ST. EUGENE TO START

Work on Moyie's Big Mine will Be Resumed Next Week.

WAS CLOSED DOWN THREE YEARS

"The St, Eugene will commence next Monday, April 18th, to prepare for the resumption of work, being confident the Government will grant the bonus on the portion of ore necessary to export. To continue working will be dependent on the Government doing this."--James Cronin.

To the residents of Moyie in particular and to the people of the Kootenays generally more joyful tidings were never made known. For nearly three long years this mammoth property has been lying idle. With thousands of tons of ore blocked out and on the dumps, with the most expensive and up-to-date machinery going to wreck and to rust, the spot which was once a veritable hive of industry has been in death-like silence. To live within a stone's throw of one of the largest and richest silver-lead mines on the American continent and yet derive little or no benefit from it has been the experience of the residents of Moyie.

Effort after effort has been made during the past two years to get matters so adjusted that the mine could reopen, but all were in vain. James Cronin, T. G. Blackstock and the other directors of the company have labored unceasingly and spent both valuable time and money in assisting in bringing about the necessary conditions to justify a resumption of operations.

Mr. Cronin says it will take about three weeks to get the mine and mill running in full swing, and that shipments to the Trail smelter will not likely begin until the first part of May. Men will be put on gradually until a full force is obtained. That the Government will extend the bounty on a certain fixed quantity of exported ore for a period of one year there is scarcely a shadow of a doubt. Therefore, with the good price of both lead and silver and the brisk demand for both metals, the St. Eugene company and the town of Moyie will experience prosperous times for years to come.

Building Is Brisk.

The spring building boom started off briskly this week. R. Campbell is building an addition of 22x20 to his store, to be used as a storeroom and warehouse. When completed his building will be 60 feet in length and 28 feet in width.

Chas. Livesley is erecting an attractive residence on Tavistock street opposite the Catholic church. It is 22x26, and two stories high.

The contracting firm of Brenton & Nelson have finished grading the lot for R. T. Howard's building. The building will be 15x40, and work on it will begin at once.

Robt. Kinsey is planning to erect a two story building on his lot opposite the Kootenay Hotel. It will be 30x50 in size.

R. E. S. TAYLOR, Pastor

Cy Warman on Canada.

Cy. Warman, writing in Leslie's Monthly Magazine, expresses the opinion that the people of Canada are growing favorably impressed with the notion of becoming an independent republic. He says: "Twenty year ago only a few dreamers dreamed of the republic of Canada. Ten years later 10 per cent of the people were in favor of it, and today 20 out of every 100 Canadians would welcome the news that Canada had cast off the cable that moors her to the motherland and had blossomed out as a nation." The foregoing occasions the Woodstock, Ontario, Express to remark: "Whether the situation be just as the writer quoted puts it or not, no one who is not blinded by imperial ties and love of everything connected with the motherland but has observed a growing tendency towars independence of action in Canadian life. This may or may not reach to national aspirations, but the fact remains that there is a strong element in Canada which believes that the development of the country should be followed by the development of national ideals, and that this idea is more than an undercurrent is indicated by the frequent public utterances on the subject. There may never be a Canadian republic, and there never will be annexaction with the United States, but a measure of greater Canadian independence, we believe, is bound to come."

Lead Bounty Paid.

The first payment of the lead bounty has been made. There were 21 claimants and they received their cheques Tuesday. The largest amount went to the Highland mine at Ainsworth, which got $18,000 for its share. Next in order came the North Star, Rambler-Cariboo, Payne, Slocan Star and Ruth.

The Turn of the Tide.

Fort Steele Prospector: The people of Moyie have waited a long time for the turn of the tide. Now that it is on the flow they will ride in on the wave of prosperity they all deserve.

No prettier mountain retreat is there, than along Moyie Lake, no mine of greater wealth than the St. Eugene, and no more cosmopolitan people than those of the town of Moyie.

Foote Branching Out.

