Gibsons pool losses growing

A financial statement for the Gibsons swimming pool after its first two months of operation indicates that the pool may have a substantially higher annual loss than the village had expected.

The village's 1978 budget projects a $39,000 annual loss for the pool. However, the facility's deficit after just two months of operation is already almost $15,000.

As of April 30 the pool had taken in $12,373.17 in revenue and had $27,272.06 in expenses. The pool opened February 25.

The village's budget projects an annual operating cost of $90,000 and revenue of $51,190.

Gibsons Alderman and recreation committee chairman Lorraine Goddard said she was "concerned but not panicky by any means. I'm optimistic."

She pointed out that the expenditures figure does not lend itself to an accurate annual projection for several reasons. There were several "one-shot" or infrequent expenses involved in starting up the pool, she said.

For instance, "We used a tremendous amount of fuel oil right at first" in warming up the centre. Also, a $552 expenditure for printing and stationery "won't have to be repeated for a long time.

"Some of these figures will look better when they're amortized over 12 months."

Also, a figure of $7,071.46 for full time salaries represents three months of payments (rather than two months as with the other figures), because the pool's supervisor was placed on the payroll a month before the pool opened, Goddard said.

She acknowledged, however, that the pool's revenues, as well as the ex-

Regional board approves Tuwanek re-zoning plan

Following the recommendation of Area C Director Charles Lee, the regional board has given its unanimous approval to third reading of a bylaw that would rezone the Jackson Bros. Tuwanek log dump property to an Industrial 5 zoning.

In a reversal of his earlier position that the zoning status be left "as it is", Lee urged directors to approve the rezoning.

Jackson Bros. had originally sought to rezone the property to an I-4 zoning, but protests from Tuwanek residents that this might cause industrial pollution in the area resulted in the compromise I-5 zoning.

Property owners had also expressed the fear that a sawmill might be established at the site if the rezoning were approved. However, Mike Jackson, spokesman for the company, told the board earlier that there are no definite plans to expand the operation.

The company requested the zoning change to legalize its log sorting operation, which existed prior to zoning prohibiting such business in the area.

When objecting to the rezoning on behalf of Tuwanek property owners, Lee had told the board that the residents would "go to law" to fight the board's decision. At last Thursday's regular board meeting, however, Lee said that one of the two leaders of the residents associations (Tuwanek and Sandy Hook) had the "timerity to threaten the board in general and myself in particular with legal action to the tune of $200 individual fines per day."

Lee said that the threat prompted him to examine "the credentials of this potential adversary and his supporters."

Forum examines herbicide hazards

(See related story inside — BCMA seeks public health tests.)

The second community forum held by Elphinstone Secondary School students might have been sub-titled "Everything you always wanted to know about 2,4-D — but weren't being told."

The students, under the direction of Marta McKown, a social studies teacher at Elphinstone, gathered herbicide and pesticide information from sources varying from Dow Chemical Ltd. to SPEC to the federal and provincial governments.

Information was displayed in poster and pamphlet form and approximately 125 people browsed the exhibit Sunday before directing questions at experts on the benefits and dangers of the chemicals.

Merriam Doucet, chairman of the SPEC herbicide committee, Frank Cedar, a federal department of agriculture pesticide evaluation officer, and Bayne Vance from the B.C. Ministry of the Environment fielded questions about a herbicide of particular concern to residents of the Sunshine Coast — 2,4-D.

Cedar told the group that although there are other chemicals that could be used in place of 2,4-D, that chemical is the cheapest of the bunch. "You'd find the cost of produce would increase with the use of other compounds," he said. "2,4-D is the world's largest selling herbicide."

He said that 2,4-D is also the safest herbicide in use. "Many studies back it up; there's only one controversial study."

Doucet, however, disagreed. She cited studies showing that 2,4-D was found to be carcinogenic (cancer causing) in 1969 and was known to cause birth deformities in small doses as far back as 1947.

Cedar said if "definite scientific proof" showed that 2,4-D were carcinogenic, the government would immediately re-evaluate the substance and possibly restrict its use.

"The public should be protected in the interim," said Doucet.

Vance said the problem the provincial government has found with alternative chemicals is the fact that their effects are not known.

"A problem might show up 10 years down the road, but 2,4-D has been in use since the late 40's."

Vance said the 2,4-D, used in the proper manner, results in minimal damage to the environment but said that 2,4,5-T will soon be taken off the market because of its harmful effects.

Doucet asked Vance that if 2,4-D is harmless why there was once a warning that pregnant women should avoid exposure to the substance, but Vance denied that there ever was that warning on 2,4-D sold in B.C.

Cedar said that his department does not recommend against the use of 2,4-D by pregnant women and sees no risk for them whatsoever in the "normal course of use."

Ray Skelly, NDP candidate for the Comox-Powell River riding, asked Cedar if he would like his wife to use 2,4-D while pregnant. Cedar replied: "I wouldn't recommend my wife to drink coffee."

A member of the audience pointed out to Cedar that "It isn't fair to compare something done voluntarily with something people have no choice about."

Other politicians present at the forum suggested to the group that political pressure is the only way to change government decisions, and gives the people a choice.

Norm Levi, MLA for Vancouver-Burrard, urged the crowd to continue its protest until results are seen. "You simply have to keep the pressure on," he said.

Jack Pearsall, MP for the Comox-Powell River riding, said that a forum such as the one put on by the Elphinstone students, was the best way to collect information about one of the most "controversial and emotional subjects ever."

"I am not thoroughly convinced that its (2,4-D) is good or bad," he said, "but I'll do my best to convey your feelings and views to Ottawa."

One man asked Vance "what it takes" to have an application for a spraying permit turned down.

Arena finances 'not that disastrous'

Sunshine Coast Recreation Association Treasurer Gordon Dixon last Wednesday assured Sechelt aldermen that the Arena's financial condition "is not as disastrous as it's been made out to be."

In a special meeting with the village council, Arena officials pointed to a decline in this past season's bar revenues and to an $8,000 series of repairs as the principal factors behind the facility's first annual deficit.

During the course of the meeting, local schools, newspapers, merchants and the regional board were all criticized for having failed to adequately support the Arena.

Dixon said the year-end financial statement for the Arena would be "marginally better" than the 11-month statement, which showed a $27,420.98 deficit as of March.

He said that since that date the association had "paid off all the debts except those owed to the village." The March 31 statement listed $4,500.18 in accounts payable. Dixon also said that the association's current bank balance was $1,203.67, as opposed to the figure of $445 on the March 31 statement.

He noted, however, that the Arena's outstanding debt to the village is now "about $12,000 or $14,000" as opposed to $7,500 at this time last year.

"The point is," said association President Brian Loewen, "where do we go from here to get a contingency fund?"

He said that the debt to the village was increasing annually, although a good year might enable the association to hold the line. "But how can we pay it off?" he asked.

Dixon suggested that the Regional District ought to assume some of the financial burden through taxes from the whole peninsula. "They (the regional board) are falling all over themselves to [illegible] Village of Gibsons for their pool. They're begging them to come

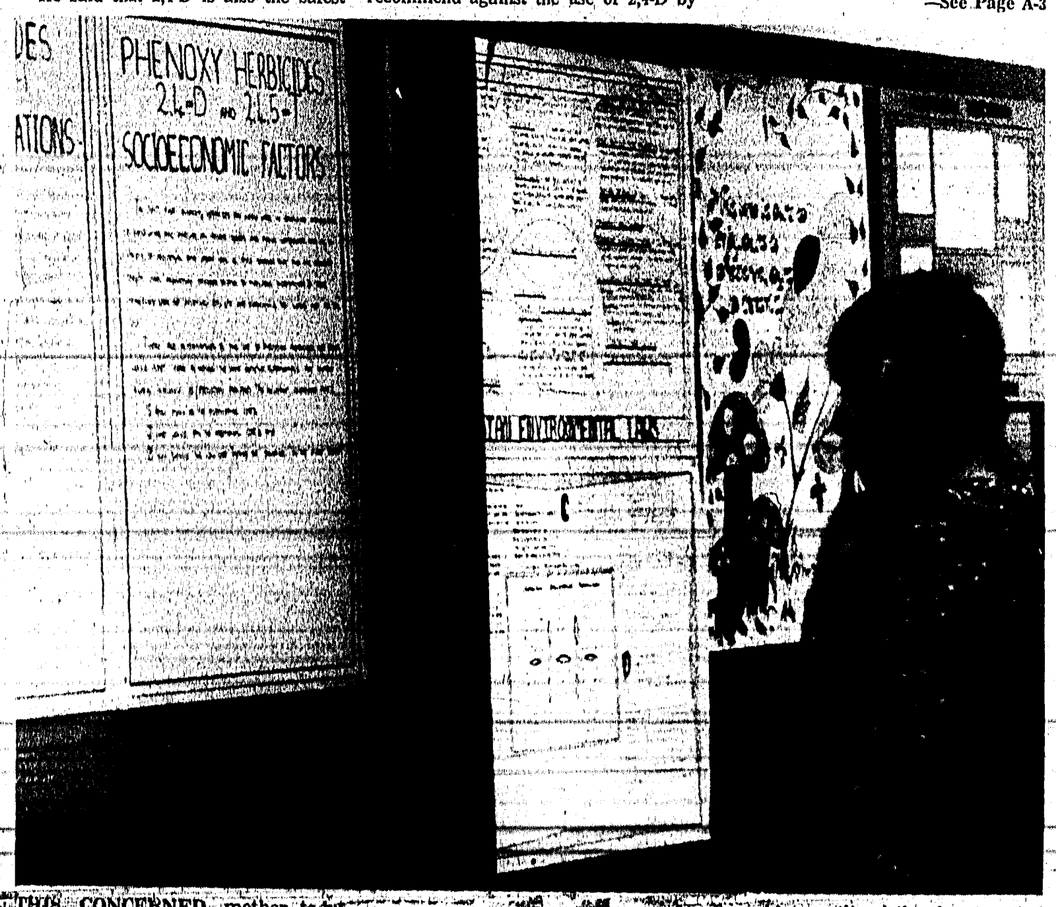
Garbage meet Thursday night

A special meeting of the Sunshine Coast Regional Board is scheduled for Thursday, June 1, to discuss the question of local waste disposal alternatives.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in the regional board office on [illegible] Street in Sechelt.



