SATURDAY, SEPT. 3, 1908.

September 29th.

Who would think that Canada is within about five weeks of a general election? queries the Montreal Star.

There are no committees, no brass bands, no posters, no canvassing worth talking about, no money to put down bribery and corruption, no excitement.

Yet on the 29th of next month the electors of Canada are to have the proud privilege of exercising their franchise. What is the explanation of the public apathy upon such an occasion?

It is not that the issue in this election is an unimportant one. We cannot imagine that the people of Canada, abstainers or non-abstainers, can be indifferent to the question whether the use of alcoholic beverages is to be prohibited in Canada or not.

The explanation is that the great majority of the people of Canada do not regard this plebiscite seriously. The great vested interests have heard so much about the liquor trade, which is supposed to be threatened with utter extinction by the vote on September 29th, has not spent a dollar or lifted a finger, so far as we have heard, to avert that calamity. The trade seems rather friendly with the plebiscite, as something that may do it some good, but cannot do it any harm.

A gentleman who has a great deal of influence just now in Canadian legislation and whose permanent address is Torres Vedras, has pledged his knightly word, on the floor of Parliament, that if the vote goes against prohibition, "prohibition will drop and drop for ever," but he has in the same breath most definitely refused to promise that if the vote goes in favor of prohibition that it will be followed by a government prohibition bill.

Some of the Liberal temperance organs are doing vigorous campaign work in the interests of prohibition; but we do not think that one of these government supporters has declared that the government will introduce a prohibition bill if the plebiscite shows a majority in favor of prohibition. We ask pardon if we are incorrect.

We do not think that one of these organs has even declared that it will expect the government to commit itself to a prohibition bill in the event of a majority for prohibition.

The temperance advocates are taking the plebiscite seriously and they are right in so doing, because whatever the interests of the government may be it is manifestly in the interests of the very existence of their cause. The fact that they are probably being bumbled by the government does not relieve them from the necessity of straining every effort to prevent the overwhelming disaster of an adverse vote.

That the entire vote cast in the plebiscite will be small.

That there will be a majority in the whole Dominion in favor of prohibition.

That the majority in the province of Quebec will be against prohibition, but this is by no means certain.

That under no circumstances whatever, even in the event of all the provinces showing majorities for prohibition will Sir Wilfrid Laurier commit his government to a prohibition bill.

The prohibitionists rely, we believe, on certain promises made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier when in opposition. If they feel satisfied that the premier has kept all the promises he made when in opposition about the tariff, about the reduction of taxation, about the reduction of the debt, about economy in expenditure, etc., they are justified in relying on these promises. Nevertheless we adhere to the opinion that Sir Wilfrid will not further a prohibition bill.

If the Hon. Sidney Fisher will pledge his word that a majority in favor of prohibition will be followed immediately by a government prohibition bill or by his resignation of his portfolio, we have no hesitation in saying that he will keep his word and resign.

In the event of a majority for prohibition we believe the premier will do one of two things. He may appeal to the country at once, in which case his candidates could have a policy to suit each constituency as shown by the plebiscite vote, and he would not have to come out of Torres Vedras until after the election.

Or he may find an excuse for shirking the issue altogether or referring it to England. We will most likely say that as the province of Quebec has voted against prohibition, or has not given a majority of the entire vote in favor of prohibition, that it would be better to ask the Imperial parliament to amend the British North America act so as to allow each province to legislate for itself on this important question. The honorable gentleman may be trusted to find his own excuse; but if we are asked to explain the apathy of the great liquor dealers in the presence of the plebiscite, our explanation is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will never risk the fate of his government on a straight prohibition bill and that the great liquor dealers know it.

The Sick Man of Asia

Toronto Globe: It is nearly three years since the Chinese crisis was inaugurated. In 1894 the Japanese victory cleared the ground for the wholesale rush to exploit Chinese weakness, and Russia, Germany and France, under Russian leadership, had carried through the remarkable piece of diplomatic pressure by which Japan was forced to give up her conquests and China bought back Port Arthur and the Liau Tung peninsula for $25,000,000 in order to make a free gift of it later on to Russia.

