NORTHPORT SITUATION

Belief That It is Beginning of Trouble.

LOW WAGES TO BE PAID

Management of Le Loi Company Getting in Shape for Protracted Hostilities.

Northport, Wash., June 12.—It is believed here that the situation at Northport is not the outcome of an effort to rig the London stock market. It is thought to be the opening shot in a campaign inaugurated by the corporation that controls the smelter and the chief Rossland mines. The object is to increase the earning power of the properties by a reduction of wages more or less sweeping.

The mines have done all that is possible to reduce the cost of production by introducing modern machinery and labor saving devices of every description. The company is now credited with the plan of paying a lower scale of wages in the mines at Rossland as means of earning profits impossible under the existing scale.

This is the opinion held by the miners' union of Rossland and that is why the union there is supporting financially the smelters in their fight.

The battle in progress here is in itself a side issue as compared with the far reaching results which will attend a victory for either of the contestants. Those who have examined the situation carefully are disposed to believe that labor troubles on a far larger scale than the existing difficulty will be precipitated in Rossland as soon as the Northport matter is settled one way or the other.

If the corporation wins at Northport, the smelter will be started and kept running at its full capacity for six months on the ore already piled up in the reserve dumps. Then the management, it is believed, will inaugurate a cut in the wages of the miners employed in the Rossland mines.

Fully 200 men would be affected, and as the union is strong the reduction will be followed by a strike, but with the smelter manned by nonunion crews and turning out metal to its full capacity the mine managers could snap their fingers at the miners for six months. In the meantime the union men could have been starved out and nonunion men could have been brought into Rossland in such numbers as to dominate the situation.

The weak point in the scheme is that the smelters may win the fight here and a strike at Rossland would undoubtedly be followed by a sympathetic strike here. To close down mines and the smelter at once would not suit the management's book.

At Rossland the contract system is in vogue in the big mines is anything but satisfactory to the miners. When the contracts were introduced last spring the men were granted a scale under which they were enabled to earn good wages without being driven hard. Since then, however, the contracts have been reduced from time to time, the total reductions to date being some 30 per cent of the original scale. The statement is made that because of these reductions, there are now only four contracts out of the scores in the camp that are worth having, and that on the balance the men are driven to their top speed to make fair day's wage. The management is credited with contemplating a further reduction.

The interest that secures control at Northport has the ball at its feet and a settlement here will quickly be followed by the development of the real battle in Rossland.

THE HOTEL KOOTENAY

Grand Opening Given Last Evening.

IT IS WELL FURNISHED

One of the Best Hotels in East Kootenay and Represents a Large Expenditure of Money.

The big addition to the Hotel Kootenay has been finished and furnished, and last evening a grand ball was given by the proprietors. The ball was a swell affair, and the crowd in attendance was large, as besides the people of the town there were quite a number from Cranbrook. The place was brilliantly lighted and presented a gay and attractive appearance, and the guests were given an opportunity of going through the house and inspecting it for themselves. Messrs. Wilson and Murphy with violin and piano furnished excellent music, and J. M. Lindsay, the floor manager, conducted the affair in a manner satisfactory to all.

THE HOTEL

With the new addition which has just been completed the Hotel Kootenay is 60 feet in width and 103 feet in length. Besides the larger rooms it has 30 bed rooms, which are all large, airy and well lighted. The dining room is extra large and well furnished, as are also the bar room, billiard room, card rooms, etc., on the first floor.

There are also two sample rooms, a wine room and a dry room for miners in connection with the house.

The whole house has been newly papered and decorated. This work was done by F. F. Pieper of Cranbrook, and reflects credit on that gentleman as an artist in this line. The place is nicely carpeted and furnished throughout.

Between 75 and 100 guests can easily be accommodated here. The hotel now stands the proprietors an outlay of over $15,000, but it is doubtful if there is a better or more up to date house in the entire East Kootenay district.

