Around the Mines

Texas and Diamond.

Work was started Tuesday last on the Texas and Diamond, adjoining the Providence. Three men were put work, and as soon as the blacksmith shop is built, sinking will be commenced. It is the intention to sink to the 100 ft. level and then crosscut for the vein. The force will be increased at the end of the present month.

Riverside.

Development is being pushed on the Riverside, the Perkins property near Rock creek, under bond to P. J. Dermody and associates. A shipment has been made from the claim to the Greenwood Smelter. A. L. Sutton, official administrator was over Saturday last, and entered into a new bond with Mr. Dermody and associates. It is understood the purchase price was reduced from $60,000 to $15,000 owing to those holding the bond not wishing to continue to work the claim under the terms of the original bond. It is stated that the heirs of Ben Perkins will endeavor to set aside bond entered into by Mr. Sutton. There is liable to be a stiff legal fight over the matter.

Boundary Falls Smelter.

The new 600 ton furnace at the Boundary Falls smelter will soon be in commission, when the smelter will then have more than double its present capacity. The power at the smelter is electric, furnished by the Cascade Power company. The power comes into the 635 station at 20,000 volts, and leaves at 2,000 volts when it enters the smelter sub station, from which 550 volts are distributed throughout the works.

The water for the smelter is pumped by two McDowell centrifugal pumps of a capacity of 1000 and 500 gallons per minute, respectively. These are run by two Allis-Chalmers-Bullock electric motors. At present only the smaller of the two pumps is in use, but the larger one will be used when the new furnace is put in commission.

An electric motor will be used on the feed floor and the feeding will be done automatically as in the other smelters of the district.

The foundation is in for the big crusher, which will be run by two 100 horse power motors, and will crush 150 tons of ore per hour, handling pieces of rock as large as 42 by 36 inches. The crusher is manufactured by the Jenckes Machine Co. From the crusher an elevator 80 feet in length will carry the ore.

Air will be furnished the new furnace by a big blower with a capacity of 2,000 cubic feet of air per minute. This blower will be run by two electric motors of 200 horse power each.

When completed the smelter will be up-to-date in every respect and will treat upwards of 1000 tons of ore per day.

The Bay

At the Bay mine drifts are being run from the 135 foot level, the south drift being in 100 feet with a crosscut to the ledge, and the north drift in some 50 feet. A crosscut is at present being driven from the end of the north drift into the hanging wall to tap the ledge; this is made necessary by a break encountered at this level. The new shaft has also been connected on this level with the old workings giving excellent ventilation to the mine.

Sinking will be resumed as soon as the snow, which is now over two feet deep at the mine, has gone off, and there is no more dangar of being drowned out by surface water. The next lower level will then be opened up.

Stops are now being run from the 135 foot level to the level of the original tunnel, above which the three cars of ore shipped in 1905 were mined. Some three cars of ore are on the dump and in the ore houses awaiting shipment, and will be sent down the hill as soon as the roads, now impassable for heavy teams, have dried up sufficiently.

The recently installed 20 H. P. electric hoist is giving most satisfactory service. This, with a gallows frame, sorting shed and ore bouses, completes the equipment of the new incline shaft.

Eight men are employed at this property at present, and the force will be largely increased as soon as sinking has advanced far enough to open up a second level.—Anaconda News.

CITY COUNCIL

Council met Wednesday evening with the Mayor and Aldermen Desrosier, Sutherland, Wood, Nelson and Sutherland present.

Minutes of last regular meeting read and adopted.

Two tenders to furnish cement were read. The city engineer was instructed to order cement from lowest bidder.

Sullivan-Nelson-That the reservoir on Providence creek be of equal capacity to the one on Lind creek. Carried

Sullivan-Nelson-That the recommendation of superintendent of Waterworks respecting flume on Lind creek be carried out. Carried

Supt. of Waterworks reported having given instructions re Holmes & Kennedy and also that he was working on the waterworks plans.

The mayor asked permission to use part of Copper street for building purposes. Granted.

Wednesday, 10th. April was fixed as a general clearance day, and that all persons not having cleared up their premises by that date will be prosecuted.

Ordered that building on lot 24, block 17, be repaired and used as a pound, and that the lot be fenced.

Following accounts were ordered paid:

G. H. Cropley	$32.00
Cameron & McDonald	4.90
Russell, Law, Caulfield Co	2.95
White Bros.	.50
C. J. McArthur	13.90
The Ledge	1.00

Officer Mulhern reported that building of C. Castlebar on Gold street, was in danger of being washed out and might cause considerable damage to bridge.

