PLUCKILY RESCUED

Thomas Gentle, a Miner, Fatally Injured

The largest funeral ever held at any of the up-the-coast mining camps took place on Thursday. Over 100 miners were present to witness the laying away in Mother Earth of a man who was a former friend and companion of many, and who showed during the last day of his life the manliest of spirits under peculiarly trying circumstances. He was Thomas Gentle, a young miner of Green Lake, Wis., 33 years of age, and known as an expert in matters relating to mining machinery in Rossland and other of the Kootenay mining centres.

With his partner, Jim Nesbitt, he had been working up to a few weeks ago at the Van Anda property, on Texada island, and just less than a fortnight ago they started on a prospecting trip on their own account. They went to Jarvis Inlet, which is nearly 200 miles from Vancouver, and went up about 60 miles. Near the slate quarry they struck for the Interior, and when five miles from the shore the accident happened that cost Gentle his life and his comrade almost sleepless toil for a week. They were proceeding with their packs on their backs when it became necessary to cross a slide, and in doing this they got caught by the settling of a log, beside which they were crawling. Nesbitt freed himself without much trouble, but his companion was in an awful situation. He was pinned just at the small of the back between a rock underneath and the log, and suffering great agony. With almost superhuman efforts Nesbitt, who, by the way, is a little man, weighing perhaps 120 lbs.—rolled the log off his partner until it rested on his ankle, but could not move it further for fear of starting the slide down the hill. Gentle was conscious and moved his arms faintly, and begged Nesbitt to cut off his leg that was under the log. The gritty little American, however, cut the log around his friend's leg with a butcher knife, until he could pull the member out. Then he arranged Gentle in as easy a position as possible, left food and water by him and started for help.

That was 3 o'clock in the morning and all the remainder of that night he travelled towards the sea-line through brush and trees without the assistance of a trail. He got to their boat which was a heavy fishing sloop and rowed 15 miles up the Inlet where he secured the services of two Indians. Nesbitt gave them $20, all the money he had and they rowed back in the heat of the morning sun. Half way up the little trail they blazed through the woods, the Siwashes balked.

"White man is dead, no care," they said. And Neshitt handed over his gold watch which took them up another mile, when they calmly proceeded to turn round and go towards the shore.

Besides being a Westerner, Neshitt has been a cowboy in Wyoming, which means something. He had stood enough and he knew it. He had risked enough in trying to save his partner, so the Indians went on with a revolver as a persuader and the word of a man who meant it that Gentle would leave there or they would die.

They carried the injured man back for a bit, but eventually Nesbitt set off again for the Treasure Mountain Mines where he secured some men who came and made a trail from the shore to the scene of the accident. Then they carried him out on a stretcher and down to the Van Anda hotel, just a week after the accident first occurred. Dr. Forbes gave all possible attention, but Gentle died two days later and his body was laid away on Thursday.—Vancouver World.

FRIENDS IN MISERY

The Cowbell Nuisance—There Are Others in Town.

The following from the Slocan City News will appeal to some of our friends in Revelstoke who are nightly serenaded by the joyous chorus of cowbells. It will be pleasing to know that there are others:

The attention of the city authorities is called to the fact that the number of cows, pigs and horses running at large is becoming rather numerous. At various times complaints have been made to the News of this nuisance and just as often was it promised that the stock would be kept up. On account of loose animals it is impossible to have flower beds in front of residences and in some instances cows have poked their heads through open windows plucking pansies and other plants raised in the house. This is exasperating in the extreme but not any more so than to have a herd of cattle with jingling bells grazing around one's house at night making sleep an impossibility. The owners should either be made to keep their stock up or remove the bells from the animals' necks. They should certainly not object to doing the latter. If this matter is not given immediate attention this paper will have something more to say on the subject which perhaps will be more to the point.—Slocan News.

THE NEW RAILWAY

Will Open Up the Richest Mining Camps in Kootenay

The Trout Lake Topic in an editorial on the construction of the new railway from Revelstoke to the head of Kootenay lake to connect with the Crow's Nest Pass, speaks of the excitement and the possible outcome and value of the railway to the mining camps of the Lardeau as follows:

"That the road will open up the richest mining section in Kootenay, anyone who has seen the ore bodies in here will admit. The mere certainty that it will commence in the near future will also mean a great deal, for it will bring to us a throng of monied men for which this part of the Kootenay has been going begging for several years. The transportation problem has been the great drawback and once it is settled we can expect to see Trout Lake the hottest camp in the province. Another consideration is that with the advent of a railway the possibility of having mills for concentration purposes will become a certainty, as the question of moving heavy machinery and transporting the product of the mills will not be such a serious consideration. And it cannot but be admitted that there are a great number of milling propositions in this camp, which will be commercially valueless until such time as reducing works are established at or near the workings, but take the district throughout it is a country of big propositions where large bodies of ore are to be dealt with and not mere stringers, although the small ledges have been proved to be of richer quality. All these considerations then, make the building of a railroad of paramount importance, and it is the fervent wish of all who are either directly or indirectly interested in this district that it will be constructed within the next eighteen months."

TROUT LAKE CITY

A New Postmaster—An Excellent Mining Property

J. H. Currie has been appointed postmaster. All the steps necessary for the transference were gone through by Mr. Fletcher, who paid the town a visit on Monday last. Mr. Fletcher has also arranged for a money order service which will come into effect on the 1st of October next. It has not been decided yet as to who will have the carrying of the mails between Ferguson and Trout Lake City, as there appears to be some difficulty of arrangement between the department and tenderers, or as to whether Ferguson will get a postoffice at all.

Messrs. Graham and Fowler are doing work on the Klondike group of claims, situated on Glacier mountain, above Trout Lake City. The property is showing up remarkably well for the amount of work that has been done. A fancy sample was tested recently and gave the astonishing result of 8,000 ounces in silver to the ton. However, a fair average taken from returns on a fifty pound sample tested last fall amounted to $265 to the ton. This is rich enough for anyone, and when the fact that it is only about 2½ miles from Trout Lake City and a good waggon road, is taken into consideration, it will be seen that there is great possibilities in the near future for this prospect. Stripping has constituted the greater part of the work so far and has resulted in showing the lead up in several places with the character, width and quality of the vein matter remaining unchanged.—Topic.