C. A. Foote, the tailor, has a splendid line of tweeds, worsteds and serges on the road and they are expected to arrive next week. He will latter add a stock of men's furnishings to his establishment. Mr. Foote is meeting with splendid success in his business and no man is better entitled to it either.

Memorial Ratified.

At the meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade held in Nelson on Tuesday the memorial to the Government asking for the extension of the lead bounty was ratified unanimously. A. P. Macdonald represented the Moyie board, and Mr. Cronin was also present at the meeting.

Claims Surveyed.

T. T. McVittie and his men have completed the surveying of the St. Eugene Mountain Mines group and have returned to Fort Steele. Mr. McVittie has been engaged to survey the Langley claims near the St. Eugene, and he will begin on this work about the first of May.

Bowser as a Scientist

He Resolves to Settle All the Discussion About Grasshoppers and Makes a Trip to the Country

[Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis.]

THERE was a look of dignity and importance on Mr. Bowser's face as he reached home the other evening, but before Mrs. Bowser had had time to question him he somewhat patronizingly observed:

"I'd like dinner right away, as I shall be out this evening in the interests of science."

"You are not going to sit out in the yard all night to see how much the sunflowers grow, are you?" she asked.

"When I propose to make a fool of myself I will send you a postal card!"

"Then what is it?"

He was huffed and refused to answer until after dinner. Then, as he was getting ready to go out, he said:

"It may be close upon midnight before I return, and you needn't sit up. I shall go out into the country for at least two miles, and shall pass an hour or two in some meadow."

"But what is it all about?" she asked. "If I hurt your feelings in speaking about the sunflowers I beg your pardon."

"Well, a dispute has arisen between naturalists over the grasshopper. One faction contends that he does not sleep at night, the other that he is a sound sleeper. One faction contends that his long hind legs are merely for ornament, the other that they are used to jump with. I have been asked by our club to investigate and report on the matter."

"Are you sure that it is not a joke of some kind?"

"Joke? Joke? Who would attempt to joke with me on such a subject?"

"But we all know that every living thing must sleep, and as for the grasshopper's hind legs, of course he uses them to jump with."

"My dear woman, you are taking the same ground as one faction does and proving that the matter ought to be settled without delay. I go out unprejudiced. I go to investigate and report."

"Well, I hope you won't come home mad at me," she sighed.

"What nonsense!" he exclaimed. "What have you got to do with a grasshopper's hind legs? Why should I come home mad at you? Don't talk like a schoolgirl. By this time tomorrow the world will know the grasshopper as he is, and the name of Bowser will be spoken in every language known to man. I'm off to investigate."

Mrs. Bowser and the cat watched him from the front door until he was lost in the darkness of evening, and then both sighed and turned away. She went in to pick up a book and become interested, and the cat found her way to the back yard to engage in three or four scraps and come out victor every time. Mr. Bowser might have heard something about grasshoppers at the corner drug store or the family butcher's, but he decided to go to the fountain head, the country pasture.

He must have looked like a man with a mission, for he had hardly boarded the car when a fellow passenger moved nearer to him and inquired:

"Have you got anything very tremendous on your mind, neighbor?"

"What do you mean, sir?" stiffly demanded Mr. Bowser.

"Why, you look to me as if you were goin' somewhere to buy a new milk cow or to tear up an acre or two of ground."

"You mind your business, sir!"

"Oh, I'll mind my business all right, and I'll keep an eye on you at the same time. Now that I look at you a little closer, I'll be hanged if I don't think you are an anarchist. If you are, don't hang around my farm long. I expect you've got a bomb in your pocket, but you can't skeer me."

Mr. Bowser changed seats to be rid of the man, and at the end of the route he let him get a good start before he took to the highway behind him. It was a bright moonlight night, and a grasshopper could be seen as well as by noonday. After going half a mile the fence was climbed and the discoverer was ready to begin investigations. It did not take him long as he crept about on hands and knees to discover a grasshopper under a stalk of clover, and after five minutes of peering about the following entry was made in his memorandum book:

"It is a settled fact that the grasshopper sleeps, but at the same time he opens one eye at intervals, as if watching out for enemies. I am now about to poke him up in order to get a line on his hind legs.

