THE FARWELL SYNDICATE

As the year 1898 draws to its close, the time of grace allowed to A. S. Farwell to close with the offer of the Government and take a fresh patent for what is left of his original grant is expiring with it. Unless he, or rather the syndicate of land speculators of which he forms the figure head, crawl down from the perch by December 31st, their townsie will go to the Dominion Government. This is certainly a consummation devoutly to be wished, but it is scarcely likely that the syndicate will really allow the property to slip through their hands in this fashion. What their reasons can be for putting off the inevitable to the very last month it is idle to inquire. There has been neither rhyme nor reason in their handling of this townsie from the very start. It might have made the original owners a small fortune had it been managed on the most elementary principles of common sense, and at the same time as nice a town as there is British Columbia would have been built up at this point. Instead of that through sheer obstinacy they have had the satisfaction of seeing the best part of the townsie slip through their fingers, while the town has run out of itself into strangers. A greater batch of its sure a proposition in the townsie line is not to be found in British Columbia.

The HERALD hopes that the Government will show these speculators no weak minded mercy, but that if they really do fail to come to time by the last day of 1898, the Department of the Interior will at once assume possession and place the property on the market. Some of the very nicest lots in Revelstoke are now lying unoccupied because these people have chosen to delay closing with the terms offered them until the very last moment. They might have been sold a dozen times over. In the meantime the progress of the town has been just so much delayed. The syndicate have never done a thing for Revelstoke. They have always refused to spend a dollar to help out any project for the good of the town. It would only be the barest justice if they were to lose their property in it, their rights to which are not based on any really recognizable principle. They have not a shadow of a claim to leniency. The HERALD sincerely hopes that they will let the last day of grace slip by and that the Government will forthwith take possession of the property. Such a course will be immensely to the benefit of the town and everybody in it.

Unfortunately this event is scarcely likely to happen. However, if the syndicate do get a fresh patent it should be on the distinct understanding that they place the property on the market on reasonable terms immediately. They are just the kind of people to go on keeping it locked up in the hopes of a rise in values. It should be placed out of their power to do this. Every dollar they will make out of it will be just the same to them as if they had picked it up on the road. And they should be forced to be content with the rates obtaining in the other townsites at present, which are quite high enough. The HERALD hopes that this is a matter which will be looked to by the department before giving the syndicate a fresh patent. They have done enough mischief here. It should be put out of their power to do more.

HARRY LINDLEY CO.

Wild Open Tapping's New Opera House on Monday Evening

The Harry Lindley Co. commence a week's engagement here on Monday night in Tapping's new Opera House. Mr. Tapping is pushing the work to completion with great vigor, and although it will not be finished in time for the opening night, yet he will have it fairly comfortable. In regard to the performances of the company, they are too well known and popular in Revelstoke to need special mention. Harry Lindley is a household word here and that bumper houses will be the order next week there is not the least doubt. Arrah-na-Pogae, an Irish five-act comedy drama will be the bill-of-fare for the opening.

ST. ANDREW'S HONORED

OUR REVELSTOKE SCOTCHMEN CELEBRATE IN GOOD STYLE

SEVENTY GUESTS SAT DOWN

To the Inaugural Supper of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society Held in the Union Hotel Last Wednesday Evening—A Scotch Bill of Fare—Haggis and Other National Dishes

This year for the first time in the history of Revelstoke the Scotchmen of this place have fallen into line with their compatriots all over the world and have gathered together on St. Andrew's Day to do honor to their patron saint, the legendary evangelist of Caledonia, and to all the memories and associations which Scottish patriotism has gathered round his name.

