Witness tells of Shannon threat

By JEANIE NORTON

"I could blow you away so bloody fast you wouldn't know what happened," Georgia Morberg heard Robert James (Shawn) Shannon tell William Black the day before he allegedly shot and killed Black.

Morberg's testimony March 20 and a highly incriminating letter Shannon wrote Barbara Dae Goddyn asking her and another witness to perjure themselves were the highlights of prescecution evidence last week in the second week of Shannon's trial in Vancouver.

He is charged with first degree murder in the November 11, 1976, slaying of Black in Roberts Creek.

The major evidence offered by Defence Counsel Michael Bolton and William Hamilton as they opened their case was the testimony of convicted herion trafficker John Eccles, who said he had told Shannon that Black has asked him about putting a "hit" or "contract" out on Shannon.

Eccles' testimony is crucial to the accused's plea of self defence, which has emerged as defence counsel's chief strategy.

On cross-examination, Crown Prosecutor Leonard Doust suggested that Eccles' whole story was a "fabrication concocted by you and your good freind Mr. Shannon" while they were in adjoining cells at Oakalla during the last year.

Mr. Justice Kirke Smith and the jury had already heard evidence that Shannon had previously resorted to asking witnesses to lie to strengthen his claim to self defence.

In the 1977 letter to Goddyn, Shannon wrote, "I am in fact asking you to lie for me."

He wrote, "the idea is to lay a story that looks like Bill was after me and I merely acted to defend myself."

The letter, which was reportedly turned over to RCMP before delivery to Goddyn, suggested "It would be nice if he'd (Edward Greenberg, a friend of Shannon's) get confused about what was said." It further asked Goddyn to testify that Black had come by her house the night before his death wearing a gun and telling her that it was "for Shawn".

"Now all this will have the effect of showing that Bill was armed, had made threats toward me and in fact told other people as much," Shannon wrote.

"I'm going to claim Bill and I fired at each other at the same time . . . Your test (testimony) would make it a dead cinch for a self-defence . . . and the real beauty is that your (sic) a crown witness.

In the letter Shannon said that he had in fact seen Black with a gun the day Shannon shot him. ". . . But Danny (Taylor) or Dal (Grauer) got rid of it and their (sic) not about to admit that they removed it from the scene of the crime."

". . . Certain people have conspired to alter the facts of the case . . . So faced with these facts I can see only two viable alternatives. Get help to realign the facts of the case again so I have a shot at self defence and a short sentence or do everything in my power to escape."

Goddyn had earlier testified that Shannon came to her home in Gibsons around 5 p.m. on November 11, shortly after the time of the shooting.

He told her he was "possibly in a little bit of trouble" and that the police might be by. She said he seemed "confused" and "had a hard time concentrating"

Greenberg met him at her home and the two left for the ferry about 6:45, she said.

Another witness, Marion Reed, testified that Shannon came to her house in Vancouver after 9 p.m. that night. She said she drove him to the U.S. border and dropped him off to walk across.

The jury was told in earlier testimony that the shooting climaxed a dispute between Black and Shannon over a trip to South America to buy cocaine.

Georgia Morberg of Gibsons told the court that Shannon and Black had gone together to Bolivia to buy cocaine about the middle of September 1976. Black returned to the peninsula alone several weeks later, leaving Shannon alone with a bladder infection, she said.

Morberg testified that the original drug deal had fallen through, but that when she flew to Colombia to join Shannon on October 17, he was arranging another deal.

Shannon had "thousands and thousands of dollars" but they were in travellers cheques and he couldn't get them cashed to purchase the cocaine, she said.

"The situation deteriorated very rapidly" and the deal fell through, she said.

Morberg testified that "the worse things got the angrier he (Shannon) got" at Black for leaving him when he was so sick and couldn't cash the cheques.

Morberg and Shannon arrived back on the peninsula October 29. Shortly thereafter she entered St. Mary's Hospital with the flu.

She said Black visited her there on November 9 and told her to tell Shannon "he'd better straighten up or somebody would have to straighten him up."

On her discharge from the hospital the next morning she told Shannon what Black had said "in as nice and as mellow a way as I could."

She said that despite her assurances that Black's statement "wasn't a threat," Shannon immediately telephoned Black and said, "What's this I hear about you making idle threats? I could blow you away so bloody fast you wouldn't know

Hydro spraying rejected

A provincial Ministry of Environment committee has rejected a B.C. Hydro application to conduct an aerial herbicide spraying program in three sections of the Sechelt Peninsula.

Hydro had applied to spray the herbicide Tordon 101 along the right-of-way near Salmon Inlet and in two areas between Sechelt and Sakinaw Lake. The corporation has on previous occasions been allowed to conduct helicopter spraying in each of those areas.

Bayne Bance, head of the Ministry of the Environment's Pesticide Control Branch and chairman of the inter-ministerial committee charged with reviewing the spraying applications, was asked by the Times if the application rejections indicated that the ministry is taking a more skeptical view of such spraying.

"I wouldn't want to say that," Vance replied, "but perhaps it could be inferred from our actions.

"We're certainly taking a much closer look at aerial spraying applications than we have in the past."

The committee also turned down recent Hydro applications for spraying in 43 Vancouver Island locations.

One of the committee's primary concerns with aerial spraying, Vance said, is that it affords no protection for streams.

The committee has approved a separate Hydro application for a hand-slash and-stubble treatment program in the above three peninsula right-of-way areas.

Vance said his committee "sort of questions Hydro's philosophy of broadcast spraying."

He said the supposed strategy in right-of-way growth control is to encourage the spread of such groundcover as salal. But the broadcast spraying "knocks out all the broadleaf species, which is counter to what they say they're trying to do."

Bill Coutts, Hydro right-of-way supervisor in Vancouver, said the corporation plans to appeal the application rejections.

"People are looking more closely at these spraying programs, and I think that's a good thing," he said. "But I'm personally concerned that it may go a little too far and make it difficult for us to do an economic and efficient job of keeping the right-of-way clear."

A hand slash and stubble treatment operation is effective in killing existing growth but doesn't prevent re-seeding, as broadcast spraying does, Coutts said.

He said the stubble treatment program would utilize a chemical known as Brush Killer mixed with diesel fuel.

Vance's inter-ministerial committee is operating under the province's Pesticide Control Act, which came into effect March 9. Vance said there is no appeal procedure established yet.

"No one's made an appeal yet. I guess if Hydro does, then the minister will appoint an appeal board."

In a related matter, the B.C. Forest Service announced last week that it intends to treat some 1,784 acres in the Vancouver Forest district as part of its 1978 spring-summer herbicide program.

Both the Sechelt Peninsula and Jervis Inlet areas are included in the program. Herbicides to be used in these projects include 2,4-D, Tordon (a mixture of 2,4-D and picloram) and Krenite.

Further information on the Forest Service's plans was not available.

Gales may be going places

By ED LANDS

Local speculation that the Coast Gales stand a good chance of benefiting from a proposed amalgamation of two mainland hockey leagues was confirmed last week by Bill Mehan, president of the Burnaby Amateur Hockey League.

Negotiations are now under way for a merger of the Burnaby league with the North Shore Amateur Hockey League, and the Gales figures prominently in the expansion plans.

"The Gales are mentioned always in the top round of discussions to become part of this organization," Mehan told the Times.

One factor which may cause some problems in the Gales' participation is cost sharing.

Travel expenses between the peninsula and Vancouver and such costs as meals and overnight accommodations are substantial considerations for these low-budget amateur operations.

The improbability of being able to make ferry connections after weeknight games would also pose problems for players who have to be at work the next morning, Mehan said. The proposed schedule for the new league calls for a 48 game season and many of those games would likely be on weeknights.

Some cost cutting is possible if home team players are willing to put up the visitors at their homes overnight and provide them with a meal.

The cost of ice time and referees would also have to be shared evenly, as is now the case in the BAHL.

Merger of the two Vancouver-area leagues would produce a 20-team league with four or five divisions.

According to Mehan, meetings among the North Shore and Burnaby leagues and Bruce Wormald of the Gales will take place within the next few weeks.

Since one team in the North Shore league is planning to drop out, Mehan figures that for this and geographic reasons the Gales would fit into the North Shore division of the expanded league. A definite decision will be made before the summer is very old.

Mahan said the Gales "would obviously be a competitive team as indicated by their two game series with the Blue Devils. They would have a 50-50 chance of winning the championship in our league as it stands today."

The BAHL was formed about seven years ago under the leadership of Gary Hepting, who was the league's first president. Hepting is now one of two player representatives for the Blue Devils in addition to being the team's number one goalie.

In a recent interview Hepting described the league's format.

The league consists of 10 teams, which are divided into two divisions, the Pacific and Coast division.

This season each team has a 40 game schedule. The Pacific Division is led by the Docksteaders while the Kings hold down top spot in the Coast Division. All games are played at The Columbian Four Rinks in Burnaby.

Along with referee-in-chief Marty Mahovalich, President Mehan maintains firm control of play in the league, weeding out the more chippy players, who are reprimanded by as much as 10-game suspensions and $100 peace bonds to ensure the hatchet men in the league know

A reprieve for angry Porpoise Bay residents

East Porpoise Bay residents angered by two zoning matters before the Regional Board will have a second chance to voice their concerns on at least one of them, following an apparent board error.

The Regional Board approved third reading of a bylaw March 16 that would rezone the Jackson Bros. Tuwanek log dump property to an Industrial 5 zoning, but now will have to rescind its approval and take the matter to another public hearing.

Board Chairman Harry Almond said the board apparently "screwed up" by allowing Mike Jackson to speak at the March 16 meeting, after the original public hearing.

Almond said this is against board policy and the situation looks "particularly bad" because he changed his vote after Jackson spoke.

Almond had originally voted against the rezoning at the planning committee meeting that night, but changed his vote later in the evening at the regular board meeting after Jackson stood up and outlined his plans for the log dump property.

However, Almond said Jackson's statements were not the the reason he changed his vote.

"I've had time to think it over," said Almond at the March 16 meeting.

Jackson told the board that the company required the rezoning so that it would

Log jail story romantic but it's merely a myth

By TERRI BRANDMUELLER

The inconspicious little log building across the highway from the Wakefield Inn is destined to become a Sechelt tourist attraction whenever Hayden Killam is able to sort out his development plans with the village council.

There is some small disagreement, however, about the true history of the neglected 50-year-old building.

Killam, who has purchased the building and hopes to restore it on a site next to the Dolphin St. tourist booth, believes along with many other residents that the structure was the peninsula's first jail.

But local historian Helen Dawe says that contrary to the local myth, the building never was a jail.

People like to believe that "log jail story" because it is romantic, she said, but the fact is that the building's first use was as a combination police and relief station.