The council endorsed the action of police and license commissioners in reference to the Boundary Club.

We are putting forth every effort to supply your wants with the best goods for the least money. Trade with us and get your money's worth. Russell-Law-Caulfield Co.

The Police Commissioners

A meeting of the police commissioners was held Wednesday evening, and the evidence taken before the police magistrate in reference to Boundary Club was submitted.

A motion was passed that the board did not consider the Boundary Club a bona fide club, and it was decided that evidence be forwarded to the Attorney-General, with the request that that charter be cancelled. At a meeting of the license commissioners a similar motion was passed.

Fire Alarm System

The boxes for the new fire alarm system are now in place and the wire connections made. This week the striker will be in position. The boxes and numbers are placed as follows:

6. Fire Hall.
23. Corner Copper and Dundee.
24. Gold St. opposite Ladysmith.
32. Corner Long Lake and Deadwood.
34. Kimberly Av., near Angrignon residence.
42. Corner Copper and Greenwood.
43. Corner Copper and Deadwood.
45. Corner Greenwood and Gold.

A person discovering a fire should at once proceed to the nearest box, break the glass in the small door, turn the key, which will open the large door, then pull down the lever as far as possible and then let go. This will immediately cause the number of the box to be struck on the fire bell. The person sending in alarm should remain at the box until the members of the fire department arrive in order that there may be the least possible delay in reaching the fire, especially if box is not near the fire.

The chief of fire department will, on request, explain working of boxes to any person not understanding the mechanism.

In the Slocan

Frank Griffith has resumed work on the Westmount and will ship a car of ore in a few days.

Bill Skinner has sold his claims near Poplar for $40,000. He expects to leave Ferguson in a few days to prospect in the northern part of the province.

Tom Tobin is becoming an electrical engineer in Los Gatos, California.

T. D. Woodcock is leaving Slocan City. He recently made a large fortune out of timber limits and will settle on the coast.

The Standard Oil Co. has taken an option upon several properties in the Slocan.

Business is so good in New Denver that the bank will put in a vault to hold the extra money that cannot be stuffed in the big safe.

During the past eighteen months the lessees, Harry Lowe and partners have $100,000 worth of ore out of the Lone Bachelor.

Harry Lowe, one of the most successful mining men in the Slocan has purchased 30 lots in New Denver and will take up his residence in that city.

So Near and Yet So Far.

There is an old saying that every miner takes a long chance when he goes in search of precious metals, but the recent capitalization of the Canonea mining properties in Mexico at $50.000,000, shows how close J. B. Higgin and Marcus Daly came to owning one of the largest copper mines in the world. The story also has a local feature, since M. K. Rodgers, who will build the Copper River & Northwestern Railway from Catalla to the interior of Alaska, was in Mexico for Daly and Higgin.

The Canonea property was once owned by Daly and Higgin, but they threw it up within two days of striking the bonanza. In the summer of 1897, Rodgers, who had for several years been hunting mines for the two men, ran across the Canonea properties after travelling 9,000 miles in Mexico.

Rodgers took a long time working bond on the whole of the Canonea zone, which is about five miles in length and a mile wide, including the Lindsey property. Rodgers started development work and after spending $12,000, Daly got the notion that Rodgers was throwing away money, and sent word to Mexico to close down the work and throw up the bond.

When the property was started up at a later date by W. C. Green, the corporation known as the Green Consolidated Copper Company, it was found that one of Rodgers' crosscuts was within seven feet and another within twelve feet of the bonanza ore body, justifying the remark made by Rodgers that, "if there was no copper mine there should be," and that he would probably travel the rest of his days without finding another place with such favorable conditions for copper.

Incidentally, Rodgers had a 25 per cent. interest in the bond and had he been allowed two days longer, the Canonea properties would probably have different owners. The mines are now the third largest producing copper properties in the world. The output of the Canonea has reached a valuation of $37,000,000.—Seattle Times.

Mayor of Kaslo Dead.

Kaslow's Mayor, C. W. McAnn, K. C., passed away at about 6 o'clock on Saturday evening March 30th. His death was not unexpected as he had been very low for some weeks past, and had been failing for a number of years. Last fall he took a severe turn for the worse, at which time the exact nature of his ailment was not known, but was thought to be a tumor. Some months ago he underwent an operation in Rochester Minn., from which he recovered somewhat and continued to improve for some time after returning to Kaslo, so that hopes were held for a complete recovery. Subsequently, however, the old trouble returned and Mr. McAnn paid another visit to Rochester, but the physician informed him that his ailment was incurable. Through an indomitable will he bore up cheerfully during a period of painful illness.

