforms, arms, horses, saddlery, and traveling expenses are provided free to non-commissioned officers and troopers.

The objects of this imperial regiment are numerous: To link together the local forces of the Empire under the conception of a common duty to serve that Empire; as a means to the above end to bring together in its ranks young colonials from all the state, temporarily resident in Great Britain, under the above-mentioned liability, to serve wherever the defence of the Empire may require them (the Territorial forces are for the defence of the British Isles); to give such an efficient elementary military education to young colonials temporarily resident in England as may fit them at once on their return to their homes to serve effectively in their local forces; to create in this regiment, representing all the local forces of the Empire, a visible symbol of the Empire's unity for purposes of mutual defence; to form a rendezvous for all duly accredited members of colonial local forces visiting the Mother Country.

The regiment has still further aims. "We are allied since the last Colonial Conference," says the commanding officer, "to a number of over-seas regiments—to the first nine and to the 18th Regiments of Australian Light Horse, also the Cape Light Horse, and in Canada to the 8th Princess Louise New Brunswick Hussars. We hope eventually to organize a system of transfer between these allied regiments whereby, for instance, if a man left King Edward's Horse to return to Australia he would be enabled, ipso facto, to join one of our allied regiments there. This as yet is a pious and sentimental aspiration. But we have hopes that the scheme may soon prove workable. Ample financial support of late has been forthcoming from all quarters of the world, and we are hopeful of largely increasing the strength of the regiment in the near future."

To make a corps like King Edward's Horse thoroughly efficient a continual flow of recruits must be maintained, since a very large proportion of them come to England for three or four years only and then return to their respective homes in the over-seas Dominions. Every young colonial in these isles is urged to make it his ambition to join King Edward's Horse.

Some More Natures Fakes Exposed.

An English scientist who has been observing the habits of the cobra in India, has declared that all stories as to the reptile's love of music are fakes. He admits that music will bring the cobra's head out of his hiding place, but also he says that any kind of high-keyed noise loud enough will act in the same manner in bringing it from its burrow. Beating with a switch on the ground, rattling a chain, or any high-pitched sounds catch its ears and curiosity causes the snake to do the rest. It pays no attention to the pounding of the bass drum or to the lower notes of the flute. As to the reptile's power to fascinate birds with its eyes, Dr. Barnard brands the statement as imaginary.

WHERE MANUEL FLED

FORTRESS OF GIBRALTAR AND ITS MILITARY GOVERNOR.

Key to the Mediterranean Was Once a Most Untidy City, But It Has Been Renovated and Is Now Remarkable for its Cleanliness—It Is an Old Fortress and Was Military Base for Saracens.

When King Manuel fled from Portugal he quite naturally sought refuge at Gibraltar for the simple reason that it was the safest as well as the nearest place which offered him protection. Furthermore, since Great Britain is supposed to have guaranteed the integrity of Manuel's rule it was probably as wise a move as he could have made. Gibraltar is a strongly fortified point commanding the entrance to the Mediterranean Sea and it is regarded as the greatest naval stronghold of Great Britain. Besides a small town at its foot, it consists of a mountainous rock towering, at its highest point, about 1,493 feet above the sea level. The rock is perforated by numerous caverns, the largest of which, called the Halls of St. Michael, have an entrance about 1,000 feet above the sea.

The climate of Gibraltar is, as a rule, healthful, though the period from July to November, when the greatest heat prevails, is attended with some risks to visitors from northern and cooler climates. Of late years, the energetic measures adopted by the engineer officers to improve the drainage, coupled with stringent police regulations, have greatly diminished the death rate. Gibraltar is as remarkable now for its cleanly appearance as, before 1814, it was for being one of the dirtiest towns in Europe. Since 1704 Gibraltar has been a British possession. The first record of its natural strength being used for defensive or aggressive purposes was in 711 A.D. When the Saracens passing into Spain under Tarik Ibn-Zeyad, a general of the Saracen forces, for the conquest of the Visigothic kingdom, fortified it, as a base of operations, and a ready point of access from the Barbary coast. From this chieftain it took the name Gebel-Tarik, or Hill of Tarik, of which Gibraltar is a corruption.

The population of the town, including a garrison of approximately 6,000 men, is about 30,000. It is ruled by both civil and military authority and the governor-general, who at present is Sir Archibald Hunter, is also commander and chief of the garrison. For reasons of military secrecy it is forbidden to photograph the rock, but photos are frequently made from a strip of land known as "Neutral Ground," separating Spain from Gibraltar.

Reynolds and Two Pictures.

Sir Joshua Reynolds having become a great man, it was but natural that the town council of Plympton, near Plymouth, where he was born, should elect him mayor. In acknowledgment of the honor he painted a fine portrait of himself and presented it to the corporation. He wrote to a friend asking him to see that the picture was hung in a good light. This friend not only did so, but hung a poor picture alongside of it in order to heighten the merits of Sir Joshua's work by contrast. Then he informed Reynolds of all the trouble he had taken. In thanking him Sir Joshua told him that the poor picture had been painted by himself (Reynolds) in early life.

