HOCKEY

Vernon vs. Revelstoke.

A large number of spectators attended the hockey match Wednesday evening between Vernon and Revelstoke. The teams lined up at 8:15 as follows:

Five minutes after the face-off Graham scored the first goal for Revelstoke and for the remainder of the first half the home team seemed to take things a little too easy and Vernon piled up five goals on them. In the second half the home team settled down to work and added three goals to their score. Two and a half minutes yet remained before time was up and Revelstoke would be sure a [illegible] at least have evened up the score, but owing to some disagreement the Vernon boys refused to finish the game. The referee called on the teams to line up and as Vernon did not respond awarded the game to Revelstoke.

Mr. J. M. Scott acted as referee and found it necessary at times to rule some of the players off, but acted throughout in a very impartial manner. It is to be regretted that the match ended in a squabble about on the call of time. The checking on one side was not an rougher than on the other and it is generally agreed that the visiting team had no kick coming on that score.

The visiting team returned home last evening.

BIG BEND.

Deep Channel Struck on Blue Jay.

Gold Showing in the Wash.---Raymond Allen's Operations.

Gus Bedstrom, foreman of the Blue Jay claim, being operated by the Dutcher Mining Company on Smith creek, came to town some days ago, and E. F. Wells returned on Tuesday from his trip on snowshoes to the Front. Both bring encouraging news.

On the Blue Jay the operations on which have been vigorously pushed on under the superintendence of A. E. Bradley, the drift has reached the old channel, and the wash taken out shows gold, so that there is every prospect of pay ground being struck towards bedrock. Sluicing operations have been impeded by the very cold weather. The pumping and hoisting plant is in first-class shape and working splendidly.

Raymond Allen has struck what he is certain is the old channel of Camp creek, and will get out dirt and sluice as soon as weather permits. The prospects of getting pay gold on this property also are excellent.

CHURCHES.

Presbyterian Church Annual Meeting.

This meeting of the above church was held on Thursday week and our report had to be held over owing to pressure on our space last issue. There was a large attendance. C. M. Clark proposed that H. Cooke take the chair.

Rev. W. Calder said the meeting should open regularly with prayer and the minister should take the chair. J. McLeod seconded the motion.

The motion being carried Rev. W. C. Calder opened the meeting with prayer.

R. N. Doyle read the balance sheet showing receipts amounting to $1415 of which $151.70 had been received from the Ladies Aid and $50 from The Willing Workers. Of the expenditure $848 had been paid Mr. Calder and $188 for rent of manse. The balance in hand was $45, and the liabilities $397.

W. Steed was appointed secretary for the meeting.

J. McLeod said he had $25 in hand and received $23 from the congregation. The liabilities had been cleared off four or five years, and this year compared favorably with the last two and a half years. He was satisfied if the managers had done their duty this amount would have been wiped off some years ago.

The chairman said the liabilities had been reduced considerably during the year.

WILLING WORKERS.

Miss Palmer read the report of the Willing Workers, showing receipts of $270.30 of which $7.20 was on hand. The principal items of expenditure were the payment of $50 to the management fund and $75.55 for communion table and chairs.

The chairman: You will be pleased to hear a report of that kind.

G. M. Clark: We are all proud of the Willing Workers. They deserve great credit for the way they have carried on their business during the year and the amount of money they have collected.

J. McLeod: I wish the Willing Workers great success. If the Ladies Aid don't look out they will outstrip them.

Report adopted.

LADIES AID.

Miss McDonald, secretary to the Ladies Aid, read the report of that society, showing the total receipts to be $346.50, of which $157.70 had been paid to the managers. The balance in hand was $26.26.

The chairman said the ladies deserved great credit.

Report adopted.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Rev. W. C. Calder read the Sunday-school report, showing the average attendance at 63, with nine teachers and officers three of whom had been added during the year. The school was in a prosperous condition and had never been in better order.

GENERAL.

Rev. Mr. Calder reported an average attendance of 12 to 15 at prayer meetings. The attendance at morning service was about 65, and in the evenings 120. The congregation was in a healthy condition, and the report should be highly satisfactory. When he took hold of the congregation there was a debt of over $300. He referred to the poor way in which the finances of the congregation had been carried on, but did not intend to reflect on Mr. Doyle, who had done as well as anyone who had taken the work in hand. One man who had canvassed the town told him he did not meet with a refusal or complaint. If the managers went to work there would be no need for the assistance of the Ladies Aid. He was no school boy. There was no reason why the Presbyterian should not be the leading congregation. It was an unwise course to vent their dissatisfaction. There was less frictions in this congregation than many others. They had as good a congregation as, and even better, than either of the other two congregations in the town. Let the present condition of things continue and it would take years to recover. The congregation might be face to face with calling another minister at any time.

OFFICERS.

The chairman and Mr. Doyle said they would resign from the board of management.

W. G. Birney, T. More, H. F. Hay were elected to fill the vacancies on the board.

PRESENTATIONS.

W. M. Lawrence presented the church with a hand-some communion service, engraved: "Presented to St. Andrew's Church by W. M. Lawrence, Christmas, 1901," and the Ladies Aid Society presented Mr. Cooke with handsome salvers engraved "Presented to H. Cooke, by the Ladies Aid, Presbyterian Church, for services as choir leader."

Refreshments being served by the ladies and two fine selection given by the juvenile choir, the meeting adjourned.

BOARD OF MANAGEMENT.

The new board of management held their first monthly meeting on Monday at the call of J. Lawson, chairman. Present: Messrs. J. Lawson, J. McLeod, C. R. McDonald, T. Steed, A. McNab, H. Hay and W. G. Birney. John McLeod was elected chairman and T. More Sec-Treas. for the ensuing year. The accounts of R. N. Doyle, the retiring secretary, were audited by T. Steed and C. R. McDonald and found correct.

It was decided to organise a new choir.

Other matters of vital interest to the church were discussed with interest and satisfaction, and action taken on same.

It was resolved, on motion of W. G. Birney, seconded by J. McLeod, "that we, the members of the Board of Managers of St. Andrews Church Revelstoke, do hereby pledge our full support to the Rev. W. C. Calder during his ministry here."

LOST.—On Second street between C. B. Hume's warehouse and McKenzie Avenue, a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles in a black case. Finder will confer a favor by leaving same at the Kootenay Mail office.

Rousing Meeting and Banquet.

A large attendance gathered at the Selkirk Hall last night to meet Messrs. J. T. Wilson and Lowe, President and vice-president respectively of the Brotherhood of Railway Trackmen of America. D. C. Fraser, president of the local lodge, occupied the chair. Addresses were given by the visitors and by Messrs. Adair, Bennett, Grogan, Gillespie, Donaldson (speaking on behalf of the machinists), and Haggen. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and Messrs. Lowe and Wilson delivered forcible, reasoning addresses, the visit being preparatory to the laying of the schedule of the maintenance-of-way men before the C. P. R. in March next.

We regret that our space forbids a full report of the speeches.

At the close three cheers were given for President Wilson on the call of Mr. Kellar, of Arrowhead.

A complimentary banquet was subsequently held in honor of the visiting officers at the Central hotel when over 65 guests occupied the tables and a splendid menu was laid by Messrs. Abrahamson.

ROCKY MT. RANGERS.

Corps to be Re-organized.

With the establishment of a drill hall for the city Capt. Taylor intends taking steps to resuscitate the Revelstoke corps of Rocky Mountains Rangers, and not only so but he is determined on making the drill hall a comfortable place by providing it with a reading room and gymnastic appliances, so as to make it a suitable resort for the young men of the city.

Capt. Taylor is an enthusiastic volunteer and athlete, and by his interest in drill and athletics he has already done much for the young men of the city. It is to be hoped he will have strong support in re-organising the new corps which can be made a credit to the city. The provision of a drill hall and armory will be a great assistance towards making a success of the new corps.

DRILL HALL

To be Erected at Revelstoke.

Thanks to the persistent effort of Capt. Taylor, of the Rocky Mountain Rangers, backed by the representations of the local Liberal association and Mr. Galliher, M.P., Revelstoke is included in the list of places at which new drill halls will be erected by the Dominion Government. Tenders for the work are invited in this issue of the KOOTENAY MAIL. Plans and specifications may be seen at the post office.

The site for the drill hall will be on lots 6 and 7, of block 7, on Second street, opposite Mrs. Gainer's residence. The building will be 88 feet long and 42 feet wide. The basement will be of masonry and will include a cellar 42 by 21 fitted with furnace. Off the main floor will be the armory room, 24ft by 21ft., the officers' room 21ft. by 12ft., and store room 20 by 15ft.

A colony is being organized in Revelstoke to settle on lands in the vicinity of Tete Jaune Cache if favorable terms be made with the government.

CITY COUNCIL.

A regular meeting of the City Council was held on Friday, February 7th, 1902, at 8 o'clock, p.m. Present: Mayor Maloney, Aldermen Hume, Bourne, Macdonald and Law.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

H. A. Bourne presented a petition from the ratepayers of Ward 3 asking that a bridge be built across the creek on Second street. Referred to the Board of Works.

Dr. Cross, claiming $40 as a year's salary as city health officer, drew attention to the matter. Aldermen Law and Macdonald thought the salary was not sufficient, and that the matter should be left over until the next meeting of the council, when a by-law could be introduced fixing the salary at $50 per annum. Agreed to.

Edward Bourne, claiming $189 for labor performed on the streets, stated that he had been employed by the street foreman, and believed that the work had been done under the direction of the city engineer. Referred to the finance committee, with power to act.

The city clerk was instructed to write to the city solicitor of Nelson, asking for information as to the method of collecting taxes in that city by distress

—A— ROMANCE OF THE RAIL.

PROLOGUE.

STARTLING NEWS.

On a certain morning in May the daily papers of the United States, from Maine to California, from the Great Lakes to the gulf, contained a momentous news dispatch. It was set forth with all the bold and vivid insistence of black "scare heads" and pungent headlines.

Some time during the previous night part of a limited express train on one of our great western trunk lines had disappeared without leaving a trace behind either of coaches or passengers!

The occurrence was absolutely without parallel in the annals of railroading, and the tragic import of the incident was intensified when it became known that the living freight of the lost cars included a well known and popular railroad magnate and financier of national reputation with a party of friends, among the latter some women of wealth and social prominence.

Their complete vanishment could not have been more mysterious and puzzling had coaches and passengers been sunk fathoms deep in some dark and silent pool or engulfed in a bottomless canyon. Not a trace was left, not a clew. The railroad officials were utterly at fault. Nor was the mystery elucidated until several days and nights had elapsed.

Meanwhile the wires east and west were kept hot; popular interest and excitement running high in every city, town and village in the United States and even in Canada. The wildest speculations were rife as to the fate of the persons concerned, all of them more or less wide of the mark, as the sequel proved.

Yet when the truth was ferreted out it was seen that the actualities rivaled all the fetches that had been woven around the case, which thenceforth took rank as a veritable romance of the rail.

FIRST DAY.

THE START.

In the great dome roofed station of the Pennsylvania railroad at Jersey City on a certain morning in May the limited train for the west stood awaiting its lading of passengers.

The long line of vestibuled drawing room coaches was resplendent in fresh paint as though just out of the car shops. The burnished brass work on gates, hand rails and steps shone like gold plate, while the white capped and blue uniformed officials—brakemen, trainhands and negro porters—dignified and self important, yet gravely courteous withal, stood ready to welcome, direct or assist the fast arriving passengers. The conductor, watch in hand, for the great station clock pointed at three minutes before 10, and precisely at the four the flier would be off.

The first train boat was in, and the inevitable late traveler was even now struggling down the asphalt platform. The great engine backed down and was coupled on, the engineer tested the brakes to see if his "air" was all right, the steam gauge throbbed and glowed with pent up energy, and the "runner," as the engineer is called in railway parlance, stepped out of his cab on the alert for the electric cry "All aboard!"

At the other side of the station an equally interesting scene was taking place. On one of the side tracks stood two richly appointed coaches, one the private car Miranda and the other an ordinary Pullman sleeper and drawing room coach combined. Since 8 o'clock relays of porters and expressmen had been coming alongside heavy laden, departing empty handed and wiping their brows. Hundreds of pounds of ice were stowed away in the long receptacles under the cars; hampers, crates and boxes of mineral waters, "strong waters" and delicacies were taken aboard and disposed in mysterious recesses; from within came the musical clink of glasses and crockery, while the white jacketed chief could be seen flitting about in his tiny kitchen and buffet putting matters to rights.

The last load of relishes was received and receipted for, the porters for the last time flicked the dust off the richly upholstered interior, when the first of those for whom these elaborate preparations were made came strolling down the platform, at whose arrival all the train men in waiting saluted with hands to caps.

A good story is told concerning two poor Irishmen who once upon a time were debating what sort of an occupation each would choose if Kind Providence should ever give them the option. After canvassing the advantages of the various vocations in life one of them closed the discussion by saying:

"Faith, Mike, for a aise, clane, aisy job let me be a leader!"

This popularly summed up to Mike's immediate mind all the slippy side of life—wealth, position, authority and [illegible] could that for [illegible] the position or [illegible] of a great railroad in a southern town. Although there were in any 20 years between their ages they were friends and confidants. Yet each held certain matters in reserve. Draper knew that Ives loved his niece. Chester thought he knew where the senior had placed his affections, but the younger man did not know that John Draper was resolved to signalize his own happiness should it ever come to pass by doing what he could to make Madge and Chester happy at the same time.

Here was John Draper, monarch of all he surveyed.

"Last of all came sarah also," to the person of Mr. Reuben K. Filley, protege and confidential clerk of John Draper. It is perhaps needless to say that the world knew the young man in the latter capacity only. Alert, keen, selfish, unscrupulous, a New York boy of uncertain parentage, though he left little to be desired. It certainly seemed so to the onlooker this bright May morning.

There was John Draper, president of the Pacific and Atlantic railway, a self made man, a multimillionaire, or enough to have eschewed the follies of life and yet young enough to enjoy the benefits the gods send to some mortals blessed with health, strength, a good conscience and a better digestion, at the moment of which I write literally monarch of all he surveyed and about to take a trip of three or four thousand miles in his personal and private car surrounded by a charming and congenial company of his own choosing who would bask in the sunshine of his bounty and give him grateful thanks, homage and credit for all the pleasure bestowed.

So who would not be a railroad president, even if the load that carries the headholders' woes is sometimes uneasy.

With John Draper came two ladies, an elder and a much younger one, and faithful to the old precept which gives place to age before beauty, the former shall be described first. This was Mrs. Bradley Hurst, a married sister of our host. Fair and fat she certainly was, but not even her bitterest enemy could have called her fat. A laughing eye, a well rounded and mature form, of medium height, with a carriage and manner that denote the thorough mistress of society and its forms—this was Mrs. Bradley Hurst, the chaperon of the party.

At her side and between the two old er people walked a girl half her size the exact opposite of what Mrs. Hurst must have been in her youth—not too tall, graceful, dark of hair, eyes and complexion, a Vassar alumna and now a two years' society graduate accomplished, handsome and wholesome and there you have sketched Miss Florence Grainger, the ward of John Draper and heiress to several million.

Down the platform they strolled laughing and chatting gayly, yet in the tender solicitude with which the railroad magnate handed the girl into the car might have been discovered, more than the ordinary regard supposed to subsist between guardian and ward.

Close at the heels of this trio came two others, both young, both vivacious, both bubbling over with good humor and good spirits, which were plainly their natural heritage and partly born of the prospect of this novel outing.

The lady was Miss Madge Hurst, daughter of Mrs. Bradley Hurst, a piquant maiden of some 20 winters, blond, petite, blue eyed and altogether bewitching, at least so thought Mr. Chester Ives, who walked at her side looking down from his five feet ten of masculinity at the five feet two of femininity under the broad brimmed Gainsborough hat then in vogue.

Chester Ives was a member of the fourth estate, whose privilege it is to wield the weapon which is said to be mightier than the sword though it is often a mere blue pencil and who, by dint of patience, perseverance and persistence, had risen from the foot of the journalistic ladder to be "Wall street man" on one of New York's great dailies. Not yet 30, he was already booked by his influence for higher things. The last known John Draper when the latter was "adding his time" in comparative obscurity as a small merchant
