Farmers' Institute Meeting

There was a good attendance at the general meeting of the Kettle Valley Farmers' Institute last Monday evening in spite of the disagreeable weather that prevailed. The proceedings proved of unusual interest, and the addresses delivered were the most instructive yet heard at an institute meeting. President A. B. Tweddle president.

W. A. Cooper prefaced his report of the sixth annual Dry-Farming Congress at Colorado Springs by reading a letter from the deputy minister of agriculture, thanking the British Columbia delegates for their attendance.

Mr. Cooper said that since the congress was first organized in Utah six years ago it had rapidly grown both in membership and utility. It was now an international organization, and this year delegates were present from all the western states and provinces. Next year the congress will be held in Lethbridge, Alta.

The term dry-farming was now generally applied to districts in which the annual precipitation was less than 20 inches, where crops were successfully grown by a scientific tillage of the soil. Fifty-five per cent of the world's land surface received less than 20 inches precipitation. Mr. Cooper quoted local meteorological to show that during the past two or three years the precipitation in the Kettle valley had ranged between 12 and 15 inches. The season of the year in which the precipitation occurred made a vast difference in the growing of crops.

He had noticed one peculiarity on his trip to Colorado Springs, i.e., in every farming district some one variety of weeds predominated.

At Salt Lake City he had seen the finest kind of Wealthy apples grown at an altitude of 7000 feet, and good peaches were grown at an altitude of 4000 feet.

The exhibit of dry-farming products, which was made in large tents, at the congress, was superb. Alberta took first prize for grains, as it did last year also. He felt confident that if British Columbia made a display of fruit at the next congress, the province would carry off first prize.

The greater portion of Mr. Cooper's address was devoted to a description of Red Milo maize, the new dry farming product which had created the greatest interest at the congress. A detailed explanation of this cereal was printed in The Sun two weeks ago.

By the introduction of Milo maize it would be possible to raise a crop every year. In most dry-farming districts it was the custom to raise a crop one year, and to summer fallow the next. Here we had a small system of rotation of crops, and Milo maize would increase this system so that it would be possible to grow a crop every every year.

Mr. Cooper stated that a demonstration of modern farming implements had elicited much interest from the delegates to the convention. He thought it would be of great benefit to the ranchers of this valley if an arrangement could be made whereby a demonstration of dry farming implements could be seen at the next annual fair.

In answer to questions after concluding his address, Mr. Cooper stated that Milo maize was planted in rows 3½ feet apart. After it came up it was thinned in the rows to 8 in. apart. The straw was good for fodder, and the grain made splendid feed for cattle, horses, hogs and chickens. Forty bushels of maize per acre had been harvested in Colorado. The seed would probably cost from $1.50 to $2.00 per bushel. The Rock Island railway would likely be able to furnish the information where the seed could be obtained. He had seen a demonstration of a power plow and harrow at Colorado Springs, and he thought they could be operated successfully in the commercial orchards in this valley.

J. D. Honsberger delivered an address on "The Varieties of Apples Suitable for the Kettle Valley." On account to the apple growing industry not having been carried on in this valley on a commercial basis for any length of time, some of the newer varieties have not been fully tested, and it is difficult to name the varieties most suitable for this district. A list of the varieties generally planted throughout the province embraces the Wealthy, McIntosh Red, Wagener, Jonathan, Grimes' Golden, Rome Beauty, Winesap, Spy, Spitzenberg, Delicious, Yellow Newton, King David, Red Cheek Pippin, Transcendant and Hyslop crabs. The first point the orchardist should take into consideration was to secure trees hardy enough to withstand our climate. A few other things to look for in a tree were early bearing, productiveness, economy in handling the tree and the fruit, and the kind of an apple that the people want. The speaker thought the orchardists of this valley were making a mistake in planting all winter apples. There not enough early apples grown. This year the early and late fall varieties had been the best money makers.

Mr. Honsberger placed the Wagener as the best winter apple for this district, but the tree was short lived and should be planted only as a filler. The Jonathan was one of leading varieties, but it was an expensive apple to grow. It required a rich soil, and extra labor in pruning, thinning and packing. The Grimes Golden also required a rich soil, but it was apt to fall off unless the trees were well irrigated. The Rome Beauty was a yearly bearer, but the fruit did not color well in this district. The Spitzenberg was a good apple, but it had been thoroughly demonstrated that the tree would stand our winters. Delicious was a new variety, and he did not know much about it. The Yellow Newton was, in his opinion, too tender for this valley. The demand for crab apples this year had exceeded the demand. It was a profitable crop to grow, and the fruit growers should plant more of these trees.

The Winesap, McIntosh Red and Wealthy were three of the hardest varieties, but the trees required lots of water, while the Spys, Spitzenberg and Yellow Newton needed a long season. Jonathan, Grimes' Golden, Red Cheek Pippin, Wagener, Delicious and Rome Beauty were suited to the same location.

The profits of an orchard depended on the varieties planted. The speaker emphasized the importance of planting as few varieties as possible in commercial orchards. In an orchard containing ten varieties it was almost impossible to do the work right, as each variety required different care, and to give them all proper treatment would necessitate the employment of an expert. If all the trees were of one variety, they could all be treated alike. He would rather have a ten-acre orchard of one variety than one containing half a dozen varieties. In concluding his address, Mr. Honsberger urged the fruit growers of valley to stay with the old varieties until the newer ones had been thoroughly tested.

Tom Powers thought the Wagener apple water cored too much. Mr. Honsberger did not think this would prove a drawback if the trees were not over irrigated.

In answer to questions, Mr. Honsberger said that apple trees should be planted thirty feet apart. Spys thrived best in poor soil, but in a warm place. Liberal irrigation would prevent the McIntosh Red apples from falling off.

Tom Powers said he had been experimenting lately in making cement pipe for irrigation purposes. The cement pipe, he said, could be made at one-half the cost of wood banded pipe. Wood pipe cost 43 cents a foot, whereas the material for cement pipe only cost 9 cents. The danger of too great a pressure on cement pipe could be overcome, he thought, by pumping the water to the highest point on the bank of the river, and then merely allowing it to flow down grade.

On motion of Messrs. Lawrence and Clark, the speakers of the evening were tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

After adjournment a debate was arranged for the next meeting of the institute. The subject to be discussed is: "Resolved, that the Wagener, McIntosh Red and Red Cheek Pippin are the three best varieties of commercial apples grown in this district." Messrs. Honsberger, Rooke and Lawrence will take the affirmative side, and Messrs. Cooper, Tweddle and Armstrong the negative.

Fruit Pit or Baldwin Spot

This disease of apples has been reported to the department from practically every apple growing section of the province this year. Not only is the interior affected, but the coast as well, while probably the greatest losses are reported from the most prominent fruit sections. During the last six weeks enquiries on the subject have increased greatly, indicating a rapid development of the disease just previous to and following shipment.

During the season of 1909 a similar outbreak occurred, though not to as great an extent as this year. In some cases there have been losses up to 25 per cent of the fruit picked, and we are advised of other cases where large shipments have had to be sacrificed on arrival because of development in transit.

This trouble goes under a confusing variety of names. The principal ones commonly given by fruit growers are: Baldwin spot, fruit spot, dry rot, bitter rot, brown rot, physiological dry rot, and fruit pit. In Germany the common name is stippion and stippich worden, and bitter pit in South Africa. No scientific name has been given because no specific cause has yet been discovered.

DESCRIPTION.

When usually noticed the appearance is that of roundish brown spots, just below the surface of the skin of the apple, or perhaps up to one-fourth of an inch deep. When near the surface there is smaller circular depression just above the spot. On the colored portion of the apple, this depression is surrounded by slightly deeper color, and on the green parts of the apple the depression is a green, changing later to brown. The brown spot is pithy in character, dry and comparatively tough. The spots are generally from 1-0" to 3-16" in diameter, and of not quite the same depth.

