Hospital budget includes duplicate fund approval

By KERRA LOCKHART

Amidst hospital directors complaints of inadequate funding, the hospital district and the Co-ordinating Council of Auxiliaries have approved the purchase of thousands of dollars of identical equipment for St. Mary's Hospital.

Sunshine Coast area directors, sitting as the regional hospital district (SCHRD), last week passed without debate a 1977 hospital budget which includes funding for eight separate items of equipment used for patient care.

However, the Times has learned that in March the Co-ordinating Council of Auxiliaries to St. Mary's Hospital approved an administrative request to purchase over $46,000 of equipment for the building. Six of the items agreed to by the auxiliaries are also included in the budget passed Thursday by the SCHRD.

Hospital Administrator Nick Vucurevich denied on the weekend that there was any duplication of equipment requests in the two proposals. He acknowledged, however, that he has not yet seen a copy of the final SCHRD budget.

Gordon Hall, chairman of the hospital board of directors, could not be reached for comment Sunday on the apparent duplication of fund approval.

In a letter tabled at the SCHRD budget meeting Hall had warned that "the cumulative effect of cutting down on the purchase of needed equipment will result in the hospital ultimately having an inventory of obsolete essential equipment."

Hospital Administrator Nick Vucurevich denied on the weekend that there was any duplication of equipment requests in the two proposals. He acknowledged, however, that he had not seen a copy of the final SCHRD budget.

Gordon Hall, chairman of the hospital board of directors, could not be reached for comment Sunday on the apparent duplication of fund approval.

In a letter tabled at the SCHRD budget meeting Hall had warned that "The cumulvative effect of cutting down on the purchase of needed equipment will result in the hospital ultimately having an inventory of obsolete essential equipment."

Hall's letter was in reply to an earlier decision by the hospital district not to grant St. Mary's original request for $35,562 in 1977 for equipment and renovation costs. Instead the SCHRD Thursday gave approval for $14,960, of which $11,516 is slated for equipment purchases. The province will add a further $5,757, bringing St. Mary's total equipment allocation for this year to $17,273.

In his letter Hall expressed concern with the "drastically reduced" budget and predicted it would cause financial problems for St. Mary's. Hall's sentiments were echoed in January by Gibsons alderman Jim Metzler who accused the SCHRD of driving the Sechelt hospital toward bankruptcy.

Itemized on the SCHRD budget are eight equipment purchases that together total a cost of $11,516 for local taxpayers.

Six of these eight purchases were also included in a list that was submitted by auxiliary representative Doreene Dockar to the March meeting of the St. Mary's hospital board as items "approved in full" for purchase by the six St. Mary's auxiliaries.

These items include a vein stripper, orthopedic equipment, two stand up model blood pressure cuffs, a monitor defibrillator for emergency use, an Apena monitor and a fetal heart monitor. The list was to be made public at the April 20 meeting of the St. Mary's hospital society.

Under the SCHRD budget these items have been listed for a cost of $7,983 out of the total $11,516.

Dockar refused comment on the auxiliaries' planned purchases telling the Times to "go through the proper channels" and contact the hospital adminstrator.

Reached Saturday night, Vucurevich was asked if there was a duplication of funds in the budget passed by the SCHRD and the equipment approved for purchase by the auxiliaries. "No," he replied, "the funding is not the same."

Later in the conversation he repeated that there was no duplciation in the two lists. "That would be a double amount. There can't be duplicating in a budget, Victoria wouldn't allow it," he said.

On Sunday Vucurevich stated that the budget complexities are such "that you shouldn't try to interpret it unless you have a Commerce degree."

The regional district representative from St. Mary's, Peter Hoemberg, was asked why the SCHRD budget meeting was not informed of the funding to be provided by the auxiliaries. He replied that although he had mentioned no specific amount, "I made it quite clear in the meeting that the auxiliaries have been very generous to the hospital."

He suggested that as the auxiliary list had only been presented at the March directors meeting, the hospital may not have had time to change the budget before its March 31 approval by the SCHRD.

Hoemberg also said it was possible for the items allocated by the SCHRD to be changed if funds became available elsewhere. This has happened in previous years and the total amount of money budgeted was of more importance than specific equipment requests, he said.

"That doesn't alleviate the hospital of the responsibility to notify the board and provincial government of any changes," Hoemberg added.

He also maintained that, despite claims by Hall to the contrary, St. Mary's is actually "in good shape when it comes to money for equipment thanks to the auxiliaries."

Hoemberg pointed out that the hospital had originally requested $35,562 for equipment and renovations and had complained of financial strain when this figure was slashed at the preliminary budget meeting in January. But, said Hoemberg, when the money donated by the auxiliaries was added to the amount approved by the SCHRD, the hospital has received nearly all the funds requested.

There has been an ongoing debate, continued Hoemberg, between the SCHRD, the hospital and Victoria about whether St. Mary's actually needs all the money it has requested. "There's some question of the urgency of all this buying of equipment," he said.

Hoemberg explained that the hospital has been trying to build up its working capital for the next few years and had

Regional district tax up 41%

The Sunshine Coast Regional District's tax requisition will increase 41 percent this year under the district's 1977 budget approved last week.

Weekly garbage collection, a new fire department and the joint community use of schools have skyrocketed the amount of money to be raised through taxation from $317,894 in 1976 to this year's high of $449,428.

Including funds from sources other than direct taxation the total 1977 budget for the regional district this year will be $693,414. In 1976 the total budget was $519,015.

Weekly garbage pickup on the Peninsula will cost residents $60,262, up from the $39,797 spent last year for bi-weekly collection.

The new joint community use of schools represents the largest expenditure for an item not included in the previous budget. This year $67,937 will be spent on the planned Pender Harbour Secondary building.

Last November's referendum approving construction of the new Halfmoon Bay Fire Department building will cost Area 'B' residents $22,230.

An additional $7,225 has been allotted the Pender Harbour Health Clinic, raising the cost of that facility from $6,500 last year to $13,725.

A further $5,232 has been allocated for the recently obtained district park at Soames Hill. New sewage collection, treatment and disposal functions will total $5,000 in 1977.

At the March 31 budget meeting, Finance Chairman Jim Metzler noted that, excluding the above new items, the taxation increase came to only 3.4 percent.

Some regional district departments, however, received hefty budget increases. General Government Services is up from last year's $141,600 to $158,620 for this fiscal period. Included under this expenditure is $19,000 for the regional board directors and $5,000 for the chairman. The salaries of administrative personnel take up $70,000 of the total amount.

Under fire protection the West Howe Sound area will receive $18,313 and Roberts Creek $32,785, of which $900 is for "annual dinner costs."

The cost of street lighting in the Langdale, Davis Bay, Selma Park Granthams and Veterans Road areas has gone from $11,400 to $12,811 this year.

The maintenance of local garbage sites has gone up $2,000 to $110,258 and regional park administration has seen a $400 rise to $3,563.

One of the largest increases is in community planning which jumps from $61,800 to $80,342 for 1977. Salary costs alone total $62,200. There are currently two regional district planners.

The cost of building the plumbing inspection within the regional district has also gone up from $68,100 to $75,636, an amount that is not covered by permit fees from regional areas and the village of Sechelt. Revenue from these permits totals $49,6111, and $26,025 in taxes will go into the building inspection department this year.

The regional district has budgeted $2,000 for the acquisition of parks and greenbelt land and cemetery operations will account for a further $8,818. This money is surplus from the previous yyars and no taxes will go on cemeteries in 1977.

The Emergency Measures Organization is to be given $3,828 and recreational programs supported by the district will receive $3,564.

Separate from the regional district budget is the expenditure for local waterworks. A total of $547,806 is to be spent, none of it payed through taxation. $120,000 is a suplus from last year and the remainder is to be raised through government grants, user rates, connection charges and over $200,000 in land fees.

Driest winter yet for Coast

There's no accounting for the weather.

The six months ending in March was the driest Winter in the 15-year history of the Gower Point weather reporting station.

The previous Winter was the wettest in the station's history.

Total precipitation from October 1976 to March 1977 was 591.1 mm (23.27 inches). Precipitation for the same six months in 1975-76 was 1,285 mm (50.59 inches). The average Winter rainfall recorded by the station is 990.6 mm (39 inches).

This March was the seventh consecutive month in which the station recorded less than average precipitation. The Sunshine Coast received 100.6 mm of rain last month, compared to an average March rainfall of 123.2 mm. The station recorded 133.1 mm precipitation in March 1976.

Gambier Isle booming rule is challenged

The provincial Lands Branch has stalled a log booming amendment to the Gambier Island community plan. The move is an attempt to have responsibility for approving new booming sites around the island placed with the Lands Branch, rather than with the Ministry of the Environment.

The original community plan prohibited the extension of existing log booms if such changes would affect marine life.

After heavy lobbying from local timber interests, however, the Regional Board agreed last January to amend the restriction to allow new booming sites if approved by the Ministry of the Environment.

According to regional district planner Robyn Addison, the Lands Branch is insisting that economic factors must be given a greater consideration than environmental questions.

A community meeting has been called for 2 p.m. April 16 so residents of Gambier Island can discuss the impasse with Islands Trust members and the regional district planning staff.

Federal trolling plan dead for this season

Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc has assured four B.C. fishermen's representatives that the government's controversial salmon trolling plan will not go into effect this year, according to one of the fishermen.

LeBlanc also told the fishermen he would instruct his staff to begin "exhaustive negotiations with all components of the industry to possibly come up with a better plan," said Rob Corlett of Gibsons.

Corlett was one of the four commercial fishermen's representatives who last week flew to Ottawa for discussions with LeBlanc and other government leaders regarding the plan.

LeBlanc also promised the group a review of the limited entry plan effected in 1968 by Jack Davis, LeBlanc's predecessor, Corlett said. He further assured the men that they would have open access to fisheries department information and statistics which would bear on a revision of the trolling plan.

Corlett said his group met with LeBlanc for about an hour and 15 minutes.

"I was very impressed with LeBlanc," Corlett said. "He didn't try to get off the point. His answers to our questions were very honest and concise.

"I felt he was talking from his heart when he said he wanted input from all parties. I have a lot of faith in the man, but whether I'm being naive, time will tell."

Corlett said his group also talked to Liberal, Conservative and NDP legislators and to the standing committee of fisheries, composed of representatives of all political parties.