"The history of Sechelt is more legend than truth, but there is no way that the little log cabin was a jail — there just Betty Youngson Ingram, a former resident of Sechelt now living in Vancouver, would tend to agree.

Ingram worked in the log building from 1936 to 1939 as a stenographer for Major T. D. Sutherland, the constable in charge of the combination provincial police and relief office.

In a letter to the Peninsula Times written in 1973, Ingram told of her experiences in the "log jail". "I did three years time in those premises," she said, "however, this isn't quite as bad as it sounds. The building was never really used as a jail."

The Wakefield Inn was built in 1926 as a home for Sutherland and his wife. The log cabin was built later as his police office, but Ingram said distribution of relief took up most of his time.

"When I look back on it now there was very little crime in those days, even considering the smaller population. He always put in an appearance at the Saturday night dances 'just in case' but he was very seldom required in a law-enforcing capacity," Ingram said in her

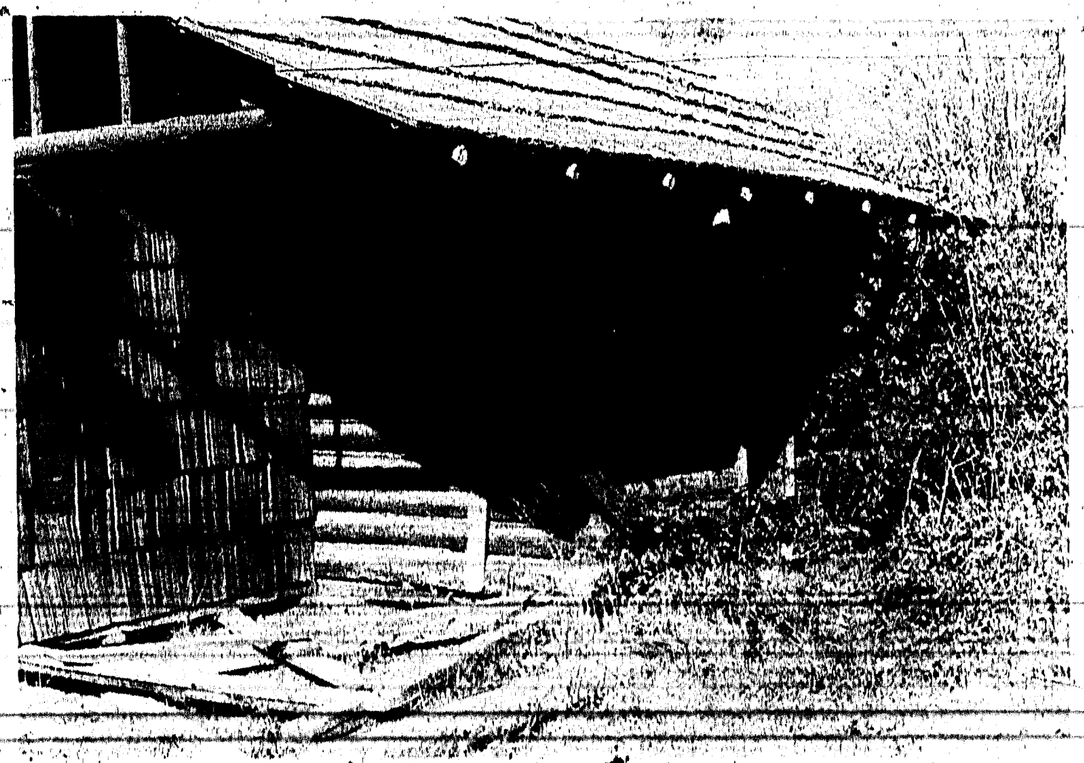
Bring the family — and dance

There are dances for adults and now and then there are dances for the kids, but on April 1 the seldom-met twain will converge at the Roberts Creek Community Hall.

The Roberts Creek Community Association's Way and Means Committee is sponsoring a Family Affair Dance this Saturday, with proceeds designated for a new community hall in the area.

No alcoholic beverages will be sold at the dance. Tickets are available at



THIS ABANDONED log cabin was once a police station, a coffee shop and a taxi stand, but never a jail. Helen Dawe, a long-time Sechelt resident, said prisoners were "left loose" during the time the building served as a police station. Hayden Killam, the owner of the cabin, hopes to restore the old building.

Giving it away

We cannot understand or support Sechelt Council's recent decision to grant the exclusive use of a public facility, without charge, to a Vancouver man who intends to turn a profit on the arrangement.

The aldermen voted to give Jeff Brown use of the village tennis courts for two hours a day, four days a week. Brown said he intends to conduct private tennis classes there at a rate, by his informal estimation, of about $10 per person per hour.

We admire enterprise. If someone wants to start a business here and gamble his resources against the possibility that there is a potential demand for his goods or services, we say, good luck.

We also recognize that there are a number of functions which may not be profitable in a business sense but which are sufficiently valuable to merit public sponsorship and some measure of public support. Our Continuing Education program is such a function. So is the Fitness Service, whose Canada Works grant expires this week. So is recycling, which we have supported in the past.

But the distinction between the two categories — business and public service — ought to be rigorously maintained in the local allocation of resources. Jeff Brown's venture may be a commendable undertaking, but it is plainly a business venture.

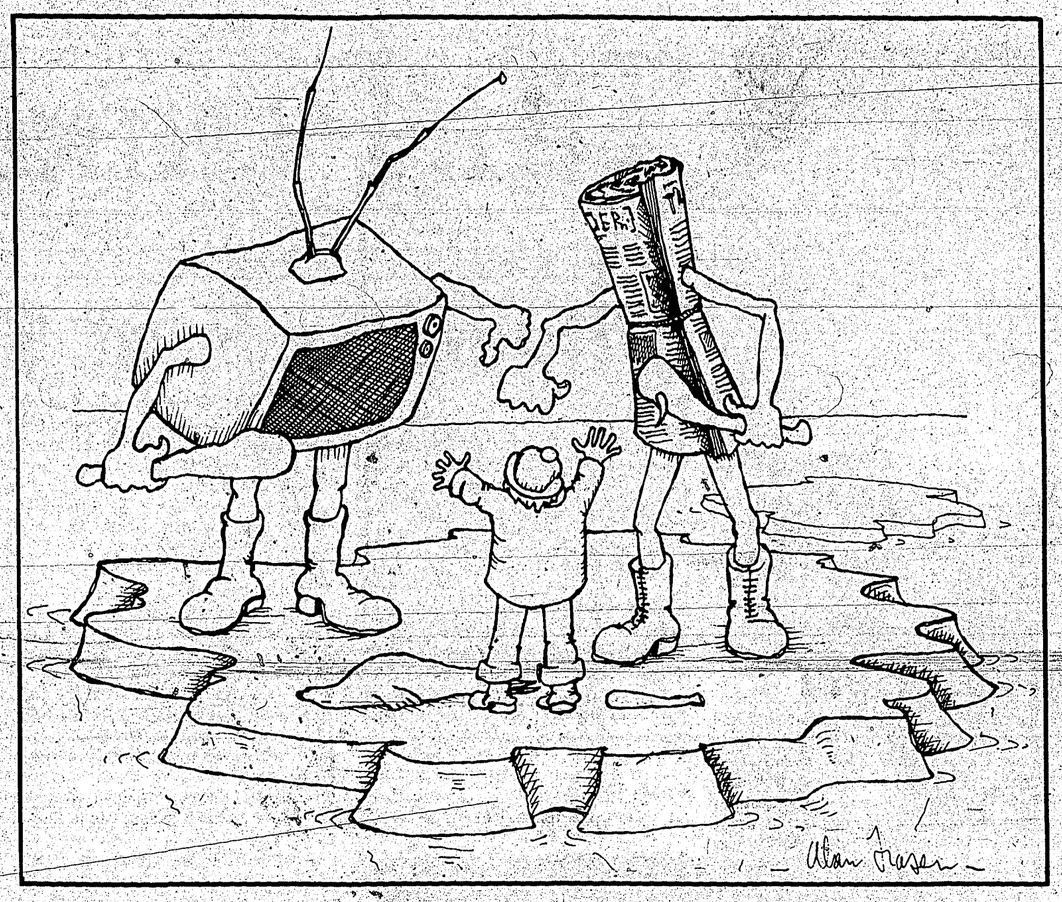
All of this may seem like a small thing. The courts often sit empty for hours at a time. Brown's use of them will presumably create little, if any, additional expense for the taxpayer.

The point is that these courts were built and are maintained by the public purse. Why should Brown, or any other individual, be allowed to profit at the public's expense?

These sorts of arrangements may be arguable in macro-economic considerations in Victoria or Ottawa. But we are not aware of any mandate for our local governments to provide special or favoured treatment to individual businesses beyond a reasonable concern for and impartial treatment of such enterprise.

If even one village taxpayer is prevented from using the courts at a time he desires, the council's action becomes unfair.

We're upset that the village has given away the tennis courts. But we're even more upset at the sort of fuzzy thinking which led to the decision. Brown said he intends to make a similar request of the Village of Gibsons. Let's hope that council shows a little more sense in how they handle the matter.



Nearer, nearer to the melting pot

By Maryanne West

The Inuit Tapirisat of Canada have recently submitted to the Department of Communications a comprehensive, detailed feasibility study for a communications project for their people scattered in remote settlements across the North using the next satellite, Anik B.

It's an exciting project and demonstrates again the tenacity and resourcefulness of the Inuit people, characteristics developed over the centuries by the rigours of an unforgiving environment. Ever since television came to the North with the first ANIK satellite in the early 70's the Tapirisat have been working to upgrade the quality of programming beamed to the north and make it more responsive to their needs.

They have lobbied the government and the CBC and at hearings in Winnipeg, Toronto and Ottawa have become the everpresent conscience of the CRTC. All to no avail. Oh, everyone has been nice to them. The government provides a grant to enable the Tapirisat to run its Ottawa office. The CRTC listens politely to briefs and writes to the president of the CBC of their concern that the Inuit culture is being systematically destroyed. The CBC, while absolutely refusing to divert any of its $500 million government grant from southern priorities, has the "grace" to be embarrassed "to be the purveyors of programming that is a gross cultural invasion."

But no-one does anything. Who really cares about 20,000 Eskimo scattered across the North? Even if they all got together they could be accommodated in Maple Leaf Gardens — hardly a political force.

Those remote northern settlements which so badly need to be able to communicate with each other find the technology used only for the same sort of television programming as we enjoy in the South, plus half an hour per week in their own language, Inuktitut. But unlike us they are not satisfied to be Americanized by Mary Tylor Moore or All in the Family — nor even Torontoized by King of Kensington. They want to use the technology also for programming made by Northerners for Northerners, programming in their own languages which is relevant to their changing life-style, and to sustain their cultural heritage and their languages.