As the trouble develops more spots occur, and finally the brown may extend in more or less complete network through the outer tissues of the apple. The affected flesh is dry and flavorless, but not bitter. The appearance and saleability are very much impaired, and, even for cooking purposes, badly affected fruit is not of much use.

In the third stage the apple becomes practically entirely brown and quite worthless.

In its first stages the fruit pit is hard to distinguish from the effects of hail. Another type affects early apples particularly, causing a more or less browning of the tissues surrounding the core. In this case the apple becomes valueless commercially before its outward appearance is much affected.

Variations of the above forms, and very similar forms, are found in the apple, pear and prune.

This disease has been known and been under investigation for thirty years, principally in Germany, and during the past ten years especially, in the United States and Canada. We have consulted all the available authorities in Canada and the United States on the subject. They are agreed that it is not caused by any fungus, bacterium, or insect. The organism causing it is absolutely unknown. Spraying experiments have proven absolutely valueless. Scientists are now thoroughly agreed in designating it as a physiological trouble in the same class as water-core.

The true Baldwin spot of New York state, the true bitter rot of the middle west, the true apple scab or black spot, are all fungus diseases, and the life history of the organism, like that of typhoid and tuberculosis, is well known to investigators. The disease above described is none of these.

While the absolute cause is unknown, there have been discovered certain inducing causes. These are:

1. Light yields of sappy, usually large, fruit.
 2. Heavy wood growth, from two to four or five feet in length.
- The light yields and heavy growth are due to the following causes:
1. A heavy crop the previous year
 2. Young trees.
 3. Heavy winter pruning.
 4. Excess of water by rainfall, seepage or irrigation.
 5. Clean cultivation.
 6. Nitrogen in the soil in excess over potash and phosphoric acid.
 7. Unhealthy or winter injured trees.

Any one or any combination of the above conditions may be sufficient to bring on fruit pit.

The remedies are:

1. A good, heavy crop of fruit.
2. A reasonable growth, consistent with the age, size and health of the tree.

To secure heavy crops and a mature growth, the following are of importance:

1. Rational winter pruning, replaced by summer pruning if absolutely necessary.
2. The maintenance of the proper moisture supply, less irrigation, proper drainage.
3. Less clean cultivation. Put the orchard in sod if necessary.
4. Increase the amount of soil nitrogen by lessening cultivation, by putting the orchard in sod, or planting intercrops, and where necessary balance the nitrogen supply by adding potash and phosphoric acid. Unhealthy trees should be given proper conditions as above to regain vigor. Properly cared for, they will produce a much higher class of fruit. Badly diseased trees had better be removed.

It is the application of the above remedies under local conditions which calls forth the skill of the grower.

More rational methods of orchard cultivation are absolutely essential to permanent control of this disease. Its prevalence this year has aroused much needless apprehension in the minds of fruit growers. The disease can be avoided almost entirely by the proper methods. It is significant that good intentions, rather than wanton neglect, have brought it on to a very large degree. The methods above recommended, skillfully applied, will result in much greater yields of fruit per tree and per acre. The cost of production per box will be actually lessened considerably, and the general quality and color of the fruit raised in equal degree.

The Best Treatment for Itching Scalps and Falling Hair

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair. Notwithstanding Cuticura soap and ointment are sold everywhere, those wishing to try this treatment may do so without expense by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 4M, Boston, U. S. A., for a free sample of Cuticura soap and ointment, with 32-p. book on skin and hair.

Stops a Deep-Seated Cough in a Hurry

A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded if It Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with 1/2 pint of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy. A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mixed in a 16-oz. bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There's a clear saving of $3.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Takes hold at once, gives almost instant relief, and usually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, and other throat troubles, and unequalled for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in gualacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificates of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. AFTER THE REVOLUTION

A Story Showing How Magnanimity Comes to Follow Victory

By EDWIN PENNINGTON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

After every struggle resulting in a change of government there are scores to be paid off by those who have revolted. As revolutionists, instead of being favored by the law they have been hampered by it. Having established themselves in power, the other edge of the sword is brought into play and cuts in the opposite direction. Instead of being used to imprison or execute revolutionists it is used to execute the advocates of the government overthrow.

When the recent revolution in Mexico became the de facto government the revolutionists stood ready to use the law to punish those who had used it to punish them. During that period when President Diaz held his own in the city of Mexico a young lawyer, Alfonso Fernandez, a sympathizer with the insurgents, left the city to join the forces of Madero. During the fighting he was captured by the government troops, and, being a man of influence, every effort was made to induce him to return to the support of President Diaz. He was turned over to one Jose Sierra, a man deeply interested in putting down the rebellion, with orders to persuade, force or buy him to the government support.

Sierra took the captive to his hacienda, put him on his parole not to leave it and treated him like a guest instead of a prisoner. The jailer host was an adept at winning over an enemy and used every art of persuasion that suggested itself to him.

Concia, Sierra's daughter, a girl of twenty, possessed one of those oval faces of a dusky shade, large liquid eyes and especially the long lashes of the Spaniard. Her father noticed soon after Fernandez's arrival that he was attracted by his daughter and she was attracted by Fernandez. It occurred to Sierra that Fernandez's conversion might be accomplished more readily by means of the girl than by his own arguments or threats. He gave the young people every opportunity to be together and when he saw that the pear was ripe undertook to pluck it.

He offered Fernandez a prominent position under the government, which, of course, would be tantamount to securing his adherence. Fernandez declined the offer. Then Sierra informed his prisoner that he would be tried for reason, which meant that he would be found guilty and executed. In love with the daughter of the man who had made the threat, the temptation to yield and desert the cause in which he had embarked was well nigh irresistible.

Fernandez seemed to have everything to gain by giving his adherence to the established government. President Diaz then appeared to be firmly fixed in the presidency, and it would be difficult to unseat him. By yielding Fernandez would acquire a position of prominence that might be permanent. That position he might make more enduring and more prominent by throwing his influence on the side of the man who had done much for Mexico. These arguments were reinforced by the fact that on one side stood death, on the other love. But honor forbade.

Fernandez now considered the parole he had given void and began to take measures to escape if possible. Concia procured for him a woman's dress and drove him in her volante past guards who had orders to be watchful and on no account permit his escape. Had it not been that she accompanied him he would not have succeeded in deceiving them. As it was, he made good his escape and returned to Mexico City.

Not even Sierra knew how Fernandez got beyond his clutches. Concia kept her secret, and directly after the escape changes occurred that rendered the episode a thing of the past and soon to be forgotten.

After Diaz's departure and the appointment of a provisional president of the republic the work of retaliation commenced. Jose Sierra, who had been captured by the revolutionists, was brought to the capital. To accuse a man of treason against a government that was not established when the act was committed would not come with good grace from the government that had been in rebellion. Those whom Sierra had made to suffer brought him to trial for having murdered a man whom he had shot during the struggle.

And so it was that the law which had before enabled Sierra to punish now afforded the same machinery for punishing him. As to his having ordered shot the man he was accused of murdering, there was no denying the fact. That he had done the deed legally did not concern the jurymen who were on the other side. The trial, therefore, was merely a judicial revenge, and a verdict of guilty was rendered accordingly.

The jury, the lawyers, the spectators, saw nothing but the bare facts of the trial that have been here outlined. To these persons in the courtroom there was far more than this. They were the judge before whom the prisoner was tried, the prisoner himself and his daughter, who sat beside him. When the time came for the sentence to be passed Sierra stood up to receive it, but was so weak that his daughter supported him.

"Jose Sierra," said the judge, "do you remember a man who once stopped at your hacienda and whom you endeavored to seduce from his allegiance to that government which now exists, but was then struggling for its existence?"

"I do."

"And do you remember having given him a choice between accepting an appointment under the Diaz government and a trial for treason, which meant death?"

