Massive logging operation planned for Goliath Bay

By KERRA LOCKHART

Crown Zellerback Canada Ltd. has applied to the provincial Lands Branch for a 11,500-foot foreshore lease in Goliath Bay where the company wants to build a multi-million dollar log sorting, booming and barging centre.

Goliath Bay, six miles north-east of Egmont, is Crown Zellerbach's second choice for the facility which would be an intermediary collection point for logs from the northern B.C. coast on their way to the company's mills in Elk Falls and along the Fraser River.

The company's original application to lease 203 acres of crown land on Hotham Sound near Saltery Bay was turned down recently by the Powell River Regional District on the advice of environmental agencies which said the company's operations could serious damage the local oyster seed beds which are one of only two such breeding areas in coastal waters.

In making a slide and written submission to Thursday's regional board meeting, Crown Zellerback spokesman Bill McGee told the directors, "It's a fact that we have received verbal assurance from the agencies involved that our changes of getting Goliath Bay approved are good."

Besides that advantages of Goliath Bay to the company, McGee said, the site is advantageous as there is neither sports fishing in the area nor any significant spawning grounds. In addition, McGee added, there are no private home owners in the bay who would be disturbed by noise.

"Well, they havent't got any verbal approval from me," said local Fisheries Officer Ray Kraft the next afternoon. "And I beg to differ. I think it's a very valuable spawning area. There's shell fish, salmon and bottom fishing. I'm of the opinion that it's an excellent recreation area. Why spoil it with log sorting? It's a lovely place."

Kraft said that while the Habitat Protection Branch of the Department of the Environment has taken an initial look at Goliath Bay they have yet to make any recommendations.

"There's two points I'd like to emphasize," McGee said at the September 29 board meeting. "There's 40 jobs there and 40 jobs usually generate another 80 jobs in support industries. All workers, emphasized McGee, would be hired locally and taken daily to Goliath Bay by launch.

Of the 40 jobs Crown Zellerbach promised to create in Hotham Sound "at least 50 per cent," would be Powell River area residents, said a company spokesman last January.

The second point made by McGee to the eight directors was that Crown Zellerbach is very environmentally conscious.

"We expect debris control to be one of the main features of our operation, McGee said, adding the Goliath Bay facility would virtually eliminate Crown Zellerbach's log booms along the B.C. Coast.

As outlinnd by McGee, logs from the Queen Charlottes, Kitimat, and Bella Coola would be barged to Goliath Bay where the logs would be sorted on a raceway according to size and species, after being sorted in a standing boom for a maximum of 20 days.

The logs would then be bundled in bunks and looded by a massive overhead crane onto barges for transportation to the various mills.

A floating debris burner would be added to destroy waste caused by the operation.

The crane, to be built on a steep slope of Goliath Bay, is still in the development stage.

Other shore installations would include an administration building, repair shop, generating plants, fuel tanks, and fresh water and bilge tanks.

Crown Zellerbach says all necessary pollution control methods would be taken and no chemicals would be discharged into Goliath Bay.

The operation, to cost $2.2 million, is part of Crown Zellerbach's $10 million modernization scheme, partially caused by the decreasing availability of Douglas Fir. Crown Zellerbach's mills are not equipped to handle the smaller hemlock and balsam trees which are now frequently logged.

McGee Says his company wants approval for the Goliath Bay undertaking by the end of this year so the site can be in operation by the middle of 1978.

Board directors received his presentation without comment and will not wait to hear from the Lands Branch.

'Something has to be done about Ruby Lake'

A permanent resident of Ruby Lake claims the use of high speed power boats by summer cottagers is contaminating his drinking water and driving wildlife from the lake.

However, local Health and Fisheries officers contradicted his statements.

"Something has to be done and something done soon", said the resident, Don Colwill, speaking at last week's regional board meeting.

"The power boats are chasing everything off our lake. Some people are outdoing each other to get better boats with bigger motors. They started out with rowboats; now it's 450 h.p. motors. It's ridiculous."

There are three permanent homeowners on Ruby Lake and 35 summer residents, many of whom lease crown land.

In asking the area directors to ban outboard motors from Ruby Lake, the Holwell Road resident produced a certificate from the Coast-Garibaldi Health Unit advising him to treat his drinking water as a sample revealed a "slight bacterial contamination."

This year is the first time, Colwill told the directors, that he has ever had to boil his water.

Colwill said that adding to the contamination p. there were people who camped on the lake's uninhabited islands, using them as a summer base for water skiing. All their waste, he said went directly into the lake.

Continued Colwill: "We have swans and otters up there. There were only 12 loons on the lake this year compared to 18 the year before."

He also expressed concern that power boats might threaten a trout spawning channel in the small stream connecting Ruby with Sakinaw Lake.

The three year-round residents "are really uptight" about the situation, Colwill informed the board.

Contacted the next day, Coast-Garibaldi Health Officer Jim Brookes said Colwill's two over five coliform reading "is not that great. A lot of it is natural and comes from animals and vegetation. We recommend treatment with any open source of drinking water."

Bacterial pollution, Brookes said, could not be caused by outboard motors. "We'd be looking more at oil scum," he said.

"People camping on the islands can be a problem if someone is taking their drinking water from close by, but gradually this contamination will die down especially with such a large body of water as Ruby Lake."

Fisheries Officer Ray Kraft also doubted the power boats were harming the trout spawning stream. "In my opinion a bit of pollution normally doesn't affect the fish," he said.

In an apparent contradition to Colwill's assertion that all three permanent residents are concerned about the power boats, the regional board Thursday acknowledged receipt of a letter from Gordon Mullins, who is also a year round resident on Ruby Lake. Mullins opposed placing any restriction on the size of boat motors permitted on the lake.

A second letter from Don Pifer of North Vancouver on behalf of the Ruby Lake Cabin Owners Association repeated this objection. Pifer said the members of his group had chosen Ruby Lake "with the understanding that the lake could be used for all types of water sports."

Any move by the board to restrict the size of outboards would be objected to "strenuously" by the association, Pifer warned.

Cabin owners, replied Colwill, could leave at any time. "The people who live there permanently can't just walk out."

Barry Pearson of Area C asked Colwill

Death by misadventure

A Gibsons man, whose body went undetected for hours as it lay pinned under a motorcycle died by "misadventure," a coroner's jury decided last week.

James McDonough, 30, was killed July 24 when the 500 cc Honda ridden by himself and James Holland, also of Gibsons, vered into the bush near Camp Byng on the Lower Road. An autopsy revealed McDonough had a blood-alcohol reading .19.

The inquest, originally convened September 20, was adjourned for one week so jury members could view the accident site.

Holland, 34, was the prime witness at the inquiry. He said McDonough drank most of that day but that he himself had consumed only three bottles of beer. Holland tesified that the younger man did not appear to be drunk.

On the afternoon of July 24, said Holland, the two motorcycled to Seaview Market in Roberts Creek where McDonough left to visit some nearby friends.

On his return, Holland started to drive his bike up the Lower Road back towards Gibsons, but while stopped for a few minutes McDonough took over the controls. The dead man had no driver's licence.

Suddenly, McDonough swerved onto the gravel shoulder of the road and Holland told the jury he was thrown from the bike and lay uncouncious on the side of the road. He was found nearly four hours later, just after 9 p.m., 124 feet from the site of the accident.

McDonough's body was discovered at 1:30 a.m. the next morning hidden in dense brush.

One question never resolved by the jury was what actually happened to the motorcycle helmets Holland said the two men were wearing.

According to Holland he had on a purple helmet but it was absent when he was taken to hospital in Sechelt. The helmet was later discovered a few yards from McDonough's body. The black helmet, said to be worn by the deceased, has never been found.

Coroner John Harvey reminded Holland several times he was under oath and at one point adjourned the September 20 hearing to speak privately to the witness.

In finding McDonough's death unnatural but accidental, the jury laid no blame and made no recommendations.

RCMP are still investigating the incident and would like anyone who saw the two men, especially in Roberts Creek, to contact the Gibsons detachment.

Regional directors swallow Granthams water decision

Area directors Thursday accepted without comment Granthams Landing's decision not to turn over their water system to the Regional District.

After weeks of often bitter debate, area residents voted 71-30 September 17 to retain control of their water, going against the recommendations of trustees of the Granthams Landing Improvement District.

In other regional board business, directors decided to ask the village of Sechelt to undertake the financing of a double ambulance carport for St. Mary's Hospital.

The Ministry of Health had requested the Regional District to borrow money for the construction, stating that the ministry would repay the loan through rental of the building.

Peter Hoemberg, the district's representative on the hospital board, said the undertaking would involve the Regional District in an "administrative hassle". Ambulance carports are not part of the Regional District's function, he said.

The village council, he said, has the authority to do such work and, with any luck, might even make some money out of the arrangement.

The directors also gave reconsideration and adoption to Bylaw 119 which will permit a condominium development in Secret Cove.

Highways Dept. resumes battle with Cold Mountain Pottery group

Members of the Cold Mountain Pottery group thought they had won their battle with the Department of Highways a year ago. But a legislative change has turned the tables, and Highways is once again demanding a 100 foot road allowance through the group's Roberts Creek property.

The local Highways Department, citing September amendments to the Strata Title Act, insists the right-of-way be set aside for possible future use through Cold Mountain's 37 acres at the top of Henderson Road between the Girl Guide Camp and the provincial campsite. Highways claims the land is needed for an eventual extension of Henderson through to Highway 101.

At last Thursdays regional board meeting, angry area directors accused the local department of "dirty dealing" and decided to send a letter to Minister Alex Fraser outlining the situation and asking why his department was backtracking on the original land-use contract negotiated in 1976 with Cold Mountain.

The group first made its proposal to establish a cottage pottery industry to the Regional Board in 1975. A public hearing was held at which no objections were raised to the plan and the land-use contract was then drawn up. It required the pottery to establish itself under the Strata Titles Act as part of the land was to be communually owned.

Just as this agreement, Bylaw 100, was to receive final approval from Victoria, Highways decided there should be a road through the area.

However, a loophole was found in the Controlled Highways Access Act. This stated the department had no right to stipulate a right-of-way as the Cold Mountain property was more than half-a-mile from the nearest thoroughfare between Beach Ave. and Highway 101. The land use contract was then approved.

The new legislation was plugged that loophole and is allowing Highways to renew the demand for a road allowance.

According to Martin Peters, who with John Reeves has been involved with Cold Mountain since its inception, the group waited until this July to file their strata title application. The delay, he said, occurred because final details had to be worked out with three other joint owners of the land, and the area had to be surveyed.