"Mem. No. 2. I have poked. As I poked he jumped, and as he jumped it seemed to me that he only made use of his right hind leg. If this be so then a three legged grasshopper would answer every purpose. I shall investigate further.

"Mem. No. 3. Have found another hopper, and he seems to be wide awake. It may be that my approach aroused him. Later on he will be poked.

"Mem. No. 4. I poked and he jumped. I am not at all satisfied with what I saw. He seemed only to use his front legs to jump and to use his hind ones to kick out with after he was in the air. It may be that his hind feet are his defense, same as a mule's. It is a question never discussed before, and the honor of solving it will belong to me.

"Mem. No. 5. I have cornered an old socker of a hopper under a burdock leaf, and it is my opinion that he is sound asleep. I have tickled him with a straw and he has humped his back as if having an attack of nightmare. I am going to give him a sudden jab and keep my eyes on his hind legs. One of the most important questions in natural science is on the point of being solved.

"Mem. No. 6. I poked and"—

And that was all. The farmer who had taken him for an anarchist had kept an eye on him, as he said he would, and after seeing him climb the fence had hurried on and got his sons, Jim and Bill, to go back with him. They found Mr. Bowser lying in the meadow on his stomach, and the first thing he knew of their presence they had laid hands on him and were walloping him about with uncalled for energy. He tried to explain, but the farmer interrupted him with:

"Go in, Jim; go for him, Bill! Durn his hide, but we'll give him all the bomb bizness he wants before he is through with us!"

"You fools, my name is Bowser!" he shouted.

"I don't keer whether it's Bowser or Towser," shouted the farmer in return, "but I know you won't burn any barns for me!"

Mr. Bowser fought back, but three to one is big odds. They ripped the collar off his coat, tore all the buttons off his vest and rolled him over and over and threw him over the fence, and when he had gathered himself up he looked like a tramp who had been carried across the country by a cyclone. The three men sat on the fence and watched until he had limped out of sight, and they only jeered when he threatened to sue for $1,000,000 damages.

It was striking midnight and Mrs. Bowser was still reading when the front door was unlocked and Mr. Bowser entered.

"Is that you, dear?" she called.

"Yes, it is me, dear," he replied as he stood before her, "and I've got a few words to say to you!"

"You've been run over or something?"

"I have."

"You didn't find out about the grasshoppers?"

"I didn't."

"And it's all my fault?"

"It is!"

"And your lawyer will see my lawyer, and you'll send me home to mother by the evening train tomorrow?"

"I will!" he answered as he kicked at the cat and turned away to go upstairs and make repairs and go to bed.

Mrs. Bowser followed him after awhile to find him in bed and fitfully sleeping. His nose had been skinned, his face scratched and his ear hurt, and his chin seemed to be all on one side.

"Does a grasshopper sleep at night?"

"By thunder, but I can lick the three of you rolled together!" he exclaimed as he put up his fists in his sleep.

"And about a hopper's hind legs?" she asked.

"Yes, my name's Bowser, and if I don't make you fellers sweat for this I'm a goat!"

"Poor Bowser!" she sighed as she bent down and kissed the scratch on his nose and then turned out the lights.

SEEN HERE AND THERE.

Elaborate Black Gowns—The Season of the Taffeta Hat.

Black cloth street gowns are made up with much fringe and applications of dyed lace over white satin foundations. They are also trimmed with ruchings of bias chiffon velvet, and fagotings of heavy black silk showing the white foundation.

Black chiffon gowns lined with net are trimmed with applications of silver embroidery and bunches of silk poppies in black and palest green.

A TAFFETA HAT.

The skirts of these chiffon evening gowns are made very full, with many narrow rufflings, and the short sleeves are also made of the same small ruffings.

A gown recently seen was of black chantilly having a shirred skirt and a waist trimmed with tiny black silk rosebuds and their leaves and a wide belt and applications of dull green chiffon velvet.