It's not that they want to cop-out of modern society or to cut themselves off from the rest of Canada. It's just that they want to do their own thing, in their own way, in their own time rather than have everything dictated by the South and our values. Quite frankly, they don't particularly like us if we are really the sort of people they see on their television screens.

It's little enough to ask of their fellow Canadians who cheerfully spend billions on satellite technology and hardware to say nothing of the luxuries of our affluent society. They understand that we didn't set out with malice aforethought to destroy their pride in their nationhood and their indigenous culture, but they did hope that when we saw what our good intentions were doing that we'd at least do something to mitigate the effects.

So far we've done nothing except shuffle our feet and make excuses, and do you think the government with so many Southerns hassles on its hands will spare a couple of million to fund the ANIK B project? Twenty-thousand Inuit are hardly worth bribing even with an election promise.

The ANIK B project isn't designed to supercede the need for special programming in the North, but it is hoped to use it to demonstrate those needs — to show that they are real, not just the dreams of a few idealistic people, and that the Northern people are competent to help themselves and meet those needs.

If you should wonder whether this group of Ottawa-based Inuit have perhaps acquired in the sojourn with us the aspirations for empire building and make-work projects of vast proportions, the feasibility study should put your mind at rest. It states categorically that the whole project depends upon its acceptance by the whole Inuit population in the communities concerned. Even if they get government approval and funding, they will not go ahead without this grassroots approval. This is traditional procedure in Inuit society, consensus is essential. It isn't possible to push through majority decisions and impose them upon unwilling minorities, a tactic doomed to failure in the harsh northern environment.

Does it matter to us in the rest of Canada whether the Inuit survive or are bulldozed by technology into the North American melting pot? I think it does, and if we let them go it will be only a matter of time before the rest of Canada is absorbed too.

I believe the way we treat minorities is the measure of our level of civilisation, not whether we have two cars in every garage, a colour TV or two chickens in every pot.

We are told that our callous disregard for the needs of another cultural minority has brought Canada to the verge of collapse as a nation. The French-speaking minority, large enough and sophisticated enough in the use of political blackmail, has forced us to recognise their claims to equal status. One of the issues which both the founding nations share is our responsibility to the First Citizens of this land — a moral obligation which we should address ourselves to first. Surely neither of us believes in the late 20th century that conquest gives us the divine right to destroy another civilisation and culture.

Can Canada afford the loss of a culture in which tenacity, resourcefulness, innovation, trustworthiness, co-operation and an ongoing struggle for excellence have been the dominant characteristics? These are the qualities mankind needs for survival and the Inuit have a proven record. Our need for them may be greater than we realise.

What can we do to help? Make your feelings known to the government. If you don't have time to write a letter, clip this column, add your name and address and mail to Hon. Hugh Faulkner, M.P. Minister of Northern Affairs, Ottawa. Five minutes of your time and not even a stamp needed. A copy of the feasibility study is available if anyone would like to read it.

Reflections

When the cheering stops

By Vern Giesbrecht

This column is dedicated to athletes who are past their time.

I saw many of them at the B.C. high school basketball tournament in the PNE Agrodome recently. It's easy to spot the over-the-hill basketball players. They're the ones wearing their old team jackets, the ones with wistful looks in their eyes, the ones who need little prompting to reminisce about their own exploits on the court.

Though they appear to be absorbed in the games, these aging athletes are casting their minds back to the glorious days when they were the centre of attention, the object of cheers and boos and gasps of amazement. Ah, to be as young and fit and skillful again!

As regularly as the swallows return to Capistrano each spring, we return to the annual championships, a joyful pilgrimage, but one that's also a poignant reminder of how quickly the years roll by.

"Should we go sit on the bench again?" a former teammate asked as he greeted me before the M.E.I.-Terrace game. I laughed, remembering the many times we lingered on the bench, urging the M.E.I. first stringers to establish a big lead so we could get into the game. "The coach didn't play us as much as he should've, you know," my former teammate said. "Well, that's life."

My former coach was at the Agrodome, balder that ever but sporting a trim black beard that was flecked with gray, and I saw teachers and neighbours and opponents, too — people who had been in the UBC gym when M.E.I. climaxed an undefeated season by trouncing Port Alberni in the championship game.

Did they recall, as I did, the minutest details of that great day? Or was I alone in cherishing the memory of the cheers from 6,000 throats, the drums and trumpets and noise-makers that signalled a score, my flukey basket at the final buzzer, the wild celebration on the court, and the parties and banquets that followed our triumph?

Perhaps they did, but their attention was fixed on this year's team, the prospects of players who were mere toddlers when I wore an M.E.I. jersey. I tried to do the same but everywhere I looked a face would trigger memories.

More than birthdays or New Year's Eve, the provincial basketball tournament marks the passing of another year for me, prompting reflections that are not always cheerful. As much as I enjoy basketball, I'm always glad when the season is over, because it means I can get on with whatever I'm doing without persistent reminders of an event that has assumed too much importance in my life.

I don't want to become like the characters in "That Championship Season," a powerful drama that was performed at the Arts Club several years ago. The play, dealing with the tenth annual reunion of a championship basketball team, portrays the shattering effects of the decade on their lives and the coach's vigorous but futile efforts to make everything right with his once legendary pep talk.

Our lives have been more prosaic, our troubles and successes less startling than those depicted in the play. After high school, my teammates and I went on to become teachers and lawyers and electricians and draughtsmen. Most of us are married and have families. We don't have reunions but when we meet by chance, we remember, often without words, the special excitement and pride of being the very best at a game we loved.

The cheers we hear are rarely for us now, but it's enough to remember when they were and to realize that applause and adulation are not the essence of life.

If they were, outdated athletes would be the saddest people in existence as they strain to hear the cheers that have died.

Book Look

BURGER COOKERY by Pat Jester, HP Books (McGraw-Hill Ryerson) c1978, $5.95 paper.

VANCOUVER DEFENDED by Peter Moogk, Antonson Publishing (Douglas & McIntyre), c1978, 128 pages, $10.95, cloth.

GARDEN CONSTRUCTION IN PICTURES by Adrienne and Peter Oldale, DD&C (J.J. Douglas) c1973.

Burgers, battalions and bricks could be the title of this column because the first book tells how to use a burger cooker, the second about Vancouver's armed defenses of the past and the third, instructs in the creation of garden borders and walls.

When I picked up BURGER COOKERY, I was expecting to find out how to cook hamburger in many ways. Instead, I learned how to use those little counter-top electric griddles that are advertised on TV. Marvellous things can be accomplished with these gadgets. Almost any recipe that might be made on a stove top can be done in one of these little cookers. If there are only two of you or if you want to economize and use only a small "stove", the burger cooker seems ideal. Some of them have a two-cup capacity and can stew, therefore, fair quantities of food for one or two people.

Polynesian Stuffed Bratwurst is European sausage, split lined with pineapple and wrapped in bacon. After a few minutes in the cooker, it can be put on small rolls ready to eat.

The beginning of the book is a buyer's guide to various kinds of appliances, large and small. The middle of it has recipes — truly mouth watering ones — while the last section gives a series of menus which offer variety and ease of preparation. Make candy, pizza, and even little pies on your burger maker. It seems to be one gimmick that isn't — if only you have a little imagination and this book.

I am sorry to say that I am not a collector of war yarns. But if I were I think I would enjoy VANCOUVER DEFENDED. In it are a lot of pictures and stories of the days when Vancouver was young. Major R.V. Stevenson, who is co-author of the book, is the historian of the 15th Field Artillery Regiment, R.C.A. Many of us who were small children during the Second World War, had no idea how our area was prepared in the event of an attack. Much of the news was censored, of course, but there were plans, indeed, for the protection and defense of the Canadian west coast. Even back in 1878, the Victoria-Esquimalt batteries were in operation. When the war broke out in 1914, British Columbians "looked upon the war in Europe as their own for membership in the British Empire". Three vessels, The Rainbow, The Algerine and The Shearwater, though no match for German cruisers, patrolled the West Coast down as far as Mexico.

Photographs of the companies in their smart uniforms and their gallant poses bespeak a patriotism seldom if ever seen now.

Later on, during World War Two, the gold and blue of the old days put by, and the kakhi donned, soldiers constructed batteries at Point Grey, Stanley Park and under the North Narrows Bridge. Today there is still evidence of gun emplacements and forts all along our coast, but most of them are overgrown and long forgotten.

GARDEN CONSTRUCTION is a practical how-to for those of you with the time and inclination to improve your yards. Usually it takes just a browse through one of these to get me planning and dreaming. There are hints for lawn makers; planting and turfing. Patio people will have fun laying out bricks and slabs the way the Oldales show. Fence builders will find some new ideas, too. Even creating garden furniture out of small trees to make lovely rustic benches and tables is in the pages. At the end of the book we find the fish pond section.

Many of the garden books have only a few pages with a few stale ideas. This one has 160 pages mostly in photographs, and the designs are both practical and unique.

Between the lines

One for David

By Dennis Fitzgerald

Some good news this week for all the local Davids who may have begun to feel that Goliath B.C. Hydro was just too big for them.

That's how I viewed the news that Hydro had had some applications for aerial herbicide spraying turned down. This aerial spraying is particularly offensive because it allows for virtually no discriminations as to what is sprayed in the target area.

Hydro will continue to use herbicides on the right of way but, for the moment, will be restricted to a much more selective slash and stump treatment program.

Even more encouraging that this isolated victory is the acknowledgement by both Hydro and the pesticide control committee that spraying applications are now being given more rigorous scrutiny. About time.

I will be interested in the outcome of Hydro's appeal of the committee decision. It should offer some indication of just how far the government is willing to go in backing up the judgements of lower echelon experts.

The committee's decisions do not mean that the battle is won and that all the spraying opponents may now return to tending their own garden. Keep those cards and letters and petitions coming, folks.

The committee's decisions may mean that things are not quite as hopeless as we had begun to fear, that perhaps B.C. Hydro may be vulnerable to public opinion.

In any case, we now have a little wider margin for hope. Something else to smile about as we notice new daffodils nodding by the doorstep and the broom preparing to burst forth everywhere. Spring is slipping in, and the new life reminds us that questions such as our society's reckless use of pesticides are not concerns wisely relegated to economists and technicians. They are questions of morality. Our persistent failure to resolve them casts a long shadow before us.

APOLOGY

This column also has to include an apology. Due to printing difficulties last week we lost our editorial page, several regular columns, an important review and a few other items which had been promised for publication.

To all our readers and contributors who called to complain and to all of those who didn't but were annoyed, I can only say that I'm sorry and that I will certainly make every effort to see that it doesn't happen again.