"I do."

"But the man escaped. You remember that, too, don't you?"

"I do."

"You never knew how he managed to pass the guards you threw around your hacienda on every available route?"

"I did not."

"It would not have then been best for you to know this, nor is it now, but the assistance your prisoner received at that time is of great importance to you now. Had it not been for that assistance another victim would have been added to the one for shooting whom you have just been adjudged guilty."

All this was a puzzle to those present except the prisoner and his daughter. The judge spoke with evident emotion. The prisoner seemed deeply moved. His daughter as the address proceeded wound her arms tighter about her father. There was an impressiveness to the scene that held the audience spellbound. When the judge began to speak every one thought that he was about to give another instance than the one before the court why the prisoner should suffer death. When he entered upon the last matter he mentioned all were thrown into a state of doubt as to what was coming.

"We are entering in Mexico," he continued, "upon a new age—an age ushered in for the civilized world by a former president of the United States at the close of the greatest rebellion the world has ever seen. For that insurrection not a drop of blood was spilled after the surrender. I have been given discretion by my government as to the punishment to be meted out for acts that occurred during a period when every man's hand was against every other man. It is not meet in this age, when universal peace is dawning for the world, that Mexico should remain in barbarism. The acts of the troublous times through which we have recently moved belong to a dead past and should be buried with that past. The act of which you have been found guilty was repeated again and again on both sides. That the revolution has triumphed is no cause for committing in the name of justice acts of revenge."

"The finding of the jury is set aside. You are at liberty to go free."

By his address the judge attempted to prepare the feelings of those present for what had neither been expected nor desired. But the temper of the people was revengeful and had for ages been used to a different principle. A few applauded, but the majority grumbled. There were those present who had suffered at the hands of the man to whom this magnanimous treatment had been accorded. They had brought the accusation that they might be revenged—might revenge the dead they loved. They rebelled against the decision. Cries of "Hang him!" "Shoot him!" "Use the machete" were heard, and a movement was made by the most active toward the prisoner. The judge arose and, raising his hand, enjoined silence.

"In striking this man," he said, "you strike the girl who loves him."

"He struck those we loved!" some one cried.

"Let me tell you one thing more, that which I spoke of, but did not speak. You remember that I mentioned the escape of one whom the prisoner would have sacrificed. I am that person."

A silence followed this announcement. That the judge had set aside a sentence of death upon the man who had intended to take his life filled those present with wonder. He had secured their attention. He went a step further.

"I will tell you how I escaped. I owe my life to that girl," pointing. "She it was who gave me a disguise and drove me through her father's guards, risking her life for mine. Had it been discovered that the person sitting beside her was the rebel they were watching for she would have doubtless been sacrificed. If you strike him you strike her, and through her you strike me, who have done my part to establish the government under which we may have for peace and trust."

The crisis had come and turned in favor of the judge. Those who had opposed his decision stood looking sullenly on, while the others were won over by his magnanimity and by sympathy for the girl who had saved his life. The advocates of taking the law into their own hands began to move away muttering, leaving only those who had been converted to the cause of mercy. Those most sympathetic gathered about the girl, whether for her protection or in sympathy. Then gradually the crowd melted away and left the three principal participants in the drama.

Concia went to the judge, took his hand in hers and kissed it. Her father stood with folded arms looking at vacancy. A short time before he had been expecting death. He was now conscious only that his life had been spared and he feared nothing.

There is a sequel to this story, but this is not the place for it. Indeed, the events narrated happened too recently for it to be a finished romance. One thing is certain. This renouncing of vengeance was brought about by love.

Roman Bricks.

When the preparations for rebuilding the Campanile, in Venice, were undertaken the archaeologists were afforded an opportunity to make some interesting studies of the bricks. It was found that they had been used in arches, fortifications, the tops of walls and in other ways before they were built into the campanile and that they were not Venetian but Roman bricks. These ancient bricks were made in slices, for in many the layers could be seen undisturbed. It is said that bricks made this way can bear a greater weight than modern bricks. The bricks examined were of the first century. One of them bore the imprint of a horseshoe, which may prove that Romans used a horseshoe like ours, although it is generally believed that their horseshoes were strapped on, not nailed.

Loss of Weight in Rowing.

A well known physician in New York city who has long been identified with aquatics, says that the average individual loss of weight in a four mile pull, whether in a race or a row against time, is two or three pounds. Under peculiarly trying conditions of heat the individual loss may reach five or six pounds. On the other hand, says this physician, many oarsmen go through a four mile pull with the loss of only about a pound in weight. This lost weight is fully recovered by the next day. Proper training is so arranged in these days that a four mile race comes only when the oarsmen are thoroughly rested and at the top of their training weight, so that the loss of weight rarely indicates that the individual is "stale," or below good training condition.

Goldsmith's Obituary Notice.

It would be difficult to find a more quaint announcement of death than that published in an old newspaper in 1774, at the time of Oliver Goldsmith's demise.

"1774, April 4. Died, Dr. Oliver Goldsmith. Deserted the village. The traveler hath laid him down to rest; the good natured man is no more; he stooped but to conquer; the vicar hath performed his sad office; it is a mournful task from which the hermit may essay to meet the dread tyrant with more than Grecian or Roman fortitude."

Dead Leaves as Fertilizers.

According to tests made in France, dead leaves possess a high value as fertilizers. They are extensively used by the market gardeners about the city of Nantes. Pear leaves have the highest quantity of nitrogenous, oak leaves come next, and the leaves of vines stand lowest in value.

Kindness Misdirected.

"What has become of the meerschau pipe?" inquired an inveterate smoker.

"Well, my dear," his wife replied, "it was getting awfully discolored, so I gave it a coat of white enamel, and it is not quite dry yet!"

Extravagant.

Hub—Reckless and extravagant—! When did I ever make a useless purchase? Wife—Why, there's that fire extinguisher you bought a year ago! We've never used it once!

Seek the Light.

If there is anywhere on your horizon a spot of light, fix your eyes upon it and turn your thoughts away from the clouds which may cover the rest of the sky.

Keeping It Dark.

"Say, you, why don't you work?" "I have no license." "You don't need a license to work." "Now, don't you tell my wife that."

Hard to Keep Up.

"Charlie is always in a hurry." "Of course." "Why of course?" "He belongs to such a rapid set."

The Oven

In making cakes the first thing to attend to is the oven. In order to see that this is at the proper heat a piece of white paper should be put into the oven, and if it remains white or becomes only slightly tinged, it is too cool; if it becomes a pretty shade of pale brown the heat is alright, and, cool; if it becomes a pretty shade of brown it is too hot. If a coal stove be used, care must be taken that all the soot which collects above the oven is removed, as soot prevents the flame from getting to the oven. If a gas stove be used it should be lit at least fifteen minutes before the cake is put in. Small cakes require the hottest oven, so as to be quickly baked through. On the other hand, large fruit cakes do not require such a quick oven, as if the heat is too fierce the cakes get hardened on the outside long before they are cooked through. The process, therefore, should be more gradual, although the oven that is too hot is better than one that is too cool.

ST. VITUS DANCE

CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Chorea, or as it is more generally known, St. Vitus dance, is a disease that usually attacks the young children, though older persons may be afflicted with it. Its most common symptoms are a twitching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or to walk steadily, and in severe cases even the speech is affected. The disease is due to debility of the nerves and is always cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, tone and strengthen the nerves and thus restore the sufferer to good health.

The following is a striking instance of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do in this trouble. Mrs. Chas. Phipps, Pelee Island, Ont., says:—"At the age of fourteen my eldest daughter, Edith, became much run down, and the trouble developed into St. Vitus dance. First her left arm became affected, then the left leg and entire left side. She grew so bad that she actually could not hold anything in her hand, and could only go about with a sliding, jerking motion. Notwithstanding that we were giving her medicine, she seemed to be growing worse, and finally her speech became much affected. We became so much alarmed about her that finally her father got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we began giving her these. In the course of a few weeks she was much better, and before all the pills were gone she was again enjoying perfect health. This was in 1908, and as she has not had a symptom of the trouble since I feel justified in saying the cure is permanent."