THIS CONCERNED mother-to-be [illegible] Community Forum checks out information on 2,4-D and other pesticides at last Sunday's Secondary School. Posters and pamphlets outlined the dangers and effects of certain chemicals on unborn children.

Keeping our distance

The recurrent rumours that the Ministry of Municipal Affairs has an established plan for clipping the wings of regional districts — or perhaps abolishing them entirely — were re-fueled a couple of weeks ago when the government introduced legislation ending direct election of municipal representatives to regional district boards.

The amendment will re-establish the appointment by council system which existed prior to introduction of direct elections by the New Democratic Party government in 1973. The reversion to appointment was greeted with approval by most municipal councils — Gibsons and Sechelt among them. But it was a curiously timed move, coming in the very midst of the investigations of the provincially-appointed regional district review committee.

Tossing the new bill into the hopper at this point does little to still the apprehension that the review committee may be only so much window dressing. Furthermore, the fact that the change tends to increase the influence of municipal councils on regional boards lends some credence to the suspicion that Victoria may have more of the same in mind for the future.

The notion that what the Sunshine Coast needs is two or three district municipalities in place of a regional district has received some local support. It is viewed in some quarters as a solution to the situation which supposedly allows rural residents to enjoy the facilities of the incorporated areas without footing their fair share of the tax bill.

That's a complicated question which certainly deserves some public discussion, but we don't believe the answer lies in a scheme which would effectively destroy the integrity of our unincorporated communities. The villages and the rural areas are distinct entities, and as such they attract residents who have different ideas about how they want to live and what they want their communties to be.

There is almost inevitably a degree of tension between incorporated areas — which tend to be growth minded — and rural areas — which tend to place more emphasis on restricting growth. There is nothing necessarily sinister in this, although the debate may grow heated at times; it's a natural by-product of the situation. And it requires constant adjustment, compromise and reasonableness on the part of both entities.

The difficulties arising in the situation would not be fairly resolved by having the municipalities swallow up the rural areas. The two are not homogeneous and any attempt to treat them as such would curdle the political process.

A recently-called meeting of representatives from local community associations and ratepayers groups to discuss the situation drew a grand total of three persons. The meeting was called on short notice, not all of the organizations could be reached, and it was unhappily scheduled on the evening that Montreal was successfully clinching the Stanley Cup.

The meeting will be re-set for later in June. It may be a waste of time to prepare protests if Victoria has already decided on a course of action. But in view of what's at stake, one evening doesn't seem too much to risk.

Recycling for local industry

Editor, The Times:

Once more I take pen in hand to discuss garbage. I would quote from the latest of Mr. Gibb's letters to the Times — "Needless to say, garbage has become an issue, but this is only the case when it looks as if someone is going to be "dumped on".

My word, this gentleman has a natural proclivity for bungling things. He belongs in Ottawa — along with the rest of those in the stone zoo. If the garbage accumulation of a 9,000 to 14,000 population estimate only "looks as if someone is going to be dumped on" I, for one would hate like hell to see what any area would look like if we were really being dumped on, this being in line, or in a pile with Mr. Gibb's solution to the garbage problem.

As for producing heat with said garbage, it is my humble opinion that such a suggestion is just so much diversionary hot air — and we all know that there is already enough of that around. At this point I'm beginning to wonder if Mr. Gibb's brain has not somehow become incinerated to a frazzle if his re-entry speed to the world of people, environment and feelings?

Now I know, of course, that many will say — and rightly so — "OK fella, you write a fairly good line — but writing criticisms and suggesting solutions are two dumps of different garbage! How about equal piles of each — and no hot air?"

Very well, Mr. Editor, perhaps the following ideas with some minor improvements and-or expansions may just catch on. As you will see, I favour recycling — but re-cycling with a useful and monetary purpose.

1 GLASS — How about pulverizing all glass products and selling these for inclusion in concrete and-or asphalt-making aggregates. I use all the glass I have to spare, for use in concrete, whenever I have occasion to mix a batch or two. Please note, I said pulverize.

2 PLASTICS — Has anyone ever poured a bit of lacquer thinner or acetone in a plastic coffee cup or shampoo bottle? Try it! The plastic melts. Why then could this self-same product not be melted in great quantities, and indeed, a great variety of colors, re-formed into lightweight, self-insulating building blocks for use in building garden tool sheds, lining flower beds, driveways etc., etc? Fusing these blocks together is simplicity in itself since the same chemicals employed to melt would also glue. Commercial adhesives are also available on the market.

3 PAPER — This product could be shredded (by the same unit used for pulverizing glass) wetted, baled, and sold for processing as loose-fill insulation. In fact the process is simple enough that such an operation could be implemented here on the Sunshine Coast. A secondary product of this plant could be the making of inexpensive fireplace logs.

4 — CANS AND OTHER METALS — These could be run through a light flame-cleaning process, then crushed, baled, and, in sufficient weights, sold as scrap iron. It might be worthwhile to note that the metallurgy used in producing "tin cans", produces steel of a better quality than that used in making cars. Honestly now, have you even seen a can at your local super-market which needed an "under-coating"?

5 KITCHEN REFUSE — This could be chemically composted, dried in kilns and sold. Or perhaps some members of the regional board could be employed in the drying process!

Mr. Editor, I firmly believe that all of the foregoing ideas are feasible, commercially viable, and potentially job-creating suggestions. I also believe that those few items of garbage left out of the processes would be so minimal as to require a space approximately the size of Mrs. Gibb's backyard — and for thirty years use at that!

BILL DOLMAGE recalls a long career as head of a towing company which worked the coast.

Bill Domage — a man of the sea

On his birthday May 7, Bill Dolmage found himself the guest of honor at a surprise reception at the Vancouver harbor office of his son John. The reception had been organized by his two daughters, Susan and Wendy, and many of his old sea-faring friends were there including representatives of Kingcome Navigation. They presented him with the bell of the Haida Brave, a tugboat which he had built for the California run when he was vice-president of Kingcome Navigation. He has brought the bell back to Halfmoon Bay where it now hangs beside the door of his house.

Bill's home on the Redrooffs Trail contains many such memorabilia of his seagoing career, including models of tugboats he has built and souvenirs from many of his ships. The central lighting fixture in his lounge is a huge steering wheel from one of his early tugboats with ships lanterns suspended from it.

It is small wonder that Bill Dolmage has the sea in his blood for he was born on the Queen Charlotte Islands and spent most of his boyhood in Vancouver around the harbour area. Because of the untimely death of his father, which left his mother alone with a young family, his early years were full of hardship and poverty, and young Bill would accept any work he could find which would enable him to take a few dollars home to his mother. A kindly benefactor secured for him an apprenticeship at a machine shop in the shipyards, where he received the princely sum of $3 a week during his apprenticeship and $15 a week at its completion. He augmented his income by working at the yacht club weekends and evenings.

The agreeable young man with his enthusiasm for boats and his insatiable desire for work, attracted the attention of Ron Maitland of the insurance firm of Macaulay, Nicholls and Maitland, who suggested that for $5,500 Bill could get a small tugboat and go into the charter business. Bill discovered there would be no problems in getting charter work for such a tugboat, but he could see no way of raising the necessary $3,500 cash advance.

Maitland, convinced that here was a young man who would make good, made the cash payment on his behalf and so, in 1925, Bill Dolmage became the proud owner of his first tugboat, a 32 footer with a diesel engine. He named her "Wee Giant" and got contracts with fishing companies for towing their scows of fish. A year later with enough charters coming in to cover payments, Maitland persuaded Bill to get a second tug, this time financed by the bank. From that time Bill Dolmage never looked back, building a new tugboat every year. The first three tugs were identical, but later he went in for bigger vessels. He bought out Harbour Towing Company, subsequently changing the name to Dolmage Towing, and he eventually had a fleet of 40 tugboats with charters which covered the coast from California to Alaska.

In those early days, says Bill Dolmage, employees were wonderfully loyal. Crew members who joined the company as boys would often stay on to become engineers or even masters, working with the same boss and often still staying with the same ship. When one of his tugs came in, Bill would always be down on the dock to welcome it and he would find the ship in immaculate condition with everything polished and gleaming.