He said they met with a good reception from each of those groups. "Everybody felt we weren't asking for too much," he said.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union is in the process now of setting up a committee to study the government's salmon trolling plan and hopes to come up with an alternative by June 1, he said.

The federal plan as originally conceived called for a two-licence system for B.C. salmon trollers. It would have required fishermen to choose between operating inside the Strait of Georgia or in waters outside the strait.

The plan was to have been put into effect for this year's commercial salmon trolling season, which opens April 15. It was stalled following vigourous protests from fishermen who claimed the restrictions endangered their livelihood and were unfair in that they excluded sport fishermen from responsibility for salmon conservation.

A federal fisheries official estimated recently that sport fishermen catch 2 ½ times more chinook and coho salmon in the strait than do commercial fishermen.

Corlett said, "It's hard to say whether our trip was the turning point (against the proposed plan) in LeBlanc's mind, but I tend to think ilw as."

He also said LeBlanc "did not commit himself to what a full review of the Davis plan would do."

The Davis plan requires licensing of fishing vessels rather than of fishermen and "has put a huge, inflated value on the vessel" resulting in an over-capitalization of the fleet, according to Corlett.

That plan has resulted in higher costs and consequently higher retail prices for fish, he said.

Directors divided over business zoning bylaws

The interpretation of regional district bylaws, a 900 name petition and accusations of unfair treatment by local building inspectors divided area directors at their March 31 meeting.

Disagreement first arose when Paddy Roye, owner of a West Sechelt autobody shop that the district has ordered closed for operating in the wrong zone, pleaded for more time to relocate his business.

Asking for up to a year in which to find a new site he told the directors he had "looked into the possibility of locating between Gibsons and Sechelt but there's nothing suitable."

"I think, replied board chairman Harry Almond "that the directors are sympathetic in this regard. We understand your problem." Area 'A' representative Jack Paterson suggested giving Roye nine months in which to relocate and his suggestion was supported by director Bernie Mulligan who said the real problem was the lack of industrial land on the Sunshine Coast. He then said the bylaw should be ignored to allow Roye to operate illegally for the time being.

"Gentlemen, I'm afraid we can't do this" argued Peter Hoemberg. "It's outside our power, we have a bylaw we can't break."

"Let's do it anyway," retorted Mulligan.

"We can't say we will close our eyes to our own bylaws," continued Hoemberg. "That would create a double-standard."

Almond, however, believed that the public would support the board, noting he had a 900 name petition before him headed "work or welfare" that asked the district to allow people like Roye to operate

Apply the law evenly

Some members of the regional board have recently decided that the law, if not exactly meant to be broken is there to be bent, overlooked and otherwise manipulated as befits the occasion.

Early this year, in a rare show of courage, the directors decided it was about time to start enforcing the zoning bylaws on the Sunshine Coast. They made this decision, only after hearing loud complaints from businessmen that they were being undercut by competitors operating on residential land. Why, they demanded of the board, should some people be forced to locate on industrial land when others were allowed to set up shop cheaply in other areas? Quite so, said the directors, and instructed their staff to remedy the situation.

There was only one annoying problem. Those companies that had been open illegally for so long had nowhere to relocate their operations, the cost of available, industrial land having achieved astronomical proportions on the Peninsula. Petitions were circulated accusing the directors of driving the small businessman into bankruptcy, delegations came and complained to the board meetings. And last week the directors backed down and allowed one business to keep going even though it had been ordered closed for locating in a residential zone.

At first glance this seems fair minded of the directors, but there's a much broader implication here. If laws are to be passed, then they should be administered equally and impartially. Otherwise, as in this case, justice is seen to have a double standard. People who locate in the wrong zone know they run the chance of being closed down. It's something they have decided to risk. Based on past performance, most of these businesses knew they had nothing to worry about from the regional district.

What the directors should be looking at is not the poor man finally forced to pay attention to the law but the unfairness they have suddenly created for the people who have gone to the expense of opening their businesses in the correct areas.

If a bylaw doesn't work, scrap it. Until then apply it evenly throughout the Sunshine Coast.

Between the lines

By Dennis Fitzgerald

If you're planning on getting lost in the bush, let somebody know about it beforehand.

That's Bill Lawson's advice, and it's a matter of some personal concern to him because if you go missing one cold, rainy Sunday, he's going to be called out of bed to come look for you.

Bill is coordinator of the Sunshine Coast Search and Rescue team, a volunteer group trained and equipped to do just what the name implies.

I'll confess that up until about two weeks ago, I knew absolutely nothing about the Search and Rescuse team. That was when Bill walked in the front door and asked if maybe I wouldn't like to join them in a little exercise.

To my mind, exercise has always included things like jogging, a few sit-ups, deep breathing. It wears me out just reading Susan Milburn's column.

But I have nothing against exercise, so I told him, sure, I'd come along and watch. Little did I realize.

True to his word, Bills pulls up at the office Saturday morning, accompanied by Art McPhee. Right away I sensed trouble. Art is emergency program coordinator for the Sunshine Coast. Where's the emergency in a little exercise? Something was about to go wrong.

But I was committed, so off I went. We drove up the highway a couple of miles past Redroofs Road and pulled off the pavement. Don Caldwell, Vivica Watson and Bob Allen were there ahead of us.

Bill takes out a map and locates a small lake on it which he says is about 600 yards off the road. That's where we're headed, he says. Some fast arithmetic tells me that 600 yards is about a third of a mile. I figure I can make that.

Then Bill pulls out some radios and everybody starts fiddling with these compasses and acting like there's some question as to whether we can all get there and back.

I rightfully suspect ther's something about all this I'm not understanding. Consequently, when Bob announces he's starting out, I decide to join him on account of his being the biggest.

We walk back down the road a piece and he stops beside a highway marker and aims his compass into the bush. I reason this can't be the place because there's not the slightest hint of a trail or even a reasonable break in the wall of salal he's looking at.

But it is the place and without a word he charges in followed by myself although not charging.

I quickly discover that I have made a mistake in choosing the largest team member as a companion because he is able to leap tall obstacles in a single bound and also apparently has a special kind of skin which is impervious to all the thorns and stickers ripping at my tender hide.

But I persist, catching up when he stops to take another compass sighting and falling behind as he goes bounding off again.

Midway, we discover that something is wrong with our radio and we are unable to reach Don who had the good sense to stay behind and work the base radio. It occurs to me to wonder who rescues the Search and Rescue team.

But, not to worry. After about 40 minutes we come to the edge of a cliff and there, right below us, is the target lake. I felt I was witnessing a miracle.

Shortly afterward, Vivica, Don and Bill clamber out of the bush, all comfortingly short of breath.

By this time I was becoming a little cocky about the whole thing, so when someone suggested I take the compass and steer us back home, I agreed to do just that.

Friends, I want you to know I landed back on the road not 30 feet from where we started. I am now a certified bush navigator and if any of you get lost, just call me right up and I'll be there.

I did learn a few things on the exercise. I learned that if you don't know what you're doing, the first thing that's likely to happen is you get lost.

To minimize the risk of that, Bill suggests that you don't even try to leave the beaten path without first knowing how to navigate through the bush, that you carry a good topographical map and a compass, that you carry basic survival equipment such as matches, a knife, and some food.

Art also tells me that the Forest Department in Sechelt has an excellent wilderness survival booklet that can be yours free for the asking.

And, again, they stress the importance of letting someone know the area you intend hiking into, so they'll know where to begin looking if you don't come back. If you're short on friends and relations, Bill says call him at 885-2087 before you start out.

You can also call him if you're interested in joining the Search and Rescue team. They have about 12 members now and welcome new recruits.

Another thing I learned during my exercise. If you go missing more than about 600 yards in the bush, the Search and Rescue team has good reason to be a little grumpy when they catch up to you.

Ideas for running a proper country

By MARYANNE WEST

I like Ottawa — even though the highrise growth downtown has completely changed the original dominant position of Parliament atop the Hill. It gives me a thrill to cross Wellington Street, walk through the gates, up the steps under the Peace Tower, through the revolving doors, up the marble staircase and along the corridor to the Commons Chamber. It doesn't matter that the buildings are Victorian pseudo-Gothic, something I'd written off as kitsch in my youth, or that in 1977 they might be classified as pseudo-Disneyland. You just can't ignore the history. The atmosphere created over the years by the aspirations, loves, hates, ambitions and concerns of successive governments permeates the whole area. It's potent and it gets to you.

There are usually groups of visitors and students standing around admiring the architecture, but most everyone else moves briskly, obviously on urgent business. You catch Members of Parliament between meetings, lucky if you can get two or three together, phones ring incessantly, the whole place resembles a massive beehive.

After a few days when the euphoria of being in the Nation's Capital begins to wear off, you wonder about the rest of the country. Is it still there? Does it really exist? How much of the capital's frenetic activity is just a self-sustaining ritual? It maybe that MPs in daily touch with their constituencies do not feel the same way, but I find it frightening to realise how easily one gets caught up in the squirrel cage which is Ottawa and forgets the rest of the country.

By the way Ottawa people speak about B.C. — "I knew someone who went there once," or "Some of my friends went to Vancouver and never came back" — It seems as if they don't really believe there is such a place. I find myself wondering too, but there are a couple of guys in the Secretary of State's department who insist I drop by just to tell them what is happening on the west coast. They too are worried by the isolation of Ottawa.

You'd think that with all this much vaunted electronic equipment we've got at our fingertips these days we'd have seen spectacular improvements since the horse and buggy days. But it only seems to work one way. I have a theory about this. That because the day begins in the east, we all, like sunflowers, tend to be oriented in that direction. That information flows naturally from east to west, but the west to east against-the-stream-flow is more difficult to accomplish. Be that as it may, I find I have a far more comprehensive overview of the country from Gibson's. Landing than I do from Ottawa or Toronto.

All of which may have some bearing on how, but in my opinion no way excuses, a Prime Minister who after almost 10 years in office can claim not to have known what is happening in the rest of the country. That can only be, surely, because he stands there on Parliament Hill with telescope focused across the river on Quebec and with his back to the rest of the country. May I perhaps be so bold as to make some suggestions now that he has been made aware of our existence.

