NEWS OF THE CITY

Short Courses in Fruit and Vegetable Growing in Miners' Union Hall

Tomorrow, March 1, a series of lectures and demonstrations in fruit and vegetable growing will be held in the Miners' Union hall in this city, under the auspices of the horticultural branch of the provincial department of agriculture. Both afternoon and evening meetings will be held, the afternoon lecture starting at 2:30, when W. H. Brittain, provincial pathologist and entomologist, will speak on "Insects and Fungi in Relation to Horticulture," with special reference to pear-blight and silver-leaf. At 3:30 M. S. Middleton, assistant horticulturist, will give a pruning demonstration. In the evening, at 7:30, E. Hoy, assistant horticulturist, will speak on "Soil Cultivation Under Irrigation," at 8:15 Edwin Smith, in charge of the pre-cooling, careful handling and cold-storage investigations branch, will talk on "The Handling of Fruit," and at 9 o'clock "Our Market Conditions on the Prairies in 1912" will be discussed by J. Forsyth Smith, British Columbia markets commissioner. The evening lectures will be illustrated. These meetings will be held under the auspices of the Grand Forks Farmers' institute. Not only fruit and vegetable growers, but all farmers, will find these lectures on soils, cultivation, and plant growing of value to them.

J. B. Castner, who had charge of the apple packing school in this city this year, delivered a lecture on the fruit growing industry in the Miners' Union hall last Friday night to a large audience of orchardists. Mr. Castner covered every phase of the subject, from the selection of the orchard site until the fruit had been marketed. He is a practical fruit grower, having had twenty years' experience in the business, and discussed the matter from the viewpoint of the man who feels thoroughly sure of his ground. He has been employed by several eastern provinces and states to lecture on this subject, which added additional weight to his remarks. One view expressed on Friday night will doubtless be welcomed by the fruit growers of this province. In his opinion the cleanly cultivated orchard would soon be a thing of the past, and in its place would come the growing of grass between the trees as a mulch. The advantages of the latter system, he said, are obvious. The work of cultivating the orchard would be eliminated; irrigation would be simplified, and on turning on the water none of the earth would be washed away. The grass should be cut several times during the summer season, but the hay should not be removed from the orchard.

George L. Walker, in the Boston Commercial, says that the Granby's bond issue did not take very well in speculative circles, due to the fact that it was not clearly understood, and traders have been selling their holdings during the past two weeks.

Evidently it would have been more satisfactory to many holders of the stock had the company gone on as it started and paid for the development and equipment of the Hidden Creek property out of earnings. A large majority of the stockholders, however, wanted dividends. Unquestionably the policy of capitalizing in part the property is correct. If Granby were to go on buying, developing and equipping new mines as rapidly as it could pay the bills out of the earnings it might be many years before it would pay a dividend. Rather than go to an extreme in this direction, it appears to be the intention to meet half the Hidden Creek expense from earnings and capitalize the rest. The fact that one of the three or four leading New York banking houses underwrote Granby's bond issue, a firm that had never before been interested in copper, is an important point to keep in mind. It means that Granby is making new friends, strong and influential ones. On any further reaction the stock should be bought. It is a good investment and a most promising speculation.

A Winnipeg dispatch says that James V. Welch, a railroad contractor, who assisted in building many railroads in Oregon, Washington, southern British Columbia and western Canada, died recently at Port Arthur, Ont., on which district he had a contract to build a portion of the Canadian Northern line east to Sudbury. He was 52 years old. Mr. Welch was well known in this city at the time of the building of the Columbia & Western. He had a contract and camp at Lime creek, on the North Fork of Kettle river, and will be remembered by those who had business dealings with him as a generous, whole-hearted man. There will be many of old-timers who will read of his death with regret.

On Monday night the Grand Forks and Phoenix hockey clubs played a tie game at the local rink, the score being 3-3, and on Wednesday Phoenix defeated Grand Forks at Phoenix by a score of 4 to 3, thus winning the championship of the Boundary league. Tomorrow night Phoenix plays the first game with Nelson, at Nelson, for the McBride cup.

There may be some consolation in the fact that Grand Forks came close enough to the cup to get a picture of it.

J. D. Honsberger, the rancher, returned to the city yesterday from a two months' visit to Lethbridge.

TO LIGHT STORES

City Will Furnish Power at Cost for This Purpose

The mayor and all the aldermen were present at the meeting of the city council last Monday evening.

A delegation from the West ward composed of Neil McCallum, P. H. Donaldson and W. H. Dinsmore waited on the council. These gentlemen stated that they had authentic information to the effect that the C.P.R. intended to abandon its passenger station in the West end in the near future, and they wanted the council to endorse petition to the officials of the road requesting that the same be maintained. The subject was thoroughly discussed by the delegates and the members of the council, but the council did not see its way clear to endorse the petition, in view of the agreement with the road entered into by the city last summer. The matter was disposed of by the appointment of Ald. Miller, Manly and the mayor as a committee to ascertain the facts.

