In Hot Arizona

A correspondent writing from Oatman says:

"This is a wonderful mining camp in many ways. In two weeks I have not seen a fight or a drunken man. The camp is dry in more ways than one. The weather is awfully hot and not a tree in sight. There are thousands of people living in tents and shacks. Some good buildings are now being erected, one of them costing $40,000. We have a laffee with a seating capacity of 1000. Music and tango with your meals. There are no real estate boosters here. The townsite will not sell a lot. They rent them. The streets are crowded with autos. Even the prospectors use them instead of burros. It is nearly all shaft work here, and the miners get from $4 to $6 a shift. There are 200 incorporated companies. The outcrops are dykes of alterated andesite and spar with with very little values on the surface. The camp is over 20 years old, but has only boomed lately."

The Spider in the Helmet

Major Lawrie was an officer who fought bravely in the Soudan war. One day, before the battle of Atbara, he found a spider in the ventilator of his helmet, and watched it with some interest. The spider used to come out in the evening, and, after having its supper of flies, would go to the helmet for sleep and rest.

Major Lawrie allowed the spider to remain in its strange hiding place, and even went into battle carrying his friend in his helmet. Major Lawrie escaped without a scratch; and the same good fortune attended him at Omdurmau, where the spider again accompanied him

When the war was over, Major Lawrie packed up his things to be sent home, and among them the helmet; and not till it was too late did he remember that the spider had been sent with the helmet. It must die on the road; for how could it find anything to eat in a tin packing case? The major was sorry. He had taken a great interest in the spider, and it was sad to have condemned it to a lingering death.

The first thing he did on arriving in London was to open the helmet box, expecting, of course, to find the spider dead; but not only was the spider alive and well, but it was the happy mother of two spiders.—Christian Register.

The Streak of Yellow

With a pocket full of money
Any coward can be brave;
When the skies are bright and sunny
Any man his flag can wave.
But the test of every fellow
Is disaster's sudden blow,
And if he is streaked with yellow
It is then that it will show.

You will never find a quitter
If he's leading in the race;
It is when the fight grows bitter
And another makes the pace
That the coward starts to bellow
And to whimper at his woe;
If a man is streaked with yellow
When he's pressed it's sure to show.

Can you stand the gaff of losing,
Can you battle to the end;
Take the cuffing and the bruising
And not let your courage bend?
For the test of pluck is never
When you're leading in the race,
But are you game as ever
When another sets the pace?

WAR PRINTS

THERE are 7,000 printers in the British army. They were all devils at one time, and familiar with the hell-box. By sticking to it, they should go to press, and pi the German line of battle. By leaving no stone unturned, they should be able to lead and slug the enemy, even if some of their forms get locked up in the formation. Keep cases on the front, comps, and paste Fritz, every time he comes down the alley, looking for phat takes. Keep your eyes on the battery and the German army will soon be all quad lines. Stand by the colors, do not space your columns, and you will make a good impression, long after the roller of time has passed and inked the world with the glory of your deeds, set in pica, 42 ems wide. This article is to the point, and all prints will savey. Jeff not, lest ye be jeffed.

THEN AND NOW

JUST 25 years ago tomorrow, we stepped out of a rowboat in front of the city of Nelson, and walked up the hill to Tom Madden's, in search of ham and eggs. Tom was out of butter, but in those days such a little matter was of no importance. The camp was new, and short of frills, boiled shirts, parsons, lawyers and prohibition orators. It had plenty of whiskey, hope, a few canary and other birds, several pianos, Jim Gilker, the Silver King mine, and no fruit lands. The camp was devoid of soldiers, and the police only slept in the daytime. The only autocrat was Captain Fitzstubbs. All the rest of the population were mule skinners, democrats, packers, trail blazers, remittance men, and producers, with a slight trace of tenderfeet. It was a wild free bunch in those early days, and unless you could rest on the high pillow, and get drunk with a fair degree of regularity, you could not break into society. We were broke that summer, and our social standing was not as big as a knife-blade seam of bull quartz in country rock. Today how different is Nelson. The rough riders, Indian fighters, gamblers and pathfinders have nearly all gone to the front, or climbed the shaft to that ethereal land, where the burro never enters, and the bannock is unknown. Let us weave in memory a garland of flowers in honor of the brave old scouts, who cut the trails into the golden west, and made it possible for the feather bed chaps to ride in on the cushions. Today Nelson looks like a well-fed town in the east. It is filled with fine shops, and pretty homes. The rose is everywhere in June, and nature combined with art, has made all the women beautiful. It is no longer considered good taste to get drunk, and ride your cayuse up to a bar on Baker street. Soul savers are almost as plentiful as red fish in August, and boosters for almost every known trail to the New Jerusalem are eating chicken during the week, and pounding pulpits on Sunday. The devil still lurks around the town, but his work is not as raw, as it was when the piano end of Baker street was in blossom. There are many fine young men in Nelson, but there are also a few effeminate ones who would rather smoke cigs., and eat ice-cream, than shoulder a rifle in defense of their flag and country.