The late C. W. McAnn was born at Moncton, N. B., forty-two years ago. He was a graduate of the university of Mount Allison, N. B., and Ann Arbor, Mich. He came to Kaslo fifteen years ago and has been prominently identified with the interests of the town, having served five terms as mayor. Politically he was a staunch Conservative and had it not been for the serious nature of his illness he would have been the unanimous choice of the party at the late elections. He leaves a widow and three children to mourn his loss, for whom heartfelt sympathy is felt by the residents of the Kootenays.

The Kaslo Masons and the Eagles turned out almost to a man to the funeral of the late C. W. McAnn, and a delegation from Nelson were also present. Rev. Dr. Simpson conducted the first part of the service, which was held at the family residence Monday, and provincial past grand master E. E. Chipman read the Masonic Ritual. A large delegation accompanied the remains aboard the Kokanee till the steamer was met by the International on her way north, when they returned home. The Nelson delegates then took charge until Tuesday morning when G. W. McAnn, brother of the deceased, left for Moncton, N. B., with the body, where interment takes place.

General Booth in Vancouver.

With the shadows of "the darker brink" gathering about his feet like the ghosts of the hills of Morven, and his once rugged, erect form bent beneath the weight of 70 years of strenuous life and responsibilities, General William Booth, head of the Salvation Army, undaunted by a journey which would be impossible for the majority of men years his junior, arrived in Vancouver at Midnight on Wednesday and after one of the most strenuous days any man ever put in, during which he addressed two large gatherings in St. Andrew's church Friday afternoon and evening and left for Seattle at 8.30 Saturday morning, where he spoke in the evening and three times on Sunday, after which he sailed on Monday for Japan.

The aged General was accompanied by Col. Higgins of London, late chief secretary of the United States; Brigadier Cox, of the London Staff, and travelling companion of the general, and a number of prominent officials of the army, including Commissioner Combs, Col. Pugmire and others.

The train on which the general and party arrived was twelve hours late and the civic reception was therefore postponed until the morning. Mayor Bethune and a number of civic officials and aldermen went to the station, and Mayor Bethune on behalf of the city formally welcomed the general to the city. The party at once went to the Hotel Vancouver, where the general and party were the guests of the city.

Only the indomitable will, the unconquerable spirit, the energy and the faith which have sustained General Booth in the times of reverse and persecution will enable him to carry out the programme he has mapped out for himself in the evening of his life. He hopes to visit every country where the Salvation Army is represented and already this year has been to Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Canada. After he has completed his official tour of Japan and China, he will return to England where he will conduct a gigantic motor campaign, after which he will again cross the Atlantic to tour the United States. Undismayed by this strenuous campaign he intends to spend 1908 in India and other places.—Excerpt from "The World"

The boys who appeared before Police Magistrate Hallett last week, were let off with a talk. In cases of this kind would it not be advisable to leave the punishment of the boys with the parents. The less knowledge youths have of police magistrates, police and cells the the better. The city lockup is not a good place for the future men of the country to receive their training for citizenship. There are very few men in the city today who have not done some pilfering in their youth. They didn't make any the worse men for so doing. It is just as natural for the live boy to get into trouble as it is for him to breath. He is built that way, and his parents should be allowed to guide his natural inclinations in the right direction. Water is used to generate power and the cost of operating lessened forty per cent. over the old method. The concentrator has been moved which will greatly shorten the haul, and it is rumored the Canadian Consolidated smelters are negotiating for the mine at a fifty cents per share basis.

Gambling in India

On what a colossal scale gambling is practised in India and how extensively the flying of kites is used as a means of gambling may be inferred from the fact that last month five Hindoo merchants of Umritster an important city of the Punjab, committed suicide in one week because of losses on kites.

This country knows nothing of flying kites for pleasure, as is done in America and Europe, and is carried on with marvelous ingenuity in China. Kites are flown here that they may fight and the fighting is done by cutting each other's strings.

This string is sewing thread, the finest and strongest, smeared with ground glass mixed with mucilage. Pulled tight and drawn against another thread also pulled tight, it cuts like a knife.

A good string must be long enough to let the kite ascend a thousand yards, light enough to let the kite bear it at that distance and fine enough to cut another string.