All over the world last Wednesday social gatherings were being held and the toasts of the old land were drunk and the kindly commemoration celebrated. At the Union Hotel nearly seventy guests sat down, being the members of the newly formed St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society and their friends to an excellent supper. The spread was most elaborate and did great credit to the resources of that popular house. Mr. W. Lawrence, the president of the society, presided over the feast. The following was the bill-of-fare:

Caller Out	Fair's O' Oatmeal Cake
Sheep's Heid Broth
Glasgow Magistrates	Biled Cod an' Butter Sauce

The following telegrams of greetings from Vancouver, Kamloops and Haledon Hot Springs were received by President Lawrence:

WRECK OF THE AINSWORTH

A List of the Men Drowned—An Ex-Winnipegger One of the Crew

Later corroborative details of the wreck of the steamer Ainsworth on Kootenay Lake, from Nelson, have arrived as follows:

The Ainsworth, a small steamer plying between Nelson and Bonner's trip, and when about six miles south of Pilot Bay and two and a half miles from shore during a heavy sea, she was struck by a squall and commenced taking in water. The captain headed her for shore, but she reeled over on her side, filling immediately. The passengers—drowned were Charles Campbell, a merchant of Kuskonook, two Italians, of Kuskonook, Capt. Lean, First Engineer Kane and J. Donnelly, a deck hand, reached shore in a life boat. The balance of the crew whose names are as follows, were drowned: Perry, mate; James Mitchell, Brown; John Gunn, steward; Joseph Davis, deck hand; C. Hume, cook; and the second engineer, whose name cannot be learned at present.

The Ainsworth was owned by Braden Brothers, of the Pilot Bay snieler.

A WINNIPEGGER

WINNIPEG, Nov. 30.—John Gunn, steward of the wrecked steamer Ainsworth, who was drowned in Kootenay Lake was for many years a resident of Winnipeg, having conducted the Bellevue hotel in the "eighties."

After the good things had been disposed of an excellent programme of speeches and songs was commenced, starting with the loyal toast,

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. H. A. Brown for the excellent dinner provided, and to Mr. Graves for the handsome and appropriate decorations of the room. Three cheers for the president followed, when all joined hands in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

It was well on into Thursday morning before the party finally dispersed. The HERALD hopes that it will prove to be the only precursor of a long series of similar celebrations. A successful St. Andrew's Society is a good feature in any place and an excellent symptom of enterprise and prosperity.

ANOTHER VACANCY

Mr. Robertson, Member-Elect for Cowichan, Tenders His Resignation

William R. Robertson, member-elect for Cowichan, has resigned his seat in the provincial legislature, his reasons being the same as those which prompted Mr. Neill to relinquish the seat for Alberni. Like Mr. Neill, Mr. Robertson will again be a candidate. No speaker having yet been elected, it was necessary to hand the resignation to two members of the house. Mr. Robertson therefore handed his resignation to Messrs. Elberts and Helucken on Tuesday evening, and they had the registrar of the Supreme Court issue the necessary warrant declaring the seat vacant. The nomination in Alberni takes place on December 15. There are prospects of a contest.—Colonist.

A HORRIBLE CRIME

A Woman Murdered by Her Paramour—Wednesday Night

The usual quiet little city of New Westminster was Wednesday night the scene of a brutal murder of a type very much like that of Jack the Ripper. It was about 8 o'clock that the first news of the tragedy reached Vancouver, the murder having taken place an hour before. The victim was a woman known as Jennie Rogers, an inmate of a house of ill-fame, who is well known to the Vancouver police, and her murderer was Donald Perrier, or Perry, the name he went by in Vancouver.—World.

A Nicht w/ Burns

The St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society of Revelstoke at their monthly meeting last night arranged to give a concert of Scottish song on 25th January next, to celebrate the 149th anniversary of the birth of their national bard. Looking to the great success of the society's dinner on St. Andrew's day, it is safe to predict that their second venture will rank among the events of the season. Full particulars will be announced later.

ARE AFTER HIS LIFE

CHOO; A ROSSLAND CHINAMAN, MARKED BY HIGHBINDERS

A MOST EXTRAORDINARY CASE

He Was to Have Arrived in Vancouver To-Day, But He Failed to Appear—Rev. Mr. McLaren and the Police Asked to Look After Him—He Subscribed to the Presbyterian Church.

To be a marked man among the Chinese society of highbinders known as the Che Kung Tong is a distinction entirely unsought by the newest Chinaman on either side of the broad Pacific, and the more prominent a man the more probable it is that he will come beneath the displeasure of the society if he does not readily become its slave.

A case which has been exciting some interest in the upper country, but which has never been made public until now, is that of Chinaman named Choo, who has been living in Rosland for some time past. Choo is wealthy and seeking to add to his wealth he has been acting as a money-lender among his compatriots. While living in Rosland he has made many friends among the white people and has been a liberal contributor to the funds of the Presbyterian church, of which Rev. Mr. Gaudier is pastor.