May Soon Be Free;

The chances now seem favorable that W. R. Hocking will soon be a free man, as every effort seems to be put forth to secure his release from the New Westminster penitentiary. At his trial both Mrs. Hocking number one and two of her lawyers assisting her in the divorce proceeding swore that Hocking had married the second time before the decree of divorce from his first wife had been granted. On their evidence Hocking was sent to prison for bigamy. Having purrit the letters received from wife number one and his brothers he had no documentary evidence to the contrary. Now, however, Judge Davis of Nevada has in his possession a copy of the decree of divorce secured by Mrs. Hocking number one and the date of the decree is previous to the date of Hocking's second marriage. Judge Davis, therefore, declares that Hocking had no intention of committing bigamy nor did he commit bigamy in fact.

Therefore he is a terribly wronged man and should be liberated from the Canadian jail at once.

Quick Justice.

Thomas Williams and Chas. Myers, two of the light fingered gentry, landed in Moyie Wednesday evening, and before they were in town over an hour they were under arrest for going through a man's pockets at the Moyie Hotel. They were tried the following day before Justice Thomson, and Williams was given three months in the Nelson jail. Myers was only an accomplice and nothing definite could be proven against him. Williams was taken to Nelson Thursday by Constable Drummond.

SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1901.

The actions of Miss June so far have been very cool and distasteful, to say the least.

What a horrible thing it would have been for the world if the Lord had made Eve first and had let her go ahead and create her ideal of a man—New York Press.

The Boston Bloomer Girls (?) are now playing ball in the Palouse country, but, according to press reports, are not pleasing their audiences. Even the Palousers can't go them.

The Chinese Commission visited Sandon, but did not stop in New Denver, says the Ledger. There are no Chinese in the Luciferne, except probably one or two white ones.

Mary had a little calf, which was so awful lean, that every where that Mary went it scarcely could be seen. But Mary stole her ma's pillows, which she placed inside her hose, and now the calf is plainly seen wherever Mary goes.—Silvertonian.

The Moyie public school has an attendance of 60 pupils, and only one teacher. If an assistant is desired it is said the proper application must be made. This being the case, the work of securing an assistant for the coming term should begin at once.

If the facts of the case are that W. R. Hocking, who is now serving a three years term in the New Westminster penitentiary for bigamy, is an innocent man, as would seem from recent developments, he has been terribly wronged, and he should be given his liberty without delay.

Senator Mark Hanna has given Mrs. Booth-Tucker $1000 of the $25,000 needed to put her Salvation Army farm at Mentor, Ohio, on a solid basis. Mark, to our notion, has a more sensible method of distributing his wealth than Andrew Carnegie. He comes nearer reaching the people who are in need of assistance.

The man who knocks at South East Kootenay today is simply driving nails in his own coffin.—Cranbrook Herald.

We don't just quite understand Brother Simpson. If you mean if he knocks at the door of South East Kootenay, we would say by all means let him in.

Joseph Rice of Everett, Wash., employed as ore sampler by the Puget Sound Reduction company, is under arrest on the charge of collusion with a Montana mine owner in stealing $7000 from two carloads of ore. The ore was sampled by Rice and paid for by the reduction company on the basis of his estimate. The scheme worked by salting a low grade ore to more than 10 times its worth. This is the first case of the sort heard of in years.

While the cost of smelting has been reduced, transportation charges are less, modern machinery is now in use, and the ore shipments are much larger than heretofore, the Le Roi and War Eagle mines at Rossland are not paying dividends. Under the old (American) management, before the capitalization of the Le Roi was raised to the tune of five million, this property $1,305,000 in dividends, and the conditions if anything were less favorable than at present. The War Eagle, too, is clouded in mystery. Between stock manipulations and extravagant management, and the scarecrowery of labor troubles, these properties have been much reduced in value so far as the stock exchange goes.—Lardeau Eagle.

Don't carry a chip on your shoulder, and don't be too eager to discover some loophole whereby strained relations may be brought about. Employers are just as apt to err in judgment as employers, and sometimes, possibly with just as much innocence of intent. Regret expression always, but don't go into all the highways and byways to seek it out. Assert your rights, not in a blatant, demagogical way, but with firmness and dignity, sounding well the foundation of your grievance and wrong before bringing it into public notice. Remember that employers have rights as well as employees, and insist just upon your fellow-workman rendering unto Caesar that which is Caesar's, as you would upon righting a grievous wrong done your companion.—Ex.