Making a kite requires as much care as choosing the string. The kite has to sweep through the air with the swiftness of a swallow. Therefore, it must be small, extremely light and strong enough not to tear as it rushes against the wind, for the edges are not turned over and gummed down all around as they are in our kites.

In such a kite the balancing is a far more delicate operation than in large and heavy kites.

Kite fighters are most careful about the balance of their kites, and when a kite seems all right in the hand, their intent eyes notice a fault as it flies, and, pulling it down again, they add a piece of paper twice the size of a postage stamp or a small twist of cotton to one side, or they pare one of the sticks to get the balance perfectly true.

Thus with both kite and string in perfection, a match is arranged and the two champions of sport take up positions from fifty to a hundred yards apart and let their kites fly. If both men are thorough experts, the manoeuvering of the kites, which may continue for an hour, or till the wind dies down, elicits the admiration even of people who do not understand the art; but it throws the talent into transports of excitement.

Each flyer tries to cut the string of his opponent by making his kite pass under the other, so that the strings cross, and then, by a sudden jerk, sending his kite up so that string will come in contact with the other string and cut it.

There is a trick by which, while the kites are fifty yards or so apart, and at the same time level in the air, one of them may by a dexterous movement of the arm, be made to swoop down and pass right under and across the other with the sharpness of a hawk.

The other man tries to avoid these attacks, and to act on the aggressive himself. He may do this by pulling in his kite or letting it out till the string is high out of the other's reach.

Each such move is met by a counter move till one kite may fairly fly away, seeking to turn again and take an advantage.

To persons skilled in the sport the kites appear like living things, each with a spirit of its own. One is slow in flight, but quick in turning, or quick in rising and slow in swooping, or will do better when it is lower than when it is higher up, or in a light breeze than in a stronger wind. All these things are taken as bets are offered or accepted.

The art of the leading kite flyers in any city is keenly distinguished by the talent, at the disposition of the kites, so that when a sporting man sees a kite in the air flown by an expert who is hidden from him by blocks of houses he can tell who is the flyer by the way the kite is manoeuvred.

In India, not only the uneducated, but the educated people and the rich, who are often uneducated, are very credulous. A gambling kite flyer easily believes that the virtues of a kite be in something than its weight and balance. So he offers a dollar for a kite, which would ordinarily cost two cents, with a promise of a further reward, if it defeats the rival kite. The kitemaker makes a kite like a hundred others he is turning off, puts two discs or "eyes" of gold paper on it, gives it a high sounding Persian name like "Ever Victorious" or "Emperor of the Empyreau, and assures his patron that unless his opponent resorts to magic no kite ever made will have a show with that one. If the gambler can discover who makes his opponents' kites he goes secretly to him and orders a kite of the most superlative virtue, adding $10 or $20 to the price, if the man will make a defect in the other kite.

Kite fighting is carried on by hundreds and thousands of idle men in every city and by scores in every town. With the schoolboys it is a rage. During the season (the cold season, when a gentle breeze blows steadily), the air above is as full of kites, mostly white, but often colored, as the air below is full of butterflies.

The mere sight of a kite in the air is taken as a challenge, and another kite is sent after it by somebody who may not see the flyer nor care who he is.

Mexico Mining Output

A late city of Mexico despatch says: Out of nearly 23,000 mining titles covering an area of over 600,000 acres, Mexico's greatest production is and always has been in silver and gold. There are nearly 14,000 properties, covering more than 300,000 acres, of these ores. Next come copper, lead, and of recent date, zinc, but these metals by no means comprise Mexico's total metal production, as the country contains metaliferous ore from quick-silver to radium.

In the fiscal year of 1905-06 the total mineral exportation of this country figured in Mexican money has been given out officially as $125,400,083 silver and $36,613,324 in other minerals.

During last year a great deal of tin ore prospecting was carried on and it is reported that many valuable deposits of that metal were discovered to the extent that the erection of tin smelters in Jalisco and Aguas calientes has been talked about seriously. This follows close upon the beginning of tin smelting in the Northwestern part of the United States, there having been formerly no tin of consequence produced outside of Great Britain and none at all in America.

About Float

Float is not a periodical. It is a book containing 86 illustrations, all told, and is filled with sketches and stories of western life. It tells how a gambler cashin after the flush days of Sandon; how it rained in New Denver long after Noah was dead; how a parson took a drink at Bear Lake in early days; how justice was dealt in Kaslo in '93; how the saloon man outprayed the women in Kalamazoo, and graphically depicts the roamings of a western editor amongst the tenderfeet in the cent belt. It contains the early history of Nelson and a romance of the Silver King mine. In it are printed three western poems, and dozens of article too numerous to mention. Send for one before it is too late. The price is twenty-five cents, postpaid to any part of the world. Address all letters to

How Animals Cure Themselves

That the dog possesses a marked surgical instinct is verified by numerous instances out of the commonplace. A Rev. Mr. Young, who was engaged for a long time in missionary work in northwestern Canada, had among his dogs, of which a large number was necessary for drawing his sleds, one Rover.