"We got caught right in the middle of the Stata Title changes," said Peters Saturday, adding he found out only a few days earlier that Highways was once

Good news rumours for Seaside Village

The head of the Seaside Village Property Owners' Association says he has been told that over $30,000 in liens have been lifted from homes in the Sechelt subdivision.

Rod Moorcroft says he was informed by Bill Brandner, an agent for Glenmont Holdings, the company which now controls Seaside Village, that all liens placed on the development by Crown Lumber have been removed.

Moorcroft said he was unable to get Brander to give them the exact amount of money involved and the association has so far not been able to corroborate the information.

"It's a lot of trouble getting dollars and cents out of Glenmont," said Moorcroft. He estimates the total worth of the liens at between $34,000 and $65,000.

Rudy Lawrence of the provincial Superintendent of Insurance's office, has been working on the government investigation of Seaside Village. He said he had no knowledge that the liens had been lifted.

Moorcroft also said that additional liens placed by Parker's Hardware, a former Sechelt company, may be invalid "as is seems they were improperly filed in the wrong court."

Said one owner of an unfinished home in the subdivision when asked her reaction to the news: "I've heard all this before, but until I get that piece of paper from my lawyer saying everything's okay and I can go down to my bank and get a mortgage to finish my home, I won't believe anything."

The property Owner's Association expects to open negotiations soon with Glenmount over other outstanding debts left unpaid by the developers.

Glenmont assumed total control of Seaside Village from Stan James and Union Steamships after James decided not to go through a lengthy court action brought by Glenmont, which originally was responsible only for the development's land sales.

Almond says: all the way or nothing

The people of Roberts Creek want a $350,000 community hall or nothing at all, insists their area director.

Responding to criticism from some directors that the cost of building a 500-person capacity hall has not been justified in terms of the use it would receive, Harry Almond told the September 29 regional board meeting. "I got the impression from a community meeting last week that it's either that size or it's not even worth considering."

Almond reminded the directors that the $350,000 includes ground improvement, parking and lighting as well as the cost of the building. The hall is proposed for construction in Cliff Gilker Park.

The Area D director promised that Bill Grose, a member of the Roberts Creek community planning committee and a strong supporter of the large hall, will come forward with additional cost figures before the board has to decide whether to include the building in November's recreation referendum.

Almond was supported by retiring Area E Director Ed Johnson, who said residents in his region, which adjoins Roberts Creek, are unhappy with the prospect of another hall the same saize as the existing one.

Tax money isn't cheaper

The report delivered last week at the Area B Ratepayers' Association meeting on the Halfmoon Bay Fire Hall calls attention to a significant problem relating to the proper and efficient local use of public monies.

The fire hall was supposed to be built using labour paid for under a Canada Works grant and materials purchased from a loan approved in public referendum. The labour grant has expired and the hall has not been completed. Total cost of construction thus far, according to George Murray of the Halfmoon Bay Fire Committee, is in excess of $44,000. Even discounting land clearing costs, this is an amizing figure for a 1,080 square-foot facility.

Murray is preparing a report on the situation for the regional district, administrators of the grant, and this report should be given careful attention.

Considering the information now available to us, it would appear that there has been inadequate supervision of the whole project, though the fault may lie primarily with the current system of grant administration rather than with any individual. Public money isn't simply manufactured in Ottawa; it comes out of the individual taxpayer's pocket and he deserves a fair return on its expenditure.

An unjustified demand

The indifference of large bureaucracies to local wishes is a common phenomenon, well-documented in this area with numerous recent examples. When the powers-that-be compound this disregard by shredding completed agreements, however, frustration turns easily to anger.

The resurrection by the Department of Highways of their demand for a 100-foot-wide road allowance through the Cold Mountain Pottery property is unjustified.

The Cold Mountain group has negotiated a land use contract with the Regional District and run the gamut in Victoria. The residents of Henderson Road in Roberts Creek do not want their street extended to Highway 101. As long as the Girl Guide Camp exists, Beach Avenue will remain a deadend; it cannot become a busy thoroughfare, and there is thus no real need for the Henderson extension.

Nevertheless, someone at Highways has sat down with a map and concluded with dispassionate farsightedness that all the maybe's and what-if's of some uncertain future should take precedence over present realities.

We think professional planners frequently get a bad rap, that they are often maligned by people who won't look ahead or who prefer to put their selfish interests first. But in this case, the Department of Highways' planners are dead wrong. If nobody wants it, who needs it?

Beyond Thanksgiving

Monday is Thanksgiving and it is traditional on this occasion for editorial writers to haul out their seldom-used expressions of gratitude for our privileges and advantages.

You're no doubt familiar with the list. It includes health for the healthy, wealth or a reasonable approximation for the employed, and freedom to a greater or lesser degree depending on whether your political party is currently in power. That is not to belittle all this; we are indeed a fortunate minority in a vastly troubled world and thanksgiving is appropriate.

But as residents of this small peninsula we have a particular cause for celebration. Just step outside your front door. It's all there: one of the most beautiful places on this continent and it is our home. It is a very special place, and when we give thanks for it this Monday, we're going to keep in mind that we have to treat it in the very special way that it deserves.

It's good to be grateful; it's more important to act like you mean it.

UP IN THE AIR

The noise of low-flying planes was almost drowned out recently by the public disagreement over what, if anything, should be done about it. But now tempers may have cooled a bit, so how about a calmer look at the issue.

First, we need to start on some firm ground. There are frequent instances of small planes flying low enough over this area for their noise to disturb some of the residents. I'm not trying to prejudge the issue with this statement, but we'll never get anywhere unless everyone agrees that there is an issue. So let's all at least admit that people are being bothered, before we ask whether they're being reasonable.

OK, so should complaints about noisy planes be a concern of the community? Well, the "quiet enjoyment" of life is a very old common law right, and it means just that — the right to go about your affairs without others' disturbing you in going about theirs. Obviously this right isn't absolute. We don't allow people living on a highway to forbid heavy trucks to drive by their houses. But then again, we do listen to them, and may eventually move the highway if there's enough of a problem. In fact, this very idea is a part of the Sechelt Vicinity Plan.

I think the principle is that if the cost of the cure is less than the cost of the problem, something ought to be done about it.

What's the cost of the cure in the plane case? Ah, now we're down to it. Some people have implied that the complainers want to get rid of small planes from this area altogether. Obviously, if that were the only solution, the cost would be much too high.

The small plane, both private and commercial is an essential tool for life on this coast. The existence of a scheduled airline serving communities as small as ours is an amazing asset, and we'd have to be crazy to try and get rid of it simply to remove an irritant. Luckily, I think no-one has seriously suggested this, and there are other possible solutions.

A better approach would be to avoid having planes flying low over people's homes. But can this be done? In most cases it definitely can. The only times it cannot are when the plane is taking off or landing. Landing isn't really a problem, as the plane is generally throttled back at that point and so doesn't make much noise. Takeoffs are another matter.

We're lucky because our airport is in a reasonably remote location and takeoff noise is well screened by trees. Once the plane is in the air, the strategy of avoiding residential areas could remove most of the rest of the airport use noise.

The base of our commercial airline, Tyee, is a different matter. Since float planes are involved, Tyee has to have a sheltered bay for its operations, and there aren't any suitable vacant ones. But Tyee's been at Porpoise Bay for a while, so we should all know by now that the peace of that Bay is going to be disturbed quite frequently. I think we'll just have to accept that, as a fair price for keeping Tyee around.

But what's the cost of avoiding low flights over residential areas? Not much, I think. The extra fuel and time required to fly a little higher, or to make a detour of a couple of miles, would be a minimal expense, certainly much cheaper than moving a highway! And it seems that safe alternative routes are plentiful, either slightly out over the Strait or inland over the forest. A straight line between takeoff and landing just isn't essential.

How could we bring this solution about? Not by shouting at each other and making wild accusations, I suggest. The first step is to open communications properly. And that means recognizing a couple of biases.

The person who lives in this area for it peace and quiet (I'm one of them) is going to be particularly sensitive to any noise intrusion. If there's only one noise source, the cause of it must expect to be the target of some heavy criticism, maybe more than is fair. But there's no reason for pilots to be offended about this; an over-reaction in such cases is simply a fact of life. Conversely, the pilot is used to the noise of his plane and probably has an honest difficulty understanding how it could bother anyone. He's not being callous, and his under-reaction shouldn't give offense to those he flies over. But it's now time for each to make a greater effort to see the other's point of view.

If you're sitting on your porch looking at the sea on a sunny afternoon, and someone flies over at 100 feet (and this does happen, so let's not argue about it), remember that flying up the coastline is much more interesting for the pilot than droning in a fixed course over featureless wavetops. You see all sorts of things on sunny beaches. But if you're flying that plane, you should remember that your enjoyment of the view may have disturbed the enjoyment of a thousand others, so maybe you should put up with a little monotony for the 40 minutes or so of your trip.

The difficulty of all this is that my observations suggest that most of the low flying is done by planes based outside this area. Sure, Tyee does some of it (sorry, Mr. Campbell, but it really does), but maybe 80 per cent of it has nothing to do with local pilots. I don't know how to get a message to the other fliers. But perhaps if we arranged a friendly meeting between some concerned residents and people from Tyee and the aero club, we could reduce the local conflicts and come up with a way of contacting the visiting pilots. Besides, an improvement will only come through willing compromise, so we need to start some proper discussions anyway.

Frank Leitner's conflict of interest should cer' 'nly be a matter of community concern, but while his resignation might remove the conflict, it would do nothing about the noise issue. We'll have to get together to fix that one.

Someone out there cares (a little)

By MARYANNE WEST

Take heart, CBC radio fans. Someone out there really is listening.

Much discontent has been expressed with the CBC's Radio 1 - Radio 11 policy, a plan for specialized networks copied from the English — which may work reasonably well with 55 million people in a tight little island but which fails to come to grips with the Canadian reality of communities scattered across 3,000 miles of rock, forest, wheat and mountains.

It's a system which looks good on paper, all neat and tidy. We have these two networks, and we divide the programming: AM for entertainment, information, easy listening; and FM for serious discussion, so-called serious music and radio arts.

Currently CBC's FM network is available to maybe 60 percent of the population. It's doubtful whether, given the difficulties of FM transmission and reception, if such a system can fulfill the CBC's mandate to provide "a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment for people of different ages, interests and tastes covering the whole range of programming in fair proportion" (The Broadcasting Act).