In 1940 he married Mary Stewart and soon afterwards left for war service. He joined the Royal Canadian Navy to service in Naval Salvage and was loaned first to the Royal Navy and later to the U.S. Navy. It was a job for which he was most aptly fitted and for a man who loved boats as Bill does, it was exciting and challenging to be in command of the huge 1500 h.p. tugs. There was no book of rules for naval salvage at that time, which offered tremendous scope for such an experienced and resourceful officer. He served off the east coast of Scotland, in Iceland and in the Mediterranean. When the war ended he was based at Genoa with the rank of Lieutenant Commander.

Though Bill Dolmage retired in 1956, his main interests are still ships and the sea. From his comfortable log cabin at the head of Halfmoon Bay, he can watch ships he has known and loved passing up and down the Gulf, many of them bringing back memories. Recently a tug came by with one of the most mammoth tows of cedar logs he had ever seen. He estimated that the tow contained almost $1.5 million worth of logs.

Bill is a member of one of the most exclusive clubs in the world, the Cutty Sark Club, which was originated by HRH Prince Phillip, with branches in Britain, Canada and Australia. The "Cutty Sark" which was the fastest sailing ship ever built, was launched on November 22, 1869 at Old Wharf, Dumbarton, Scotland and is now preserved in dry dock at Greenwich, London.

Membership of the Cutty Sark Club is restricted to 100, and only when a member dies does the group vote in a new member.

The club contributes annually to the Cutty Sark preservation fund, and one of the social activities of the Vancouver group is an annual mystery day-cruise, usually in September on the Maui Lou. It is usually the responsibility of Bill Dolmage to organize and captain this cruise, and when they leave the dock, he is the only one who knows where they are going.

One of his most treasured possessions is a bowl made to celebrate the centennial of the launching of the Cutty Sark. Spode, the famous porcelain manufacturers, made 100 of these bowls and then destroyed the mould. They were all numbered and made available only to the 100 founder members of the Cutty Sark Club.

Acclamation and discombobulation

The BBC television series the Duchess of Duke Street starring Gemma Jones as the inimitable Louisa Trotter returns to CBC on Thursday at 8 p.m. (also carried on Channel 6) with 16 new one hour episodes. The new series follows the fortunes of the owner of the Bentinck Hotel and its patrons during the years 1911 to 1925. As in the previous series, great care and attention has been paid to authentic period detail, even to the food served. Michael Smith, adviser to the series, was commissioned by the International Wine and Food Society to present an 18th century banquet in New York and Philadelphia as part of the U.S. bicentennial celebrations. The Imperial War Museum supplied the research into war-time lifestyles, uniforms and medals for this series. Louisa's longest-serving and faithful maid Mary, played by Victoria Plucknett, receives the promotion she deserves and becomes the housekeeper of the Bentinck; Merriman the butler is still there, and Starr still guards the door ably supported by his dog Fred.

Although both the story and the characters in the television series are original, it may not be generally known that Louisa is based on a real life person.

Rosa Lewis, who died in 1952 well into her 80's, is still remembered as the formidable owner of the legendary Cavendish Hotel on Jermyn St. Rosa's life in many ways corresponds to Louisa's. She too was a Cockney child who began her working life at 12 years old, scrubbing floors for a shilling a week, and who became one of the greatest cooks in England. Those who remember her fondly recall her famous quail puddings, and also her sharp tongue, her abuse of servants, her terrific snobbery, her high spirits and generosity — tales which undoubtedly lose nothing over the years.

The earlier series won acclaim for its professionalism, the authenticity of turn of the century London and the excellence of the acting.

If you made a mental note to watch Tankerbomb, Mike Poole's television special on the inevitability of a west coast oil spill, then turned to Channel 6 on Sunday at 10 p.m. only to find the Beachcombers, you were doubtless annoyed.

It was one of those things. When the fourth Montreal-Boston Stanley Cup game was scheduled for 8 p.m. Eastern time preempting the 10-11 p.m. slot in Toronto, the decision was made to change Tankerbomb to 10 p.m. Saturday for the network. CBC in Vancouver having invested time and money in advertising the special and having their own copy were able to run the program as scheduled on Sunday. But CHEK-TV Channel 6 apparently did not know or was able only to receive the network feed, so Channel 6 viewers probably missed it unless they happened to be watching on Saturday evening.

While there is no "right time" for a television program — any more than a night when everyone is free for a meeting — it does seem particularly inept to schedule an important, informational documentary in the middle of a holiday weekend and during Stanley Cup play offs. There has to be a better time.

Hopefully Tankerbomb will be repeated. I understand that among those who were discombobulated by the change without notice was the president of Mobil Oil in Calgary — so watch for a re-run.

The Tankerbomb special is of particular importance to us in the light of a Provincial Government decision that each coastal community must assume the cleanup responsibility for its own beaches.

Although it's generally considered that the outer coast, Puget Sound and Juan de Fuca are most vulnerable to a massive oil spill, there is heavy traffic always in and out of Vancouver Harbour and any disaster at Cherry Point or in the inland waters might very well reach our shores given the right wind and tide. Even the small coastal oil barge which sank in Collingwood Channel some years ago resulted in miles of fouled beaches and many of us coping with oiled birds in the bath-tub.

Undoubtedly we would be wise to prepare, to have some equipment available at strategic points, and most important a trained volunteer force similar to the firemen ready for immediate action in an emergency.

For the summer months listeners to CBC AM radio can enjoy plays from the BBC replacing the school broadcasts between 2:04 p.m. and 2:30, Mondays through Thursday. A wide variety is offered — from contemporary one act dramas, to crime and espionage to classics adapted for dramatization, including Vanity Fair, Dickens' Nicholas Nickelby and two of Dorothy Sayers best, Clouds of Witness and Whose Body?

The schedule is arranged so that a different play is presented each day of the week. Now, they're not all serials, fortunately, but I find it confusing to have one crime serial running on Tuesdays for "x" number of weeks and another on Thursdays. It's difficult to sustain the continuity and the atmosphere when the episodes are spaced at weekly intervals, quite apart from the fact that Tuesdays come around so fast these days I probably miss a couple anyway.

It would seem, to me at least, to make more sense to run one play at a time consecutively, every day at 2 p.m. One may have a variety of reasons for reading several books at one time, but plays somehow demand a concentrated commitment to a concept or idea and should as far as possible be an entity in themselves. Even serialization, often unavoidable, is an artificial intrusion into the integrity of the original.

Maybe it's just me who isn't able to juggle a three ring circus any longer — how do other listeners feel?

Bennett should do more for B.C. fisheries.

Premier Bennett does not have the interest of the B.C. fishermen at heart. This fact became apparent in the Canada-U.S. negotiations over a Fishing Treaty for 1978. This issue is very complex but one which B.C. residents must be made aware of.

The Canada-U.S. fishing pact is presently being negotiated. The Federal Fisheries Minister, Romeo Leblanc, is the federal minister responsible. Mr. Leblanc comes from a riding in New Brunswick (Westmoreland-Kent) which has a fishing industry. As the negotiating stand Mr. Leblanc is willing to trade-off B.C. fishing concerns in exchange for enhanced powers in the East Coast fishery. As the negotiations stand Americans would gain influence in the West Coast salmon industry and lose in the East Coast cod trade. Although Mr. Leblanc denies this, it is pretty obvious that this is his game.

What is Premier Bennett doing in this regard? He said he sent a cable to Ottawa outlining B.C.'s position and concerns. That is ridiculous. Mr. Leblanc is talking of negotiating one of B.C.'s largest industries out of existence or severly curtailing its activities. A cable is not enough!

It must be made abundantly clear to Ottawa that B.C.'s fishing concerns are non-negotiable. The Premier once again displays his disregard for the working people of B.C. When it is time to stand up and be strong where is Bill Bennett?

Further in this matter, B.C. should have sent an observer to the Law of the Sea Conference in Geneva this year. The observer would have been able to lend advice to the federal government on how certain positions affect B.C. This would have allowed the province's perspective to be considered in the negotiations by the federal government.

In both these matters Premier Bennett has shown he has little regard for B.C.'s fishing industry. But the B.C. fishing industry provides for the people of B.C. It is time for the premier to take action, but he does nothing.

Glaucoma — the sneaky disease

A glaucoma screening clinic sponsored by the Sechelt Lions Club and run by the UBC Department of Opthalmology will be held at the Sechelt Medical Clinic June 15-16.

Glaucoma is an eye disease which affects 1 per cent of the average population over 40 years of age. It is usually insidious and gives no symptoms. Unfortunately, people often present with a 'dimming of vision" or total loss of vision in one eye leaving no avenue for treatment in that eye. This form of the disease is called open angle or chronic simple glaucoma.

It is most frequently related to an increase in pressure within the eye and this results in poor blood flow to vital structures at the back of the eye. Damage can also be caused primarily due to poor blood flow. In either case the effect on the eye is not unlike a heart attack on the heart. That is to say, there is a loss of function. In the eye this is a loss of "side vision" without any change in distance or reading vision to the patient until the eye is nearly blind.

Once discovered, medical and surgical therapy can be employed to decrease pressure within the eye. The importance of discovering this disease before too much damage has been done is self-evident.

The second form of glaucoma is closed angle or acute glaucoma. It usually is announced by pain, blurred vision, and haloes around lights. These sysmptoms may come on quickly as within one half hour, and and, providing they are not ignored, can be reversed under medical management. Surgery is the usual definitive treatment.

To screen for these diseases testing for pressure within the eye and observation of structures at the back and front of the eyes should be done on the population and specifically those people at higher risk. People at higher risk are those over 40, those who have a family history of the disease or who have high blood pressure or diabetes mellitus. Also younger people who have had an injury to their eyes sometime in the past should be checked.