The finance committee recommended the payment of the accumulated monthly accounts; that in future tenders be called for in purchasing fuel, and that the city account be transferred to the Canadian Bank of Commerce on or before February 28. All the recommendations were approved, but the clerk was authorized to purchase five tons of coal at once. The chairman stated that the committee appreciated the granting of a temporary loan by the Bank of Commerce.

The chairman of the board of works reported that tenders for the removal of the old Cooper bridge had been advertised for.

The council authorized the sale of four lots, on the flat across the North Fork, to J. A. McCallum for $100.

The city electrician's salary was raised from $125 to $150.

Ald. Manly, chairman of the water and light committee, reported that a plan was being formulated whereby business houses could be illuminated at night at a moderate cost. The thought that eight lights could be supplied each store up to 11 o'clock at night at a flat rate of $1 per month. The plan contemplated was to have them detached from the meters, with switches outside the buildings, so that they could be turned off by the night watchman.

After a short discussion relative to health and relief matters, the council adjourned.

The Princeton Star says that the purchase of the Veigt camp by the British Columbia Copper company has been advanced to a stage where both parties to the deal are no longer in doubt as to the issue. The formalities of closing the transaction are now progressing.

MME. MAURICE MAETERLINCK

Belgium.—While it is noy settled beyond a doubt that Maurice Maeterlinck, the famous Belgian author and philosopher, did not recently come to this country, the arrival of his talented wife, Mme. Georgette Leblanc Maeterlinck, is a very well established fact. The wife of the great playwright, poet, essayist and sage, herself a famous singer, is one of the most interesting personalities that have visited our shores. She is a high priestess of the cult that preaches the perfect wifehood, and she has evolved a philosophy of her own for reaching that happy destiny in matrimony.

STOCK BROKERS GO ON STRIKE

Resent Passage of Drastic Law Controlling Them Approved by Parliament

In Rome, the chamber of the deputies has passed a new law which is very urgently needed, disciplining operations performed on the stock exchange, with the object of weeding out unprincipled brokers. All agents are required to deposit with the government a sum of $20,000 as a caution money.

The premier, Signor Giolitti, in combating an attempt on the part of certain Liberals to modify this clause in the bill, exclaimed: The government is determined to apply once for all a radical remedy to the bourses, because they are real centers of infection in the economic life of Italy. They harbor a mass of operators who possess no guarantees of any kind. Let us say nothing of their morality, but at least let us demand substantial 'caution.' Those agents actually inscribed will easily find the requisite credit and cash if they be truly worthy of their calling.

Parliamentary approval of the drastic Giolittian measure which has had the effect of raising a terrific outburst of indignation on the stock exchanges in Rome, Genoa, Turin, Florence, Palermo and the center of Italian commerce, resulting in the resignation of the bourse syndicates and the suspension of all business as a sign of protest. The brokers have sworn not to resume business or allow others to transact their affairs until adequate satisfaction is forthcoming.

SUFFERED 2 MONTHS WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Began with Itching Sensation. Kept Awake at Night. Caused Great Pain. Thought Operation Only Cure. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Entirely Cured in 6 Weeks.

54 Strange St., Toronto, Ontario.—"I suffered for two months with the piles. They first began with a sudden itching sensation which used to keep me awake at night. I tried different kinds of ointment to stop the itching which did not prove valuable in the least and to my surprise after a few weeks they began to bleed. I did not know what to do as they caused me great pain. I began to think that an operation was the only cure for them. I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them. I sent for a sample and after using them a few times I found out to my great relief they gave me less pain and later on the bleeding began to cease. I got some more and continued with the Cuticura Ointment and Soap. I began to get better sleep at night and after six weeks' careful treatment I find that I am entirely cured." (Signed) A. Bennett, Mar. 25, 1912.

If you wish a skin clear of pimples, blackheads and other annoying eruptions, hands soft and white, hair lustrous and glossy, and scalp free from dandruff and itching, begin to-day the regular use of Cuticura Soap for the toilet, bath and shampoo, assisted by an occasional light application of Cuticura Ointment. NEW TUNNEL MAY WEAKEN ST. PAUL

Famous London Cathedral Said to be Confronted by Grave Danger

London.—A new danger now threatens St. Paul's Cathedral, in the opinion of those responsible for the fabric, the proposed tramway tunnel that forms an important part of the St. Paul's bridge scheme being regarded with apprehension.

The parliamentary bill seeking power for this new venture has just been deposited by the London county council, and so we feel that we must make our protest at once, said Canon S. A. Alexander, treasurer of the Cathedral recently.

The danger arises out of the fear entertained by our expert advisers that the proposed subway through which trams will run from a terminus at Cheapside under the east side of the churchyard and Cannon street to a point near the new bridge, will drain our foundations. The Cathedral is built on water-bearing soil above the clay, and the constant danger is that this soil may become dry and decrease in bulk, thus leading to settlements of the foundations and cracking of the walls. Indeed, Mervyn Macartney, architect to the dean and chapter, takes so serious a view of any such drainage that he is unable to say where the damage might end. When we remember that Holy Trinity in Kingsway which stands beside a similar subway had to be rebuilt, we cannot but do all in our power to save St. Paul's from the possibility of ruin.

