BABY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA
Hands Tied to Prevent Scratching

Five Doctors Failed to Relieve. But Zam-Buk Worked a Cure

Mrs. Clark, lawyer of Preston, North Carolina, tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says: "My baby's hand and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were fearful, and the little one's night was so serious that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off by the disease."

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. A doctor after doctor treated her in vain, and we had about five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good."

"As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were on the right track. We persevered with the treatment until at last working in the right direction. We persevered with the treatment until we had used thirteen boxes, and at the end of that time I am glad to say Zam-Buk had effected a complete cure."

Mrs. Holmes, of 30 Guinea Street, Hamilton, is quite as pleased with the product. She says: "Zam-Buk cured my son's eczema and eruptions when he was so bad that he had been unable to mix with other children. Zam-Buk is a wonderful preparation, and mothers throughout the land should always keep it handy."

For eczema, eruptions, rashes, letter, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood poisoning, etc. All druggists and stores in Canada, a box or post free to you from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse mail.

WHAT TO DO WITH ABDUL'S 400 WIVES

WHEN the deposed Sultan Abdul Hamid went into forced retirement at Salonic with twelve wives and a retinue of servants, only a very small part of his establishment went with him. The government vaguely recognized the residue as a liability for which they were responsible, and the sultana's now notorious extravagance called for a claim that sort of payment for $900,000 for 400 wagons due to 46 persons.

This demand has aroused the legislators to the necessity for action. No particular inquirer had ever been made as to the extent of the ex-Sultan's entourage, where there had been an exodus of women, supposedly breaking up the harem, and the household left was assumed to comprise about 200 persons, some of them expensive. The number who have come forward for pay is as astonishing as the amount of money they call for. It appears that those 700 comprise some 400 young women, the rest being men slaves and servants. The list seems to be authentic.

Confronted with such a vast sum, a somewhat embarrassed committee, taken for granted, has decided to separate the women from the others and put them at from $40 to $50 a year according to a scheme of dredging to be worked out. Pensions will be paid for ten years and then cease. The others must learn to look out for themselves at once. No action has been taken on the $900,000 claim.

The debates developed a great variety of views. Many members expressed the opinion that these seven hundred and odd people should forthwith be turned out to earn their own living. The answer was that self-respecting employers would not give the girls anything to do.

It was suggested by one that they should be married off. Others thought that they should be given to the Sultan, as that idea good, but no one would undertake to provide husbands.

One member made a strong speech in favor of shipping the 400 back to Armenia and Arafat, where Abdul Hamid got them his preference having always been for the beauties of these lands.

This scheme sounded plausible, and might have prevailed had not the report of it that was sent out instantly provoked vigorous protest from the authorities of those two countries, with stern notice that the women would not be permitted to return. When the women left their native places they did so to the great financial gain of their families and even they were unwilling to have the bick.

The debate was more serious than it may appear offhand. These inmates of the Harem Kiosk estranged themselves from all other contact when they became the property of the Sultan. He could protect them while in power, but when he fell they were left not only defenseless but their record bare them from outside association.

Abdul Hamid could do nothing now for them if he could; and no doubt he feels that he has troubles enough of his own without assuming additional ones on their account.

THE ANCIENT INCUBATOR

FEW of those who wrestle with the chicken-incubator problem, and often fail to solve it, realize how old an art they are struggling to master. Thousands of years ago Egypt, in almost the center of the world, and the Chinese in another had the art of incubating eggs so highly developed that it was an hereditary profession, the secret of the successful process being guarded with religious sacredness and handed down from father to son. The odd stoves called "incubators" that the Egyptians used as incubators date back to remote antiquity. Even before the French Revolution the Paris markets had incubator chickens, thanks to the Bohemian apparatus, which was invented in 1777.

When going away from home, or at any change of habitat, it is a wise man who knows among his belongings a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. Change of food and water in some strange place where there are no doctors may bring on an attack of dysentery. He then has a standard of health with which to cope with the disorder, and, forewarned he can successfully fight the ailment and save it.

The old family physician being away on a much-needed vacation, his practice was entrusted to his son, a recent medical graduate. When the old man returned, the younger told him, among other things, that he had cured Miss Ferguson, an aged and wealthy patient, of her chronic indigestion.

"My boy," said the old doctor, "I'm fond of you, but Miss Ferguson's indigestion is what put you through col-

Storyettes

AT his first wedding engagement as officiating clergyman the nervous young minister asked: "Is it fit to marry to curse the bride?"

WHEN some celebrated pictures of Adam and Eve were seen on exhibition, Mr. McNab was taken to see them. "I think no great thing of the painter," said the gardener, "why, man! Tempting Adam with a pipin of a variety that wasn't known until about twenty years ago!"

JAMES ALIBERY, the dramatist, was descending the steps of his club, when a stranger addressed him: "Sage hen, said the waiter, not one offering I give you." "What's sage hen?" asked Mr. Carr. "The waiter said it was a bird native to the desert country." "Has it got wings?" asked Mr. Carr. "The waiter said it had. "Then," said Mr. Carr, decisively, "I don't want no sage hen. I won't eat nothin' that has wings and yet stays in Nevada."

GORDON COHAN, comedian and playwright, was praising at the Gaiety Club, London, the humorous value of suggestions. "It's funny to suggest a thing," he said, "than to say it out. Playwrights should remember this suggestion, pregnant suggestion, is what makes really funny the little boy's remark of his father: 'I, if you help me with my arithmetic lesson tonight I'll tell you where ha' hid your trou-

O N the first night of a new piece of pantomime, an advanced audience at the front of the stage found in an "exquisite" new costume that must have cost three thousand francs," said, audibly, a lady who sat with her husband in the front row. "No—only twenty-five hundred," said the man mechanically. Then he found his wife fixed on him, and was silent.

A FAMOUS North Carolina clergyman, while preaching from the pulpit, stopped in the middle of his discourse and gazed upon his shivering congregation, and said: "Brothers, it is hard to realize the unbound love which the Lord appears to have for the large proportion of my auditory."

THE enthusiastic angel was telling some friends about a woman who was using a trip to a hotel in Central Park as her honeymoon. "Are there any trout out there?" asked one friend. "Thousands of 'em," replied the angel. "Will they bite easily?" asked another friend. "Will they bite?" asked a third. "They're hardly words to tell a gentleman."

Whisper them to the judge, their magnanimously suggested counsel, and the court was obliged to rule for order at once. No action has been taken on the $900,000 claim.

A prayer meeting held in the back woods of Rhode Island, the names were registered, and every woman present, to her feet, said, "I will be blessed, come what may." Her voice quivered, "that I have rheumatism in my back, and rheumatism in my shoulders, and rheumatism in my legs, and rheumatism in my arms, but they ben upheld and comforted by the beautiful Bible verse, 'Grin and bear it.'