It is important to separate the concern for eye health from the need to wear glasses. This disease takes vision from people with and without glasses.

Vance cited a recent case in Sechelt when B.C. Hydro had been disallowed the aerial spraying of Tordon 101, a substance made up of picloram and 2,4-D. He said he felt the aerial spraying of Tordon 101 would lack the precision necessary to avoid streams near the Hydro right-of-way and would wipe out all foliage in the area.

"I took Hydro to task about this because they had said they wanted to promote low-growing life on the right-of-way," he said.

"In the end," said Doucet, "I think you'll find that all the decision . . . political, not scientific."

Students organizing the forum passed out a five-question questionnaire asking whether pesticides or herbicides were used in the home garden. The students received 71 completed questionnaires and 21 percent of the people who filed them out said they used pesticides.

Of those who use pesticides, 16 percent know that 2,4-D, 2,4-5-T or picloram is present in those products, while 84 percent who use them do not know whether or not any of those chemicals is present.

Thirty percent of pesticide users put the used containers in the garbage can for dump pick up, while 11 percent burn the containers and four percent bury them. None said they dropped the used containers in a body of water.

Ninety-seven percent of those who completed the questionnaires said they are against B.C. Hydro using chemical sprays to clear and maintain the Sunshine Coast rights-of-way and substations.

• Tuwanek re-zoning plan

Lee said his findings show that of the 84 that petitioned against the rezoning, only 35 are on the voters list and only six had the "civic responsibility to vote."

"The question presented," said Lee, "is that special and unusual consideration is owed these people who have so massively omitted their basic concern for the local government?

"The answer comes down loud and clear," he said, "none whatsoever."

Lee added that of 45 persons employed at the Jackson Bros. log dump and living in Area C "22 exercised their franchise and voted."

Alex Lucas, one of the organizers of the protest against the rezoning, said later that although the group is "very much" upset with the board's decision and Lee's turn-around, no appeal as yet has been planned.

With Frank Giampa, Lucas organized the protests against both the rezoning of the Jackson Bros. log dump and "illegal asphalt manufacturing" at the Sandy Hook Pacific Rim Aggregates site.

Thursday night was the second time in two months the board had approved third reading of the Tuwanek log dump rezoning bylaw.

The board previously approved the rezoning on March 16, but a procedural error forced a subsequent rescision of the vote and a new public hearing. Lee and Area A Director Joe Harrison voted against the rezoning on March 16, Harrison explaining that he believed the board should support the decision of an individual director in matters affecting exclusively his own area.

in" to the recreation function, he said.

He also complained, "We really had problems renewing our advertising" by area merchants around the Arena wall. He said if the association is more successful this year in convincing businesses to advertise, "we ought to get about $9,000 spread over a three-year term."

Sechelt Mayor Harold Nelson scored the local press for publicizing the Arena's financial problems but failing to give adequate coverage to activities. "The papers are here tonight," he said, "but where were the photographers when the kids were finishing up their season?"

Dixon said the Arena needs an agreement with the school district whereby the district would purchase a block of ice time, similar to the district's agreement for use of the Gibsons swimming pool.

Arena Manager Eric Wilson said last minute reservation cancellations by some schools were creating an unnecessary expense. "I think the schools really feel they are in some favoured position," he said.

Loewen added that at the rates being charged the schools "it's just a break even proposition at best. The rental barely pays for the staff."

Dixon estimated that the Arena received about $2,000 in rental revenue from the schools last year.

May Day!

By Doris Edwardson, 883-2308

MAY DAY

Many thanks to the May Day Committee from the people of PH for a tremendous May Day packed full of events. The first customers to the PH Lions Pancake Breakfast were Ernie Widman, Myrtle Page, Eric and Annabelle Antilla and their daughter. These folks were there before 6 a.m. drooling with anticipation for pancakes, bacon and eggs. Mel Likes was in charge of this popular early riser breakfast.

Winners in the parade were — Commercial Float, Al's Blacksmith Shop; Local Float, Sharon Falconbridge May Bug; Non-Commercial Float, Brownies. The PH Pool received honourable mention, as did the Cubs and Serendipity Play School. During the afternoon Bingo was held in the Community Hall and the Beer Garden outside was running a brisk business. The Dunk Tank claimed Verne Wishlove and Pat Hoff who wore wet suits, but really soaked Barry Wilbee whose hat looks really shrunk, and one of the highlights of the day was when Logger Jack couldn't resist the urge to get up onto the tank, he was soaked immediately.

The May Queen and her attendants were served a dinner at the RC Legion Br. 112 Hall. The PH Secondary School May Queen and her attendants were served a lovely steak dinner at Ruby Lake dining room in the evening. Looking radiant in formal attire were May Queen Karen Morrison and escort Gordie Waters, attendants Pam Mueller and escort Duncan Ferguson, Mokey Sterloff and escort Kelly Morrison. Later in the evening there was a kiddies dance at the Community Hall till 9 p.m. then an adult dance which was a sellout and success.

Sechelt notes

Marathon hitchhike

by Peggy Connor, 885-9347

Three girls who hitchhiked here from Quebec are visiting the home of Bob and Yvette Kent. They found everyone friendly and co-operative and enjoyed their mode of travel tremendously.

Dianne Nieninen from Noranda is a niece of Yvettes. Her friends are Johanne Coriveau of Sherbrooke and Lyn Lantier from St. Jerome. They are on their way to Alaska. On the return trip from Alaska they will disembark at Prince Rupert. Directly from here they will make a visit to White Rock and another stop at Victoria.

NEWCOMERS ROBBED

Pat and Louis Mitten were not long in their new home before they were robbed of four pounds of instant coffee — a funny welcome to a new neighborhood.

SUNSHINE REBEKAHS No. 82

Thirty people sat down to a smorgasbord dinner May 24 to celebrate the 16th birthday of the Sunshine Rebekah Lodge No. 82 at St. Hilda's Hall.

Guests were Brother and Sister Mr. and Mrs. Gene and Evelyn Shaw from New Westminster. Sister Shaw was the President who installed the lodge at its beginning.

There were two veteran jewels presented representing 15 years as members. These were awarded to Sisters Ruby Breese and Hilda Clancy.

Brother Jack McLeod entertained the gathering with slides of Holland.

While here for the Rebekah party, Ruby Breese was a guest at the home of Ivan and Eileen Smith. Her stay was short but she plans to return for a longer visit in the near future.

OVERHEARD AT TIMBER DAYS

Met an interesting couple from England who had two things in common with the days proceedings. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bagnall are from South Woodford, Essex, and are visiting the Huggins in Gibsons.

First, Mr. Bagnall was born in Barking, Essex, where Captain Cook was married in St. Margaret's Abbey, a church built during the time of the Romans.

Second, Mr. Bagnall headed the committee for their Mayday celebrations held May 20 in England but left the running to other committee members, feeling a wee bit guilty enjoying himself while the rest worked. However, he said he was getting ideas for their next year's event. Their May queen celebrations or crownings are the same. He thought it was a charming idea to have the two grandfathers of the May Queen escort her to the dais.

They thoroughly enjoyed the logger sports. They too live on the edge of a forest, but one completely unlike ours called Epping Forest. It was a pleasure to meet them, and I do hope they enjoy the rest of their holiday.

BAKING CONTEST

I heard the entries were masterpieces. That must include Vern Giesbrecht's pie. Hank Hall finally beat out Bud Koch to purchase a cheesecake for $23 at the auction. Bud's purchases at the auction were going to keep his crew working on decorating their float for the parade.

LOGGERS SPORTS

Ken Nelson's participation adds spark to the logger sports. A champion in our midst is encouragement to local loggers.

The Brackett cheering section gets bigger every year as more of their family join in the sports and on the sidelines.

Bonnie Wigard wishes more women would enter, so get practicing for next year, gals.

Sooke's "lady" participant — Copper Canyon Sal, Lady Logger of the Northwest — was indeed a highlight. Climbing the pole was enough without dancing on the top, highly entertaining.

Good sports awards should go to the dunk tank sitters. Constable Gary Wade of the RCMP was the target for Mabel McDermid, whose aim was right on to put him in the water several times in succession. He came right up dripping wet each time with a big smile on his face.

EXTENDED CARE AT LEGION

The Royal Canadian Legion Sechelt Branch 140 enterained 11 patients from the extended care unit of St. Mary's Hospital on May 18. Providing excellent music was Earl Duty as well as the Legion Pipe Band.

Celebrating his 90th birthday was Karl Makinen whose granddaughter baked him a special cake. The Legion ladies also provided a birthday cake for the occasion.

Lillian Peters, Dorothy Goeson, Peggy Massey, Ina Grafe, Jack Boundy and other staff members were along to join in the fun and assist if needed.

The Legion make the patients feel most welcome and enjoy providing this special pleasure of an evening out of the hospital. It is eagerly looked forward to and talked about for days after. To bring sunshine to someone's life always lights your own.

Labatt's

Established 1828

A tradition in Canada for 150 years.

This year marks the 150th Anniversary of Labatt Breweries. That's a significant achievement for any company.

Technically speaking, we started our business before our country was even a nation. We began very modestly, in 1828, on the quiet banks of the Thames River in what is now the city of London, Ontario. Since that time, we've grown and prospered.

