McDonald was elected as delegate to the annual convention in Victoria. The financial report showed a balance on hand of $48 50. It was decided to hold regular quarterly meetings in future. Persons wishing to join the Institute can do so by sending $1.00 to the sec.-treas.

An Editor's Wedding

This month Fred Smyth got married, and his old friend, Fred Simpson, has the following to say about it in his Victorian newspaper:

"F. J. Smyth, of the Princeton Star, has started to chop kindling wood and build fires. We heard that he has been married but this is official. The bride is Mrs. Rena Bradbury, of Minneapolis, and they were married in Spokane. We have talked with tears in our eyes in years gone by, urging Fred to take the fatal step, but he always gave one of those hearty laughs and eyed us with suspicion. We want to extend congratulations to Mr. Smyth, for he is a lucky man, and while we are at it we might as well congratulate Mrs. Smyth, as she has one of the best fellows on earth for a husband, who knows how to cook, wash dishes, split wood and shovel snow. When he gets over the habit of eating off the corner of the stove with a cat on his shoulder and a dog by his side, she will be able to take him out and eat with the neighbors."

Dead at Dawson

William Roman, a singular character, who has lived within the shadow of Dawson 17 years, and has family ties, his friends believe, which probably, if fully known, would identify him as a member of the Norwegian nobility, passed away here evening before last in St. Mary's hospital. Roman came to Dawson in '98, and most of the time since had led an obscure and modest life as a wood ckopper, in a cabin located on the high ridge overlooking Dawson between Dion and Sourdough gulches. He said little of his past to his friends, and cared little to be known to those in the outside world, and died without leaving any addresses of relatives. However, from his remarks to Friends some time ago, it is believed that he is from circles clase in touch with the king of Norway and perhaps a member of the nobility.

Roman practically leaves no estate. He has a son somewhere outside, possibly on the Pacific coast. In his oonversations Roman told some friends of late of one member of his family who endowed a university in Norway at which anyone bearing the name Roman was entitled to free education.

Roman was about 50 years of age. He was taken down August 15 from a run down condition, and from a cold developed stomach trouble, and finally pneumonia, from which he died.

Roman also claimed to be the discoveror of the Famous Engineer group of mines near Atlin.—Dawson News.

At Prince George, H. Yewdall of Winnipeg was fined $20 for attempting to ship furs out of this province, without a permit.

J. Bennett, Leon Lontier, Wm. Hunt, and Clement Mundy died this month at the Old Man's Home in Kamloops. Three of them died in one day.

The English and Germans recognized more than a hundred years ago the necessity of keeping nature balanced by encouraging bird-life and holding insect life in check.

Wm. Thomlinson has returned to New Denver from San Francisco. He was one of the commissioners in charge of the Canadian exhibits at the Panama Exposition.

Wm. Armstrong recently died in New Westminster aged 87. He came to that town in 1858, being the first white settler. He was a cabinet minister in the De Cosmos government in 1873. In 1867 he built the first flour mill in this province.

An old criminal was once asked what was the first step that led him to ruin, and he said, "The first thing that led me to my downfall was cheating an editor out of two years subscription. When I had done that the devil had such a grip on me that I could not shake him off."