Taffeta hats are now being worn, and they will continue the vogue until straw takes their place. They are mostly shirred in bands held together by coarse lace or chiffon gaugings.

The picture shows a plain taffeta hat trimmed with a twist of tulle and a long black ostrich feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Plumed Hats Are Good Investments. Entire Gowns Made of Lace.

A plumed hat is about the best millinery investment any woman can make.

Elbow sleeves continue to be most popular for evening wear, but they are of a most fancy description, trimmed with many ruffles and ruchings and even decorated with tabs and ends of narrow velvet or flowered ribbon.

Entire gowns of ecru lace never go out of fashion, and they are always easy to remodel in a dozen different ways.

Spangled tulle over pale colored satin makes a delightfully dainty evening gown, although it is decidedly perishable.

There is also a revival of pale colored brocades, but these are more suitable for middle aged women than for younger matrons. A stiff silk is never, of course, suitable for a young girl.

CLOTH COSTUME.

Washable shirt waist costumes of white serge will be worn a great deal this summer, and wise women are making them up at present. To be practical they should be unlined, of course, with neatly bound seams. A blouse waist is the best, and it can be worn with a wide kid belt, either white or colored, to match the necktie.

Persian lawn and the soft finished lawns which look so much like chiffon, as well as the all over English embroidery, are commanding great attention for blouses. The backs are trimmed as well as the fronts, although perhaps not quite as elaborately, the cuffs being of lace or embroidery to match the rest of the trimming. A great variety of shapes are to be seen in these cuffs, some extending almost to the elbow and others being deeper on the outside of the arm than on the inside. Deep lace berthas of valenciennes or renaissance lace are a novelty for trimming the finer blouses.

The cut shows a costume of moleskin gray cloth trimmed with touches of light gray silk and white lace medallions.

Colonel Bunker

He Has Always Sought to Maintain a Proper Dignity.

"I HAVE always contended, suh," said Colonel Bunker as he got his chair tilted back to the proper angle—"I have always contended that a man should maintain his dignity under all circumstances, and in carrying out this idea I have had to resort to the code on several occasions. Previous to my little affair with Mr. David Bertram, which occurred in this state thirty years ago, dignity and the mule were considered as wide apart as the poles. Since then they have gone hand in hand. I will relate the incident.

"As a member of the legislature I had a certain dignity to maintain. As a citizen I was riding a mule into Phillipsville to attend an auction sale. As I entered the town the mule bolted with me, and in his flight he performed many wild gyrations. My position was looked upon as ridiculous by most of the people and by Mr. David Bertram in particular. This gentleman laughed until he shed tears, and he declared that the performance was a whole circus in itself. He was still laughing when I dismounted and walked up to him and observed:

"'Yo' seem in merry mood, suh. Perhaps yo' will state the cause of yo'r hilarity and let me laugh with yo'?

"He stated it. It had reference to me and the mule. When he had finished I said:

"'My dear suh, if any antics of mine have furnished yo' relaxation for a few minutes I must feel highly honored. Will yo' in turn now honor me? I will name Judge Gordon as my second, and he will confer with any gentleman you select.'

"Mr. Bertram's smile faded at once," said the colonel, "and it didn't take him a minute to realize the seriousness of the situation. He had gone too far—altogether too far, suh—and he would have been glad to apologize. I wouldn't have it, however. I had made up my mind not only to maintain my own dignity, but that of the mule as well, and the combination was a little hard for him to swallow. He was a man of courage besides, and after a little hesitation he named his second, and a duel was arranged for.

"THE MULE BOLTED WITH ME."

"We met at sunrise two mornings later. The weapons were pistols, and at the first fire I cut a lock of hair from his head, while his bullet went wide. I meant to bore him through the shoulder at the second fire, but before we were ready our seconds asked if the affair could not be stopped. I answered them:

"'Gentlemen, I have no desire to slaughter Mr. Bertram, but I must contend that my position on that runaway mule was in no sense or manner undignified. I know I lost my hat. I know that my hair flew. I know that my eyes bulged out and my coat tails flapped.'