Be sure you get the genuine pills which are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Attractive Bait.

A young preacher was fishing for trout accompanied by a couple of young girls from his parish. A farmer who was also out fishing called to the young clergyman:

"Ketchin' many trout?"

"I am a fisher of men," said the young preacher with dignity.

"Well," the farmer smiled, and then looking at the girls, said: "I see you've got the right kind of bait with you."

C. P. R. Double Track to Brandon

In its constant efforts to give its patrons the very best of transportation facilities, the Canadian Pacific Railway is making a special effort to complete the laying of its double track between Winnipeg and Brandon by the end of the year. In fact, C. P. R. officials stated recently there was no doubt but that the new tracks would be completed and in operation by the end of December. It is 135 miles from Winnipeg to Brandon, but the contractors on the job are pushing forward the work and are making good progress. Between Portage la Prairie and Brandon, which is 77 1/2 miles, all the grading is completed, and up to date 75 per cent of the track has been laid.

When the work is completed the Canadian Pacific will have a double track between Fort William and Port Arthur and Brandon, and if the company's traffic continues to increase at its present rate a couple of years will see the double track stretching from the head of the Great Lakes through the three Prairie Provinces to Calgary. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., hinted at this in his annual report to the directors of the company last month.

While this is the longest single piece of double tracking being done by the C. P. R., there are a couple of smaller sections in Saskatchewan between Moose Jaw and Caron and Moose Jaw and Pasqua. Grading on these lines is about 85 per cent finished, but no rails have been laid as yet.

New Grain Exchange

The new Grain Exchange lately opened at Fort William will give farmers and dealers another exchange through which to sell their grain.

Fort William and Port Arthur being at the head of the Great Lakes, and being the storehouses of all grain grain west of Lake Superior, it is only natural that grain exporters think that Fort William is the logical point for a market for western grain.

A sample market is to be established by the new exchange which should be a great boon for the farmers and dealers. The mixed crop that we have this year can be disposed of, in most cases, to much better advantage by selling on sample than on grade, and the Fort William and Port Arthur Grain Exchange is to be congratulated on taking this step forward.

The only thing now required is to induce the Government to change the Grain Act so that a sample market can be established at the head of the Lakes. The Government should see at a glance that it would mean better prices for the producer for all grades of wheat, oats, barley and flax.

These Pills Cure Rheumatism.—To the many who suffer from rheumatism a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended. They have pronounced action upon the liver and kidneys and by regulating the action of these organs act as an alternative in preventing the admixture of uric acid and blood that causes this painful disorder. They must be taken according to directions and used steadily and they will speedily give evidence of their beneficial effects.

When to Marry

January's brides are likely to become widows early.

February brides will have very happy married lives.

March brides will probably make their homes abroad.

April brides will have lives of change, and experience many ups and downs.

May brides will entertain many strangers.

June brides will find life a long honeymoon.

July brides have bitter sweet memories.

August brides are lucky in finding a real friend in their husbands.

September brings a smooth and serene future to its brides.

October gives a future of toil and hardship.

November brides will be happy, and those who, according to the rhyme, marry "in December cheer," will find that "Love's star burns brighter from year to year."

The Stomach Needs Help

The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels Must Be Kept Active to Ensure Health

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY - LIVER PILLS

Not one person in a hundred can get along at this time of year without using something to enliven the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Too much eating of heavy artificial foods, too little outdoor exercise, this is the explanation.

The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fall and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.

There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and this is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This medicine gets the bowels in action at once, and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthful action, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression.

You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment for biliousness, constipation, backache and kidney disease than Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Canadian Rockies.

Albert Groll, the noted New York landscape artist, likes the Canadian Rocky Mountains. Mr. Groll has spent several weeks in the Rockies sketching scenes along the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and he is enthusiastic over the beauty of the mountains. Stopping over at Duluth on his way back to Broadway, Mr. Groll was interviewed by a paper of that city.

"It is a beautiful country," said Mr. Groll, "and there are boundless opportunities for the photographer and the artist to get into close touch with Nature. Even if the artist never leaves the lines of the C.P.R. there is plenty of magnificent scenery to satisfy even the most ardent seeker of beauty."

Mr. Groll predicted a big inroad of American tourists into the Canadian Rockies next year.

DID NOT HAVE TO CALL THE DOCTOR

BECAUSE SHE TRIED DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS FIRST

One Box of Them Cured Mrs. Mary A. Cook's Rheumatism, From Which She Had Suffered for Fourteen Years

Mannheim, Ont.—(Special)—How quickly and easily Rheumatism can be cured when you use the right means is shown in the case of Mrs. Mary A. Cook, well known and highly respected here. In an interview regarding her cure, of which all the village knows, Mrs. Cook says:

"I had Rheumatism so bad that sometimes I would sit up nearly all night.

I first thought I would try the doctors but luckily I decided to first try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"They cured me and I didn't have to try the doctors. And just to think that after fourteen years of suffering one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills should cure! I will recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone who suffers from Rheumatism."

Yes, it is easy to cure Rheumatism when you go the right way about it. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. If the kidneys are working right they will strain all the uric acid out of the blood and there can be no Rheumatism. Dodd's Kidney Pills always make the kidneys work right.

Brisket of Beef

The economically disposed housewife will find that the inferior parts of good meat are more advantageous than the prime cuts of inferior meat.

Brisket of beef is a part which is sold at a low price, the reason being that the meat is coarse, the proportion of bone is high, and there is a large amount of fat. Yet, with proper cooking, brisket can be made as delicate eating as the prime parts of the animal, and the trouble entailed by cooking it properly is well repaid by the reduction in the butcher's bill.

Great hearts alone understand how much glory there is in being good.

Improvements at Fort William

The Canadian Pacific Railway has started work on its new operations at Fort William and Port Arthur. The work of this year will consist chiefly in the erection of a new coal handling plant, but in connection with the other operations there is considerable dredging to be done. The Canadian Stewart Company has the contract for the building of the coal plant, and it is stated that the appropriation for the work is in the neighborhood of one million dollars. The plant, it is stated, will take care of most of the soft coal assigned to the company at the head of the lakes, and it is hoped that it will be finished in time to handle some of next year's coal business.

It is also stated that the new plant will be built in the form of a loop, and the cars which will carry the coal back from the towers will run around the loop and dump at the desired intervals. Bridging the space between the loop there will be one of two lines of track, along which other cars can be switched in order to dump sufficient coal to fill up the centres of the pit.

Frivolous Definitions

Reputation.—What the world thinks about us; character is what our wives know about us.

Gossip.—The counterfeit coin of conversation.

A Secret.—Confidential information that one woman gets another woman to keep for her.

Inspiration.—A word used by poets in mistake for perspiration.

A Theatrical Angel.—Known by the company he keeps.

The Leisure Class.—Tramps and the very rich.

The Dreamer.—Tomorrow I made a fortune.

Optimism.—A habit that women have of looking on the bright side of things; mirrors, for instance.

The Engagement Ring.—Matrimony's promissory note.

It Rubs Pain Away.—There is no liniment so efficacious in overcoming pain as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The hand that rubs it in rubs the pain away, and on this account there is no preparation that stands so high in public esteem. There is no surer pain-killer procurable as thousands can attest who have used it successfully in treating many other ailments.