Forget about Quebec for the time being. They're not going to listen anyway, they want to do their own thing in their own way, leave them be. Confederation as presently constituted doesn't have much to offer anyway, with Maritime economic problems reaching disaster proportions, with westerners determined to redresss the imbalance of their colonial status vis-a-vis Ontario, a province which has colonial problems within its own boundaries, and if that isn't enough, there's the North.

The only way to keep Quebec within confederation surely is to sow them a federal government which works. A federal government sensitive to the feelings of everyone in this far flung country — one which understands that a nuclear base at Bangor, Washington, which doesn't pose any great discomfort to the minds of Ottawa citizens looks very much more dangerous when viewed close up from Vancouver, which understands the isolation of coastal communities and their need for a transportation all-weather life-line; which will care about our coastline with the same TLC which is lavished on the Rideau.

A federal government with the imagination, courage and foresight to dream up ways in which Native people may exercise sovereignty within Confederation, be the masters of their own destiny, decide without undue pressure from the rest of us just how many and which traditions of their culture they want to take with them into the 21st century. They have, after all, the same cultural aspirations as French Canadians.

A federal government with a vision of the whole country able to provide the leadership which will bring together the diverse component parts.

If Quebec saw a Confederation shaping up in which cultural identities were recognised and cherished, in which regional inequalities were being replaced by opportunity, they'd be eager and clamouring to join.

Kenneth Galbraith said last week on the TV program Age of Uncertainty that when governments are incapable of instituting reform at the top, revolutions are inevitable.

I do not share the belief of the Mayor of Calgary, Rod Sykes, that because we are all immigrants to this country we are all equal. Some of us are more equal than others and unless governments are prepared to do more than just shuffle the deck, it's not just Canadian survival which is being challenged, but mankind's.

One man's opinion?

By ADRIAN STOTT

"WORK OR WELFARE" ISN'T THE QUESTION

I'm sure you've seen, and possibly signed, the local petition with "Work or Welfare?" in large letters at the top of the page. This loaded question is undoubtedly attracting support for the petition, as most people naturally prefer self-support, but it is misleading because it does not represent the real issue.

The wording of the petition asks the regional district to allow people to have businesses in their homes. However, district agrees with businesses in homes, particularly in rural areas, and its bylaws already allow these businesses provided they meet certain standards and don't get too big or annoy their neighbours. So this apparently isn't the real issue either.

The petition appeared because one man in West Sechelt allegedly ignored a regional bylaw by opening a body shop, and the board, on a complaint, moved to enforce its standards. Those circulating the petition seem to suggest that this enforcement is wrong and that the regional district should enforce its bylaws selectively, or perhaps not at all. I think following such a suggestion would be a mistake.

Of course, only good laws should be on the books. But how can the merits of a law be determined? With our open government system, it is usually possible for the public to comment on a proposed law during its passage. Unfortunately, this is often insufficient to ensure that only good laws pass. Usually very few people bother to involve themselves in the lawmaking process, and those who do all too often seem to be much more concerned with grinding their personal axes than with sound community management. So, bad laws can easily slip through.

The best way to resolve this poblem is probably to have a firm policy of enforcing all laws on the books to the letter. In this way, the effects of a bad law will soon be seen, and public pressure will then force remedial action. Of course, that remedial action should be to amend or repeal the inadequate law.

Unfortunately, it is easy to fall into the trap of thinking there is an easier way out through not fully enforcing controversial laws. To be sure, this policy removes some public pressure from the legislators, but is has some other harmful effects. It allows bad laws to stay in force, and the respect for law essential in a civilized community is seriously reduced by the continued existence of poor legislation.

It also tempts the authorities to enforce laws selectively, perhaps as a way of punishing some citizens whose lawful criticisms may have annoyed the powers that be. And finally, since obeying the law is often more expensive to the individual than not doing so, the good citizen who obeys is in effect penalized by his added costs while the person who ignores the law is rewarded by being allowed a saving. Surely, lawbreaking shouldn't be encouraged like this.

So the petition indicated a definite need for a re-examination of the regional home business regulations, to consider amendments. However, I hope that the regional board will also move toward better, not weaker, enforcement and firmly resist all suggestions to ignore duly adopted laws.

— Legislature Report

Beginning in May, B.C. Hydro will once more be imposing an unfair rate increase on the residential consumer. These increases, ranging from 15-20 per cent, mark the fourth such hike in less than two years.

The B.C. Hydro rate structure is loaded against the small consumer, who pays terribly high prices for electricity and gas, while the industrial consumer buys these products at far cheaper bulk rates.

The NDP government started to correct this situation when it increased the industrial and bulk rate by 70 per cent. Many of the contracts affected by this increase, however, required a two year notice of increased rates. As a result, these rates are only now coming into effect.

Clearly, we must deal with the major consumers who are relatively few but who take up 40 per cent of the current electrical production. While the industrial and bulk consumers use about half of the total energy, they produce only about 28 per cent of the revenue. It is quite ironic that these very healthy industries, who are quite able to pay their bills, should pay less than half what the average homeowner pays.

The Social Credit government is showing little concern about this grave injustice. Energy Minister Jack Davis has said the government would not intervene against the rate increase.

It is also apparent that there is a split within the cabinet over control of Hydro. Premier Bennett has said that he would support the establishment of a public utilities commission to oversee rate increases. Davis, on the other hand, has said that he feels it would be "ridiculous" to set up "another public body to review what a public body is doing."

While the cabinet ministers squabble, the B.C. consumer gets squeezed. This issue requires leadership. I, for one, do not see it arising from within the present government.

Coastal shipping must be treated as a utility, Transportation Critic Don Lockstead, MLA for MacKenzie told the Legislature today following a three-day tour of coastal communities with the NDP transportation committee.

"I don't think there is any doubt that we're going to have to treat coastal transportation as a utility," he said. "There are going to have to be government dollars, whether it is subsidies to private companies, or whether it is a Crown corporation taking over the service."

He said Northland Navigation Ltd., which had operated coastal steamers until a federal subsidy was removed last November, "was truly interested in the service . . . and in seeing that those communities and those people and those companies were serviced."

Travelling with Mr. Lockstead on the tour was Graham Lea, MLA for Prince Rupert.

Mr. Lockstead said that the provincial government, which has failed to arrange an adequate replacement for the Northland service, should approach the Northland for help. "I believe that if the provincial government went to Northland and asked for their help for an interim period of time, Northland would try to help them in any way possible with existing facilities that are out there, and possibly even one of their own vessels."

The NDP transportation committee travelled to Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlotte Islands in the first leg of a fact-finding tour to prepare coastal shipping policy for the party's May convention.

Sechelt Notes

—by Peggy Connor

The date for the Sechelt Auxiliary to St. Mary's Hospital wind up bridge tournament has been moved up to Friday, April 22, at 7:30 p.m. This is a confirmed time, trust me.

Kathy Berry is greatly enjoying living and working in Vancouver. She was back in Sechelt for a visit with sister, Betty and Ed Laidlaw, for a few days. Kathy worked in a local drugstore and misses seeing the many customers who became her friends.

Ben and Louise Lang's grandchildren flew down from Quesnel to visit their mother's sister, Allen and Heather Marshall in North Vancouver. Lisa, 10, and Michael, 8, took advantage of the spring break for their visit, as did Louise and Ben as they joined them at the Marshall's home.

A luncheon to welcome Ermin Robertson back to the Peninsula was held at Muriel Eggins. Present were Ada Dawe, Erna Cole, Dorothy Miles and Yvonne Eggins. Harry and Ermin returned to their home in Selma Park last weekend.

Auxilians and those who would be, remember the Friendship Tea will be held in Sechelt this year at St. Hilda's Hall, Thursday, April 21. An interesting program is in the planning stages. It is hoped that it is in your plans to attend.

The B.C. Weight Controllers will hold its weekly meetings Wednesdays, at the Sechelt Elementary School, formerly held at the Senior Citizens Hall.

wanted $62,952 from the SCHRD for this purpose. They were given $17,520.

Instead of the $55,000 allowed to be raised through local taxation for St. Mary's in 1977, next year the amount will be limited to $25,000 by the provincial government, the same allocation as permitted in 1976.

"Over the next five years the demands for working capital by St. Mary's are quite substantial and obviously Victoria does not agree with it," said Hoemberg, adding, "I therefore question the self pitying tone of Mr. Hall's letter."

The SCHRD budget also included $17,520 for the final payment on new X-Ray equipment, $3,444 for renovations to the building and $69,111 as the hospital district's share of St. Mary's long term debt.

Cut from the final budget was $5,000 allocated to the Pender Harbour Health Clinic. According to the Department of Health the clinic is not a hospital as defined by the government and so is ineligible for funding by the hospital district.

Speaking on Roye's behalf, Mike Ryan, vice president of Fijord Design and a member of the Construction Trades Association, informed the board that many local contractors were worried with the implications of the bylaw and warned the directors that other cases besides the one involving Roye would come before them.

"The board," he said, "should make a decision on how they are going to handle these situations if they arise again." "I don't think" he added, "that complaints about Roye's business justify taking away his livelihood." Ryan pointed out that there was a second petition before the board signed by six immediate neighbours of Roye stating they had no objections to his shop.

Hoemberg warned his fellow directors that instructing the regional district staff to ignore the law in one instance "could set a precedent we may not want to live with." Instead, he said the district should either throw out those laws that are unworkable or redesign them. Until that happens, he maintained, everyone should be treated equally.

A motion was then passed allowing Roye to stay a further nine months on his property while the district sought legal advice on the situation.

Said Paterson after the vote "I think it's a very dangerous precedent to instruct our staff to burn a blind eye."

Almond also announced that he was establishing a committee to "give advice and guidance" to the board members on building inspection matters.

Almond said letters he had received from Alec Simpkins "brings home to me that we have these disputes not so much with the building code but the way it's administered." He continued saying that "no matter how careful the building inspector is, the public feels they are dealing with a bureaucrat."

The announcement brought an immediate protest from Hoemberg who said the building code was meant to be enforced not interpreted by committees.

Answered Mulligan "Let's fire the book out the window and set up the committee anyway."

Hoemberg insisted, however, that the interpretation and enforcement of the code was the responsibility of the building inspector. He stated the board has "no jurisdiction over that aspect" and that "it is beyond the power of the board" to interfere with the administration of building standards.

Almond agreed to get a further legal opinion but still went ahead and established the committee. He appointed Ryan and Maurice Gerrard as the two public members.