A protest has been addressed to the chairman of the L.C.C. by the dean and chapter, and as custodians of a great national monument we trust that due weight will be given to our point of view. About five years ago the council diverted a big sewer scheme which it was thought threatened the Cathedral just as the proposed subway would do, and so we are hopeful in this matter. The cost of fighting the L. C. C.'s bill would be so heavy for us and it is so difficult to find funds even for the present necessary repairs that we feel sure the public will be with us in urging the authorities to drop that part of the scheme, which in the opinion of all experts, would seriously threaten Wren's great masterpiece.

Millionaire Found Hanging in Train

At Berlin, a millionaire cattle raiser named Berger has been found dead in mysterious circumstances in a train near Chemnitz, Saxony.

When the train arrived at a station near Chemnitz the millionaire was discovered hanging from the ceiling of a second-class compartment. At first it was suspected that he had committed suicide, but an investigation revealed the fact that several hundreds of dollars in cash, which he had taken with him to purchase breeding stock, had been taken from his pockets.

The police are searching for a farmhand who recently entered the murdered man's service after being released from a convict prison. It is believed that the ex-convict induced Berger to make a journey and either accompanied him or got in the same train by surprise.

William S. Gummers, chief justice of the New Jersey superior court, has a keen sense of humor, which sparkles at time. He had just taken a seat in a Pennsylvania railroad train on his way home from Trenton the other day, when a rather gaudily dressed woman walked up to him and demanded to know: Is this the smoker? No, responded the justice, quietly, you'll find the smoker two cars ahead.

Pat's Answer

When James T. Brady first opened a lawyer's office in New York he took a basement room which had been previously occupied by a cobbler. He was somewhat annoyed by the previous occupant's callers and irritated by the fact that he had few of his own. One day an Irishman called. The cobbler gone, I see, he said. I should think he has, tartly responded Brady.

And what do you sell? asked the visitor, looking at the solitary table and a few law books.

Blockheads, responded Brady. Begorra, said the Irishman, ye must be doing a mighty fine business—ye ha! got but one left.

THE FARMER AND HIS GRAIN

The only sure and satisfactory way in which the Western Farmer can secure the highest possible market value for his wheat, oats, barley and flax is by shipping it by the carload to Fort William or Port Arthur, or to Duluth if cars cannot be got for the other terminals (loading it if possible direct into the car over the loading platform so as to save elevator charges and dockage) and employing a strictly commission firm to handle and dispose of it.

We continue to act as the Farmers' Agents solely on a commission basis. We are not truckbuyers and we never buy the Farmers' grain on our own account, but look after and dispose of the grain entrusted to us, as the agents of those who employ us, and it is our desire and endeavor to give everyone the very best service possible. We make liberal advances against car shipping bills, and will also carry the grain for a time under advances at a moderate commercial rate of interest, if considered advisable. We invite all Farmers to write to us for shipping instructions and market information.

Care of Dairy Cows
The cows should be kept in dry quarters and protected from the cold. The barn should be clean, warm and well ventilated. Cold water should not be given to the cows in winter. Warm it to about 65 or 70 degrees.

Heard at the Beach
As the couple entered the dining room at Revere Beach a raucous-voiced young fellow was assaulting the air with alleged vocal music.

Wonder who he is? said the girl when the howler had stopped his racket.

Don't you know who that is? returned her escort. He's the guy who put the din in dinner.

No More Children
Little Mary's father had denied her a pleasure which she had confidently expected to enjoy. That night, when she said her prayers at her mother's knee, she concluded with this petition: And please don't give my papa any more children. He don't know how to treat those he's got now.

When going away from home, or at any change of habitat, he is a wise man who numbers among his belongings a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. Change of food and water in some strange place where there are no doctors may bring on an attack of dysentery. He then has a standard remedy at hand with which to cope with the disorder, and forearmed he can successfully fight the ailment and subdue it.

EATON'S SEMI-ANNUAL SALE

Have You Received Our Sale Catalogue?

It Is Full of Money Saving Opportunities.

It will give you full information about the generous values we are offering to our Mail Order Customers and show you how to make substantial savings on many necessities.

In this sale we have reduced the profits to the point where they barely cover the expenses of handling. This is one reason why we are offering such splendid values in our Semi-Annual Sale Catalogue. The other is that our sale has assumed such proportions that we can buy in enormous quantities, and quantities always influence manufacturers to allow us substantial concessions.

You should not be without a copy of this catalogue. If you do not possess a copy let us know and we will forward you one without delay.

All orders should be mailed now. While we have made provision for a big demand it is possible that some lines will be sold out before the end of the sale, and we cannot replenish any line that becomes exhausted. This is an important point that we desire to firmly impress upon our customers.