The Imagination

The imagination used aright, has wonderful power by broadening and blessing life. By means of it we can travel with the explorer into new lands and through biography enter into their lives. It is through the imagination that fiction has its abuses. History may seem but a dull record of changing races and dynasties, of battles and dates, until some vivid story makes the times live before us in the person of its characters. The printed page is nothing until it paints pictures that we can see, and heroes and martyrs with their struggles and achievements become real to us as our fancy is able to clothe them with life and grasp their difficulties and purposes. Most of us can recall books that have had much to do with the shaping of our character by the ideals they set before us—book friends that have made us stronger, more patient and unselfish, because we admired those qualities in them while we were sharing their life for a little time. Perhaps, too, we have known books whose personages fascinated while they did not help, and which left us with a little less reverence and faith than before, a little less faith in the final outcome of truth and right. Whatever a book may claim to be, we can judge it pretty correctly by the effect it has upon us—whether we rise up from its reading feeling better, kinder and stronger for our work, or whether our world seems a more dreary place and our efforts not worth while.

quickly stops coughs, cures colds, heals the throat and lungs - 25 cents.

In Connecticut some of the old laws framed by Puritans have been enforced within recent years. Not long ago a prominent manufacturer was summoned for kissing his wife in a tram car. The complainant was an elderly spinster who was travelling in the car at the time the offence was committed, and deposed that the affectionate husband not only kissed his wife, but kept his arms around her waist during the whole journey. She pleaded that as this conduct occurred on a Sunday it was punishable under a seventeenth-century statute. The judge concurred and inflicted a fine of five dollars and costs.

The salary bylaw has been the main topic of discussion in the city during the past week. It is generally condemned, and most of the rate-payers appear to be in favor of some steps being taken to prevent its passage. The time for a general airing of municipal affairs seems to be near at hand.

A Big Success

The sale of work held in the parish hall on Thursday afternoon and evening by the Woman's Auxiliary of Holy Trinity church was a big financial success, nearly all the articles being disposed of. The hall was prettily decorated, and refreshments were served during the afternoon and evening. After the sale a short musical program was rendered. The principal vocal numbers were solos by Mrs. Ed Davis and Miss Edna Traunweiser and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Painton. All were highly appreciated by those present.

Eugene Herrick has joined the ranks of the deerslayers. He recently killed three buck deer on Fourth of July creek. The largest one weighed 350 pounds.

The Schubert concert in the opera house next Thursday night will be the musical event of the season. None should miss this treat.

by needless alarm, it is to be hoped that fruit growers will investigate the subject rationally, and, having formed their conclusions, work out the remedy best adapted to their own orchards. It is encouraging to note that the prevalence of fruit pit in one orchard has no effect whatever on the orchards of the same district. Contagion and infection are impossible. On this account, no governmental or municipal efforts at control are possible or need be undertaken. This does not absolve any progressive fruit grower from endeavoring to bring his neighbor into line with proper methods, so as to eliminate this trouble, and with water core, winter injury, to some extent aphids, from the district.

I have been instructed by the deputy minister of agriculture to prepare for general publication a bulletin dealing fully with this subject, which will be issued in time to be of service for the coming season. In the meantime, fruit growers who have seen special phrases of the subject not previously brought to our notice, are asked to correspond with us accordingly. Co-operation in the matter will do much to secure a reasonable attitude in the matter and the adoption of feasible methods of control.

Want Act Enforced

The following resolution was passed at a public meeting held in the parish house of the Episcopal church, this city, on Tuesday, the 21st inst:

Moved by Rev. M. D. McKee and seconded by F. Miller, and resolved: That we are in hearty sympathy with, unanimously endorse and press upon the honorable attorney-general the necessity of granting the prayer of the resolution passed by the public meeting held in Vernon, B.C., a copy of said resolution being herewith appended:

Whereas, The Lord's Day Act is, when enforced, the most efficient law we have for securing the observance of the Lord's day; and,

Whereas, It appears that the leave of the honorable attorney-general of the province is required before commencing any prosecution for violation of the Lord's Day Act, and that the honorable attorney-general has made public his intention of withholding such permission in all ordinary cases, and in consequence the Act has been, except in a few isolated instances, unenforced in this province; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the earnest desire of this meeting that the Lord's Day Act should be rigidly enforced, and to that end, that the honorable attorney-general be respectfully but urgently requested to grant his permission to commence a prosecution under the Act whenever it is made to appear to him that there is reasonable cause to believe the Act has been violated, and a responsible person is prepared to lay information.

DIED

Saturday morning, November 18, at 12:30 o'clock, the death of Hazel Irene, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pearce, occurred at the home of her parents, one mile south of this city, after a brief illness. Deceased was aged 12 years, 2 months and 24 days, and was an exceptionally bright child. The sympathy of the people of the community are tendered to the bereaved parents.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon from the home of the parents of the deceased, Rev. J. Calvert conducting the service. The attendance was very large, and there were many pretty floral offerings.

DIED—In the city of Calgary, Alta., on Wednesday, November 15, 1911, at the home of her daughter, 1608 Thirteenth Avenue West, Mary Colingwood Henderson, wife of John B. Henderson, aged fifty eight years. The funeral was held from the Church of England in that city at 11 o'clock last Friday morning.

Mrs. Henderson was a native of New York state. Shortly after her marriage she removed to Kansas with her husband, and after a short residence in that state, they made the journey overland to the coast in the pioneer days. After many short trips, they finally landed in Chilliwack, B.C., and became pioneers of that community. They resided at the coast until the late '90s, when the family removed to Grand Forks, and lived here until a year ago, when they moved to Calgary. M. S. Henderson was the mother of ten children, four sons and six daughters—Mrs. Peter B. Nelson, of Calgary; Mrs. Harry Lutley, of this city; Mrs. C. Coughlan, of Rosland; Mrs. Campbell, of Barkerville; Mrs. Miller, of Arizona; Miss Mona, Harold and Hereward, of Calgary, and Arthur and John. Deceased was a lady of most admirable traits and a high sense of honor and duty, and no tribute to her memory, though couched in the most glowing language, could do the subject justice. The many friends of the family in this city will be pained to learn of her death.

Charlie and Walter James and Tom Finn, of Republic, who have been working the Shawnee mine, near Danville, under a lease for several months, shipped a car of high-grade copper ore to the Greenwood smelter last week.

"HOME AGAIN"

The Beautiful Picture for Grand Forks Sun and Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star Subscribers this Season. An Inspiration of Love and Affection---A Picture that will be like a Member of the Family---A Daily Study for Old and Young

THE Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, acknowledged to be the greatest and best family and farm paper on the continent, has on many occasions given its readers most delightful premium pictures, but this season they have secured what is beyond any question of doubt the best picture ever offered newspaper readers. It is entitled "Home Again" and describes a touching but joyful incident between two friends who meet after anxious separation.

"Laddie," a collie dog, famous for his beauty and gentleness, winner of many prizes at dog shows, the pride of the family and neighborhood, has been stolen, and after many days' absence he escapes one night from his captor and returns home on a snowy winter's morning with the rope which he broke in his struggles for freedom dangling from his collar.

His familiar bark brings his little mistress, Marjorie, to the door and she throws her arms around her trusty playmate's neck with cries of joy which bring her mother and brother to the door. "Laddie" is equally delighted to be "Home Again," and answers her welcome by putting his paws on her shoulder and resting his head against her breast with a little whine, which in his dog language means—"Where I love is Home."

The sweet-faced young mother, a woman of soft curves, tender eyes and parted lips—the two glad-eyed children—an eager boy with hair like his mother's and the quick gesture of excited boyhood; the warm-hearted girl with rippling locks, her affectionate arms around the shaggy neck of the beautiful collie, all go to form a picture that will win a favored place on the walls of any home.

The picture is by the celebrated artist, Arthur J. Elsley, famous for his skillful and sympathetic painting of children and animals.

The beautiful picture "Home Again" on heavy plate paper 22x29 inches all ready for framing will be mailed FREE to every subscriber of The Sun and Family Herald and Weekly Star for 1912.