About a year later China concluded a convention which practically gave Manchuria to Russia, and allowed Russia to annex Port Arthur and connect her railway system with Peking. The secret history of the great Cassini convention, the starting point of the present phase of Russian aggression, is worth noting. It has an incidental interest for Canadians, who little thought when they swarmed to see Li Hung Chang that the "grand old man of China" was at that moment engaged in the betrayal of his country, and that his semi-royal tour was a part of the plot. The scheme dated from the treaty of Simonsheki, which terminated the war with Japan. When Li Hung Chang returned from the negotiating table, he was in a humiliating mood, and he never hesitated to make a members readiness to subscribe a test of his religious sincerity. The amount is limited to a guinea per man. The opening of a new century is a natural occasion for a great effort, and it can hardly be doubted that the one million Methodists who are expected to give each his guinea will respond to the appeal.

OUR LONDON LETTER

Methodist Conference in Hull—The Navy—Help From the Colonies—Trade Unionism—The Prince of Wales—Military Reform. London, August 10.—A million pound scheme. With a boldness which may be commended to wealthier churches, the Wesleyan conference, now sitting at Hull, decided yesterday to celebrate the opening of the 20th century by raising a fund of a million guineas. From the first the Methodists have been liberal in their giving of their money, and they never hesitate to make a members readiness to subscribe a test of his religious sincerity. The amount is limited to a guinea per man. The opening of a new century is a natural occasion for a great effort, and it can hardly be doubted that the one million Methodists who are expected to give each his guinea will respond to the appeal.

This momentous agreement. Port Arthur has been acquired. Tai-lien-wan was secured, and when the necessary British protests had been heard and ignored, was made a support of the monopolistic variety. The railway scheme has been carried out, with the addition of the side tracking of Niu Chuang, where British and American trade interests were predominant. The Russian control of the line which is to connect Peking with Manchuria has been rudely asserted. The only new feature is the appearance of France and Belgium on the scene to help make the Peking-Han Kuu line Russian, and the effort to interfere with British mining and railway concessions in Shan-shi, to the west of Peking. The plan which was announced to the world 20 months ago has been carried through. The situation has thus developed with the utmost deliberation and it is the consequences which are being met with which the Chinese were bullied into refusing to sign the contract with the British financiers for the Niu Chuang railway concession more than anything else has brought matters to the present pass. The history of the means whereby this great advantage has been won by Britain's rival reveals the nature of the diplomatic struggle which is in progress and casts a light upon Russian methods of advancing the frontiers of the Northern Empire.

THE NEW VICEROY OF INDIA

London, August 16.—Mr. George Curzon is to be the new viceroy of India. It is a great and brilliant position for so young a man, and Lord Salisbury has done a bold and sensible thing in appointing him to the office. It is true that the fact was recognized, that these high administrative positions in the Empire are for men of brains and energy and character, and not for picturesque nobilities whose supreme recommendation is an ancient name and a glib tongue. Curzon is not a popular man even on his own side of the house; his omniscient airs are often resented. Whatever position he has attained, therefore, is due to natural ability, his untiring application to the work of the foreign office, and a knowledge of eastern affairs that is unrivalled amongst the politicians of the day. Rank does not count for a great deal in these times, "peers" are cheap today" as one of the comic papers has it. Social influence is not omnipotent, or we should have some common place Duke or Marquis going out to succeed Lord E. Curzon. Mr. Curzon owes his present distinguished position in the measure to accident. So long as the near east was the centre of interest, he was regarded as a new under secretary with port, and in some instances intolerable manners. But when the far east became the scene of the international scramble, Mr. Curzon at once stepped to the front as an expert. He had been in the countries of which he spoke. He had been the guest of notable chieftains, and first to last, he never doubted the infallibility of his own knowledge and judgment. Such a politician has had a hard fight, but Mr. Curzon in these last two years has conquered the House of Commons, and even his opponents have got into the habit of speaking of him as a future prime minister.