"'I do not recognize it to the fullest extent,' replied my opponent, and then I continued:

"'I believe my mule jumped over two or three carts, escaped two or three fences, stood on his head and performed various other evolutions, but I cannot admit that he rendered himself ridiculous. If it is so contended by others, then this duel must go on.'

"'The attitude of yo'r mule was somewhat queer, but at the same time full of dignity,' replied Mr. Bertram.

"Next moment we were grasping each other's hand.

"That was the upbuilding of the mule. He was recognized as an animal of character, and gentlemen who had hesitated to bestride him before now helped to make him popular. And it became known far and wide—far and wide, suh—that any one seeking to impugn the dignity of the mule would have to stand befo' Colonel Bunker on the field of honah, and it was wonderful how few critics he had."

Coasting.

File on! File on!
Oh, there's lots of room,
And we'll go so much the faster!
File on! File on!
And away we'll go,
For of hill and dale we're master!
Away! We're off!
Oh, the ice is smooth!
Oh, the snow is hard and icy!
The road is clear,
And the moon is bright,
And the breeze is fresh and spicy!
We glide! We fly!
How the fences spin!
Oh, the moon seems slow behind us!
Then sing, then shout,
For a moment more
At the foot will surely find us!
Hang on! Hang on!
Oh, the flood of pink
In the cheeks, like blooms of clover!
But, ho! Look out!
There's a turn, a step,
And the bliss once more is over!

How the Family Skeleton Was Brought Out

"YES," said the pink checked schoolma'am, "you'd be surprised at the array of family skeletons trotted out for the teacher's inspection by the pupils of every primary school. All the trials and tribulations of a family are retailed to the teacher, sometimes in a most embarrassing fashion. For instance, the reading lesson the other day was about somebody's pet dog and how much its master loved it. Little Willie Smith was moved to say:

"'We got a dog to our house. It's got mange awful. Papa wanted to kill it, but mamma said she'd get a divorce if he'd be such a cruel brute. Then papa, he kicked the dog, and mamma, she throwed the sugar bowl and went and had 'isterics, and the doctor came and'—

"I shut him off at that point, but Willie routed me a moment afterward by saying:

"'Oh, teacher, your cheeks is just like my mamma's! D'you rub red stuff on every day too?'"—Portland Oregonian.

The Cheaper Way.

The great ship labored heavily in the storm.

"Captain," implored the passengers, "have you tried everything to save us?"

"Everything," replied the captain, "but one. There is a cargo of oil in the hold"—

"Then why in heaven's name do you not pour it on the troubled waters?" they demanded indignantly.

"Because," replied the captain, shaking his head helplessly, "we have just received a marconigram stating that oil has been advanced two points and is likely to go higher. It were cheaper for us to drown."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Then There Was Silence.

A well known English actor was once while a young man touring through the provinces. One night when his cue came he was very nervous and on going upon the stage could hardly speak. The audience was greatly displeased, and "things began to come his way." He stood this bombardment for a few minutes until a green head of cabbage sped by his ear. Stepping to the front of the stage, he raised his hand for silence and exclaimed:

"I came here tonight determined to please an interested audience, but I sincerely regret that any person has lost his head over the matter!"—Philadelphia Press.

Confidence.

"A woman will not esteem a man whom she cannot trust," said the moralist.

"Yes," answered Mr. Meekton, "and I am delighted to note that Henrietta always trusts me to put the cat out and fix the furnace fire and lock the basement door and do a lot of things."—Washington Star.

Unpardonable.

"George," said his father sternly, "did you speak impudently to your mother?"

The youngster looked uncomfortable; then he brightened up.

"I only said to her what I said to the cook."

"To the cook!" roared his father. "That's still worse!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BOLEROS AND BLOUSES

They Will Divide Honors Equally This Spring.

The bolero, which was three-quarter effect, has by the three-quarter effect, has back into extreme fashion again. There are two kinds of bolero which are especially noticeable—the loose fair, cut sleeves and body in one, the other, practically sleeveless, up in the back to show the abundance wide belts so many of us are wearing. The latter bolero appears in many ferent kinds of material. Some it is of velvet and sometimes of the and then again it is a combination both; but one fact is striking—it mains always of the same color as skirt.

