About two men are drawing pay in the old camp of Ainsworth It is reported that the Highland will shortly resume operations with a force of 100 men.

Contracts have been awarded for extensive improvements at the Iron Horse, Ten Mile. D McCuaig will erect the bunkhouse, D. J. McNally will erect the shafthouse, and Chas. McNicholl will have the building of the road to connect the mine with the Enterprise road.

ANOTHER STRAW.

The Canadian Pacific Railway company has entered the mining business and has handed 18 iron claims, taking in practically the whole of Iron Mountain, located about 10 miles north of Wardner, B.C. The bond is for $100,000, of which $10,000 was paid down, the balance falling due in one year. In the strength of this purchase the residents of Wardner and the vicinity are expecting a smelter from Mountain is only about 20 miles from Fernie, on the Crow's Nest, and from this source coal could be secured easily, while a spur 10 miles long from Wardner would give transportation direct from the mountain. Whether Wardner is to get a smelter or not, it begins to look as if the C. P. R had its eye on the refinery bonus offered by the Dominion government, and is getting things in shape to demand a slice of it.

WORLD NOT GIVE EXTENSION.

The Lake Shore-British Columbia Copper company has thrown up the bond on the Blue Bell property in the Eholt section of the Boundary camp T. Waldo Murphy, of Spokane, the company's attorney, made an ineffectual effort to secure from the owners of the prospect a sixty extension in order to permit the company to do further development deemed necessary before the final payments of $28,000 were made. In view of this the company decided to throw up the proposition on which it has paid out in work and payments on the bond a total of $21,000.

ON PORCUPINE CREEK.

The Baltimore group, on Porcupine creek, at the head of Kaslo creek, 10 miles from Kootenay lake, is attracting considerable attention by reason of the exceptionally rich ore which is being found. The group was located September 16th by Thomas Doyle and William English, and they already have 20 tons of ore on the dump carrying values in gray copper and sulphurets of upwards of $300 per ton It is the intention to commence sacking as soon as the ground will permit The best is from 10 to 11 inches wide, and the ore already mined has been taken from workings of less than 30 feet.

SCHOOL REPORT.

The following is the standing of the pupils attending the New Denver public school during the month of October.

PRIMARY DIVISION

2nd Reader—Charlie Nelson, Winnifred McDougall, Artie Williams, Laverne Lawrence, Athlyn Vallance

1st Reader.—Ethel Burgess, Willie Nesbitt, Raymond Blumenauer, Denver Shannon, Mary Clever, Lizzie Burgess, Bernice Baker, Agnes Ostby.

2nd Primer.—Norman Hill, Nina Sutherland, Haworth Drewry, Mary Murray.

1st Primer.—Margaret Vallance, Bert Williams, Ivy Sproat, Ella Burgess, Bert Nelson, Edna Baker, Vera Crupp, Walter Ostby, Edith Shannon, Violet Nesbitt, Harold Thompson

Honor Roll.—Charlie Nelson, Artie Williams, Laverne Lawrence, Ethel Burgess, Willie Nesbitt, Raymond Blumenauer, Mary Clever, Norman Hill, Margaret Vallance, Bert Williams.

Miss HEWTON, Teacher.

FOUND THE LOST BLOCK.

Last Wednesday a deplorable accident occurred in the iron mines at Ainsworth, says the Cranbrook Herald, by which Hugh English lost his life and Frank Shannon was severely injured. The two men went on shift at 3 o'clock and as they passed into the tunnel they were warned that there was a missed hole by the retiring shift. After a fruitless search for the missed hole they commenced work and within a short time English's drill struck the powder. An explosion followed, and when the atmosphere cleared it was discovered that English was badly mutilated, having lost a leg and an arm. Shannon was badly bruised, but escaped without serious injury.

ST. LAWRENCE ROUTE.

Passengers or the Old Country desiring to travel via the direct and comfortable St Lawrence route should note the following sailings for the Allan and Elder Dempster lines, which are the best for the season of 1901, from Montreal to Liverpool: S S. Tunisian, Nov. 7th; Lake Simcoe, Nov. 8th; Lake Manitoba, Nov. 15th; Corinthian, Nov. 16th; Lake Ontario, Nov. 22nd. The Tunisian, Corinthian, Lake Simcoe and Lake Manitoba are new to-boiston steamers, and rank equal to the crack liners from New York. Early application should be made to nearest C. P. R. agent to insure accommodation via Pierce popular ships.

