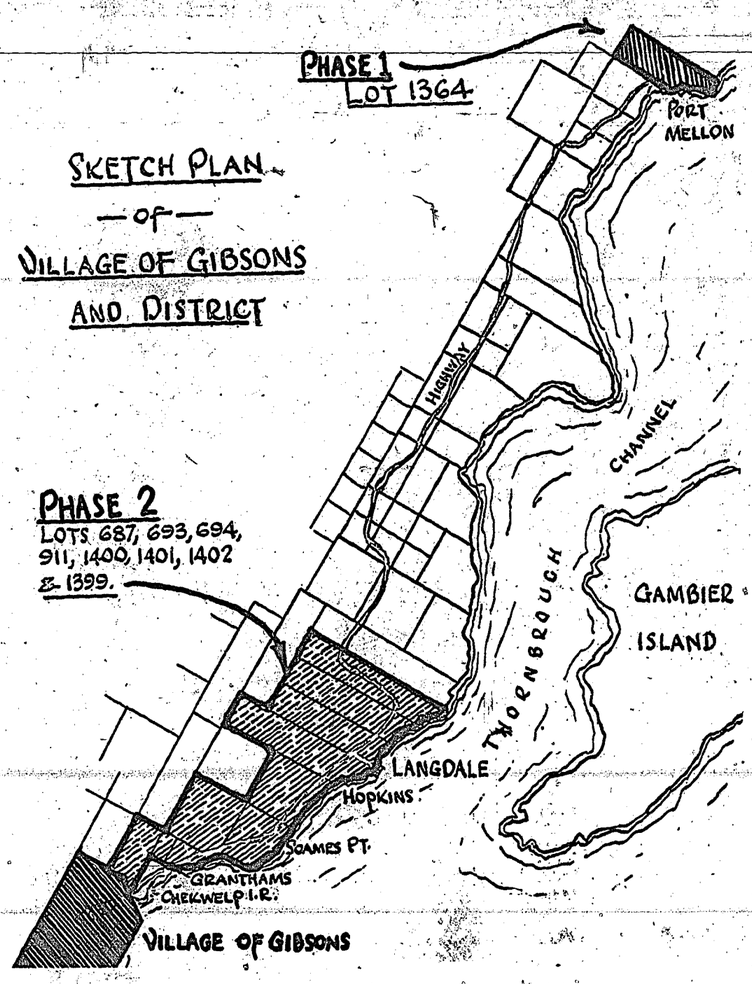
. . . Referendum planned on expansion

Gibsons proposes to double area



BY ALASTAIR ROGERS

GIBSONS — Gibsons is seeking to double its area and its tax base.

The village council has applied to the provincial government to extend the municipal boundaries to include the Canadian Forest Products pulp mill at Port Mellon as the first stage of a two stage expansion.

Second stage would be to include the areas of Granthams Landing, Soames Point, Hopkins Landing and Langdale in the Gibsons Village.

The move, announced last week by Mayor Larry Labonte, would add over $5 million to the village's taxable value, doubling the present assessment base.

Additional revenue from these areas would enable council to link the presently unincorporated communities to Gibsons' water and sewer systems and generally upgrade services in the village.

Labonte told The Times in an interview that the village's present tax base was too small to finance the major water system upgrading project planned by council.

EXPANSION NEEDED

He said that a recent water rate increase would "just cover replacement" of worn-out piping and not allow for necessary expansion to the water system.

"These problems we are trying to solve by increasing the tax base," he said.

Planning committee chairman Stuart Metcalfe said the expansion bid was the result of a lengthy investigation by council and a feasibility study by Dayton and Knight, consulting engineers.

Under council's proposal to the department of municipal affairs, phase one of the expansion, the annexation of Port Mellon, would take effect as soon as possible.

Later, a referendum would be held to give the residents of Granthams Landing, Soames Point, Hopkins Landing and Langdale the choice of joining the village or not.

ADVANTAGE

Metcalfe said it would be to the advantage of the four nearby communities to incorporate with Gibsons.

The village's water and sewer systems would be extended to service the area, he said.

"There would be a proper (water) main the full length of the area," said Metcalfe, "and adequate storage for proper fire protection."

He explained that certain areas between Gibsons and Langdale were saturated with sewage, restricting future expansion. If the village boundaries were extended to include that area, however, full sewer service would be provided and hooked up to the Gibsons pollution control plant.

The alderman stressed the need for controlled development in the area to the south-west of Gibsons.

He predicted that if a fast transportation

MORE EFFICIENT

Labonte said the village could operate more efficiently if its boundaries were extended. "There would be a more efficient use of equipment and men," he felt. "We could service the adjoining area with no increase in cost."

Metcalfe added that it would be more efficient for the Gibsons pollution control plant to process sewage from the Gibsons-to-Langdale area than for the smaller communities in between to construct their own plants.

"Possibly, the addition of one man (at the Gibsons pollution control plant) would be all we need," he said. "If separate plants were built, they would need a lot of men. They couldn't afford it."

Incorporation into the village of the seven district lots between Gibsons and Langdale would increase the area of the municipality by approximately 1,000 acres.

Although Port Mellon would become part of the village under council's proposal, it would be georgraphically isolated, with the intrevening area remaining under the jurisdiction of the regional district.

Copland said an initial reaction to the proposal from the provincial government was expected within the month.

Labonte said that meetings were being planned to guage public opinion on council's annexation bid.

system, such as a hovercraft service, was provided from Vancouver, the majority of new residents would settle between Gibsons and Langdale.

"I shudder to think what would happen without controlled development," he said.

Labonte said there was also land available in that area for industrial development.

TAX BASE

Metcalfe said the basic reason for Gibsons' proposed take-over of Port Mellon, was, historically, that no village could operate without some industrial tax base.

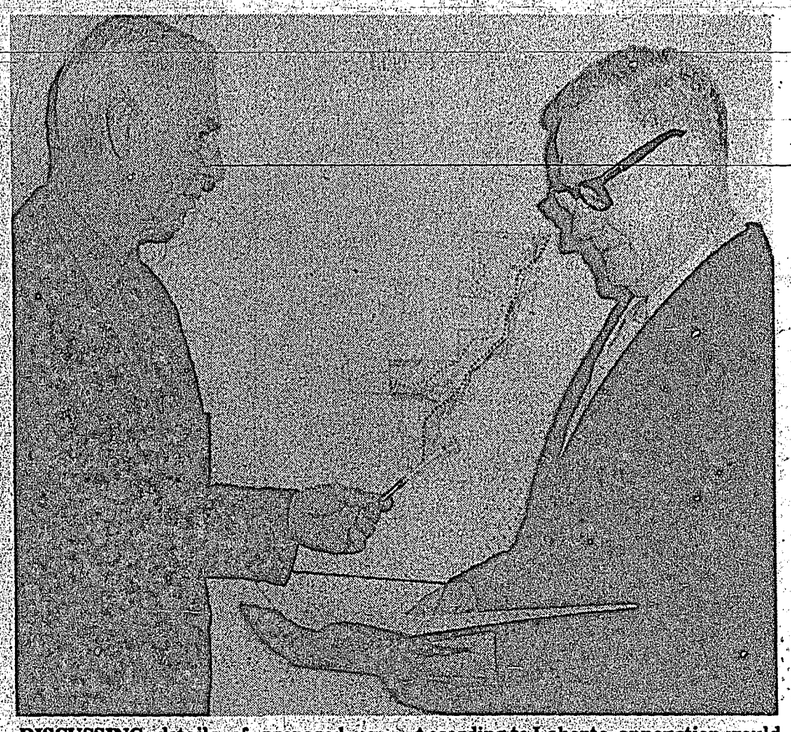
Municipal clerk Jack Copland said that the four south-western communities would be incorporated in Gibsons' comprehensive development plan and the needs of their people would be recognized.

Metcale noted that the majority of employees at Port Mellon lived in the village and took advantage of village services.

He said the regional district would benefit from the proposed take-over because provision of water and sewer services to the area would be extremely expensive.

"We will take that off their shoulders," said the alderman.

He stressed: "The village of Gibsons really needs the tax base of Port Mellon to operate efficiently; but, with Hopkins Landing and the other communities included in phase two of our plan, we don't want to steamroller them into joining the village. We want to prove to them that it would be to their advantage to come in."



DISCUSSING details of proposed extension to Gibsons municipal boundaries are Ald. Stuart Metcalfe, left, chairman of council's planning committee, and Mayor Larry Labonte. Increasing tax base of village is considered the only way to finance improvements to municipal services. According to Labonte, annexation would benefit both Gibsons and the presently unincorporated communities to the south-west — Granthams Landing, Soames Point, Hopkins Landing and Langdale. Increased assessment value from Port Mellon, alone, would amount to over $5 million.

Directors vote to double pay

Sunshine Coast Regional District directors have doubled their financial rewards.

The directors raised the amount they are paid for attending meetings from $25 per meeting to $50. The chairman of the board will be paid $100 per meeting instead of $50.

The motion was passed at the board's recent meeting with one director voting against and another abstaining.

Chairman Frank West defended the increase saying it was the first since 1967.

"Over the seven years, that amounts to only a six and a half per cent increase per year," Chairman West said.

Alternate director Dennis Shuttleworth was the lone voice of opposition.

"I don't doubt the mathemathics," he told the meeting, "I doubt the wisdom. Is this a wise move at this time in light of the national economy? Is this increase really necessary?"

The motion to make the increase was made by Director Peter Hoemberg who said, "We are talking reasonable sums here. I don't think the increase is excessive. I also don't think we will have that much effect on the national economy."

"Perhaps not," Director Shuttleworth said, "but someone has to set an example. We get $25 now per meeting."

Director Tim Frizzell said, "The volume of work demanded of us is surprising. I know I spend a great deal of time doing board work outside the regularly called meetings and we don't get paid for it."

Director John McNiven, who was not sitting on the board summed up the boards dilemma, "On one hand the increase is not enough and on the other it is too much."

Director McNevin was not sitting on the board as it was the last meeting of 1974 and he does not take his seat on the board until the first meeting of 1975.

Director Harry Almond who will not be sitting on the 1975 board abstained from voting.

"I don't feel I have the right to make this decision," he said.

The motion was passed with Almond abstaining and Shuttleworth voting against.

After the vote one of the directors commented to Shuttleworth that he was voting against the wishes of Director Norm Watson who had originated the idea of increasing the money paid to directors. Director Watson was not able to attend the meeting and Director Shuttleworth was there in his place. Both are on Sechelt Village Council.

The board voted to restrict the money being paid to directors in another way. In the past it is board policy to pay all directors who attended committee meetings whether they were on the committee or not. The board changed that so that only directors on the committee or those who were invited because their presence was necessary would be paid.

Chairman West pointed out another control. "There is a restraint," he said. "The money paid out is subject to the limitations of the budget. If the money in the budget is exhausted, then we work for nothing."

Bigger limits for directors

Sunshine Coast Regional Board directors will be paid within the limitations of their budget, but they have given themselves a little more room in which to be limited.

The board's payment to those who attend regularly called meetings was doubled, but the budget amount set aside to pay them has more than doubled.

In 1974 $1,500 was set aside for board and committee chairman. In the 1975 provisional budget that figure has been raised to $4,400. The budgeted amount to be paid to directors was $6,500 in 1974. The 1975 amount has been set at $13,200.

A complete breakdown of the proposed 1975 budget is carried inside this issue of The Times.

Last year was in a word-wet

Last year can be summed up on one word — wet. Rainfall and a smattering of snow resulted in 61.71 inches of precipitation, higher than the average of 53.04 inches and much higher than the Chamber of Commerce would like to see.

So far, 1975 doesn't look much different. The first three days recorded brought over half an inch or rain.

One notable thing about December was the mid-month high temperature of 52 degrees. Not bad for winter.

Christmas presents missed destination

If you live in Pender Harbour and are missing some Christmas presents, we may know where they are.

Boston Bar RCMP have informed Sechelt RCMP that they are in possession of some Christmas presents marked 'Pender Harbour.' No other address or information is on the presents.

Neither detachment was able to give an explanation of how the presents got sidetracked. Perhaps Santa Claus needs a new compass.