Needless to say that these subscriptions have become a matter of comment among the Chinese. Choo's intimacy with the whites has also been marked, and told Rev. Mr. Gaudier the crisis came a few weeks ago when he went out to collect some of the money due him.

He did not get it. Just what he did get was such a fright that he found Rosland, and in fact the whole Kootenay country, too warm for him. He returned and told Rev. Mr. Gaudier that his life was in danger from the highbinders and that he would have to leave at once. The man's terror was real and he appeared to have been warned by some one who knew about what he was talking.

He made up his mind to leave for Vancouver at once. At night he took a train that would take him to the station. Mr. Gaudier was notified of the case and asked Mr. McLaren to have a policeman meet the terror-stricken Chinaman at the station.

He is certain that the highbinders will make away with him if they catch him," wrote Mr. Gaudier.

Mr. McLaren thought the matter to the attention of the chief of police and Policeman Mulhern was detailed to attend Mr. McLaren at the train. There was a big crowd of Chinamen at the station, but among the several that alighted from the train none seemed to be particularly in need of police protection. The fact that Choo did not make himself known.

It is possible that he did not come, but it is equally possible that the highbinders managed to head off their victim and that Choo's debtors in the Kootenay country will worry no more about the "holder" of their paper.—Province.

MORE HOOLEY REVELATIONS

There were again some lively revelations in the bankruptcy court in connection with Mr. Hooley's re-examination. He has been throwing a few more bomb-shells amongst the elect of politics and society.

Mr. Hooley's little story of the purchase of the assets secured a paragraph through the jealously guarded portals is as follows: He declares that he paid the sums of £5,000 cash to the funds of the Conservative party and a sum of £1000 to Sir W. Marriot for introducing him to the club.

Lord Kitchener is busy in London arranging for the extension of the Soudan railway to Kartoum. The construction of the additional 130 miles has been decided upon and the orders for the necessary bridges are being placed with British firms.

Speaking at the banquet to the Lord Mayor of London on November 9th, the Marquis of Salisbury in the course of his speech in reply to the toast of "Her Majesty's minister" said: "Let me remember that we are a great colonial and maritime power. There have been four of our great maritime powers, but they have all fallen because they had a land frontier by which enemies could approach and by which their metropolises could be struck. We have no such land frontier but if we ever allow our defenses at sea to fall to such a point of inefficiency that it is easy or nearly as easy to cross the sea as it is to cross a land frontier, our great empire, stretching to the ends of the earth, supported by maritime force in every part of it, will come clattering to the ground, when a blow at the metropolises of England is struck."

At a recent sale in London the vest worn by King Charles I at the time of his execution was sold for £210.

SELECTIONS

THE DIVER ON WARSHIPS.

A Very Necessary Adjunct to the Modern Man-of-war.

If Paul Jones in ghostly guise wanders around the warships of our new navy, he must see many surprising novelties to the fighting and working accessories to his day. One novel and necessary addition to the crew of a warship of the present time is the submarine diver.

It has not been done well, but it has been the best kind of substitute that could be found for the proper article. The submarine divers are able only to scrape away the barnacles and seaweed, and even then they are so handicapped by the heaviness and unhandiness of their dress that it is impossible to do the work in any but a clumsy and incomplete way.

But, good or bad, the diver has become a necessary part of the ship's crew. Many warships carry one or more trained divers. He must be possessed of an exceptionally strong constitution, and, above all, without the slightest tendency to any heart weakness.

Every foot the diver descends the greater, of course, becomes the pressure, and at the deepest descent made—namely, 200 feet—the pressure is as much as 88 pounds to the square inch. It is, however, only rarely that it is necessary to go to such depths as this, but even working in shallow water most men suffer very severely at first and emerge from their diving suit with racking head and bleeding from the nose and ears. In truth, every time he descends the diver takes his life in his hand, for anything going wrong with the air supplying gear would place him in a very hopeless position.