Wakefield drops a pair in championship series

WAKEFIELD INN behind two games to zero in their finals against Taws Gun and Cycle in Powell River last weekend. They lost 9-7 in overtime Friday and 7-5 Saturday. The best-of-five series resumes in the peninsula rink this weekend.

Local hockey league champion Wakefield Inn dropped the first two games last weekend in a best of five series against Powell River for the Sunshine Coast championship.

On Friday, Wakefield opened up a 4-1 first period lead on two goal by Jim Gray and one each by Dave Lamb and Brad Joe. In the second period each club scored twice, Kelly Bodnarek scoring both the Wakefield goals.

In the third period, however, with just 10 minutes left in the game and Wakefield apparently well in control, Bodnarek was hauled down on a clearcut breakaway. After no penalty was called, Bodnarek questioned the official and was assessed a 10 minute misconduct penalty.

Powell River seized the opportunity to score three unanswered goals and send the game into overtime. In the overtime, Wakefield regained its composure, held all of the play, and with a fine individual goal by Lamb went ahead 7-6.

But with just three minutes remaining in overtime, the referee sent Lamb off for a 10 minute misconduct for questioning a linesman on an offside call. With two of Wakefield's top players out, Powell River rebounded to take the game 8-7 in the final seconds.

It was the consensus of both clubs and league officials that the otherwise good, clean, freewheeling game was marred by the two exceptionally poor calls against Wakefield. But everyone agreed the clubs played extremely exciting, crowd-pleasing hockey.

Saturday night the Powell River officials replaced the referee and this game was not to be decided by officiating. In other freewheeling, penalty-free affair, the Powell River side came out fast and took a 5-0 lead before Wakefield awoke and replied with three of their own on one goal by Lamb and two by Bodnarek.

In the second period, Joe and Gray brought the locals to a tie and appeared to have the momentum for the final perid.

But it wasn't to be. Just after Wakefield failed to cash in on a golden opportunity, Powell River came back to take the lead for good. They then wrapped in a productive weekend by scoring into an empty net to finish on top 7-5.

Sam Casey was credited with 56 saves Friday night and was equally brilliant Saturday.

Powell River still has to win one game in Sechelt and the local side has come from behind before. The next game in the series is 8 p.m. Friday at the Arena.

The fourth game, if necessary, is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday and the fifth game at 2 p.m. Sunday, both in the Arena.

Come out and support your local champion, Wakefield Inn, and watch some good, clean hockey.

Plan now for hunting licence

Now is the time to plan ahead for the Fall if you want to apply for a hunting license. If you are in either of the following categories, you are required to take the Conservation and Outdoor Recreation Education course. (1) All persons applying for a hunting license who have not held one subsequent to their 14th birthday and (2) All persons 14 years of age regardless of whether or not they have previously held a hunting license.

Some applicants showed up at our local licensing offices last fall only to find out that they need to have passed the course and that none were given in the fall. The Gibsons Wildlife Club has already given the course. The last local course offering this year begins on Tuesday, April 12 at the Sechelt Peninsula Rod and Gun Club's Wilson Creek Clubhouse.

Application forms are available at the schools and at George Flay's Barber Shop. Look for the posters which give additional information and let the club know as soon as possible that you wish to attend so that sufficient texts and materials for the course may be ordered.

The government encourages anyone interested in any form of outdoor recreation to take the course and the informative, attractive text included in the fee for the course will be an interesting addition to any home library.

INTRODUCING
AN ENERGY SAVINGS AND FINANCE PLAN FOR YOUR HOME

THE SAVINGS:

Every home deserves proper insulation. Because when your insulation meets modern requirements, you save energy. And during these times of increased concern about energy shortages, it's more important than ever that we all learn to use our energy resources wisely.

And, closer to home, when you save energy — you save money. While actual savings vary with individual circumstances, we know that when home insulation meets modern standards, fuel bills don't mount up as quickly.

And with the prospect for higher prices for energy, fuel and even insulation material in the future, an investment in proper insulation for your home today is a good hedge against inflation tomorrow.

Last, but hardly least, a well-insulated home is simply a more comfortable place to live. All year long. It's cozier in the winter, and cooler in the summer.

THE FINANCING:

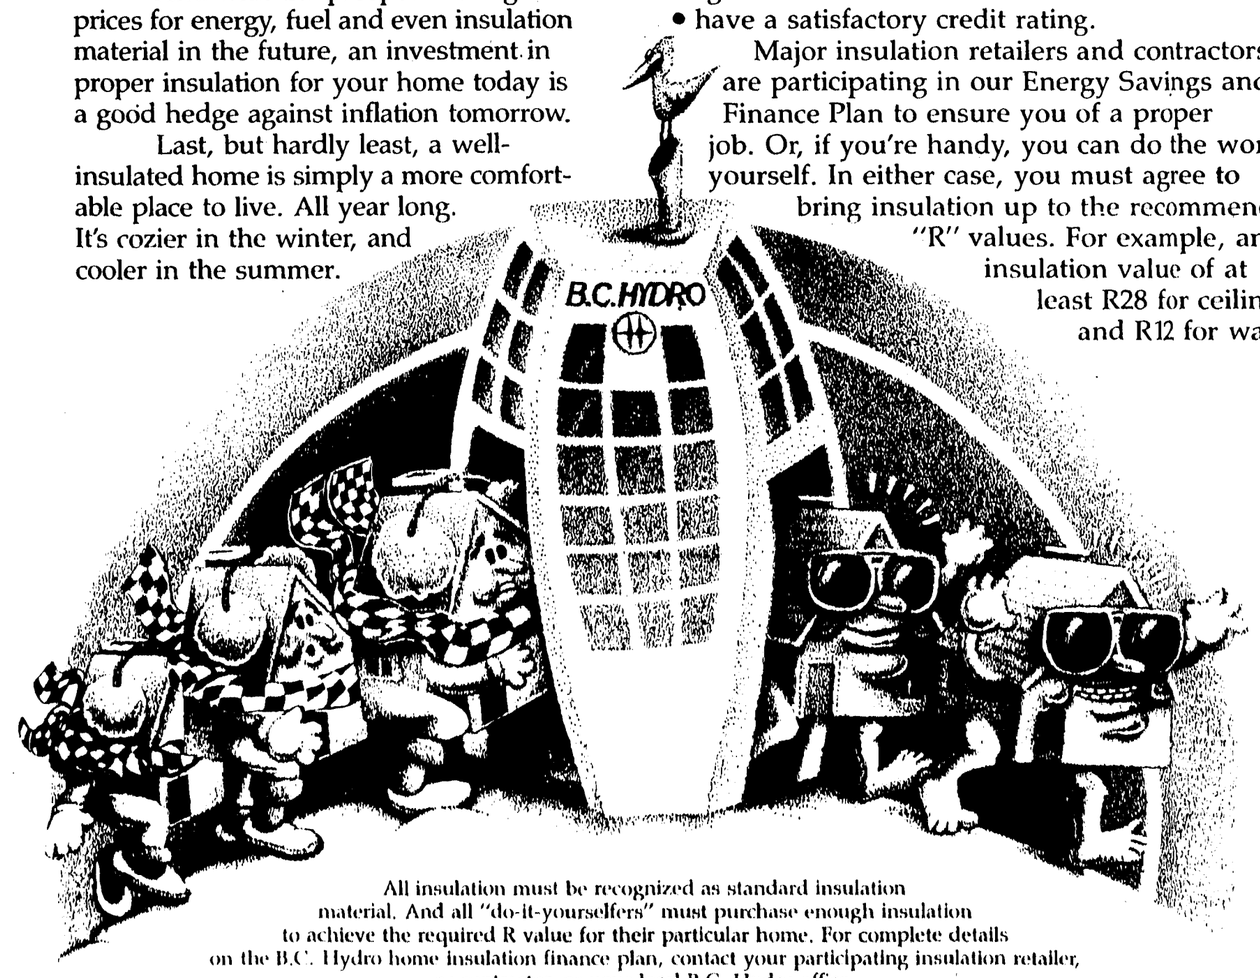
From April 1, to Sept. 30, 1977, B.C. Hydro will provide up to $500.00 to up-grade the insulation in your home. As long as your home has already been built. Our Energy Savings and Finance Plan does not apply to homes currently under construction.

The interest rate is only 10%, repayable over 24 months with your regular utility bills.

To qualify, you must:

- have a residential electric and/or gas account with Hydro.
- own your own home, or be in the process of purchasing it through a mortgage or agreement for sale.
- have a satisfactory credit rating.

Major insulation retailers and contractors are participating in our Energy Savings and Finance Plan to ensure you of a proper job. Or, if you're handy, you can do the work yourself. In either case, you must agree to bring insulation up to the recommended "R" values. For example, an insulation value of at least R28 for ceilings, and R12 for walls.



All insulation must be recognized as standard insulation material. And all "do-it-yourselfers" must purchase enough insulation to achieve the required R value for their particular home. For complete details on the B.C. Hydro home insulation finance plan, contact your participating insulation retailer, or contractor, or your local B.C. Hydro office.

EAGER BEAVER — that must have been what it took to do the job on this stump. Sandy Barrett of Roberts Creek examines the evidence.

Focus on Fitness

In 1951, in Vanves, France, the elementary schools instituted a program in which all academic work was done in morning and the afternoons were devoted to physical education, art, music and supervised study. No written homework was organized. The time spent on PE was raised to one to two hours per day. Work in academics was four hours a day. By 1960, it was evident that the student's health, fitness, discipline and enthusiasm was superior to that of students in a control school which has two hours of PE per week and 23.½ hours of academic work plus homework.

Similar experiments were done in Brussels and Japan. Regina, Saskatchewan, Prince George, B.C. and Victoria, B.C. have also participated in similar studies.

The results of intensive research in these one third time school are:

1(Medical doctors in France agree that physical educatin is an integral part of education, perhaps even the main part.

2) Scientific research into the effects of PE established that: a) it promotes growth of children; b) those participating have better health and fewer discpline problems; c) motor development is better and balance is increased.

3) Those taking one third time physical education had better performance academically and were less susceptible to stress.

These findings correlate with studies in Fort Worth, Texas, schools where the students with a high aerobic fitness level also had a low absenteeism rate and a high academic performance.