WILLIAM PAYNE has a lot to be happy about. He won the lot in the Sunshine Coast Recreation Association's lottery New Years Eve. Here he and Mrs. Payne, left, accept the letter of ownership from Mrs. Lydia Hall who sold Payne the winning ticket. Payne, a Vancouver builder, bought the ticket during a trip to Sechelt when he was looking for property to buy. The lot is valued at $12,500.

Inflation holds back swimming pool plan

GIBSONS — Gibsons Kinsmen Club is seeking support from other local service clubs for its community swimming pool project.

President Haig Maxwell told The Times he had sent letters to the local Kiwanis and Lions Clubs asking if they would consider helping to raise funds for the proposed pool.

"Costs have skyrocketted on us," said Maxwell. "We can't possibly raise enough money for the pool by ourselves now."

He said the money raised by the club towards the projects so far had been barely enough to keep pace with inflationary increases in construction costs.

To date, the Kinsmen have raised about $8,000 towards the estimated construction cost of $550,000.

The school board has offered a site for the pool at Elphinstone Secondary School, said Maxwell.

"The project has been in the back of our minds for about two years," he said. "We've spoken to a few architects and engineers, but the cost of engineered drawings at this state would be too much."

Maxwell is confident other service clubs will throw their weight behind the community swimming pool project.

He is slated to discuss the venture with the Sunshine Coast Kiwanis Club January 9.

Fire destroys Gibsons duplex

GIBSONS — Fire officials are investigating an early morning blaze that completely destroyed a duplex on Marine Drive Jan. 5.

Fire chief Dick Ranniger said three units and 22 volunteer firemen rushed to the scene after the alarm was turned in at 3:35 a.m. By then, the single storey building was totally involved and flames had burst through the roof.

"The fire endangered houses on both sides of the duplex," said Ranniger, "and the occupants of one were evacuated."

Owner and resident of the building, Ken Black, was in Pender Harbour at the time of the fire, said the fire chief. The other side of the duplex was empty.

Cause of the blaze has not yet been determined.

Is arena operating legally?

Is the Sunshine Coast Ice Arena operating legally on Sundays?

A telephone call to the Sechelt Village office recently posed that question. Clerk Tom Woods told the council an anonymous caller had said the arena was not operating legally under the Lords Day Act if it was charging admission fees or paying people to work there.

After a discussion, the council decided to write a letter to the provincial attorney general's department to determine exactly what the Lords Day Act entailed with reference to ice arenas. A letter is also to be written to the arena to get them to assure the council the arena is being operated under the conditions of the act.

"We have always done everything in connection with the arena to the letter of the law," Mayor Harold Nelson said, "and this is going to be no different."

A lot to smile about

William Payne of Vancouver has a lot to be happy about. He won the lot in a draw, lottery so to speak.

He was the top winner on the Sunshine Coast Recreation Association's lottery and his prize is a lot on James Street in Sechelt. The lot is valued at $12,500.

Second prize in the draw, a $200 share in the ice arena, was won by Miss M. Marshall of Sechelt. In addition there were 12 winners of ice skates valued at $50 a pair.

Skate winners were Rick Peters, Eric Waters, Karen Spencer, Gordon Dewer, Jim Brackett, L. Grisenthwaite, all of Sechelt; Carolyn Jeffries, Egmont; M.R. Hostland, Gibsons; R.L. North, Richmond; Jay Paterson, Vancouver; Susan Malkin, Vancouver; H.W. Howcroft, Burnaby; E. Stacey, Burnaby; J. Dolikatny, Brackendale and Nancy Masterman, West Vancouver.

The lot is Lot 3, Block UDL 303-304, Plan 15223. It is a treed, fully-serviced building lot in the Seaside Village development.

All proceeds from the lottery go toward meeting the recreation association's share in the arena cost.

Ironically Payne, a builder, bought a ticket for the lot when he was in Sechelt looking for property to buy. He purchased his ticket from Lydia Hall of Sechelt. Mrs. Hall picked up $100 for being the seller of the winning ticket.

Glenmont Holdings donated the lot for the lottery. In a letter to Gordon Dixon, arena committee chairman, Glenn Crippen of Glenmont Holdings, said Glenmont would look after the cost of having the deed for the property transferred to Payne's name.

"It is indeed with a great deal of pleasure that we are able to contribute this property in recognition of your civic responsibility to the village and the community," Crippen said to the association.

The draw was made December 31.

Break-in at Esso

GIBSONS — If Harold Phillips looks a little unhappy as he tends to customers at his Sunnycrest Esso service station, he has good reason.

Thieves broke into the station on New Year's Eve and made of with accounting data and Chargex records valueless to the culprits but worth over $1,000 to Phillips.

This was the second break-in at the station in a little over a week. Sometime during the night between Dec. 23 and 24, thieves entered the building by smashing a side window and stole around $800 in cash.

Phillips covered the window with heavy-gauge tin after the breakin, but the culprits on Dec. 31 managed to break through it.

In the four years since Phillips bought the Sunnycrest Esso, there have been between 12 and 14 break-ins, he told The Times. In October, thieves forced open an empty cash register and caused over $700 damage to the till.

Said Phillips: "Although I shouldn't take it personally, and insurance has covered most of the loss, I have a disheartened feeling.

The next time thieves try to break into the station, they may get a surprise.

"I don't want to say exactly what I'm doing," said Phillips, "but I'm taking steps."

$150,000 increase over 1974 . . .

Regional district budget shows costs, salaries up

This year's regional, district budget is projected to be over $150,000 more than last years.

The interim budget passed by the Sunshine Coast Regional District at their last meeting is $713,966. The 1974 budget for the district was $563,252.

The biggest jump in the budget figures is in general government services, fire protection, garbage, planning, building inspection, and water supply. In addition there are two new functions — emergency measures and cemeteries with $1,000 set aside for the former and $4,880 for the latter.

General government services has been interimly budgeted at $115,510. That's up from $89,150 last year. Main items of increase there were a $9,000 increase in directors' remuneration. The new regional district location will mean an extra $3,900 in rent and Hydro but a drop of $20 in janitor's fees. Legal services doubled from $1,500 to $3,000. Interest of temporary borrowing went from $3,000 to $6,000.

Elections and Union of B.C. Municipalities costs stay at $9,400.

Fire protection in West Howe Sound went from $16,650 to $20,584 in the proposed budget. Roberts Creek fire protection has been budgeted $20,674 compared to 1974's $13,690.

Street lighting in the district will drop from $9,600 in 1974 to $8,181.

Garbage collection will cost an additional $4,000 in 1975, jumping from $25,750 to $29,750. Garbage sites will cost an additional $14,000 jumping from $53,110 to $67,000. Garbage sites include administration, dump maintenance and related costs.

Planning jumps from $28,820 to $50,095. Biggest jump there is in salaries which go from $21,850 last year to $39,500. Travel went from $780 to $2,000. Plans and photographs dropped from $600 to $250.

Building and planning inspection will go from $33,120 last year to $53,257. Again salaries take a big increase going from $25,500 to $43,437.

Park and green belt aquisition stays at $2,000.

The feasibility study reserve funds drops from $6,300 last year to $2,575.

Cemetery operations is new this year with a budget of $4,880. Emergency program has a budget set at $1,000 and is also new this year.

Nearly half the 1975 provisional budget is set aside for water supply and distribution. In 1975 $329,060 will go to water. Last year the figure was $275,662.

In water supply administration, salaries went down from $20,200 to $15,874, although other administrative costs are up. $5,000 has been set aside for equipment maintenance, a new cost and equipment, another new function, is $3,225.

Reserve for future replacements has been increased from $20,000 to $60,000.

The revenue, as laid out in the provisional budget will be as follows: sales of service $304,000, other revenue $39,535, conditional transfers from other governments $310,615 and other transfers $59,816.

The regional board has until the end of March to finalize the 1975 budget.

Seashore food guide published

Being a resident of the Sunshine Coast has its decided advantages. One is the free harvest available to us from the sea.

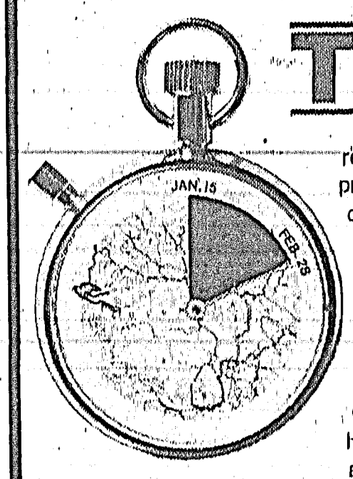
So that visitors and residents alike can take full advantage of the edible and delicious foods to be found nearly everywhere along British Columbia's many miles of foreshore, the Marine Resources Branch of the Department of Recreation and Conservation has prepared a guide called 'Seashore Treats'.

The brochure describes the principal varities of shellfish, where they are found and how to gather them. Treated in a similar manner are shrimp, crabs and aquatic plants. Included are a few simple seafood recipes showing how to prepare a satisfying meal with a minimum of effort.

Finally, there is a list of do's and dont's. These are included primarily to safeguard the recreationist. Special mention is made of the fact that it is against the law to gather oysters from commercial leases. 'Red Tide' is dealt with at some length in the hopes that the confusion that exists in the minds of many people regarding this phenomenon may be cleared up.

Copies of the brochure and additional information about any of the many species mentioned may be obtained from the Marine Resources Branch.

On March 1, the Modified Grid System of claim staking will take effect in British Columbia. This is a far superior method of locating and identifying mineral claims. It should lead to increased discoveries and developments, while virtually eliminating conflicting claims.



TIME OUT

Before this can happen, records must be revised and maps must be prepared, using the Modified Grid System. And care must be taken that the new system and the present system are not confused. So, there will be a moratorium between January 15 and February 28 on claim staking in British Columbia. Remember, no claim staking during this six-week period.

1975's best reception was by senior citizens

BY ROBERT FOXALL

Without doubt one of the heartiest receptions the fledgling 1975 received was by some seventy members of Senior Citizen's Association No. 69. Hosted by Connie and Dave Wilson with Gracie and Emery Scott, these members met in the Masonic Hall at Roberts Creek for a Potluck Supper which was described as both sumptuous and scrumptuous.

Lots of TLC (Tender Loving Care) had gone into the preparation of the many and varied dishes.

After the tables had been cleared off the group filled the interval before the arrival of the New Year with Square Dances and many dances enjoyed by the Senior Swingers on Wednesday Afternoon.

Music was provided partially from tapes but most popular was the live music provided by Evelyn Busshell at the piano and Emery Scott on accordion. At midnight after giving the New Year a vociferous welcome two of the males washed dishes while the Ladies "Redded Things Up".

The next morning a number of volunteers showed up to clean up the Hall to have it in good order for another function to take place that day. I am asked to remind members of two events to take place in the not-too-distant future. One, the Basket Social to take place February 12th. The other a Carpet Bowling Tournament to be held under aegis of the B.C. Winter Festival of Sports will see teams from other parts of the Peninsula competing with Sechelt as follows:-

Jan. 27 Halfmoon Bay, Feb. 3 Gibsons, Feb. 10 Pender Harbour and Feb. 17 Roberts Creek.

Further details of these two events will be given at a later date. In the meantime "HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL."

A tip-or-two

by COO CROYDON

If you eat enough protein foods daily you will not crave sweet food at this sweet-tooth time of year. The protein keeps blood sugar level on a high enough plateau STEADILY whereas drinking orange juice or nibbling snacks, shoots blood sugar up and then down again.

Reduce use of salt will reduce want-use of sugar.

If you forget and pop a candy in your mouth, STOP, pray hard and s-p-i-t it o-u-t! It works.

When watering those Christmas gift plants use warm water, don't let containers sit in moisture causing root-rot.

Now we have a consumer's rep here let's get those complaint petitions rolling in to her office. How about it girls? Consumer suggestions, improvements, what we like and don't like. We Canadian women take pride in our household traditions and seek time-saving improvements in home ways as well as at the marketplace!

Tip-or-Two's Christmas Wish is that magazines would print gift and decoration making-and-creating ideas in earlier Fall editions, rather than waiting to Christmas baking time in December!

Sechelt News Notes

—by Peggy Connor

Roy Marshal was celebrating his birthday and enjoyed music by Mary Connor on her guitar, an accordian number by Sharon MacKay and the talents of the Murphy family singing carols.