The diving apparatus in use in our navy is a costly affair. The method of its working is simple. A long coil of tubing supplies the diver with oxygen, and by means of a coil of rope attached to his person he can signal by pulls to the surface and be raised when the work is done. To descend the diver has of course to be heavily weighted. The weights carried on breast and back weigh some 80 pounds, while the heavy leather boots with their leaden soles weigh another 20 pounds. The weight of the helmet, which is ingeniously fitted with valves to allow the vitiated air to escape, is no less than 40 pounds, and to this must be added the weight of the rubber dress itself and the weight of the heavy underclothing worn by the diver.

Blind and almost helpless as a baby the mother of General Fitz-Hugh Lee lives with her son Daniel near Fredericksburg, Va. Though nearly 80 years old, she is bright and cheerful. Surrounded by descendants who fairly idolize her she is rapidly nearing the dark river fearless and with childlike confidence. In her youth she was known as "beautiful Nannie Mason of the island." At Arlington she first met Lieutenant Sydney Smith Lee, U. S. N., a brother of Robert E. The meeting resulted in courtship and marriage, General Joseph E. Johnston being one of the groomsmen. Portraits taken in those early days show the bride to have had a lovely, piquant face, with rosy cheeks, brown eyes and clustering brown curls. When her son Fitz-Hugh became governor of Virginia, she made her home with him in Richmond. She was keenly interested in the political issues of the day, but unfortunately a severe cold settled in her eyes. After intense suffering, borne with her usual fortitude, she submitted to a painful operation, which, however, failed to give relief, and she became totally blind.—Richmond Times.

Solefide In Full Dress. Mrs. Rosser, who has just suicided with her husband, the French cyclist, in Malbourne, prepared herself for the great event as carefully as if she had been dressing for a ball. She put on her most effective dress, elaborately curled and dressed her hair, arranged herself upon the bed in a graceful pose and died with her face set in a pleasant smile. The writer knows of no other similar instance, but the woman in the latter case hanged herself in evening dress, with all her jewelry on and a touch of carnation on her lips. The average man's vanity is not small, but it is a poor passion beside that of the average woman, who would always rather look well than be well.—Sydney Bulletin.

Vegetarianism has achieved a triumph in Prussia. Twenty-two men undertook to walk 70 miles in 18 hours. Six of them were vegetarians, and they alone accomplished the task. Only one of the meat eaters got over more than half the course. The first man who arrived in splendid condition, with nearly four months to spare, was sent for by the war minister, who is said to be much interested in the result. Does this foreshadow, one is inclined to ask, an imperial edict forbidding the use of meat in the army?—London Globe.

REMINISCENCE.

I lie in my hammock and idly dream While the moon looks down through the alder trees. Mid the sweet perfume, this night in June, Of the honeysuckle upon the breeze.

The southern wind so softly sighs As he gently woos the tender leaves And the low lullaby of the breeze As he his false vow softly breathes.

I lie in my hammock and fondly dream Of the day now long since passed away. When June was golden and hearts were true And life was one bright summer day.

And I think of one who was with me then, Who was soul of my soul, as time revealed, Although it was known to us neither then, But it left a wound that has never healed.

For the years passed on, and we drifted apart, Just how we neither ever knew, But this we know—though our lives divide, Each heart to the other is true.

But there comes to my heart such wild regret As I dream of other nights like these, Of the honeysuckle's sweet perfume then, And the moon's bright face through the alder trees.

SHE FLAGGED THE TRAIN.

The Engineer Was Mad, but the Woman Accomplished Her Purpose.

"Patsy, you are 20 minutes off today, and besides you look as grim as if you had hit a squaw up the road. What made you late?" I inquired the other day, as I climbed into the cab of No. 135, which had just pulled into the Buffalo station with No. 93 of the West Shore road.

"I didn't hit a squaw," said the engineer, "but I did."

"You know that hill just ahead of the curve after leaving the reservation. Well, No. 10 delayed me at the junction this morning, and I had her open wide to make the hill without any delay when what should I see but two women jumping around like mad on the track a few hundred yards ahead. One was waving a red pocket, and the other had a bandana of the same color. I jammed the throttle down hard, pulled the lever and whistled for brakes in a jiffy and then began to look ahead for a missing rail or a wash-out. I couldn't stop a thing, so as soon as we came to a stop I clambered down to find out what was the matter. What do you suppose the idiots wanted? They had a letter and two ponies. The letter was for a sweetheart, and they wanted him to get it right away. As pa wouldn't drive over to the village postoffice for a week they thought I would like to do them a favor. Was I mad? Did I swear? Well, you should have seen her at the bottom of the hill with a heavy train stuck to her wheels and her creeping on up like a snail for ten more."