Trail Smelter

Of all the mining camps of this district Rossland camp gives the most evidence of substantial progress. Last month's figures indicate an expected increase in total quantity of ore shipped this year to the smeltery at Trail of about 52,000 tons. The most gratifying feature of the situation is that there is good reason to look for permanence in mining operations at least for a generation, since the known ore reserves are large and the average value of the ore is sufficiently high to make its mining and smelting profitable. At Trail, the smelting centre for Kootenay ores, important progress is most manifest, since there it is on the surface, while in Rossland camp it is chiefly underground. Of course the greatest activity is at the Consolidated company's smelting and refining works, where many improvements and additions have been made during several recent years. In fact there has been an almost entire transformation of the ore reduction side of the works, old buildings and plant having being gradually replaced by larger modern structures and equipment, thus providing for a considerably increased ore treatment capacity, and thus at a reduced cost. These comments apply to both lead and copper smelting departments. Larger storage bins for ores with ample provision for bedding, so as to secure generally uniform charges for the blast furnaces, enlarged and improved sample mills, better transportation arrangements between ore beds and furnaces—bigger blast furnaces for both copper and lead, an overhead electrically operated crane for handling matte pots, the substitution of Wedge roasters for the old Huntington-Heberlein roasters long in use in the lead department, belt conveyors for handling materials in and from the roasters, several treaters of the Dottrell system for precipitating metals carried from the furnaces in the fumes and smoke, and many other provisions for more expeditious and economical treatment of ores and furnace products as well as for improving the working condition of men employed in the smeltery. Methods at the company's electrolytic lead refinery are also up to date. Excellent progress has been made towards the completion of installation of the copper converting plant, and it is generally understood (though not so stated by the local officials) that it will not be long before copper refining by the electrolytic process will be undertaken here. Meanwhile the buildings and machinery for zinc reduction works being erected and installed by the company are an earnest of the intentions to also make spelter at Trail, though no information is being given out relative to this further extension of the company's activities.—Canadian Mining Journal.

A Warrior of Today

The methods of warfare have changed enormously in the past year. The sword, for example, has almost disappeared from war.

A story comes from the Argonne about a French chasseur who took a German officer prisoner. The chasseur, a boy, said to the officer: "Give up your sword!"

But the officer said I have no sword to give up, but won't my vitriol spray, my oil projector, or my gas cylinder do as well?"

Health Talks

The death rate from contagious diseases is everywhere decreasing, certain diseases like small pox and typhoid fever are becoming less prevalent, due to quarantine and to better sanitary conditions in the towns and cities. While deaths from this class of diseases are decreasing, deaths from degenerate diseases are alarmingly on the increase more people are dying every year from Bright's disease, apoplexy, heart failure and arterial sclerosis. This class of disease is due to wornout organs, the result, largely of years of overeating, the use of tobacco, coffee and alcohol. These disorders are said to be insidious for the reason that they cause but little inconvenience until they are so well established that invalidism and death are close at hand.

By living hygenically, by avoiding tobacco, coffee, and a daily excess of food, we can prevent unnecessary work on the part of the vital organs, and prevent a good part of the now prevalent disease. Disorders of digestion constitute no small percent. of all illness; practically all these disorders may be avoided through care in selecting and preparing the food. Health preparedness will not only enable one to avoid a good part of all the usual diseases, but it will add to our physical and mental efficiency. From the standpoint of the dollar it will increase our earning capacity.—Dr. R. R. Daniels.

Ants that Sew

A writer in The Visitor tells of a party of German naturalists returned from Ceylon, who have reported the existence of a species of ant that has been observed in the act of sewing two leaves together for the purpose of forming a nest. This report confirms the observations of the English naturalist, Ridley, made in 1890. They saw a row of the insects, pulling the edges of leaves together, then others trimming and fitting the edges, and finally the completion of the work by still other ants, which fastened the edges with a silky thread yielded by larvae of the same species, which the workers carried in their mandibles. It is said that the sewing ants pass the thread-giving larve like shuttles through holes in the edges of the leaves.

The Huge Hippopotamus

In spite of its clumsy build, the hippopotamus can trot fast. That is why he was given the name of river-horse. The hippo's feet are kept far apart by the wide body and make paths with a ridge down the middle, so as to be recognized at once. They swim well, but go at their greatest speed when they can gallop along the bottom in shallow water. They can stay under water a long time, and when they come to the surface they send little jets of spray from their nostrils. The cow is devoted to the calf. The young one stands on her back as the mother swims.

Slocan Star

The Slocan Star Mining company which owns and is operating the Slocan Star mine, near Sandon, B.C., is considering issuing $100,000 of 7 per cent. two year, first mortgage bonds, to finance improvements at the property, decided upon at the annual meeting in Vancouver, B.C., recently according to John B. White, prosecuting attorney, a director of the corporation.

"There is no question but the Slocan Star will become one of the valuable properties of the Slocan district, but the company has been handicapped by lack of finances, and the contemplated bond issue is to remedy this condition," said Mr. White. "The mill has never been properly equipped to save all the values in the ore, but despite this operations have shown a good profit. The mill has been producing a 33 per cent concentrate, but when the betterments to the process are installed there is no doubt that this can be raised to not less than 40 per cent.