DOUBLE PRICE AT KITCHENER.

W. H. Blakemore, managing director of the company opening up the great iron deposits at Kitchener, in conversation with a Nelson Miner reporter, stated that the working force on the property had just been doubled. It was the intention of his company to push the work of developing the ledge with all possible vigor while the present fine weather lasted and through as much of November as the snow would permit When the snow sets in all work would be shut down for the winter but hoped that this would not occur before the last of November.

A BRAKEMAN'S SAD ACCIDENT.

F Nadon, a young brakeman on the Crow, lost both feet at Dunmore Junction Tuesday night of last week. He attempted to jump on a water car and missed the step, both feet being caught under the wheel of the car which passed over them. Amputation was necessary and he will be a cripple for life in consequence.

Have you met the Little King? Any hotel man will tell you all about it.

IN THE LARDEAU.

A number of men working for Fred Robinson left Camaplix for the Wigwam, where the Fred Robinson Lumber Co intend to build a shingle mill. They expect to have it running in about a month.

Ed. Bell and Billy Schmock came down on Wednesday last from the American and John L groups, says the Trout Lake Topic, with eight pack horses which they had engaged transporting supplies to these properties. They say that in the American tunnel now there are several streaks of clean ore the largest of which is eight inches in thickness and the smallest about two inches contained in a lead of three feet.

Frank Goldsmith, part owner of Goldfields, the new townsite at Seven Mile, on Fish creek, is making a market improvement cutting and slashing, and intends to grade and lay out several streets, also bridge Fish creek opposite the Eva. This is one of the finest sites for a town on Fish creek, and being close to the famous Camborne group, will undoubtedly become an important place in the near future.

Arrangements have now about been completed for the transfer to Revelstoke parties of a half interest in the Senorita group on Canyon creek, owned by Messrs Thos. Taylor, M.P.P., and Fred Mummery, in return for a cash consideration and a certain amount of work performed. The scheme of development which has been mapped out will require a force of four men all winter. The men are now at work cutting a pack trail from the property to junction with the main trail up Canyon creek and building cabins within a convenient distance of the workings.

SLOCAN ORE SHIPMENTS.

The total amount of ore shipped from the Slocan and Slocan City mining divisions for the year 1900 was, approximately, 58,000 tons Since January 1 to Nov 2, 1901, the shipments have been as follows:

NOTES FROM MIDWAY.

Wm. Johns, brother of H Johns, manager of the Sunset mine, has bought of Nelson's interest in the Norden hotel, Greenwood, the proprietors of which are now Sater & Johns, instead of Nelson & Sater, as heretofore.

It is reported that a body of ore of higher grade than the general run previously met with in the mine has lately been opened up at the 300-foot level of the Jewel mine, Long Lake camp. A quantity is being sent to the smelter for a bulk test.

Messrs F. W Hayes and Wayne Chantz, M E., of Detroit, Mich., have lately been closely examining the Ruby, near Boundary Falls, which is under bond to Mr. Hayes and associates. Development work down under the direction of Jas. Hamilton has disclosed the presence of some very fine gold-copper ore, so that it appears probable the bond will be taken up.—The Advance.

The Royal Seal is made in Nelson and smoked all over Kootenay.

Horsefly Diggings

Report of Rich Discovery Confirmed — Prospectors Returning from the District.

Last week mention was made of the departure of the Campbell outfit from Ashcroft to the gold diggings lately discovered on the headwaters of the Horsefly, in Cariboo. Little was known about the find then, and not a great deal is known from authentic source as yet, but a letter has been received by the Ashcroft Journal, from a son of the editor, that throws more light on the subject. The letter says: "Bob Campbell and several others returned last night from their last trip up with quite a bit of gold and good reports. They say there are several creeks, all carrying gold, but they had no chance to thoroughly prospect them, having to pack in supplies from Horsefly lake about some 30 miles of the roughest possible country, leaving them little time on the ground. On Eureka creek Campbell declares he can make two dollars an hour steadily simply by running out from the creek bed. Other creeks show even better indications. None of the party and no other parties ever prospected this new territory. All that have yet been in have staked upon Eureka, as it is the nearest and has already proved rich enough to satisfy. It is now staked from mouth to source, and we go on to prospect and locate on other streams.