The party was sponsored by the Halfmoon Bay Hospital Auxillary, and those attending to help provide a special good time were Grace Rutherford, Olive Comyn, Cheryl Grognet, Irene Mercer, Sue Beaven and Jean Mercer. An extra thank you goes to the rest of the Mercer gang for all the help.

Miss Lillian Peters is looking for any news items concerning the old hospital at Pender Harbour. Any such items can be left at the desk at St. Mary's Hospital.

Jerrie Lou Wickwire will be handling the Sechelt News Notes for January. Any items may be phoned in to her at 885-9750.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pratt, 1247 Dolphin Street in the Village have been Mrs. Pratt's sister, Mrs. Leslie W. Alexander who resides in Willowdale, Ontario. Mrs. Alexander was returning the visit Mrs. Pratt had with her family in Toronto last June.

Miss Lynette G. Croydon, niece, was a weekend house guest from Vancouver here to attend the Pratt-Hogue wedding ceremony last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Donovan Phillips-Watts, sister and brother-in-law, Burnaby, also visited our village, guests of Cozy Court Motel, the weekend of December 14th. Mrs. Watts with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Adams motored over Monday to spend the afternoon and dinner hour with Howard and Evelyn.

In late Autumn overnight guests included Mrs. Pratt's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Eckersley, Summerland, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Pratt will have as their guests on Boxing Day, Mr. and Mrs. Watts who will join the family on the occasion of Mr. Pratt's birthday.

While a visitor in our village, Mrs. Pratt's sister, Margaret Alexander made several purchases in several stores and remarked how cheery, friendly and courteous merchants and their staff were to her, making it a pleasant outing for her. She said she and her husband would like very much to reside on the Sunshine Coast Peninsula liking our style of life here, but the draw of grandchildren being in nearby Aurora holds them in the east, of course. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander will be motoring back to visit here in June.

ELIZABETHAN

This year the Barria Redman family spent Christmas in the Elizabethan manner at the Empress Hotel in Victoria. Beside visiting old friends in the city, they enjoyed five days of carolling, instrumental concerts, the sumptuous feasts of Christmas treats, and the annual Yule Log and Boars Head ceremonies. It was an unforgettable Christmas and one they heartily recommend to lovers of tradition.

Their vacation ended with a stay at the Wickininnish Inn on the beautiful West Coast of Vancouver Island.

HELICOPTER SKIING is the ultimate option for Whistler Mountain skiers, 75 miles north of Vancouver. Ski season starts there with early bird lessons in September and the ski season gets underway in late November. It ends in the spring with the Spring Carnival and Freestyle Contest.

Unidentified body sighted in Straits

Police are investigating the reported sighting of a body Dec. 24 in the Straits of Georgia off Trail Island.

Harry Smith, a resident of the island, told RCMP he was crossing the strait in his boat when he spotted what appeared to be a body floating near the vessel.

He shouted, but received no reply, police told The Times, and, because of nine-foot rollers, Smith was unable to comé alongside.

Smith described the body as being that of a white male with dark hair, slight built, approximately 5 ft. 8 ins. tall and wearing a blue floater coat and jeans.

Following the sighting, police searched the area from an aircraft, but without success.

Anyone who can help the police with their investigation of the sighting should contact the Sechelt RCMP detachment.

Regional laws waste of time

"Regional district bylaws are a waste of time," Director Harry Almond told the board recently, "if they can't be enforced."

Director Almond, sitting at his last board meeting, said, "What's the use of having bylaws if they can't be enforced?"

He was reacting to Building Inspector F. Reyburn's presentation to the board about the fines handed down to persons who break regional district bylaws.

Reyburn submitted a clipping from a Delta newspaper stating the municipality of Delta was requesting higher fines for persons breaking municipal bylaws.

In Delta bylaw breakers receive a $25 fine.

Reyburn noted, "this regional district is confronted with the same problem. Of the four or five prosecutions concluded here, not one fine exceeded $25. In my opinion a $25 fine is not a deterrent."

Police check 1,200 drivers

In their annual crackdown on impaired driving, police checked 1,200 vehicles at roadblocks set up throughout the Sunshine Coast over the holidays.

Gibsons RCMP report that three charges of impaired driving were laid as a result of their vehicle checks. One was handed a 24-hour suspension. Altogether, the Gibsons detachment stopped 685 vehicles.

In Sechelt, police checked close to 600 vehicles. One driver was charged with impaired driving and four had their licences suspended for 24 hours.

In general, police are happy with response from motorists to their warnings about the hazards and drinking and driving.

The regional increase . . .

When regional board directors were called upon to vote themselves a $25 increase in the amount that were to be paid per meeting, Director Harry Almond abstained saying he did not feel he had the right to make the decision.

After looking at the reaction to the vote, we feel Director Almond was wrong. Perhaps he should have been the only one to vote with all those who would receive the benefit of the increase abstaining.

Director Almond has been through the mill. He's seen the workings of the board, knows what is demanded of a director and knows that the $50 honorarium won't be enough to compensate for the time and energy demanded.

The remaining directors were put in the unfortunate position of having to vote for or against giving themselves a raise. They are the ones who will be sitting on the board in 1975, not Director Almond.

He was in an ideal position to vote. He wasn't voting on his own raise. He would, technically, be voting as a member of the general public. He was the only one in that position.

The other directors, with the exception of Dennis Shuttleworth, an alternate director, voted for their pay increase and in doing so are prepared to field any complaints, criticism, or disparaging comments.

We think the board has learned a lesson here. The increase was not a good public relations move, no more than the 50 per cent increase asked for by the members of parliament.

Agreed the mathematics of the regional increase work out to six per cent per year over the seven years, but people are only going to think about the words 'doubled' or 100 per cent increase' when they think about the board.

Perhaps increases to the directors should come annually when the budget is made up if that is feasible under the Municipal Act. That might be much easier for the taxpayer to swallow than an occasional doubling.

Also there is a bright spot about the directors' actions.

More people have been made aware of the board. Perhaps they will look a little deeper into the operation of the board and find out what directors do to earn their money. More public interest in the board can only do good.

Priority wrong . . .

The provincial department of highways says it is reluctant to put in centre line reflectors on Highway 101. The reason they gave the regional board's committee is that Lower Mainland roads have priority.

What the department of highways' terms of reference for 'priority' are, we don't know; but we do know that the 58 mile ribbon of disaster we call Highway 101 needs reflectors desperately.

There are probably not too many residents who have not been heading south on Highway 101 south of Halfmoon Bay in a rainstorm and seen the yellow lines disappear in the glare of oncoming headlights. Another stretch of the highway between Sechelt and Gibsons gives the same phenomenon. The yellow lines just fade away and your lane could be anywhere. Reflectors would tell you where you were.

We would venture that there is a higher per centage of roads in the lower mainland which are lit by streetlights than we have here.

The regional board has voted to press for the installation of the reflectors. We applaud them and give them our full support. The stretch between Halfmoon Bay and Secret Cove would be a good place to start seeing as it is to be reconstructed soon anyway. Eventually we would like to see the entire highway done. And the sooner the better.

53 minutes

By Don Morberg

MULTI telephone calls come in to my office. Just before Christmas, I was straightening up some things and one of my regular callers checked in. After exchanging season's greetings and all that festive stuff, he launched into a tirade about the members of parliament asking for a 50 percent increase in pay.

"Do you think it's fair," he asked rhetorically, "that members of parliament should get a 50 percent raise when the pensioners got $4 a month raise?"

He didn't wait for an answer, not that there would have been one to such a question.

"Why don't they do the decent thing and take a $4 raise themselves and give the pensioners 50 percent?" he said.

I think our members of parliament (as well as most elected officials right down to our own regional government) find themselves on an uncomfortable dilemma.

WE HAVE learned one thing from the little governmental disaster the U.S. just went through (and it may only be the beginning). That thing is that more and more elected officials are not going into politics for the good of the country. I'm using the U.S. as an example, but the same holds true here.

It seems more and more people are going into politics for their own personal reasons, detrimental to the future of the country. Power, glory, control, you name it. All the wrong reasons are there.

No one will give me much argument when I say this country, like most in the Western world has a leadership crisis. I'm generalizing here, of course; there are still good leaders around.

Sure we have the power to choose our own leaders by voting, but we haven't got that much to choose from.

There are good leaders around. They are mainly in business, making millions for their own companies. They are guiding their businesses with the same firm hand, control and dynamic foresight needed in government.

If we want men of this calibre in government, we are going to have to pay for them. Top salaries are luring the good, natural leaders away from politics and into business.

Why take $25,000 as an MP when you can pull $30,000 or more with less effort in business? The people who are getting top salaries are people with ideas and who are not afraid to shoulder responsibility. They are the people we need in government.

The raise the federal government granted to judges is a good example. The country's top lawyers would make the best judges, generally speaking. To get them, the judge's salaries have to be high enough so that the lawyers are not taking too much of a loss when they move from in front of to behind the bench.

MP's should get more money. I'm in favour of it, but I do not think it would be a very wise move on their part to suddenly bounce the total up 50 percent in light of the national economy and the price of peanut butter.

If they were a union, going into bargaining they would have to go on strike for a long, long time before they would get 50 percent. Unions usually take a little more than the expected inflation each contract period. They get ahead that way.

If the MP's want 50 percent, they may have to take it over 5 years to make it acceptable to their bosses — us. Presently the MP's are supposed to be going around their riding and explaining why they need that much of an increase. I hope to see Jack Pearsall in here soon, so I can talk to him about it.

In the meantime, I would like to hear from you. Could you drop me a note saying whether or not you are in favor of such an increase; and, if you are, how should it be given?

Address them to me at Box 310, Sechelt. They will give me an idea of how you feel and I will pass the information on to our MP.

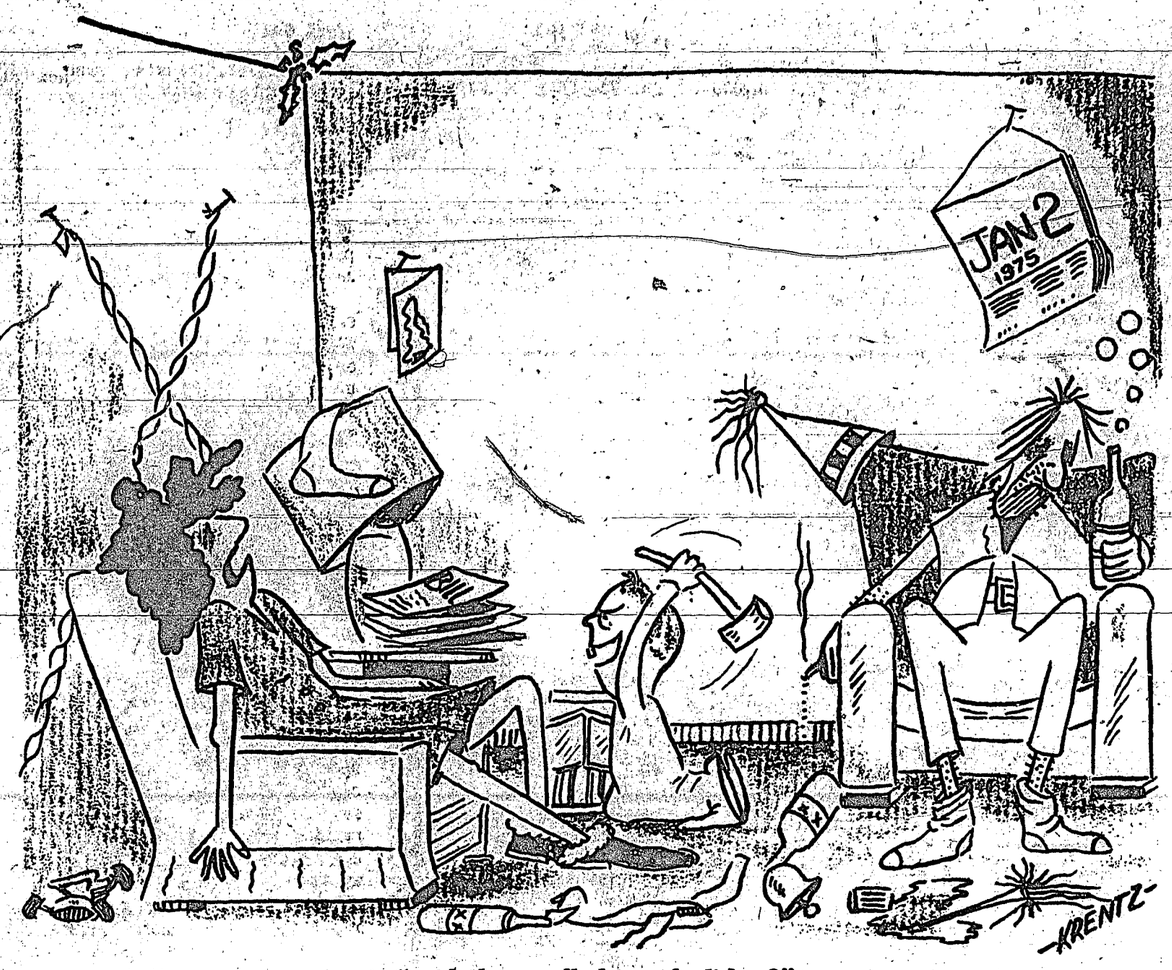
SPEAKING of telephone calls, I got one after we ran a story about a shooting incident in Madeira Park.