It's another example of remote and out of touch bureaucrats demanding that people adapt to their system, rather than taking the time and care to make the system as flexible and sensitive to the needs of people as possible.

Where AM listeners once enjoyed a wide choice of programming, music of all kinds, serious discussion, analytical commentary, drama, documentaries, programs for special interest groups, it's now all pre-packaged in magazine format catch-alls — as someone described it, the choice between "chit-chat with music and with chit-chat".

So from coast to coast the complaints came in with the added plea for more opportunity for local writers, actors and musicians to have their work considered for broadcast.

CBC has not been known for its receptivity to public protest. This was one of the mea culpas admitted by the president in his Touchstone document submitted to the CRTC enquiry in June. Things will change, he promised. I doubt anyone held their breath, but i's happened. A small breakthrough, it's true, a glimmer of light in the tunnel, but we've got back one hour for local programming. The Hornby Collection, as the series is called, will present the works of British Columbian playwright and writers, produced in Vancouver and provide work for actors, musicians and freelancers. The program notes (available from the Peninsula Times) include familiar names such as Harry Adaskin, Christopher Dafoe, Robert Clothier, Jack Shadbolt, Eric Schneider, Jurgen Hesse, Peter Haworth, Shirley Broderic, Bill Reiter, Vera Rosenbluth and a wide variety of topics which should touch many a responsive chord in memory or experience.

As luck would have it, I had just mailed a letter to the CBC President, sizzling with pent-up frustration and anger, having received the 1977-78 schedule for the FM series Ideas. Ideas has five hours per week program time and is able to present in-depth studies of complex issues. Of the 20 or more subjects offered, only one doesn't sound particularly interesting to me. But what of the roughly eight million Canadians who cannot get FM? I understand the appeal of these filing case ideas to the bureaucrats. What amazes me is their surprise when rural Canadians react emotionally, complain bitterly about georgraphical apartheid and of being made second class citizens.

Looking down the list of programs that the powers-to-be in Toronto apparently assume we country folk take no interest in, one begins to wonder what sort of people they think they are. Judging by this year's schedule, we take no interest in Quebec's referendum; we don't have television; neither pollution nor climatic changes bother us; seemingly we neither have children nor reach old age; neither history, archeology, philospophy, religion nor political ideologies turn us on; we aren't even involved in any form of competitive sport; and as for wasting such an internationally famous anthropologist as Claude Levi-Strauss on us, well, forget it.

One is left with the inescapable suspicion that the mythology of the country hick, leaning on a gate and laconically chewing a straw, is alive and well in CBC management. As we've said before, old-fashioned stereotypes have no place in present day society, most particularly in communications.

The Hornby collection, even though its scheduled in the 11 p.m. to midnight slot on Saturday (let's be grateful for small mercies!) may indicate that changes in attitude are on the way. The series looks interesting. It includes experimental and imaginative way of using radio, and there is, especially for the Sunshine Coast, a documentary romance on man's aspirations and reflection on flying — a topical subject these days!

Al Johnson, thank you.

Club responds to accusations

Editor, The Times:

On behalf of the local aero club, I would like to clarify several points for Mr. Lee and his organization CARE.

1. The aero club has always within their own membership practised noise abatement procedures and have a safety committee that ensures that all flying members comply with MOT air regulations.

2. Itinerent aircraft account for 90 per cent of the traffic at the Sechelt-Gibsons airport, over which the aero club has no jurisdiction.

3. The average light plane, a wheeled aircraft that uses a fixed pitch propeller and an engine of 100 to 150 HP, cruising at 1,300 feet above sea level when over land is so quiet as to be barely audible.

4. The aero club is the organization that made it possible for the Gibsons-Sechelt area to have a facility worth close to a million dollars, a facility that brings in untold thousands of tourist dollars every year.

Mr. Lee, look somewhere else for a whipping boy.

Between the lines

By Dennis Fitzgerald

Odds and ends for your edification and amusement.

We were unable to reach Gibsons Alderman and Regional District Director Jim Metzler for last week's story on incumbent officeholders whose terms are expiring this year. When we finally reached him on Saturday, Metzler said he hasn't decided yet.

There have been rumours that he might stand for election as a Regional District director from Area E rather than seek re-election as Gibsons' represennative on the board, and Metzler acknowledged that he has been encouraged by several persons to do this. Ed Johnson, the current Area E director, won't stand again, and regardless of whether Metzler chooses to take a run for the seat, that vacancy is likely to produce an interesting contest.

Former Area E Director Frank West, who was narrowly defeated by Johnson two years ago, says he has no plans to try for the job again.

Metzler said there are "a couple of things" delaying his decision, including a possible "position which wouldn't permit me to run since I'd have to move from the area."

"Jackson Bros. has suspended its logging operations for the season in the general Chapman Creek vicinity, which means that any of you folks who might like to take a weekday excursion up the logging road from Wilson Creek may now do so without fear of encountering something bigger than you barrelling down the road.

We advise that you go soon, however, and not simply because our sunny days are numbered. The company will shortly begin trenching across the road to minimize wash-outs during the winter.

Local Developer Hank Hall is moving his Vancouver-based Whitehall Contracting Co. office to Sechelt. The two local jobs that will create isn't exactly a giant step for mankind, but it's part of some fancy footwork by Hall, who's scrambling to keep financially-troubled Whitehall afloat.

One of Whitehall's customers has refused to take delivery of a $250,000 order, and Hall says a lawsuit to sort out the matter may take a year or two.

He says this quarter million dollar "cash flow problem" is troublesome ("It certainly changes my style of living, you'd better believe"), but claims that it will not affect his local industrial development project.

Hall's Cameo Industries is the development company with big plans — but so far little action — for a Field Road industrial park. Hall says Cameo and Whitehall are entirely separate entities, although he is president of both, and that the financial woes of Whitehall will not affect Cameo.

The truth of that assertion is being tested now. Halls says he has applied for an exemption from filing a prospectus prior to subdivision of his industrial park in order to determine prospective buyer's requirements. He says the primary obstacle to approval of the exemption is an investigation of the developers' financial capability by the provincial superintendent of insurance. That investigation is under way now. Hall says he has no worries about its outcome.

But at the same time Hall says he needs cash to proceed with the Field Road development, and he is considering selling some of his properties to get it.

To this end, Hall recently placed a newspaper ad in Vancouver which stated, "Developer quitting. Good bye means good buys." The notice aroused Bernie Mulligan's curiousity, and he asked Hall at the regional board's September 15 meeting if Hall were trying to sell his Field Road property. "No, definitely not," Hall replied.

Hall says the property mentioned in the ad belongs to himself and another local developer and that Hall is not the one who's quitting. He is, however, trying to sell several parcels adjacent to the Sechelt Legion. Hall has been trying, without success so far, to entice Safeway onto that location, and although he still thinks a shopping complex would be the best use for the property, he said, "If I have to sell it to save my ever-loving skin, I'll sell it in lots." He said he plans to clear the property this week or next in order to show it better.

Regional Board Chairman Harry Almond will support a request from the Roberts Creek Community Association to ban trailer parks from the Creek. The community association recently adopted a resolution calling for a zoning amendment to stop the parks, and Almond says he is squarely behind the idea.

Springboard for the resoluion was a trailer park proposed for Flume Road, practically in the backyard of community association president Dennis Davison.

Almond says he believes the community opposition is not directed at housetrailers themselves but rather at a high density clustering of the trailers. "There's a lot of feeling that it's going to take away from the rural residential nature of the area," he said.

Maybe. But at the same community association meeting, residents also discussed and took no stand against Olaf Klassen's proposed strata title development, which would cluster 14 housing units on a Lower Road site near Metcalfe. It may be that the association members find clustering less offensive than what's being clustered.

Another hot issue around the Creek has, of course, been industrial development and whether or not the area's community plan ought to make some provision for it. Almond has previously appeared cozy with the concept. (At the last public meeting for the community plan, he personally presented a proposal for an industrial area, written by a man who was present at the meeting, and afterward minimized the representativeness of people who attacked the proposal.) Last Saturday, however, Almond said he "will not encourage" creation of an industrial area in Roberts Creek.

That's not exactly the same as opposing it, but...

Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich got a less than enthusiastic reception when he was introduced Friday night on the opening eve of the city's Oktoberfest. In fact, he was soundly booed by a healthy percentage of the 3,000 folks in attendance. The embarassed master of ceremonies told the crowd, "You've got it all wrong. You're supposed to applaud." They then applauded.

Some observers might interpret that as pretty wishy-washy politics, but my analysis is that if you get people drunk enough, you can convince them to do almost anything. Volrich demonstrated his political astuteness by endorsing beer drinking during his brief remarks to the audience.

The conspicuous absence of city police on the streets adjacent to the festival's PNE site was doubtless just an oversight and had nothing to do with politics whatsoever.

Opponents of B.C. Hydro's herbicide spraying, take heart. There is every indication that God is on your side. A spraying effort last week was thwarted in a secenario that had all the earmarks of divine intervention.

The Vancouver spraying contractor first encountered a series of vehicular and personnel mishaps that caused the crew to arrive at the scene of the scheme about four hours late. Next, the lock had been changed on the Port Mellon substation's storage shed, and rounding up the appropriate key delayed them another hour. Finally, loaded with chemicals and ready to work, the crew proceeded about 50 yards up the road and snapped a drive shaft.

Unfortunately, the last accident prompted the crew to "dump" their chemicals in a relatively small area behind the Port Melon substation. The area was due for spraying anyway and is well removed from the nearest creek, so should pose no pollution danger. Coast Garibaldi Health Officer Jim Brookes said he will send water samples from the area to the Department of Agriculture lab in Vancouver for tests.

Last but not least is a brief note of congratulations — to me.

Maybe you noticed the big bowl of empty film canisters sitting in the display window of Kits Cameras at Sunnycrest. Maybe you wondered which clever and capable individual was going to guess how many canisters were in the bowl and win a wonderful prize.

Well, there were 147 right on the nose, just like I said. Good going, me. I forget what I won. A free enlargement of the photo of my choice, I think — not exactly my most urgent need with a darkroom sitting 20 feet away, but what the heck, I accept.

Today Kits Cameras, tomorrow the Provincial.

Squaringly yours

Hellow, fellow square dancers. Once again I bring you the important suggestions of the day. First, make sure that your wood pile is well stocked, the chains are in your car and anti freeze in your car's radiator, because when I looked out the window this morning there was old Jack Frost all over the place. Yes, I think that we are in for either a hard winter or a very long winter, take heed and prepare.