Squaringly yours

By MAURICE HEMSTREET

Hello, fellow square dancers, glad to hear that you have had a good day. Well, I have had quite a few good days myself like on March 4th. I went along with caller Harry Robertson and his beginner class and some of The Sunshine Coast Country Stars to the Annual Beginner Square Dance Jamboree held this year at the Gladstone School in Vancouver. There were about two sets all told (well, some didn't). Anyway, the fun started with the ferry ran over a log or a tugboat with a great thump. However, there were no tugs missing, but Harry had his own thoughts as he said, don't worry, we just hit a pot hole and you know, everyone believed him. I even expected to see a grader out there on the way home.

Well, to get on with the story, we checked in at the motel, got squared away, went out to supper then back to the motel for a quick change into our square dance finery. Then we went on to the Gladstone School where a bevy of callers (too many names to put onto paper) put on a three-hour program that was just fantastic and I must say this, I have never heard any of these callers do as well or call with so much enthusiasm and it will be a long time before this jamboree will ever be forgotten.

I went right to the top of the bleachers and tried to count the squares on the floor, first time thru I got 38, the next time 42 squares with about six sets on the sidelines taking a rest. Well, you figure it out, but in any event that's a lot of square dancers having a great deal of fun.

There were two real highlites of the evening and the first was when I had the pleasure of square dancing with a member of the Westburn Wranglers, yes, Bonnie Brown from Burnaby, B.C. knew just where I should be in the square dance at all times. She is just a great dancers and why more of the younger generation don't get into square dancing I will never know, because it's not only great fun, you meet new friends, travel from place to place and even country to country and each square dance is different, never two the same.

The second highlite was when Charlie and Stella MacGillivray were introduced and Charlie took the callers stage by storm and had the dancers just a whirling to keep up with his clear calls. When I asked how old he was, I still don't know if he has been calling for 39 years or if he is 39 years old and holding. Maybe someday I will find out, anyway, Charlie is a fantastic caller.

Next morning at a pancacke breakfast, Harry was up to his old tricks of tossing a pancake, where it came from I do not know, but it landed on my fork, so what else is new, I ate it. With a sigh in our hearts and laughter in our voices we headed for home, with another successful square dance jamboree becoming history.

With the news that our oldest daughter Sandra and son-in-law Ron had a new six pound, eleven ounce baby boy, Brian Maurice Tucker, we took for Victoria on March 9 and kinda suprised Sandra on that Thursday evening at the General Hospital in Victoria. We found that all are doing well, even the father, and all are back home. One thing that Sandra said to me was that she didn't know how it happened and I said, my goodness, I told you about the birds and the bees and she said, I know, you think I am dumb, why everyone knows the birds sing and the bees sting and I said well, there you are and she said oh! gee whiz, I just don't know what to make of that daughter of ours.

On the Saturday-night I did get in on a square dance at the Colwood Community Hall, where Fred and Chris Willing and their Rocking Squares were on hand, along with caller of the evening Dave and Millie Routley and their Frontier Twirler's. Also I talked with quite a few of the Mavericks club, and they all seemed to know my baby sister Myrtle Olson who used to belong to the Mavericks until she probably became too unruly and they had to turn her out to pasture, I really can't see any of our family quitting the square dance picture, too much fun. Anyway, with over five sets on the floor I was asked to do a guest tip which I did with great pleasure, I just happened to have a hundred of my records with me. The atmosphere at the Colwood Hall and the square dancers there was just like home, another square dance night I will never forget.

Well, back home again March 17. With the Sunshine Coast Country Stars and two and a half sets present, I came to the conclusion that I should really learn how to call a square dance. However, given a few hours' notice I'm always ready to fill in where I may be needed due to the fact that probably no one else can be found. Call 885-3359 and ask for Golden Tones for information on square dancing.

Deanne Robertson was on the birthday list for March and when asked how old she really was she said, 39 and holding like everybody else, hmmmm. Eileen Greeves made a beautiful cake for the occasion, but I just don't understand the mean look she had in her eye. Jack Inglis also joined our 39er club with the comment, more years than he can remember, but Uncle Jack, when you are young at heart the years don't matter.

Well, once again I have caught up, so the good Lord willing and the creek don't dry up, have a good day and I will see you at the next square dance. Cheerio.

P.S. My mother says hello to all the Country Stars.

what happened."

She told the court that Shannon left her house shortly before noon on November 10 and returned between 7:30 and 8.

She said he was pounding his fists on his knees, heaving back and forth, angry and raving.

"That (obscenity) Bill. I was so (obscenity) mad at him today I could have killed him. I even took a gun to his house but he wasn't home," she quoted Shannon as saying.

She said she and Shannon had a long conversation about lifestyles and that when he left her house the next morning he seemed "very happy and cheerful from our conversation."

"Everything looked its absolute brightest," she said Shannon loved her and there were to be no more drug involvements.

The news of Black's death later that day was "a nightmare," she said.

"It scared me to death" that Shannon could have been serious about wanting to kill Black, she said.

In an effort to impugn Morberg's testimony, the defence presented three witnesses.

Elaine Spitzer, a Vancouver lawyer, testified to having been introduced to a Shawn McCord (an alias Shannon was then using) in the company of Greenberg at her office between 4 and 5 p.m. on November 10.

Diana Zornes of Roberts Creek testified that she had seen Shannon and Greenberg on the ferry returning from Vancouver that evening. She said "as far as I can recollect it was the 7:10 ferry."

However, under cross-examination, Zorres admitted "it could very well have been 6 o'clock." She had also testified under direct examination that "it was a normal ferry ride as far as I was concerned."

Her latter statement was in conflict with the earlier testimony of Capt. Anthony Burton, who testified that he was in command of the 7:10 ferry.

He said that the trip to Langdale regularly took 53 minutes but that on November 10 the 7:10 sailing took 77 minutes because "due to extreme tidal conditions I missed the terminal and had to turn around to come back again."

On Thursday morning Eccles, under police guard, appeared as a witness on behalf of Shannon.

Eccles by his own description considered a "kingpin" in the drug trafficking world, had been sentenced just two days previously to six years in prison for heroin trafficking.

He testified that he had known Shannon since 1972 when Shannon was working for the Narcotics Addiction Foundation and that he had met Black on numerous occasions when both were purchasing heroin for their own use.

Eccles said that on October 31, 1976, he had told Shannon that he had been approached by Black and that "Mr. Black had asked me if I knew anywhere I could put a hit out on Mr. Shannon."

He also said that Black had said that he was willing to pay up to $5,000 to have Shannon killed.

On cross examination Eccles admitted that he and Shannon had occupied adjoining cells at Oakalla Prison during the last year or so. Prosecutor Doust then suggested that Eccles' whole story was "a fabrication concocted by you and your good friend Mr. Shannon" while in prison together.

In other testimony, Wendy Marie Rose Sumner said that as an RCMP toxicologist she had examined Black's body tissue and determined that at the time of his death he had a blood alcohol level of .08 and that there was Demorol present in his blood, liver and kidneys.

RCMP Cpl. Donald James Watson testified that a .410 cal. gun referred to in previous testimony as being at Black's home, was a potentially lethal weapon, capable of killing a person at a distance of up to 20 or 30 yards.

Earlier testimony by Daniel Taylor and Dal Grauer, friends of Black, revealed that the pair had taken the gun to Black's home as "a joke". Grauer testified that the gun could not kill except at close range and was not to be taken seriously.

The trial continues this week with Shannon expected to take the stand in his own defence.

letter.

However, during the depression years, the distribution of relief was a life saver for those in peninsula relief camps.

"These poor devils in the relief camps were working for pennies hand-hewing cedar logs for culverts," said Dawe.

About 1939 the police and relief departments vacated the log cabin office and rented one of the Union Steamship orchard cottages, behind what is today the Sechelt Bowling Alley.

The first jail was installed there in one of the bedrooms.

"The cell or cage was quite a primitive style thing," said Ingram. "I remember it vividly as the metal plate sections sat for weeks in the office, getting in everyone's way before it was finally assembled, and I had many a bruised shin from trying to get past it. As to who had the honor of being its first overnight guest I cannot remember, but he had my sympathy."

The Wakefield Inn was sold in 1940 and became a beer parlour. Dawe said the little log cabin likely sat idle for a few years or was used as storage up until the 50's when a number of ladies operated coffee shops out of the buildings. At one period during the 50's the old "log jail" was called the Hava Java Coffee Shop.

Killam feels that regardless of whether the cabin was the first jail or not, it has historical merit as the first police station.

"Obviously the cabin was the first police station and surely for that reason alone, it's worth fixing up for everyone to see," he said.

And because the log building was the first police station, Killam feels it probably served as the first jail, even without a cell.

"I'm sure if the police had a prisoner to lock up, the station would be the logical place to do it," said Killam, "and in that sense it was a jail.

But Dawe disagrees. Before Sutherland's time when Helen Dawe was a young girl, her grandfather was the only law enforcement officer in the area.

"He left people loose until a boat came from Vancouver. No one was locked up then and no one was locked up in the old police office by Major Sutherland, either."

they will be dealt with severely. A player in such a situation has five days to appeal a decision made by Mehan. Disciplinary action by Mehan follows an interview with the players involved and the referees.

This procedure is now followed in the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association, which penalizes players sight unseen based on reports filed by game officials to the BCAHA headquarters.

In order for a league to become a member of the BCAHA it costs the league $200 per team. Add this to the player's pay-to-play costs, and Mehan says there is really no benefit to being a member of the BCAHA. This is particularly true in the case of the Burnaby league which has its own governing body and thus takes care of its own.

The Burnaby league's directorship, which consists of two representatives from each team, is striving for the betterment of the league, the players and the community.

An indication of the latter is the fact that if a player is involved in a public disturbance within 48 hours after a game, the player is liable to disciplinary action by the league hierarchy.

There is widespread local agreement that the calibre of organization present in the BAHL would greatly benefit amateur hockey on the Sunshine Coast. It appears to be up to the Gales' management to come up with some kind of financial wizardry which would enable local hockey to take a giant step in the right direction.

continue business "according to the needs" of the operation.

Propery owners in the area were worried that the rezoning would lead to the establishment of a sawmill at the site and cause industrial pollution of the Tuwanek area.

Area C Director Charles Lee, who represents the Tuwanek area on the regional board, said then that the residents would take legal action to fight the rezoning.

It also looks like Sandy Hook property owners protesting "illegal asphalt manufacturing" stand a chance of getting more help from the board than indicated at the March 16 meeting.

Board members told the residents then that they could take no action against the asphalt operation being conducted at the Pacific Rim Aggregates gravel extraction site because the operation did not violate zoning bylaws.