This dog not only attended its own wounds, but actually performed the duties of surgeon to all of it's fellows. Galls, wounds, frozen feet and other like unpleasantness consequent upon the peculiar toil they had to perform were systematically and successfully treated by "Dr." Rover.

He had one remedy, the anointing of the afflicted part with his saliva. Wherever he applied his remedy the cure was speedy. It was noticed that part of the toes of the dog patient which could not be reached by the dog doctor's tongue went unhealed.

Mr. Young says that the Indians in admiration of the canine's wonderful canine's learning called him Muskeke Atim, meaning the surgeon. This instance shows that the saliva of the dog when that animal is in health and properly fed has a powerful bactericidal effect.

But the dog is not alone in the possession of this means for curing the various ills to which his tribe is heir. Cats, cattle, rats, mice and monkeys are all known to lick their wounds when they can get at them, and when they cannot do so they endeavor to get their companions to perform this office for them.

If the queer little worlds which they know were possessed of newspapers intelligible to them it would doubtless be true that they would be frequent contributors to these columns devoted to home remedies, and they would tell in glowing and convincing language how they had tried this method with such success that they would have no other.

The Johns Hopkins men who are inquiring into this subject now call attention to an incident narrated by Dr. Jas. Weir, in which a large monkey figured. The monkey scratched his shoulder badly on a nail which projected from the side of the cage.

Immediately upon sustaining the injury the queer creature went to a corner and selected a handful of clean sawdust to place until the bleeding stopped, which was in but a few moments.

The sawdust was saturated with blood, which had dried and formed a most excellent coating for the wound, protecting it until entirely well.

It should be mentioned that the dog's medical instinct does not halt at the saliva treatment. He is a physician as well as a surgeon.

The dog that goes searching around in the field with apparent aimlessness and finally settles down to chew up some most unattractive and unpalatable greens is taking a prescription taught him by nature.

The blades he eats are those of the couch grass—which your physician would probably designate on his prescription blank as triticum ripens and it performs the office of a purgative.

Instances could be recited at length of animal display of the medical instinct. Horses, and even the less intelligent mules, eat clay when they are afflicted with stomachic disorder, commonly designated by the veterinarian as "sours."

Cattle suffering with eczema have frequently been known to plaster an affected hoof and joint with mud. Dr. Weir tells of a cow which deliberately broke the ice on a pond in the winter and treated her itching joint to a bath of mud. The fondness of the domestic cat for catnip is not a condition of mind attendant upon the enjoyment of absolute health, for it is only when the feline is feeling somewhat "under the weather" that it will seek the solace of the soothing properties of this vegetation.

Under such circumstances cats have been known to travel miles after the catnip.

Not the least remarkable of all the achievements of dumb creatures in the line of surgery and medicine are those of the birds. Dr. Geo. M. Gould cites instances of woodcock killed, which, when examined, were found to be recovering from previous wounds inflicted by hunters.

Such wounds, made from small shot in the body of the bird were neatly dressed with down plucked from the stem of feathers and deftly arranged about the injured place. This work was evidently done by the beak of a bird.

The skill of members of the feathered tribe in building their dainty nests is testimony to their ability in accomplishing work of this character with neatness and dispatch. Of course of this work Dr. Gould bears witness in the statement that the woodcock were found to be convalescent from the old wounds.

The same authority tells of cases of bone-setting by birds, which would be beyond belief if man was not already familiar with the marvelous intelligence of the lower creatures.

Birds, which have fallen into the hands of naturalists and which had previously sustained serious wounds on the legs, were found to have actually reinforced the dressing of down with small straws or twigs just as a doctor would set a broken limb in splints before applying bandages.

In the Mood for Fooling

A reporter one day asked John Jacob Astor if it was true that he had 27 automobiles. 5 chauffeurs, 33 horses, 48 carriges—but here Mr. Astor interrupted.

Statistics are always dry and stupid. They are very irritating, he said. In your work you should avoid them. By way of warning to you, let me tell you of the adventure of a certain statistical temperance advocate.