September 30 — With Harry Robertson at the controls, The Country Stars square dance club had another successful evening with over three sets and the help of Marion Lang and Frank Martineau from Vancouver.

October 1 — The Elphinstone School Gym at Gibsons was the sight of an evening that too soon became history as The Heritage Square Dance Company Pageant from the Fraser Valley put on a fantastic two hour show on the history of square dancing starting a way back with an English theme (Era 1400's) right up to modern square dancing of today.

The costumes were all hand made by the dancers and very authentic. Viv Pallot, with his good wife Mary standing by, did a very outstanding job of narrating the program, as year after year of the changes in the various steps kept changing until the final portion of the program was Modern Square Dancing of today.

During intermission The Country Stars even got into the act as Viv Pallot put us through the old and ever popular Virginia Reel. It is sad indeed to think that there were over three sets of Country Stars present and in the set I was in we had to dance one couple short, however the idea of modern square dancing is not perfection but more of relaxation and good clean fun, and is also inexpensive. You should try it, you may just like it. Classes are every Monday night at the Elphinstone High School lunch room with Harry Robertson on hand to help from 8 p.m. till 10 p.m.

With over 500 people in the audience and several who came all the way from Vancouver and way points to see the show because they had missed it in their own area, well this means that these wonderful dancers of the pageant were without doubt just terrific. They are booked up till some time next year so if by chance they are in your area be sure to go and see them perform.

Have a good day and see you at the next square dance. Adios.

BILL BILLINGSLEY and Sechelt Mayor Harold Nelson both received 25 year service pins last week from B.C. Hydro. Both men began working for the company here on the same day in August, 1952 Nelson is a sub-foreman lineman and Billingsley is a journeyman lineman. From left are, Bill DeHart, acting line superintendent; Billingsley; Nelson, and Erich Hensch, district manager.

again after the road allowance.

Peters says the 100 foot clearance "will go right through two homesites and the pottery," and if granted will probably mean Cold Mountain's abandoning plans to build on the land.

Highways, says Peters, "is very difficult to fight against. There's a remarkable amount of year-round red tape. It's a full time job just talking on the phone to them.

"They've been quite coy about the whole situation, they haven't told us what they will actually demand."

While Peters hopes a compromise is still posible, he maintains that neither he nor other members of the Cold Mountain Pottery group is prepared to live next "to a road plowed through to the highway."

if he were sure pollution was coming from the boats. "It has to be," insisted Colwill, who said the main reason the boats were on the lake in the first place was to take people water skiing from the islands. He then amended his statement to say "it's both" people and boats causing the problem.

"It's all over for this year but come next 24 of May, it's going to start all over again, and worse," Colwill predicted.

Area A Director Jack Paterson then said that a previous board plan to restrict the size of outboards on Ruby Lake to 10 h.p. was beyond the Regional District's jurisdiction and that such a move would have to come from the Ministry of Transport.

"We can set speed limits," said Paterson, "but they are very hard to enforce. Or we could ban motors. I would agree that water-sports are a very desirable thing but not when they start mucking up the water and causing noise from unmuffled motors.

"As much as I hate to say it, I think we should ban all power-boats on Ruby Lake," Paterson said.

"It's sort of a chicken or an egg situation," said Sechelt representative Morgan Thompson. He said no one knew whether the pollution problem was actually caused by the boats or the people.

The regional board then decided to delay action on the whole situation until receiving advice from provincial agencies.

One possible solution, they agreed, was to ask the provincial government to ban all camping on the islands.

Speaking to reporters before Thursday night's meeting began, Colwill said, "The point is our water shouldn't have to be treated, we have a beautiful lake up there. The next thing we know Sakinaw will be going. I have grandchildren and expect them to use and enjoy Ruby as much as I do."

Christian Science

"I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving." (Ps 69:30)

The Bible abounds with thoughts of thanks-giving and every year, around the world, Chirstian churches unite to express thanks to God.

In the writings of Mary Baker Eddy we read, "What is gratitude but a poweful camera obscura, a thing focusing light where love, memory, and all with the human heart is present to manifest light." Miscellany Pg. 164.

BRIDGE PARTY

The Sechelt Auxiliary to St. Mary's Hospital opening bridge party for their Merry-go-round tournament was held September 30, at St. Hilda's Church Hall.

There were 13 tables with lots of fun and noise. They will start the season off with 18 couples in the couples tournament and 16 ladies' teams of two.

Winner of the singles tournament was Dorothy Bruce and Bill Lamb. Second prize went to Olga Johnson and Nancy Lawson and third to Jean Hammond and Mildred Whitaker. Last but certainly not least, the booby prize, sweetened up to ease the loss with a box of chocolates, went to Ada Dawe and Ina Grafe.

Couples winners were first Arline and Tom Wood, second Janet and Allen Pollock and third Betty and Karl Vetterli. The booby prize to Stevie and Alex Lockhart.

Bingo prize winner was Dorothy Bruce.

The new duplicate bridge tournament will be held on the last Tuesday of every month at Sechelt Elementary school at 7:30 p.m. Cost will be $2 per person.

101 YEARS OLD

September 30 Gerald Mossman celebrated his 101st birthday. All the relatives that helped celebrate last year could not be here at this time, but will see him later in the year. However, there were relatives to help with the celebration as well as hospital volunteers, staff and Legion members. Fifteen extended care patients were also at the Legion enjoying the party.

Harry Casey helped Gerry's daughter Nan Richmond with the cake cutting ceremony, a beautifully coloured cake it was.

Lil Peters, activity aide, was actively helping with the patients in the Mini-bus as well as seeing to their needs.

Music was the grand orchestra of one man, Earl Duty. Songs were song by Alice Horsman and Tom Wood, piano player for the Happy Birthday was Barbara Gough.

Legion ladies supplied the refreshments with Veronica Place in charge. Masters of ceremonies were Wilfe Wilshire and John Hamilton.

Harold Easterbrook led in the grand Legion Pipe Band for some of that spirited Scottish music so grand to hear.

PORT McNEIL TRIP

I took a trip this week, driving from Nanaimo to Port McNeil and it was one great journey. The road was excellent. From Gold River on for 50 miles it was gravel, but in good shape, the only hazard was watching for the big logging trucks. We met four, managing to side step them on the highway.

Along the way different stages of logging could be seen and it was impressive to say the least.

We met up with the new highway built by the NDP out of Port McNeil for quite some miles — a wonderful highway that has started to grow again towards Kelsey Bay. When this is finished it will be possible to go right up the island without the side trip to Gold River and minus the ferry.

Port McNeil itself has taken a great spurt the last two years with lots of land scraped ready for buildings all over.

Saw the biggest burl in the world, what a size and very beautifully laid out with white huge rocks and surrounded by small white gravel.

Said a hello to Lorraine Tyson, formerly of Sechelt. She hasn't changed a bit, young and sparkly as ever.

It was too short a stay to see enough, as I flew back the day after I arrived. Stopping at Comox the plane was held on the ground while another plane flew around trying to get its landing gear down. I guess it did because after about 30 minutes we took off for Vancouver.

A reminder that tomorrow, Thursday, is the day to "Fun Yourself into Shape" at the Welcome Beach Hall from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. under the guidance of Ronnie Dunn. Ronnie will also be instructing in Scottish Dancing at the hall on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

MRS. MOLLY GREENALL

The past week has been a tragic one for the Redroofs area. On September 26, news of the passing of Mary Partriquin was followed by news that her neighbour, Molly Greenall, had died suddenly on Sunday, September 25. Mrs. Greenall, who had been suffering with influenza at her Burnaby home, became suddenly ill and was rushed to hospital. Four hours later she died. One of the last to hear of her death was her husband, Len Greenall, who was hunting for moose in the interior. It took his son, Gary, two days to track down down and break the tragic news to him.

The Greenalls have had a summer home in Redrooffs for the past 24 years and Molly Greenall, with her happy disposition, was a loved and respected member of the community. A good wife and mother, she was also a devoted daughter and made frequent trips back to England to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mannion of Warrington, Lancashire. She made a special trip back this year so that her parents could share in the celebration of her 50th birthday. Her father is 88 years old.

A Mass of Christian burial was celebrated Thursday, September 29 at St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, New Westminster, with Father M. Power officiating. After the funeral, Len Greenall and his three children, Gary, Michael and Cathy, flew to England to be with Molly's parents at this time of deep sorrow.

Among those attending the service from Redrooffs were Harry and Barbara Lumsden and Les and Nicky Raphael. Others closely associated with Redrooffs were Hazel Piper, a former Redrooffs resident, and Margaret Smith, daughter of the late William and Alic Grundy, who was accompanied by her husband David.

PEGGY CONNOR

What a busy and ambitious girl is our Peggy! Apart from writing the Sechelt News and being a wife, a homemaker and a mother, she is one of the most active workers for the Halfmoon Bay community. As chairman of the Recreation Commission, she is constantly striving to improve recreational activities for the young people of the area. It is difficult to know how she finds the time, but she is also an excellent cook and a fine seamstress. If all this isn't enough, she is invariably the one to go to the help of any member of her family in trouble, which is exactly what she was doing last week. She drove to Vancouver to pick up her brother, Bob Simpson and drive him back to his home in Port McNeill after a long stay in hospital. Bob had been hit by a car while on a pedestrian crosswalk in Vancouver on August 5 and had been hurled 60 feet along the road. In hospital he had both legs in casts and skin grafts.

FIRST GRANDSON FOR TJENSVOLDS

On Trout Lake Road there was a big welcome for a new resident of the Bay, Edward George Tjensvold, who arrived at St. Mary's Hospital on Sunday, September 18, weighing 5 pounds 14 oz. Proud parents are John and Sandy Tjensvold, who already have three granddaughters, are particularly delighted to welcome Georgie, their first grandson.

TRIP TO THE KOOTENAYS

Anton and Astrid Kadin decided to take a nostalgic trip back to the Kootenays where they had lived for so many years while Anton worked with Cominco. They left their car home and travelled by bus, first to Penticton, on to Vernon and by the Salmo-Creston route to Kimberley. The Kadins hadn't planned to go further east than Kimberley, but the friends they visited were off to Calgary to spend some time with their family and they insisted on taking them along. On the way home, they stopped for visits at Riondel, Balfour and Nelson. The weather was good throughout the three weeks of their trip but they are happy and contented to be home again.

BEAR CUB SIGHTING

Our regular anonymous caller reports that he saw two bear cubs on the Redrooffs Road about 10 days ago, a quarter of a mile west of Eureka. There was no sign of the mother.