The situation at Northport seems now to have settled down to a long drawn battle between the Smeltermen and the management of that institution, and the outcome of the difficulty will be watched with interest. Detective Swayne, the Pinkerton man, in charge of the protective system established by the management of the smelter, states in effect, that the company will establish a town within the limits of their property, thus making the institution independent of the town of Northport and that the smelter will be treating ore on or about the 15th inst., regardless of the union, which is to be ignored. Union men have been offered employment providing they will, but renounce the union to which they are affiliated. They quite properly refuse to do. It seems to be the management's chief aim to break up the union. History has proven that this is a most difficult task.

No Never Forget It.
Leadville, Colo., June 13.—Winsfield S. Stratton, the millionaire mine owner of Cripple Creek, has redeemed the "Matchless" mine in Leadville for the widow of the late Senator Tabor. Years ago Senator Tabor advanced some money to Stratton when Stratton was a poor struggling miner and he never forgot it, when Tabor died he had lost almost everything and he was vainly endeavoring to save the Matchless mine which he always insisted, still contained millions in its unexplored depths. The property was sold several months ago at a sheriff's sale and the final title would pass on July 4th, to the new owners. Senator Tabor's widow has continued the struggle and Mr. Stratton has now come to her assistance and will also enable her to exploit the property to greater depths.

A BOOK FOR MOTHERS

Containing Much Information as to the Care of Children, and the Treatment of Ills that Commonly Affect Little Ones. Given Free.

"Baby's Battles": A Message for Mothers is the title of a very handy little pamphlet just issued by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company. It is devoted entirely to the care of infants and small children and tells the mother how to aid her little ones in the emergencies of everyday life. It describes the ills that commonly afflict children and tells how to treat them. This little book is one that should be in every home where there are infants or small children. All mothers who send their name and address on a post card to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., will receive a copy of this book free of charge. Mention this paper when writing.

It's a poor rule that won't work both ways.

Stratford, 4th Aug., 1898.

Messrs. C. C. Richards & Co.

Gentlemen—My neighbor's boy, 4 years old, fell into a tub of boiling water and got scalded fearfully. A few days later his legs swelled to three times their natural size, and broke out in running sores. His parents could get nothing to help him till I recommended MINARD'S LINIMENT, which after using two bottles completely cured him, and I know of several cases around here almost as remarkable, cured by the same liniment and I can truly say I never handled a medicine which has had as good a sale or given such universal satisfaction. —M. HIBERT, General Merchant.

ANOTHER SUCCESS

A Free Press Reporter's Interview with Mr. John A. Mayne, the Well Known Contractor—The Power of the "Oxydonor."

Cures through the agency of Dr. Sanchez's "Oxydonor" have been so freely discussed that the attention of the Free Press was drawn to a case where the recovery of the patient was thought wonderful by his friends. The story of this case was related to me by Mr. John A. Mayne, who was found at work in his duties as a contractor. Mr. Mayne was the beneficiary and his account of the manner in which the cure was effected is as follows:

"I was obliged in July of last year to give up my business as a grocer in this city owing to lung trouble. I did this at the doctor's orders, who considered my case so bad that the only hope for my life was a change of climate and ordered a trip south for the winter. At that time my stomach was in so bad a condition that I was unable to take any medicine. I gradually grew worse until I was compelled to take to my bed. In November I heard of 'Oxydonor,' and sent for Mr. Gibbons, who represents the firm here. People who saw me at that time advised me to make my will. I knew I was pretty bad, as I could not sleep for more than a few minutes each night and it was wearing me out. As soon as I started 'Oxydonor' sleep came to me at once. It seemed really wonderful how quickly it did come. Since then I have been growing gradually better and this spring I was examined by the same doctors who had previously pronounced on my case and they said it was really remarkable the improvement that had taken place in my condition. I used the 'Oxydonor' in my bed for three or four weeks and find it a ready relief whenever I am troubled with insomnia. I might say that I lent the 'Oxydonor' to a friend of mine who was troubled with nervousness and was unable to sleep. She told me that the relief was instant."

Mr. Mayne is well known in the city. He resides at 331 Henderson block. He was a grocer for some years, but was obliged to give up his business and is now a city contractor.