Sometimes these boleros are made plain thick material trimmed fringe and cord. These are chara in black, gray or mole color, opening over a dainty blouse and a wide belt of leather or silk.

Spring street fashions will show a variety of these blouse costumes: zibeline, in gray, black and white and other mixtures. They will be trimmed with pipings of velvet or heavy silk, and the wide belt will be of the same.

Dress waists blousing all around both back and front, over the new wide belts will be among the most chic spring models, and the skirts which accompany these bloused effects will be very full and only be down part of the way.

The picture shows a spring tailor made of dull blue cloth trimmed with bands of Persian and a dark blue belt.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Black Taffeta Gowns For Elderly Women—Moleskin Cloth.

Black taffeta inset with black chantilly lace and made up over white silk which shows under the insertion makes a very smart dress for a middle aged woman, but there should be some fine tuckings to break the stiffness of the taffeta, and the bottom of the skirt should be edged by tiny frills or ruchings. Bands of mink are particularly artistic for trimming either cloth or thin materials. It is possible to obtain beautiful markings even in a narrow strip.

GOWN OF PINK MULL.

Moleskin gray cloth makes a dainty costume and is very dressy when relieved by applications of silver and lighter gray.

There is a new princess gown made with a sort of guimpe. The body part is of black jetted or embroidered material, and the guimpe is of very thin spangled or plain material with transparent sleeve puffs.

Trains even on evening gowns are much shorter, and the sides are longer, so that a round, full effect is gained.

It is rumored that the ruby will be the popular gem of the coming season, and this will be combined with dull silver and platinum.

The illustration shows an evening gown of pink mull made with shirrings. It is trimmed with duchess lace applications.

THE MOYIE LEADER

MOYIE, B. C.

A Crash of Colors.

"I can stand a lot," said the artist, "but there are times when my patience is sorely tried.

"The other evening I went into a restaurant where the walls are tinted a soft red, most pleasing to the eye. It is a place I frequent not so much because the cooking is good as that it has a most restful color scheme. I had been having a hard time at the studio, and I felt the need of a little relaxation. The band was playing a seductive air, and I was feeling at peace with the world, when I chanced to look across the room, and my evening was spoiled for me completely.

"There against the red background was a woman in a glaring blue waist sipping a creme de menthe of vivid green under a hat of a most assertive shade of yellow!"

Inattentive Waiters.

Stranger—Are the waiters here attentive to you?

Pretty Cashier—Sir-r-r-r!

Stranger—Oh, no offense, I assure you. I was only carrying out the instructions as printed on the bill of fare, which says, "Please report any inattention of waiters to cashier." And I thought if they were inattentive to you I would report them; that's all.—Baltimore American.

"Three's a Crowd."

Tom—I suppose you spent a pleasant evening with your best girl?

Dick—Pleasant? Huh! A fellow can't make love to his girl in a crowd.

Tom—Oh, was there a crowd there?

Dick—Yes, and the chump didn't have sense enough to realize that he wasn't wanted.—Philadelphia Press.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all flesh is heir to, which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other, and differently seated disease, rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand incresed substance—result improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, gauged by the opinions of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

London is shortly to be provided with motor omnibuses.

In preparation for the reception of instituted in 1674, of British Commanders-in-Chief. Of the eighteen who have consecutively held office nine were English, three Irish, two Anglo-Irish, two Scotch, one French, and one German.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

A big work in connecting the north and south of the Thames has been begun by the London County Council in the acceptance of a tender by a London firm at £1,088,484, for the construction of the Rotherhithe tunnel.

A REQUISITE FOR THE RANCHER.—On the cattle ranges of the west, where men and stock are far from doctors and apothecaries, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is kept on hand by the intelligent as a ready-made medicine, not only for many human ills, but as a horse and cattle medicine of surpassing merit. A horse and cattle rancher will find matters greatly simplified by using this Oil.