SICK LIST

Lois Edmunds and Art Armstrong are home after a stay in St. Mary'a Hospital.

Madge Hansen will be sorely missed

Madge Hansen who died in St. Mary's Hospital on September 24 had been a resident of Sechelt for 31 years. She was born 73 years ago in Horsforth, Yorkshire, England where her father was a gardener on a large estate. During the second world war she married Bert Holroyd and she returned to Canada with him as a war bride in 1946. They settled on the west side of Porpoise Bay, bought a fishboat and fished up and down the B.C. coast.

Following the death of Bert Holroyd, Madge married Lauritis P. (Louie) Hansen in 1964. Canon Alan Greene officiated at the marriage which was the third one to be celebrated in the Church of His Presence on Redrooffs Road. Lauritis Hansen died in 1972.

During her years on the Sunshine Coast, Madge Hansen was a generous and staunch supporter of many community organizations. She joined the L.A. to the Sechelt Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion on Armistice Day 1946, a few months after she arrived in Sechelt. During the early 1950's she and her husband worked hard to raise money to pay the mortgage on the old Legion building. Throughout the intervening years she was a faithful member, serving terms as president and secretary. Two years ago she was awarded life membership.

Madge was a member of Sunshine Rebekah Lodge No. 82. She was appointed District Deputy by the President of the B.C. Rebekah Assembly and served as Noble Grand of Lodge No. 82.

She also served as president of Branch 69 Senior Citizen's Association and as secretary of Sechelt Garden Club.

Madge was a good friend and a kind neighbour and despite her many commitments would always find time to visit and give a helping hand to those who were sick. Her passing was sudden and unexpected. Although she had had a heart attack, she was apparently making good progress. She will be sorely missed.

Pender Harbour Happenings

— by Doris Edwardson, 883-2308

EGMONT NEWS

A few weeks ago a dramatic series of events turned into a miracle for Vi Silvey of Egmont. A CB radio, her son Leonard and his boat Silver Side and Tyee Air all took part in saving Vi Silvey's life.

She suffered an acute attack of bronchial asthma and became seriously ill. Leonard used his CB to contact Lyle Herd, came across to Egmont in his boat and got in touch with Tyee Airways who immediately sent a plane out and also radioed for an ambulance to be waiting. All this action took just one half hour. Mrs. Silvey returned home last Friday and is feeling much better.

The Egmont Community Club had another successful Smorgasbord recently. Due to a faulty lighting system, however, it turned out to be a candle light dinner. Raffle winners were: Harry Page, bottle; Elaine Griffith, cushion; Diane Akerstream, wall plaque; Al Minner and Maureen Lee, door prizes. There will be a rummage sale October 22 at the Egmont Hall.

LA TO BR. 112 RC LEGION

The Ladies Auxiliary to Br. 112 RC Legion would like to thank all those who turned out and supported their annual bazaar on Saturday, October 1. Winners of the raffles were: tea prize, Jessie Pritchard (pillow slips); hamper, Vera Love; main raffle, Gail Ralston (slow cooker); F.E. Humphries, seagull; Gert Gould, Corningware. The sewing table displayed much talent, sock monkeys hanging from a tree branch, cushion dolls made from foam sheets, cushions, crochet work etc.

MOLSONS SALMON DERBY

The unofficial First Salmon Derby of Molsons Softball Team from New Westminster was October 1 at Pender Harbour. There were 18 members of the softball club participating in it.

OKTOBERFEST

The PH Lions Club will hold their Oktoberfest October 22 at the Community Hall. Those wishing tickets please contact any Lions member.

PENDER HARBOUR COMMUNITY CLUB

The PHC Club is not getting its share of support from the public in regards to their bingo nights. Those in charge feel it is not worth the time to keep this going if the attendance is to remain as poor as the last few weeks. When the long winter nights set in there is not usually much activity in PH, so support the club so they can keep their Thursday night bingo going for you.

DEPT. OF HIGHWAYS PAVING

The Department of Highways has a paving crew ready and work should be starting by the end of the first week in October. The equipment is nearly all here and a crew of 11 men are already staying at Lowes Resort, Madeira Marina, Park Motel etc. Roads to be surfaced are: Francis Peninsula, Garden Bay and surrounding areas. Two local girls have been employed as flagmen.

BILL DONLEY RETIRES

Art Popp and his Department of Highways crew held a supper in honor of one of the Harbour's well known residents, Bill Donley. Bill is retiring and has worked for Highways for over 20 years and has seen many changes. The dinner and dance was held in the Legion Hall and the wives prepared the food which was enjoyed by all. Dot Donley said she and Bill will always remember this night and appreciated the thoughtfulness.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Bob and Jean Prest celebrated their 17th wedding anniversary October 1 at Lord Jim's. They were served a delicious dinner there and said they would like to know who the cook was because he did such an excellent job of preparing the scallops, the best they have ever tasted.

RUMOURS

Heard through the grapevine that Ruby Lake Cafe is sold and also maybe Pender Harbour Hotel.

THANK YOU FROM LIL HAMILTON

Lil Hamilton wishes to thank the RC Legion Br. 112, Rev. Godkin, and all her friends for their kindness and for the comforting Memorial Service for her late husband Bert Hamilton. Special thanks also to Bob Marsden and Legion President Dave Pritchard for their kind words and to the L.A. to Br. 112 for the refreshments.

Senior curlers begin Oct. 18

By ROBERT FOXALL

Today's report is largely for the benefit of those curlers who are seniors or who contemplate joing up with the Senior Curlers from Gibsons and Sechelt. Senior curling will start at Sechelt, Tuesday, October 18, and at Gibsons Friday, October 21. Starting time will be 1:30 p.m.

The number of prospective new members is such that it may be necessary to have a somewhat more formal organisation than we have had in the past. A meeting will be called sometime before the start-up day to organise for the winter.

Both new and old members are requested to call one of the following and leave a name and telephone number so that they may be advised of the time and place of the meeting: in Gibsons call Bernie Parker, 886-9664, and in Sechelt call Bob Foxall, 885 2650. Indications are that we could have up to eight rinks this season. Good curling.

Seniors' bowling and dancing both are attracting increasing nummers in Sechelt as the gardens are being put to bed for the winter. By the time this is in print we will have finished our plant sale which promised to be very colorful when I was in the Hall earlier in the day to deliver my little contribution. There will have been an exodus of members, also, as a bus load under the guidance of Dave Hayward will have departed for Reno.

Next monthly meeting of Senior Citizens Association, Br. 69, will be 1:30 p.m. October 20. Mark it on your calendar and be sure to be present so that we may all learn what part we may play to make the Fall Bazaar an outstanding success.

Mary Partriquin dies in St. Mary's

After a long illness, Mrs. Mary Partriquin died in St. Mary's Hospital on September 26 at the age of 65. Born in Vancouver, she worked as a young woman as secretary to the Burnaby Corporation and the Vancouver Exhibition Board. In 1940, she married Percy Partriquin and following his retirement in 1973 they built a home at Redrooffs.

Mary was a successful and enthusiastic gardener. Her Burnaby home was such a showplace that the residents of the apartment which overlooked her garden, considered themselves particularly privileged. She grew flowers because she loved them, but she used them to give pleasure to her friends and to comfort those who were sick or in trouble. She was a kind and thoughtful neighbour and had many good and loyal friends. Some of those who are now mourning here have been her friends for 40 years or more.

When the Partriquins were building their home at Redrooffs, Mary loved nothing more than to spend her weekends at the cottage of her friend Bess Maybee and work hard clearing the land. Burning huge stumps was to her the most exciting form of recreation. For two years she worked to transform that virgin land into a beautifully landscaped garden, and then sickness struck her. She bore two years of painful illness with great courage and cheerfulness.

Mary is survived by her husband, Percy, two sons, Ross of Salmon Arm and Tom of Halfmoon Bay and one grandson. Funeral service was held at Oceanview, Burnaby, on September 29 and was followed by cremation.

GOLF

The ladies of the Sunshine Coast Golf and Country Club held their wind-up on September 27. This was the last match of the 1977 golfing season. The winning team was Betty Laidlow, Priscilla Leith, Audrey Jost and Ethel Gurr.

A luncheon followed and trophies were awarded to winners of the tournaments held throughout the year. The Ladies Club Champion is Virginia Douglas. The Senior Ladies Club Champion is Lil Fraser. The Eager Beaver Tournament was won by Isobel Draper, the Nine Hole Tournament by Mary Arbuckle, and the Back To School Tournament by Lil Bullied. The Ruth Bowman Trophy was awarded to Doreen Gregory.

MINOR HOCKEY

Teams will be picked at the ice arena October 8 at the following timms: Pups 12:15 plm. to 1:15 p.m., Tykes 1:15 p.m. to 2:15 p.m., Pee Wee 2:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., Bantam 3:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Midget and Juvenile 4:45 p.m. to 5:45 p.m.

Coaches and assistant coaches are reminded to attend their respective time slots. Late registration will take place at the arena.

FISHING

Smitty's Marina reports that fishing picked up this last week with northern coho being caught from Gower Point north to Camp Byng. Pender Harbour has been good with salmon coming in around the 12, 13 and 14 pound range. The availability of live bait is making the difference. The largest catch last week was a 15 pound northern brought in off Gower Point.

FIGURE SKATING

The Figure Skating Club is holding a skates and dress sale at the Arena on October 8 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Anyone wishing to sell skates or dresses is asked to drop them off before the sale begins. A percentage of the proceeds will go to the club to help pay for ice time. For more information phone Mrs. Higgs, 885-9747 or Mrs. Newman, 886-7007.

RUGBY

Gibsons Fourth Division beat the Vancouver Scribes 14-0 Saturday in what had to be one of the best local games played so far this season.

The first half saw Gibsons weaving their way through the Scribes with excellent back play resultin gin tries by stand-off Bob Jackson and eighth man John Spense. The Scribes toughened up in the second half, taking control of their scrum and running hard. This only spurred Gibsons on with Gary Grey scroring try number 3 and Jim Peers converting to put the game in Gibsons' hands.

In rugby action September 24, Gibsons Third Division took the Vancouver Exports 16-0, and Gibsons Fourth Division won over Tsawwassen 16-12.

Pender golfers win Lions Club tournament Sunday

Local Lions held their nine hold golf tournament Sunday, October 2, at the Sunshine Coast Golf and Country Club. This is a semi-annual event including Lions clubs from Gibsons, Sechelt and Pender Harbour.