In that incident, Donald Westersund of Pender Harbour was charged and convicted of discharging a firearm. He was given a conditional discharge and was ordered not to possess firearms for two years.

I got a call from Westersund and he was objecting strongly to the headline on the story. In the headline we described him as a 'druggist'. He said he was not a druggist, but a chemist, which he defined as a person who deals in medicinal drugs. So we stand corrected.

FOR CLOSURE, I want to pass on this item gleaned (that's newspaper talk for stolen) from the Interior News. "Do something. Either load, follow or get the hell out of the way."

RECENTLY, in a front page story, The Times enumerated the people and services who would be working or on call during the holidays, particularly Christmas Day. We missed a couple a one was Tyee Airways who are on hand to make emergency flights at all times.



"and they call this a holiday?"

They dragged me

BY BASIL SMYTH

They dragged me from my home among the wild winds,
Down through city streets they made their way
Fastened round my feet the tinseled paper,
Garnished me with things to make me gay.

I see again the eager smiling faces,
I feel again those soft carressing hands,
My limbs astraining for the joyous morn,
When tiny fingers loose the coloured bands.

I lie alone disgarded and disrobed,
I, who once had been so bright and gay,
Dressed in a myraid colours sparkling with life.
Yet here I am forgotten, thrown away.

I don't complaint, I've seen my happy hour,
I've served my time and now again I'm free.

Not 'pressure' but suggestion

Editor, The Times;

Sir — I would like to correct an impression that many people must have obtained from a piece of inaccurate reporting, or it may just have been imprecise English, prominently featured on the front page of your newspaper issued on Wednesday, December 4th, 1974.

I refer to the statement: 'RESPONSE TO PRESSURE . . .' "In response to pressure from Sechelt Teachers' Association and other local groups, the School Board has agreed to seek outside advice on the selection of a new district superintendent."

The board did not respond to pressure, it readily accepted a suggestion. This is not a matter of semantics, there is a significant difference. For pressure to exist in any form, there must be an opposing force for the pressure to act upon. A response to pressure of movement in any direction of that pressure means only one thing, that the opposing force was unequal to the applied pressure and, being overcome, yielded.

This was not in any way the situation under discussion; the board had touched upon the topic in general before any letter was received from the Sechelt Teachers' Association, and there was no opposition at all to the principle of prior advice from either the teachers or any other interested person or group of persons.

One last point of interest, no one person, or group of persons other than the Sechelt Teachers' Association has yet approached the board in the matter of suggestions of advice in this matter. As the board could conceivably be conducting the interviews and making their selection in early January, advice not offered soon may come too late.

Sugar is necessary, middlemen are not

Editor, The Times:

Sir — We are hearing a lot about sugar these days. Dieticians, as some call themselves, say sugar is really not needed (to quote a certain man in a food conference in Campbell River recently.)

This is harking back a little, but when my sister was a babe in arms, doctors ordered that she should have sugar. At the end of World War I it was necessary to buy $1 worth of food to get a pound of sugar. Some of you can probably remember every cupboard stocked with all manner of groceries to get sugar.

We all did without so she could have her sugar.

She is not the only one who couldn't have survived without sugar so, so much for that man's sour statement.

We are told now we can't get sugar.

I was in the merchant navy in World War II and we nearly lost the ship and our lives because someone was trying to convince the people that there was no sugar. Between New Zealand and Australia we were ordered home empty. With our ship drawing five feet at the bow and 13 feet at the stern, we came through a hurricane. We had left thousands of tons of sugar sitting on the docks. That sugar would have balanced our ship and calmed the demand for sugar back home. Not one ton was brought over by any of our ships as the war ended.

Now I get mail from friends in Sydney, Australia, who are paying 10 cents per pound for sugar and no scarcity. What is our price?

I suggest that if a government can do nothing but make up stories and blame other countries for its own shortcomings, they should be annihilated. And the middleman who is really growing very fat at our expense should be outlawed.

You hear about prices of our goods abroad. For instance canned salmon, as stated by a federal agency, is 20 cents a can cheaper than we have to pay. Why should we be penalized in their favor? Why should they not pay ten cents more and us ten cents less and we would be equal?

A few years ago millions of feet of lumber was sold abroad for $20 per m. board feet delivered while we were paying $97 for our own.

I think we should go back to trading, say, two carrots for a turnip in the stores. That way he gets a profit and we don't get cleaned out buying a turnip.

As a New Year's pledge, let's fight to stop certain self-satisfied people from treating us like illiterate monkeys.

School bus discipline necessary for safety

Editor, The Times:

Sir — I read with interest your article in the December 18 issue, concerning discipline on school buses.

I had the misfortune of relief driving on a run on the Sunshine Coast once in 1973, and I was thankful I didn't have to make my living in this manner. I tried to be very fair and understanding toward the children. I found that the elementary students were absolutely no problem — noisey, but remaining in their seats except when it came their turn to get off the coach.

The Elphinstone bunch were a different story. There again I tried to be understanding; but when a text took came whistling through the air, nearly lighting on a girl's head, that was enough. Of course, no one admits to having done such a thing, but it was clear when the troublemakers got off the coach at their destination because law and order was restored.

The drivers of these coaches are qualified people. They have to be in order to operate a motor coach on our B.C. Highways, and some have children that they themselves are concerned about, riding these very same coaches to school. Theirs is not the responsibility to babysit these kids.

I believe the driver did correctly in not allowing these deliquents to ride the coach, especially after no one admitted to the problem. The drivers responsibility is to transport all children safely to and from school, five days per week, 22 days per month, 10 months of the year, and in my books, anyone that would hamper the safety of a child, be it another child on the coach, or whoever, I want him out.

It is my thought that the School Board should hire someone to ride, 'shotgun' to ensure this safety.

I find it incredible that Mr. Horvath of the school board would come to the defence of a few cigarette smoking trouble makers, whose only aim is to make life miserable for others riding the coach, in favour of a driver who has the responsibility for the safety for my child and yours.

Number one concern shifted with MP's

Editor, The Times:

Sir — Before the election our MPs were the most promising, friendly individuals with the welfare of our Senior Citizens their number one concern — and eager to serve their country.

What happened?

There was no increase in pensions for our most deserving citizens of Canada. Then Christmas arrived and the spirit of goodwill takes over. The real MPs stand up — not the one we elected but some Ottawa mercenaries. The OMs ask for a 50 per cent salary increase — and shed tears on television telling us about their hardships.

But no mention of their untold fringe benefits — free travel, subsidized meals, haircuts, shoe shines and even free picture framing.

Canadian voters reacted and the OMs repented. They now ask for a lesser salary increase (25-30 per cent) plus a cost of living clause.

Guess who is going to win out? Not the pensioners. But there is a small saving for Canadians — they will not be obligated to send the OMs a Christmas card.

There is a twinkling star in the not far distance called 'Election Day'.

IT TOOK police and firemen forty-five minutes to free a woman trapped inside this truck cab. Caroline Jefferies of Egmont was trapped inside the cab after the truck left Highway 101 and hit a large stump Christmas Day. She was alone in the vehicle at the time. Lady pinned in wreckage

MADEIRA PARK It took rescuers 45 minutes to free an Egmont woman from the wreckage of her truck.

Police said Caroline Jefferies of Egmont was alone in a pick-up truck when it left Highway 101 and hit a large stump north of Madeira Park. The impact crushed the cab of the truck and pinned the driver inside.

The accident occurred at 5 a.m. Christmas morning.

When she was taken out of the wreck, the victim was put in a waiting ambulance and taken to hospital. Police said she appeared to have pelvic injuries.

Children invited to design stamps

The Canada Post Office has organized a Christmas stamp design project directed to Canadian children under the age of 13. The project began Dec. 2, 1974.

Canadian children from coast to coast are invited to contribute their own drawings or painting, expressing the theme "What Christmas Means to Me". These will be used to produce several distinctive Christmas stamp designs reflecting the essence of the Christmas spirit and the freshness and variety of young minds.

The Departments of Education in every province are co-operating with the project.

The Canada Post Office issues special stamps each year to mark the Christmas season and normally these are designed by professional artists. For Christmas 1975 designs by Canadian children will be used.

Children are invited to participate in the project by submitting their personally executed designs before Feb. 14, 1975. Selection will be made initially on a regional basis and subsequently at the national level.

To assist with the screening of designs, the Canada Post Office has enlisted the aid of regional panels, including directors of art galleries, artists, art educators and members of the Advisory Committee on stamp design.

When the provincial jurying has been completed, selections on the national level will be made by the Department's stamp Design Advisory Committee.

It is hoped that this project, which offers an opportunity for children to see their own drawing or painting on a Canadian stamp, will be an interesting experience for them as well as being fun.

A similar contest in 1970 drew participation from more than 50,000 children.

Entry rules are as follows:

All entries must be in some way appropriate to the theme "What Christmas Means To Me".

All entrants must be residents of Canada and must not have reached their 13th birthday before the closing date for submissions (February 14, 1975).

Each entry must measure approximately 12" x 15" and be mailed flat or rolled. Do not fold.

One entry per child.

Each child should be allowed as much freedom as possible. E.g., paint, pencil, crayon, ink, charcoal, pastel, collage, etc., are all acceptable.

Entries should not be in the form of stamps or stamp designs. E.g., they should not include denominations, or the word Canada. The paintings or drawings selected will be made into stamp designs by the appropriate Post Office staff.

The name, age, address and school of the child must be clearly printed on the back of his or her entry.

Entries must be mailed before Feb. 15, 1975. All entries must be post marked before midnight, Feb. 14, 1975. All entries become the property of the Canada Post Office and may be used for exhibition purposes.

Entries should be mailed to: The Vancouver Art Gallery, 1145 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 3H2.

Log Salvors plan meeting to discuss debris problem

Vancouver Northwest Log Salvors Association will be holding a public meeting to discuss the forestry debris, dead-head and driftwood problems and the role of beachcombers in solving the problem.

The meeting will be held at 2 p.m. January 19 in the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse, Dunsmuir and Hamilton in Vancouver.

"Any log salvor, mariner (commercial or pleasure), member of the government (federal or provincial), member of a governmental agency (federal or provincial), sportsman, member of Gulf Log Salvage or the forest industry, member of the news media or any concerned citizen is invited to attend. If you are in the News Media or a member of a Club or Group, we would appreciate having you spread the word among the public," a spokesman said.

"Swift action on this very severe and ever-increasing problem is long over-due and will only be obtained if the forest industry and-or the government can be convinced that the public will not tolerate further procrastination. A strong turn-out at this meeting will be a powerful inducement for positive action. Please plan to attend," the spokesman said.

Anyone wishing to address the Meeting or make a written submission should advise us well in advance with a resume to enable us to establish an agenda and time-table, he said.

At Calvery Baptist Church . . .

Concert stressed fun, fellowship

BY REV. WILBERT ERICKSON

A recent magazine article contained interesting reading on the subject of activities during the 60 days of the Christmas season. The author wrote of the Christmas program practices in the little country school house during the depression years. The same was true of the churches of those days.