This temperance advocate, walking in the suburbs, found a man lying full length on the path with flushed face and tossed hair. He stopped beside the man, touched him with his foot to rouse him, and said with a voice full of gentle reproach:

My friend, did you ever pause to consider that, if you had placed the price of one glass of whisky out at compound interest at the time of the visit of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon, you would now have $7,716,472?

The red-faced man lifted his head. He brushed the place on his coat where the other's foot had touched him. Then he said:

No, I haven't worked that out; but I'm some sort of a statistician myself, and if you don't go back 119 feet in 7 seconds, I'll hit you 48 times and make you see 17,518 stars For I've just had six teeth pulled for eight dollars—that's $1.28 a toota—and I tell you, you old meddler, I'm in no mood for fooling

A Scotsman visited London by himself for the first time to "speer roond," as he termed it On his return to his native village he informed a boon companion that it was a grand place, but that the people war no honest. He'd had his "doots" all the week, but satisfied himself of the fact on leaving. Asked how he tested the matter, he said: Ah bowt a box o' pins labeled 1,000 for a penny, and on counting them in the train I fun' them to be seventeen shoort!—Financial Times.

As the new minister of the village was on his way to evening service he met a rising young man of the place whom he was anxious to have become an active member of the church.

Good evening, my young friend, he said solemnly Do you ever attend a place of worship?

Yes indeed, sir; regularly every Sunday night, replied the young fellow with a smile. I'm on my way to see her now.

Minus two ounces of brain, A. C. Hammond has recovered and will soon be discharged from the hospital at Chippewa Falls, Wis. Mr. Hammond was injured by a circular saw near Thorp. He lost a piece of his skull three inches square, exposing the brain, and about two ounces of the brain were lost. After the accident he rode eight miles to Thorp, where he took the train to Chippewa. Physicians then thought he could not live. Ever since he came under care of physicians at the hospital at Chippewa Falls he has been conscious and the losing of part of his thinking apparatus does not at all seem to give any inconvenience. He remembers all the events of his life and says he feels better than ever he did before.

In Holland potatoes are not received in the parcel post. Denmark will not receive almanacs, and Egypt will no permit sausages to be posted. Germany refuses anything of American origin and has some clauses directed against Japan, while air guns, maps, wax matches, cigarettes, relics, and jewelry are the miscellaneous barred by Spain.

A Hungarian physician has mounted an apparatus, which, producing alternate compressions of air and vacuums, causes patients who are apparently dead to breath with all the natural motions of a live person. It is said that the machine will be of great value in aiding people nearly drowned or asphyxiated or those suffering from severe electric shocks.

An ironmonger is a small English town recently posted the following announcement in front of his shop: The reason I have hitherto been able to sell my goods so much cheaper than anybody else is because I am a bachelor and do not need to make a profit for the maintenance of wife and children. It is now my duty to inform the public that this advantage will be shortly withdrawn from them, as I am about to be married. They will, therefore, do well to make their purchases at once at the old rate.

For a feat of dexterity and nerve it would be difficult to surpass that of the Bosjesman of South Africa, who walks quietly up to a puff adder and deliberately sets his bare foot on its neck. In its struggle to escape and attempts to bite its assailant the poison gland secretes a large amount of venom. This is just what the Bosjesman wants. Killing the snake, he eats the body and uses the poison for his arrows.

Some of the factories in Germany are making cigars which, they claim, are free from nicotine. These cigars are to be given a thorough test by officials to see whether or not the claims made by them are true.

The town of East Clarion, O., boasts a unique record. The Shaw hotel is run by Mrs. Phoebe Shaw on a strictly temperance basis. The postoffice is in charge of Miss Nellie Cleator. The church choir is composed of female voices led by Mrs. Eva Armstrong. The superintendent of the Sunday school is Mrs. Nellie Hale. The teaching force of the public school is composed of women. The superintendent is Mrs. Anne Mawson. There has not been a male doctor in the town for several years, and nearly all the husbands in town wipe the dishes.—Kansas City Journal.

A lot of poor children were at Rockefeller's stock farm near Cleveland. He gave each of them some milk to drink, the product of a $2,000 prize cow. How do you like it? he asked when they had finished. Gee, its fine! responded one little fellow, who added after a thoughtful pause: I wish our milkman kept a cow.

A young English farmer, wishing to have his banns published, went to see the parish clergyman. The reverend gentleman asked him several questions all of which he was able to answer, with the exception of one. Is your intended a spinster? the clergyman asked. He paused in thought.