HE is easily startled who has a guilty conscience.

MANY a hard trail ends in front of a bank, or a saloon.

WE may need Noah if the weather becomes suddenly hot.

THE way of the plugger is hard, and the wages of win is publicity.

WHAT shall it profit a man if he gains the entire world, and does not advertise? But, then, that is impossible.

THE result of the coming provincial election is in the hands of the honest Tories.

SNIDE actors are safe in Germany. Eggs are ten cents a piece in that country.

IT has been discovered in Chicago, that Shakespeares plays were written by Francis Bacon, and not by Shakespeare. Chicago has saved its Bacon, but it matters little. The world loves the works of Shakespeare, and not the writer.

PUBLICITY is all a newspaper has to sell. Since the war began every local paper in Canada has given free, hundreds of dollars worth of space, boosting all kinds of funds and organizations in connection with the war. In spite of this, many unthinking people entertain the idea that editors should put up just as much cash as other citizens. If a grocer donated a large quantity of provisions to war funds, would any reasonable man expect him to put up cash? Then, why pester editors for cash, when they are already giving more to war projects than any other class of citizens. The proper system is to charge for all this kind of publicity, and make cash donations to all funds, just the same as other citizens. By doing this some of the dull-witted might gradually learn, that the editors of Canada have given more towards war funds, than any other class of people in the entire Dominion.

WE need other reforms more than we need the prohibition of the liquor traffic. We must dig out the roots, not merely lop off the branches. The wrong and excessive use of foods, combined with the excessive use of tea, coffee, and condiments, is the cause of nearly all the evils that flow from the liquor traffic. No man in normal health will ever become a drunkard. The use of liquor, except in very small quantities, is abhorrent to the individual in perfect health. It is the diseased and inflamed condition of the stomach, and other organs, caused mainly by wrong feeding, and the use of non-intoxicating narcotics, stimulants, and irritants that drives people to drink. They seek surcease in the flowing bowl from the horrors and miseries caused by a wrong system of living. If the rivers, creeks and lakes were filled with booze, no bear, wolf, cougar, cow, dog, mule or any other lower animal would drink out of them. The lower animals eat right, and do not befuddle themselves with tea, coffee or tobacco. You cannot make people good by legislation. Education is the only way, and that will be only partially effective, as the world is so full of fools, caused by the dense ignorance of the human race upon the most essential thing in the universe—the science of Eugenics.

The caterpillar's range of vision has been measured. It is two-fifths of an inch.

A Crafty Cat

One day the cook in a monastery, when he laid the dinner, found one brother's portion of meat missing. He supposed that he had miscalculated, made good the deficiency, and thought no more of it until the next day, when he had again too little at dinner time by one monk's commons. He suspected knavery, and resolved to watch for the thief On the third day he was quite sure that he had his meat cut into the right number of portions, and was about to dish up, when he was called off by the ring of the bell at the outer gate. When he came back there was again the monk's allowance gone.

Next day he again paid special heed to his calculations; and when he was on the point of dishing up, and there was a ring at the gate to draw him from the kitchen. He went no farther than the outside of the kitchen door whence he saw the cat that jumped in at the kitchen window and was out again in an instant with a piece of meat.

Another day's watching showed that it was the cat also who, by hopping up at it, set the bell ringing with her paws, and thus having, as she supposed, pulled the cook out of the kitchen, made the coast clear for her piratical proceedings.

The monks then settled it in conclave that their cat should be left thusto earn for the remainder of her days double rations, while they spread abroad the story of her cunning. So they obtained many visitors, who paid money for good places from which to see the little comedy; and they grew the richer for the thief they had among them. —Every Other Saturday.

About Float.

Float is not a periodical. It is a book containing 86 illustrations all told, and is filled with sketches and stories of western life. It tells how a gambler cashed in after the flush days of Sandon; how it rained in New Denver long after Noah was dead; how a parson took a drink at Bear Lake in early days; how justice was dealt in Kaslo in '93; how the saloon man outprayed the women in Kalamazoo, and graphically depicts the roamings of a western editor among the tenderfeet in the cent belt. It contains the early history of Nelson and a romance of the Silver King mine. In it are printed three western poems, and dozens of articles too numerous to mention. Send for one before it is too late. The price is 25 cents, postpaid to any part of the world. Address all letters to