Today many of these activities have vanished and given way to more sophisticated festivities. There still remains, however, some resemblances of those past days and old fashioned Christmas celebrations.

At Calvary Baptist Church, Gibsons, we enjoyed a full Christmas program on Sunday evening, Dec. 15. The program was arranged and directed by Mrs. Esther Anderson, with Ted Peters assisting. Arlys Peters and Nancy Miller were at the piano and organ. A children's choir, along with an adult choir rendered the beautiful Christmas music.

Practices began in October and each Sunday following. A Friday evening was given to full dress rehearsal and a social time for all participants.

We hope to preserve these meaningful opportunities for fun and fellowship, as well as the story of the Christ Child — the all important part of this festive season.

The program began with the singing of several carols. This was followed by the preschool children's part in sharing the story of the 'Good News', then young and old took part in drama and song to portray the coming of the 'King of Peace.'

'O Come, O Come Emmanuel' was sung as the choir appeared in the foyer and in procession to the stage. This carol drew our attention to the age-long deep conscious need for deliverance from sin. Men costumed as Isaiah, Malachi and Micah read prophecies of those men of old. A narrator, and the Magnificat by the choir, told about the angel's message to Joseph, and of Mary's outburst in joyous song.

We were led into the thrill of the announcement of the coming Prince of Peace and the greatest event in the littlest town.

As spotlights focused on the angel image, four youngsters played the part of the startled shepherds, giving us the message of joy in heaven and on earth.

Three men arrayed as kings represented the search for the young child who was born 'King of Jews.'

The need for personal concern was told in a beautiful rendition of 'I Wonder as I Wander, out Under the Sky, Why Jesus the Saviour should come for to die', sung by Mrs. Sylvia Spain.

In turn, an old rugged cross, with an appropriate choir selection as musical background, revealed to us the earthly ministry and suffering of Jesus as well as the appeal for personal dedication and devotion to the One who came to seek and to save a people lost in sin.

A closing comment expressed "hope". The shepherds out on the Judean hills on that notable night certainly had a great and thrilling experience. But, what of the Saviour's coming again — will this not be far more exciting and thrilling for those who are ready?

The message is 'Good News' and we were delighted to present it on stage and also extend it to the circulating boundary of this newspaper. We want you to know the reason Jesus came, and that He invites you to come. Perhaps, you ask, How is this to be done? The answer is, 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.'

Christmas Seals near target total

Over 5,000,000 Canadian homes received Christmas Seals at the beginning of this holiday season, 640,000 of those in British Columbia. Contributions from the province total $423,889, with $2,368 of that coming from the Sunshine Coast area. This figure represents approximately 75 percent of the Sunshine Coast target of $3,200.

Christmas Seal Campaign Co-ordinator, Ed McLachlan, reports a slight increase in contributions over this same period last year, and it is hopeful the British Columbia target of $500,000 will be met in order to allow the British Columbia Tuberculosis-Christmas Seal Society to meet medical research and construction assistance commitments for the upcoming year.

The monies derived from the Christmas Seals are used in the fight against all respiratory diseases, not just tuberculosis, as was the purpose in the past. Several research projects are currently underway in British Columbia, and more are planned in the near future.

Children — "Walk Wise with Eyes"

Almost half of all pedestrians injured are between the ages of 4 and 14 years old. In other words, of the 20,000 people on foot who are injured every year, every second person tragically struck by a car, truck or bus is a child. That's 27 children injured every day.

Fortunately, because of their tremendous resiliency, young children can more readily survive the effects of a motor vehicle accident, nevertheless, between 25-30 percent of all pedestrian fatalities (approximately 1,200 per year) are in the 4-14 age group, which averages out to one child a day killed.

Obviously, the number of children injured and killed is way out of proportion to their respective population. In this safety area, we are all badly failing, parents, people driving cars and other motor vehicles, safety officials and educators, and, of course, the child. The child is failing, but he is suffering for it too.

The British Columbia Automobile Association claims proudly that wherever there has been one of their school crossing patrols, and for that matter, wherever there has been any CAA school crossing patrol, there have been no fatalities. If it is noted that one of every five children killed and one out of every three children injured is en route to or from school, the value of such patrols can not be taken lightly. Unfortunately, however, children must cross at many more street corners than there are patrols. Children, therefore, need to be taught and continually reminded how to walk safely in today's traffic.

The BCAA considers that no one safety program is going to solve this tremendous pedestrian problem, hopefully, however, the newly launched "Walk Wise With Your Eyes" has deliberately incorporated a fun-like symbol — the eyes in the boot — and a catchy slogan to appeal to the children in particular, and all age groups.

A child copies the behaviour of adults and his peers, yet the young child cannot walk across the street as fast, nor can he judge the speeds of approaching vehicles with any accuracy; his depth perception is not fully developed, and because of the child's short height, such phenomenon as left turning vehicles might be completely obscured by nearby cars.

The BCAA urges all parents of young children to take the time to discuss the routes their children take to and from school, to the playground and usual playing spot, to their friends' homes and the store, go over the traffic problems that arise en route and talk about the correct action to be taken and why it is the safest. Make your children aware of the dangers and do so as soon as possible. How about tonight?

The BCAA has various "Walk With Your Eyes" material available at each local office for parents to give to their children. Pick up the safety game for the 4-7 year olds and review the points it makes with the children after they have completed it.

Happenings around the Harbour

by Jock Bachop 883-9056

How many New Year's resolutions have you broken?

I'm happy to say your's truly hasn't broken one. Sounds pretty smug eh? Of course it may have something to do with the fact I didn't make any after the humiliation I suffered last year.

I quit smoking at midnight and one day later was searching feverishly through the house for stray butts! So I figure if I don't make any resolutions I won't break any. Makes sense, yes? (Regardless of what my wife says.)

Anyway, a Happy New Year to all you nice readers from Marge and I. May it be all that you wish and hope for.

MADEIRA PARK

Firemen's Christmas Party at new Legion Hall was a humdinger.

The firemen decorated the hall themselves and holly was donated by Kay White. The food, courtesy of the firemen's wives, was delicious; I tip my hat to them. Dennis Cotter provided a stereo and speakers with taped music, and this plus records donated by the firemen made for a hot musical party.

Old Santa showed later in the evening and each guest received a gift wrapped bottle of wine. Alvin Dribnenki took some hilarious pictures and I hope we get a chance to see them soon. To sum up, the food was great. the music wild and the company terrific.

GOOD CITIZEN AWARD

To Digby Porter who presented a credit card to Mark Myers allowing him free use of it for one year's gas for the Pender Harbour Mini Bus.

EGMONT

Splendid decorations by Diane Silvey and friends were a feature of the Christmas party held here on December 20.

The dinner was delicious and was followed by the telling of the Christmas Story by Egmont School students under the direction of Ron Fearn.

Pat Logue brought Santa to the party and another surprise was 'Jake the Peg' introduced by Frank Roosen.

The door prize was won by Gerry Bernhardt. Other prizes won were a centerpiece by Jean Silvey, a grocery hamper by Angus Silvey and a decorative basket by Mae Bathgate.

WELL DONE

Apropos of the unfortunate accident which Caroline Jeffries had Christmas morning, I was talking to an eyewitness about it and while many good people deserve credit for their participation in her rescue from the wreck he was high in his praise of Linda Curtiss and Bob Prest.

He said they did, a wonderful job of keeping the trapped girl calm and reassured while the rescue work went on. It is heartening to know that we can rely on so many fine people in any emergency. Well done to all of you.

WILL YE NO COME BACK AGAIN?

Christmas was a hectic time in the 'Wee Hoose' on Lagoon Road this year. Seven of our relatives came from Vancouver to spend a few days with us. Like the wise men of old, they came bearing gifts. (If they hadn't I would have turfed 'em out.) Joke! Joke! Honest! Anyway, as Marge said it was the best Christmas we ever had. I couldn't agree more.

Our company consisted of Marge's twin sister Margaret Bell and husband Maurice and another sister Vi Mallett and husband Dave. Two nieces, Karen Devlin and Wendy Heyman and Wendy's wee daughter Bronwen. Karen's boyfriend Dan Mercer rounded out the group. Dan sings and plays a mean guitar and entertained us royally. We all sang along with Dan and played it back on the new tape recorder I got from Marge and of course it sounded dreadful but no one cared.

It was wonderful to have such a nice gang with us and believe me we made merry. They have all gone home and the house seems so quiet now.

Thank you all for making this such a grand time. Let's do it again.

CHILDREN'S PICTURES

All you parents who had your children photographed at the kids Christmas Party can pick up your picture at the Royal Bank in Madeira Park. They are fifty cents each.

NEW YEAR'S PARTY

As I write this on the first day of the new year, the sun is streaming through our windows. What a magnificent day. I have a problem though, I'm supposed to remember everything that went on at the New Year's Party in the Community Hall in Madeira Park last night and early this morning. Oh boy, I'm even having trouble remembering my own name today.

Say, before I get too involved I have to tell you this. Marge went out for a walk this morning and returned home with a wallet she'd found containing one hundred and seventy dollars. That's the good news, now for the bad. She ignored my whimpered plea of 'finders, keepers' and gave it to local policeman Bill Van De Braak. Oh well, win some lose some as they say. The party? Right, it's coming back to me now.

The festivities started for us when we accepted an invitation to the Dribnenki home before the party started.

There was a very nice group of people present including most of our local firemen. Around ten p.m. we started to break up and leave for the party. Marge and I left first and were hardly on the highway, driving slowly because of the wet misty conditions, when a group of vehicles flashing their lights roared past us. I was still muttering about crazy drunken drivers when we got to the hall. Then we heard the fire siren. What happened is this. Seconds after we left the house they got a fire call and the so-called 'crazy drivers' were the firemen charging to the fire hall. (My apologies boys).

Fortunately it was only a chimney fire out on Frances Peninsula so the boys made it to the party well before midnight. We are surely fortunate to have such a dedicated group of men. Let's never take them for granted.

The party swung up to midnight with it's traditional 'Auld Lang Syne', then went crashing into 1975 to the blasting rhythms of the 'The Blues Kazoos'.

This band really socks out the music and I must confess it was a little too much for my ears, the happy revellers seemed to thrive on it. There was an excellent buffet supper on hand and most took advantage of it.

Us old folks went home around 2 a.m. but I understand the party carried on much longer than that. Thanks go to the hard working people of the Community Club who put the show on and who are no doubt facing the mammoth clean up job as I am writing this.

In closing, my thanks go out to all the nice folks who helped me produce this column last year. Let's make it bigger and better this year.

"HAVE YOU been a good girl?" Santa Claus asked this unidentified young lady at the Firemen's Christmas Party in Pender Harbour. After assuring the jolly old man she had been, Santa presented her (and everyone else at the party) with a bottle of wine.

Summer jobs again planned for local secondary pupils

GIBSONS — The provincial government has authorized village council to start planning a student summer employment program for 1975.

Last year, the municipality hired over 20 secondary school students under the department of labor's SWEEP program, under which the province re-imbursed the village for wages paid to the students.

In a letter submitted to council's Dec. 17 meeting, a department of labor spokesman said the SWEEP program would probably be repeated in 1975.

Although final guidelines had not been established on the type of work allowable under the scheme, he authorized council to make tentative long-range plans along similar lines to the 1974 SWEEP program.

Aldermen said they were happy with the projects completed by students last year under SWEEP and said the federal wharf and Gibsons Athletic Association would be priorities for student workers in 1975.

New Electric Rate Increases. Who they will affect, and why.

WHO:
The new electric rate increases will affect only those B.C. Hydro customers who:
1. are on non-residential rates, and
2. were not affected by the rate increases announced last July.

WHY:
Higher interest, labour and material costs have forced B.C. Hydro to increase electric rates for all categories of customers. When new rates were announced in July, most non-residential customers were not affected because their rates were still under review. This review has now been completed.

In 1962, a single rate was established for all residential customers served from Hydro's integrated transmission system. The latest changes basically establish a single rate for 12 existing non-residential categories.

HOW MUCH:
About 100,000 customers will be affected by the changes. The overall average increase in rates for these customers is approximately 18%. Some customers such as small stores and common use in apartment blocks will receive increases less than 18%.