A TIDE OF PROSPERITY

The Best Labor Market in Canada To-Day is in West Kootenay.

British Columbia has never experienced better times than at present: railways, trails and wagon roads are being built, prospects are being turned into mines, idle mines, (because of the lack of capital), are now being made ore shippers, smelters are being enlarged, thousands of new buildings are being erected, mining machinery of every description arrives daily going to all parts of the province, and there is no limit to the demand for laborers throughout the Kootenays in particular.

The Heavy Passenger Traffic.

Travel over the Canadian Pacific at present is simply enormous. It is not seen at its full in Vancouver. At Mission Junction the incoming trains, east and south, are heavy. Sunday's No. 1 express consisted of no less than 13 passenger coaches, two baggage cars, and express and mail car, or 16 exclusive of tender and locomotive. At Revelstoke, coming from the east, the train was five hours late, but made up three hours lost time between there and the Mission, where a large number transferred for the Sound cities and Southern points. They all spoke in terms of praise of the C. P. R. route and the courtesy of its officers. But the hot weather in the mountains and the dust troubled them somewhat. Still the grandeur of the scenery more than made up for all this. It was marvelous, said a very intelligent eastern college professor, completely eclipsing everything I had ever before seen or heard of in the way of mountain glories.—Vancouver World.

AMONG THE MINES

Development Work That Will Count and Prove the Vast Richness of the Lardeau.

W. B. Pool, accompanied by a well known mining man, returned on Monday from a trip through the Lardeau country. During their trip they visited some of the properties on Fish Creek, Pool Creek, Lardeau and Gainer Creeks, Among them being the famous Bushie property on Pool Creek which, under the management of Mr. H. McCulloch, is showing up well under steady and well planed development. One hundred and fifty tons of shipping ore is now on the dump and the value of the lead is improving as work is put on. The Goldsmith and Lardeau Co., are also pushing along with the work of opening up their property and the results so far exposed an immense body of very rich ore. The Nettie L was also visited and under development work this year is showing up an excellent lot of high grade ore, which is satisfactory proof of the permanency of the country in which it is located, and with railway facilities will make one of the finest showings of shipping mines in the Kootenay.

On Gainer Creek the Lade Bros., who discovered the rich deposit of gold bearing quartz of which so much was heard last fall, are quietly and energetically pushing development work. The owners of this valuable gold proposition are pleased with the showing so far and when it is opened up thoroughly the good reports of last fall will be fully verified this year by an increased output of rich ore.

A new strike of excellent ore was made on the Towser recently and very shortly this famous property will be heard of to advantage. The Towser is in excellent company adjoining the Sunshine on the Silver Cup lead. The Free Coinage, adjoining the Silver Cup is showing up excellently also, and under the management of Mr. Hugh Monroe, who gained fame by opening up the famous Silver Cup, will shortly be heard of in company with the Silver Cup, Sunshine and Towser.

The gentlemen above referred to were very well pleased with the entire trip throughout and are enthusiastic over the outlook. There has been a lot of actual opening up of properties this year with the result that the country is proving itself fully as rich, as the old timers of the Lardeau have always maintained it was. The result of this excellent amount of development will be the means of bringing that country to the notice of capitalists, and when agents are sent in to investigate they will immediately be able to determine the extent of the leads and the values, which formerly was almost an impossibility.

THOMSON'S LANDING

A Most Enjoyable Moonlight Excursion —Mining News

THOMSON'S LANDING, Aug. 7.—On Monday evening, the 1st. instant, the Kootenay Lumber Co. ran a moonlight excursion with their tug Archer and a large scow which had a new deck laid for dancing and was prettily decorated with evergreens and numerous Chinese lanterns. About 20 excursionists came down from Trout Lake City and Ferguson and about the same number went from the Landing. The ss. Lardeau transferred them from here to Comaplix where the tug Archer and scow were in waiting with almost the whole population of that place on board and all eager to make a start. When well under way the music started up with four sets on the floor and dancing was kept up steadily until Arrowhead was reached, when about 20 others joined us. A run of about seven miles was then made down the main lake, the surface of which was as smooth as a mirror, and not a cloud could be seen in the sky, with the moon as bright and full as one could wish for. It was indeed an ideal evening for such an occasion, of which it was the best and most enjoyable that the Arrow Lake country ever witnessed. Dancing was kept up incessantly during the whole trip. Arriving back at Arrowhead at about 1 a.m., we stopped for supper which was awaiting the pleasure seekers at the Lake View hotel, and was heartily enjoyed by all, numbering 160 persons. After supper the home run was made amid cheers and good wishes. Great credit is due Mr. Markill, the Lumber Company's manager, and Captain Seaton, of the tug Archer, for the able and successful manner in which the affair was handled.

Mining is still carried on here with great vigor. Hazel and Pool are doing work on the Mosco and Revenue and report them as being better than they had expected.

H. A. Cork's new hotel, five miles from the Landing, on the Trout Lake waggon road, is about completed; it is 30x30. Mr. Cork says he is now ready to receive all who are hungry and dry.

POLITICAL CRISIS

THE CASSIAR MAKES IT TIE

Governor McInnes' Excuse for His Actions—To Guarantee the Safety of British Capital in China—A Battle Fought at Manilla at which the Spaniards were Worsted.

Special to the HERALD.

VICTORIA, August 10.—The Hon. Robert Beavan is consulting with Joe Martin and Semlin and will announce his cabinet on Thursday evening. Turner declines to admit the constitutionality of the dismissal and intends complaining to Ottawa. Beaven will most likely ask for dissolution.

The returns from Cassiar make both parties equal. Governor McInnis says he dismissed Turner because he continued making expenditure and appointments after he had asked him to refrain.