Amongst men in the city it is a great satisfaction to connect a name with a name of three persons who set themselves to defraud the public in connection with the Lydenburg Consolidated Mines Company, Limited. The solicitor general prosecuted for the crown, and gave an account of the methods by which £21,000 was obtained from the public. The company had not, in the first instance, an agreement for the purchase of the premises, and the supposed work of the document under which they acquired their property was signed by the office boy, who was given six pence for his trouble. It purported to be an agreement for the purchase of 1,200 acres of land in the Transvaal. No one ever inspected that land, and it was never developed. The prime mover Louis Simmons Lupton got five years penal servitude, but it is too much to hope that this will put a stop to these ventures.

REVOLUTION IN AGRICULTURE

An agriculturist correspondent writes: "It has been left to the young men to be successful in grapple successfully with a mighty problem, and after 18 years of hard, unremunerating work to open up a vast field of new discoveries in the cultivation of cereals and grasses, which bid fair to revolutionize agriculture. In 1880 John and R. Garton, the sons of a Lancashire corn merchant, began their experiment in the production of a certain cereal crop, the fertilization at Newton-le-Willows. Already they have succeeded in producing varieties of wheat the average weight of the grain of which is 60 per cent heavier than the average weight of grains of wheat in ordinary cultivation. With oats, they have been even more successful. I saw a field of black oats growing at Newton which was just ready for cutting. The grain was just as much finer than the best Poland white oats, as these latter are larger and finer than the ordinary Tartarian. Already they have varieties of wheat and oats which produce to yield 30 and 40 per cent more per acre than ordinary varieties and so increase the national production by that amount. In the ordinary course of things, the local seedling of the laborer, men like the Gartons, would at once have attracted the attention of the state department of agriculture. But it is not so in England.

PROPOSED GLADSTONE DUBLIN STATUE

Liberal members of the House of Commons express intense disgust at the refusal of the Dublin corporation to favor the erection of a statue to Mr. Gladstone. They say that Irishmen have dealt many heavy blows at Home Rule, but none so heavy as this last blow, and several honorable gentlemen have privately declared that they have never had more than enough of a cause which can produce such ingratitude. Some of the Nationalists point out in mitigation that Dublin is a Parnellite city, and that the corporation vote was Parnellite and Unionist, but this is not an argument which much influences the Liberal objectors. They do not think, replied one of them, that it is possible to persuade my constituents to observe such distinctions; they'll simply see that the capital city of the country for which Mr. Gladstone made the crowning efforts of his life refuses to do honor to his memory.

SYKES AND THE CHURCH

Matters are in an acute state at Sledmere. Sir Tatton Sykes having spent an enormous sum on the new church close to his hall, now finds himself unable to enter it. It seems that unknown to Sir Tatton the vicar had placed six large candlesticks on the altar, which not only hid the windows, but also when the candles are lighted imperil the carved woodwork. The vicar will not remove them and Sir Tatton will not enter the church while they are there. Plain people may be pardoned for thinking the vicar could get on beted without the candlesticks than without the wealthy and generous baronet; but then the opinions of the clergy are often very different from those of plain people, and so there the candlesticks remain. To the public generally it will seem that while one part of the religious world are at their wits end to get people into church, there is another part bent upon doing their best to keep them out.

WHAT SORT OF A MAN ARE YOU?

Signor Crispi tells the following story, which bears on Prince Bismarck's drinking and smoking habits. "During my first interview with Prince Bismarck at Friedrichsruh the chancellor caused two enormous glasses of beer to be brought, and invited me to drink the one placed before me. I invested that I drank only water, whereas the prince seemed astonished beyond measure, but said nothing. But when he had emptied his own glass he slowly drank the one he had intended for me. Shortly afterwards two large pipes filled with tobacco were brought. The prince lit his own, and handed the other to me. "Your highness, I observed, "many thanks, but I never smoke." "What," he exclaimed, the prince rather impatiently, "you don't drink, and you don't smoke! What sort of a man are you?"

THE WEATHER

Remarkable changes of weather have signalized the last seven days, the fluctuations in the temperature have been sufficiently wide to make a record interesting. The weather appeared to break up at the end of the week, and for a few days it appeared as if we were going to have no more summer; people began to be alarmed at the nature of the skies and feared we were in for an early, cold and cloudy autumn. On Sunday the 7th, the temperature was lower than it had been on any day in August for nearly 50 years, and with such experience of cold, accompanied by heavy rains, and stormy winds, which continued for several days, the outlook was gloomy indeed. On Monday, however, a change for the better took place and since then there has been much sunshine.