"Another obstacle to satisfactory operations has been poor transportation. Heretofore we have had to haul the ore and concentrates to the railway by wagons, over a mile road that is steep and hard to maintain, but we have decided to install an aerial tram from the mill to Sandon, about 4,000 feet, and the carrier will be operated in about three or four months. The improvements and the tram, will cost about $30,000 leaving us $70,000 for an operating fund, provided the bond issue is decided upon."

At the annual meeting which Mr. White attended, Robert S. Lennie, Vancouver, was re-elected president; A. C. Burdick, Victoria, was chosen vice president and F. B. Hooper, Vancouver, secretary-treasurer. The president and vice president, with S. P. McGoldrick and J. B. White, Spokane; John M. Harris, Sandon; John McPherson, Calgary, Alberta, and John Elliott, Vancouver, comprise the directorate, and Bruce White, Sandon is general manager.—Spokesman Review.

I wouldn't drink out of that cup," said little Johnny to the immaculate young visitor.

"That's Bessie's cup, and she is very particular who drinks out of it."

"Ah," said the young man gallantly, as he drank the cup dry. I feel honored to drink out of Bessie's cup! Bessie is your elder sister, isn't she?"

"Oh no," replied the small boy, "Bessie is my dog, and she's very particular who uses that cup."

Between the Lights

Dear heart come closer, while the light
Dies slowly in the darkening sky,
And, marshalled at the call of night,
The twilight shades troop slowly by.

I would not have you sorrow so,
Because it must be, soon or late,
That one of us, alone, will go
From out the light thro' death's dark gate.

For life at best is all too short
When measured by a love like ours,
And death is but an open port
To broader fields and fairer flowers.

So, while the twilight shades troop past,
And night end darkness come apace,
We know the dawn will break at last,
And always there is light some place.
—Selected.

Song

When I am dead my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;
Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress-tree.
Be the green grass above me
With showers and dewdrops wet;
And if thou wilt remember,

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain;
I shall not hear the nightingale
Sing on, as if in pain;
And dreaming through the twilight
That doth not rise or set,
Haply I may remember,
And haply may forget.
—Christina G. Rossetti.

Excess baggage is the load that keeps many a man from getting there.

A preacher who went to a Kentucky parish was asked to invite the prayers of the congregation for Lucy Gray. He did so—They prayed three Sundays for Lucy Gray. On the fourth he was told that he need not do it any more, "Why" said the preacher, "is she dead?" "No." answered the man, "She has won the Derby."

He Does Not Advertise.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said:
'My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another ten-inch ad!"

If there be, go mark him well,
For him no bank account shall swell,
No angels watch the golden stair,
To welcome home the millionaire.

The man who never asks for trade,
By local line, or add displayed,
Cares more for rest than worldly gain,
And patronage but gives him pain.

Tread lightly, friends; let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound,
Here let him lie in calm repose,
Unsought except by men he owes.

And when he dies, go plant him deep
That nothing may disturb his sleep,
Where no rude clamor may dispel
That quiet that he loved so well.

And that the world may know its loss
Place on a stone a wreath of moss,
And on a stone above "Here lies
A fossil, who did not advertise."

About Float.

Float is not a periodical. It is a book containing 86 illustrations all told, and is filled with sketches and stories of western life. It tells how a gambler cashed in after the flush days of Sandon; how it rained in New Denver long after Noah was dead; how a parson took a drink at Bear Lake in early days; how Justice was dealt in Kaslo in '93; how the saloon man outprayed the women in Kalamazoo, and graphically depicts the roamings of a western editor among the tenderfeet in the cent belt. It contains the early history of Nelson and a romance of the Silver King mine. In it are printed three western poems, and dozens of articles too numerous to mention. Send for one before it is too late. The price is 25 cents, postpaid to any part of the world. Address all letters to

Synopsis of Coal Mining Regulations.

COAL mining rights of the Dominion in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the Northwest Territories and in a portion of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal sub-divisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon: If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.