Every item in our Sale Catalogue is covered by Our Liberal Guarantee of money refunded if you are not fully satisfied.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1913

BECAUSE The Sun, a coupe of weeks back, ridiculed the idea that mysterious German airships are hovering over England, and expressed the opinion that all such dispatches emanated from the federal government's advertising agents, who appear to be working overtime in an endeavor to convince the country that an "emergency" does exist for a cash contribution to the imperial navy, the Phoenix Pioneer rushes into print with a quarter of a column of rambling remarks in defense of its "great and good" friends at Ottawa. It is difficult to understand what facts the Pioneer wishes to establish; but in one sentence, where it lauds the Borden government, and doubts the patriotism—or loyalty—of the opposition, it is quite clear. This was evidently the sole object of the article. It must be admitted that in times peace the Liberals have proven failures as jingoes and flag flappers, but whenever the empire has been threatened they have never been found lagging. In this respect history will repeat itself. The Pioneer also appears to have the utmost faith in the ability of airships to travel from Germany to England. The Sun feels quite positive that up to the present time no craft of sufficient buoyancy to navigate the air between the two countries has been invented—unless it is permissible to include in this category the heads of the people who are credulous enough to believe these stories. But we prefer to take a more charitable view of the matter. Until we receive further proof to the contrary, we shall continue to believe that the Pioneer man's head is still heavy enough to stay on earth without guy-ropes, and that it is only his pen which is foolish.

CURRENT COMMENT

The wide publicity given to the Friedmann tuberculosis serum owing to the unusual conduct of the discoverer has led an army of sufferers from the white plague into building up hopes for the "cure." Even the senators of the state of Washington have put themselves on record as favoring the purchase of the serum by the government of the United States, and similar purchase by the German government "for the benefit of humanity." Attention to the discovery was drawn in the Dominion parliament by a question to the government asking if it intended making a special investigation. The idea of purchasing the secret is inspired by the offer of one million dollars made by President Finlay, of the Aetna National bank, if the German physician would come to America and cure Finlay's son-in-law and forty nine other tuberculous persons. American legislators reason that if the cure is genuine it should not be left to private enterprise to secure the boon to humanity. A physician who went to Berlin for some of the serum on behalf of Trudeau, of Saranac Lake, a well known pathologist, has returned with very pessimistic ideas about the value of the Friedmann discovery. But so much good has been reported to offset his testimony that it would not be safe to accept his estimate any more than it would be wise to believe unquestioningly in the efficacy of the serum without official tests. Dr. Friedmann is coming to America, probably in connection with the Finlay offer, and though his action in withholding his serum until a rich pecuniary reward is offered may be just ground for judging him very mercenary, if the serum lives up to the claims made for it, it will be worth far more than the price now offered.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Vincent Astor, the heir to the family millions, who owns among other things a big farm on the banks of the Hudson river, announces that he intends making it an experimental farm along scientific lines, and that everything he does there will be told to the people of the country. The idea is an excellent one, and the results can only be good. Anything that teaches how the earth can be made to produce food in abundance benefits the consumer as well as the farmer.—Vancouver Sun.

There is something suggestively British in the jealous vigilance with which Australia guards her autonomy. And strangely enough in the old country press we seldom see evidence of any suspicion as to the quality of the island commonwealth's loyalty. These interesting speculations are reserved for Canada, and we know the reason why.—Victoria Times.

The grain growers demand an increase of the British preference and free trade within five years. Have they no consideration for the poor eastern manufacturer who is making a desperate struggle for existence under the shelter of the tariff wall?—Brandon News.

Mixed farming is pointed to as the hope of the Canadian west. This, we wish to point out, is exactly what the west has been indulging in—farming a little and subdividing the rest for sale to eastern tenderfeet. And it's a great thing for the west—so far.—Toronto Star.

The financial genius who bought a bank, discounted his notes in that bank for the purchase price, and then drew his cheque on the proceeds to pay for it, is entitled to a prize in the art of buying a bank with the bank's money.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"Yes," said the old man, "I find my strength is failing somewhat. I used to walk around the block every morning, but lately I feel so tired when I get half way round I have to turn and come back."—Women's Home Companion.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

After the wedding bells comes the struggle with the new gas range.

You never saw a man wear his new suit in order to make another man jealous.

The unlucky man is sure to find his prize a white elephant when he does capture one.

Be young while you can; you'll have hard enough work trying to be young when you can't.

Some men tell the time of day by the sun, and some women tell the time of night by the son.

There's no rest for the weary, but then who cares as long as there's a crowd at the social!

When we have to work only four hours a day, think of all the time we'll have to make chicken coops.

The only time some persons enjoy doing duty is when it is an unpleasant one for the other fellow.

The girl who can have faith in three men at the same time has no business trying to be a summer girl.

It is noticeable that the present craze for old things doesn't lead any girl into running tallow candles and making soft soap.

And the present generation will have nothing but automobile races, aeroplane meets and moving picture shows to take the place of spelling schools, torchlight processions and husking bees.

Average price of eggs, 45c per dozen. Pen temperatures: Highest, 60°; lowest, 20°; mean, 29.53°. Rain fell on eight days, and two inches of snow was recorded.