Marked differences show up in intellectual development. We wouldn't conclude that that the PE students are more intelligent, but that they develope keener intellectual tools. As the PE pupils have fewer problems, their minds are more open and they receive more from their teachers.

Comparison of the experimental and control groups showed:

1) the one third time PE pupils mature more quickly and are more independent.

2) the PE groups accept the social way of life better.By playing with and against others in a good setting, children learned the life game better than the control group.

3) agressions can be controlled better by the PE group.

The principal of the Vanves Schools sums up the main benefits of the one third time as follows:

1) Pupils can enter the secondary school as least as well as from other schools.

2) They are in better health, stronger, more alert, keener.

3) They are happier, have better attitudes and less stress.

4) Discipline is better, very few problems.

5) It is easier for them to change to other schools.

6) The "esprit de corps" among the teachers is improved.

France now has compulsory one third PE from kindergarten to grade 7 and five hours per week in high schools.

In conclusion, we are emphasizing the importance of PE for all children. It is necessary to support normal growth in children. It is important for children to be active to ensure a healthy childhood.

Our present way of life can no longer spontaneously satisfy the biological need for physical activity, as in the past. Clearly it is important to get people interested at an early age. Anything that is reglected in adolescence can in many cases not be made up later on. Positive early experience is essential for all children if we hope to change adult lifestyle. Unfortuantely, school curricula have tended to reduce rather than increase the recreation time within the school day. This is regrettable since it is during the school years that young people acquire the motivation, understanding, and skills necessary for effective adult living. Hopefully, changes will be made in a system of education that contrains our children during the vulnerable period of active growth to bend over books and desks 5½ hours a day without providing them with the time and resources to discover and use their physical faculties.

Happenings around the Harbour

THANK YOU

Myrtle Myers would like to thank The Royal Canadian Legion Branch 112, the Homemakers of Pender Harbour and all her friends for all their kindness in sending cards, flowers and their sincerity. She said she would never have got by without the help of the homemakers. Mark and Myrtle both feel they can never express their gratitude for such a fine and efficient service available to them at a time when it was needed so dearly and still is. They really appreciate it. The sad part of everything is that Myrtle is going to have to have an operation on her knee cap and this is something she has dreaded ever since she had her accident. She will be going to St. Mary's Hospital and I will let you all know through this column when she does so she will get lots of visitors.

EGMONT NEWS

Many people have wondered where our Hamburger King Lawrence Kelly disappeared to. Well he is working for McClure's Taxi in Vancouver.

Mae Bathgate has been on holidays with Deb and Pat who were in Victoria taking a computer course for their work with B.C. Telephone. Vi Berntzen and husband Gene are leaving in a month for a trip abroad. They are going to Scotland, England and Norway. Gene is going to visit his sister whom he has not seen for 20 years and his brother who he has not seen for 45 years. They will be going by boat when they go to Norway.

There will be an Easter Hat Tea at the Egmont Community Hall on April 6 at 1:30 p.m. and there will be prizes for the most original, zaniest, craziest hat ever created. There will also be a sale of Easter novelties such as Easter baskets. There will also be raffles and tea and refreshments.

WALK-A-THON

The Pender Harbour Health Clinic Auxiliary is sponsoring another Walk-A-Thon on May 15 and it will be the same route as last time, 9 miles return. Last year they had 50 walkers, and this year they would like to get at least 100 if possible. There will be separate classes of walkers. Prizes will be awarded to the first winner of each category.There will be one for high school students, senior citizens, adult, juvenile. If you cannot walk please try and support this "Miles for Health" by making a pledge. For those interested please contact Ruth Kobus and have your entry registered. Phone 883-2779.

The proceeds from this worthy cause will go to the clinic, which has been open for about six months. During that time it has seen over 2,000 people requiring medical attention. President J.H. Tyner says this has been most gratifying to our Dr. Henry Birnbaum and nurse Darlene Snell. It has also been most gratifying to the trustees who have had many reports commending them upon the excellence of the clinic, it's equipment and the quality of medical service provided. The ambulance is giving excellent service in the community. All calls have been answered promptly and efficiently. The volunteers are doing a great job. Ambulance Chairman Mark Myers is to be commended and credited for such excellent supervision in his job of managing the ambulance. The dentists Dr. Frank Carnie and Associates report a good response to their service.

Pender Harbour finally got what we have fought for years to get and even though the cost of operating the clinic has been provided for by government grant there are certain capital costs which were not included in the referendum and are non-recurring and will not be included in taxes and must be paid by the society. It is projects like the Miles for Health Walk-A-Thon, the Bargain Barn and mainly your support that will make our clinic debt free.

PENDER HABOUR COMMUNITY CLUB

On May 7 the P.H. Community Club will be having its Spring Bazaar. There will be plants, home baking, white elephant sales, sewing, raffles, mystery parcels and a tea. If anyone has any articles that could be used for mystery parcels or would be willing to help at the bazaar please contact me. This is the main fundraising event of the year and help is needed. The Community Club plays an important role in the community.

It costs money to run the hall. The expenses average about $500 per month and this money is raised by the work of volunteers. What does the Community Club do? It provides the room, light and heat for the local library. It is used three days a week for playschool. It is used by the high school students for their gym and activities. It sponsors the childrens Christmas party along with help from other groups.

It gives cash donations to the fireworks display, swim classes and youth groups.

It endeavours to provide activities for the young people.

In regards to bingo at the Community Hall, so far this year the attendance has been poor on Thursday nights so the revenue is down and it is not enough to cover expenses. If you want to keep the hall open for all the activities come out once in a while and support the bingo. Remember that a better attendance means bigger prizes and then everyone will benefit. The bazaar is being convened by Muriel Cameron and material is still available for sewing for anyone interested. Donations would be appreciated for the following booths; White elephant, novelties, homebaking and plants.

Spring offering for adult education

This season has been the most successful for the Centre for Continuing Education. More than 10 percent of the adult population has participated in one or more classes and it has been encouraging to see more and more requests for new programs coming directly from the people in the community.

The winter program is finished, but some courses will be offered in April and May.

COURSES

The second Air Brake course this year will be held in Elphinstone, starting April 29. It is a 25 hour program and the fee is $60.

On April 13 Kim Sweet will start a 20 hour course on Beekeeping which includes the history of beekeeping, starting with bees, recognition and control of diseases, how to hive your package or swarm, harvesting the honey, over-wintering, etc. The course will be held in Chatelech Junior Secondary, Room 104 and the fee is $20.

A Dog Obedience course will begin Wednesday, April 13 in Gibsons, if at least 15 dog owners are interested. Livia Whittall from North Vancouver taught a well attended course last year, and she is happy to offer eight sessions again. Fee $15.

Among the new courses this year is Flying. Vera McAllister from Madeira Park is in charge of the program and will be instructing the 30 hour ground school, beginning mid-April. During the following six to nine weeks, Mrs. McAllister will make individual appointments with the students regarding the actual flying. The total fee is approximately $1,481, which includes 30 hours groundschool, 40 hours flying, medical test, flight test, student permit, licence fee, and study kit. The average flying time to obtain a private licence is 40 hours, but some have acquired the skill in far less hours and a few might require slightly more hours. Those interested in this course are invited to attend an information meeting Thursday, April 7 at 7:30 p.m. i Chatelech Secondary School, Room 115.

Gymnastics for Students will begin again Tuesday, April 12. Ed Nicholson and Wendy Skapski are responsible for the instruction together with a number of much appreciated volunteers, who are vital to the success of the venture. Girls and boys 10 years and under will meet 6-7 p.m. Advanced gymnastics will be from 7-8 p.m. Those qualifying for this group will be notified by the instructors. Girls and boys 11 and over meet 8-9 p.m. The fee is $10 per family for 10 weeks, unless a parent volunteers to help coach.

Pat Forst will offer an 18 hour Pottery course in Elphinstone, Art Room, starting Monday, April 18 at 7:30 p.m. The fee is $18 exclusive of materials.

Tuesday, April 12 at 7:30 p.m. Beryl Husband starts a six hour course in Sewing Men's Pants, Elphinstone Sewing Room. This mini-course will be followed by a six hour course in Swim-Wear. The fee for each course is $7.

You and Your Adolescent is a series of four lectures by Elisabeth Brown. It is a program designed for parents and others working with teenagers. It includes the teenager who feels that "he can get away with murder"; the emotional conflict that parents are faced with; the teenager who feels pushed around; nutritional, recreational, educational needs of teenagers, etc. The people who attended this course last year have recommended Mrs. Brown's presentation warmly because of its high value. The sessions take place in Elphinstone, Port. 3., starting Saturday, April 16, 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. Fee $10.

Carolynn Bichle will offer two Yoga classes every Tuesday 10 - 11 a.m. in the Health Unit in Gibsons, beginning May 2. On the same day an evening session will be offered in Gibsons Elementary School, Kindergarten at 7:30 - 9 p.m. Fee $8 for five sessions.

Since the first Stop Smoking course introduced in January, we have had many requests for a second course. Pastor Cliff Drieberg, from the 7th Day Adventist Church in North Vancouver, has kindly offered to repeat the course in Sechelt May 9 - 13. It is five day program where the smokers meet every evening 7 - 8:30 p.m. and by Friday we will have a majority of non-smokers!

A Film Course recently started in Chatelech Junior Secondary School, every Friday. It is a comprehensive survey of the slapsticks, the psycho drama, the silent films, and the musicals of the cinema's golden age. The next performance is Friday, April 15, at 7:30 p.m. "Singin' in the Rain" starring Gene Kelly, Debbie Reynolds and Cyd Charisse. The last film to be shown is "Metropolis" from 1926 on May 20. Each screening begins with a brief introduction. Afterwards there is a short break followed by an opportunity for discussion. The fee is $12 for eight sessions, $7 for four sessions and $2 for one session. Please call for a detailed program.

Please note that pre-registration (885-3512, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m.) is necessary for all events in April and May.

WORKSHOPS

Pat Forst will offer a Pottery Workshop for beginners on Saturday, April 16, in Elphinstone, 9 a.m. - 2 p.m. Glazing will be done Saturday, April 30, 9 - 11 a.m. Fee $8. Maximum 10 students.