The small sum of $1.50 will secure the two papers for a full year including a copy of the charming picture "Home Again," which alone is easily worth a two dollar bill, in fact it could not be bought at that price.

Every home in the Boundary should get the big $1.50 worth this season.

SUFFERERS FROM PILES!

Zam-Buk Has Cured These

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others?

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it, and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 183-185 St. Joseph Street, St. Roché, Que. P. Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to any one who suffers from piles."

Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but anything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations. Try Zam-Buk soap, 25c. tablet.

There is no hod-carrying in Japan. The native builders have a method of transporting mortar which makes it seem more like play than work—to the onlooker. The mortar is mixed in a pile on the street. The Worth of Health

A man's best asset is his health, for without health he is capable of very little usefulness, and of practically no enjoyment. In order to achieve the highest one is capable of, and to get the most out of life, one must be physically sound, so that greatest usefulness and highest enjoyment have health as an asset.

The nation is an aggregation of individuals, and its greatest asset is the combined assets of its citizens, so that the greatest part of a nation's wealth consists of the health of its people. How large a contributor to national wealth is public health, is shown by the conclusion arrived at by Dr. Wiley, an authority on public hygiene in the United States.

The data from which Dr. Wiley worked out his conclusion are well known—the census, giving the number of producers in the country, and the economic value of a working man's life, or of his physical efficiency, which courts often have to fix in actions for damages, because of loss of life or disabling accident.

These are the factors which produce Dr. Wiley's estimate of the value of the health of the people of the United States which is placed at the almost incomprehensible sum of five hundred and forty billions of dollars.

Public health is therefore, one of the great national resources that must be conserved if the production of wealth and development are to continue as they should.

The big Dominion has room for millions of people, but the kind it requires is people as sound in body as in mind. It is people before all things else—before lands and forests, mines and fisheries—that make a nation.

The transition from winter's cold to summer's heat frequently puts a strain upon the system that produces internal complications, always painful and often serious. A common form of disorder is dysentery, to which many are prone in the spring and summer. The very best medicine to use in subduing this painful ailment is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It is a standard remedy, sold everywhere.

Trial is Inexpensive.—To those who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, or any ailment arising from the derangement of the digestive system, a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended, should the sufferer be unacquainted with them. The trial will be inexpensive and the result will be another customer for this excellent medicine. So effective is their action that many cures can certainly be traced to their use where other pills have proved ineffective.

Ruskin as a Grocer

These increasing prices of foods recall a remarkable attempt, made in England thirty-five years ago, to supply the poor with tea at cost prices and in quantities small enough to meet the convenience of the shortest purse. The attempt was remarkable because of the man who made it, for he was John Ruskin, the great critic and philosopher. In 1874 Ruskin opened a shop in Paddington street, Notting Hill, London, in order as he announced, "to supply the poor with pure tea in packets as small as they chose to buy, without making a profit on the subdivision, larger orders being, of course, equally acceptable from anybody who cares to promote honest dealing." The shop did not attract.

Ruskin complained that "the poor only like to buy their tea where it is brilliantly lighted and eloquently ticketed; and as I resolutely refuse to compete with my neighboring tradesmen either in gas or rhetoric, the patient subdivision of my parcels passes little recognized as an advantage by my uncalculating public." The shop soon closed down, and the grocery trade lost the most distinguished representative it is ever likely to possess.

TEETHING TIME WORRY
Baby's teething time was once a source of worry to all mothers—it is yet a time of worry to many, though there are thousands of mothers who have learned the secret which banishes the worry, who see their little ones suffering from difficult teething; who are worn out by day and kept awake by night by the cries of the baby in distress, should follow the example of the thousands and give their little ones Baby's Own Tablets—the remedy for worry—the never failing banisher of baby's pains. Concerning them Mrs. H. Monette, Jr., Rapide de l'Original, Que., says:—"My baby cried day and night and suffered from his teeth. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets made him healthy and happy and his teething easy and painless. I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Training of Children
One cannot begin the training of children in good habits too soon; it is a mistake to say, "The child is too young, I will correct him when he is older." It will give parent and child more trouble for the habit will have formed, and though it is never too late to form good habits, or alas, to contract bad ones, the attention and volition that ought to be given to other things has to be used to overcome that which might have been done unconsciously almost while the child was very young. A child shows signs of being very passionate; every time you see storm signals, change the current of its thoughts; do not give it what it is crying for, if you have determined not to, that will only strengthen the bad habit. As the child grows older you will find good temper has become a habit, and perhaps, remembering your own stormy childhood and the misery it caused you and others to cure your passionate temper, you feel thankful indeed to think how much your child has been spared.

POKER AND LAW

Judge Hoke of Sandy Bend Explains Relationship.

LOSER YELLED FOR JUSTICE.

Chinese Witnesses Said Game Had Been Square and Redheaded Mike Had Won Only Because of His Great Luck in Accumulating Full Hands.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

“WHAT is the cry that comes to me an hour after midnight, when the Red Dog saloon has been closed and I have sought my bed?” asked Judge Hoke of Sandy Bend as he opened court and looked over his audience. “Is it the cry of a hungry coyote, of a prowling wolf, of a steer which has broken his leg in a stampede? Is it the cry of a night bird, a lost woman or a wounded man?”

“Three nights ago such a cry came to my ears as I dozed, and I felt shivers go over me. I got up, seized my guns and opened the door. There stood the critter who had uttered the cry, and as he saw me he wailed out again: “Justice! Justice! Justice!”

“Not to get anybody worked up to a nervous state, let me tell you that Jack Taylor stood there before me. The cry had come from his lips. He sits over there on a bench, and his mug is familiar to all of us. He’s been hanging around Sandy Bend for a matter of three years, and it’s been generally believed that he was a handy man with a gun. I’ve been one who believed it, and when I think of it I could weep tears of chagrin.

Issued Warrant For Mike.

“Yes, Jack Taylor stood there and wailed out that he wanted justice, and it was my opinion that he must have been terribly wronged. He tells me what seems to be a plain story, and my judicial sympathies are aroused, and I issue a warrant for Red Handed Mike and tell the constable to bring him in dead or alive.

“That’s Mike over there. He don’t know one end of a gun from another, and every Chinaman in town has given him the boot a dozen times over. He’s red headed, but he hasn’t got no more fight in him than a jack rabbit.

“Jack Taylor tells me that as he was going up the trail that night to his shack somebody holds him up with two guns under his nose and goes through him for $10. He recognizes that somebody as Red Handed Mike. He makes an awful struggle to save his dollars, but is knocked down and left for dead. When I heard of that bold faced robbery and assault within eighty rods of this yere courthouse I made up my mind to give Mike such a sentence as would make his hair curl in knots. He was found by the constable and brought in yesterday, and I don’t think that any of you are gazin’ at a desperado when you look at him.

Is All Right on Poker.

“Now for the other side of the story. Mike was lookin’ round for free drinks the other night when he runs across Jack. Jack asks him to come up to his shack and play poker. No matter what sort of a critter Mike is in other directions, he’s all right on poker. This court has tried him to its sorrow. His trick of holdin’ full houses and fours is simply remarkable. He goes along with Jack. He hasn’t a red cent, but he has an old silver watch to make a pot on. He wins three on the very first pot.

“Then two Chinamen drop in and see the rest of the game, and they tell the same story. There’s a five dollar pot on the table, and Jack gets three and draws down to his hand and bets $1. Mike gets two pairs and draws another queen to make a full house. He sees the dollar and sees one better.

They see and raise, and when Jack finally calls he’s a beaten man.

“The next pot is a little better for Jack. He stands pat on an ace full, while Mike holds up three tens and catches the fourth. Then it was a good thing to see. Mike’s watch and winnins and clothes was in that pot, and so was Jack’s money and guns. When the call came he was a busted man and chills was gallopin’ up and down his back.