The following pens in Class I laid the largest number of eggs during the month—15 (115 eggs), 17 (110), 18 (109), 4 and 16 (96), 14 (94), 12 and 2 (93), 1 and 3 (85). The following also laid six eggs on one day—Pens 12 and 14.

The leading six pens in Class I are as follows: Pens 17, 15, 16, 18, 14 and 4. Pen 16 displaces pen 6; 14 ousts pen 7, and 4 moves up to sixth position. Pen 8 still remain the wooden spoonists.

The fight between pens 17. and 15, from present appearances, would look as if it is to be a matter of stamina, as both pens are of the same strain. Pens 2, 10 and 19 are also of related blood.

The following are the star performers in Class II: Pens 32 (107 eggs), 34 (98), 29 (94), 27 (93), 39 (90), 35 and 24 (89), 37 (88).

The leading six pens are as follows: Pens 22, 29, 27, 35, 32 and 25. The following contestants laid six eggs on one or more days. Pens 32 (twice), 37, 29 and 25.

Broodies—Pens 34 (2 birds), 35 and 27 (1 each).

Pen 36 commenced laying on January 21, pen 40 on the 10th, and pen 28 on February 1 and 2.

Newspaper Law

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the postoffice, and state the reason for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payments.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publishers may continue to send it until payments are made, and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until payment is made.

3. Any person who takes a paper out of the post office, whether directed to his name or not, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper stopped and the publisher continues to send it, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office or removing, leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL

In a recent issue there was published in these columns, a statement of the Bank of Montreal setting forth the Annual report covering the year ending Oct. 31, 1912. In presenting the figures showing the increased business of the bank during the year, a serious error occurred in respect to the amount of the current loans made by the Bank. It was stated that the Bank made current loans of nearly $120,000, instead of nearly $120,000,000, as was the case. The corrected extract from the report reads as follows: "The fact that the Bank made current loans of nearly $120,000,000 shows that there is a big demand in the country for banking accommodation, and that the Bank of Montreal is doing its full share in catering to the business needs of the communities where its branches are located."

FEARFUL HEADACHES

Stomach Bad, no Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble. By reading Mr. Donner's letter you will be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Donner, Kleinfelder, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach bad. I took medicines from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them.

Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefited. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, my appetite is good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

TWO POINTERS ON HOW TO CURE A COLD

When you begin to sniff and feel a burning sensation in the nasal passages, or when a tickling irritation in your throat starts you coughing, the first important thing is to act at once. It's the neglected cold that becomes troublesome and dangerous.

The second important thing to do is to take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, and keep it up till the cold disappears entirely.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne is absolutely free from harmful drugs, and can safely be given even to moderately young children. It is pleasant tasting and quick acting, promptly relieving the irritation of the throat and nostrils, loosening the mucus, promoting expectoration, and checking the cold.

Your druggist has Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne in 25c. and 50c. bottles, or can quickly get it for you. Compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited.

Turn idle hours into concrete fence posts

EVERY farmer finds himself now and then with a few idle hours in which both himself and his help must look for "odd jobs" to keep them busy. Use these hours to make concrete fence posts. You can make a few at a time, storing them until needed. Then when you want a fence in the new field, your posts—everlasting, concrete posts—are all ready to use. The making of fence posts is only one of scores of every-day uses for concrete on the farm described in the book,

"What The Farmer Can Do With Concrete"

Luck of the Cross Eyed-Cat

Or, the Omen of Bad Luck

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Where did it come from?" demanded Rob Sabin, boss of the logging camp.

The camp cook waved a floury hand in midair. "Search me," he said frankly. "Here I sat making these here biscuits when all of a sudden my eyes felt queer and I looked up to see that critter staring at me big as life. I swan it give me a turn to look at it."

"I never saw a cross eyed cat before," remarked Sabin, surveying the large black, lean looking feline which had appeared in camp that morning. The cat had been washing its face industriously, but under Sabin's steady scrutiny it suddenly ceased its labors and stared back at him uncanonically.

The right eye was large and yellow, with dilating black pupil in its proper place, but the left orb was marred by a decided cast. In fact, the pupil of the eye manifested a desire to disappear entirely behind the animal's nose. "I wonder if it means bad luck?" mused Sabin.

Later in the day Sabin remembered the cross eyed cat, and with a thought to the ingrained superstitions of some of his men and the unnecessary talk that would be exchanged among them, to the detriment of their work, he ordered Smith, a newcomer, to carry the cat to where the highway crossed a little section of woods wherein they were working and there leave the cat. Glad of any relief from the tedium of hauling logs to the river bank, young Smith picked up the black cat and carried it, unresisting, into the shadow of the woods. An hour later he returned to say that he had left the black cat sitting in the middle of the highway.

"Gave me a creepy feeling down the spine as I walked away," he remarked at supper, "and I turned and looked back, and I know you won't believe what I'm going to tell you," he concluded hastily.

"Oh, yes, we will," chorused his companions. "Fire ahead, Smithy!"

"I turned and looked back, and by cricky, boys, that cat had shifted her position so that she was looking after me with them crossed eyes of hers, and I never want to see a more evil smile on anybody's face than there was on hers."