"Campbell cut down a tree and roughly hollowed out the log and shoveled for an hour, losing quite half of the gold, but saving $12.50 in this first experiment

"Since then it is reported an employe staked by him has been saving twice this money every hour in this primitive way, as many hours as he cares to work.

"The party say the country is quite like the Barkerville, with every chance of proving as good or better. This is already quite a camp As I write, behind an impressed bar) a man is being shaved over in one corner by a lady barber. A blacksmith has another sharpening picks, and a black jack game with bets of nothing less than five dollars holds the center of the stage"

It has long been known that there existed an extensive system of ancient river channels in the Horsefly country in the Cariboo district, but this was known to but few miners that discovered gold on the bars of the Horsefly, a modern river that had in places come in contact with the deep buried ancient river channels liberating some of their gold and exposing the blue gravel of which they are filled.

Most everyone has heard of the old Harper claim on the Horsefly river where such extraordinary river gravel was discovered on the bars of that river in the early sixties. In the fall of 1864 Mr. Riskie, an old Cariboo miner, sunk a shaft on the Harper ground about 130 feet deep in the blue gravel, striking the north rim of the old channel. Here was found a rich pay-streak, but at that time all provisions, tools, etc., had to be packed in from Yale or Lillooet at a cost of 20 cents per lb. Mr. Riskie and his associates having spent some $15,000 in trying to find bottom were finally unable to prosecute the work any further that year. The following year other parties located and worked the same shallow bars taking out large quantities of gold. Soon after Thadeus Harper obtained a lease on all that portion of the river bars known to be rich. Harper erected a saw mill and a tug-mined the river. About this time Harper lost his health and became involved to such an extent that he lost the property when about six years ago the Horsefly Gold Mining Co., R. T. Ward, manager, took over the property and has been operating it by the hydraulic elevator system This company (now the Ward Horsefly Gold Mining Co.) took out last year about $20,000 and will have done nearly if not quite as well this year.

About ten years ago Dan McCallum, an old Cariboo prospector, discovered another break in an ancient channel five miles below Harper's on the Horsefly river, where he found the ancient gravel deposit on a higher bench above the river. After working it in a small way for several years, McCallum sold his ground to the Horsefly Hydraulic Mining Co., J. B Hobson, manager. Mr. Hobson was so well pleased with the prospects that he equipped the property with an extensive hydraulic plant at a cost of $25,000 in 1898. Gold to the value of $170,000 was piped out of an area of eight acres and then it was decided that the gravel must be drifted and milled for it was so cemented that hydraulicing had no effect on it.

Since Mr Hobson commenced drifting it has been proved that his property covers the deposit of an immense ancient river that has been explored from one rim, a distance across the channel of 1800 feet, without striking the opposite rim. It is estimated that over 100,000 tons of gravel, proved by actual mill test to run from $1.25 to $8.00, are opened up ready for extraction. Mr. Hobson intends to continue development work until a sufficient quantity of pay gravel is blocked out ready for breasting to warrant operations on a large scale.

In 1898 R. H. Campbell, of California, visited the district. Sufficient development work had been done then to establish the fact beyond a doubt that ancient dead river channels, same in character as those in California, existed in the Horsefly district Mr. Campbell located several miles of the channel adjoining the old Harper lease, for his company, the Miocene Gravel Mining Co., and immediately began sinking to find the bottom. To his surprise and the surprise of everybody, he found the depth to be 350 feet, his last new shaft being that deep all in gravel of the ancient river wash. Rich gravel was found in this shaft but they were not prepared to handle the water and had to close down until heavier machinery could be installed Mr. Campbell is now at the mine and is arranging for the early installation of heavy pumping machinery.

This comprises about all the real mining and prospecting that has been done, though a system of channels was known to exist for a distance of 25 or 30 miles up the Horsefly river, and west to an unknown distance, but it seems that no one has ever gone far enough up to find the shallow creeks that fed these great channels until this year

GREAT IRON DEPOSITS.