Only the Young Ones Did.

While the matinee hat problem is still unsolved in many parts of the Empire, the social conundrum was simply and expeditiously dealt with in Australia two years ago. Complaints had been showered upon the theatrical managers to such an extent that they arranged a conference. The following Saturday night, at all the theatres in Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, and Perth there was thrown on a cinematograph screen the following notice: "Ladies under 50 years of age are requested to remove their hats." The theatrical managers up country varied the request according to their taste. At Ballarat the formula was: "Ladies take your hats off, but keep your hair on!" Thus was the "ridiculous hat" killed in one night throughout the Commonwealth.

Fruit Packing Schools

In accordance with the policy of the department of agriculture, which is to educate fruit growers in the production of the highest class of fruit, the fruit branch of the department last winter introduced a series of five packing schools for the teaching of the proper and most up-to-date methods of packing and wrapping fruit. This work proved very popular, and undoubtedly met the needs of the districts in which the packing schools were placed. Fruit growers of the province will therefore be pleased to learn that this work will be continued and further extended this year so as to establish these schools in fruit districts of the province where desired, and where a sufficient number of pupils can be secured.

For this purpose Mr. Berkeley, of Vernon, and Mr. Gibb, of Kelowna, have been secured. Mr. Berkeley was this year in charge of a branch of the Okanagan Fruit union, and packed the first prize mixed carload at the Canadian National Apple show at Vancouver, which also won second prize sweepstakes. He conducted four packing schools for the department last year, and gave extremely good satisfaction. Mr. Gibb, of the Kelowna Farmers' exchange, has had charge of their fruit packing this year, and had the distinction of packing the winning sweepstakes car of Jonathans at the Canadian National Apple show. He also gave excellent satisfaction in packing school work for the department last year in the Okanagan. The standing and experience of these men is such as to guarantee the highest class of instruction and the fullest satisfaction in the work they undertake, and the fruit growers of the province will feel that in securing these men the department of agriculture has been fortunate.

From many districts in the province the demand for packing schools is quite urgent, and it is only by spreading out the money available for the work that even a part of them can be accommodated. The amount of fruit to be packed increases very rapidly each year, and localities now benefit by packing schools, where a year or two ago this work was quite unnecessary.

To bring before the public the method in which this work will be administered, a circular has been issued outlining the terms on which packing schools will be arranged for in any district. This circular will be placed in the hands of a responsible body, to whom the local administration of the packing school, in the way of securing the requisite pupils, fruit, a packing room, etc., will be left. This body will also be required to guarantee a minimum attendance of pupils. This plan has been pronounced very satisfactory by organizations in a number of districts.

The department of agriculture provides the instructor and pays his expenses. The department will bear the cost of packing paper, fruit, and other legitimate expenses, except that of packing tables, which will be left at each point after the school is finished.

The responsible body in each case, whether a municipal body, farmers' institute or fruit growers' association, will be required to guarantee a minimum of twelve pupils, but not more than fifteen, at a fee of $3 each, to take twelve lessons of two and a half hours a lesson; in other words, one week. In a limited number of districts a double packing school can be arranged for, in which the minimum guarantee will be twenty-four pupils, but not more than thirty, for the same period. Arrangements can be made for an evening or late afternoon public demonstration on apple packing for the benefit of the district at large.

About three boxes per pupil is necessary. The hardier varieties, such as Ben Davis and Gano, are preferred. Fruit must be in fairly good condition, but need not be graded. Associations should at once secure the necessary fruit, or if none is now left in the district, this should be stated at the time application is made, and the department will look after it.

Two table 16x4 ft. and 3 ft. high with burlap top and rests for boxes are required for fifteen pupils. These tables cost about $8.50 each when made by a carpenter. They are unnecessary where fruit packing associations can provide their tables. In places where these tables must be provided, please advise the department, and full instructions for construction will be sent.

For fifteen pupils a hall at least 30x15 feet and well lighted is necessary. It must be heated so that fruit will not freeze at night and to prevent eniling of the fingers of the packers.

The advantages of packing schools are:

1. Practical and thorough instruction in actual commercial packing will be given. Packing schools have proved very successful because each pupil is engaged in actual packing under the personal supervision of an instructor who knows and can teach commercial packing.

2. Pupils will have an opportunity to learn the method and equipment used by up-to-date and progressive associations for the most economical picking, grading, packing, wrapping and handling of fruit.

3. Instruction will be given in the operation of the Fruit Marks Act, in the proper marking of different sizes and grades of fruit.

4. Incidentally, instruction in exhibition packing will be given.

5. Packers who are given a score of 75 efficiency in the packing school and who put up a creditable pack the following year will be entitled to a diploma, certifying the same, from the department of agriculture.

6. Fruit growers in the district may visit the packing school and secure information in this way. The evening demonstration and lecture on commercial fruit packing will also be valuable. It is hoped that the provincial horticulturist may be present at some at least of these meetings.

In view of the large demand for packing schools and the fact that work must start early in January, districts which aim to avail themselves of this opportunity should send application as soon as possible to R. M. Winslow, provincial horticulturist at Victoria.