WASHINGTON, August 10. — The Spaniards attacked the United States' camp at Manila on July 21, and were repulsed after an hour's fierce combat. The United States lost 13 killed and 10 mortally wounded; 20 more were less seriously wounded. The Spanish loss was heavy. Aguinaldo's forces took no part in the fight. Spain's answer has been formally presented to the president, but the contents were withheld from the public.

LONDON, August 10.—Lord Charles Beresford has been entrusted with a mission to China to investigate the extent the Chinese government will guarantee the safety of British capital invested.

A POLITICAL SURPRISE

Hon. Robert Beaven Commissioner to Form a New Provincial Cabinet.

The Colonist of Tuesday says: The surprise of the season was yesterday offered to the public in the news that Lieutenant-Governor McInnes had sent for Hon. Robert Beavan, a former leader of the provincial opposition and one time premier of British Columbia, requesting him to form a government in succession to that of Hon. J. Turner. The report was received with doubt until Hon. Mr. Beavan himself endorsed its reliability, with the further intimation that he had accepted the task, and hoped to be able to announce his success with the composition of his cabinet within 24 hours—or within a few days at the very latest.

The Lawn Social

The lawn social held on the Methodist parsonage grounds last night under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, was one of most successful affairs of its kind ever held in Revelstoke. The citizens turned out in large numbers and the night was a most pleasant one. The grounds were very tastefully illuminated by Chinese lanterns, and the bunting and flags were artistically arranged. The Revelstoke Brass Band was present and rendered an excellent programme of music during the evening. The supply of ice cream gave out rather early in the evening, but with this exception there was an abundance of all kinds of refreshments on hand. Great credit is due the ladies for the excellent manner in which this affair was carried out. It is to be trusted that many more such entertainments will be held while the summer lasts.

THE WAR

While slow in assuming definite shape, peace between the United States and Spain seems to have become practically assured. Both sides seized with alacrity the opportunity for ending hostilities, for while to Spain a continuance of the war was hopeless, to the United States it meant additional millions of expenditure. There was never any real enthusiasm, outside of the jingoes, among Americans for the war.

It was entered upon by the better and the preponderant element in United states society as a duty from which it would have been cowardice to shrink. Many were reconciled to the use of force by the feeling that the public was under a moral obligation to free the oppressed Cubans. A still larger section held that the destruction of the Maine was an act of treachery which could not be condoned by any self respecting nation. A noisy and energetic minority, it must be admitted, were impelled by pure taste for military and naval adventure; by impatience at the policy of isolation and reserve which had so long governed foreign relations, and by a passion for colonial aggrandisement after European style. It may, however, be affirmed unhesitatingly that the bulk of the American public are far more sensitive to the sacrifices of the campaign; the bloodshed, the waste of treasure, the cruel sufferings of the combatants, than to the glamor of victory. They rejoice that, so far, the line of action to which the nation set its seal has so far been carried out; but many illusions have been dispelled, and a sombre apprehension of the difficulties that remain checks all tendency to elation at the proved superiority of United States arms.

Whatever else has been disappointing in the war it has added immensely to American knowledge of Cuba. There had been for years at Washington and other centres of political feeling a very energetic propaganda on behalf of the Insurgents. It is superfluous to attempt any analysis of the motives which guided, or misguided, the operations of the group only too notorious as the Cuban Party in the Senate. But it is material to recall the impression which, with the help of the Juanta and its agents, they sought to convey to the public mind. The picture was even more violently colored than is the rule in what purports to be humanitarian agitations. On one side were the Insurgents, brave, able, unselfish men, driven to the practice of guerrilla warfare by the sanguinary oppression of the Spaniards. There is, we are afraid, no reason for revising the general condemnation of the systematic misgovernment of the officials sent by the mother country to conduct the affairs of the Island Independency. If the Cubans on closer acquaintance are found to be something very different from what they were represented to be in the fancy description of their American patrons, no small blame must be assigned to the Spaniards who had so grossly neglected the opportunities of rule. But the fact remains that contact with these bands of restless patriots has convinced the officers and men of the Army of Liberation that less worthy objects of help and sympathy could scarcely be conceived. They have all the faults of the Spaniard's without any of his redeeming virtues. If choice were possible, there is not a rough-rider or a volunteer in the Santiago district who would not have been delighted to divert his fire from the entrenchments held by General Toral's gallant men to the quarters where the Friendlies and Auxiliaries were skulking and shirking work. Yet these are samples of the people of the island; of the population with which when the Spaniards are withdrawn the President and Congress will have to settle matters.

From present indications the peace negotiations between the United States and Spain will drag along, at about the same rate as the war did.

Touching that proposal to knight "I William Mulock" it wouldn't do to hurt the gentleman's feelings but there are some to whom the honor has fallen who have deserved it more.

The Regina Standard rises to complain that "money spent in feeding Yankee editors is simply thrown away." The Standard is disappointed because the Minnesota contingent did not respond to the epicurean efforts of the denizens of the capital, and has searched in vain for "write ups" of the Regina district. The Standard should not complain. It is fortunate for Regina that the visitors didn't write it up.

The unlooked for sequel to the political career of Prince Bismarck brought about by the act of the young Kaiser on whom the world looked as a weakling, dependent on the strong arm of the Iron Chancellor, but who eight years ago cast off that support as he would an old glove, and became practically his own chancellor, taught the nations the lesson that the world will wag merrily along even in the loss of its best intellects. England lost its Gladstone, Germany its Bismarck and Canada its Macdonald, but though their loss was mourned it brought no catastrophe and the tide of progress still flows on.

Politics and baseball in the United States have suffered from lack of attention this summer, owing to the war. The indications are that in the coming Congressional elections the republicans will be successful and that the party will be strengthened for the campaign of 1900, when a new president will have to be elected. The democrats are practically without a leader. Bailey of Texas has had to take a back seat, Bryan is said not to be as strong as he was, Hill of New York has disagreed with the new management at Tammany Hall, and young Harrison, of Chicago, who is mentioned, has yet to establish his record. The success of the war will also help the Republicans.