Mr. W. T. Gibbons, Grain exchange, Winnipeg, is representing Dr. Sanchez in the sale of Oxydonor.

A Novel Alarm Clock.

Many persons to whom the bedroom candle is still a familiar article of use must have noticed how apt the flickering of a candle at the point of extinction is to awaken a light-sleeper. Acting upon the same principle is an alarm clock that has been suggested, consisting of a small electric lamp occluded rhythmically by a sectoral shutter, constituting the balance wheel of an ordinary alarm clock. This lamp, automatically switched on at the predetermined hour, is focused on the head of the bed, and thus it silently, but (so the inventor declares) none the less surely, awakens the sleeper.

London Optician.

FAILURE HAS ITS USES.
It Ought to Show Where Lies the Road to Success.

"You may do this errand for me, if you will. Go down to the front of the store. Near the entrance you will find a box with a cover. Open the box and bring me what you find in it."

"Yes, sir," came back the ready answer from the boy addressed. He had applied to the gentleman who had sent him on this errand. Shortly the lad came hopelessly back. He had not expected to be given work so soon.

The gentleman took the package the youth handed to him and sat at his desk for a moment. Then he turned to the young man and said:

"I am sorry to tell you that I fear you are not quite the boy we need. You wonder why. Let me tell you. It may help you. When on the way down to the box, you stopped to stroke the kitten's back. That told that you have a kind heart and that you are in the habit of going about whatever you have in hand promptly, for you did not stop while you touched the kitten. You came back quickly. That was good, but do you see that you did not close the box after you left it? There it is, wide open. The cover was down. You may think it a simple matter, but we are obliged in this world to pay all possible attention to little things. No, do not go back now. The time has gone by. Try to think that this is said to help you another time."

The great man turned away, and that was the end of the interview.

"That boy will win," the gentleman said when the door had closed between the two. "He is in earnest; he is ready; he has a good heart. His failure to shut that box was due to his desire to do promptly what I asked, but just there he failed. Had he closed the box I would have given him a place in this store. I am not troubled to find plenty of young men who are good and kind and ambitious, but I do meet with difficulty in getting those who will do their duty clear through to the end. Stopping half way is not the key to success. Many youths are in a hurry to get their work done and be off. The next thing—always the next thing—fills the mind of many. There is a lack of deliberate, persistent following to the last detail."

"I might have lectured that boy for half an hour on the importance of these things. He might have forgotten it all the next day. He will remember the cause of his failure here. It will minister to his success elsewhere. To such a boy failure cuts deep. He will work hard to keep from doing a thing like that again. So, you see, failure has its uses after all. It shows where success lies."

SENTIMENT AS TO OLD SIGNS.

Weather-Worn Boards Retained In Spite of Changes in Firm Names.

People who think that there is no sentiment in commercial life need only wander about any of the old business centers of New York to have their beliefs changed.

They will see old signs, some of them in a state of decay almost bordering on dissolution, on the walls of the houses of the older firms.

In some instances these signs remain even though the name of the firm has been changed. In cases in which sons have succeeded to the business the old signs of the firm which established the business are still to be seen. Many are weather-worn and the lettering is almost indistinct, but the present firms do not permit them to be retouched.

Occasionally the boards split and the edges break. These ravages are repaired for safety's sake, but the dim outlines of the lettering remain.

A sign writer who had been called to repair one of these ancient landmarks in Greenwich street asked the head of the firm, who represents the third generation in the concern, if he should not regild the letters.

"Certainly not," was the answer. "If I consented to your doing that, I should expect the business of this firm to fail."

In some cases in which new names have succeeded to the business old signs have been removed from the outer walls and placed inside. In an office in a Broadway store there is an old wooden sign suspended over the desk of the grandson of the founder of the firm, who is at the head of the business.

"I couldn't think of leaving the old sign out of doors at night," said the young man, who looked at it with a glow of pride. "I have heard my father say that when that sign was first put up by his father, all the merchants in this part of the town came over and looked at it and admired it, and my grandfather gave them a dinner on account of it. If I ever go out of business, that sign goes to my house."

There is an old sign over the main entrance to the office of an old concern in William street which has no connection with the firm doing business in the place, but the firm has steadily declined to have it removed, although the old firm went out of existence nearly 50 years ago.