That there are great riches for this district is evidenced by the fact that the discovery of iron on Bull river, Goat river and the Moyie have attracted the attention of even the great papers of New York City. A recent issue of the New York Journal contains an article imparting the interesting information that some of these large iron deposits that had been secured by President Hill, of the Great Northern, who had been endeavoring to find large iron deposits on the Pacific slope for years. The fact unable to prosecute the work any further that year. The following year other parties located and worked the same shallow bars taking out large quantities of gold. Soon after Thadeus Harper obtained a lease on all that portion of the river bars known to be rich. Harper erected a saw mill and a tug-mined the river. About this time Harper lost his health and becoming involved to such an extent that he lost the property when about six years ago the Horsefly Gold Mining Co., R. T. Ward, manager, took over the property and has been operating it by the hydraulic elevator system This company (now the Ward Horsefly Gold Mining Co.) took out last year about $20,000 and will have done nearly if not quite as well this year.

About ten years ago Dan McCallum, an old Cariboo prospector, discovered

ANOTHER RAMBLER DIVIDEND.

The Rambler-Cariboo Mining Company last week paid a dividend of one cent per share, or $12,500. The total dividends paid by the company up to date is $130,000. The mine is producing about $60,000 per month, and the ore averages about $20 to the ton.

THE LEDGE is two dollars a year in advance. When not so paid it is $2.50 to parties worthy of credit. Legal advertising 10 cents a nonpariel line first insertion, and 5 cents a line each subsequent insertion. Reading notices 25 cents a line, and commercial advertising graded in prices according to circumstances.

FELLOW PILGRIMS: THE LEDGE is located at New Denver, B. C., and can be traced to many parts of the earth. It comes to the front every Thursday and has never been raided by the sheriff, snowslided by cheap silver, or subdued by the fear of man. It works for the trail blazer as well as the bay-windowed and champagne-flavored capitalist. It aims to be on the right side of everything and believes that hell should be administered to the wicked in large doses. It has stood the test of time, and an ever-increasing paystreak is proof that it is better to tell the truth, even if the heavens do occasionally hit our smokestack. A chute of job work is worked occasionally for the benefit of humanity and the financier. Come in and see us, but do not pat the bull dog on the cranium, or chase the black cow from our water barrel: one is savage and the other a victim of thirst. One of the noblest works of creation is the man who always pays the printer; he is sure of a bunk in paradise, with thornless roses for a pillow by night, and nothing but gold to look at by day.

OIL IN SOUTH ALBERTA.

We are in a position to say that another and a more determined effort is to be made to tap the hitherto secret source of the Kootenay oil supply. On Friday last a shipment of machinery, including a diamond drill of the latest make and a heavy steam boiler, arrived at this point, and on Saturday morning by an early hour the most of the plant had been placed on wagons and the start for the Kootenay oil fields begun. In conversation with a member of the company we find that a number of prominent northern capitalists are interested in the venture, principal among whom are Mr. Vanwart, of Calgary, and J. Lineham, Okotoks. The drilling outfit, which was brought up from Petrolea, Ont, is capable of drilling a 6 inch hole 1500 feet or more, but it is thought that long before this depth is reached the oil deposit will have been struck and the crude petroleum being brought up to the surface. It will be some six weeks before the drill can be put at work, as a wagon road, a mile and a half in length, will have to be blasted out of the solid rock before the spot selected to begin operations can be reached. It is just possible that it may be Christmas time before the drill will be started on its way down in search of the petroleum which is somewhere hidden. A gentleman from Petrolea, Ont., an oil expert well-known in that part of the country, was expected up on Saturday last. He will have charge of the work and every movement made for the next few weeks to come will be made under his own personal supervision. Let us hope that the efforts being made to discover the source of the supply will be crowned with the success they are deserving of.

The oil find above alluded to is on the upper waters of Kootenay river southwest of MacLeod in the eastern hills of the Rockies. Oil from this field has been used for lubricating purposes in Cardston for the past two or three years, having been taken by Wm. Aldridge from oozings on the surface of his homestead.—MacLeod Advance.

THE SLAVERY OF TO-DAY.

Slavery just as horrible as existed before the war exists in this so-called land of the free today, in West Virginia. The poor miners are forced to work ten hours a day in the bowels of the earth for a mere pittance. I have seen them when they have come to the surface after their day's work was done. Many of the poor fellows would drop from exhaustion as they stepped out. Forced to drudge all day, with two or three biscuits to keep up their strength, they are in worse bondage than were the colored men. They must live in the capitalistic dog kennels owned by the company; they must buy all their necessities of life from the company doctor. Every cent they earn finds its way back into the hands of the trust.—Mother Jones.