The revelations of Mr. Terabah Busted Boom Hooley in the bankruptcy court must not be taken as proof that the press of London is corrupt. His version of the relations between company promoters and newspaper publishers have confirmed what has long been known, namely that certain financial journals in London live on a system of black mail. Mr. Hooley speaks about large payments to certain papers which are generally considered to be above suspicion, but they may have been for legitimate advertising. If company promoters want full page advertisements in papers like the Times, the Standard, or the Daily Telegraph they have to pay for it. The leading papers of London are conducted with as much, if not more, honesty and fearlessness as any papers in the world, and it will require something more than Mr. Hooley's vague charges to destroy the public faith in them.

HARPER'S FOR AUGUST

Harper's Magazine for August has a funny story aout a long since U. S. minister to the Spanish court. The gentleman had no word of Spanish, and could only converse in French or English, and so went to the trouble to learn the few words of Spanish necessary to address the sovereign in his own language.

When the critical moment arrived he saluted the king, spoke a few words in Spanish and passed on.

"What did you say?" asked an English gentleman.

"I spoke in Spanish," was the rejoinder. "I said 'I cast myself at your feet,' which I am told is the most respectful form of salutation."

"Ah, no," corrected a Spaniard, who had been observed to smile at the ambassador's greeting. You are mistaken you transposed your words, and quite altered the meaning."

"What did I say?" asked the diplomat.

With a twinkle in his eye, the Spaniard made reply. "What you really said was, 'I throw my heels at your head.'"

But the kin had not betrayed by so much as the fluttering of an eyelid, that anything unusual had occurred.

The Sank Centre Herald, in reporting the incidents of the Minnesota editors, says of the Mounted Police of the North West Territories: The Mounted Police, a magnificent military organization of 800 men who look after the Indians and preserve order generally throughout Western Canada. The are magnificent specimens of young manhood and the Indians and lawless elements have a wholesome regard for them. Indians, in particular, who have done wrong, make no attempt to escape from the Mounted Police, realizing that they are sure to be caught ultimately, and that their certain punishment will be all the heavier if they cause any additional trouble by trying to escape. When on duty they wear blue trousers, a bright red coat and a little visiorless cap resting on the left ear, and a band under the chin. A curious headgear, affording practically no protection and for whose inception or perpetuation we are unable to learn any reason whatever. At every stopping point we saw one or more of these Mounted Police, who were incessantly beset by the ladies of the party for uniform buttons.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

Another official has been suspended at the Kingston penitentiary.

The salmon catch on the Maas and Skeena rivers and rivers inlet, totals 128,000 cases, as far as yet heard from. The pack is better than last year.

It is reported that Manager Glass, of the Bank of Montreal at Chatham, is likely to succeed to the managership of the Calgary branch, but the appointment will not be made till the general manager's return from England.

If the rest of the Spanish soldiers in Cuba knew that they would be well fed and taken back to Spain by the United States they would not be long in surrendering, for says the True-Banner, they do not care a rap about Cuba, anyway, even if it were not doomed to fall into the hands of the Yankees. It is the funniest war on record, where one side surrenders and the other side gives it a free excursion home.

The News-Bulletin has the following: Speaking of Lord Strathcona's bill respecting marriage with a deceased wife's sister, a Buffalo newspaper makes the amusing slip of stating that the House of Lords has passed a bill legalizing marriage between a man and his widow's sister! This recalls a Manx proverb given by Mr. Hall Caine, that a man's not much good when his wife is a widow.

A private letter to a resident in Quebec states that a man named McDonald, who was not quite finished his washup on Bonanza creek, had at the time of writing taken out two tons of gold, which had been weighed, and stored in the Bank of Commerce building in Dawson City. But it is not all gold, for E. Lewis, of Circle City, who has come out with $25,000 says that only one out of every ten claims around Dawson is paying wages, those that pay at all pay big money. On El Dorado creek, he says, there are about three miles of really rich ground, and on Bonanza creek, every foot of which has been advertised as paying, there is more than 20 miles of absolutely worthless claims.

Yorkton and Langenburg have on the way to them for settlement a batch of 120 Gallicians, who left Winnipeg on August 2nd. These immigrants have in most cases a few hundred dollars. The Galt Reporter relates the following quick work: Adam Davidson has a record for harvesting and prompt handling of wheat. His wheat was standing on Saturday, it was threshed on Saturday, taken to the Todd Milling Co.'s mill on Saturday and sold to them. They turned it into flour, and the same evening it was shipped east. The wheat was a splendid sample of grain, and averaged about 30 bushels to the acre.

Breeders and dealers say that high class horses are as high now as they ever have been, because of their scarcity. The American government pays $125 for cavalry and artillery horses, and exporters pay the same price. Choice to fancy coachers and drivers sell in the United Staes for $200 to $500 and extra drafters up to $300, but common small horses are cheaper than they ever were before. Thus, while the poorer horses are cheaper than they ever were, the horse of superior quality commands a high price. Breed good horses and the price will be good.—Farming.

In the Imperial House of Commons the other night, during a debate on the extension of the limits of the City of Dublin, Col. Sanderson is strongly opposing the scheme said: "The Liffey was simply an open sewer, and in illustration of the state of things which existed in Dublin, the Hon. and gallant member narrated the story of a man who had determined to commit suicide, and who had made all the preparations for that purpose. He had purchased poison, he had bought a pistol, and procured a rope. He proceeded to Carlisle Bride, tied the rope to a lamp post, swallowed the poison, and fired the pistol at his head, but the bullet, which missed the mark, cut the rope which was tied around his neck, and he fell into the Liffey, the odoriferous waters of which acted as an emetic for the poison, and so, notwithstanding all his preparations, the intended suicide was frustrated. Wild dogs are becoming over plentiful in the great woods of Turtle mountain. They are of the collie breed, and are wonderfully fleet and very watchful. No doubt exists that at one time they belonged to the half breed population, but have escaped even that low form of civilization. They live by hustling rabbits, etc., and burrow in the ground for shelter during inclement seasons. The pups are easily tamed, and prove superior dogs as they combine the qualities of civilized and wild dog nature. They possess amazing swiftness, energy and intelligence, and are obedient and self-reliant.