A Gym Coaching Clinic for teachers and coaches will take place at Chatelech Secondary School Saturday, April 16, 9:30 a.m. - 3 p.m. Instructor Ed Nicholson and his helpers will show warm-up exercises, vaulting, uneven parallel bars, balance beams, floor exercises, tumbling, etc. No fee.

Monday, April 18 at 7:30 p.m. two registered nurses will present a Breast Self-Examination program in Chatelech Junior Secondary, Room 115. After the film "Decision" a discussion period will follow. No fee. The same program will be shown Tuesday, April 19 at 7:30 p.m. in Elphinstone, Room 109.

John Reeve will teach a one day Pottery workshop for intermediate and advanced students Saturday, April 23, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Elphinstone Art Room. Fee $10 excluding materials.

Saturday, April 23, 9 a.m. to 4;30 p.m. Clair Winning from Port Moody will present a workshop on Parliamentary Procedures in Chatelech Junior Secondary School, Music Room. This is a unique opportunity to learn how to run meetings in an effective manner. Fee $12.

Shearing Sheep with Sheila Kitson on Saturday, April 30, 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. in Gibsons. The workshop also includes care of sheep, feeding, etc. Fee $2.

On May 21 we will be offering a one-day Re-Upholstery workshop in Sechelt. As this involves tools to be purchased in Vancouver I would appreciate those interested giving me a call as soon as possible.

For information and registration please call 885-3512, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Co-ordinator Karin Hoemberg, Centre for Continuing Education.

From the pulpit

By PASTOR GERRY FOSTER

Many hundreds of years ago Job asked the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" It is an age old question which has been asked many times since because it interests all of us.

But the question was answered almost 2,000 years ago and at this season of the year we are reminded of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. What does this tremendous event mean to you? It should mean much and it can answer many questions you have about life, particularly future life.

For one thing when the angel announced 'He is not here, He is risen' death was conquered. Jesus had triumphed over the grave and this greatest enemy of man was defeated. Many of you are afraid of death but that fear can be overcome when the significance of Christ's bodily resurrection is impressed upon you. There is absolutely no hope beyond the grave outside of the resurrection of Jesus, the Son of God. The Bible says, "If Christ has not been raised, your faith is futile and you are still in your sins". Everything hinges on it. But the Bible goes on to say, "but in fact, Christ has been raised from the dead." Praise God, He is alive!

Are you still wondering about life after death? If so, my friend, you are centuries behind the times; for the tomb in which they placed the body of Jesus is empty. You won't find Him there for He arose as He said He would. This can be a glorious Easter for you if you reach out to Jesus Christ, your risen Saviour.

HOLDING THE food of the future, Dana Schroder packs sea cucumbers collected near Pender Harbour back into his car after they escaped in Sechelt. Schroder, running one of B.C.'s more unusual industries, turns plankton into freeze dried fish food Island plant. Sea cucumbers, he says, are considered delicacies by the Japanese and he intends to find a way to make them palatable to North Americans. —Timesphoto

Court news

Drinking, driving offences net 6-month prison term

A man who is said to undergo a severe personality change as soon as he takes a drink was sentenced to a total of six months in jail last week after lawyers argued over his criminal record.

Croft Faircrest, who is facing several other local criminal charges, was convicted of three separate drinking and driving offences that occurred last fall.

Judge Ian Walker imposed the six month sentence after Daniel Steinberg, defence counsel for the accused, attacked the pre-sentence report prepared by probation officer Neil McKenzie and told the judge its contents should not be taken into account by the court.

Faircrest, said his lawyer, denied possessing the lengthy criminal record attributed to him by McKenzie and, continued Steinberg, the crown had not taken the proper steps to verify the record.

"Therefore, the charges must be treated as first offences and I ask your honour to disabuse your mind of the contents of the presentence report," Steinberg said.

The lawyer also questioned the propriety of McKenzie's including his personal recommendations for Faircrest's punishment in the report. Said Steinberg, "In all the time I've been a lawyer for the defence I've never once seen a pre-sentence report that gives the probation officer's personal opinion." Steinberg contended that it is "improper" for such opinions to be expressed by McKenzie.

Called to testify by the judge and answer Steinberg's statements, McKenzie agreed that it was unusual for him to recommend a means of punishment to a judge, but he said, Faircrest was a special case.

"There appeared," said McKenzie, "to be discrepancies in the work history" given the probation officer by the accused. McKenzie also said Faircrest had not kept his appointments with the probation service and that he had finally made contact with Faircrest in the Peninsula Hotel. "I feel safe," finished McKenzie, "in making the recommendation in the report."

Steinberg pointed out to Judge Walker that Faircrest had already spent nearly five months in custody and suggested his problems were related to alcohol. He then called John Sangster, a local member of Alcoholics Anonymous, as a character witness for Faircrest.

In his testimony Sangster said Faircrest had joined AA in 1976 and was "very enthusiastic" about the program, which Sangster compared to an experience of rebirth. "I saw that in Faircrest," he added but related there was "a gradual weaning away" by the accused from the group.

Faircrest, said Sangster, finally stopped coming to meetings in the early summer of last year. Asked by Steinberg if he had ever seen Faircrest drinking, Sangster replied that he had and that "an abrupt personality change" came over the man "with just a minimal amount of alcohol. He can't tolerate the drug at all. With just a little alcohol he was unable to function, he was total confusion."

Crown Counsel Robert Gourlay conceded that the crown had not proved Faircrest's past criminal record but asked the judge when sentencing Faircrest to "err on the part of protecting the public."

In sending Faircrest to Oakalla, Judge Walker admitted that he had intended to rely on the pre-sentence report for his judgment but that "it has very properly been brought out by your counsel that I must disregard your record." But, said the judge, if the record had been proved, Faircrest's past convictions would total 13 years in jail and over $1,400 in fines. Despite Faircrest's failure in the AA program, Judge Walker said he would recommend Faircrest undergo an alcohol treatment program while in prison.

In a separate case, Mark Brackett, 19, was fined $100 for drinking in a public place. He was stopped by Sechelt RCMP in February after he was seen with an open beer bottle in his car.

An Elphinstone student was given was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation for driving a car while his license was suspended. Roy Christiansen was remanded in custody for several hours while the judge deliberated his sentence, which arose from an incident on March 22 when the youth was checked by the police while driving a Chrystler on Truman Road.

A Madeira Park man was finnd $25 on two counts of failing to file an income tax return for 1975. Art Vanderwell explained to the judge that it was his first year in business for himself and, "I guess I'm not as good a bookkeeper as I thought." He assured the court he has now hired a qualified accountant.

Co-ordinating Council news

Fifteen members of co-ordinating council of the six auxiliaries to St. Mary's Hospital met in the board room of the hospital at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday, March 29. Chris Ward chaired a profitable meeting. The hospital administrator Nick Vucurevich expressed appreciation of funds made available by the auxiliaries for hospital equipment.

The Thrift Shop is to have a paint-in on April 17. Please come armed with sack lunch, brushes and rollers. The Gift Shop reports new stock of interesting odds and ends, soaps and spoons at attractive prices. Charlotte Raines reported on arrangements for Blood Donor Clinic on Thursday, April 28, 2-7 p.m. at the hospital. Posters are to be posted as reminders of this important event.

The history of auxiliaries to St. Mary's is beginning to shape up. Pender Harbour recommended each auxiliary have a special fund-raising project to support the Variety Club Telethon for 1978, subject to approval of each auxiliary. The children we can help may be our own. Mrs. Muriel Eggins, Volunteer Director reported eight new volunteers were oriented in March. Extended Care Volunteers met for lunch at the Sunshine Coast Golf and Country Club with Dana Kearney, Director of Nurses, Val Morrison, head nurse second floor, and Lillian Peters, activity aide. A discussion was held on how volunteers could assist nurses more with the patients.

A new in-service "Tea Service" is being organized with Dorothy Miles, 886-7471, as charman. An appetizing meal is hard to enjoy if you are physically incapable of feeding yourself! This service with love will meet a real need. Gibsons Auxiliary members Annie Metcalfe, Ivy Richards and Ida Leslie, and Muriel Eggins, volunteer director, hosted a St. Patrick's party for extended care petients. Mrs. Pearce and Mrs. Webb, the two birthday gals received a beautiful orchid each from Mrs. Jean Longley's greenhouse. Mrs. Metcalfe showed slides of her recent visit to New Zeeland. Four new juniors, Candystripers, were oriented in March; Loretta Harrison, Sylvia Webb, Linda Hanson and Nella Pisanu. Thirteen hairdressers gave 73 hours of morale - building care to patients. All in-service departments continue to serve. Keep in mind Pender Harbour's 40th anniversary tea, Wednesday, May 11, 2 p.m., Legion Hall, Madeira Park, and Gibsons' Dogwood Luncheon Friday, May 13, Gibsons United Church, 11 a.m. - 2 p.m.

New Zealand odyssey yields grand sights

By MARY TINKLEY

Al and Nancy Lawson are home at Eureka after a most fascinating trip to New Zealand. They spent six weeks exploring both North and South Islands and they have returned with the memory of many exciting and wonderful experiences. They have seen spectacular Alpine ranges and peaks, have walked on glaciers which nudged tropical jungles and have witnessed some of the wonders of New Zealand's thermal activity. They have seen geysers which gushed 60 feet into the air and bubbling boiling mud which heaved into the most fantastic shapes. After long warm days of exploration, they have enjoyed the relaxation of bathing in the healing waters of warm mineral springs.

They flew of Auckland but took a local plane from there to Christchurch on South Island, where they planned to start their tour. They rented a small car, a Mini Morris, and drove down the east coast through an area of cultivated farms and sheep ranges. At Oamaru, they left the coast and headed for the interior to enjoy a magnificent view of Mt. Cook, the highest mountain in New Zealand and one of the most spectacular peaks of the Southern Alps. The mountain stands in Mt. Cook National Park, one of the world's most famous mountaineering areas. Over one third of the park is permanent snow and glacier ice.

Making their way back to the coast, they visited Dunedin in its beautiful setting on hills. so that there are magnificent views of the town and harbour from almost anywhere. Dunedin became a wealthy city when gold was discovered in the 1860's and it is now a typical modern New Zealand city. However, the statue of Robbie Burns in the Central Octagon, the street names and the number of Macs in the telephone directory are reminders of its origin as the Edinburgh of the south. It has fine hospitals and university buildings and some excellent beaches.