However, Almond said last week that after further investigation "it seems that more buildings have been erected on the site than would be allowed for an ordinary gravel operation."

He said the board had understood March 16 that the asphalt operation constituted "just a small increase in useage" and that the business continued to fall within its currently designated non-conforming use category.

Almond said he will recommend that the board re-examine the matter.

A delegation led by Frank Giampa, chairman of the Sandy Hook Home Owners Association, asked the board March 16 for a stop work order against B.A. Blacktop on the grounds that it is operating a manufacturing plant at Pacific Rim without benefit of a permit.

He said Planning Director Robyn Addison had told association members at an earlier meeting that since the asphalt operation was a portable plant and no buildings were needed, it did not require a permit.

Mobile homes are as important to us as they are to you.

Mobile homes are playing an important role in providing housing for British Columbians ... and the Mobile Home Act has been introduced to provide an important service to those involved in mobile homes.

The Mobile Home Registry, a first for Canada, has been set up to recognize the rights and protect the interests of buyers and sellers of mobile homes. It's similar to the Land Registry in that it acts as an information centre that keeps a complete record of the ownership and location of all mobile homes. It means that all sales and changes of location are registered to protect ownership interests. It means that a title search can be requested to assure buyers that they are indeed getting legal title. And because it provides lenders with better security, it could mean better financial terms for purchasers of mobile homes.

The Act is in effect as of April 1, 1978. After that date all mobile homes must be registered before they can be sold or moved. If you're a mobile home owner at present, or are considering becoming one in the future, or are involved in the sale or financing of mobile homes, you should be aware of how the Mobile Home Act protects you. Information kits have been sent out to all known mobile home owners and other interested parties, but if we missed you... let us know.

Any information you may need is available from the Mobile Home Registry in Victoria, Regional Offices of the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing and Government Agents.

Times COMMUNITY REPORT

Halfmoon Bay happenings

Community news

By Mary Tinkley, 885-9479

On Saturday, April 1, the last whist drive of the season will be held at the Welcome Beach Hall, starting at 8 p.m. Everybody welcome.

The regular monthly meeting of the Halfmoon Bay Hospital Auxiliary will be at the hall on Monday, April 3 at 8 p.m.

Carpet bowling will wind up for the season with the games on April 10. So far, both men's and women's teams have had some decisive victories and defeats, so April 10 will surely see a tussle for the final victory. All bowlers are urged to come along and bowl for their side.

Gardeners in the area are reminded to put a few plants aside for the annual spring plant sale at the Welcome Beach Hall on Saturday, April 22, at 2 p.m. On the evening of the same day will be a social evening, when the Welcome Beach Executive has arranged an exhibition of square dancing by Maurice Hemstreet's group.

TRAVELLERS

Bessie Maybee is home after a visit to her brother who owns a ranch at Williams Lake. She travelled by B.C. Rail which she found most exciting, offering some spectacular scenery. Built more than half a century ago, it was originally known as the PGE and is a tribute to the pioneers who engineered it.

One advantage to Miss Maybee of travelling by B.C. Rail was that the train stopped right at the gate of the ranch which was originally an old Hudson's Bay siding. Her brother, Arnold Maybee and his wife Vera live in a modern modular home behind the old ranch house which is occupied by their daughter and son-in-law, Linda and Jim Amos. They rear cattle and white faced ponies and they thoroughly enjoy the winters with plenty of skating and skidooing. By flooding their front yard at the first frost, they have their own private skating rink.

Thea Leuchte is home from Vernon where she paid a visit to her son Nick and his family who recently moved there from West Vancouver. They drove her up to the Silver Star Ski slopes where Nancy Greene was taking part in some ski-ing events. She returned home in time to entertain old friends from West Vancouver, Mable and Derrick Hawkins and their children, Barbara and Phillip for the Easter week-end.

SPRING!

Here on the coast, spring is very much in evidence, with forsythia and flowering currant in bloom and many gardens bright with daffodils. The telephone has been busy with reports of hummingbirds. Erin Kelly, a keen birdwatcher, reports sightings of geese flying north around March 18.

Easter brought a number of visitors to Halfmoon Bay. John Ellis spent the holiday at the home of his parents, Alex and Hazel Ellis. He has recently been transferred to Whitehorse, Yukon, where he is a district manager of a job creation Branch under the Canada Works Programme. He finds Whitehorse historically interesting and the people friendly. Guests at the home of Mrs. Ruby Warne are her sister and brother-in-law, Micky and George Hills of Nanaimo.

Bert and Phyllis Moore spent the Easter week-end settling into their new home on Mermaid Street, Sechelt. Their telephone number is unchanged and they hope their old friends from Welcome Beach will look in to see them sometimes. They have sold their Welcome Beach Home to Ian and Carolyn Kirkland.

BEEFS AND BOUQUETS

This week's Beef comes from a six-year-old student of Grade 1, Halfmoon Bay School, who must surely be our youngest reader. Dawn Goodman carefully read the report of Open House at the Halfmoon Bay School, looking in vain for her name which had somehow been omitted during the printing of last week's Times. At the school open house, Dawn submitted a paper on Oysters and two other children, whose names were also omitted, were Charlene Yearly who had studied Sea Urchins and Tracy Laakso who prepared a paper on Scallops and Sea Anemones. Sorry, children!

Recycling is restarting

By Annie Dempster, 885-3326

You can now bundle up your newspapers for recycling. Chris Belcher, the delivery lady for the Sun, will be happy to pick up any bundled newspapers left beside your Sun delivery box. Ray Ingham, the fellow that brings the papers over from Vancouver every day, will deliver the used papers to a recycling plant.

The Lions Club plans to set out boxes in different areas for those who find it more convenient to drop their papers there. It's really great to see someone taking initiative in getting this program started once again. Please encourage these people by using this valuable service.

FAMILY AFFAIR DANCE

Don't forget the Roberts Creek Community Association's Ways and Means Committee family affair dance this coming Saturday, April 1, at the Roberts Creek Community Hall. Tickets are available at Seaview Market. It is hoped that adults who attend will bring a plate of finger foods to donate to the kitchen. There will be no alcoholic beverages sold at the dance, as it was suggested that we could let the kids see that a person can have a nice time at a social function without having to get pickled. There will be live entertainment as well as recorded music.

The kids are really excited about going dancing with their families. One little boy asked his mother to buy him a tux for the dance. It should be a lot of fun.

RAFFLE TICKETS

As a great many of you know, the students from Roberts Creek Elementary are out in full force selling raffle tickets. The response from you folks out there has been just fantastic. The kids are really enthused about the raffle as the proceeds will go towards putting in a track around the perimeter of the school grounds so that the kids won't have to run along the roads anymore. The draw will take place at the upcoming fun fair to be held at the school on the evening of April 21.

There are a whole lot of prizes for this raffle and they were all donated by merchants from Gibsons, Roberts Creek and Sechelt.

Sechelt notes

Wedding bells

by Peggy Connor, 885-9347

The ding, ding, ding of a San Francisco cable car was wedding bells for Wendy Brackett and Robert E. Allen of Sechelt on March 11.

Wendy is the second daughter of Lloyd and Sophie Brackett of West Sechelt and Robert is the son of George and Mary Allen of Porpoise Bay Road, Sechelt.

The couple wanted their wedding ceremony to be different, and different it was as they pledged their vows riding the cable car down Hyde Street.

The trip ended at Fisherman's Wharf where they were greeted by a small crowd. A reception was held there and tourists joined in the toast to the young couple.

The bride wore a formal creamy lemon silk gown with a delightful floppy hat. Her bridesmaid was Marlene Barnett of San Francisco; best man was Ted Higginson of West Sechelt. The Rev. Bob Kent of San Francisco performed the wedding service.

The cable car company was delighted with their idea and provided the couple with their shinest car for the occasion for free. They picked up a few passengers on the way, but with 15 people in the wedding party, they had quite a group of their own.

The couple have taken up residence on Porpoise Bay Road, Sechelt. Robert is the grandson of well known gardener Janet Allen of Halfmoon Bay.

Mrs. Lynn Allen who is both sister and sister-in-law to Wendy — sisters marrying brothers, Lynn to Bill and Wendy to Bob — held a shower at her home in Sechelt, Thursday, March 23.

Present were Sophie Brackett, Mary Allen, Bonnie Wigard, Heather Brackett, who made a lovely cake for the occasion, Liz Stockwell, Gladdy Prost, Pete Tschaikowsky and Lorie Brackett.

It was a wine and cheese miscellaneous shower and Wendy received many wonderful gifts, a grand time enjoyed by everyone.

SMORGASBORD

Sechelt Auxiliary to St. Mary's Hospital will hold their annual smorgasbord April 29. Tickets are available now from Mrs. Billie Steele, 885-2023, or at the monthly meeting Thursday, April 13 at St. Hilda's Church Hall. The event will be held in the Senior Citizens Hall with music by the Penn Kings.

DICK WHITTINGTON DANCER

The highest reward for a teacher must be when her pupil performs so well she is mistaken for the teacher. Val Tomkies taught the belly dancers, but it was Julie Klachen who danced the solo in the Dick Whittington production. This dance was done with the most graceful motions and none of the gyrations often association with the movie versions. Julie danced her part excellently, backed up by the chorus line of the mysterious East.

WILDLIFE STILL ABOUNDS

Always a delight to come across our native wildlife, like each time a deer is spotted along the roadside pausing for a look at you before dashing into the bush. Well, this week I was fortunate to see a young bobcat crossing the road. Like any other young animal he took his time and stopped at the side of the road briefly before moving into the woods.

Not so nice to see them dead — as was the weasel found at our back door. Obviously he had lost the fight with the family cat. It did give us a chance to have a good look at this sleek little fellow that possibly could have killed the bantam hen and her chick.

VISITORS TO BE RESIDENTS

Mark and Jackie Lyden arrived in Sechelt with their young daughter Kelly, six months old, from Milngavie, Scotland.

Jackie, who is the daughter of Don Radcliffe, said it was the milk-run and took them a long 18 hours to fly here. However, they are so pleased with the Sechelt area and plan to settle here. Mark is a cabinet maker, so with all the building around, he should be able to work at his trade.

Christian Science

"Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray." (Ps 5: 2)

In the writings of Mary Baker Eddy is found this passage: "True prayer is not asking God for love; it is learning to love, and to include all mankind in one affection. Prayer is the utilization of the love where with He loves us. Prayer begets an awakened desire to be and do good. It makes new and scientific discoveries of God, of His goodness and power. It shows us more clearly than we saw before, what we already have and are; and most of all, it shows us what God is." (No and yes Pg 39).

There is still pilfering going on in the Harbour. Local residents had gas siphoned from their camper while at bingo and someone stole the firewood from the new Anglican Church site.