New Use For Necktie.

"While I was over in the Arkansas mountains one winter on a hunting trip my guide and I came across a sugar maple orchard where two men were collecting and boiling down the sap," said a Memphis man.

"We sat around with the native awhile and ate maple sugar. When we started to leave, one of the men who had been regarding my tie very closely asked the guide in a low voice why I wore that rag around my neck."

"That's to keep his nose from bleeding," replied the guide, who was a man of some humor.

"As we walked away I heard the natives telling each other how sorry they felt for me on account of my affliction."

STAGE DRIVER STATES HIS CASE

Experience of Both his Wife and Himself.

Each has Tested the Power of Dodd's Kidney Pills—Each has Achieved the same Result—Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured them Both.

Dromore, Ont., May 27.—(Special)—Mr. George Sackett drives the stage between Dromore and Holstein. That is known throughout the country side without saying. When he was in trouble a short while ago he had the sympathy of more than the few immediate friends and neighbors a man in another walk would have.

Mr. Sackett, thought at one time he would have to give up the stage. Sitting up in the driver's seat day and night, out, rain or shine, hot or cold, he contracted a serious disorder. His kidneys became weakened from the continual exposure. They gradually gave him more and more trouble. He felt that he couldn't keep up much longer.

It is nine miles from Dromore to Holstein. That means a round trip of eighteen miles. Two trains a day would make thirty-six miles of driving snow storm of March or February to a man in a delicate state of health.

Mr. Sackett did not give up driving the stage. Instead he sought the help of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Did he fine help? Read his own letter, a letter which tells also that his wife proved the truth of the saying: "Dodd's Kidney Pills are woman's best friend."

Having used other largely advertised remedies and all the medicines recommended to me by my friends for Kidney Trouble and excreturitis Backache without the slightest relief, I was induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and can never be too thankful for the advice which prompted me to do so. They simply took hold of my trouble and lifted it off me. I show you where success lies."

I might have lectured that boy for half an hour on the importance of these things. He might have forgotten it all the next day. He will remember the cause of his failure here. It will minister to his success elsewhere. To such a boy failure cuts deep. He will work hard to keep from doing a thing like that again. So, you see, failure has its uses after all. It shows where success lies."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by a surgical remedy. Deafness is due to an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and when it is partially closed it is this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We've got a new one. Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) can be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ANERVOUSWRECK

WAS THE CONDITION OF MISS GILLIS FOR EIGHT YEARS.

The Best Doctors' and Hospital Treatment Failed to Help Her, and She Had Almost Lost Hope of Ever Being Well Again—Her Earnest Advice to Other Sufferers.

One of the most common, at the same time one of the most dreaded ailments which afflicts the people of this country is nervous debility. The causes leading to the trouble are various, overwork or worry being among the most prominent. But whatever the cause, the affliction is one that makes life a burden. Such a sufferer for years was Miss Margaret Gillis, of Whim Road Cross, P. E. I. Her life was one of almost incessant misery, and she had come to look upon her condition as incurable, when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to her notice, and to this life-giving, nerve restoring medicine she now owes health and happiness. Miss Gillis tells of her illness and cure as follows: "For the past eight years my life has been one of constant misery. My nervous system was shattered, and I was reduced to a mere physical wreck. My trouble began in one of the ailments that so frequently afflict my sex. I was irritable and discouraged all the time, and life did not seem worth living. For seven years I was under treatment by doctors. I even went to Boston and entered a hospital where I remained for some time. While there the treatment temporarily benefited me, but soon my condition was worse than ever. Finally my nervous trouble took the form of spasms which caused more suffering than words can tell. When this attacked I felt as though

A Montreal Commercial traveler— bachelor—tells the Herald a thrilling story of what happened to him going up to Toronto the other day. It was in a Turkish bazaar, and just across from the bachelor's beth was a handsome little woman and her 3 year old boy. Early in the morning the two were laughing and playing together and the good natured bachelor smiled to himself as he arose to dress. Suddenly a little foot peeped out from the curtains of the opposite beth, and, with a twinkle in his eye, the bachelor grabbed the plump toes and began:

"This little pig went to market, this little—"

"That is my foot," said the indignant voice of a woman.