Stopping for a look at Invercargill, the Lawsons drove to Bluff, the most southerly point of their trip. They turned inland to Te Anau, the tourist centre for Fjordland. It has a tranquil setting beside Lake Te Anau, surrounded by mountain peaks. The name "Te Anau" means "cave of rushing waters" and was a mystery until the subsequent discovery of a series of glowworm caves.

From Te Anau, they drove to Milford Sound on the West Coast, one of the grandest fjords in the scenic southwest corner of the island. Once it was completely cut off from the rest of the island by the mighty range of the Southern Alps which stretches the full length of South Island. Now it is connected by a road over a mountain pass and through the man-made Homer tunnel. The tunnel has one way traffic and operates half an hour in one direction and then half an hour in the other. The Lawsons didn't think it was the right time for them to go through, but they were travelling behind a bus and followed it through without any difficulty. Al Lawson claims that the road into Milford is the worst he has ever driven and he claims to have experienced some pretty bad ones in the days when the Cariboo was being opened up. One stretch of the road is known as the Avenue of the Disappearing Mountain. The trees form a perfect arch over the road and as one drives along, the mountain ahead seems to sink behind the trees.

Milford Sound with its steep bluffs and spectacular falls was an impressive sight. The Lawsons took a cruise for the whole length of the sound in the M.V. Friendship. Their next stop was at Queenstown on beautiful Lake Wakatipu which they found to be a convenient centre for many interesting trips. They headed north to Lake Wanaka where they turned west for the coast over a road which twisted and turned through the mountains. The gravel surface of the road was fairly good and they were agreeably surprised at the sturdiness and power of the Mini Morris.

They made a stop at Franz Josef which lies between two glaciers, the Fox and the Franz Josef. There was a little Anglican church there with a cultivated, flower-filled garden, and the jungle pressing in on all sides. The plate glass window over the altar used to frame the view of the glacier, but during the last 100 years the glacier has receded and can no longer be seen from the window.

The Lawsons took a trip in a Cessna 185 plane which flew over the Franz Josef Glacier and then landed them on it. The glacier extends from the main divide right to the edge of the tropical jungle, 1,000 feet above sea level.

Franz Josef proved a good centre for some interesting walks and the Lawsons took walks to Lake Wombat and Lake Matheson, a crystal clear lake which reflects Mt. Cook and Mt. Tasman which tower behind it.

They continued driving up the west coast, an area of heavy rainfall and poor visibilty which does not offer too much sight of the sea. The average rainfall along this coastal strip is 300 inches and the rain forests offer some interesting specimens such as tremendous tree ferns. Between Greymouth and Westport, they passed through a region of blowholes and punakaiki rocks (stratified limestone formations). After a stopover at Westport, they crossed the island through rolling forest country to Kaikoura. It was a five hour drive from the Tasman Sea to the Pacific. They went out of their way to visit a little fishing village named Halfmoon Bay, but it didn't remind them too much of home.

On the north coast they visited Nelson which has street-names associated with Lord Nelson such as Trafalgar, Hardy, Bridge, Collingwood and Rutherford. Picton, a beautiful city with a good harbour and an island-dotted coast, is the terminal for the ferry across Cook Strait to Wellington. They left the rented car at Picton, crossed on the ferry and took some bus tours in and around Wellington. A cable car which climbs 400 feet to the botanical gardens gives excellent views in many directions.

Renting another car, they drove throught some not very interesting country to Napier where the surf was too high for swimming but there was a good pool and an interesting marineland. A few years ago, one of the off-coast islands suddenly appeared out of the sea as a result of an earthquake. They followed the coast road as far as Gisborne, then cut across to Whakatane on the Bay of Plenty. They were headed for one of New ZeaLand's most interesting regions of thermal activity which stretches from the volcano of Ruapehu in the centre of North Island to White Island, an active volcano lying offshore in the Bay of Plenty. A scene of volcanic action in past ages as well as recent times, it is a land of geysers, boiling lakes, hot springs and hot bubbling mud.

The Lawsons made their headquarters at Rotorua which has a Maori village and a church in a beautiful setting on Lake Rotorua with some fine Maori carvings. It is a famous centre of Maori arts and crafts, including carving, weaving and basketmaking. There is a spa where sufferers from rheumatic diseases can enjoy the warmth and comfort of healing mineral baths. Right within the city boundaries is Whakarewarewa, familiarly known as Whaka, famous for its geysers, including Pohutu wich erupts to a height of sixty feet but has been known to rise to twice that height prior to an eruption. There is steaming ground and mud pools forming concentric rings like chocolate whirls. The Maori tribes of this region learned long ago to value Whaka, where weary bodies and tired limbs could be rested and relaxed in the warm healing waters. Nowadays the local people use the natural hot water and steam for cooking, heating, laundry and bathing. At Wairakei, goethermal steam from a vast underground source has been harnessed to provide power for North Island industry.

Starting out from Rotorua, the Lawsons took a full day bus tour, travelling by Frying Pan Lake to Waimangu, past the Inferno Crater Lake and to Lake Rotomahana, which has steaming cliffs. Two launches took them across Lake Rotomahana and Lake Tarawera to Te Wairoa, the site of a village which had been buried by the great Tarawera eruption of 1886. Excavations have been proceeding since 1936. Prior to the eruption, this had been a Maori farming district with wheat fields, orchards and gardens. Returning to Rotorua, they passed the Blue and Green Lakes.

Another trip they did from Rotorua was to Waitomo Caves, a series of lofty chambers, long galleries and a great cavern dotted with the lights, a million glowworms. They explored the caves by boat along an underground river.

Continuing north to Auckland, the Lawsons visited a cousin 30 miles north of the city. They drove through forests of kauri pine, huge trees, valuable for their gum and for the timber out of which canoes are made. In the Bay of Islands, they stayed at Russell and visited the Treaty House at Waitangi, which is the home of the British Resident in New Zealand. It was here that in 1840 the Treaty of Waitangi was signed, uniting Maori and Pakeha under the sovereignty of the British Crown. The house contains some historical treasures and beautifully carved figures which record the history of the tribes. On February 6 each year, representatives of both peoples still gather at the Flagstaff in front of the residence to commemorate the signing of the treaty.

Cable Bay, the next stopping place, has a copper coloured beach and was the terminus of the trans-Pacific cable which at one time was connected to Bamfield on Vancouver Island.

The Lawsons decided to explore by bus the 60 mile long peninsula at the northernmost tip of North Aukland. It sticks out from the island like a finger and is treacherous with quicksands. There is a stretch of beach which is called "90 mile Beach", which is undoubtedly a slight exaggeration, but the bus did drive for 45 miles along the beach. The Maori driver took them two miles up a creek with quicksands right beside the track. It is indeed desolate country, where forests of pine, the only tree to grow in this soil, are being planted to prevent soil erosion. The bus took them as far as Cape Reinga, the most northerly point of the peninsula. On their way back, they made a stop at Waggener Museum which has some old furniture and household equipment as well as a collection of shells and rocks.

The Lawsons did not find the cost of living in New Zealand unduly high. Hotel rates were around $18 a night with kitchen facilities and coloured T.V. The programs were fairly good and the reception excellent, though in most places they stayed, the could get only one or two channels. All TV programs closed down for the night at 11 p.m., a factor which did not worry them unduly.

One of the most expensive items on the tour was the car, for which the rental is $24 a day and gas, 27 cents a litre (approx. $1.20 a gallon). They found the people of New Zealand most friendly and helpful.

Halfmoon Bay Happenings

—by Mary Tinkley

Saturday, April 9, the Halfmoon Bay Recration Commission will sponsor an Easter egg hunt for the children of the bay at the Welcome Beach Hall at 11 a.m. There will be an egg decorating contest with prizes going to the funniest design, the most original and the most artistic. All children of the area up to and including Nor'West Bay and Secret Cove are welcome.

The Recreation Commission will hold a general meeting at the Welcome Beach Hall on the second Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. Everybody interested in recreation is welcome to attend. The first meeting will be April 11.

The Executive of the Welcome Beach Community Association met April 1 and discussed plans for renovations to the hall when winter activities are completed. Plans include installation of an acoustic ceiling and the panelling of the walls. The committee in charge of the renovations, Roy Gair, Roy Hill and George Murray, will be looking for volunteers. The officers had held some preliminary discussions with the Halfmoon Bay Recreation Commission regarding a proposal to combine forces in putting on a country fair this summer.

Members are reminded to set a few plants aside for the plant sale scheduled for May 7. Janet Allen is convenor.

The social evening planned for April 16 at the Welcome Beach Hall has been cancelled due to the pressure of other commitments. This has meant a change in the catering schedule and ladies who were due to cater for either the April 16 or May 23 evenings should check with Alice Halford or see the revised catering schedule on the notice board.

Mrs. Thea Leuchte's French film program March 25 showed a high standard of presentation, colouring and photography. Probably the most interesting to most viewers was a film on the Mediterranean which escorted viewers on a tour of Spanish, French and Italian cities. There were fine studies of the French town of Carcassonne, near the Spanish border, which dates from the time of Caesar and has a 13th century cathedral and a few Gothic remains. There was a look at Nimes, Avignon and Marseilles before the camera shifted to the Riviera. The surpising part of the pictures of Nice, Cannes, Monaco and Monte Carlo was perhaps the wild and rugged country behind them.

A film on Versailles offered a bird's eye view of the palace and gardens taken from a helicopter. It showed the viewers more of the palace and its gardens than they could hope to see in days of viewing on the ground. The palace, built by Louis X1V, is essentially a showplace, surrounded by formal gardens and waterways. The great courtyard has been the scene of grandeur, gaiety and tragedy. It was here that the peace treaty of 1919 ending the World War 1 was signed. Again an excellently photographed film.

A third film covered the life and career of the French psychological novelist, Marcel Proust.

Mrs. Leuchte in advising that this was the final film of the season told members that next winter's program would be for shows once a month. She expressed thanks to Ralph North for acting as projectionist in the absence of Keith Comyn.