"Huh!"

"A cat smile?"

"Ain't you going it ruther strong, Smithy?"

"Remember this ain't no 'Alice in Wonderland' party," protested another. Amid the chorus of gibes Bob Sabin's clear voice startled them into silence.

"If you don't believe Smith, just look there, boys," he said quietly.

There was silence as the eight men turned and looked at the spot which he had indicated. There, on the edge of the timber growth, sat the black, cross eyed cat, an evil smile curving her wide mouth.

"Good heavens! I'm not going to have that thing around here!" ejaculated Peterson, springing from his chair.

"What are you going to do?" he was asked.

"Fill her full of lead," he announced emphatically.

But there was a murmur of protest from his companions. Sabin watched them curiously, noting the element of superstition that tinged their handling of this matter. His men were composed of Americans, Swedes and French Canadians, and of them all the Frenchmen were the most excitable.

"Ah, m'sieu," appealed Jean Fabrols to his boss, "pray let us not harm so evil eyed cat! None of us have too much of so good fortune to take so reek. I myself will take her gently away and lose her."

"That's the best plan, Peterson," said Sabin, with a nod toward the man who was seeking his gun. Peterson was disappointed and came back to the table.

"There's only one way you can lose that cat," he grumbled.

Young Smith nodded his head. "She certainly came back!" he ejaculated.

"What will you do, Jean?"

"Ah, take her in so darkness and lose her forever in so tangle of woods on so other side of so river," rattled the Frenchman gayly.

"That's a good idea, Jean," commended Sabin, rising from the table. "Take the small boat and be back as soon as possible. We can't let a cat interfere with our work in the morning. It's an important matter that we get this lot down without delay."

"Oui, m'sieu," responded Jean Fabrols as he suddenly swooped down upon the cross eyed cat and caught it dexterously in his large hands. As he disappeared in the direction of the rippling river his comrades exchanged smiles of amusement and concern.

"Her will come back," said Larsen, the big Swede, as he pushed heavily away from the table.

"I'll give her three times to come back. The last time will be my turn," warned Peterson ominously.

Next day the big drive occurred, and Sabin and a number of picked men went down to Double forks hoping to avert a repetition of the trouble of the previous year. The river was running full, for the spring freshets had added their share to the brimming stream.

The logs came down a roaring, tumbling chaos of blackness, now and then tossing out a dark arm as the pressure from behind became bearier. Sabin, tall and muscular and handsome, stood on the east bank of the river at the forks and watched the logs crowding around the bend. On either bank his men were strung along with poles, standing ready to risk life and limb the instant necessity called for it. All wore rough corduroy clothing and long hip boots.

"If this lot gets through all right we'll be safe this time," muttered Sabin to young Smith, who stood close beside him.

They looked upstream where the white foam bubbled around a mass of tumbling logs. It was a great sight, especially when a log was tossed twenty feet in the air to come crashing down upon its fellows in the water. The two men were so interested in the sight of the approaching logs that they did not realize at first what had happened when Peterson's voice was megaphoned across the river.

"Jam there!" he yelled. "Jam!"

Sabin looked. It was true. Across the river directly in front of them and at its narrowest point the logs had jammed into a wall that momentarily grew wider as more logs were added as they floated down.

Somewhere in that maze of tree trunks was one log that formed the key to the situation. Locate that log and pry it loose and the wall would be broken. Then the rest of the drive would follow like a flock of sheep.

Sabin frowned and swore a little. There was a chorus of indignant yells as suddenly there broke from the woods on the west bank of the river a lean, black streak that shot out in one flying leap and landed on one of the logs that formed the lower end of the barrier.

"The cross eyed cat!" yelled Peterson through the megaphone. Then he danced angrily up and down as he continued: "I knew it would bring us bad luck, Mr. Sabin. If I can borrow a gun I'd like to knock it into slinders! May I?"

"Don't be a fool, Peterson!" shouted back his employer. "One of you fellows get out there and start that jam, and I guess the cat will get all that's coming to him."

There was a moment's conference among the men on the west bank, and then Peterson leaped to the nearest of the closely packed logs and made his way cautiously toward the outer edge of the jam. He carried a gun.

All at once the lumbermen met with another surprise. From the same point in the woods from whence had come the cross eyed cat there darted a girl's slender form. She wore a red cloak, and a red knitted cap was tossed on the back of her wind blown dark hair. She looked neither to the left or right. Her gaze seemed transfixed upon the small black form of the cross eyed cat and the gun in Peterson's hand.

Almost on the heels of Peterson she leaped fearlessly to the floating logs and then darted from one to another until she posted close behind Peterson's big form. The boss lumberman on the shore watched her with panic stricken eyes. If the jam should break, as it might any instant, what chance would that frail girl have among the grinding logs? Peterson, big and strong as he was, realized that he was taking a chance in trying to break the jam.

"Coward!" cried the girl, her voice ringing clearly above the boiling of the water among the logs. As she spoke she snatched Peterson's gun from his nerveless hand and flung it into the stream. Then she leaped to the enormous pine log on which the cross eyed cat sat and clasped the uncanny creature in her arms. Then she arose and for the first time seemed to realize the situation.