Let each one think as he pleases, speak as he pleases, and act as he pleases; and encourage him in doing so, since it is only an encouragement to honesty, and you may want him to be honest in your interest before you are through with him. Events Just Passing By Shellguss, the murderer of McKinley, died as he had lived—like a dog. He seemed to know no fear and went to his death with the same careless indifference that has characterized his bearing ever since he came up in the public eye as an assassin. He has never acted like a man of courage, but rather like one driven to desperation by his own evil imaginations and dogged inclinations. He had no love of God in his heart, no love of man, no music in his soul. There was nothing in his make-up that was human aside from his physical form and capabilities. He had turned against priestcraft in early life, but in casting off the religious yoke of bondage, instead of turning to the true God, the God of Wisdom, of Truth and of Love, and making himself the physical being of Light, he, like many another, made himself submissive to no law, denounced home, society and every elevating environment, and sought peace in the darkness of his unbridled hatred of Goodness. After smothering it in himself he was unwilling to perceive it in others, and became a blasphemer of God, a hater of man, a man without manhood, a human being without Love, an animal without a name.

Among the ladies who have penetrated into the Klondike are Mrs. R. D. Hitchcock, widow of the late Commander Hitchcock, of the U.S. Navy, and a friend, Miss Van Buren. From San Francisco to Dawson their journey was a long series of adventures, but though mixing among the roughest of the rough they never failed to secure respectful treatment. In Dawson City they soon became famous, and hardly a miner in the camp failed to attend the services which they started on their first Sunday in Klondike. A peculiarity of these services was that the miners selected their own music, and the result of their deliberations at the first service was the following combination: "The Lost Chord," "Nearer, my God, to Thee," "The Portuguese Hymn," and Straus' "Blue Danube." To an easterner it is not easy to realize what mining camp life is like. It is the tendency of the eastern mind to look in gaping horror upon even the mythical miner in rough working clothes. And the thought of a lady coming in actual contact with such people, talking and walking with the real live thing! Oh, that would be shocking! What nonsense! Of course, Mrs. Hitchcock and friend received respectful treatment. A lady, if she be a lady, will never receive anything else in a mining camp. The safest place on God's perpetual whirler for a lady is a mining camp. The roughest miner is a gentleman at heart to a woman who is at heart a lady.

Statisticians tell us of 1,082,619 women in Great Britain who can never hope to be married. The pity of it! Think of it, ye bachelors of Slocan matrimonially inclined! A million buxom maidens of sixteen years and under who will never feel the embrace of a man they can call husband, or the impress of a baby's kiss upon the burning breast! A million aradems for whom husbands cannot be found! A million of England's fairest flowers that will never be plucked! A million lassies doomed by the cruel hand of fate to a life of emptiness, a lean, unfruitful spinsterhood! Who would not drop a sympathetic tear?

The first social act of President Roosevelt was one that overstepped all bars of precedent and custom and has brought upon him the disgust of the southern states. He invited Booker Washington, a man of noble heart and purpose, but muddy skin, to eat a dollar's worth of grub in the White House. By this simple act alone Teddy has forever and aye blasted his political career and won for himself a name of honor among men and one to be hissed at by every color-line artist in the South. It was thoughtless of Teddy to make such a breach of etiquette, especially at this stage of the game. It would have been cheaper for him to invest in a meal ticket and give it all to Booker. But Roosevelt does things that way. He doesn't care a dam—and that's the smallest piece of money afloat—what the public thinks about it. The White House is his now, and if he wants to have a negro eat dinner with him occassionally he'll do it. And why not?

Anarchy has been defined as lawlessness, but anarchy in its true sense is just the reverse to lawlessness. Anarchy is the doing away with all laws, and the making of every man a free will agent with no laws to govern him but that of love between man and man. Without laws there could be no lawlessness, and until all laws are done away with there can be no true anarchy. That which passes for anarchy to-day is lawbreaking. But all lawbreaking is not considered anarchy. By a misconception of the meaning of the word anarchy is thought to be only that kind of lawlessness that aims to take from capital its special privileges and from the rulers of nations their power. But the word can be as correctly applied to the capitalist who oversteps all law in his greed for gain, or the commercial octopus that by intrigue and stealth saps from peoples and nations the life and health of prosperity. The common anarchist seeks to deprive the few of power, while the anarchist in power seeks to hold the people by the throat with one hand and empty their pockets with the other.