Says He Is Ruined Man.

“He yells out that he had been cheated, but the Chinamen swear that it was all fair play. Mike leaves a dollar on the table, accordin’ to Hoyle, and saunters off with the balance, and Jack Taylor cries out that he is a ruined man and falls down in a fit. It was after he had recovered that he comes crawlin’ down to the Red Dog and I hear his wail from the darkness.

“Feller citizens, that is no more to be told. If any of you can’t see that Jack Taylor is a squaler you’ve got patches on your eyes. You must also realize the principle at stake. The noble game of poker is totterin’ to its fall, or would be totterin’ if this yere court wasn’t here to extend a bracin’ hand. We may steal each other’s hosses, but we must not steal the foundation stones of poker. The man who loses has to pay, and the loser who squeals can’t abide among men.

“Jack Taylor, if you had anything to pay with I’d fine you $10 and costs, but as you are busted all I can do is to advise you to take a walk. Walk in any direction, but walk fast and keep goin’. If you show up in Sandy Bend agin within a year I won’t be responsible for what may happen.

Poker and Sentiment.

“Poker was invented not that one man might skin another, but that the nobility of soul of all men might be drawn to the surface and made better. The man who has stole hosses, abandoned his wife, driven his children out into the world and become a thing of evil can’t sit in a game of poker with $20 in the pot and four aces in his hand without sentiment bubblin’ up in his soul and carryin’ him back to the happy days of childhood. I’ve knowed ‘em right in my Red Dog saloon to rake in the pot and resolve to lead better lives thereafter. Poker built up the west and made it the noble and glorious country it is. Abolish the game and what becomes of us? In a year we would be wearin’ tan shoes and eyeglasses and the gun would be relegated to the scrap heap.

“Mike, stand up. You’ve got all the money and Jack’s guns besides. You haven’t done anything to be fined for, but you’ve got to pay $6 costs allee same, and I’ll take advantage of the occasion to observe that if you’ll drop around to the Red Dog saloon this evenin’ I’ll start a little game for you and do my best to take them shooters off your hands.

Booze and the Law.

“There’s a little matter this yere court wishes to refer to this mornin’. Sartin individuals in Sandy Bend have been heard to say that it don’t look quite the thing for a man to keep the Red Dog and run a hall of justice at the same time. I can’t see where there’s anything wrong. When I am in the Red Dog I’m one of you. When I am in this hall of justice I’m representin’ the majesty and dignity of the law. I’m knowin’ none of you to favor you over another. I’m lookin’ to ladle out justice and give you a square deal, and the Chinaman who so forgets himself to spit on the stove never gets outdoor without a fine of at least $3.

“Here in the hall of justice my chest swells out. I am the ‘it.’ I rule the roost. I represent truth, integrity, law, justice and several other things.

“At the Red Dog I humbly set out the best drink for 15 cents to be found west of Chicago, and if I take a hand in a poker game it is only to be a good fellow and show my love of country. I separate one position from ‘tother as wide as the poles, but any critter findin’ any more fault will find himself sandwiched between the Red Dog and this yere court and both doin’ their best to use him up.

“The calendar bein’ clear, we will now disperse until justice calls us together agin to dispense her favors to rich and pore alike, no matter in what clime they was born in or what particular object brung them to Sandy Bend.”

Musician and Scientist.

There is no more brilliant scientist in the world to-day than Sir William Ramsay, who has been warning Britain that, at the present rate of consumption, her coal supply will only last another 175 years. His most wonderful discoveries have been in connection with new gases in the atmosphere, upon which such names as argon, neon, and xenon have been bestowed, and the experimental work which led to these discoveries ranks as the most refined ever carried out. Of xenon, for example, there is only about one part in 70,000,000 parts of air. Sir William devotes his leisure to music. He plays both the piano and violin and has written the words of not a few songs. The collecting of curios is another of Sir William’s hobbies, and at his house at Regent’s Park may be seen many queer treasures thousands of years old.

THE “NINE DAYS’ WONDER.”

William Kemp, the Jigger and Jester, Was the Original One.

It was a certain William Kemp, the most original famous dancer of Queen Elizabeth’s day and the creator of low comedy roles in Shakespearean plays, who was the original “nine days’ wonder,” for Kemp, with ribbons on his jerkin and bells around his legs, jigged and capered all the way from London to Norwich, a distance of some 125 miles. He danced along for nine days and thus made his name and the expression part of household conversation in every hamlet in England and on the continent as well.

Accounts of Will Kemp occupy many pages in the books on Elizabethan drama and those on the manners and customs of the time. It is universally conceded that Kemp created the character of Dogberry in “Much Ado About Nothing,” and that of Peter in “Romeo and Juliet.”

As for the “nine days’ wonder,” Elizabethan writers, Ben Jonson among others, often refer to him. He was the subject of many pamphlets, and Kemp himself wrote an autobiography. Only one copy of Kemp’s “Nine Days’ Wonder, Performed In a Dance From London to Norwich,” is extant, in the Bodleian library at Oxford. But there have been several reprints. Kemp, who describes himself as a man who spent his life “in mad liggings and merry lestes,” recounts blithely and wittily how he and his laborer made their way through Romford, Chelmsford, Sudbury, Rockland and Barford Bridge to Norwich.

They were entertained royally along the route and despite the bad weather, which delayed them, would doubtless have arrived at Norwich long before the twenty-three days were up had not the good folk along the road been so hospitable.

Kemp started from the house of the Lord Mayor of London, and at Norwich he was received by the mayor of that flourishing town, who presented him with a sum of money and pensioned him for life.

When he again reached London, where he had “put out” a sum of money against accident along the road, Kemp was repaid fourfold. It was in 1599 that Kemp performed his “nine days’ wonder.” It is written, but with doubtful authority, that the idol of the Elizabethan populace afterward capped this feat by jiggling over the Alps.

In the old woodcut in the account of Kemp’s “dance” “that most comical and conceited Cavalier Monsieur du Kemp” is seen in Elizabethan morris dance costume jigging away to the music of pipe and drum of his laborer.

Famous Smokers and Antis.

Mr. Gladstone detested tobacco. Thomas Hardy, the great novelist, has never smoked a pipeful nor a cigar in his life. Ruskin abhorred smoking of all kinds.

Sir T. Lauder Brunton does not use tobacco in any form. Other eminent men, past and present, who have disliked tobacco are John Stuart Mill, Sir Robert S. Ball, who never smoked but once, when he was at school; Gen. Sir William Butler, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, the great physiologist; Matthew Arnold, Dr. Alexander Bain, Professors Skeat and Murray, the philologists; Frederick Harrison, Professors Freeman and Gardner, and Mr. Lecky, the historian; W. D. Howells, and Sir Erskine May.

Non-smokers are, therefore, in very good company. On the other hand, Mark Twain said he commenced smoking when eight years old, and smoked 300 cigars a month from the age of thirty onwards. Edison, at work, chews tobacco constantly. George A. Sala said he was a constant smoker, but if he could begin life again he would never touch tobacco. Mr. G. A. Henty smoked from after breakfast until he went to bed at 3 a.m.

Hero of Balacava.

“Well done, young Wombwell. I’ll write to your father in Yorkshire tonight to tell him how proud he ought to be of his son.” Such was the remark made to Sir George Wombwell, who recently celebrated his golden wedding, by the late Duke of Cambridge, when the remnant of the 17th Lancers—the “Death or Glory Boys”—to which Sir George was then attached as a cornet, returned from the “Valley of Death.”

Sir George rode on the right flank of Lord Cardigan as extra galloper. Twice he had his mount shot from under him, but he went to within a hundred yards of the terrible batteries unscathed. For his gallantry he was promoted, and ultimately retired from the army in 1855, on succeeding his father in the baronetcy.