Her life was not worth an instant's purchase if the jam broke. She turned terror stricken eyes toward Peterson, who indulged in one of his fierce fits of anger, laughed contemptuously at her and leisurely picked his way over the logs, pretending to scrutinize each one—searching for the key log that would break the jam.

Sabin watched the two for one long minute. Then, with an indrawn breath of mingled rage and fear, he set his foot on the nearest log and went to the rescue of the girl. As he lifted her fainting form in his arms, together with the black cat, which she still carried wrapped in the folds of her red cloak, he left the great pine log on which the cross eyed cat had delined to sit. Sabin's foot had barely left the log when it shivered slightly.

"The key log—she's breaking now!" shouted Sabin and raced for the nearest shore.

As he stumbled up the river bank with his double load of lovely girl and cross eyed black cat there came a crashing boom from the river as the jam broke and the logs went thundering down to their destination.

After beautiful Maisie Woods had departed for home with her lost pet—yes, the cross eyed black cat—big Peterson approached the lumber boss shamefacedly enough.

"I suppose you'll want me to hand in my time, sir," he muttered. "It's all the luck of that cross eyed cat."

"Nonsense!" returned Sabin brightly, a happy light in his dark eyes. "Stay on, Peterson, and try to remember that the cross eyed cat broke the jam, after all. If anybody can show me a better mascot than a cross eyed black cat I'd like to be shown."

After Sabin had married Maisie Woods and had become part owner of the black cat they understood what he meant.

TOOK HIM LITERALLY.

And the Great Sculptor Houdon Found His Name Changed.

Houdon, the famous French sculptor, rendered great service to the fine arts not only through the masterpieces he left behind him, but also by perfecting the casting of statues in bronze. This art, fallen into disuse since the renaissance, he revived. When he reached his seventy-third year, writes Mr. C. E. Hart and Mr. Edward Hiddle in their life of the artist. Houdon withdrew from active work. As a means of agreeable relaxation he began also to frequent the performances at the Comedie Francaise.

It so happened that in consequence of certain alterations the building had to be closed for a considerable period. On the day of its reopening, Houdon came as usual, but a new ticket taker had been engaged since his last visit.

"Monsieur, your ticket, please!" this official cried.

"I don't need any," and the venerable figure continued to advance.

"But, monsieur, no one enters without a ticket."

"I have my entree, sir," replied Houdon, growing warm.

"But how do you call yourself?"

"How do I call myself? How do I call myself?" Then pointing to the statue in the peristyle, which he himself had made, "I'm the father of Voltaire!" he cried, and he passed in triumphantly. The amusing part of it is that the next evening as Houdon passed in the ticket taker turned to his assistant and instructed him to inscribe on the register of entries for the evening, "M. Voltaire, le pere." It is easy to imagine the hilarious reception of this at the Comedie, and for some time after the old sculptor was referred to by this name exclusively.

A POET'S GUARDIAN.

Paludan-Muller's Fierce Little Wife Kept Him Secluded.

The famous poet of Denmark, Paludan-Muller, was closely guarded in his later years by an eccentric wife, greatly his senior. Of her preposterous oddity, writes Edmund Gosse in "Two Visits to Denmark," stories were everywhere current in Copenhagen. She kept him as much as she possibly could from all intercourse with the outer world. During a visit to Copenhagen the host of Mr. Gosse decided to invite the poet to dine, and his daughter and guest were sent on a mission to invite him.

If we could secure him, for a night convenient to him, writes Mr. Gosse, all that was brightest and best in Copenhagen was to be constrained to come too. But fortune was against us. If we had found him alone it is possible that success might have crowned our efforts. When we arrived with our dinner invitation on our lips we were damped by being told the poet had gone out for a walk, but that Mrs. Paludan-Muller would receive us. The fierce little lady, in fact, closed our retreat by peeping round the edge of the door and commanding us to enter. Miss Aline Fog, overwhelmed by the event, lost her presence of mind and blurted out the invitation, which it would have been wiser to suppress.

The answer came at once: "Impossible, my dear lady, impossible! I could not sanction it. Mr. Paludan-Muller is weak; he is good natured; he is only too ready to go into society. It is my privilege to prevent it. I say to him: 'You are too delicate, my dear, to mix with others. You must positively consider your health.'"

Miss Fog feebly asked whether the poet might not himself be appealed to, "such old friends; so small a party; so early an hour!" The lady was quite obdurate, however. "I could not trust him with your message. He is so weak, so good natured. His place is at home with me. I do not wish to dine abroad. Why should he?"

His Harvest Season. Teacher—Now, Earlie, tell us when is the harvest season. Earlie—From November to March. Teacher—Why, Earlie, I am surprised that you should name such barren months. Who told you they were the harvest season? Earlie—Pa. He's a plumber.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Tam o' Shanter's Inn. Every visitor to Ayr, Scotland, should see the little Tam o' Shanter inn, with its ample front and great lamp hanging over the sidewalk. Here opened the scene which Robert Burns has immortalized in his poem "Tam o' Shanter." Tam had spent a very convivial evening at the inn, and when he finally started home on his gray mare, Meg, he was in a rather foggy frame of mind. A terrific storm was raging, and on the way he was caught by ghosts, who ended his earthly career.