At Calgary an interesting programme of Indian races, steer roping and broncho riding was arranged at the fair grounds, Blackfeet and Sarcee Indians and rough riders participating. Over 300 Indians were out. Unfortunately a thunder storm came up and cut short the programme, when it was only a little more then half through. This was the only interruption by storm throughout the entire trip.

A SIGHT TO BEHOLD.

Look upward to the azure dome,
Where suns and planets are at home
And where the clouds at pleasure roam.

Look outward to the billowy sea,
Where argosies for you and me
Drift rudderless and will not be Directed to some port where we
May get their golden cargoes free.

Look upward to the mountain top,
From which an avalanche may drop.

Look down the street a mile or so,
Where people come and people go
In such a tossing that they seem
The flotsam of a swollen stream.

Look into windows where the gold
And jewels of the new and old
Are set in glittering array
For those who have the cash to pay.

Look at some passing carriage which
May make you wish that you were rich.

Look anywhere—that is to say,
Look anywhere except her way—
For, lo, here comes what we'd conceal,
A dumpy woman on a wheel!
And did you ever?
Oh, me! Oh, my!

A DOG THAT OWNS JORKINS.

The Canine Is Tyrannical and Mrs. Jorkins Is the Sufferer.

Jorkins owns a dog, or, to be more explicit, the dog owns Jorkins, and they both live with Mrs. Jorkins in a flat, much to the discomfiture of that good woman, who does not as a general thing tolerate dogs.

"Piper has more sense than most people," Jorkins says when expatiating on the virtues of his favorite.

"Yes," Mrs. Jorkins adds, sarcastically, "he knows enough to come in when it rains, because he hates to get wet."

Piper is a dog of parts—part terrier, with a strain of bird dog and a dash of water spaniel. He dislikes to get his feet wet and is afraid of a gun. He seldom barks at night and would wag his tail at sight of a burglar and accompany him through the house noiselessly. He has one accomplishment, and one only. He goes down three flights of flat stairs every morning to bring up the daily paper, which Mrs. Jorkins gets from him by strategy in the course of the day after he has chewed it to pulp.

Jorkins had often intimated to Mrs. J. that it was no trouble to bring up a canine hybrid by hand and believes that now, when he is brought up and they can neither sell, lose him or give him away, that her ministrations should continue, and that if she cannot go out and take Piper with her it is her duty to stay at home.

The other day Mrs. Jorkins struck. She had often threatened to, and on one occasion had struck—the dog. She now refused to attend to Piper's diet another hour. She declared she might as well live in a ricefield as to be eternally cooking rice in the flat kitchen for that dog. She said that Piper ate a gallon of boiled rice per diem.

"I'll see him further," she said to the astonished Jorkins, "before I turn myself into a Hindoo, cooking rice for him. Try it yourself and see how you like it."

Jorkins was crushed. He asked meekly where the rice was kept and spent the rest of the day cooking it, while his wife retired with a bad headache. He filled every tub, pan, pail and basin in the flat with boiled rice, the proportions of which appalled him. Hiding as much of it as he could, he took in a steaming mess to give Piper, who had concealed himself under Mrs. Jorkins' lounge.

"You can't give a dog redhot food," said his wife. "You must cool it for him. I always do."

Her husband looked at her with admiration. He was beginning to think her a martyr. He took the rice and the dog into the kitchen, whither Mrs. J. presently followed him. She found him on his knees, with his bicycle pump, hard at work. He was cooling the rice, while Piper sat by and howled.—Chicago Times-Herald.

From England to Canada

The Newark (Notts) Advertiser, says: The following interesting letter has been received from J. H. Tomlinson, who left Newark about two months ago for Calgary, Alberta, Canada:

Calgary Alberta, June. 8th, 1898.

According to promise I send you a short description of our trip across to Canada, which may interest you.