Miss Malvina's Organ.

By Virginia N. Leeds.

It was all on account of Miss Malvina's organ. If she hadn't had an organ it would probably never have happened. The dictionary declares that an organ such as Miss Malvina possessed is "a membranous receptacle, the principal organ of digestion, in which food is prepared for nourishing the body."

Perhaps Miss Malvina's organ was a membranous receptacle. There were no absolute proofs to the contrary—but that it was an organ of digestion was simply a slander. There was no digestion about it. It was indigestion all the way through. The food that went into it, if it made up its mind to remain, didn't nourish her body in the least and only subjected her to every kind of discomfort.

Taken as a whole, this organ, which for lack of corroboration we shall call a membranous receptacle, was a barrel organ of indigestion in which nothing except torture was prepared for either body or soul.

I had lost to Miss Malvina friends, fortune and husband. The former had dropped off, one by one, on account of their pet "organ" being rejected by either Miss Malvina or her organ; the second was a fine musical talent which she might have turned to account but for the same melancholy cause, and the third was perhaps the most dismal of all.

Col. Wilds, a gallant officer, had in the earlier days lost his heart to Miss Malvina, and would no doubt have married her but during a sojourn in India he had fallen victim to a liver complaint which so disgusted him with disorders of the human machinery that any young woman possessed of so unattractive a thing as an "organ" hadn't the remotest chance with the gallant officer.

Miss Malvina, therefore, was simply not in it at all. And so at the time our story opens we find poor Miss Malvina writhed, friendless, sickly, and dependent upon a disagreeable old aunt.

To be sickly is bad enough without being friendless, but to be both and to have an "organ" into the bargain is hard luck indeed.

Mrs. Smithers, Miss Malvina's aunt, was a decentable person. She believed thoroughly in the text that a fool and his money are soon parted, and she obeyed the text to the letter. She had plenty of money and no heirs, but like all misfits she did not consider that she had near enough, and she hoarded it up for Heaven knows what purpose.

She was in no wise a charitably disposed individual, though the fact of her giving a home to her orphaned niece might imply that she was. But no one would think so if he knew in what manner the home was held out.

"Dear Aunt," she wrote, "As you cannot starve, I suppose I must take you in."

And poor Malvina, whose organ had rendered her a meek and miserable mortal, responded weakly:

"Dear Aunt: As you say, I cannot starve and so I must accept your generous offer."

And when Miss Malvina arrived, in company with a goodly-sized apothecary shop, Mrs. Smithers' acerbity was by no means appeased.

"Bother your organ!" she exclaimed.

"It bothers me," returned poor Malvina.

This exclamation and pitiful rejoinder became an almost daily phrase.

Mrs. Smithers had not the slightest patience with her niece's membranous receptacle; and at every meal such mortal enemies as hot bread pie confronted poor Malvina. The organ, naturally, cried out against such indignities, and Miss Malvina grew hourly worse.

Such torments as the poor thing knew no words can describe.

Finally, to Mrs. Smithers' utter horror, the family physician had to be summoned.

Nor was this the worst. After prescribing all sorts of villainous compounds, which Miss Malvina's organ rejected with scorn, Dr. Calomel insisted that Miss Malvina should come to his private sanitarium, known as the Rest.

Mrs. Smithers was as one deposited.

She fumed and raged and almost tore her false hair, facing board alone, without medical attendance, was $20 a week.

But Dr. Calomel was quite as determined as she was, and at last, after a fearful struggle, he won the day.

Mrs. Smithers can hardly be said to have given in graciously, for as soon as the doctor went away she flounced into the miserable little hall room she allowed Miss Malvina, and where the poor thing was having a wrestling match with her organ, and exclaimed vindictively:

"I wish that 'organ' of yours was in Gehenna!"

Poor Malvina she wished so, too, if she didn't have to accompany it there, but it was not transplanted just for the wishing.

A few days later, in fear and trembling, Miss Malvina drove up in Dr. Calomel's own handsomely-appointed brougham to the door of the Rest.

At the time of her arrival there were only three other patients—Mrs. Weeks, a chronic dyspeptic; Miss Paine, a combination invalid, and an old gentleman who was a bundle of nerves.