We've had good people with us over those 150 years. They made good products and good decisions which furthered our growth. Without doubt however, the fundamental factor for our success was our good fortune to be a part of the young and dynamic people who formed the nation we now know as Canada. We grew together.

Started by Canadians and still owned by Canadians Labatt's feels proud, and grateful, for all those good years.

Sports Day's here

By Annie Dempster, 885-3326

SPORTS DAY

Roberts Creek Elementary's annual Sports Day is Friday, June 2. It's always great fun for parents as well as the students. If you would like to offer your assistance to the teachers for the day, just give the school a call. The teachers are always more than happy to have parent participation — especially on Sports Day, as it is always so hectic and the more hands the better.

FIREMEN CHALLENGED

While canvassing for donations to the Roberts Creek Community Associaton's Ways and Means Committee giant raffle, to be drawn on July 15, we approached the manager of the Sunshine Coast Credit Union. After very generously donating $75 to the raffle, manager Larry MacDonald mentioned that the Sechelt firemen were very poor losers and because they had been defeated by our own Roberts Creek firemen in the war of the hoses at the Timber Days celebration, they have challenged the Roberts Creek firemen to a rematch during Roberts Creek Daze. Come on, guys how about showing those Sechelt boys that they haven't a prayer against you? Take them up on the challenge.

REAL FANTASY COMING

The very popular band, "Real Fantasy", will be playing the Community Hall on Saturday, June 17. These fellows are well known for their Raggae and Rock music. If you're interested in knowing more about them, ask Marlene at Seaview Market, as she is well acquainted with their music.

ROBERTS CREEK DAZE

Almost everyone you talk to these days in the Creek is talking about the up and coming Roberts Creek Daze celebration. It's a real treat to see so many people with so many different lifestyles working together in harmony for one common purpose. Although the response has been absolutely fantastic from folks offering their time and energy to make the celebration a success, there is always need of more. If you would like to help out in some way, there is a list at Seaview Market that you can attach your name to.

DOWN WITH HEALTH PRUDES

Anyone who knows Jamie Davdison, Grade one teacher at Roberts Creek Elementary and at one time a resident of The Creek, knows how he totally abhors cigarettes, and of late has become somewhat outrageous when dealing with them — such as, snipping them in half with scissors, putting them out before the smoker has finished, and making all sort of blatant remarks when one is thoroughly enjoying his foul habit.

Well, it appears that someone had their fill because Jamie received a clipping from some anonymous party. The return address was National Lampoon but seeing as the postmark read Sechelt, one can assume that the sender fibbed.

The following is taken from the clipping. We have had to omit part of it as it seemed a bit too racy for a family newspaper.

"Just lately, it seems to me, every obnoxious busybody in the nation has started lecturing me about my health. "Haven't you quite smoking YET? Perhaps you're an addictive personality. I don't suppose you saw that article on lung cancer in Time last week — I'll lend you my copy if you promise to give it back . . . You're having a MARTINI? Don't you know that's a sure symptom of boarderline alcoholism? Those pork chops look good, but are you sure you can afford the cholesterol?

"Many health prudes, I've noticed are friendly, tolerent, understanding people who never, ever try to make me feel uncomfortable about any of my real failings. But let me once lapse from the rules of perfect nutrition or hygiene, by eating brownies for breakfast, for instance, or guzzling tap water sans charcoal filter, and they turn into ruthless inquisitors. Don't I realize that white sugar is a prime cause of heart attacks, dental caries, hyperinsulinism, and insanity? I do? Then why do I continue to ingest this vile substance into my pure young body? Perhaps I don't care about myself, but do I have the right to subject my future children to the deadly ravages of sucrose? If you have difficulty, as I do, in coping with zealots and moralizers, the health prude can be a real menace to your self-esteem and peace of mind. There's no use trying to guard yourself against her by pretending to be pure and wholesome — she can find an opening anywhere. I've been lectured for not rinsing my McIntosh apple in dilute hydrocholoric acid (pesticide residues, you know), for getting too much sun (skin cancer), and not enough (rickets). If I don't go jogging, I'm warned of impending heart attacks. If I do, I'm accused of savaging my metartarsals.

"What galls me about the health prudes is their assumption that because I don't adhere to their rules, I'm either a miserable, qualing weakling who requires immediate reproof, or a simpleton who is unaware of the most elementary facts of human physiology. It might surprise you to know, dear health prude, that I have read Adelle Davies, Rachel Carson and the Surgeon General's report on cigarette smoking. I'm aware that butter contains more cholesterol than safflower oil and that beef liver is more nourishing than cream cheese and lox.

"I know something else too. It's my body, not yours, and I can do what I choose with it. If I want to stuff it full of cigarette smoke, booze, and white sugar, no one can stop me. If I prefer jigsaw puzzles to jogging, that's my privilege. Health is my right, of course, but it's not a duty I choose to impose upon myself, and I don't think anybody else is justified in trying to foist his or her standards on me. Sure some of the things I find pleasure in are unwholesome, unwise and fattening, but I wish you'd PLEASE stop telling me so!"

I would like to add that most of us smokers dislike to offend people as much as we dislike people to offend us, and we certainly don't smoke to offend others. Unfortunately, most of us have our shortcomings, and I guess most of us smokers lack the strength and-or willpower to kick the habit.

Anyway, folks, Jamie seems to have toned down a bit in his bid to ban the butt. Don't stop altogether tho, Jamie, you just might reach a few of us.

WAYS AND MEANS MEETING.

The Roberts Creek Community Association's Ways and Means Committee will meet on Wednesday, May 31, at 8 p.m. at the elementary school.

BCMA will seek public health tests

The B.C. Medical Association will seek national support for a 2,4-D resolution passed at the organization's recent convention in Vernon.

The resolution — which calls for discontinuing use of the herbicide until a program can be established to monitor its effects on public health — will be presented at the Canadian Medical Association's annual convention next month in Winnipeg, according to Jim Gilmore, BCMA director of communications.

Gilmore told the Times that despite some doctors' support for a limited use of 2,4-D, the call for a public health study passed the convention "almost unanimously."

He said the resolution will now be taken to the association's board of directors for their endorsement and then to the provincial Ministry of Health and other provincial agencies.

The resolution supports "detailed, multi-disciplinary studies of public health (not just measurements of environmental pollution)" as part of the process leading to the granting of pollution control permits.

It further asks that "no major pollutants be allowed (uranium tailings) or used (2,4-D) in this province until the parties concerned are prepared to undertake the necessary baseline and ongoing monitoring of the public health that is necessary to ensure public safety."

The resolution says that measurements of environmental pollutants without measurement of those pollutants' effects on public health "has proven and will continue to prove to be an inadequate method of protecting our patients' well-being."

It acknowledges that the health consequences of substances such as 2,4-D may be difficult to measure, but states that the effects are real, that they "frequently consist of an increased incidence of already existing diseases" and that the costs of care for affected individuals "are reflected not in the budget of the corporation but in an already overburdened health budget."

Halfmoon Bay happenings

Community assn.

By Mary Tinkley, 885-9479

The annual general meeting of the Welcome Beach Community Association will be held at the Welcome Beach Hall at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, June 6. All members are urged to attend to hear the reports of the past year's activities and to elect offers for the year 1978-9. Members are reminded that their $2 annual membership fees is now due and may be paid to Secretary Olive Comyn or to Grace Rutherford at the Halfmoon Bay Post Office.

FILMS

Because of a televised hockey game the same night, there was a poor attendance for the last film show of the season at the Welcome Beach Hall last Thursday, but those who did attend", a Pan-American film loaned by Audio Visual, gave a comprehensive look at Australia. There were glimpses of its cities, its fine beaches, claimed to be the best in the world, its culture and its sports. The camera offered some excellent shots of wildlife including kangaroos, koala bears and exotic birds.

Four films loaned by the New Zealand government gave an exciting and descriptive picture of New Zealand where sheep outnumber people 20-1. No longer isolated as it once was, New Zealand is 2½ hours from Australia by air and only a day's travel from North America or Europe. To its 40 million acres of arable farmland, much barren land has been reclaimed for grass by aerial spraying with superphosphate and lime. The people seem happy, healthy and prosperous, many operating farms up to 3,000 acres under highly scientific and hygienic conditions. The film showed fascinating shots of geysers, hot springs and mud pools — of Wairakei where geothermal steam has been harnessed for industrial power.

A film "Maoria Today" indicates how well the Maoris are being integrated. They are fine athletes and because of their physical prowess, they are always in demand for heavy construction work. However, there is no discrimination against them and a Maori can be anything he wants to be. Many go through high school and some qualify for highly skilled occupations.

Thea Leuchte, film co-ordinator, expressed special thanks to Keith Comyn, the retiring projectionist who has served the association so faithfully and loyally for nine years. She reminded the audience that while this was the last film show until fall, the Mackereth slide show of Europe would be repeated by request on Saturday, July 29.

BEAR SIGHTING

Early one morning, Bob Brodgesell went out to the back of his house to see what was disturbing his dog, Sinbad. Expecting to see a deer who is a frequent visitor, he had the surpise of his life to find himself face to face with a black bear. This is apparently the third recent sighting of a bear along the Redrooffs Road.