With the fine weather urging people to get out into their gardens, carpet bowling has closed down for the summer. After a very successful season, it was agreed that while members were not generally big, the bowlers who turned up had a rip-roaring time. Most of the games were played men versus ladies

With schools closed for spring break, there were quite a few visitors enjoying the sunshine last week. Among the children who consider themselves lucky to have grandparents in such a delightful place and who never fail to make use of a school holiday to visit them are Brian and Darin Piper of Burnaby who were guests of their grandparents, Bill and Alice Fraser. They accompanied them to carpet bowling but all the efforts of young Darin couldn't win a victory for the men's team.

Another popular grandmother is Blanch McCrady, whose guests have been her son Frank with his wife Edith and their sons, David and Gordon from Coquitlam.

Sonja and Sherry Jorgensen reported their fist sighting of a hummingbird in their garden April 2. We would be interested to hear of any earlier sightings. Sonja also telephoned on the same day to report a skein of geese flying north.

The Leisure Outlook This Week

CBC begins new drama series

Playhouse, Thursday, 8:04 p.m. begins a new series of dramas by George Ryga commissioned by the CBC, Advocates of Danger, presents Jon Granik as the intinerant Danny Kubrick who travels across Canada from Yellowknife to Halifax on a journey rich in human encounter. Danny has worked at all kinds of jobs from DJ in the north to civil servant, but he's no slouch, dresses well and drives a snappy red sportscar. He has a magnetism and empathy which draws people to him and each of the seven weekly episodes concerns someone he meets on his journey.

This week's play, Salt Spring Well, stars Robert Clothier in the supporting role.

Those who remember an earlier series on the history of the Kootenays will look forward to the same lively characterization in George Ryga's newest radio plays.

Special Occasion, Sunday, 5:05 p.m. presents a portrait of American composer-writer-teacher Aaron Copland, probably the most outspoken, articulate, respected and unselfconsciously American musician of his time. The program will include his Appalachian Spring, Symphony for Organ and Orchestra with E. Power Biggs and Copland's settings of American folk songs sung by William Warfield.

Between Ourselves, Saturday, 9:05 p.m., presents a profile of NFB filmmaker Donald Brittain whose documentary on the life of Martin Lowry was nominated for an Academy Award.

Music Festival on April 13-14

Two full days of music from the Sunshine Coast Music, Drama and Dance Festival will be presented Wednesday and Thursday, April 13-14, at the Roberts Creek Community Center.

This fourth annual Music Festival includes 147 entries, comprised of piano solos and duets, accordian, guitar, vocal solos and choirs. School choirs will perform Thursday morning.

Festival sessions begin Wednesday at 9:30 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7 p.m., and Thursday at 9 a.m., 1:30 p.m. and 7 p.m.

The adjudicator for the festival will be Phyllis Schuldt from the faculty of music at the University of British Columbia.

PETER SELLERS as Chief Inspector Jacques Clouseau faces the greatest challenge of his career in "The Pink Panther Strikes Again," opening Wednesday at the Twilight Theatre.

'Pink Panther Strikes Again' at the Twilight

"The Pink Panther Strikes Again" opens Wednesday, April 6, at the Twilight Theatre.

The film is the fourth in the series of Pink Panther films and again stars Peter Sellers as the bumbling Surete Police Inspector Jacques Clousseau.

Clouseau's frantic and disaster-prone pursuits of bank robbers, kidnappers and other assorted law breakers have made this the most commercially successful comedy series in film history.

Herbert Lom, who barely survived his ordeal as Inspector Dreyfus in "The Return of the Pink Panther," repeats the role in this film.

Also prominently case in the Blake Edwards production are British actress Lesley-Anne Down, a star in the popular PBS TV series "Upstairs, Downstairs"; Colin Blakely ("Murder on the Orient Express," "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes"); Leonard Rossiter, and Burt Kwouk, who returns in the role of Clouseau's Chinese cook, Cato.

Viewers might keep an eye on Sellers' handling of the Nunchaku, the Okinawan martial arts sticks popularized by the late Bruce Lee. Sellers carries out this stunt himself and spent long hours practicing with the deadly weapon.

"The Pink Panther Strikes Again" is rated for mature audiences. It runs through Saturday, April 9.

Beginning, Sunday, April 10, the Twilight presents the superb film drama of Ken Kesey's novel "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

The film is the only motion picture in 42 years to achieve an Academy Awards sweep of the major categories. It won the best actor award for Jack Nicholson, best actress for Louise Fletcher, best director for Milos Forman and best screenplay for writers Lawrence Hauben and Bo Goldman.

It is rated restricted, carries the warning of violence and coarse language and could be frightening for children. "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" runs through Tuesday, April 12.

Vivian Chamberlin at Whitaker

April 11 through 23 Whitaker House will exhibit works by Vivian Chamberlin of Hopkins Landing.

Having just returned from a trip to Arizona, California and Nevada, some of her paintings reflect the scenery of those states. Others will reflect professor Sam Black's influence. You will enjoy the variety of her works which consist of acrylic and water color.

Vivian Chamberlin will be at Whitaker House Saturday, April 16, and Saturday, April 23, and will look forward to meeting you on these days.

Mr. Photography

MIKE CLEMENTS KITS CAMERAS

Camera Movement

Don't move blames the camera as well as the amateur photographer shutter release down through clenched teeth when they take a picture. Like other beginning photographers he'a terrified that his subject will blink at the last moment and blur the picture. But usually even the simplest cameras have a shutter speed high enough to accommodate some action by people or things. The most destructive movements are those made by the photographers himself with the head, finger or body while taking the picture.

To minimize these, the camera may be pressed against the forehead with the elbows against the body. Other times, try supporting your elbows on a table or fence. Practice pressing the camera against a stationary object such as a door or post when shooting. If all else fails use a tripod.

The popular pocket cameras are especially liable to movement because the shutter release is at the top and many photographers press the on the bottom of the camera corrects this fault easily.

The more complex cameras have adjustable shutter speeds which can quickly freeze a running figure. If yours is simpler, ask your dealer whether it will allow minimal action shots or experiment. Generally the shutter speed should be about 1/60 of a second or over.

Of course the further away from the camera the moving object in the easier it is to capture it clearly. And head on action that is directly towards or away from the camera is much simpler to photograph than horizontal motion.

The adventurous may want to eliminate blur by panning, following the movement with the camera. But that's not always necessary. Often the lines produced by a sudden movement create a sensation of immediacy.

Garden Corner

By GUY SYMONDS

Some 50 years ago the lower Fraser Valley had developed a valuable small fruit industry to the point where the area around Mission had a slogan that described it as the "Home of the Big Red Strawberry". A strawberry festival was held each year and the resulting publicity brought fresh fruit markets from the prairies and points east.

With the railway the only transportation and with transit refrigeration unknown, it was a big gamble which might have paid off for the merchants but seldom for the producers. A not unusual phenomenon in agriculture.

Since then the fresh small fruit industry has grown by leaps and bounds, but not in Canada. California and Mexico now offer strawberries almost all year round with favourable climate and labour conditions making competition on a price basis almost impossible. But for quality and flavour our own product defies competition.

This, however, is not supposed to be a dissertation on the small fruit industry but is only to emphasize that growing a few strawberries is a satisfying thing to do.

As always, the first requirement for a good strawberry bed is the soil, the source of all life on this planet. Assuming that there is no nematode problem as described recently, the next consideration is the acid-alkaline relationship. Strawberries like the same chamical condition of the soil as do potatoes, that is, slightly on the acid side.

The plants are not long lasting like raspberries but must be replaced after three crops have been taken. These diminish in size with the fruiting years with the first two years being the best. Some time ago the writer was in the south of England and saw one area of some 500 acres where strawberries were being grown under cloches for the profitable early market. These growers replaced their plants every year to ensure top quality fruit that could command top quality prices. The cloches were simply long tunnels of plastic and appeared to serve their purpose admirably.

Strawberries like a well drained soil, light, sandy and warm with lots of organic material in the form of rotted manure, compost, or peat moss enriched with organic fertilizer. Runner plants should be purchased by name from a reliable source. In this part of the world the Northwest is just about the favourite at the moment, being virus resistant and of good eating quality. One of the most attractive in appearance and also very prolific is the Silet, but not in the writer's opinion the best in flavour. New varieties being introduced by Dr. Hugh Daubeny, agronomist at the Agassiz Research Station include the Totem, which seems superior to anything on the market. It is now known if the plants are available commercially.

Plants should be set 15 to 18 inches apart with the crowns at surface level. Add a good dusting of some chlordane powder in each hole before setting to combat weevils and wireworms. Do not let the blossoms set fruit in the planting year, nip them off as they apppar and also remove the runners that grow during the summer. With proper husbandry you should get a pound or more of fruit per plant the next year.

The next season's crop will benefit enormously from manure and-or fertilizer with the weight a little on the nitrogen content. If you have a good sized planting it will pay you to ask the provincial department of agriculture for a spray calendar. It could save you much disappointment.

Hoe carefully and weed thoroughly. Weeds rob you of the food in the soil, and the moisture the plants need. Besides, it looks bad!

With ordinary care you will be able (as children at one time used to sing about Curlylocks) to "sit on a cushion and sew a fine seam, and feed upon strawberries, sugar and cream". Only you will probably be watching television!

Rebekah hosts president

Wednesday, March 23, the officers and members of Sunshine Rebekah Lodge enjoyed a visit from the president of the Rebekah Assembly of British Columbia, Mrs. Ina Freeborn of Port Alberni, B.C. Also visiting on this momentous occasion were Mrs. Evelyn Shaw, a past president of the B.C. Assembly and the "Mother" of Sunshine; Mrs. Hilda Schad, past president from Powell River and their three husbands who are all members of the order. The District Deputy for Sunshine, Mrs. Gladys Brown was also made welcome.

The regular meeting was preceded by a lovely banquet in St. Hilda's Church hall at which time the tables were suitably decorated with bouquets of red roses and white heather, which Mrs. Freeborn had adopted as her special floral symbols. Each place was marked with a single candle set in a holder that was surrounded by red roses, this too having special significance to our president.

Following the clearing of the tables the regular meeting was held during which a significant and meaningful addendum was performed by members of Sunshine Lodge and a thought provoking address was delivered by Mrs. Freeborn. Other special visitors also spoke and special presentations were made toward the Oddfellows and Rebekah's Housing Project.

The local lodge's donation of a bursary for a Peninsula student wishing to attend a vocational school or pursue a career in a trade has been accepted by the Sunshine Coast Bursary and Loan Society and will be awarded later this year.