A man named Goridge, one of the oldest residents of Florestfach, near Swansea, has just died at the age of 96. He had been sackmaker, miller, butcher, sailor, farmer, smuggler, and he took part in the Chartist riots.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ART OF CONVERSATION.

It Should Be Fostered and Studied With Seriousness.

Caroline Hazard in her "Education of Women" says, "How few of us study to put things persuasively, to reach a proper climax, to retire gracefully from a subject." It is a common saying that the art of conversation has disappeared from among us, and yet it is an art held in honor by all men. Telegraphic speech has taken the place of the more careful and elaborate forms of conference. But it is an art which should be presented to all young people and which they should study with seriousness and attention. Nothing really inspires, nothing really creates enthusiasm but the perception of an ultimate ideal, whether it be in art or music or in any other of the realms of spiritual thought. This ideal of beauty has to come to the aid of every form of expression, lifting and raising it into its own kingdom. The student who has even begun on such a course of training, who can see beauty in everything in the created world and in the realm of thought, has certainly begun to be beautiful in himself. For beauty most truly passes into the person who studies the beautiful. No one can give out what he does not have to give. He must first absorb beauty at the great natural reservoirs and fountains of the beautiful before he himself can become truly beautiful in life and character and so able to transmit beauty to all around him.

ANCIENT BABYLON.

Its Great Wall Was One of the Wonders of Those Days.

According to Herodotus, the ancient city of Babylon stood on a broad, level plain and was an exact square of fourteen miles each way, making the entire circuit of the city fifty-six miles. It was protected both by a wall and a moat, the latter being broad and deep and kept constantly filled with water. But the wall was the wonder of wonders, being 93 1-3 feet in width and an even 200 feet in height. This monster barrier was provided with 100 gates, all of solid brass, the lintels and side pieces being in bronze. Cross walls ran along the banks of the Euphrates, each provided with twenty-five gates, which corresponded to the number of streets running in each direction from the river.

The most remarkable edifice inside the wall was the temple of Bel, a pyramid of eight square stadia. On the summit of this pyramid stood a pure gold image of Bel forty feet high, two other smaller figures of the same precious metal and a golden table forty feet long and fifteen feet wide. This wonderful city first came prominently into the history of the world in the year 747 B. C., but since the time of Alexander the Great it has been a ruin, the site having at one time been entirely lost.

THE GREAT CONDOR.

It Is the Most Difficult Bird In the World to Trap.

Probably the great condor is the most difficult bird in the world to trap. One of the great vultures, it inhabits lofty peaks of the Andes, hardly accessible to man. It builds its nest among the topmost crags, often on a ledge of some precipice with an almost perpendicular drop of many hundred feet.

An extremely wary bird, it shares with its congeners the proverbial "eagle eye" and is thus able to see immense distances while yet unseen by man. Its wings have a spread of twelve feet, and, though its flight is heavy, it can sustain itself for long periods in the air.

To trap it men ascend to its haunts and shoot some animal of considerable size. This is skinned, and a man lies down by the body under the skin and waits, perhaps for hours. Soon condors come flocking round until one settles on the skin, when the man below grips its legs, flings the skin over it and stabs it to death.

The strength of these birds is enormous, and the condor hunters often have their arms broken by strokes from their powerful wings.

The Offending Handkerchief.

It is in fact a grave sanitary question whether the handkerchief does not do more harm than good as it is ordinarily used. When we assume that the nose does not need to be wiped, we face a reasonably broad proposition as to the danger of the handkerchief as a disease propagator. Most nasal catarrhs are of an infectious character, notably those of grip origin.

Contrary to a general law of asepsis, the handkerchief saturated with disease germs, instead of being promptly washed, is stowed for hours in the pocket, with a result that can be easily imagined. Is it any wonder then that catarrh is constantly fostered by a system of auto infection?

Would Win Either Way.

"Would you still want me to be your wife if my father was a poor man?" asked the beautiful heiress.