COMING AND GOING

More visitors arriving from across the Atlantic are two sisters, May Flack and Florrie McCurdy from County Armagh, who were at the home of Eva Lyons last week. They were accompanied by their cousins, George and Emma Flack of Gibsons. The two sisters had flown from Ireland to Los Angeles for a look at California before heading north to Vancouver and the Sunshine Coast.

Our faithful mail courier, Pete Tschaikowsky, took a well-earned holiday recently for a trip to Reno. Becoming tired of the fickleness of the one-armed bandits, she continued south to California and visited Sacramento and Santa Cruz, which she found to be a delightful spot. Another Redrooffer who was trying his luck at Reno was Clint Davies.

Dick Schaich, who has been spending a few days in St. Mary's Hospital, is now back in his home on Southwood.

For the next three weeks while your correspondent is busy entertaining her English guests, Peggy Connor will take care of the Halfmoon Bay column. Please telephone your news items to her at 885-9347.

THE WICKED WITCH of the West did her nasty best to foil the efforts of Dorothy and friends in Gibsons Elementary's production of the Wizard of Oz. The ambitious drama was almost two months in the making and involved some 40 children from grades one to four. It was directed by Patti Allan with help from, among others, Roger Douglas on lights; Douglas, Sam Reid, Gordon Stevens, Sheila Page, Esther Reid and Susan Brookes on props and scenery, and Gloria Lindsay on costumes. Dorothy was Stephany Sheridan; scarecrow, Kirsten Storvold; tin woodman, Ruth Madoc-Jones; cowardly lion, Vicki Hawkin, and the wicked witch, Renee Michaud. The play was presented twice on May 15 for other elementary schools and on May 16 for parents and the community.

Navy League inspection set for tonight

The public is invited to attend the annual inspection of the Navy League Cadets, Wrenettes and Sea Cadets tonight, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m. at Gibsons Winter Club.

The inspection is the highlight of the training year with various awards and presentations being made. The mayor of Gibsons and members of Sechelt Village Council are scheduled to be in attendance.

Light refreshments will be served.

It was a quiet weekend here

Police attribute a quiet long weekend in Sechelt to the lack of a beer garden at this year's Timber Days celebrations. However, Cpl. Gary Wade of the Sechelt RCMP, said a number of vehicles were reported during the holiday for speeding and passing on double solid lines. Wade expects this "erratic driving" to continue throughout the summer with the extra traffic.

Sechelt RCMP are investigating the May 26 theft of cookware and cutlery from a car parked outside the Manpower office on Wharf St. The cookware and cutlery belonged to a travelling salesman and are valued at $130.

Police are also investigating the theft of a tape deck and tapes worth approximately $200 from a vehicle at Ruby Lake May 23.

On May 20 two cabins in the Madeira Park area were broken into. Thieves took a small quantity of liquor from one cabin. Nothing was reported missing from the other.

Thieves took approximately $1,000 worth of tools from a resident at the Madeira Park Trailer Court May 23.

Two kayaks were reported missing from a home on Redrooffs Rd. May 22.

RV Travel Tips

"Buying Your RV"

By Ken and Marsha Rodgers

Marsha and I will not tell you which manufacturer builds the best Recreation Vehicle, just the kind of things to consider before you buy. If this is the first time you have shopped for an RV you are about to enter into the same type of decisions you have to make when buying a home, after all you are buying your home away from home.

You want something that will suit the needs of your family within the limits you can afford, whether you are buying a Motorhome, Mini-motohome, Travel Trailer, Camper or Tent Trailer. You have as well, several models of the afore mentioned, with different designs and floor plans.

First, talk to someone who owns the type of RV you are interested in. Talk to both the man and the lady who use their recreation vehicle seriously. Men tend to get into the mechanical aspects of the vehicle, how it handles on the road or how the trailer pulls. Women, on the other hand are more interested in interior design, how easy it is to make up the beds, if storage is adequate, stoves, refrigerators, etc. After a good discussion you will get the feeling of how much they enjoy this method of travel and you will probably be ready to go out and buy what they have. Dont get excited, talk to different people with different types of recreation vehicles.

After the verbal research, go to the local dealer and find out what is available on the lot. Walk through some, the dealer is there to help you decide what type of vehicle suits your particular requirements. He wants to sell you your first unit, but he also wants you back to buy again, so he is an excellent source of information. Pick up the brochures, go home and talk some more. By this time you will be getting close to deciding just what you want. You have talked to people who own them, walked through them, test 'driven them and decided what price you can afford.

Now, go to bed and sleep on it, because tomorrow you will buy one and join the ranks of the happiest travelers in North America. Welcome to the club!

Squaringly yours

By MAURICE HEMSTREET

Hello, fellow square dancers. 'Tis a nice day to pull up a chair and find out what is going on in the square dance world.

The last two Saturdays, May 20 and 27, have just been something else at our square dance pavillion better known as The Square H. room with over one set out on the first one and over two sets out last Saturday night. At this time I don't know who has learned the most, the dancers or myself. Anyway you just can't beat the ever popular square dance. Fun, health, relaxation, friendship or just to be picked on makes one feel that he is needed, so if you are a square dancer and are in the area, give a call to Harry at 886-9540 or Maurice at 885-3359 and we will be glad to call for you.

Just got word that Dewiss and Nora Brown's teenage squares, The 8—Teen Wheelers of Powell River, came in second at the square dance competitions at Penticton a couple of weeks back, and at this time that's about all that I know about the teen competitions. Just a wild guess but I would think that they were competing against, OH! about 50 other teen clubs, so you have to be good just to get onto the floor, and, Dewiss, you should be mighty proud of your younguns. From The Sunshine Coast Country Stars Square Dance Club, we congratulate you all. Never give up, next year you could be in first place.

Well, for now, I must get along, so if you have a notion to square dance, see you next Saturday night in the Square H. Room, good health to you all, have a good day and Ciao Bambino.

Court news

Second offence draws two-year licence cut

A 20-year-old Capilano College student, convicted on her second impaired charge in two years, was prohibited last Thursday from drinking alcohol or driving a motor vehicle for two years.

Kathleen Susan Whiting also received a $100 fine and was instructed by Provincial Court Judge J.S.P. Johnson to attend the impaired drivers course.

She was charged as the result of an accident earlier this year in which the car she was driving veered over the Hwy. 101 centre line and struck another vehicle, injuring Whiting and resulting in $4,000 damage to the vehicles.

"You're a very nice looking young lady," said Johnson, "and we don't often get nice looking young ladies in here on a second offense."

He noted that he could have fined Whiting up to $2,000 and sentenced her to jail, but said, "The appropriate sentence seems to be one which will keep her off the road and off alcohol."

In other court action last Thursday, Craig Stewart Norris, an unemployed construction laborer, was fined $200 for causing a disturbance at the Beachcomber Motor Inn on March 30. Norris pleaded guilty to fighting with the Beachcomber's manager when the manager attempted to evict him from the premises.

Wayne Roy James Brice, a mill worker, was fined $500 and ordered to attend the impaired drivers course after pleading guilty to impaired charges. His car was stopped by police early on the morning of April 23 after they spotted it weaving along the highway in Gibsons. He had a breathalyzer reading of .23.

Gordon Everett B. Day, 32, a towing company employee of Gibsons, was convicted of impaired driving, fined $500 and ordered to attend the impaired drivers course. Day's pickup truck was stopped by police October 22 on Hwy. 101 in Gibsons after they noticed that it was moving very slowly and hugging the centre line. He had a breathalyzer reading of .20.

Day's attorney attempted to discredit the results of the breathalyzer test by introduction of police testimony that Day had only a faint odor of alcohol on his breath, that he did not appear to the officers to be impaired, and that the breathalyzer operator did not have personal knowledge of the suitability of the breathalyzer testing solution.

Johnson said it was his opinion that a recent higher court ruling on a similar case should be not interpreted as disallowing breathalyzer operators from relying on a analyst's certificate in determining the suitability of the breathalyzer solution.

Two fishermen who pleaded guilty to possessing more salmon than the catch limit allows, were determined by Johnson to be within the spirit if not the letter of the law.

Ronald Turner and Kenneth G. Green were stopped by Fisheries Officer Ray Kraft, May 7, at the Langdale ferry terminal. Kraft found 29 salmon in an ice chest in their truck, five more than the allowable catch over a two-day period for the three licences in the vehicle.

While pleading guilty to the possession charge, the men argued that six of the fish had been caught previously and placed frozen in the ice chest. Kraft acknowledged that some of the fish were frozen.

Johnson fined the men $5 each and ordered Kraft to return the seized fish.

Another sport fisherman, Carl R. Elliot, pleaded guilty to fishing without a licence and was fined $25 by Johnson, the price of a licence.

Kraft said he stopped Elliot May 8 as he was disembarking from his boat in Pender Harbour with two freshly caught salmon. "He was very cooperative," said Kraft, "and came right over and bought a licence." Johnson also ordered the forfeiture of Elliot's two salmon.

Seniors trip moved to June

By ROBERT FOXALL

The date for Sr. Citizens Assn. Br. 69 visit to Powell River Seniors has been set for June 14. Dave Hayward asks that if you have already booked for the original date and cannot go on the 14, advise him as he can secure substitutes. It might be just as well to telephone him at 885-9755 and confirm your booking.

We had a good time again on the Fourth Thursday although the attendance was down slightly (after all it was a very rainy day). The usual bingo game took place with a different result this time: your reporter won one small bingo.