It was against the latter individual that Miss Malvina was particularly warned, the night before, in circumstances causing her to pull her hair and cry "Fire!"

For a week she lay ill, distressed, lying quietly on a neat little white bedstead, gazing at harmonious-tinted walls.

On the eighth day she was so much improved, the bread was dry and the drinking water washed.

Miss Malvina was introduced to her fellow invalids, Mrs. Weeks and Miss Paine, who were already at the table when she entered, and she was having a very nice time with them, comparing symptoms, when a footstep and a man's voice caused her to look up. Then there occurred to poor Miss Malvina the one event of her life.

The gentleman of the nerves and eccentric tendencies was none other than her old admirer, Col. Wilds.

Miss Malvina started and blushed and recognized him in a moment. His hair had turned white and he no longer wore a uniform, but he was the same gallant man—indeed, age had improved him.

Col. Wilds recognized Miss Malvina also, and their meeting was an interesting one.

"Why, bless my soul, Miss Malvina!" cried the colonel, "to think of our coming together again after all these years and under such delightful circumstances. What's your trouble?"

"An organ," murmured Miss Malvina.

"Only one?" exclaimed the colonel. "Why, I've got a thousand, and every one of 'em out of tune!"

Miss Malvina said she was sorry, and began inquiring about his symptoms.

The colonel entertained her with a list of the most intense horrors, and the meal passed off delightfully.

After dinner they played dominoes. It was a party of ghosts; pale faces, wasted hands, an occasional groan, enlivened from time to time by a rattling cough.

At a quarter of nine Mrs. Weeks dropped a domino. Col. Wilds shrieked "Fire!" and they were all carried off and put to bed like babies.

In consequence of the excitement Mrs. Weeks and Miss Paine went to rest for another week. The following evening Miss Malvina and Col. Wilds sat down to a tête-à-tête game.

Miss Malvina could not help noticing how handsome her former lover had become, and how highly polished and pink his bald head was.

They were having a most charming game, when suddenly a moth miller sputtered into the gas and fell whizzing among the dominoes.

Immediately Col. Wilds went off.

Poor Miss Malvina was so overcome she scarcely knew what to do. Not liking to sit gazing at her old friend, who was behaving himself in a most childish and foolish manner, she took off her blouse and walking across the room took from her pocket a small box from which she extracted an "excitement pill," which she swallowed.

In a moment the colonel was at her side.

"Miss Malvina," he cried, "what is it? You are ill!"

"It's only my organ," faltered Miss Malvina.

In his courtly sympathy Col. Wilds forgot his own ills.

After this for a week he and Miss Malvina sat down tête-à-tête, and during that time he never once exhibited a nerve, and she almost forgot that she ever had an organ.

But happiness in this world is short lived. Tute is a cruel jade.

On the eighth evening, when the colonel and Miss Malvina were enjoying the most harmonious game of dominoes they had yet played, and when each was touchingly reluctant to beat the other, a note was brought to Miss Malvina.

She tore it open and read:

"Dear Malvina—I pay for no well persons, I hear that you have entirely recovered, and that that miserable organ of yours performs its functions like a Christian."

"Come home at once."

Miss Malvina laid down the note and a tear fell among the dominoes.

"My dear Miss Malvina!" cried the colonel, sympathetically, "what is troubling you? Tell me, I beg!"

"Alas! Col. Wilds, I must leave this haven of rest."

"But why?"

"My aunt refuses to pay my board any longer."

"Allow me to do so!"

"Oh! Col. Wilds!"

"Why not? I'm a millionaire, am married and of age!"

Miss Malvina blushed like a school girl.

"You are so kind—but what would the world say?"

"Nothing, if you will follow my wishes."

"What are they?" inquired Miss Malvina, innocently.

"Be my wife!"

"But Col. Wilds, my organ?"

"No objection whatever," answered the colonel, cheerfully; "it counteracts my nerves."

One day there was a quiet little wedding at The Rest, and afterwards, as Miss Malvina—Miss Malvina no longer—threw all her medicines out of the window, she said to herself:

"Dear me! did I ever think I'd live to see the day when I would bless my organ!"—Ladies' World.