A prominent society woman of Chicago, who had a husband and three children, and a prominent physician who had a family of his own, became enamored of each other and for three years lived a life of shame. It became necessary for the husband of the woman to move to another city, and the guilty pair, concluding that they could not live without each other, resolved to die together. They agreed to swallow morphine and cross the dark river for the unknown side by side. The woman kept her promise, swallowed a large quantity of the drug and was soon sleeping the sleep that knows no waking. Her paramour, however, played the part of a coward and took only enough of the potion to make him rest well. This tragedy furnishes a true contrast of the character of man and woman. With woman there is no temporizing, no retreat—nothing satisfies but the ultimate—and she can die happy sustained by a love that has wrought her ruin. Man, however, is a coward by nature. After taking all—even to her life—and solemly promising to accompany his victim in crime into the unknown he reneges in the final hand and clings to life like a brute.

Not so with our old newspaper friend McGregor. Men familiar with American politics will remember what an important part a certain letter, known politically as the "Murchison letter," played in the defeat of Grover Cleveland for the presidency in the campaign of 1892. The man responsible for the publication of that letter was Arnold McGregor, at the time a staff reporter on the Los Angeles Herald. A kinder spirit never pushed a faker than Mac. A man from garret to cellar, a friend that always carried your interests with his; of good family, noble ambition, lofty intellect and a heart as big as your hat. His lungs were weak, which accounted for his being in Los Angeles; but that is another story. It isn't every reporter that can win the affections of the fairest daughter of the proprietor of the paper, but Mac did. How long they had lived upon each other's love nobody will ever know. The match was not sanctioned by the better-half of the editorial head, and a demand was made that their relations should cease. One afternoon Mac failed to show up for detail. Late in the evening his room was broken into. Upon the table was Mac's last scoop. It was written as only Mac could write it. Locked in each other's arms on the bed laid the forms of two loving souls that could not live in separation. A bullet hole in the breast of each and a revolver with two chambers empty told how it was done. Yes, it was sad to see two young lives of such promise and beauty cut short like this. But Mac was true to his love, as he ever was to his friend.

When a man like John Morley, M. P., of England, talks to his constituents as he did at Arabroath the other day, something is wrong. It does not take a keen eye to see trouble ahead for the war department unless a wiser and less bull-headed policy is adopted in South Africa. Mr. Morley said: "The government is aggravating the essential mischief of the situation in South Africa by its management of the concentration camps. The death rate of children, measure it as you will, is hideous, excessive and appalling. The policy of devastation has been admitted to be a mistake. I wonder what Lord Palmerston would have said of a government justifying themselves by saying that Russia in Poland and Austria in Bosnia had done something like the same. The war has entirely changed in character, and is drifting into a war of extermination of a people fighting for their own land. The policy of unconditional surrender and submission means extermination and annihilation. The present attitude is one of sullen desperation. There is nothing worse than metal in a blind horse. The king will, perhaps, at no distant date have to seek other ministers with a better insight and a more pliant mind in the face of the dangerous and complex situation which confronts the country."

Divorce in England.

From the American point of view and hence, according to the N. Y. Sun, from the point of view of morals and justice generally, England stands even more in need of divorce reform than do the states of the republic. In England by the act of parliament passed in 1857, establishing a divorce court, a totally immoral discrimination is made between the husband and the wife in the matter of infidelity. The man is allowed divorce from an adulterous wife on that ground simply, but the woman is debarred from getting it from him unless it be coupled with other offenses, which of themselves would have entitled to a separation a mensa et thoro. However defensible that discrimination may be on cold physiological grounds, morally it is absolutely indefensible, and it involves an injustice to women which is intolerable in American eyes. With us, the first regard of the legislation is for woman.

British Discontent.