The winning club was Pender with a low net average of 75.7. Bob Dafoe shot a low net 73 for the best score in the Pender Harbour club. Second was Gibsons with a low net team average of 76.1. Sechelt came third with a low net team average of 76.3. Bob Turlock and Russ Nash played well for Gibsons. Bob Darney and Hayden Killam played well for Sechelt.

Low gross for the district, which includes all three Lions clubs on the Peninsula, was Joe Kampman who shot a 72. Closest to the pin award went to Al Soloman of Pender Harbour. The next inter-club tournament is October 16 at 9 a.m. with teams made up from all Lions clubs, fire departments, Kiwanis and RCMP detachments on the peninsula.

On the rocks

— by Pat Edwards

The Green Bonspiel scheduled for the Gibsons Winter Club October 7-8 promises to be a lot of fun for curlers and non-curlers alike. Response has been good and to date about 20 rinks have entered.

A number of non-curlers have accepted our invitation to curl free of charge but there is still ice time available. You needn't feel that you are the only non-curler on the ice, so don your woolies and come out and give it a whirl! It really is a lot of fun. Experienced curlers are taking at least one but preferably two green curlers in tow to show them the finer points of the game. Entries must be phoned to Maurice Pearson at 886-2196 no later than today, Wednesday, at 5 p.m. as the draws will be completed this evening. Skips will be notified by Maurice and they in turn will notify their rinks.

Drawmaster Larry Boyd urges all league players who have not yet registered to do so as soon as possible. League play begins on October 11 and many entries have not been received. Call Larry at 886-2031 during business hours or 886-2030 evenings. Larry reports that Wednesday night mixed is almost full but ice is still available during the rest of the week. Response has been poor to the call for ladies on Thursday night. Unless there are more entries within the next few days, it is feared that the ladies evening league will be scrapped. Where are all you working gals who expressed interest in an evening league? Call Larry now and help keep the league alive!

Greeting cards from Canada to faraway places are a good way to remember friends at Christmas time. Come in and pick out a few for early mailing. — Miss Bee's, Sechelt.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

Land Use Contract By-Law No. 139, 143, 147, 149, 151 & 154

Pursuant to section 703 and 796A of the Municipal Act a public hearing will be held to consider the following land use contract by-laws of the Sunshine Coast Regional District. All persons who deem their interest in property affected by the proposed by-laws shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard on matters contained in the by-laws.

By-law No. 139 is Land Use Contract No. 6 for D.L. 696, Keats Island. This by-law would allow a separate title for the existing lease hold lots to be created by subdivision of D.L. 696. A public picnic site shall be dedicated near Salmon Rock with an easement from that site to the Federal Government dock. The title to this public area shall be held by the Sunshine Coast Regional District. Approximately 102 lots will be legally subdivided on approximately 93 hectares.

By-law No. 143 is Land Use Contract No. 7 for D.L. 840, Worlcombe Island. This by-law would allow the construction of one dwelling unit per shareholder for the six shareholders of the company owning the approximately 13 hectare island. The contract provides for public dedication of the two small islands used by sea lions each year.

By-law No. 147 is for Land Use Contract No. 10, D.L. 2496 McNab Creek. This by-law would allow the creation of 16 strata title lots and one common lot. A public area shall be dedicated 5 metres wide along the shoreline of McNab Creek and the title to this public area shall be transferred to the Regional District.

By-law No. 149 is for Land Use Contract No. 14 on D.L. 1654, Block D, Gambier Island. This land use contract would allow the creation of ten separate strata title lots plus one common lot on approximately 22 hectares. A public area for picnicing shall be designated on the waterfront the title to be held by the Sunshine Coast Regional District and two spaces for public docking shall be allotted at the wharf.

By-law No. 151 is for Land Use Contract No. 11 on D.L. 1258, D.L. 1653 excluding Parcel A, Reference Plan 2900 and excluding Parcel B, Reference Plan 2901 except Lots 1 and 2, Plan 13582, and D.L. 3201 excluding Parcel A, Explanatory Plan 3730, Gambier Island. This by-law would allow the creation of 33 strata title lots plus a common lot on approximately 137 hectares. Approximately four hectares will be set aside for public picnic area, the title to be held by the Sunshine Coast Regional District, connected by a dedicated pathway from the waterfront to the site. The land which is currently within the ALR will remain in that category and will be a grazing and orchard area.

By-law No. 154 is for Land Use Contract No. 12 on D.L. 914, Parcel B, Plan 2837. This by-law would allow the creation of six separate strata title lots plus one common lot on approximately 13 hectares. The land currently within the ALR will remain under that designation and shall be used for subsistence farming. A public area shall be dedicated 5 metres wide along the shoreline of the creek and the title to this shall be transferred to the Regional District.

The hearing will be held at the elementary school in Langdale, B.C. at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, October 18, 1977.

The above is a synopsis of By-laws 139, 143, 147, 149, 151 and 154 and is not deemed to be an interpretation of the by-laws. BRUCE CROWSTON supervises a sawing operation at his sawmill on Porpoise Bay. The planks are destined for the Sunshine Coast Arts Centre building in Sechelt. The project recently received donations of fir poles for framing from Patrick Cromie and cedar poles from the Sechelt Indian Band. Project coordinator Clark Steabner says the centre needs further donations, either in the form of money or materials. He may be reached through Whitaker House in Sechelt.

Halfmoon Bay fire hall unfinished as grant ends

It was a packed meeting of members of Area "B" Ratepayers' Association at the Welcome Beach Hall on September 26 when President Al Lawson asked members to stand in tribute to the memory of three former members of the community, Mary Brooke, Jim Cooper and Mary Partriquin.

Reports of the year's activities included the progress of the Fire Department. George Murray, in his report, said that although the fire hall was not finished, work had ceased on September 16 because the $26,000 grant under the Canada Works programme had been exhausted.

The total cost of construction so far, he said, had been $44,587. While he admitted that the cost of clearing the land had been higher on the Redroofs Road lot than had been estimated for the originally considered parcel at the junction of the Redrooffs Road and Highway 101, he expressed strong criticism of the whole operation as it had been carried out under the Canada Works programme.

The fire truck, he said, was due for delivery towards the end of October. The Fire Committee had sufficient funds to award a dry wall contract and to complete the hall with volunteer labour. He called for volunteers, assuring members that the hall would be ready for the fire truck by the time it was delivered.

Meantime, Director Gerry Harrington had been making a thorough investigation of fire insurance, checking with Vancouver companies and with the Insurance Advisory Organisation. He had been assured that 30 days after the fire department was in operation, the area would be classified as Class 3 for insurance purposes. This should mean a reduction of one-third for all homes within five miles of the fire hall. He advised home owners to shop around for their insurance and get a least three estimates. In reply to a question, he said that proximity to fire hydrants had no bearing on the rates as the new truck was equipped with a 500 gallon water tank.

The chairman gave an encouraging report of the year's accomplishments. Many of the roads which had caused problems for many years were now paved and marked with a yellow line. Coast Cablevision had applied to the CRTC for a licence to extend their service through the Redrooffs Road as far as Halfmoon Bay, so there were hopes of cablevision for the area within the next few months.

The Association had successfully intervened with B.C. Hydro and the Water-Rights Branch on behalf of members and, after years of efforts to get the Halfmoon Bay wharf put in usable condition, major repairs had been promised within the next three months. Peter Hoemberg said the repairs to the wharf would include new decking on the approach, faulty decking replaced on the pedestrian section and new floats installed.

On the subject of water, Peter Hoemberg said that the engineers were in process of making a comprehensive study of the area from Homesite Creek to Secret Cove. Replying to a question as to why there were two rates for water users, he said that because of new government legislation which guarantees annual water grants, the Regional Board may be able to absorb the extra users' charge in low pressure areas.

Directors elected for a 3-year term were Ralph Mahar, Mary Tinkley and Jim Nygard. At a board meeting held later, officers elected were John Parsons, president, Ralph Mahar, vice-president, Mary Tinkley, secretary and Jim Nygard treasurer.

People can be divided into three groups: those who make things happen, those who watch things happen, and those who wonder what happened.

Vancouver police put an old twist to an old routine

There is no way Vancouver's six-man Mounted Police squad can compete with the RCMP's Musical Ride. The RCMP's 32 horse team of matched blacks are essentially an entertainment troupe while Vancouver's Mounted Police are a working unit with many other responsibilities. Getting together to practise cavalry drills and fancy figures is a once a year extra for the International Horse Show.

But with the RCMP Musical Ride in last week, Sgt. Tom Ryan of the city police came up with a new routine that is a first for Canada. He teamed the motorcycle and mounted squads for a dramatic if less complex version of the wheeling and turning, criss-crossing and needle threading patterns of the Musical Ride.

It was most effective. Imagine the darkened Agrodome show ring, the mounted team riding quietly single file around the perimeter. From the subterranean depths of the building the muted roar of the motor cycles increases in volume and as the horses pass the entrance the motorcycles infiltrate in a one-to-one sequence. It was a surrealtic scene lit by the blinking red and orange lights fore and aft on each cycle and the blue revolving flashers on the handlebars.

The now twelve-man team went through the same routines culminating in a four corner diagonal pass through at a canter. It had all the components of a wild free for all, but everyone came through on cue unscathed.

Altogether it was an exciting demonstration of the cool courage and confidence of the police horses and the skills of the motorcycle riders, for whom retaining balance on 800 pound Harley-Davidsons while executing intricate turns at walking speeds was probably the most challenging feat.

Banner's 20-year service award described in last week's Times was presented at the evening performance. Two police dogs, Soke and Justin, received awards for bravery, Justin's poshumously.

It seems a pity there wasn't a larger audience. A few hundred, however enthusiastic, makes for a thin response in so large an arena. Perhaps the City of Vancouver can find some other occasions to bring their finest to the public's attention. — Maryanne West.

Two October dates to remember — Thanksgiving and Hallowe'en. The cards for these occasions are all set up for your easy selection. — Miss Bee's, Sechelt.

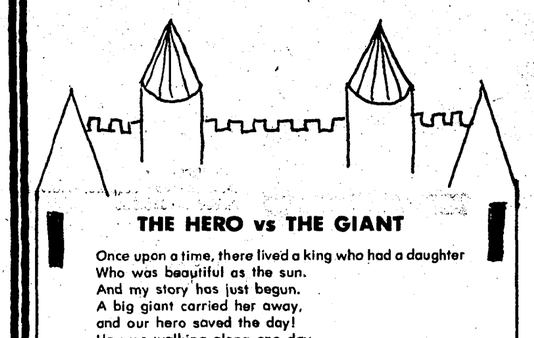
Hey, Kids!