The Cosgroves were very highly thought of on their last visit, but since then they have added several new features to their entertainment, and it is safe to say that no more thoroughly enjoyable one has been given in Revelstoke.
Percy Godenrath, an old Calgary boy, representing the Spokane Spokesman-Review, has been in the Boundary Creek district for the last two weeks collecting data for a writeup of that country. He says he is more than pleased with the activity apparent.
It is reported that Eli Carpenter, a Slocan pioneer, who started for the Yukon, via the Edmonton route, is dead. Carpenter was one of the very first to enter the Slocan. He was the discoverer of the famous Payne and other mines on Noble Five mountain.
R. L. Lowery, the Slocan champion thought moulder, and editor and financier of that great moral weekly the New Denver Ledger, announces his intention of going east as far as the cent belt to visit his thousands of relatives. Verily the price of silver is rising.
Excellent reports continue to arrive of the progress made by the French Creek Co. on French creek. Mr. R. Williams, who was in town for a few days this week, reported to a HERALD man a find of quite a pocket of gold, among which were three huge sized nuggets, under a boulder, which was lifted by the derrick. The sawmill of the company is to be shifted to McCullough creek to saw for the new company who have acquired an interest to operate the Ophir claim at the mouth of the McCullough.

The Conservative convention in Vancouver was well and representatively attended. Col. Prior, of Victoria, was chosen as chairman. Particulars of the proceedings will appear in next issue.
The Cosgrove Co. have decided to alter their prices for Monday and Tuesday nights from $1.00 to 75 cents for reserve seats. Tickets for sale at C. J. Aman's and F. B. Wells'.
Attention is directed to the advertisement in another column regarding the opening of M. K. Lawson's fancy dry goods and ladies' furnishings store, opposite the Cowan block, on Tuesday, September 6th. A large and varied stock will be shown and ladies who visit the store will certainly be well repaid.
The Kaslo & Slocan railway is stated by the Kootenay papers to have been already taken possession of by the new owners, the Kootenay Railway and Navigation Co., of London, Eng. The new corporation aims at large transportation enterprises covering practically speaking the whole territory, making up East and West Kootenay.
T. H. Dunne, of Donald, came in last night to join the Harry Lindley Co. here. Mr. Lindley has rented the theatre at Rossland for the next six months and reorganized his company, which left for that place this morning. Mr. Dunne, who is well known in the west, particularly in Alberta, as a stage manager, semi artist and actor, has joined the company for a few month's holiday.
There appears to be no evidence to warrant prosecution against Rev. W. J. Thompson, of Kamloops, recently of Ipswich, Mass. A statement just published in the Sentinel clears up the matter very satisfactorily. The stories were apparently the work of sensational newspapers classed upon certain circumstances which have been cleared up by the authorities.
Messrs. Dr. T. W. Jeffs, T. J. Graham, and A. Johnson left on Thursday's No. 1 for Vancouver as Revelstoke's delegates, to attend the Conservative convention in that city on Sept. 1 and 2. The primary object of the convention is to arrange for the provincial organization of the party, and the result is bound to be far-reaching in its effect not only in local but in Dominion politics.

The Annie Louise White Co., of New York, the international entertainers, played to a small but appreciative audience in Tapping's theatre on Tuesday evening last. It is acknowledged by all who had the pleasure of being present, that both Miss Lillie Kleiser and Miss Annie Louise White were the most clever artists in their class that have ever appeared before a Revelstoke audience.
Monday next, being Labor Day, will be recognized as a holiday all over the Dominion. It is rumored that the day will be celebrated in Revelstoke by a programme of athletic sports, but up to the time of going to press nothing definite has been ascertained by the HERALD. The Cosgrove company, now well known here, will give a concert in the evening, which, judging by their previous performances, should be an enjoyable affair.

• Your engagement for the evening of Sept. 5th should read "the illuminated fete."