For the first time since the Crimean war the British people are beginning to look angrily and resentfully at their ruling class, says the N. Y. World. The British people means the bulk of the thinking middle class, which in ordinary times trades to the upper class and permits it to rule. Unless the ruling class shall speedily produce some man of high and sufficient capacity England may presently take some long steps toward becoming a real democracy, with merit as the basis of advancement instead of birth and rank. Meanwhile the rest of the world will continue to be amazed at the slowness of Britain's awakening to the fact that it is her lifeblood that is being drunk up by the thirsty South African sands.

NOT SO VERDANT.

"I may be pessimistic," said the talkative man, as he smiled softly to himself, "but nevertheless I am sincere in my opinion that 'the honest old farmer' is a misnomer, writes D. F. P. in the Chicago Journal.

"I make a business of buying wool direct from the farmers every spring, and am thus brought in close contact with them, and my experience has been that the tiller of the soil is like the great bulk of humanity—on the lookout to get the best of you if he can.

"Last spring an old farmer delivered to me a load of wool that brought down the scale to a point that made me suspicious, and I investigated matters. The weight was easily explained when I opened the fleeces, for I found a big cobble stone as large as my two fists in every one of them.

"'Come in here,' I said to the old man; 'I want to show you something.'

"He followed me inside, after carefully selecting a straw to chew on, and I pointed without comment to the pile of rocks that I had discovered. Feazed? Not a bit. All he said was:

"'Darn them fool sheep! They 've been rollin' ag'in on that rocky ground.'"

How to Find a Faulted Vein.

Schmidt's law for finding a vein after it has been faulted or dislocated, runs as follows: If the dislocation, or fault, is struck in its hanging wall it must be passed through and the driving continued on the hanging wall side of the faulted lode. If the foot wall of the fault is struck it must be passed through and the driving continued on the foot wall of the faulted vein.

[illegible] largest baroque [illegible] specimens ever found in the United States came from the Molas [illegible] Aspen Co. The specimen weighed [illegible] pounds, and was valued at over $3000.

English Bar on the Yuba river was so named from two Englishmen who worked there with poor success in 1851. They gave their claim to a man named Wilkins, and sought richer diggings. Wilkins formed a company, and in the summer of 1852 took out $90,000.

The war in South Africa has drained from Australia more than 10,000 workers; has lessened the inflow of British capital for the development of new mines, and, combined with the remarkable industrial boom in Europe, has fully stopped emigration to Australia

The Malay peninsula supplies by far the greater moiety of the tin supply of the world; the present output of tin is about as follows: Federal Malay states, 45,000 tons; Independent Malay states, 4,000; Dutch Indies, 15,000; Australia and Tasmania, 3,000; Peru and Bolivia, 4,000; Cornwall, 4,000. The Malay mines are almost entirely in Chinese hands.

George Mix was a prosperous miner along the Yuba river in the fifties. With $7,000, the amount of his savings, he erected a toll bridge across the river at Bullard's Bar in 1858, intending to take life easy. The high water of that winter, however, carried his bridge away, soon after he had completed it, and he was in despair. Wandering disconsolately about the ruins of his bridge, what was his amazement and delight to find that the flood had swept the bank out in an eddy, disclosing thereby a nest of nuggets out of which he cleaned up $25,000.

David Parks and family mined and kept a trading post and store on the Yuba river, fifteen miles above Marysville, California, in the fall of 1848 and spring of 1849. The customers were chiefly Indians; and the early miners who clustered about the spot. Goods brought enormously high prices, especially among the Indians, who were glad to give a tin cup even full of gold dust for the same quantity of beads or sugar, of each of which they were extraordinarily fond. The Parks only stayed six months and then returned to their home in New Orleans with $86,000 in gold dust.

Those having had any connection, permanent or transient, with the oil industry, and owing it some of their fortunes, are not easily counted. It may be news to our readers that the famous industrial prince, Andrew Carnegie, early in his career made a neat sum out of the same source. At the time of the early Pennsylvania discoveries, he borrowed a part of $18,000, says a New York contemporary, and invested it in Oil Creek lands. He was just on the point of selling all his interests, and actually disposed of a third interest for $3,000, when on returning from a trip to England he found the situation changed, resulting in a profit for him of $1,000,000 the first year. The proceeds from this speculation enabled him to enter the iron and steel world.

Nature does nothing for man except what she enables him to do for himself.—James Lane Allen.