The government paving crew are back to finish the job. Leave your old tires on.

Whale crusader highlights meeting

Greenpeace crusader Dave McTaggart highlighted the March meeting of the Sunshine Coast Power Squadron with tales of his fight to save the world's whale population.

McTaggart has traveled the seas of Europe, the South Pacific and the North Atlantic to protest the killing of whales, porpoises and dolphins. He warned the squadron that Fin Whales are just about extinct off the shores of Iceland and there is a similar danger here.

Ian MacAekie of Federal Fisheries, Nanaimo, presented a film called "The Way Back," a documentary about the transplanting of the Sea Otter.

Members of the squadron learned that while otter were once plentiful in Nootka Sound, they were virtually extinct by 1929.

Thirty otters were first transplanted to the area by air from the Aleutian Islands and in 1972 otters were successfully transplanted in floating pens aboard the G.B. Reed, a fisheries research vessel.

The power squadron meets again in April at the home of Annelies Richter.

Final week for fitness testing

The Fitness Service will hold both Fitness Testing and a Blood Pressure Clinic one last time before what could be the end of this successful program.

Program Co-ordinator Fran Berger has been notified by Canada Works that its grant will not be renewed after its expiry date at the end of the month.

However it is possible that the Fitness Service may continue in the fall with Regional Board support. The board has voted to apply for a grant that would allow the Community Resources-sponsored group to be kept going under new sponsorship.

This week Evans Hermon will be holding both Fitness Testing and a Blood Pressure Clinic in the Trail Bay Mall from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. and again from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on March 30.

Have your blood pressure checked, then step up and down two steps in time to music for three to six minutes, and you'll have a fairly accurate idea of how your heart copes with exertion.

For more information contact the Fitness Service at 885-3611.

Annual student fund appeal gets under way

The Sunshine Coast Scholarship, Bursary and Loan Society is conducting its annual appeal for funds to provide financial assistance to students from the Sechelt Peninsula.

Local service clubs, lodges and companies provide the bulk of these funds and designate them to be awarded as scholarships or bursaries to students graduating from local secondary schools.

Private individuals and some organizations make donations to the fund for student loans. The society executive, along with the help of school counsellors, screen the applicants for these loans.

The repayment has been excellent since 1971. However, in that year records were destroyed in the fire at Elphinstone Secondary. If there are any ex-beneficiaries from this fund who have not repaid their loans, it would be appropriate to do so at this time.

Members of the society pay an annual $1 membership fee and organizations pay a $2 membership. These small amounts are used for administration, postage and stationery, leaving the donations and accrued interest to be used entirely for educational purposes.

To make a donation or pay the yearly membership fee call Mrs. Regan at 886-2204, Mrs. Richter at 885-3394 or Mrs. Rankin at 885-9787.

Wilson Creek Mime classes

Mime classes will be held every Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. at the Wilson Creek Scout Hall.

The classes will offer instruction in mime techniques and characterization and exploration of the different styles of mime and pantomime. The fee is $2 per class.

Doug Vernon, the class instructor, has taught mime at SFU and Douglas College. He performed in Gibsons and Sechelt a few years ago with the Mime Caravan.

Arts council to sponsor critique

The Sunshine Coast Arts Council is sponsoring an Art Critique April 8 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Roberts Creek Community Hall.

Jack Hardman, sculptor, art teacher and current director of the Burnaby Art Gallery, will offer constructive direction to local artists.

Artists wishing to participate may submit up to three paintings for a fee of $2. Call. 885-3414.

Did you get Unemployment Insurance in 1977?

If so, you have probably received a tax information slip (T4U) in the mail.

If the slip hasn't arrived...

If you didn't get a T4U from us, go to your local post office. Pick up a postal reply card to apply for duplicates. Fill it in and mail it. You'll get your duplicate T4U in time to file your tax return.

If the slip has arrived...

If you did get a T4U but need a replacement for any reason, also use the postal reply card. Mark "replacement" on the card in the upper right hand corner.

If the slip has arrived but you need more information...

If you did get a T4U and still need an itemized statement, fill in the same card. You must write the total UI benefits you got in 1977 somewhere on the card.

This is important. It will help us get your statement to you in time. You'll find the total benefits figure in Box "B" of your T4U slip.

Pender Harbour reports a good run of bluebacks all through the area. Troll using a white, green or blue flashtail and stay close to the surface. Springs are still being caught in the neighbourhood of eight to 12 pounds. Camerons in Madeira Park will sell you live bait.

Gales vs Powell River this weekend

The second annual "OK Tire Challenge Cup" is up for grabs again this year, with the best of five play-off beginning April 1 and 2 at the Sunshine Coast Arena and continuing April 7-9 in Powell River.

The play-off matches the winner of the six-team Powell River Commercial Men's League against the Coast Gales. The trophy, sponsored jointly last year by the Sechelt and Powell River OK Tire stores, is presently in the possession of the Powell River Taws, who last year defeated local champs Wakefield Inn in a best of five series.

Last year's series opened with two hard-fought games in Powell River. Both were decided in overtime by only one goal. The series concluded in Sechelt with the Taws sweeping the series 3-0.

Word out of Powell River is that the second place Taws have advanced to the finals after taking the Bruins to five games, all three of their victories coming in sudden death overtime. The other Powell River finalist is the Inn, which finished the season comfortably in first place.

In this year's series with the Bruins, the Gales managed to split the weekend, losing 6-3 Saturday, then coming back with an exciting 4-3 win Sunday. Considering that the Bruins haven't even made the finals, and that the Gales will be hampered by a two-week layoff due to the curling bonspiel, it will definitely be an uphill battle for the local squad.

With both Powell River finalists playing right up until the Thursday before the championship series, the Gales will need all the support they can muster. Powell River League President Leo Brosseau said they have been averaging 800 to 1,000 fans for the semi-finals and anticipate an even larger crowd when the Gales arrive in Powell River for the third game of their series.

Certainly the Gales are hoping for some good support for the first two games here. it would definitely take the pressure off the following weekend if they needed only a single win to wrap up the series.

Play-off action begins Saturday, April 1, at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday, April 2, at 2 p.m.

IHL concludes regular season

In the last games of the regular Industrial Hockey League season on March 19, two close games were witnessed by players on both benches.

The early game had the Orange Ruggers slipping by the Black Marauders 4-3 on a last minute goal by left-winger Nova Scotia Cecil.

In the second game the Red Barons were indeed fortunate in salvaging a 5-5 tie with the Green Machine whose tenacious forechecking had the Barons very disorganized in their own end.

With less than five minutes remaining in the game, sloppy play by the Machinists in their own end resulted in the two Red goals necessary to tie the game, negating what would have been a Green-wining goal by Stack from Texas.

Easter weekend means the annual curling bonspiel at the arean, thus no hockey this past week. However, the IHL semi-final play-offs will be held April 2.

Norman Buckley, former hospital administrator, dies

Norman Buckley, former St. Mary's Hospital admininstrator, passed away March 23 at St. Mary's.

This man put so much of himself into St. Mary's Hospital as its first administrator. He closed out the old hospital at Garden Bay and opened the new building at Sechelt. The growing pains of building this medical venture were eased by him.

The six auxiliaries to St. Mary's were guided to form a co-ordinating council through him and encouraged to participate as volunteers to aid and comfort its patients. Thus the auxiliary members were always referred to by Norman as "His Girls".

Wherever he lived Norman worked hard for the community.

A charter member of the Sunshine Coast Golf and Country Club, he liked nothing better than to be out on the fairways enjoying a good game of golf.

He was organist at St. Bartholomew's Church in Gibsons, where he collapsed several months ago, an indication of the illness that was to end his life.

Norman Buckley was born in Rockdale, England, coming to Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan as a wee babe. It was in this city that he met and married his wife Marge.

He was a very active past president of the Gyro club in Moose Jaw. Moving to Kelowna to be the Kelowna-Nelson Hospital's business manager, he worked as an assistant adminstrator.

He was a former president of the Kiwanis club at Kelowna, where the first senior citizens home in the province was their objective. Here too he was an organist, this time at the Church of the Redeemer.

Taking on the job as manager of the Co-op at Bamfield on the west coast of Vancouver Island, he also set to work to get a school for the children of Bamfield.

The existing school was a mess and Norman said if he was going to stay there he was going to get a new school.

Campbell, the Minister of Education at that time, noted how much work Mr. Buckley had put into getting the school, many trips to Victoria. Not only did he get everyone working on the project — much of which was volunteer help by the Indian poulation, the West Coast Cable station, fishermen, etc. — but the minister said the completed school, which included a machine shop and a home economics room, was built for less money than a one-room school built at Qualicum.

Retiring from St. Mary's Hospital, it was not long before he was back to work, this time in Nakusp assisting in the opening of a new hospital there.

He was active in the Georgian Chapter.

Saddened by his death are his wife Marge in Selma Park, two daughters, Milton and Carol Furness of Seattle and five children, Norman and Naomi Schmaltz of North Delta with two children.

A memorial service was held Easter Monday, March 27, at St. Bartholomew's Church.

Dr. Alan Swan, when informed of Norman Buckley's death, said he had found him to be "a very kind person who got along well with everyone. He was a friend as well as the administrator. The changeover from the old to the new is a demanding process taking a long period of adjustment." That was the job of Norman Buckley. — Peggy Connors.

Hustle to Friday night disco beat

The Wilson Creek Community Theatre is sponsoring a disco dance for teens Friday, March 31, at the main hall on Davis Bay Road.

The dance starts at 8 p.m. and will feature Top 40 and disco tunes, as well as a light show. Refreshments will also be available.

Admission is $1.50 and advance tickets are available at 885-5422.

A green light for Timber Days

Timber Days will go ahead May 21 and 22, despite an earlier lack of people interested in organizing the Victoria weekend event.

Chairman Carl Chrismas said that the Timber Days committee now has enough people to successfully organize the annual two-day celebration, although plans are still in the beginning stages.

Chrismas said the project was slow getting started this year because people willing to organize the event were hard to find.

"But our meetings have been well-attended and the interest in Timber Days is definitely there," he said.

Committee members will be making the rounds of local businesses to solicit donations for the project. Chrismas said service clubs and organizations are already reserving booths.

Police investigate Macleod's theft

RCMP are investigating the theft of $2,000 cash from the MacLeod's store on Cowrie St. in Sechelt.

Police say the break-in took place sometime during the night of March 18-19.

On the same night, a thief or thieves stole an expensive radio-telephone outfit from a boat at Duncan Cove.

Sechelt police will crack down on noisy motorcycles in the village following a rash of complaints from residents.