The program for June lines up as follows: There will be an executive meeting at a date to be decided after President Bill Scott returns from the Provincial Convention. The executive will be telephone. We go to Powell River June 14. The monthly meeting will be June 15, and Fourth Thursday will be on June 22. There happen to be five Thursdays in June so it is possible that we will have a bonus and make a garden tour on June 29. Probably start the afternoon with a short session of bingo and then take a short ride to Louis (Gunnar) Hansen's Garden. Watch this column for more definite information.

I have just learned that Olive Clear, who at the moment is in St. Mary's Hospital, suffered no broken bones when she took a fall recently. Take it easy, Olive, and we will be expecting to see you at the next meeting.

Most Canadians who apply for life insurance get it; 98 per cent of applications for individual life insurance are accepted.

Increased aid for libraries

A new funding formula announced earlier this month will provide public libraries with increased provincial government support, according to Sam Bawlf, recreation and conservation minister.

"Under this new formula we will be concentrating provincial grants on the provision of the most essential resource in our public libraries — books," said Bawlf.

Public libraries will now receive grants on the basis of population. Municipalities and electoral areas having a population of more than 6,500 will be supported at the rate of $1 per capita, while areas with a population of less than 6,500 will be supported at the rate of up to $2 per capita.

Assistance will also be available for staff training and the construction of new facilities — the latter under the Recreational Facilities Assistance Program to a limit of one-third of the capital cost.

Bawlf said libraries will be required to meet certain standards of operation to qualify for grants, including minimum books stocks, hours of service, qualified staff and adequacy of facilities.

"They will, however, be given a period of grace to make up any deficiencies," he said.

The Garden Corner

The hardy arbutus

By Guy Symonds

Some three months back this corner made mention of the arbutus tree and its interesting history. The information comes from a brochure issued by the Canadian Forestry Association in conjunction with the Association of B.C. Professional Foresters.

On this part of the coast we are quite accustomed to the arbutus which flourishes in its natural state all around us. But with the limit of its range given as 50 degrees south we must be right on the edge of its habitat. Its southern limit extends to the coastal mountains of California.

Details of the growth requirements of the arbutus are interesting in that they show the importance of the site. The one indispensable condition is the drainage, which must be as close to perfect as is possible. Where it has the sort of living conditions it really likes, this tree may grow to 80 or 90 feet, and one in the U.S. had a circumference of 27 feet 8 inches at a height of about four and a half feet from the ground. In Canada we run up to about a three foot diameter. Even average favourable conditions will produce a tree 30 to 60 feet high. On poorer sites probably not more than 25 feet can be expected.

Although the arbutus is always described as the only broadleaf evergreen native to Canada, it does of course shed leaves. But it differs from other trees in that the new leaves start to grow in mid summer when the old leaves start to turn brown and fall off. All the other trees are then in the full bloom of their beautiful summer greenery.

Little real research has been done on the arbutus apparently and the brochure points out that those interested would find their own efforts very enjoyable. It indicates some of the changes to be noted at varying times of the year.

In late March the leaf buds start swelling followed by the flower bud swelling in May. Flowering starts in May, as is very obvious at this time of writing, and in June the tree is in full bloom. In June and July the old second year leaves fall and from June to September that strange phenomenon of bark stripping called "exfoliating" is apparent. In October the orange-red fruit matures and is eagerly devoured by the birds. The exfoliating process is most interesting and there does not seem any explanation for it available. Bearing in mind that nature has a reason for everything, it would seem that the answer is there but is still to seek. While there is a difference in the process in individual trees, the general pattern is the unusual cycle of colour change. In the older trees the red bark on the upper trunk and limbs starts to peel off in thin papery strips leaving a silky yellow-green skin exposed. In a young tree this probably occurs over the entire tree. As the season progresses this young green turns red. In the older tree the early reddening bark thickens and breaks off in small flakes, leaving that familiar smooth texture.

Now here is something to rouse the curiosity of the gardener who finds trees a challenge.

As to the culture of the arbutus, or madrona as it is called in the south, it would appear that the tree is not all that particular, except with respect to drainage. Apart from that it appears to be happy in a variety of soils, in many different types of terrain and under a wide range of temperature and moisture conditions. Transplanting, however, is well nigh a lost cause. If one is tempted to try it, it must be done when the seedlings are only a few inches high. Root cuttings too are generally a failure. Probably the best way is to grow some seeds in a pot, wait until they are two or three inches high and transplant in the winter time. As to the site, always remember the one stipulation — good drainage.

Once the trees are established they are very hardy. They will withstand severe drought conditions and can handle both high and freezing temperatures. They do not need any training to assume the exotic almost oriental shapes that make them so attractive.

A little bit of history to close this account. In the U.S. the name "madrona" was given the tree by the first white man who ever saw it. This was Father Juan Crespi, the chronicler of the Portola expedition exploring southern California in 1769. In the States the name "madrona" is used to this day and refers to the "Strawberry tree" (arbutue undeo) native to the Mediterranean.

A GOOD SAVE by Mount Currie's goalie in the first half of the Renegades versus Tzells match at the British Columbia Native zone playoffs on Saturday, May 20, at Capilano Park. The Renegades won this game 6-2.

Renegades headed for provincial soccer finals

The Sechelt Renegades will be one of two teams representing zone two at the provincial finals in Kitimat in June.

The Renegades placed third in the British Columbia Native Invitation Tournament held at Capilano Park in North Vancouver May 20-22.

The high point for the Renegades came on Monday, May 22, when they beat the Chehalis Golden Eagles 5-3 in overtime in the first of two consolation games.

"A game and a half," said manager Howie Joe looking back over the Chehalis match. The Renegades had coasted through two easy victories on Saturday, beating Musqueum 5-0 and then Mount Currie 6-2. Then on Sunday the North Shore Chiefs beat them 3-2. The defeat meant that the Renegades had to win both consolation games on Monday to make the Provincial finals.

Stuart Craigen got the first goal against the Eagles; then Vern Joe scored making it 2-0 for the Renegades at half time.

In the second half the Eagles fought back, scoring twice and bringing the game to a 2-2 draw. A burst of tight playing on the Renegade side failed to break the tie and the game went into 20 minutes of overtime.

In the first 10 minutes Renegade Barry Johnson scored to make it 3-2. Then Robert Joe fired off a penalty shot, hitting it with all he had and getting goal number four. In the second half with four minutes to play Vern Joe kicked one back to Barry Johnson and Johnson scored making it 5-2.

With two minutes left the Eagles came back, scored, and the game finished 5-3 for the Renegades.

On Monday afternoon the Renegades clinched a spot in the Provincials with a 3-2 victory over Harrison Sasquatch.

The final standings of the tournament are: Powell River Sounders first, North Shore Chiefs second and Sechelt Renegades third.

Renegades goalie Tony Paul was voted best goalie for the tournament and Stuart Craigen and Robert Joe received all-star awards.

FISHING

The bluebacks have fallen off at Pender Harbour , but they're catching good-sized red springs. Just off Lees Bay outside of Duncan's Cove, Ray Jurenson of Langley got six springs ranging from eight to 20 pounds.

The biggest we heard of was a 29-pounder. All these fish were taken by mooching.

Fishing's been slow in the Gibsons area, although the blueback are starting to show up off Gower Point.

The biggest catch last week was an 18-pound spring caught in the Gap.

The Times REAL ESTATE SECTION

Thoughts on the best selling season

Timing the sale of your home is not dependent on season, but rather on its condition, realistic price, and circulation of the listing amongst the most potential purchasers.

Any experienced real estate broker will tell you that any time is the best time to sell.

Buyers are in the market all year round, and the only thing that can really prevent a sale is if your house is not on the open market — if the asking price is inflated — or if poor overall maintenance makes it look like poor value.

Today the best circulation of listing facts is the Multiple Listing Service, which is available to all member-licensees of two lower mainland real estate boards — giving all agents and sales men an equal chance to sell your property while you only deal with one person — the agent of your choice.

The calendar does not dictate the time to sell — only your decisions and realistic attitude are important.

A different population explosion

Noted real estate development economist from the Brookings Institute, Anthone Downs, told a Real Estate Board of Greater Vancouver seminar last week that despite energy shortages on either side of the border, there is a run-away population explosion in automobiles.

The U.S. human population has FALLEN but the car, truck and bus population has risen alarmingly.

The trend is the same in Canada.

From 1970 through 1975 the vehicle population rose 1.85 times the human population.

Mr. Downs says he feels these statistics will adversely affect the redevelopment patterns on the North American continent.

It means large cities will continue to be handicapped by rising traffic congestion and inadequate parking. Mr. Down's perceptive analysis may well be applicable to the Vancouver metropolitan area which for two decades has been unable to come to grips with rapid transit proposals.

House prices separate

The real estate re-sale market in Montreal is emphasizing the "two solitudes," according to a city-based real estate executive. Since the Parti Quebecois was elected in 1976, English and French house prices have lost any semblance of uniformity, and gone in separate directions.

It is mainly in English communities where the price is going down. The French market is holding up quite well, said Pierre Lortie of Secor Inc., in a recent Globe and Mail interview.

Montreal Real Estate Board statistics bear this out with prices in Brossard, a predominantly French Community registering price rises, while in Dollard des Ormeaux in the Lakeshore area, prices have fallen. In Brossard the average MREB MLS price was $36991 a year ago, and is now $38,966. In Dollard des Ormeaux the 1976 average price of $44,121 dropped this year to $42,236.