We left the Mersey on the 28th of April on the favorite Atlantic liner Parisian, the noblest of the fleet of Allan liners, a splendid vessel which has just recently been thoroughly overhauled and refitted. Our start was most inauspicious; the day was thick with fog, and the weird noise of fog horns and steam whistles did not contribute to cheer us on our departure. We were held four hours in the river by this fog, which the premier ship of the Dominion line, the Labrador, managed to miss, and thus gained start on us, but we got into Montreal five or six hours before them. The Parisian is without doubt one of the finest vessels that cross the Atlantic, being registered at 5,500 tons, and very up to date machinery, she carried a crew all told of 155 men, and is commanded by Lieut. Barratt, R. R.N. The officers were in all cases most affable and courteous, and the stewards most attentive and obliging. The Parisian may not be the swiftest vessel on the track, but her captain has a knack of persistently pushing her along, taking toll of every advantage that crossed him, which counts much to the distance to be travelled The passengers numbered 150 saloon, 36 intermediate, and 948 steerage. As soon as we were out in the river the officer of health appointed by government made an inspection of the steerage passengers, and a motley congregation of men, women, and children they were, comprising many nationalities—Danes, Irish, Scotch, English, Russian Galician, Jews, and some Poles. To many of them a good bath would have been beneficial, but a clean bill of health was found, and the necessary formalities were gone through. We were moving, but the fog was so dense that the pace was very cautious, for we have a most careful and competent captain and at last night hid the land from us, but for a long time the lights on shore could be seen. At 7 o'clock the dinner bell rang and we found ourselves in the magnificent saloon, with its four long tables most tastefully decorated with flowers. This first meal on board found a full complemnt of passengers, which could not be said for many subsequent ones. The attention shown for the comfort of passengers could not be surpassed, and this first dinner was as comfortable as if in a first class hotel on shore, and as well served. Here one had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with our fellow passengers, and a most agreeable company it proved, as from the very commencement there seemed manifest a universal desire to keep from exclusiveness; we were more in fact like a large family party. We had breakfast each day at 8:30, luncheon at 1:30, dinner at 7, a "kettledrum", or afternoon tea, at 4:30, and supper if asked for. The daylight of our first day on board showed us the Irish coast, and 11:30 saw us off Moville, where a tug came out to bring us a few more passenger. With them came a vendor of Irish blackthorns, who found a market for his wares at prices which seemed very satisfactory to him. Here we parted with the clergyman who had come with us from Liverpool, having charge of about 50 boys and girls sent out to Canada from the Tower hill refuge at Hackney, and who were all going out to homes found for them before they left England. And now the mighty engines throb, and the gallant vessel starts fairly on her way across the ocean. The day was gloriously fine and most of the passengers were on deck to see the last of land, which we soon did, neither did we sight any more till we saw Newfoundland. I can only give you a very imperfect idea of what a voyage across the Atlantic in one of these magnificent steamers is like. To those who are used to the sea it is one round of pleasure, but to those who unfortunately succumb to the relentless fiend of sea sickness—well, let me draw the curtain; it won't last long and every one will be brighter and better when they have passed through the miseries of the ordeal. We had a succession of bright, sunny days, and a very quiet sea, and I thoroughly enjoyed myself; there was before me several days of just the life I love so well, and I could encourage my idleness to my heart's content. No newspapers, no letters, the only excitement being the daily announcement of the number of miles the ship had made. On this momentous event daily sweeps were made with the consequent auction of the pools, which caused considerable diversion. On Saturday morning we had a little visitor, a red winged thrush had lighted on the rigging to rest. Worn out with its journey, it could easily have been caught, but fortunately no one took such interest in it, and it stayed with us some 10 or 12 hours and then left for parts unknown. Sunday, May 1st the sea was very rough, and the wind rising, but the Parisian maintained her character of a comfortable sea boat, and we had very little of that rolling, which is found on some ships. At 11 a.m. the ship's bell called all passengers on board to church service in the saloon, and was so well responded to that the temporary church was full. The hymns, from Ancient and Modern Hymn Book, "Eternal Father, Strong to Save," and "Angels of Jesus" sounded very home-like and were most heartily sung. The morning prayers, with a brief sermon, concluded the service. An offertory in aid of the Seaman's Orphan Home at Liverpool raised £4, 17s 4d—not so bad, and showed that the passengers were mindful of those who had lost the bread winner in the perils of the sea. Lady passengers are beginning to show on deck again by this time, many who cannot yet face the saloon tables taking their meals on deck. And here let me say that if ever you are crossing the Atlantic choose the Parisian to make the voyage in, if only for the care and attention your wife will meet with from the deck steward, who was untiring in his ministration for their comfort, and whose kind attention will be remembered by many for a long time to come. Well, the voyage was not an eventful one. We saw no Spanish men-of-war, and very few vessels of any kind. Occasionally the rolling of a porpoise would attract attention, and later on, as we neared the banks, a school of whales amused us by their rough play. On Tuesday, May 3rd, we sighted low down on the horizon a streak of smoke, which as we gradually gained on it proved to be the Labrador, the finest vessel of the Dominion line of ocean steamers, who had left Liverpool five hours ahead of us. It was rumored amongst us that Captain Barratt had long had a desire for a test of supremacy between the two mighty vessels, and here was the opportunity; and the twinkle in the merry eye of our skipper told us that he meant to prove to us that the Parisian had no superior amongst Canadian liners. Hour by hour we gained on her, until darkness hid every thing, but her lights, and we did not have the pleasure of seeing her close alongside as we passed her in the night, and never saw her again until the day after we landed at Montreal. Evening concerts in the music room were very popular, and once the intermediate passengers undertook a very successful one in aid of the Liverpol Orphan Home, the sale of the programmes for which amounted to the respectable sum of £11, 13s, 2d. Sometimes, weather permitting, we had dancing on the saloon deck, which was partitioned off by sails to form a ball room, and prettily decorated with flags and bunting; and so the time passed away, reading, smoking, lounging in the sun, or sitting on deck chairs chatting on things in general. Deck quoits or billiards occupied our time, but the end of the voyage is approaching, and the happy company gathered on board this splendid ship will soon separate, in most cases probably to meet no more; and what a company it was, young and old, but all looking happy and content. Some had been the trip many times. One gentleman told me that this was his 63rd trip. He is a Canadian merchant and is going through to Vancouver. We have sighted the rugged shore of Newfoundland, still covered with snow, and when we had passed Cape Ray the sea became perfectly calm, but the wind was bitterly cold, and as we glided on our way up the St. Lawrence to Quebec a snow storm drove us below. We reached Quebec on the Saturday morning, and landed our steerage passengers, and obtained permission to land for an hour or two to post our letters and stretch our legs, and then up the beautiful St. Lawrence river, studded with islands, and with its panorama of settlements, all speaking of prosperity and content, we stole up to Montreal and disembarked there on the Sunday morning, thus ending a most enjoyable ocean trip. Yours truly,

J. H. TOMLINSON.

OUR LONDON LETTER

DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER BILL IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS

Heathen Brutality of the Crew of the La Bourgoine—Harvest Prospects—Anecdote of Gladstone's Boyhood—Workman's Compensation Act—War

London, July 18.—The anxiety of the peers on the subject of colonial marriages with deceased wife's sister is intense. Such interest in the subject crowded the upper house tonight, and brought down the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Fife, a dozen bishops and 180 peers. The bill was introduced by Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal to make valid in this country marriages contracted in the British colonies with a deceased wife's sister. He made a very modest and excellent little speech. "The bill," he said, "is a simple act of justice to the colonies, in which such marriages have been legalized with the assent of the crown, and of the imperial government and parliament. These marriages are regarded as valid for the succession to real property in almost every country except the United Kingdom. The bill was simply to give the children of people having a domicile in British colonies the character of legitimacy, so as to entitle them to succeed to any realty belonging to their parents which was situated in England." The bill was carried by a majority of 46. This no doubt will be interesting news for some of The Herald's readers.