THE HERO vs THE GIANT

Once upon a time, there lived a king who had a daughter
Who was beautiful as the sun.
And my story has just begun.
A big giant carried her away,
and our hero saved the day!
He was walking along one day,
when he saw a giant come his way.
The giant was carrying his lady-love,
He could not follow because of a storm above.
He went back with sorrow in his heart,
but the next day he acted more smart.
He went back to where they had met,
and what a surprise he did get.
He found a note addressed to him,
he could hardly wait to see what was within.
Inside he lost his eyes because,
there was a picture of his lady-love.
He ran to show his mother & father,
but they did not bother.
He did what he had to and took a horse and set out to follow his course.
He found the castle easily and the guards made him pay a fee.
He got the princess and ran away,
and that is how he saved the day.

Garden Corner

— by Guy Symonds

The last column dealt with the building of a new lawn and also mentioned that maintenance of established lawns is a fall priority.

Before starting on that topic, a statement made last week on fertilizers for the new lawn must be corrected. After saying that the emphasis should be on phosphorus and potash, the use of the popular 6-8-6 compound was advised. What mental aberration allowed it to get by the writing and re-reading is unclear, but the fact is that the fertilizer should be 4-10-10 or some similar formula which will offer a lower nitrogen content and a considerably augmented proportion of the other two. This will be slower acting but will last longer and help with the vital job of root building.

Now to the established lawn. As has been said before, the fertilizing program should have been brought to a close with the fading summer. This year which saw an unusual dry spell with restricted irrigation in most places put quite a strain on the grass and some of it will have a job to come back. In fact, some of it just won't. So these spots have to be rebuilt. Some authorities recommend over-seeding as a general fall practice, but hereabouts anyway this may be open to argument. The bare patches, however, must be treated and this means scratching the surface with a rake, sowing with new seed and covering with half an inch or so of peat moss. Of course the same necessity for moist conditions exists here as in the new lawn. An alternative is to lay sod taken from a little used area which is then resown.

While fertilizing for grass growth is not indicated, feeding for root growth most certainly is, and for this there is nothing better than bonemeal. It is expensive these days but there is nothing cheaper to take its place for long term promotion of the root system. Choice of seed for overseeding or reseeding is of course dictated by the existing lawn, but if that knowledge is not available then your seed merchant can certainly advise you, having regard to the location and type of soil.

Raking and cleaning up the lawn will soon show if there is moss and if there is, then its presence must not be ignored. Moss in a lawn is the sign of conditions that are making it difficult for grass to grow. These may be poor drainage, overshading, an over acid condition or, most likely, poor fertility. Killing moss is easy, there are very efficient preparations for this on the market. But, and this is the crux of the matter, this will not prevent moss from returning. Only attention to the conditions that encourage its grown will cure the trouble. By making it easy for good grass to grow you make it difficult for moss to flourish.

A good lawn will not grow by itself any more than will carrots and delphiniums.

This year, up to the moment of writing anyhow, has given us pretty good weather for the important fall jobs and the work and attention given now will pay off handsomely next year.

To close, a quick look at a couple of beautiful creations. These are wallflowers and pansies. The plants are now, or soon will be, on the market and should be set out for early blooming. They both like neutral to slightly aklaline soil — a ph factor of 6 to 6.5 to be technical — and wallflowers respond best to a fairly heavy clay soil. This is not too easy to find in this part of the world which will be kinder to pansies which like a moist loam growing medium. Both should be sheltered from cold winter winds which in some parts even of beautiful B.C. make the growing of them a frustrating occupation.

Two plead guilty to obstruction

An 18-year-old man involved in a fracas at Sechelt's Timber Day's celebrations pleaded guilty in provincial court Wednesday to obstruction of a police officer.

Donald Robinson was arrested in May after a fight at the Hackett Park Beer Gardens and taken to the local detachment for booking.

While sitting in the waiting room Robinson attempted to leave but his exit was blocked by Auxiliary Constable Dan Gory.

Enraged, Robinson began to kick Gory in the shins and had to be restrained by other RCMP members.

In giving Robinson a one-year suspended sentence Judge J.S.P. Johnson ordered the teenager to undergo alcohol counselling and not to drink liquor until the end of his probation period.

Robinson also pleaded guilty September 28 to a charge of public mishchief. A few weeks after the Timber Days incident, the RCMP attempted to stop him as he drove his white Valiant along Nickerson Road. With the police in pursuit Robinson turned on to the B.C. Hydro right of way and careened down the power line. The Valiant was later found abandoned.

The next day Robinson signed a statement saying his car had been stolen and he was not involved in the chase.

Subsequent investigation showed Robinson to be lying.

Johnson fined the youth $200 on the mischief charge, an additional $250 for driving with no insurance and $50 for having no drivers licence.

Roderick McCloud, 27, of Squamish also pleaded guilty before the judge last week of obstructing a police officer. He also admitted causing a disturbance by shouting and swearing.

According to the Crown Prosecutor, McCloud was stopped July 30 near Ruby Lake as he was riding a motorcycle. Asked by the constable for his driver's licence McCloud produced an expired learner's permit.

As the officer began to write out a traffic violation ticket McCloud began to swear. He then slammed the patrol car door on the officer's legs and fled into the bush where he was eventually captured.

McCloud was given a six month conditional discharge on the obstruction charge and fined $100 for his swearing. He was given a further $35 fine for having an improper driver's licence.

In other cases heard last week two teenagers pleaded guilty to possession of liquor while minors.

Floyd Woods was placed on six months probation and ordered to perform 25 hours of work service in the community.

Dennis Stevenson was fined $100 and a recommendation is to be forwarded to the Department of Motor-Vehicles that his driver's licence be suspended for six months.

An open letter to new mothers

Dear Mothers:

Congratulations on the recent arrival of your baby! We know how busy you must be taking care of your little one, but we would like to offer you a change to spend some time taking care of YOU, too. The Fitness Service would like to invite you to post natal exercise classes.

Evans Hermon will be offering these in Gibsons Elementary School Annex on Mondays from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., in Sechelt at St. Hilda's Church Hall on Thursdays from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m., and at the Health Clinic in Madeira Park on Tuesdays form 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.

We're really hoping that you'll be able to spend this time with Evans. We're sure you'll enjoy the socialness of the class and the time spent with other mothers with new babies. Your body will love the exercises, so come on out and join us. You can bring your baby with you if you wish; just bring something for him or her to lie on.

Please give us a call if you have any questions or would like more information. Our number is 885-3611.

We'd love to hear from you and hope to see you soon!

Sincerely, The Fitness Service.

The Leisure Outlook This Week

Reflections

— by Vern Giesbrecht

NOTES FROM A SUMMER JOURNAL

Hitchhiking near Williams Lake, I get a ride from a friendly, cheerful salesman named Al Korchinski who's soon telling me about the time he and a friend walked down Main Street in Winnipeg handing out $10 bills to startled pedestrians.

"It was really a tremendous feeling, giving away that money. You wouldn't believe what happened when I and my partner walked down that stretch of Main later. All those down-and-outers would be crowding around, shaking my hand, 'how's it goin', Al?' Some of them must have flown down from the roof, they got there so quickly. And you know, not one of them asked us for money again. They'd thank us and introduce us to their cronies but they'd never panhandle when we came by. Now isn't that something?"

I soon learn that Korchinski is bursting with good will and fond of aphorisms, like these:

"How a person makes out in life often depends on whether someone picks him up or puts him down when he needs help.

"You always seem to get back what you give, tenfold. That's the way I look at it, anyway.

"If I can make people happy and still have everything I need, that's great. What do I want with a lot of money?"

Old Harry, smelling of beer, puts on his battered hat as he leaves the shabby Endako Hotel at sundown and walks toward his pick-up.

"Going toward Smithers?" I ask.

"Yep. Hop in if you want a ride."

At first he seems like a profane man, tired and bitter, but as we drive on through the cool evening I start to like him. He talks of his hunting and fishing adventures ("...and then I pulled in one of the son-of-a-gunniest biggest fish you ever saw. 'Put those pork chops, back, boys,' I said. 'We're having fish for supper.' "), of leaving school at the age of nine to support his widowed mother and younger brothers, his skill at carpentry ("If he got smashed in the ass with a frying pan that instructor couldn't have been more surprised than when he saw me figure out that test so fast") and the large foster family he and his wife have raised.

When he smiles, his seamed face loses some of its weariness and becomes lopsided and a bit wry. We sleep beside the Bulkley River, he in the cab of the pick-up, I on the ground in my sleeping bag, before leaving early for Smithers and a comical search for a washroom and restaurant open at 7:30 a.m.

Schooner Cove, Vancouver Island — The full moon is trying to escape dark clouds that hover above the horizon. The faint sound of flute music is sometimes heard above the steady thumping and swishing of the breakers. At first the music seems to be coming from one of the dozen fires along the beach but then I realize it's coming from the ocean.

Entranced by the melody floating out of the mist, I follow the sound. I discover a woman in a long white dress who moves lithely over the wet sand as she plays her flute. As I approach, she lifts up the hem of her dress with one hand and sprints along the beach, then stops and resumes her playing.

I race down the beach until I'm exhausted. When I return, she's still swaying in dance-like patterns on the moonlit beach, spilling her melody over the waves.

She returns my greeting but wants to be alone so I return to my tent and read Grahame Greene by candlelight. The lovely songs end when I snuff out the candle.

In the lounge of the CN Super Continental, near the Manitoba-Ontario border, Ed Miller, a homely, garrulous fellow, sits in the corner, shirt open to the waist, and argues good-naturedly with his new friend Dick Johnson about the exact location of Smith Falls. Simultaneously, he fondles his wife, puffs on a cigarette and attacks his third beer. When he pauses for a breath, Johnson describes how his wife died of cancer.

"I must say, we really got along well together. I really loved her and we had four kids...Sometimes when I came home supper would be on the table and she'd be lying in bed. She was thin and sitting in bed all the time...We took her to the hospital but she never came out; she was full of cancer."

"Well," says Ed, "you came out to Niagara Falls and I'll show you the brighter side of life, okay?"

Fraser Canyon — I've been picked up by a bushy-haired ex-Marine from Portland who's hoping to find a carpentry job in Edmonton. He has strong, sad brown eyes and his tattooed arms are scarred from a fuel explosion in the belly of a plane in Danang, Vietnam.