The staggering burden of government spending

Taxation is one of the major burdens carried by every Canadian. Forty three cents out of every dollar generated by the productivity of Canadians is spent by the government, which is a non-productive entity in our way of life.

Sweden, long known as the most taxed country in the free democratic world . . . takes 49 cents out of every dollar.

Canada's spending — instead of being decreased as the government promised, is now only six percentage points away from the Swedish record.

Federal budgeting powers are in control of the cabinet, so even the entire parliament seems ineffective in making changes. Canadians should not accept these one-sided spending decisions and should make their dissatisfaction known.

Call for more productivity and less spending in government druing this election year.

Public opinion and work

An all encompassing public poll conducted by the firm Canadian Facts Co. Ltd., shows that Canadians 18 years of age and over from Ontario westward who have heard of Right to Work Laws are overwhelmingly in favour.

In this August poll, 81 per cent of persons surveyed were in favour of Right to Work Laws, 9 per cent were opposed and 10 per cent had no opinion.

Union members showed 76 per cent in favour of this type of legislation.

The public generally, regardless of federal political party leanings, showed strong support for the right of an employee to choose his terms of work, to bargain for himself if he wished to — indeed to his right to work however and at whatever he wishes to support his family.

The survey results indicate at least one overall important fact which should be of interest to politicians — enactment of Right to Work Laws would be a net asset and not a liability.

The dirty tricks disaster of labor disputes

During labor strife it always seems to happen — the adversaries accuse, either with cause or without — that each one is playing dirty tricks.

However, the public shouldn't be asked to become involved in tricks, as it was recently in the telephone dispute.

The B.C. Federation of Labor publicly urged subscribers not to pay telephone bills — even while using the service — to force action from one side in the dispute.

While urging a totally irresponsible — and we suspect illegal — act on you and me, they also planned to extort a promise from the company that we would not be punished for this purely biased action.

Surely labor relations does not need to stoop this low... surely there is more maturity and responsibility among labor leaders! If not, it's up to the public to completely ignore this unsiphisticated unionism.

Accepting basic responsiblities

In the mid 60s the Secondary School education curriculum changed and teachers found themselves completely unprepared for basic business education they were required to teach.

The Real Estate Board of Greater Vancouver's education Committee, along with a group of teachers, bridged this gap by producing a text called Home Ownership, a Basic Guide.

This text has been in continuous use throughout secondary schools in British Columbia.

Again in January of this year, an updated edition was circulated to schools for business education courses, and to public libraries for general use.

The real estate industry helped minimize the mysteries of home purchae and sale through educating the young, upcoming consumer and by presenting night school courses for adults.

Today, more business groups should help prepare tomorrow's consumers by going into the secondary school system today — it's a basic responsibility of doing business in your community.

The balance between esthetics and employment

There's a fine line between a city concentrating on being attractive, and a city concentrating on being attractive to both people and industry. Esthetics are important, but so are jobs.

Unless residents have secure employment, there is no money to spend on environmental considerations and services. Officials in all levels of government must effect the balance that will ensure our province has the air, land and water quality we recognize for environmental purposes, but they must also make the climate attractive for the location of industries that provide ongoing employment and a guaranteed tax base.

Another priority is protection of industry and jobs that are already in British Columbia, so closures do not affect the security of citizens now established. Leadership should come from Regional Districts so overall environmental demands can be met, but employment opportunities are not overlooked.

The premier's opimism for B.C.

Premier Bennett's optimistic outlook for our province — understandably cautious — seemed sensible from the facts contained in his third quarter report on the provincial economy.

But the best part of his address to the electorate was his statement that all governments must impose severe restraints on expenditures, with increases limited to one per cent or less below the growth rate of the economy.

In some areas — especially the social services — these limitations may be hard to follow, but compensating decreases and common sense in other areas can accomplish it.

His edict that public service salaries should follow, rather than lead the private sector should be combined with public service pensions more closely tied with what the private sector is able to provide for itself.

If governments balance their budgets and curb their spending, the economy would become healthier immediately.

Spotlight on the changing world scene

UNITED KINGDOM

Britain's Public Accounts Committee is more than a little miffed at the way the Scottish Department of Agriculture is operating the $30 million worth of estate lands entrusted to it. In the 1975-1976 fiscal year it had a trading loss of $2.8 million. At the same time annual salaries for administering the estates totalled $1.2 million for looking after 3,000 tenants.

The committee urged the selling off of unprofitable parts of the 400,000 acres being administered.

BELGIUM

More office space has been purchased or leased in Belgium in the first six months of this year than in the entire 12 months of 1976, according to a Richard Ellis report.

Demand also continues steady for industrial space in the Brussels area, while the owner-occupier market for both industrial and office space remains buoyant.

Insurance companies, pension funds and foreign investors are investing in the office market. Yields in both the office and industrial markets have remained fairly steady at 7 to 8 per cent and 8.5 to 9.5 per cent respectively.

JAPAN

Housing construction in Japan is expected to increase to 1.7 million units this year, an increase of 80,000 over last year, according to the Japan Long Term Credit Bank.

The increase in construction, the bank said, is related to readily available mortgage money, stabilization in house prices and a growing demand for low cost houses. The country's measures for economic stimulation have also been a factor in permitting the Housing Loan Corp. to increase its loans.

KOREA

Korea is in the process of developing its first "artificial" city. Named Panwol, it will replace a village on the west coast 35 kilometres south of Seoul. Scheduled for completion in 1987, the city will be able to accommodate 1,500 small industires and will have a projected population of 200,000 to 300,000.

It is expected to become a model for other new cities the government plans to build in the future. Panwol is designed to prevent excessive growth in existing cities and promote balanced development of the country. There will be participation from both the public and private sectors.

NEW ZEALAND

The New Zealand government has implemented a new housing mortgage guaranteed scheme at no charge to borrowers or lenders.

Replacing two existing mortgage guarantee programs it guarantees the full amount of a mortgage advance by a lending institution, an organization or a private individual up to 90 per cent of the value of the property on terms of from five to 30 years. There is not arbitrary loan limit, but the lender must agree to allow repayment of the mortgage in full without penalty on six months' notice or less.

The new plan was described as "a step in the right direction," by T.F. Molesworth, president of the New Zealand Real Estate Institute. But, he said, it would only result in more families owning their own homes if more money can be attracted into the mortgage market.

AUSTRALIA

Although the grants may seem small by Canadian standards, the Australian government has a grant program with a maximum of $A667 for anyone contracting to buy or build their first home during 1977.

Called the Commonwealth Government's Home Savings Grant Scheme, it provides for grants of $1 for each $3 the prospective home owner saves. Applicants for grants must have had some savings in "acceptable forms" for one year prior to acquiring their new home, such as savings bank deposits, savings with building societies or with credit unions. No limit was placed on the cost of homes acquired and applicants can be young, old, married or single. The home must be their first and they must not have received a grant before.

REPUBLIC OF IRELAND

Property values in Ireland have risen steeply over the last several months, but the largest increase has been in agricultural land which has risen from 50 to 100 per cent.

According to Raymond E. Corish, spokesman for the real estate industry, the increase in prices is due to general world inflation; the falling value of the pound and Ireland's membership in the European Economic Community.

ISRAEL

Citizens of Israel are facing a dilemma. While the country has struggled to provide shelter for them, they are not now able to afford the housing being produced. Because of the high cost of production, dwelling units are priced at nine times the average worker's annual salary. Buyers must be subsidized which puts an additional strain on the economy.

But help is on the way. The Israelis turned to the United States to enlist its know-how in housing construction and efficiency. A team of 35 American construction and design experts will educate Israeli workers in the use of new materials, concepts and methods. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is co-operating in the program.

INDONESIA

The Indonesian government has drawn up priority guidelines for development, permitting both foreign and domestic investment. Under the guidelines low cost housing has top priority, followed by housing for the middle income group, industrial parks, office buildings and urban renewal.

Demand for housing for the country's 130 million residents requires approximately 400,000 new units annually. Government housing accounts for 20 per cent of the total with private enterprise responsible for the remainder. To make more housing available in Jakarta the administration has ordered houses in several areas being used for offices be converted to residential use.

LOOKING AFTER YOUR GARDEN

Now that your vegetables have been planted, we'll talk about the friends who can help your garden grow.

Ladybird beetles, preying mantises, earhtworms and toads are all good for your garden.

Ladybird beetles can eat up to fifty aphids a day as well as insect eggs and larvae. Bees pollinate plants, allowing fruit to grow. Preying mantises eat many insects including the tomato worm. Toads eat pests such as cutworms and earthworms burrow through the soil helping to condition it and keep it porous.

Birds are also good for your garden because they help control pests, weeds and crabgrass. You can attract birds by keeping bird feeders or bits of nesting material like string or pieces of lint.

If your bird feeder is filled with bread crumbs, kitchen bits, wild bird seed or even peanut butter you can attract different birds all year round.

Presiding at the head table were Mrs. Margaret Gill, Mrs. Joan Rigby, Mrs. Chris Ward and Mrs. Dana Turney. Mrs. Peggy Connor, Halfmoon Bay, gave the address, outlining the various departments in which volunteer work is done and stressing the need for co-operation and leadership.

Mrs. B. Northway won the door prize.

The auxiliary's next meeting is June 12, 11 a.m., at St. Aidan's Hall. — Lillian Shields.