The savagery which was shown by the crew of the La Bourgoine has filled the country with horror. It is the most appalling chapter of the sea that ever was written. In every great wreck on record heroism and unselfishness has been shown, but in this there is none. If reports be true, the horrors of a shipwreck were intensified by a heathen brutality unprecedented in the history of the sea. There can be little doubt that this disaster will be an object lesson to intending passengers, and have the effect of leading people to support those companies where discipline is fairly carried out.

The prospect for the harvest is undoubtedly good. The hay crop has been exceedingly heavy, and given suitable weather for the next two months, a bountiful yield is anticipated, though the general impression is that prices will fall to some extent.

It has recently been pointed out that Canada and the United States will soon have another formidable competitor. It has been calculated that the new Siberian railway will bring under wheat cultivation a zone of something like two hundred thousand square miles, or about one hundred and twenty eight million acres wholly suited for grain growing. This area is about four times the acreage devoted to wheat in the whole of the 47 states comprised in the American union, and six times the total on which the cereal is raised in Rusia. The yield of wheat from such a belt would reach at the Russian estimate per acre about 1,400,000,000 bushels, that is something like three times the entire wheat produce of the United States and four times the yields of the Russian grain fields. It represents about six times as much wheat as is consumed in the United Kingdom, not the imported grain, but the absolute total required, home as well as foreign growth. The West Siberian railway is connected through Northern Russia with Port Archangel, and the charge for conveying a bushel of grain from any part of Western Siberia will not be more than 13 kopeks, or 13 cents per bushel.

In speaking of farming prospects it will be interesting to your readers to hear that £32,000,000 is estimated to be derived from the sale of dairy produce, or one-sixth of the whole income of British agriculture. But enormous as this sum is, it is not all that is paid by the consumer for dairy prodnce since we import from other countries to the extent of £20,000,000 per annum, so there is unlimited scope for your creameries to develop. Denmark still takes the lead in the importation of butter, as the dairy system has been developed by government aid to the largest extent. It shows clearly what can be acomplished by scientific training and teaching. If such results can be obtained by such a small country as Denmark, there is unlimited scope for the development of dairy produce in Canada.

Miss Marie Corelli has a suite of rooms at Woodhouse Spa, Lincolnshire, and this she regards as a home. Her next book she has told a Strand interviewer recently, will be published in the spring of 1899. It will be about the length of Barabbas, and the Sorrows of Satan, she said, and I'm afraid it will excite the clergy of all denominations a good deal.

The war between Spain and the United States excites the closest attention. The sympathies of the English people are decidedly with their cousins, and the struggle is looked upon as utterly hopeless for Spain. The sooner the Dons put up their thumbs and cry "peccavi" the healthier it will be for their skins and pockets. War is not a pleasant game to play at any time, and when the other side has got the whip hand, and looks as though they would keep it, war must be very filling. There is no reason why the Spaniards should not make peace on satisfactory terms, only their scruples about "honor" trick them on to undergo slaughter dire. Spain might very profitably throw their notions of honor after their ships, and fill up the aching void with a modicum of common sense.

As was to be expected the July magazines contain many reminiscences of Gladstone, amongst others the following is given. He once opened a workman's institute, and after the ceremony was completed, the honorable gentleman and several others were invited to take tea, one of the company made the remark to Mr. Gladstone that he had been speaking to a gentleman who knew him at the time when he (the statesman) was a boy at school. "What's his name?" enquired the statesman. Mr. ——, of Liverpool was the reply. "Indeed" ejaculated Mr. Gladstone, "and did he tell you anything particular covering our school days?" "Oh yes he said that you and he fought, and that you had thoroughly thrashed him." "Ah! I thought he would remember that; and did he tell you what it was that we had fought about?" eagerly enquired the veteran with warmth. "No sir, he did not, was the reply. "Then I will tell you. He induced me to steal some strawberries from a field, and when I had done so he wanted to take the best of them. Now as I had run all the risk of detection, I was determined not to let him have them. So we fought and I thrashed him and stuck to my strawberries, and when you see your friend again, will you kindly remember me to him, and tell him I'm not sure whether I could repeat the operation today, as I have not seen him for many years, and I do not know what condition he is in, but I will mention this fact to you, the field of strawberries was where Bold street, Liverpool, now stands." The story is worth repeating if only to show the gigantic strides Liverpool has made since those days.

The workmen's compensation act, which came into force on the 1st, creates an entirely new right for the benefit of the workingman injured in the course of his employment—the right, namely to receive compensation upon a fixed scale in case of any accident not brought about by the "serious helpful misconduct of the injured man himself." In the case of death the maximum payment is £300 and the minimum £150, the determining factor between these limits being the rateof wages which the deceased was receiving before the accident. In the case of total or partial incapacity the injured man is to be entitled to a weekly payment, to be continued as long as his incapacity for work continues. The payment will be proportioned to the man's earnings, but will be limited to a maximum of one pound a week. Broadly speaking the new act applies to all trades or occupation in which mechanical power is used. Several million wage earners will therefore come under the operation of this comprehensive act, and the probability is that there will be a diminution of accidents by reason of extra precautions.

Fred Moore, son of N.W.Moore, of St. Thomas, Ontario, who starte d for the Cariboo country some time ago and probably did so via Edmonton, is reported to have been drowned on the Smoky river, (which is a tributary of the Fraser), in the latter part of May last, going down said stream in a canoe, and a Mr. Anderson, who followed him shortly afterwards, found the canoe capsized with a portion of his effects, but was unable to find Moore. His father is heart-broken and any information regarding him would be most thankfully received. This paragraph is inserted with a view that other papers may copy it, and thereby the information so greatly desired be obtained.

If the citizens of Revelstoke intend celebrating Labor Day it is about time that some organization was undertaken and the plans and programme advertised. It was suggested to the HERALD some time ago by a citizen that the forenoon of Labor Day could not be better spent than by a united force of men congregating at the cemetery and putting a couple of hours' work in removing the fallen timber and in other ways beautifying the plot.

A select little party assembled on Monday forenoon last at the residence of Mr. H. J. W. M. Lawrence is having extensive alterations made in his hardware store for the purpose of the better handling of his rapidly increasing trade. A large addition has been built at the rear for a tin shop and storeroom and in the centre of the building a handsome business office has been put in. Altogether the new additions and fixtures make the store a very complete and businesslike place.