POPULAR OTTAWA MAN IN LUCK

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him of Stone in the Kidneys.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, the Well-known Sportsman, Tells Why He Is Grateful to the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Ottawa, Ont., Mar. 21—(Special).—Few people in the Capital are as well known and popular as Mr. "Sam" Cassidy, proprietor of the Bijou Hotel, Metcalf Street. As a hunter and fisherman of more than local reputation, he has become known to followers of the rod and gun all over the country, and many of the members of parliament who make an annual sojourn here are counted among his personal friends.

The news, therefore, that he has found a complete cure for a dangerous malady will give general satisfaction. Speaking of it he says:

"My friends all know that I have been troubled for years with Stone in the Kidneys; that thought I consulted the best physicians and tried nearly every remedy I could think of, I was unable to get better.

"Some time ago a friend told me Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. As a last resort I tried them and they have cured me. I cannot imagine more severe suffering than one endures who has stone in the Kidneys, and I feel the warmest gratitude towards Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If the disease is of the Kidneys or from the Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

AN AWFUL PROSPECT.

[Already Japan has cut off the world's supply of camphor, which she controls.—News Item.]

We occidentals face a foe
More dire than Jap or Russian,
A foe more greatly to be feared
Than Chinaman or Prussian.
The camphor that we yesterday
Regarded with such loathing
Is ours no more, and so the moth
Will gobble up our clothing.

Soon will the mighty moth invade
And fight us to a finish,
And, camphorless, I am afraid
Our wardrobes will diminish.
When in the Cherry Blossom Land
The dogs of war are dining,
We'll take our summer outing, and
The moth will take his inning.

When winter comes I plainly see
We'll have to dress in leather
Or else in cotton drapery
Unsuited to the weather.
When rheumatism seizes us—
Oh, friend, have you reflected?—
There'll be no camphor liniment
To soothe the parts affected.

Newton's Blue.

It is well known that under the action of gravity the water composing such a thin shell as a soap bubble tends to run down on all sides, so that the walls of the bubble grow thin at the top and thicken toward the bottom. After a time the bubble becomes so thin at the top that further flow of water from this point can hardly take place, and finally the bubble bursts. But before this last stage is reached a degree of thinness in the walls of the bubble is attained which causes it to glow with brilliant iridescent colors. Newton noticed that on top of the thin bubble illuminated by white sky light a black spot is formed. With increase of thickness downward from this point on all sides, a red band next appears; then a blue one; then again red and blue, red and blue, and so on, the colors showing more extremes of red and purple in the higher orders. This blue band which first expands outward from the black spot at the top and descends slowly with the subsidence of the water Newton called the "blue of the first order," and, although somewhat dingy, he judged it to be of the same tint as the blue of the sky.—T. SATURDAY, APRIL 16, 1904.

OUR SEVENTH YEAR.

With this issue the Leader starts on the seventh year of its publication. Like all other business enterprises in Moyie, it has experienced both prosperity and adversity during its existence. At times the paper has not been as good as we would liked to have published, but conditions were such that we could not do otherwise. We were compelled to cut our garments according to our cloth. The publishers of the Leader would have thrown up the sponge long ago, were they not convinced that the town would again take on new life and become prosperous. Our predictions have proven correct, for already the wave of prosperity is apparent. As the town improves so will the Leader improve. During the past the business men of Moyie have stayed by their home newspaper manfully, and their liberal patronage has been duly appreciated.

This is housecleaning time.

F. Augustus Heinze paid his fine of $20,000 as coolly as though it had been 20 cents, and there was not a minute's interruption of business.

Commercial men say that business is better along the Crow's Nest line than in any other part of the province, and few are in better position to know than these same men.

There are seventeen metals that are more valuable pound for pound than gold. Very good! But for plain, unassuming, easily satisfied newspaper men plain gold will do. It will be taken in subscription as readily as the select metals.

'Twould Spoil This Story to Tell It in the Headlines.

To use an 18th century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John E. Harmon, of Melia Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it soon cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in it favor. I hope all who read this will try it and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.