Police said they will take "a hard line approach" in enforcing the village's motorcycle bylaw, which gives RCMP the authority to control the indiscriminate use of bikes.

Horses in the area better watch out, too. Sechelt RCMP plan a similar crack down on horses wandering out on the highway.

Police are worried that with the increased summer traffic, loose horses will prove to be a hazard on the roads.

A $60 knife was stolen from the Continuing Education trailer at Chatelech Junior Secondary School sometime during the night of March 22-23.

Jackson Bros. Logging reported on March 20 that a road building machine on their property had been hit by vandals who smashed the machine's windows. The matter is under investigation by Sechelt RCMP.

Pickup accident yields fine

A 35-year-old local man whose half ton pick-up severed a hydro pole and then overturned in a small pond at the Porpoise Bay campsite was convicted in provincial court last Thursday for driving while over .08.

Richard Lyle Peters, a logger, pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $500. Peters has until July 1 to pay the fine and must take the impaired drivers course during a six month probation period.

Police found Peters beside his overturned pick-up February 19. Peters had smashed a window to free himself from the vehicle.

Barbara Edgar of Langdale was fined $100 after pleading guilty to driving while over .08.

Edgar, who is unemployed, will have until July 1 to pay the fine and will be on probation for six months, during which time she will take the impaired drivers course. The 28-year-old woman's licence was suspended for six months.

Water line extensions ok'd for Pine, Williamson's

Water line extensions to the Pine Road and Williamson's Landing areas will proceed if regional board directors decide to stand beside the decision they made last Thursday in a Public Utilities Committee meeting.

Extension of water to those areas from Langdale system had been in doubt, despite an earlier commitment from the board, because of financing difficulties.

That previous commitment, however, appeared to be just the springboard the directors needed to justify ignoring a policy adopted by the board in February and to apply to financing costs 100 per cent of the gas revenue sharing monies which would derive from the expansion.

The February policy stated that no more than one-third of such monies could be applied in the financing.

The board previously has insisted that water line extensions should be totally self-financing. The departure this year from that position is due to provincial legislation which assures the district that gas revenues sharing monies will be regularly allocated. Those funds previously were apportioned on a year-to-year grant and could not be counted on for long-term financing purposes.

Director Bernie Mulligan argued that an exception to the policy also should be made for supplying regional water to the North Road area, but the majority of the board indicated that they were unwilling to bend the rule a second time, particularly since no similar commitment had been made to North Road residents.

Thereof McCallister, alternate director for Area A, apposed the Pine Road-Williamson's plan on the grounds that the board was "setting a dangerous precetent."

The committee also heard a report for Director Peter Hoemberg that plans for a common utility corridor through the Sechelt area were "back to square one" because a previously agreed strategy worked out with provincial officials had gone awry.

The setback means an indefinite delay for extension of a 14-inch water line to the West Sechelt and Redrooffs areas.

Hoemberg told the committee that B.C. Hydro and the Ministry of Highways had got wind of the plan for a common corridor which would have usurped those agencies' control of the right-of-way.

He said he and Indian Band officials had been called to a meeting in Victoria February 22 to discuss the matter. They had assumed that the meeting was to iron out details in the earlier strategy, he said, but instead it turned out to be the death of that plan.

He quoted a Ministry of the Environment official present at the meeting as saying "You know you can't interfere with Hydro. Even the province can't do that." The remarks were in reference to plans for provincial legislation enabling creation of a utility commission to regulate the proposed corridor, Hoemberg said.

Don Lockstead

— MLA, Mackenzie

Before I detail the bungling that has been masquerading as long term care, I would like to praise the people who have been holding up under the strain. I refer to the many nurses and health care workers who have been carrying this program as the provincial government stumbles from one mistake in the program to the next. Let me explain.

At the outset of the program Dr. Ted McClean, acting administrator of the program in Vancouver, stated that "we (the directors of long term care) are flying by the seat of our pants." And further to that Dr. Gerald Bonham, the chief medical health officer of the city of Vancouver, referred to the first phase of operations as nothing less than "a nightmare." It was obvious that a well-planned, neatly thought out program was not a Socred priority. It was really a rather botched attempt to get a Socred elected in the Oak Bay by-election.

The program promised long term care at $6.50 a day. It became quickly apparent that this bit of misleading advertising was only a floor price. Depending on the amount of privacy a patient wished or required, the ceiling price was as much as $15.50 a day. In addition, those extended care patients who had to undergo surgery, would have to pay $10.50 per day in order to have both their acute care bed for their surgery and keep their extended care bed for recovery. Extended care beds became a highly prized possession. Line-ups for extended care beds have now become a fact of life as the Socreds promised the care without the facilities.

The further scandal is the "operation" done on private care facility operators. The operators of these units were given five levels of care at which the government would subsidize operations. The subsidies ranged from $13.50 a day to $34.50 a day. The government's first arrangement was that, once the hospitals opted in, these rates would be effective until March 31. Then new rates would be negotiated. The government has now reneged on that original agreement and extended the rate structure subsidies to March 1979. There's no room for inflation or negotiation until March 1979. It's a nice deal if you're the government, but it's left the private operators with a very sour taste in their mouths.

What is ironic is that the rush to implement the program and some of the deception involved in its advertising was all for naught. The plum the Socreds hoped to win with this program was the senior citizens vote. The NDP had brought in Mincome when it first gained office and every senior citizen in the province remembered that landmark. With the home-maker service as well as the hospital care service, the Socreds hoped to change the perception of those senior citizens. But there was very little planning, and then there wasn't really enough money if one considers the hospitals that had to be built, and finally there wasn't the votes. Oak Bay proved that.

Co-operatives—condominiums

CO-OPERATIVES

Co-operative ownership is a system of ownership under which a group of people share the ownership of the building in which they live. Each co-operative owner has a share in the ownership of his own dwelling unit and a share of the ownership in all of the other dwelling units and common areas in the building. There are two potential drawbacks to co-operative ownership.

1. An owner isn't always free to sell his share in the building to whomever he pleases. Usually, the agreement between co-operative owners provides that a proposed purchaser must be approved by the other owners of the co-operative.

2. Co-operative owners are jointly liable for mortgage payments on the property. This means that all of the owners of the co-operative would be liable if a particular owner failed to contribute his share of the mortgage payments. In addition, a co-operative owner isn't free to obtain new mortgage financing on the property because the new mortgage would attach to the entire property and not merely to the dwelling unit which he occupies.

These drawbacks to co-operative ownership have been cured in most provinces by the introduction of condominium legislation.

CONDOMINIUMS (OR STRATA TITLE HOUSING)

Every province and territory of Canada, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, has condominium legislation. This legislation makes it possible for a person to own his own dwelling unit within a multiple unit development. A condominium owner obtains title to his own dwelling unit and shares the ownership of the condominium land and common areas, such as elevators, lobbies and hallways, with the other condominium members. Unlike a co-operative owner, a condominium owner is free to sell his unit to whomever he pleases. In addition, he is free to mortgage his unit as he chooses and he is not responsible for mortgages arranged by other condominium owners.

Condominiums are becoming increasingly more popular in large urban centres across Canada as the cost of other forms of housing advances beyond the reach of a growing number of buyers. In addition, condominium owners are finding that they can share in the tremendous growth in real estate values which the owners of other forms of housing have historically enjoyed. For example, figures released by the Toronto Real Estate Board indicate that condominium units (apartments and townhouses) accounted for 15 per cent of sales through the Multiple Listing Service in 1974. The average price for condominium apartment units was $35,015 in January 1974 compared to $47,111 in May 1975. The average price for condominium townhouses was $39,239 in January 1974 compared to $47,111 in May 1975.

Organization of a Condominium: Condominiums are governed by by-laws which regulate the use of common areas and the conduct of condominium owners. The affairs of the condominium are directed by a board of Directors elected by the owner and this Board usually employs a professional management firm to handle general administrative duties and prepare an annual budget. Condominium owners pay a monthly fee into a fund which is used for maintenance of common areas, improvements, general administration, and so on.

Information about Condominiums: A free booklet intitled "Home Ownership through Condominium" is available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. This booklet describes the organization of a condominium and explains a number of unfamiliar terms which a buyer will encounter in a typical Offer to Purchase. Call your local CMHC office for a copy of this booklet or write Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Information Division, Montreal Road, Ottawa.

Matters of Concern to Condominium Purchasers: The condominium form of ownership is still in its infancy in Canada and, perhaps not surprisingly, a few problem areas have developed in the relationship between some condominium owners and their developer. Until remedial legislation is enacted in each province, condominium purchasers should be aware of these problem areas befor they commit themselves to a purchase.

There are five principal areas where trouble can occur.

1. Management Agreements: Ordinarily, the developer of a condominium project will enter into a management agreement with a professional management firm before he passes control of the condominium over to the new owners. This management agreement may, or may not, be in the best interests of future condominium owners. If the management agreement runs for a long period of time (five years is not uncommon), condominium owners may discover that they are "wedded" to a management firm that is getting paid too much to do too little.

Befor committing yourself to a purchase, investigate the terms of any management agreement that you will inherit as a new owner. Ask your lawyer to tell you how these terms compare with those existing in other condominium projects.

Note: The province of Ontario has enacted legislation which gives condominium owners the right to cancel a management agreement entered into by their developer.

2. Protection for Your Down Payment: In order to raise money to complete their project, condominium developers usually begin to sell dwelling units before the project has been completed. When a person signs an Offer to Purchase at this stage, he is required to make a deposit or down payment on his purchase although he frequently has no assurance that enough units will be sold to enable the developer to complete the project. If the developer should end up in bankruptcy, what becomes of the purchaser's money?

Note: It should be said that the author is not aware of any instance in Canada where buyers have lost their money in this way. Nonetheless, the possibility of such a loss is sufficiently real that the province on Ontario has

How to take title to your house

In all provinces other than Quebec, a purchaser may take title to a house in the following ways:
1. in his own name alone; 2. "jointly" in his own name and that of another person or persons; 3. in his own name and that of another person or persons as "tenants in common"; 4. in his own name under a Deed to Uses.

1. Title in Your Own Name. If you take title in your own name, you are, of course, the sole owner of the house. By preparing a will, you can direct who will end up with the property on your death.

Some married couples elect to take title in the name of one spouse alone for tax reasons. The federal income tax department has issued a bulletin (IT 120) which explains how a couple can escape capital gains tax on both their "principal residence" and a cottage or recreation property. This is accomplished by dividing the ownership of the two properties. One spouse takes title to the house in his (her) name alone. The other spouse takes title to the cottage in his (her) name alone.