Largest of Flowers.

The largest of all the flowers of the world is said to be the rafflesia, a native of Sumatra, so-called after Sir Stamford Raffles. This immense plant, says The Scientific American, is composed of five round petals of a brickish color, each measuring a foot across. These are covered with numerous irregular yellowish white swellings. The petals surround a cup nearly a foot wide, the margin of which bears the stamens. The cup of the rafflesia is filled with a fleshy disk, the upper surface of which is covered with projections like miniature cows’ horns. The cup, when free from its contents, will hold about twelve pints. The flower weighs about fifteen pounds and is very thick, the petals being three-quarters of an inch

WORRYING HIS WORSHIP.

About the Strange People Who Pester the Magistrate.

The magistrate is the “poor man’s lawyer,” and while sitting on the bench he has some weird and wonderful applications made to him. Anyone who listened in a London court to the strange medley of “business” that is transacted before the ordinary cases come on would soon see that there is a vast proportion of the British public who imagine the Bench to be all-powerful and endowed with unlimited knowledge, says a London paper.

His worship sees a very great deal of the seamy side of life, but, fortunately, his day’s grim duty is relieved by quaint touches of humor.

Many of the people in the underworld, either ignorant of the correct way to address a magistrate, or awed into confusion, make amusing mistakes on this point. They say, “Your lordship,” “Mister,” or “Your honor.” But nobody smiles; that sort of thing is too frequent.

Apparently, many of the poorer folk think his worship has merely to raise his little finger, and the whole power of the Empire can be called to do his bidding.

A woman with fiery red hair stands up in court, eyes his worship, and then pours out her troubles.

“Liza Awkins, which she lives down our passage, calls arter me ‘carrots,’ your worship. I says nothin’, ‘ceptin’ scratch ‘er face, and now she’s took to walkin’ out wiv my young man.”

“Well, what do you expect me to do?” asks the busy magistrate wearily. “A summons, sir,” she replies.

Even if he had time to argue with her, it would take a long time to convince the lady with the red hair that he has no power whatever to adjust all the lovers’ quarrels in London. Jealousy is at the root of a great many of these applications.

In many cases the services of that Admirable Crichton, the warrant-officer, are utilized. Without a piece of blue paper in his hand, he goes round and explains delicately that official notice has been taken of the situation. In nine cases out of ten his influence produces a remedy—at any rate, for the time.

Sometimes a burly navy comes to court with a pitiful tale to the effect that his wife positively refuses to unlock the door of his home when he returns from work. Again the warrant officer is instructed to adjust matters, and generally he manages to put the domestic differences on a more satisfactory footing.

Generally the applicants have not the remotest notion on what legal grounds they can obtain the issue of a summons; but stipendiaries, as a rule, exercise all their patience in endeavoring to help the people who feel they have a grievance.

“Please, sir, I want a divorce,” or “So-and-so owes me five shillings, and won’t pay it back,” are very common examples of applications, which shows that the applicants do not know the difference between one court and another.

“Will you please send somebody round to give my son a good hiding, as I can’t do it?” was one woman’s notable request. The magistrate sent the ever-useful warrant officer to inspire fear in the heart of the unruly youngster, though not in the method suggested by his mother.

These are but typical instances of the extraordinary puzzles which confront a magistrate daily, and many of the applications have no connection whatever with the law. The people want advice, and having nobody in the whole world to turn to, they step into court and expect his worship to take part of life’s burden from them.

Churches In Queer Places.

How many readers attend a church within a windmill, or a church on a pier out at sea, or one which floats on a canal? Yet an English scribe has found that churches exist in these and similar quaint, out-of-the-way places.

The church built in a windmill is situated on Reigate Heath, and is a well-known landmark.

It is Ilfracombe that boasts the only place of worship in existence that is built at the end of a pier. At one time this church was used as a lighthouse. Special services are now held there for sailors to pray for their comrades during a storm at sea.

There are several floating churches, but perhaps the most interesting of these is that on the Fens near Peterborough. This church-boat was built because the ordinary parish church was too far away for numbers of the parishioners. On the bridge which spans the Don at Rotherham is situated an interesting sacred edifice which dates from the fifteenth century.

Another church, which is suspended to a bridge, is the Church of St. Swithin’s, Winchester. The reason given for this place of worship being on a bridge is a quaint one. It is said that King Charles, being in need of a short cut to Winchester Cathedral, had a roadway cut clean through St. Swithin’s Church. A gateway was built which led to this day known as the King’s Gate. Over this gateway regular services are held in St. Swithin’s Church.

Another Howler.

A Portobello schoolboy has produced the champion howler of the season. The passage for paraphrase was from Kingsley:—“For men must work and women must weep, though storms be sudden and waters deep, and the harbor bar be moaning.” Men and women,” said the youngster, “must keep on working through the inn at the harbor is groaning for its customers.”

ART OF NETTING.

An Industry That Was Fostered by Catherine de’ Medici.

SIMPLE DESIGNS THE BEST.

Modern Adaptations That Are Being Made Nowadays Are Attractive For Household Decoration—Bible Stories Pictured.

In view of the important revival which is taking place in the making of darned net laces, it is interesting to note that very early in its history large quantities of it were used for household purposes. In the possessions of Queen Catherine de’ Medici a coffer is enumerated containing 381 squares of the net ready for embroidering; another chest contained 538 squares, “worked with rosettes or with blossoms, and others with nosegays.”

We are told that the maids of the queen’s household consumed much time in making squares of this resource. These plain net grounds were continued in the same manner as are garden or fishing nets of the present day. The square mesh, according to an old pattern book, was made by commencing with a single thread and increasing a stitch on each side until the required size was obtained. Then the piece was finished off by reducing a stitch on each side. This plain net ground was much used for bed furniture, window curtains and valances and was usually quite unornamented. The plain character of the net also rendered possible most elaborate designs—life sized portraits and representations of Bible stories whose scenes in the lives of saints and heroes, together with lettering descriptive of the same, are not infrequently to be met with in old examples of this lace. This darned stitch of ancient origin is so easy to accomplish and the results are so beautiful that the modern embroiderer has taken up the work with enthusiasm. Illustrated is a table cover, the design to be darned with colored silks. The fabric used is a cream colored crash.

A Modern Fire Danger.

Modern electrical appliances, while they certainly do lift endless work from the shoulders of the busy house-keeper and have many excellent qualities, have still certain dangers of their own, to ward off which the family using them needs to take sensible precautions until their “tricks and manners” are entirely familiar.

A man in the insurance business recently related the story of a fire which might have been disastrous which resulted from the use of the convenient electric iron.

The attic of the house having electric lights, the house mother often found it convenient to attach her electric iron and use it up there for pressing. Late one afternoon, having finished work, she was called downstairs in a hurry, and instead of turning off the current at the iron itself she turned the switch for the entire attic floor. Later one of the children went upstairs on some errand, turned on the current, lighted up, found what was wanted, turned out the light and went downstairs again, shutting the doors behind him. Still later the fire department arrived and put out a blaze that had consumed the ironing table and surrounding woodwork to the value of some $20.

Hard on Jones.

“No; he’s in town.”
“Why doesn’t he join the rest of the fellows for his evening smoke?”
“He has got rid of his mother-in-law.”
“Oh, he enjoys his smoke at home, I suppose.”
“Not much. He has to put the baby to sleep while his wife washes the dishes.”

Because you can talk is no reason why you should speak all the time exercising your tongue.

One reason why most of us long so inexpressibly to be rich is simply because we are poor.

A BALD-HEADED WOMAN

Shorn of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses in Love and Marriage

Hair is certainly most necessary to woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness, and success. Yet, right here in Grand Forks there are thousands of women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess, which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, break, and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and will positively guarantee that it will either cure dandruff or baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp and hair troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. H. E. Woodland.