Customers experiencing the larger increases are customers using larger volumes of electricity who have been purchasing these larger volumes at lower rates.

RATES:
Set out below is the rate (1220—applicable only in Zone I) which will apply to approximately 80,000 of the non-residential customers whose electric load normally falls below 35 kilowatts.

Rate: For a period of two months:
First 200 kwh per period @ 4.77c per kwh
Next 1800 kwh per period @ 3.27c per kwh
Next 12000 kwh per period @ 2.37c per kwh
All additional kwh per period @ 1.32c per kwh
Minimum Charge: Seven dollars and fifty cents ($7.50) for a period of two months.

Information about the new rates for other customers is available at Hydro's district offices.

WHEN:
All rate changes (except for irrigation customers) will become effective with the first full billing period after December 31, 1974. For example, a customer billed on a bi-monthly basis will first see an adjustment on the March or April 1975 bill. The new rate for irrigation customers will be effective in March 1975.

Come to the Saviour was theme of concert

BY REV. WILBERT ERICKSON

A delightful Christmas program, reminiscent of Christmas concerts of earlier days, under the direction of Mr. David Foubister and his Sunday school staff, was presented Sunday morning, Dec. 15, by the children of Bethel Baptist Sunday school, Sechelt. The Pioneer Girls had a part in the program, too.

'Come to the Saviour', was the theme of the program. Diana Peters was narrator. The program was in six parts — Prophets tell of His Coming, His Coming, The Shepherds Come, The Wise men came, Others have Come, We must Come. The congretation had a part as well, as everyone joined in singing the lovely Christmas carols.

Ava Bandi and Mark Slack played the offertory on saxophone and trumpet.

The White Gift offering was presented by the children in small bags and hung on the Christmas tree. These gifts will go to assist two nurses who have recently opened a Sunday school in Inuvik, N.W.T.

Light refreshments were served following the program when the church family mingled and got to know one another better over a cup of tea.

MINOR HOCKEY in Pender Harbour got a boost recently from the Pender Harbour Hotel Shuffleboard Club. Here Bill Van De Braak accepts a cheque for $60 from Marge Campbell and Sue Kammerle. The money was raised by the shuffleboard club at the turkey shoot. Later Van De Braak received a cheque for $100 from Edwin Reid also to aid minor hockey development.

Exciting new courses for Pender Harbour

BY KARIN HOEMBERG
886-2225

PENDER HARBOUR — The Pender Harbour area has some new exciting courses this semester.

BEAT THE BUDGET is the name of the game for 1975. Increased food prices and inflation are realities, and the calendar distributed by the Department of health tells us in clear language to take better care of ourselves. Gabriel Banyay has designed a course to meet these new needs.

Emphasis is on developing and utilizing the creative abilities of the homemaker in four essential areas: buying of meats, poultry, and fish; utilization of fresh vegetables and fruits; dietary do's and don'ts, and creating "gourmet dishes" from leftovers. It is a 20 hour course, beginning tonight and held every Wednesday 7:30-9:30 p.m. at Pender Harbour Secondary School, Home Ec Room.

Bruno Dombroski's popular Woodshops continue every Wednesday and Thursday 7-9 p.m. and Jack Tiernan instructs Badminton for Seniors every Monday 8-10 p.m.

A new course in Batik has just been started by Jackie Laloge. The students meet every Monday 7:30 at Pender Harbour Secondary School, Home Ec. Room.

In Madeira Park Elementary School three courses start tonight and go on every Wednesday for 10 weeks.

A new course in Painting with oil or water colors starts at 7:30 p.m. with Ada Priest as the instructor. She would like to see everybody who is interested in painting,

For 'greenhorn' Inlet pioneers

Raging Skookumchuck rapids made impressive neighbours

BY MARY TINKLEY

It was on a June day in 1947 when we boarded a boat train at Euston Station, London, as the first step of a plan to spend our retirement years in Canada.

For Charles Tinkley, it was the fulfilment of a life-long ambition. As a boy he had read "Settlers in Canada' and from that time it had been his dream to emigrate to Canada and farm; but fate,whose hand so often moves us around like pawns in a chess game, decreed otherwise. Through 46 years, while he worked in the treasurer's office of the Southern Railway, he never lost sight of his dream and when at last he retired, and the end of the war again made travel possible, we sold our home in Surrey and undertook the greatest adventure of our lives.

As the train sped through the English midlands, we discovered that the couple sitting opposite us were Canadians returning to British Columbia and we listened to all they could tell us about their lovely province on the Pacific coast. Before the train reached Liverpool, we had heard for the first time about the Sunshine Coast and we had made our first Canadian friends, for our companions were Ted and Frances Cook who were later to become our neighbours at Halfmoon Bay. However, when the Cooks told us the Sunshine Coast could be reached only by boat, we decided it would be too isolated for people like us who had lived most of our lives in a big city.

We visited the great cities of the east and as our train journeyed for five days and nights across wilderness and prairie and through the Rockies, we realized the beauty and the vastness of Canada. But it wasn't until the last morning in the train, when we raised the blinds of our sleeping compartment, that we new our search had not been in vain. We were somewhere up the Fraser Valley and we gazed out at a scene of such greenness and tranquility, that Charles murmured 'This is it!"

MOST ISOLATED

But we did not make our home in the Fraser Valley. Strange as it may seem, not only did we settle on the beautiful Sunshine Coast, but we bought a property at Doriston, one of its loneliest and most isolated settlements on Sechelt Inlet. We bought an eighteen foot boat which was to be our only means of transportation for the next six years. Sechelt, our nearest town, was sixteen miles south by water and to reach the post office and store at Egmont, four miles to the north, we had to navigate the Sechelt Rapids or Skookumchuck Narrows.

Skookumchuck is a Chinook Indian word meaning "strong water", for at these narrows when a big tide is running, the water hurls itself through the channel like a raging monster. The reason for this turbulence is that the entrance to the inlet is a bottleneck both in width and depth. Here the two mile inlet narrows to 500 feet and the depth is as little as six fathoms in places, while much of the inlet itself reaches a depth of 150 fathoms.

GREENHORNS

The community at Doriston was a small one consisting of the M & W Logging camp operated by Charlie McDermid and four families, the Gilmours, the Gerdins, the Pemhertons and the Schuetts. The men were fishermen, boatbuilders and loggers, all hardy types, experts at handling boats and used to the hard and lonely life of the coast.

They looked upon us as the greenest of greenhorns, totally unfitted for the pioneer life we had chosen, but they were unfailingly helpful and there was always a salmon for us when they came home from fishing or a roast of venison when they had brought down a deer.

HAZARDS

They never tired of warning us about the hazards of the Skookumchuck and stressed that the tide book must be our bible and that only a fool would take a boat through to Egmont without checking for a favourable tide. To drive home their warning, they planned a practical lesson. One day in June, when big tides were running, Sam and Harriet Pemberton took us in their fishboat and precisely at low slack, landed us at Rowland Point, a moss covered rock jutting out into narrowest part of the Skookumchuck. They hurried away in their boat before the tide turned, for during the next seven hours, there would be enough water pouring through the narrow channel to raise the tide sixteen feet throughout the twenty mile length of the inlet and its two branches.

For a short while, the water was ominously still and peaceful.

Gradually there was a movement of water towards the inlet, slowly at first, then speeding up faster and ever faster. When it reached its full force, it swept down into a trough, like a tiger crouching for the spring, then climbed up to break into a white fury. Swirling water formed into whirlpools which dragged everything which came within reach into their vortexes. Huge logs, carried along by the tide, were swung around and drawn downward out of sight as it they were no more than matchsticks.

RAMPAGING

Sitting there on the rock, only three feet from the rampaging waters, we ate our picnic supper and thought about the three Anderson sisters, who had disappeared during one of these big June tides, just a few years previously. Nothing had ever been found of them except their wrecked boat and a straw hat floating on the water. If they had misread the tide book and tried to go through when a tide such as this was running, it was easy to understand that they never stood a chance.

As the tide abated and the water grew calm again, the Pemberton's fishboat appeared around the bluffs to pick us up. After our seven hour lesson, we were sobered by the thought of the treacherous stretch of water which we would have to navigate at least once a week to get stores and mail.

One thing we know for sure; we would never take chances with the Skookumchuck or pit our puny strength against such ruthless power as we had witnessed on that summer afternoon.

EASY NOW

Nowadays it is easy for any resident or tourist to witness this impressive sight. There is a good blacktopped road as far as Egmont, from where 1½ miles of trail takes the visitor right to the viewpoint beside the Skookumchuck which has now been set aside for a public park. But to see the rapids at their most awesome, the visitor should check for a big tide such as can be found in June and should plan to be at the site about halfway between low and high slack. Times of tides at the Skookumchuck are more than an hour later than at Point Atkinson.

Sea lion causing problems

WEST SECHELT — A sea lion made an unscheduled stop on the beach here and residents wish it would go away.

The dead sea lion washed up on the beach January 2 and tides since then have pushed it farther up onto the beach. Residents in the area are becoming concerned the animal may become a health hazard.

Sea Lions fall under federal jurisdiction, a spokesman for the Pacific Biological station in Nanaimo told The Times. The Times contacted federal fisheries officer Ray Kraft who said he would look into the possibility of getting the animal removed.

The sea lion is about ten feet long and has an estimated weight of about 900 pounds.

"I don't have the facilities to move the animal," Kraft said, "what we need is a good samaritan to come along in a boat, throw a line around it and pull it off the beach."

Carollers create diversion while thieves at work

DAVIS BAY — While two young Christmas carollers were serenading the occupants of the Roger Hocknell home Dec. 21, two accomplices casually walked in through the back door and stole the family's stock of Christmas 'cheer', police told The Times.

In all, the tuneful thieves made off with four bottles of wine, a bottle of vermouth, four bottles of cola and a case-and-a-half of beer.

After a brief investigation, RCMP recovered the liquor and identified the culprits, all juveniles.

Woman drowns in Paq Lake

PENDER HARBOUR — a 52 year old Madeira Park woman was found drowned in Paq Lake Dec. 22.

Her body was sighted from a helicopter called in from Victoria to aid police in a full-scale search for the woman.

Adeline Bourne was reported missing by her son, Ken, after she left her mobile home on foot Dec. 21 and failed to return.

The helicopter brought tracker dogs to the search area and had just taken off to circle the scene when the pilot spotted Mrs. Bourne's body.

Coroner John Harvey has not yet announced whether an inquiry will be called.

Wildlife Club seeks juniors

GIBSONS — Gibsons Wildlife Club is on the lookout for new members for its junior program.

The juniors, between 12 and 16 years of age, learn marksmanship, firearms safety, canoeing, hiking and a wide range of other outdoor skills.

Andy Anderson is the coach.

Parents interested in enrolling their children in the junior program should have them attend one of the juniors' regular Monday meetings. They run from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Gibsons Wildlife Club clubhouse on Highway 101 opposite Seaview Cemetery.

Now from Hallmark, decorative plaques to bring a smile, a thought or a little color into your world. Miss Dee's, Sechelt.

The Leisure Outlook This Week

For Jack Nicholson . . .

From rags to riches just part of the role

Jack Nicholson, who has appeared in screen roles looking like a battered Raggedy Andy throwaway, gets to discard the tattered rags and assimilate a style much closer to his off-screen personality — a sophisticated and elegant fashion-conscious gentleman in his role as a Thirties detective in "Chinatown."

Nicholson plays an elegantly attired private eye opposite Faye Dunaway in Paramount Pictures' "Chinatown," a Robert Evans production directed on Los Angeles locations by Roman Polanski ("Rosemary's Baby").

Anthea Sylbert, who designed Nicholson's Fifties clothes in "Cardinal Knowledge," has created a 1937 wardrobe featuring three-piece, double breasted suits with chalk stripes, half-belted, action-back jackets, wide-knee pants, peaked lapels, wing-tip shoes and lots of hats. In a bedroom scene with Faye, Jack wears maroon silk pajamas with initialed cuffs.

It's a sumptuous and welcome change of look for Nicholson, who hasn't had much of a fling at fashion in most of his movie roles — the alcoholic Southern lawyer with wrinkled seersucker suit in "Easy Rider," the unkempt oil rigger in "Five Easy Pieces" or the uniformed sailor in "The Last Detail."