Too Sensible to Give Up. "Will you promise," she anxiously asked "not to do anything desperate if I say it can never be?" "Yes," he replied. "I think a man's a fool who goes to the bad because a girl refuses to love him." "Then I will be yours."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Patience is bitter, but its fruits are sweet.—Rousseau.

EYE STRAIN.

First Felt Not in the Eye, but in the Organ That is Weakest.

No human organ, except possibly the heart, is called on for such hard and continuous activity. Even the most musical ear is never taxed beyond the three or four hours of a Wagnerian opera and at the worst is rested by frequent intermissions. The brain, even in the case of professional men, is called on for only six to eight hours of work a day. But we use our eyes in business all day and then all evening in our amusements. In point of fact, the heart itself is less severely taxed.

The eye has, to be sure, a most marvelous strength. As long as its mechanism remains measurably correct it seldom or never gives out, and its vitality is supreme. But when to the strain of near work in artificial light are added defects in its own mechanism even this wonderfully adaptable and hardy servant gives symptoms of strain.

The brain is generally our first informer. It automatically applies the energy that dogs the lens muscle to its ceaseless task, and it is in the closest possible sympathy with the retina, the sensitive plate on which all vision is recorded. The brain declares its exhaustion in headache and vertigo. The masterful eye, so to speak, shunts off its suering upon the nearest neighbor. Yet in many cases even the brain gives no direct symptom. It is the central organ, the highly vital and complex master, of the entire system, and it also has a superior way of passing on the kick. Just how it does this the oculists do not profess to know. The rule seems to be that eye strain declares itself first in the organ which is nearest and weakest. The stomach, the liver, the intestines, the kidney, the heart or the membranes of nose and throat may develop symptoms while the eye and the brain seem normal.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Outdoor Floral Decorations. Pottery jars and vases are, of course, very attractive for holding flowers when used on the porch as a decoration, but the most suitable receptacles FIELD DAISIES AND FERNS. are those of birch bark, suggesting as they do the spirit of the woods. The illustration shows an attractive arrangement of field daisies and ferns in a tall birch bark vase.

Hands Up! "You say you were held up this morning by a footpad with a revolver. At what time?" "Five minutes to 1." "How can you fix the time so precisely?" "Because I could see the church clock, and I noticed that its hands were exactly in the same position as my own."—Boston Transcript.

Cruel and Unusual. Of course the women are all churlis. No wonder they look wan. For every morn they see the girls Without their makeups on.

Bad For Chickens. "I think, dear, we may as well give up the idea of raising chickens this year." "Why? Don't you think it will be a good year for chickens?" "No. It will cost too much to feed them. The man next door tells me that he has joined a golf club, so he isn't likely to have a garden."—Chicago Record-Herald.

NEWS OF THE CITY IN BRIEF

An interesting case was tried in the police court yesterday morning. The provincial police summoned G. M. Fripp for not renewing his motorcycle license. Mr. Fripp's defence was that he did not intend to use machine this year, and therefore he had no of a license. After both sides had given their evidence, Magistrate Cochrane rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant and dismissed the case.

A telegram has been received in Victoria from the secretary of commerce and labor at Washington, D. C., to the effect that the decision of the immigration officials at Marcus, refusing Peter Veregin admission to the United States, has been abrogated. It will be remembered that Mr. Veregin was on his way to Victoria to interview the government when he was stopped at the frontier, and as a consequence had to return home.

Mr. C. A. ABBOTT, August 22, 1909.
60 Ann St., New York City.
Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Blood-Gel) in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of; that 40 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,
REV. CHAS. SAGER,
Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.) N. Y.

On Dec. 1, 1901, Mr. Sager wrote Mr. Abbott: "My health is very good."

If you will write Mr. Abbott he will gladly furnish you any further information you desire.

Substitute for the Big Stick

The United States of America appeared as complainant against 'one walking stick' in a suit in the federal court in Boston last Saturday. The cane was seized by customs officers because of a picture concealed in its handle. Judge Morton gave its owner, a sailor on the freighter Indrants, until March 11 to show cause why it should not be forfeited to the United States. As the seaman is now on the high seas, bound for China, Uncle Sam may get a new stick.

WILSON'S REMEDY

EFFICIENT IN
BRONCHITIS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA,
CATARRH, CRIPPE, STUBBORN COUGHS, ETC.

From a Minister in New York: "I was severely ill with lung trouble. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy which I used with splendid effect."

From a lady in Michigan: "I used your medicine first 43 or 44 years ago and it saved me from ending my days with consumption. There would be no use of so many people dying with consumption if they could be persuaded to try Wilson's Remedy."

If you are suffering from ANY lung or throat trouble it is your duty to investigate. Send for free full information to:
