ORE BEGINS TO MOVE.

TROUT LAKE TAKES THE LEAD WITH THE SILVER CUP.

Sleigh Roads Being Rushed With Over 70 Men at Work—Ferguson Coming to the Front Rapidly—Trout Lake Improvements—An Involved Transfer of N. Fork Property.

TROUT LAKE.

Farrell & Dunn are going to build a sleigh road from Ferguson to 7 mile on the South Fork to make connections with their rawhide trail from the Silver Cup.

E. L. Kinman has taken the contract of cutting the rawhide trail from the Silver Cup and started work Thursday with about 10 or 12 men.

Seven men are at work upon the Sunshine under McAlpine, of Vancouver. This is the property lately acquired by the Horne-Payne Co. and is looking splendid.

The Silver Cup has 15 men on it under Munro and is looking well. The men are now working on the second tunnel.

C. B. Hume visited Ferguson this week looking for a location for a store.

A. C. Cummins & Co., the company is composed of R. Soames, J. Jenkins and J. Mesley, have got some of their stock on the ground at Ferguson and will open out in a few days. They are all good business men and should do well.

Messrs. Campbell & Johnson have erected good buildings on the Badshot property and are driving a tunnel to tap the ledge at depth. They will do considerable shipping this winter.

The Silver Cup people are packing out one carload of high grade ore, and as soon as trail and sleigh road are complete will ship right along.

Dunn & Farrell are putting up an office at Ferguson.

A petition is being circulated through Trout Lake for a post office at Ferguson with A. C. Cummins as postmaster.

A wash house is wanted at Ferguson and any capable woman who will open there can get a good lot free. This is a good opening.

It is reported that the men are to be taken off the Galena Bay road and put on to the sleigh road from Ferguson to Glenn's, a distance of 6 miles. Mr. Cary, the surveyor, is now running the lines.

The amount of freight lying at the wharf at Thomson's for Trout Lake is enormous and shews in some degree the business of the camp.

A large gang of men under Jim Carlisle at the Galena Bay end and under H. B. Cassar at Trout Lake waggon road end are clearing out the Galena Bay road.

Sam Hill will also take charge of a gang on the Galena Bay road near the summit.

Pete Arena has a scowload of lumber at Galena Bay for his hotel.

Menhinick Bros. are getting all they can do for their new steamer.

Abrahamsons are putting up a new addition to their Trout Lake Hotel. They are doing a great business and deserve it all.

Sam Hill is doing road work for the Government between Thomson's and Trout Lake. The road is not now quite as bad as it was.

That Trout Lake needs a constable was emphasized one evening last week. A stranger in the camp made a brave gun display, luckily he was full and the gun empty or there might have been mischief.

A. Morrison, the barber at Trout Lake, is putting up a new building and doing a good business.

The camp is very active. Everyone has money and all are jubilant at the future prospects.

BIG BEND.

Tom Edwards and Jack Shaw have located two promising claims on Carnes Creek south-east of those belonging to the Revelstoke Mining company. They are of the general character pertaining to Carnes Creek arsenical iron and the lead is 20 feet wide.

Horne's boats have made their second fall trip.

It is the opinion of those familiar with the river that $2,000 is too small a sum to do good work in opening the river at the Canyon. If it is so the opportunity of Mr. Tarte's visit should be used to show the necessity of opening up the river as far as possible. There is good ground to work on in the promise of the Erbsloh and Coleddick syndicates putting in large sums of money in development next year.

IT WAS A CLOSE CALL.

A C.P.R. Engineer Narrowly Escapes Death at Donald.

An accident which came within an ace of being a fatal one occurred to J. O. Walsh, C.P.R. locomotive engineer, at Donald last Tuesday.

From what is learned of the occurrence it appears that he was in the act of boarding his engine, (No. 404), preparatory to going on his run; the engine being in charge of another crew, was slowly moving down the yard at the time. He had just placed his foot on the step when he was fouled by a freight car which resulted in literally rolling him up between the car and tender. He was rescued from his perilous position as soon as possible, but not before sustaining several severe bruises, dislocations and some broken bones. The injured man was conveyed to the Donald hospital where he is doing as well as can be expected.

Looking for an Advance.

J. M. Harris, one of the owners of the famous Reco mine, in a recent interview stated that all the mining camps in the Slocan are prosperous. "We have about 100 tons of Reco ore at Sandon, representing a value of about $10,000, and have as much more in the ore house. We will hold it until after election, when we hope the price of silver will advance. It is high grade, and will probably run from 500 to 600 ounces in silver and 60 per cent lead."

Perfectly Candid.

The Miner believes the next election in the Province will be conducted on party lines. It is decidedly in the public interest that it should. The responsibility for conducting provincial affairs should lie with one or other of the great political parties of Canada. We trust the opposition will see that none but liberals are nominated as opposition candidates. We want no more hybrids.—Rossland Miner.

All Rail to Nelson.

Sir William Van Horne, interviewed in Vancouver, said, in reply to the question as to what he thought was the most urgent railway needed in the country: "The Crow's Nest Pass line, without a doubt. That is the cheapest and quickest way to provide for the development of the Kootenay country and secure it to Canadian trade. The next important move would be the rail connection between Nelson and Revelstoke so as to afford the earliest possible all-rail route between the Kootenay district and Pacific coast. I think it probable that this link will be completed nearly as soon as the Crow's Nest Pass line and with this in view we have been surveying down Slocan Lake, southward, to connect the Nakusp & Slocan with the C. & K. to Nelson."

A Big Real Estate Deal.

A Rossland Miner special says:—Jas. F. Wardner has bought up all the unsold lots in Rossland, to the number of 812, for the lump sum of $176,000. This is the biggest real estate deal ever made in Kootenay. It is said that the people behind Wardner includes several Montreal millionaires and high C. P. R. officials.

A Week's Amusements.

The concert in aid of the Presbyterian church, which was held in Peterson's hall Wednesday night, proved a very enjoyable affair, socially, as well as a financial success—about $65 being realized as the net proceeds. The afternoon was devoted to a Sale of Work by the ladies' Aid and the evening's programme consisted of a concert and refreshments. The concert consisted of recitations, vocal and instrumental music, in which the following ladies and gentlemen took part: Mrs. Dent, Misses Adair, Larsen, Lee, Northey, Ruth and Lillie Valentine, (Mary) Edwards, Bailey, Messrs. Laing, Geddes, Ahlin, W. K. Smith and Percy Lewis. The whole affair was under the efficient management of the ladies of the congregation.

The Buchanan Company have been entertaining large audiences each night during the week. It is unusual to have a straight week of this class of amusement but, with a change of bill nightly, the patrons evidently appreciated it, as shown by the attendance at each performance. The principals, particularly Mr. Buchanan, are capable players and succeeded in arousing the interest as well as amusing their auditors, but they remain entirely unknown to the house since the management dispenses with the usual Bill of the Play and thus deprives the patron of a share of his interest in the show and a very important share, viz., the personality of the actor or actress—the satisfaction which comes with knowing "who's who and who." The day of the one-man-show is gone. The repertoire includes some old favorites and is fairly well chosen, except the Irish dialect numbers, in which the "brogue" was very much off color. Take Dan'l Bartlett's advice and "stick to your English," rather than murder the most euphonious dialect in the language. The week's engagement concludes with two performances to-day.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS

Requested to Give the Board of Trade a Hearing on River Question.

The impression is general that on no account must Hon. J. I. Tarte, Minister of Public works, be allowed to go through to the coast without some attempt being made to secure an interview with him about protecting the river banks and opening the river to the north. He has declared that his object in coming west is to look into needed public works and, at Sorel, the other day, he stated that much money was to be expended in British Columbia for that purpose. Now, all this is very fair, and it is due to this minister, if there are needed works to be done here, that he should be seen in connection with them and opportunity taken, if he can give us the time, to consult his views. It is evidently the intention of the Dominion government to study the wants of British Columbia from which it derives a large revenue and as far as possible, consistent with economy, supply them. This does not, however, relieve the Provincial government of their responsibility in protecting the property of its citizens, and in view of the recent judicial decision regarding provincial rights in inland waters, the claims upon the home government meeting the Dominion in protecting the banks here are very much strengthened.

The whole matter is a very vital one to this town and its people, and the Board of Trade have communicated with Mr. Tarte asking for an interview to present their views.

REVELSTOKE, OCT. 21, 1896.

THE Rossland Miner predicts that before this time next year there will be healthy mining booms in progress in the Big Bend and Trout Lake camps, and argues that its result is due to the interest aroused by Rossland.

It possibly may be so, but we had rather thought it was some merit in these camps themselves that had drawn capital towards them. Be that as it may, there is no denying that there is good foundation for the Miner's prediction as there are manifold signs around heralding its approach. They are not signs of definite shape, they come as rumors, whispers, that send a feeling of unrest into men's minds. A few deals, a few sharp operators getting on to good things here and there gives strength to the feeling, and the people generally with an air of confidence and knowledge that impresses itself upon the observer until he too gets the fever invests his pile, and waits with expectancy the rush of the booming wave. These signs are in the air. There is the sanguine word and the knowing air everywhere, and it is everyones conviction that South Kootenay will next year take its place as a mineral country of great value and importance.

Of this great section Revelstoke is the natural centre admirably situated for controlling its trade. It should be the aim of its citizens to keep pace with the coming development and make it the trade as well as the natural centre of the district.

It would be a matter of satisfaction to observe that the Dominion Government has found an early date for the trial of the Indians charged with the murder of Constable Hall, on the Lillooet-Fraser River trail, but for the fact that some comment has been made in the Head Assiniboia Indians,

The Story of Her Life.

My first glance at Jarvis when he stepped into my den that night told me that there was something on his mind. I had known him intimately for 15 years and in that time the clean-cut lines of his large, impulsive nature had become so familiar to me that I was as well able to interpret every phase of his varied humors as was he himself.

"I called to see Miss Mofford this afternoon," he said, morosely, "and urged her to hurry up our wedding day, but she parried all my arguments with the same threadbare excuse that has been dinned into my ears for the last six months: 'Wait till my book is finished.' Confound novels, anyway. Especially those that are written by women.

"She expects to have it in the hands of the publishers in two weeks' time and insists on that, as it is in connection with her views for a woman's wealth of both name and fortune to marry a man in my station, the wedding must be postponed until at least a decent degree of fame has been acquired. Though the work, which she feels confident will be found to be a success. Do you know," he added bitterly, "I think it one of the most pernicious results of our boasted modern civilization, likely that young women whose minds still retain their natural freshness and fancy should be contaminated by investigating all sorts of scandalous proceedings and the impulses that would lead a person to act thus and so just for the sake of writing a book that shall be true to life. Miss Mofford outlined to me to-day for the first time the plot of her novel and asked my opinion in regard to the consistent conduct of one of her characters."

"If not violating any confidence," I said, "perhaps you will not be averse to giving me a few proof-sheets, orally, of this wonderful 19th century novel."

"No," said he, "that is what I had intended to do. As usual, as I can remember this is the way she got it to me:—

"'I place myself, I also, she said, upon your knowledge of human nature, and in order that I may work out a consistent ending for my story I want your suggestions and advice. Follow me closely that you may see in detail of what I have already written and may be able to judge fairly.' Once upon a time there was a girl—of course. There could have been no novel without her. She was not a very great girl, and there was nothing in all her girlhood days that bore the faintest trace of prettiness. She was brought up in poverty, not the abject poverty of the tenement and the street, but a constant cringing fight for enough to eat and to wear that is called respectable poverty but which is very nearly as hard to endure as the more inferior grade.

"She was 19 when she learned to love. It was a very short lesson and she mastered it easily. All her life she had been lonely and longing for some one to confide in and cling to and she accepted him unquestionably as her protector and guide. I do not wish to do him an injustice. He was not a thoroughly bad man; moreover, I do not desire to excuse her or detract one iota from the magnitude of her crime. He did not deceive her. He told her the day before they were to be married that he had a wife living. And she—well, perhaps she ought not to have done it and of course neither an absolutely good woman nor a thoroughly unprincipled, selfish woman would have done it. But she was only an every-day, erring mortal and—she married him anyway. Do not start so. She is only an imaginary heroine. Flesh-and-blood creations are not guilty of such acts of indiscretion.

"At the end of a year the very thing which he had always assured her would be an impossibility became an assured fact. He returned to his first love. It did not kill her. She dreaded to look upon her punishment as the inevitable result of her transgression and, realizing that her love dream was ended, she clung once more to the innate sources of power—and ability which, with a little cultivation, would render her independent of scoffing relatives and friends and faithless husband. While her baby lived there was still some near and dear object for her to care for, but with the death of the little one she left the place that had been the scene of her deepest misery and greatest joy and began life again in a far away place. A new name was chosen, new work was commenced and the dead past buried its dead completely.