Off-screen Nicholson is quite fashion-conscious and shops at the chic men's stores. He arranged to keep his "Chinatown" wardrobe after filming was completed. "I've been wearing this stuff for years," he commented.

At film society . . .

Gallons of blood too much for some

EL TOPO proved to be too much of an ordeal for about half a dozen of the audience who left before the film ended. For all who stayed, viewing the film proved to be a demanding experience in a way similar to and yet more extreme than seeing LAST YEAR IN MARIENBAD or THE DISCREET CHARM OF THE BOURGEOISIE.

Few if any of the audience were not — possibly still are — grasping for connections. Thematically, the film was a stunning Biblical allegory, somewhat akin to a Christianized SATYRICON in the guise of a Western.

The violence, although often shocking with gallons of blood spurting yards into the air after almost every gunshot was so far removed from anything more than a caricature that I could not take it seriously enough to be offended or even unduly disturbed by it.

For me, it was simply one of the film's many passages into the rather murky realm of the surreal. Had the film been here longer than a single engagement, I would certainly have seen it again.

BELLE DU JOUR is not, however, so classified because of any violence or gross sexual simulations, but rather because of the subject matter the essence of which is a housewife's engagement with the oldest profession on a part-time basis for some extra spending money.

Like nearly all of the Film Society's presentations, BELLE DU JOUR is not at all suitable for children. It is an amusing film of great charm which Elliot Stein in Sight and Sound called, "a masterpiece, technically Bunuels most accomplished free-flowing work . . . the many faceted and perfect Golden Bowl which crowns a life's work." Please note that this film will be playing Wednesday, January 8 (tonight). Next week's film, ALEXANDER NEVSKY will be screened on Tuesday, January 14.

ALEXANDER NEVSKY was the first sound film by Sergei Eisenstein and the only one he completed in Russia (in 1938) during the pre-war decade. The film is an historical spectacle set in thirteenth century Russia when the Novgorod Prince Alexander Nevsky defeated the Baltic Teutonic Order freeing the Russian people from the Mongolian yoke. This masterpiece became a symbol of Soviet unity in the face of the Nazi menace.

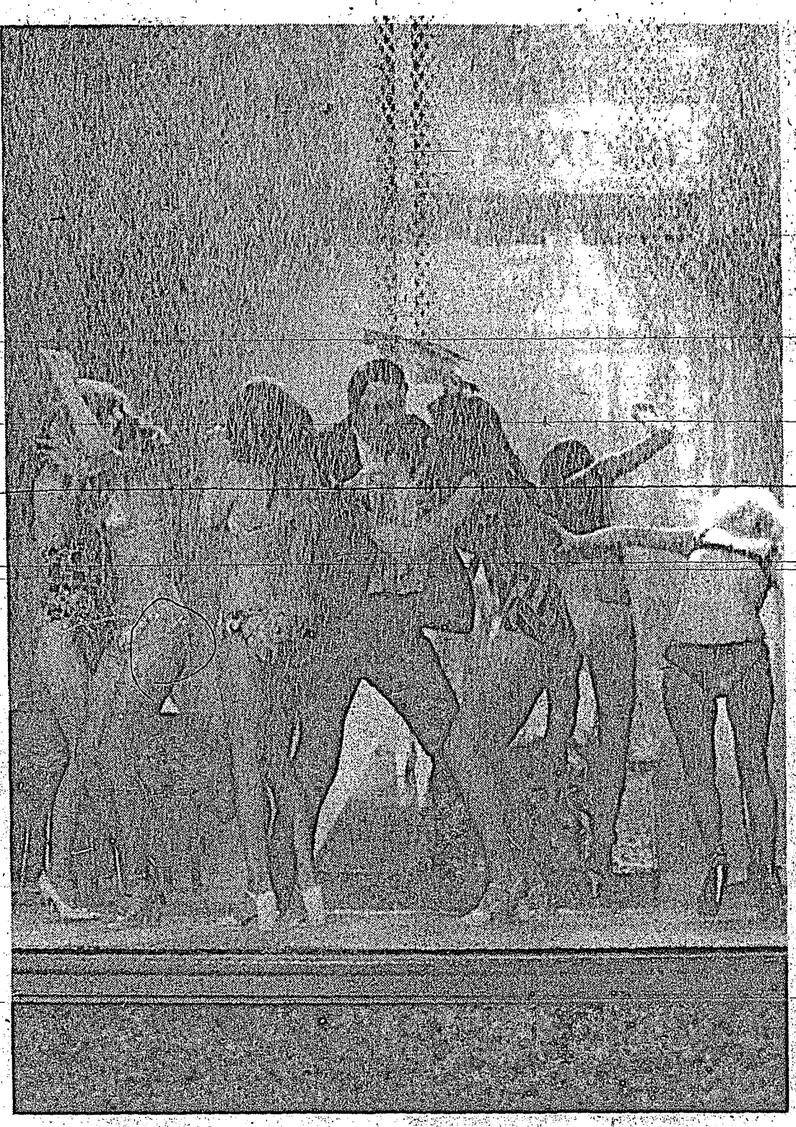
The film features the most famous of all Soviet actors, Nicolai Cherkassov, in the title role. This splendid romantic actor was also featured in Eisenstein's incomplete IVAN THE TERRIBLE as well as in DON QUIXOTE which the Film Society screened in its Sunday afternoon series four years ago.

As with STRIKE, OCTOBER and THE BATTLESHIP POTEMKIN, Eisenstein's cameraman was the renowned Eduord Tisse whose quick eye and brilliant choice of shot, especially in action photography, had been amply demonstrated while he served as newsreel cameraman in the service of the Russian revolution. He knew precisely which lens would bring the right degree of tone, while his filters turned summer into winter for the famous 'Battle on the Ice' in ALEXANDER NEVSKY.

In addition to the spectacle so well captured by Tisse's superb camerawork and Cherkassov's fine performance in the title role, ALEXANDER NEVSKY features the brilliantly integrated musical score of Sergei Prokofiev. The composer exploited to the full the possibilities of his medium and communicated to the screen picture a contemporary' view of the historical incidents. The collaboration between the director and the composer was so close and Prokofiev's musical expression so overpowering that Eisenstein composed parts of his film on the basis of the music, reversing the usual procedure. Thus, in the course of a year's collaboration, a work arose worthy of both their names.

Please note the remaining films for January are alternatively on Wednesday and Tuesday as follows: THE DEVILS (Restricted; Warning Religious documentary, brutal and terrifying) will play on January 22, THE WORLD OF APU on Tuesday, January 28.

Thereafter, Film Society screenings will be on Tuesday evenings rather than Wednesdays with the single exception of KAMOURASKA which is scheduled to play on Wednesday, March 26. I am sorry if these changes inconvenience any of our patrons.



IT NEVER rains but it pours, especially in Carry On movies. This scene is from Carry On Girls, the twenty-fifth in the series of highly successful carry-on movies. Carry on Girls will be showing at the Twilight Theatre January 9 and 10.

New faces in chamber

Sechelt and District Chamber of Commerce has added two new members.

At the last meeting Wes Klaus of Sechelt Western Drugs and Barry Innes of Sechelt Taxi were accepted as new members.

In other Chamber of Commerce news, Morgan Thompson, head of the tourist committee, will be approaching the mayor of Gibsons about sharing in the cost of printing the Sunshine Coast black books, a color brochure distributed locally and in other centres for tourist information.

Thompson is to make his report at the next regular meeting. If the village of Sechelt will not share in the cost, Thompson said, then it was doubtful the book would get printed.

Under the plan, half the printing cost would be picked up by the government and the remainder locally. That would amount to $1,566 each for the chamber and for Gibsons. That would bring 20,000 copies of the booklet to the Peninsula.

Dump mess costs money

Untidy garbage dump users are costing themselves and everyone else money.

"It would be nice of the people who have to pay for the dumps would make proper use of them," regional chairman Frank West said, "because not using them properly means more cost to the people."

West made his comments after the board heard a proposal to close the garbage dumps to all but the commercial garbage carriers. The board was told there is no order to where garbage is thrown at the dumps.

The board decided against closing the dumps to the public, but added, "Perhaps we should start a publicity campaign telling the public it is to their advantage to use the garbage dump properly."

Dump maintenance costs jumped $14,000 this year.

WINDING UP the holiday season in the way they know best are the Country Stars Square Dance Club. The club held their annual Christmas square dance December 20 in the Golf Club. Callers Maurice Hemstreet and Harry Robertson were at the microphone to give the dancers their work-outs. Here a square circles to, "Everybody promenade!"

Squaringly yours

By Maurice Hemstreet 885-3359

Hello, fellow square dancers, relatives and friends. Here we go into another new year. With 1974 behind us and 1975 ahead of us, here's hope's of a better year for everyone, in health, prosperity and, of course, a lot of good clean fun and the only way that I know of having good clean fun is to join your closest square dance club. Try it. Join it and have fun.

Once again the Country Stars squared three sets at St. Hilda's Church Hall on New Years Eve to square dance out the old year and square dance in the New Year. This was done with such style, grace and a certain flair, that this year will be better, square dance wise, for everyone. I heard one comment that really pleased me and that was we didn't know that we could have so much fun without the presence of alcohol, especially on New Years Eve.

You ask, what really happened on New Years Eve Dec. 31 1974? Well, with caller Harry Robertson leading off at 8:30 p.m. with one of his lively patter calls. The floor came to life with three sets of square dancers really dancing up a storm. And what with Harry and myself going steady, call for call, it was almost a marathon of square dancing for six hours. Yes we finally had a grand circle at about twenty to three the next morning and said Happy New Year to all.

We did have one incident that wasn't or rather didn't quite work the way Harry and I had planned. You see I had this piece of netting; but when we unravelled the derned stuff we found that it was only about two feet wide, so then came the brain wave. Run a cord thru the centre fasten up the four corners to make a bigger basket to hold the balloons, the idea was great, with the centre cord fastened at one end with a slip knot with a balloon on the end hanging down. The idea was that Harry at midnight, would jump up, grab the balloon, take the knot out, then Cathy Berry at the other end was to pull out the cord thus opening the middle of the net. The theory was good. The balloons would naturally fall down.

But Harry couldn't jump high enough to get hold of the balloon that held the knot. After three trys he made it. By now we were half way through Aulde Lang Syne. He signalled Cathy to pull the cord out but it tangled up half way through and the balloons came merrily floating down one at a time. So with one great desperate attempt, Cathy gave a tremendous pull and down came net, balloons and all heck broke loose as I grabbed for the microphone as the clock struck twelve, and yelled "HAPPY NEW YEAR."

At this time, on behalf of the Country Stars square dance club, a large thank you to all the ladies that catered to the sit down dinner. The food was terrific, and to all others that helped we are glad you did, so Happy New Year one and all. This is the end of this here column.

Pre-natal classes not for ladies only

Pre-natal classes are not for ladies only.

Hilda Costerton of Coast Garibaldi Health Unit said, "We especially welcome the fathers to the classes. One of the men who took our classes recently told me: 'If a man wants his wife to have an easy labour, he should be with her'. We really encourage the men to come out."

She said, "actually it's the exception now when a woman comes to the class without her husband. I think they get a great deal more out of the classes when both are present.

Mrs. Costerton is one of the two ladies who will be running pre-natal classes. In Gibsons the classes start January 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the Coast Garibaldi Health Unit.

In Sechelt, classes start January 14 at 7:30 p.m. in Sechelt Elementary. The Gibsons classes will be instructed by Susan Frizzell and the Sechelt classes by Mrs. Costerton. They run for about six sessions, Mrs. Costerton said.

She explained the classes dealt with nutrition, the new baby, breast feeding, two classes on labour and even a visit to the hospital.

"We can take any number of people in the classes," she said, "there is no charge for the classes, but there is a small charge for coffee."

More information about the classes may be obtained from the health unit at 886-2228.

Hydro boosts commercial power rates

Inflation has taken one more swipe at the businessman. Effective Dec. 31, B.C. Hydro raised the price of electricity to non-resident users.

According to the power authority; "The rate adjustments . . . will provide additional revenue for Hydro to help meet rising costs."