"I was 18 years old, a high school dropout and there I was, running for my life," he says matter-of-factly. "Four of my buddies were dead in the plane."

During lunch at Cache Creek, he brings out pictures of his son and ex-wife. The woman and the boy are both blonde and cheerful.

As he heads east after lunch, I wonder what thoughts and dreams and longings accompany him on his solitary journey.

Nanaimo — A tall, lanky cowboy, wearing a white Stetson and chomping on a toothpick, cuddles his girlfriend as they leave the White Spot. At the door, he smacks her wickedly on the rear, with a rough hand that presumably has smacked many a heifer's rump. The gesture seems to please the petite girl in Levis.

On the B.C. Railway near Pavilion, a couple listens to me play the recorder. The woman is wearing a clean, bright, V-necked red and white sweater that doesn't quite suit her. She has a harelip and seems very tired. The sun glints dully on her hair. Her husband wears a yellow shirt and often speaks softly and slowly to her.

It's very warm; the air-conditioning is shot again. The man gets a wet paper towel and wipes her perspiring face, then holds her hand. They nod their heads and smile shyly at me as I play Cockles and Mussels and Shenandoah.

QUESTION: Is rapeseed oil one of the vegetable oils recommended for people who have heart conditions and must reduce the animal fat content of their diets?

ANSWER: The vegetable oils recommended for such diets are ones which contain a high content of a substance called linoleic acid. Rapeseed oil does not fit into this category. Safflower, sunflower and corn oil are the ones to use.

Book Look

— by Murrie Redman

WILD MUSHROOM RECIPES by the Puget Sound Mycological Society, Pacific Search, c1973, 178 pages, $6.95 paper.
POISONOUS AND HALLUCINOGENIC MUSHROOMS by Richard and Karen Haard, Cloudburst Press, c1975, 126 pages, $4.95 paper.
WHY WILD EDIBLES? by Russ Mohney, Pacific Search, c1975, 317 pages, $6.95 paper.

Note: all three books are available through J.J. Douglas.

Whether you are a mycophile or an unfortunate mycophobe, you might savour that special mushroom taste. Gathering the wild variety can be, however, like playing Russian roulette. It takes an experienced expert to distinguish the difference between perfectly safe edible mushrooms and those which are highly toxic. And even then, with some varieties you may tolerate them for awhile and one day find them giving painful gastrointestinal effects.

WILD MUSHROOM RECIPES is a book for collectors who would like to add a delicate treat to their tables. The author, who had descriptions of 18 genera of the earthy morsel, reminds us that each has a unique flavour that must be either complemented or encouraged in the cooking.

The recipes sound truly exiting and if you are like me, you won't wait for experts to help you, but will buy mushrooms at the grocery just to try the recipes. Everyone knows about broiling and stuffing mushrooms, but the books suggests them as "chips," in Hungarian casserole with yogurt or as a pastry. Included also are canning and freezing instructions.

The Haard's book, again, is for the expert in mycology who wishes to add to his knowledge the mushrooms that have "mystic" powers affecting the human mind. The authors explain detailed procedures as exacting as any in a scientist's laboaratory to determine procedures as exacting as any in a scientist's laboratory to determine the species suitable for experiment. The average reader will soon become lost in identification terminology and complex testing, but if he continues to the last section of the book, he will be rewarded with interesting accounts of the use of certain mushrooms by the ancients (and some moderns) who use the little fungi in marvellous and often terrifying "trips" into their own inner spaces. Which all goes to prove that it isn't always a pleasure to delve into the recesses of the human mind! The authors advise: the "magic" mushroom is not an inebraiant but a hallucinogenic which is not only dangerous (even if you know the right kind) but also illegal to use or possess.

The colour photographs — 16 pages of them — are in sharp hues showing the beauty of the plant at all angles. The very last section of the book tells about the effects of poisoning, gives some antidotes and contains a full bibliography and index.

As much as I loathe wasting time and space on negative criticism, I must admit that WHY WILD EDIBLES? is a rather unfortunate book. The text is very readable, the layout practical — each species is simply identified with recipes following — but the illustrations are generally poor. Any guide that relies on pictures for recognition purposes, should have some colour plates. This book has none. The black and white photogrpahs are often confusing — the plant and background blend together in a maddening way — and there are few size-guides such as a hand or a ruler beside the specimen. The accompanying drawings are heavy line executions and offer little help either. The written portion of the book deserves the services of a professional photographer and illustrator. Most readers would prefer to spend a little more on an identity guide that combines good text and photographs rather than purchasing two books to meet those requirements.

All is not lost, however. Mr. Mohney's script is in plain language and his verbal images of the plants are excellent. He arranges his material by plant part rather than size or colour like some. He begins with leaves, stems and roots, then fruit and seeds. The advice he gives is realistic and not the usual claptrap of nature fadists who will eat anything no matter how disgusting the flavour. Mohney often recommends multi-boilings to remove toxins and unpleasant tastes, blending of the wild and man-foods for better flavour and the least amount of effort for the best quantity of natural food.

I am often concerned about the rape of the woods even by the so called back-to-nature types who already have a vast selection of foods at the marketplace. There is something decadent about decimating wild foods which we may have to depend upon as an alternate food source, when there is plenty available at hand. The benefits of knowing what wild foods are palatable and in good supply as well as tasting a few is justifiable, but using it all up is merely another self-indulgence of moderns and makes man just another pest.

Focus on Fitness

If your get-up-and-go has got up and gone...

By FRAN BERGER

Got that restless feeling, like your looking for something nice to get into, but you don't really know what, and you wish something DIFFERENT would happen around here for a change? Then it looks like you're all primed up and ready for a fitness experience!

Fitness, you say, just what exactly do you mean by that word, anyway? I feel fit. My back doesn't bother me anymore, and my cold cleared up, and I'm not coughing so much now that I'm down to half a pack a day, and I can touch my toes if I really try, and I'm cutting down on junk food, and, well, I feel fine. So I'm fit, right?

Well, I certainly don't want to contradict you. And how would I know anyway? So let me ask some questions and you give the answer. The last time you had to run through the backyard and up the stairs to get the phone, how long did it take before you could get out a whole sentence without panting in the middle? Did you have to sit down? How about yawning — do you do that a lot? A yawn is the body's reaction to a need for oxygen, an ingenious response that makes you open up your mouth wide and breathe in a whole lungful of fresh air. And weight — well, let's not go into that one. That's a touchy, pain-in-the-neck problem for a lot of us. Let's get down to basics. What about the three classic qualities that seem to make all the difference — vim, vigour and vitality? The feelings of aliveness, of energy, of get-up-and-go, of feeling great. Have you still got oomph left for the evening after a long day of work — or has your get-up-and-go got up and gone?

There are no magic potions to drink that will give one the energy of a six year old and the strength and endurance of one 25. But there is something which can bring one reasonably close, and each one of us has that something which will enable us to get it. That close to magic problem-solver is you. All you have to do is decide you want it, and it's as good as yours. Just go and get it. It's yours for the taking.

The desire to be somewhere is a big help in getting you on your way, but the hard part is making the first move and actually starting. Once a decision has been made, only a conscious effort will actually set the ball in motion and let you begin to progress towards your goal; but that effort will be rewarded by finally feeling something happen. As "nothing succeeds like success," what more could one ask to spur one on further? Why not make yourself a deal? Try a fitness experience, and see — no, feel — what you think of it. Take a chance on opening up a whole new area in your life, one filled with movement and deep breathing and a robust feeling of health. Come on, the temptation is there. Let yourself succumb to it. You'll be glad you did. Try Ronnie Dunn's way for instance. Let her tell it her way.

SCOTTISH COUNTRY DANCING
By RONNIE DUNN

Have you ever had the pleasure of joining in a Scottish Country Dance? If not, then indeed it is time that you experienced this lively social type of dancing.

How many of you, listening to Sechelt Legion's excellent Pipe Band, have not reacted in some way? With toes tapping or feelings of envy of the fleet-footed Highland dancers. In Scottish Country Dancing you need neither the skill nor stamina of the Highland dancer to express the effect of the music of the bagpipes, the "controlled abandon" of the reel or jig, and the elegance and grace of the beautiful strathspeys.

Scottish dancing and our Canadian square dancing have some common history and terms, such as allemande and promenade. Scottish technique and presentation is French in character and goes back to the days of the "Auld Alliance" between Scotland and France, times when the mercenary armies of France were largely Scottish.

Scottish Country Dancing should never be called folk dancing as it belongs to all of the people. In Scotland, where the clan system ruled, as the chief did so did all his followers and family. Each chief had his pipes, but they were banned after the 1745 uprising and replaced by fiddlers. Like the pipers, these men not only composed music but also the dances, with names to commemorate great events in national clan history.

It is not necessary to be adept to enjoy this type of dancing. The chief object is social. Come with a partner or meet one there. The lively music will have you skipping about for the sheer pleasure of it "Light of Foot is light of Heart"! Won't you join the Dance? Call Ronnie Dunn at the Fitness Service at 885-3611.

Cooperation is doing with a smile what you have to do anyway.

Is anybody watching?

Rugby is originally an English game. The sport became popular in B.C. when the New Zealand All Blacks donated the New Zealand Shield to the Vancouver Rugby Union in 1921. Suddenly the sport took hold in high schools. Faculty had an outdoor activity that was inexpensive to outfit, and students had a game where they could play hard and enjoy socializing after the match.

After World War II much interest was generated in the Western states, particularly California, when UBC and the University of California played for the World Cup at Berkeley. The American athletes found in rugby the perfect conditioning game for sports such as football and baseball.

Some of the nostalgia that surrounds rugby comes from the feeling that this is a game for players, not spectators. This is easy to see for at times the game seems nothing more than a conglomeration of bodies battling it out somewhere in midfield. The spectator may have no idea about what's going on except for brief periods of time when the ball is passed to the backs and they run it downfield.

But watch a few games, follow the teams up and down the sidelines. There's beauty in the splash of colours when the teams scramble together in their bright red, yellow and black striped rugby shirts. Watch the tempo of the game pick up when the scrum-half takes the ball and the passing begins as the backs rush downfield. There can be as much spirit and excitement in rugby as in any soccer or hockey match.

In the Vancouver Rugby Union last year Gibsons Third Division placed first in the first half of the season and third in the second half. This year there are two teams to represent the Peninsula. Anyone who wants to come out is welcome. Practices are Tuesday and Thursday, 6 p.m. at Elphinstone School. — Rick Crosby.