"Three years of loneliness, privation and toil passed away, and then she found herself wooed by another man. But I am wearying you and must hasten on. She did not love this man in the full sense of the word, for she was a woman whose former vows of affection were not meant for time alone, but she knew that she could be very happy with him and could make him happy in return, so one day, after many refusals, she rewarded his importunity by promising to marry him. I have carried my characters up to this point and now what I wish to get at is this: I have portrayed this second suitor as being good, honest and true. He knew nothing of the woman's past indeed, he did not suspect that she had one, and I want to know if it would be an inartistic ending for her to marry him without undeceiving him?"

"So you see, my friend," continued Jarvis, with an attempt to shake off his fit of melancholia, "I am going to be an author, after all, in a roundabout way. When our book comes out you shall have the first copy. But really you can't wonder that it puts me out of sorts, now can you, to have my sweetheart mixed up in such an affair, even though it be in the most innocent way?"

And I, pondering deeply over what I had just heard, let Jarvis out of the front door without answering him.

Jarvis left town the next day and it was six months later when I next met him.

"I read your book," I said, jestingly, when our first greetings were over, "and was greatly fascinated with it. Your and your collaborator's style is good. Credit to you both. As to the book of the second I suppose the less said will be the sooner mended."

Jarvis grew perceptibly thinner and his face seemed more haggard than I had remembered previously.

"No," said he, "guess not."

"Why not?" I ejaculated, in genuine astonishment.

"Because," returned Miss Mofford was the heroine of her own book."

Should Have Been Abolished Long Ago.

An Ottawa report announces that Mr. Kimber, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, is to be superannuated and the office abolished. This is a move in the right direction, viz., the abolition of useless or purely ornamental offices and the Liberal government will deserve well of the taxpayer if it goes through the civil service and abolishes hundreds of such offices. Mr. Kimber's whole stock in trade consists of an elaborate acrobatic kind of a bow which he makes in summoning the commoners to the senate chamber at the opening and prorogation of each year, and the making of a list of those who are to appear on the floor of the House about three hours' work in a year—for which he draws a salary of $1,370 and five quarters in the senate as a residence, valued at $650 or $2,020 in all. Rather an expensive ornament.

A North Pole Sensation.

A Clyde engineer named Mirrlie claims to have, after fifteen years' labour, invented an aerial vehicle by means of which, accompanied by an eminent London scientist, he hopes to surpass the desire of all men within the limits of a week. He sets out on May on his rapid transit system, although they are keen. Whether he will get there is another matter. A safe journey to him. It is long been understood that when the Pole was discovered a Scotchman would be found on its top. The wind did not, however, bargain for another hovering above it.

How Women Changed Their Names.

The practice of a woman changing her name on marriage originated from a Roman custom, and came into use after the Roman occupation. Thus, Julia and Octavia, married to Pompey and Cicero were called by the Romans Julia of Pompey, Octavia of Cicero, and in later times women in most European countries signed their names in these same way, but omitting the "of." On the other hand, at the beginning of the seventeenth century the usage seems doubtful, since we find Catherine Parr so signing herself after she had been twice married, and we always hear of Lady Jane Grey (not Dudley) and Arabella Stuart (not Seymour). Some persons think that the custom originated from Scriptural teachings that husband and wife are one. This was the rule of law so far back as Bracton, and it was decided in the case of Ben v. Smith in the reign of Elizabeth that a woman by marriage loses her former name and takes that of her husband. The custom, however, is not universal in Spain and Portugal, and women there do not take the name of their husbands but continue to be known by their own. In many parts of the United States a woman never relinquishes her maiden name, and is called by it as often as by that of her husband.

The Czar a Scotchman.

It is not surprising that Scotchmen, who have gone so far as to claim that Ernest with the lodging was born in Leith, should put forward a claim that the Tsar is to some extent a Scotchman. The foundation for the claim rests on a story, to the effect that the Tsar Paul, father of Nicholas I., was it is said, greatly impressed when he was in London by the charms of a Miss Macgregor, a young lady noted for her beauty, whom he happened to see driving her Shetland pony in Hyde Park. It was, the story goes on to say, a case of love at first sight. Tsar Paul got introduced to the lady and to her parents, privately married her, and took her to Russia, where she became the mother of Nicholas I. The present Tsar is therefore her great grandson and consequently, according to Highland custom, Gaelic and pedigree, a Macgregor. In such circumstances it is only reasonable to expect that, to quote Oscar Wilde, his heart will warm to the tartan.