Separate ownership of real estate may also be an advantage under the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan (RHOSP) provisions of the Income Tax Act. One marriage partner takes title to the house in his (her) name alone while the other partner accumulates tax-free savings in a RHSOP account. Should the couple ever decide to move into another house, the nontitled partner could use his RHSOP savings to purchase the new house, either alone or jointly with his spouse.

decision to place the title to real estate in the name of one spouse alone, discuss the implications fully with your lawyer.

2. "Joint" Ownership — This is the form of ownership selected by most married couples. Under this form of ownership, each spouse has an undivided one-half interest in the property. If either spouse dies, his interest in the property automatically passes to the surviving spouse. In other words, a spouse need not make a will to ensure that his spouse will end up with his share in the property when he dies.

3. "Tenancy in Common" — Under this form of ownership, each owner (or "tenant in common") has equal or unequal shares in the property. Upon the death of one owner, his share passes to his estate to be disposed of according to the terms of his will.

4. Deed to Uses — If a married man takes title to a property in his own name alone, he will nonetheless require his wife's signature on the Deed when he sells the property. This occurs because a wife has an interest known as a dower interest in all real estate owned by her husband. By taking title "to uses," a husband blocks his wife's dower interest in the property. He is then free to sell without her consent. Before making any decision in this connection, discuss the implications fully with your lawyer.

Your price is right if — You set it on TRUE VALUE, not colored by greed or emotional attachments.

— You have studied the market in your area by consulting with an experienced professional who has shown you facts of recent sales.

—You have considered the accommodation you offer, along with condition of the home, the yard, the neighborhood.

—You realize that an abundant supply of properties at this time makes it a "Buyer's Market", and a realistic price gives you better chance with the fewer purchasers able to buy.

Efficient energy use in the home

Everyone in British Columbia knows we have to save energy

We don't have an energy crisis in B.C. But we must cultivate good energy-use habits now. That way we can help ensure there'll always be enough for everyone.

The first place to start is at home. There are lots of ways we can prevent waste and we're going to see what can be done in the three main areas of home energy use.

Let's have a look at the best ways to use energy for space heating, water heating and lighting.

SPACE HEATING

Space heating is the number one energy-gobbler in your home. It accounts for more than half of all domestic energy requirements.

Future housing will ideally incorporate built-in energy conservation. Much heating energy could be saved immediately if all windows were double glazed and kept to 20 per cent of the wall area.

Higher insulation standards should be worked into existing housing design. Heavier insulation and double windows mean you'll be more comfortable, enjoy greater sound proofing — and save money.

Insulate! Insulate ceilings and walls. Today we talk about insulation in "R" values, not thickness. So your ceiling should have R20 or more and your walls R12 or more.

In coastal areas, in the Lower Mainland and on Vancouver Island, it's a good idea to have double glazed windows. If you live in the Interior, your windows should be triple glazed — or double glazed with a storm sash.

Let's see what we can save in annual energy use with recommended levels of insulation. We'll base our figures on a 1200 sq. ft. house with R7 (about two inches) of insulation already in the ceiling and no insulation in the walls. By adding R20 to the ceiling we'll save 10 per cent, by adding R12 in the walls we'll save 22 per cent, and by adding a storm sash to the windows we'll save another 11 per cent. That's saving!

Reduce temperatures, especially at night and when the house will be empty. 17-18 degrees C. is quite comfortable when you're working around the home.

A small trick that makes a big difference! When not in use, keep fireplace flue closed with damper or airtight screen.

WATER HEATING

Water heating is number two on our priority list. It accounts for 20 per cent of the total energy input to the home. So let's not waste any hot water.

We can save money by using hot water economically. No initial outlay is necessary. Check those dripping taps: a drip a second adds up to a tank of hot water a week. That's a lot of wasted hot water.

The bathroom's a good place to start saving hot water. If you sing in the shower, keep it short and sweet. Then sing the praises of a smaller hot water bill. And, by the way, do you really need the tub filled to the brim?

Locate the hot water heater as close as possible to point of use. The longer the hot water pipe, the cooler the water when it reaches its destination. Half-inch wrap-around insulation is recommended for all hot water pipes.

When using an automatic dishwasher, wash a full load each time. This way you'll probably do dishes just once a day. Check manufacturer's guide to be sure you choose appropriate cycle for the load.

If your clothes washer has a water level control, use it for a small wash. Otherwise use full loads each time — but don't overload!

Cooler water is best for some fabrics. Check garment labels. However, hot water is often needed for best washing results, despite claims made for some cold water detergents. Your local B.C. Hydro office will be glad to give you a copy of "Suds 'n Duds". It's free for the asking and crammed with washday knowhow.

LIGHTING

Lighting is a small part of the total energy picture. It plays a dual role since it also gives off useful heat. So switching off lights is sometimes a dubious economy. But we should still use our light as efficiently as we can.

There is a correct light level for each activity. Fluorescent lamps, for example, are ideal for the workshop and rec room. Visual comfort and safety must be considered and this type of light is also best in kitchen, laundry area and bathroom.

Where you wish to vary lighting levels, dimmer switches are the answer. They give flexibility of choice in dining areas and hallways.

Use sockets with three-way switches. Thus whether you study, sew or watch TV, you can do it in the right light.

Security and safety are enhanced by timers which automatically switch on lights at dusk. Your house has a lived-in look while you're away and you don't waste electricity by burning lights during the day.

Keep room surfaces light in colour. Light colours reflect light.

BUYING TIME

Major appliances such as the range, washer, dryer, refrigerator, freezer and dishwasher consume about 20 per cent of domestic energy. Another 5 per cent is accounted for by lights and small appliances. Although most of the energy used for these is cycled as space heating, we should still use it wisely and without waste. Valuable information on selection, use and care of appliances is available in booklet form at all Hydro offices.

When we save energy we are, in a sense, buying time. Let's use our resources with care and attention and we'll gain a breathing space in which to develop new sources of energy.

Minor repairs — cleanliness — tidiness — courtesy to buyer and seller: these are important.

WHO IS THROWING A CAKE IN HARDY'S FACE?

MAKE IT

Louisa Penson of Madeira Park sent us this recipe. Hope you'll try it — it sounds great!

GINGER CRUNCH COOKIES

You need:
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1/4 cup molasses
1 egg
2 cups rolled oats
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon each of salt, baking soda, cinnamon & allspice
1 tablespoon ginger

Cream the butter & sugar. Add molasses, egg and vanilla. Mix well. Add rest of ingredients. Shape into balls & place on greased cookie sheet & press each ball down with a fork.
[Louisa forgot to tell us to cook it — but we'll guess that it needs to be put in an oven that's about 350 & baked for about 10 minutes.]

Volunteers mark 39 years of service

Ladies in Red, the volunteers of the Six Auxiliaries to St. Mary's Hospital, held their annual meeting March 15 at St. Hilda's Hall.

Mrs. Billie Steele, president of the host auxiliary, Sechelt, chaired the meeting. Mrs. Ada Dawe greeted arrivals and looked after attendance. Recording the events of the day was Mrs. Jean Whittaker of Pender Harbour Auxiliary.

Chairman for the hairdressing service in the hospital, Mrs. Helen Hain, Halfmoon Bay Auxiliary, reported they could use more help. Sometimes the acute care patients are omitted due to lack of volunteers. The extended care patients have top priority. Hair care for the long term patients gives them such a boost.

There are still baby photos being taken in the hospital. Chairman Judy Killam was unable to be at the meeting.

Mrs. Maureen Hall, in charge of flower care, said her group is working well but could use a volunteer to act as spare.

The library cart has a good supply of books. Magazines are kept rotated at each end of the corridors, reports Madeline Grose of Roberts Creek.

The extended care report was given by Mary Murray for Geri Smith, past chairman. New chairman is Mary MacDonald, all of Halfmoon Bay Auxiliary.

Janis Wallis has taken over the physiotherapy volunteer workers from Peggy Dalziel. The usual shift for this department is for three hours, with two shifts per day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

The gift shop in the foyer of the hospital and the cart that goes around the wards is headed by Pauline Lamb. Her report was given by Roberts Creek president Wilma Rodgers. All is going well, with each auxiliary taking a turn supplying volunteers. A good selection of Easter gifts, baby outfits and many other items is available.

Gladys Brown of Pender Harbour Auxiliary has the responsibility for that money maker for the hospital, the Thrift Shop. A good report was read by Irene Temple.

Then the volunteer chairman for each auxiliary gave the hours of work put in by their combined volunteer workers.

Pender Harbour's Irene Temple told how that auxiliary provides tray favors for special occasions through the years. This adds a friendly greeting on the meal trays.

The Halfmoon Bay report was by Mary Murray; Sechelt's chairman is Ruth Steel; Roberts Creek by Bunny Shupe; Gibsons president Joan Rigby provided their information, and Port Mellon's report was by Doreen Dockar who is also the auxiliary's representative on the St. Mary's Society Board.

There were 31 in attendance with the ladies bringing their own lunch with coffee and tea provided.

After the lunch break guest speaker Peggy Connor spoke on volunteers and their work in the hospital.

Volunteer work for St. Mary's started in 1949 at Pender Harbour with the ladies in that area supplying the little extras that helped to make the patients' stay more tolerable.

The first volunteer work in the new hospital in Sechelt was the making of the drapes. This was quite a work party.

The first job for the first Volunteer Director was to co-ordinate the volunteers for personal shopping. The ladies in red smocks went round the wards in pairs, taking orders from patients, then dashing down to the village to fill them.

This service grew as the others have since, filling a need in the hospital. The volunteer represents the world outside and stimulates the patient's interest in community happenings. She provides companionship that paid personnel cannot provide because of lack of time and the nature of a staff-patient relationship.

Volunteers are persons who exhibit true compassion for their fellow beings. For the long-term patient, the active participation of the volunteer in the hospital program means that the community has not forgotten him. This is the significant contribution of the volunteer to the patient, not the actual services performed.

Speaking as the first Volunteer Director who has served four years, two different terms of office, Mrs. Connor's talk was aimed at stressing the need for a person to fill the vacant position of volunteer director.

To continue she said basically the role of Director of Volunteers is to interview, orient and place volunteers; assess existing volunteer programs and, in conference with the Auxiliary and the hospital Administrator, update existing services and initiate new ones.

The co-operation from the first Administrator, Norman Buckley, through to the present one, Nick Vicurevitch, and with the entire hospital staff has made it very clear that the work of volunteers is sincerely appreciated.

The public is asked to contact the auxiliaries regarding foreign languages. Sometime the need arises to speak the mother tongue to a patient and to aid in this is would be appreciated if those who speak other languages would give their name for the records. Phone Billie Steele at 885-2023, or just drop a note to the Hospital Auxiliaries to St. Mary's Hospital, Sechelt.

All occassion address books with indexed sections for your convenience, a very compact and useful small gift. —Miss Bee's, Sechelt.