In connection with the new Dominion Government timber regulations, gazetted this week, an important change has been made by the Department of the Interior in the interests of public institutions. Under the new regulations any timber cut upon undisposed Dominion lands to be used in the construction of public works or public institutions, may be taken free of cost from such reserves. These institutions include churches and schools. In the past the usual dues have been exacted for timber secured for the class of buildings mentioned. Others who are entitled to free timber are travellers, miners engaged in prospecting when holding free miners' certificates and persons engaged in merely scientific pursuits or exploring.

A World Beater.

It is estimated that during the first six months of 1898, ending June 30, Rossland camp produced 30,365 tons of ore valued at $1,277,079.11. The shipments from the Le Roi mine alone aggregated 22,070 tons and shipments have ranged about $30 in gold, 3 per cent in copper and 2 ounces in silver, which gives a total value as follows: Gold, $30; copper at 11½c, $7.05; silver, at 59c., $1.18; total, $38.23 per ton. On this basis the Le Roi shipments for six months are worth $875,846.10.

Demands of Increased Traffic.

The big steel passenger steamer now being built at Nelson by the C. P. R. is nearing completion and will be fit for service by the end of September. The boat is 160 feet in length and will be the handsomest and fastest craft of the kind ever seen on the inland waters of British Columbia. It will be used in connection with the Crow's Nest Pass railway passenger service. A boat of the same type as the one now in course of construction at Nelson is to be built for service on Arrow lakes and the Columbia river, and will be completed within the next 90 days.

Nerve in Mining

While nerve alone will not insure the success of a man in the mining industry it is one of the chief essentials of success. The man who lacks it will fail to overtake success in ninety-nine cases in every hundred. In no other vocation is the courage challenged so often. In no field of effort is there greater demand for energy and faith. There is not a mining district in the west that is destitute of its heroes who have already stood up against the most discouraging circumstances ever encountered by man, struggling to overcome conditions that foreshadow disappointment and defeat. Occasionally there are conspicuous examples of this type. Montana has had its full quota and is proud of the records made by the men who have had the nerve to stand by their guns until the struggle with fate was won.

Utah has a mining hero in the person of Captain DeLamar, a man of unconquerable nerve and determination. In the Mercur district he spent $1,500,000 before realizing one single dollar in return, but as a result stands ready to pull out that amount per annum for many years to come. His nerve and judgment enables him to realize one hundred per cent on his investment, instead of seven per cent, which the loaning capitalists would be contented to receive. Usually men of DeLamar's wealth refuse to bother themselves with new ventures involving worry and anxiety and which may swallow up a large portion of their wealth without yielding adequate returns, but Utah's nervy investor plunged ahead and wins success by the audacity of his methods. His investment means one million dollars a year among laboring men and he thus conserves the public interests of the state in which he lives. Men of the DeLamar type are the heroes of progress, the benefactors of the mining industry and the life of the communities honored by their efforts.—Western Mining World.

STEALING THE OLD MAN

Under the above heading the Montreal Star comments upon the conduct of the Liberals in stealing the "old flag" which the Conservatives were wont to wave so vigorously. The Star charges that following this they have also stolen the "old policy" and are now stealing the "old man," by quoting him from time to time as furnishing a precedent to justify some shady transaction of their own. The Star says:

All his life through the Liberal press and politicians verbally pounded him (Sir John) with all the brutality and ingenious malevolence at their by no means limited command. To know that Sir John had done a thing was sufficient evidence that it ought not to have been done; and every act of government to which he put his hand was industriously tortured by them into an act of corruption, whose intent was to keep a purchased people content in their ignoble slavery. But to day a Sir John Macdonald precedent is the best defence these Liberals can find for any act of theirs. More than that, it seems to constitute a justification in the eyes of the very Liberal who once pronounced Madonaldism synonomous with Machiavellianism. The latest instance is, of course, Liberal. Premier Hardy's attempt to establish a Macdonald precedent for his proposal to pass at a special sitting of the Legislature a practically retroactive bill legalizing a series of doubtful votes cast at the last election, without which he would probably have been thrust from power. Of course the precedent is not fairly claimed. Sir John Macdonald undertook to do nothing so shameless. But the desire of this government—Liberal of the Liberals as it is—to hide behind such a president, and the apparent willingness of the Liberals of Ontario to swallow the act because "Sir John" once did something of the kind, indicates how much in danger the Tories are of having the last plank in that platform of '91 stolen from them. They have been bereft of the "old flag"; they have seen the "old policy" eagerly snapped up by the men who could think of nothing too hard to say about it for eighteen long years and now the grand old leader, whose name was for many years the rallying cry of Conservatism and the "bete noir" of Liberalism, is in danger of being paraded before the country as a real "Baldwin Reformer."

Linotype Machines in Calgary.

The Calgary Daily Herald, which is the only daily between Winnipeg and Vancouver, and an enterprising and popular journal, has just put in two Linotype machines at a cost of nearly $7,000 and has just made its first appearance as a machine set paper. The following are a few lines clipped from its issue of the 3rd inst. which makes interesting reading to the hand compositor:

"Alderman Underwood and the mayor were eajorvf. hrdlhrd rdl rdlu hrdlu were in favor of considering an offer of $100,000 for * * *"

"Somebody said Alderman Underwood was on this emfwy mfwyp emf * * *"

This is rather hard on Alderman Underwood, and his many friends here will trust that the charges made as above are untrue.

Big Returns from Silver Cup Ore

Once more the owners of the Silver Cup have received a big cheque for shipment of ore from their property in the Trout Lake district. A few weeks ago a shipment of 82 tons was made to the Selby company's smelter at San Francisco, and the cheque which Thomas Dunn, of Vancouver, received, over and above all charges for freight and treatment, was for $817 20, considerably over $100 per ton for the ore sent away. The Silver Cup is now shipping ore regularly.—Nelson Tribune.