Small businesses such as stores and apartment blocks can expect to see an approximate increase of 18 percent on their next bi monthly billing, said Hydro. Altogether, about 100,000 customers will be affected by the price boost.

Non-residential users were unaffected by Hydro's last rate adjustment in July, 1974, when increased electricity costs were announced for residential, large industrial and bulk customers.

Commenting on the need for rate changes, B.C. Hydro general manager J. Norman Olsen cited increasing costs of financing, construction and operation.

"In addition to higher wages and salaries, material costs and interest rates, we have been faced with heavy increases in fuel costs and new expenditures for environmental protection measures," he said.

Board to press for cats eyes on Highway 101

The regional board wants 'cats eyes' to watch out for local drivers.

The board passed a resolution at their last meeting to press the Department of Highways for cats eyes, centre line reflectors, on Highway 101 as part of the current highway upgrading program.

The suggestion came out of the board's planning committee meeting and was passed at the regular board meeting.

The committee recommended the reflectors saying they were a significant safety feature on the highways.

The department of highways had written a letter to the board stating they were unwilling to install centre line reflectors on Highway 101 as, "there are roads in the Lower Mainland which would have a higher priority."

The committee pointed out the maximum cost of these reflectors was $1,000 a mile and felt, "the added safety that would result from their installation is well worth the amount."

Furthermore, the committee noted, they did not agree with the department's justification for not installing the reflectors.

Calculator stolen

SECHELT — Thieves broke into Roy Wagenaar's land survey office on Wharf Road shortly after Christmas and made off with a Bomar electronic hand calculator.

The break-in was discovered Dec. 20. Police believe the theft took place Dec. 27 or 28.

Thieves take cash, equipment

Between $30 and $40 in change was stolen from the Homestead Drive-in at Wilson Creek over the holidays when thieves entered the restaurant and broke open a cigarette machine.

Police said the break-in took place between Dec. 22 and 27, while the restaurant was closed down.

An otoscope, used in ear examinations, was reported stolen from the emergency room at St. Mary's Hospital on Christmas day.

The device, valued at $80, was contained in a small, black, leather case.

Information about either of the above thefts should be communicated to the Sechelt RCMP detachment.

Christmas hampers distributed . . .

Elves Club aids needy families on the coast

A local group of anonymous benefactors played Santa Claus this year to 128 needy families on the coast, distributing Christmas food hampers, toys and gifts.

In their annual bid to brighten the festive season for the area's underprivileged, Sunshine Coast Elves Club members collected and distributed no less than 3,915 food items and 637 toys and gifts to recipients suggested to them by the department of human resources and other community service organizations.

On Christmas Day, the Elves passed out rosebuds to patients at St. Mary's Hospital.

At one point, said a spokesman, the club was running disasterously low on food items, "when Elphinstone Recreation Group came to our rescue with a second, very large cash donation."

Club members donate one cent per day and one food item per month towards the annual Christmas hamper project. Sizeable donations of goods and cash were also received from outside individuals and organizations.

Madeira Park Elementary School students donated three large boxes of food items, said the spokesman, and one family contributed 192 tins of luncheon meat.

Each of the 128 hampers contained fruit juice, coffee, meat, fish, jam, milk, bread, cranberries, pickles, soup, vegetables, fruit, candy, nuts, Christmas pudding, Christmas cake, turkey, gifts and toys.

Gibsons Volunteer Fire Department repaired and contributed 134 toys for the project.

The Elves Club expressed thanks to the following individuals and oragnizations for their contributions.

Roberts Creek Legion, Gibsons Lions Club, Simpsons Sears, Independent Order of Foresters, Gibsons Building Supplies, Ken's Lucky Dollar, Dan Wheeler Esso, Gibsons Bank of Montreal staff, Sechelt Legion, B.C. Ferries employees at Langdale, Sechelt Legion Ladies' Auxiliary, Gibsons Legion Ladies' Auxiliary.

Macleods store, Morgan's Men's Wear, Campbell's Variety, Alvaro Logging Co., Marcraft, Mack's Nursery, Boutin Bulldozing, Elphinstone Co-Op, Lethercrafts, Tyee Airways, Larry's Drywall Services.

Sechelt's Shop-Easy store supplied 100 lbs. of candy. Bread was donated by the Mother Hubbard Bakery and the Jack and Jill Playschool contributed candy canes and oranges.

Two basket hampers were donated by Gibsons Kinette Club.

The Elves were particularly grateful to Sechelt Legion, Gibsons United Church and Benner's Furniture store in Sechelt for allowing use of their premises as a drop-off depot.

The Elves spokesman said the club appreciated the efforts of the many volunteer drivers who made the hamper deliveries from Port Mellon to Pender Harbour.

Local residents interested in joining the Elves Club and contributing food and gift items for next year's Christmas hamper project should write: Sunshine Coast Elves Club, c-o Gibsons United Church, Gibsons.

The organization is non-profit and non-religious.

PREVIOUSLY UNPUBLISHED photograph shows the interior of the first church built on the Sechelt Indian Reserve. Our Lady of the Rosary Church was built in 1889-90 under the supervision of Joseph Bouillon who purchased 160 acres of land on what was to be named Wakefield Creek in West Sechelt. Price was $160. The twin-towered church was later destroyed by fire.

Land on Wakefield Creek purchased for $1 an acre

BY HELEN DAWE

On Dec. 18, 1889, Mr. Joseph Bouillon applied to pre-empt land in West Sechelt at the mouth of a creek then without an English name, but known today as Wakefield. He paid the Crown the sum of $160 and on May 2, 1895 received title to 160 acres described as D.L. 1310, Group 1, N.W.D.

Less than two months prior to the pre-emption, on Oct. 26, 1889, Rev. Paul Durieu, O.M.I., arrived at the village of the "Sischelles", i.e. Sechelts. He brought with him the building materials to be used in the erection of a great twin-towered church which had been initiated and financed by the notable enthusiasm and energies of the combined five septs of the Sechelt Indian Nation.

Father Durieu on that day was accompanied by three carpenters and by a man whom he described as a good "architecte", M. Joseph Bouillon, Belgian by birth. The priest's history of the church was published in the French language in Sept. 1890. The dictionary tells me that the French word 'architects' may be translated as either arthitect or master-builder, but I do not know into which category Bouillon fell.

Williams 1893 Directory for Vancouver listed Joseph Boillion as a contractor at 1320 Seymour Street. Arthur M. Bouillon was entered at the same address and described in the 1892 directory as a draughtsman employed by Williams Bros. and Dawson, surveyors and civil engineers, Vancouver.

Although I have no precise evidence that the Joseph Bouillon who pre-empted land at Wakefield Creek is identical with the Vancouver contractor or the architect referred to in the "Missions" of the Oblate Order, it would seem reasonable to assume that they are one and the same person.

SUPERVISOR

Under date of May 10, 1933, Rev. Ed. Maillard, O.M.I., then priest at the Indian Mission, Sechelt, wrote a note in answer to a query made by Major Matthews, Vancouver City Archivist. Father Maillard said that "A little more than forty years ago Bishop Durieu, O.M.I., of New Westminster, was blessing a new seminary at New Westminster, a seminary for young boys studying for the priesthood. This seminary had been built by the Sechelt Indians under the supervision of a white man, Mr. Boullion, a good Frenchman."

The 1890 volume of the Oblate "Missions" states that the seminary was inaugurated in 1895 with eight students under the leadership of Father Emile Bunoz. Bishop Bunoz later wrote an account of the occasion in the 1890s when he was present in Sechelt with Bishop Durieu at the time the Indian people dug the ditch which drained the low area behind their row of houses fronting on Trail Bay. Many non-Indians today erroneously refer to this drainage ditch as the beginnings of an attempted boat canal between Porpoise Bay and Sechelt.

The church which Joseph Bouillon helped construct was blessed in June 1890 under the name Our Lady of the Rosary and the abbreviation "O.L. of Rosary" was carved in large letters above the main alter. The dedication services at Sechelt were described in considerable detail by the Vancouver papers, but these accounts were not altogether reliable. The Daily World named the architect as "Mr. A. Boullion," while The News Advertiser called him Mr. A. Boulton."

Throughout the 1890s the creek running through Joseph Bouillon's land was known as Bouillon's Creek, but this local name was never made official. Mrs. Ada Dawe, now close to 81 years of age, can remember that her father, T.J. Cook, used to take a small boat up to Bouillon's Creek to obtain water when the Cook family's well ran dry in the summers around the turn of the century.

WAKEFIELD

By 1902 W.J. Wakefield was listed in the Sechelt section of the B.C. Directory. Through the ensuing years up to 1923 his occupation was given variously as farmer, rancher, and hand logger. He was primarily engaged in mixed farming on land beside the creek in West Sechelt, where he kept chickens, cows and pigs. Gradually local people substituted the name Wakefield Creek for the earlier nomenclature.

In 1930 the B.C. Dept. of Lands issued an official georgraphical gazetter of the province, which still did not list Wakefield Creek. However, the 1953 gazetteer does include Wakefield Creek, describing it as flowing SE. and S. into Strait of Georgia, W. of Sechelt.

In mid-August 1915 Wakefield's neighbours laid complaints against him because his pigs were creating a nuisance in their vegetable patches. The pigs destroyed tomatoes, cabbages and potatoes in the garden of Mrs. Jane Nickson, cabbages and carrots at Fred Deal's home, and other produce at the J. McIntyre and Wm. J. Gugin properties.

F.S. Deal and T. Douglas Sutherland were both sons-in-law of Mrs. Nickson, being married respectively to her daughters Katie and Rena. Major Sutherland, said to have once been a tea-planter in Ceylon, came to the Sunshine Coast after military service during the First World War.

He purchased the general store at Egmont from Len Bailey, then sold it to George Hatashita in 1921. In 1926 Douglas Sutherland was entered in the Sechelt Directory as a broker. By 1927 he was a game constable for the B.C. Provincial Police and in the 1930s he was a full police constable. In this capacity he was well-known from Seaside Park to Lasqueti Island.

Major Sutherland employed Hector McDonald, master craftsman, to build a beautiful log house at Wakefield Creek and resided there for many years. During the 1939-1945 war he served in Europe with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel. He died on July 6, 1946, survived by his wife and a son, Douglas.

LICENSED

By 1940 Charles F. Reda had converted the former Sutherland home into a beer parlour, which he operated under the name of Wakefield Inn until about 1945, when Mr. and Mrs. George Wardrope took over as proprietors. They employed Mr. Richard Kline as resident manager and themselves visited Sechelt from Vancouver on summer weekends. On June 30, 1956 the Wardropes gave a party celebrating their eleventh anniversary as owners of Wakefield Inn.

Several families settled near both salt water and Wakefield Creek during the period 1915-1920. These included Mr. and Mrs. N.L. Marris at Bingham's Beach, Dr. & Mrs. Alex Findlay and their three children just east of the Bouillon pre-emption, and many others farther inland whose stories should one day be put on record. Japanese crews had earlier taken out shingle bolts in the area.

Prior to the First World War there was no road from the centre of Sechelt village to Wakefield. In 1912-1913 three students, Louis Molberg and two Morse boys, walked daily from Norwest Bay to the Sechelt school, travelling along the beach and crossing Wakefield Creek on a log. They were never absent and never tardy. Soon the isolation diminished and the B.C. Public Works Report for the year April 1916 to March 1917 reported that a bridge 50 ft. by 14 ft. had been installed over Wakefield Creek.

TRUE PIONEERS

Of course it was the Indian people of Sechelt who were the true pioneers. Visitors to the Centennial Museum in Vancouver can see there an ancient mortuary stone known officially as the Sechelt Image. This is a carving pecked in igneous rock of a squatting human figure whose arms clasp a child in front. Several accounts exist as to the origin of the image. One legend has it that an Indian boy was playing on the beach at Wakefield, where he was captured by a raiding party from upcoast. When his mother learned of the child's death she drowned herself. The grief-stricken husband had a likeness of his wife and son carved as a memorial.

DONATION OF PARKLAND

On Stirling Arm at Sprout Lake a fine donation of 130 acres of wooded land to be named Fossil Provincial Park has been made by Mr. and Mrs. F. Armour Ford of Port Alberni. Beside having 5,000 feet of lake frontage with sandy beaches it is traversed by a creek having an impressive water fall.