"What about the letter?" I inquired.

"Oh, Mac took it and the ponies and said he'd post it for them if they would promise never to flag another train. Mac said they not only promised, but one of them apologized for having flagged his train with her petticoat."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Pigs in a Spanish Town.

It is the pigs that give Puebla de Sanabria its individuality. The town's main street terraces upward, a thoroughfare of supreme unevenness, and from the valley to the castle door you meet placid recumbent pigs almost at every yard. They lie about like the cats in the Lisbon streets, and are no less interested. They sit on their haunches at the thresholds of the houses, and when the whim seizes them stroll into the dwellings with curious little spasmodic twistings of the tail. They even climb the stairs like the two-legged inmates, and again, when urged by the whim, take the air on the agreeable old balconies above. These front and back garden creepers and household crockery, their long, slate blue snouts peer down upon the passerby with a critical air that is curiously offensive.

This, mind you, not in a poor little hamlet like those of Connemara, but in the chief street of a district capital of Spain, with an assuming town hall close to the square, and fresh as that of Skiddaw's top, reeks with ordure. In other Spanish hamlets one has to say "By your leave" to the bronzed porkers and tinkling goats which block the thoroughfare, but in Puebla de Sanabria the pigs resent the hint that they are in the way. It is from you intruder. Their grunts, ranging from a low rumble to a high squeal, are so unmistakably for you attempt to stir them either with your boot or your walking stick.—Charles Edwards in Macmillan's Magazine.

Taken at Her Word.

They had been sitting at opposite ends of the sofa for a long time in silence. He loved her madly. But he feared to "put it to the touch to win or lose it all." He had come with the intention of learning the worst. But her manner was cool, reserved, preoccupied. Would it not be better to go away now and await a more propitious time rather than to hazard all on too precipitous action now? No! Now or never! With one dexterous slide he was closely by her side; his arm slid round her willow waist. "Stay!" she cried. "Thank you, I will," the youth replied, and the other arm slid round the other way.—Criterion.

An Amiable Young Man.

Costly Launching.

The total cost of launching a modern battleship often amounts to over $10,000. About five tons of Russian tallow and over a ton of oil and soft soap are used in greasing the ways—that is, the slip down which the cradle in which the vessel is placed glides into the sea.

DISCIPLINE.

Perfection Shown in Time of Danger on Board a Steam-boat.

After lunch, writes Stephen Bonsal, in McClure's, as I walked with an officer upon the spar deck an orderly came up and said just as if he were announcing supper or eight balls, "I have to report a fire in a coal bunker." "All right," replied the officer; "will be done immediately."

Then, with a parting whiff, he threw away his cigar, and we went down the companionway together.

There upon one of the lower decks a sentry, with the most quizzical expression of curiosity upon his face that I have ever seen, stood before a great dial like those in use in modern hotels, the indicator of which pointed steadfastly to the little face of the dial marked "B 21."

My companion, the officer, went down still further into the bowels of the ship while I stood with astonishment at the indicator, with wonderment as great, if not as open mouthed, as the sentry's. "It's a wonderful thing, this here machine," he said. "It keeps me awake at night, it's so darn human. It kinks up a fire in some sponky way, just as if you or I might touch a bell and order up a mint julep. You see it?"

Where B 21 was neither ho nor I know, but we agreed in the hope that the burning bunker might be far from the magazines. There was some talk about playing that number and that letter in the next game of chance upon which we entered upon us that we were very close to a most engaged upon a game of most serious hazard and that the cards might go against us.

I smoked my cigar for an hour upon the signal tower, wondering all the while how the invisible flames were growing and whether they were gaining headway, and so, having given evidence of what I considered almost Spartan stoicism, I grabbed the officer as he came up from below, covered with coal dust and sweat, and said with an cheerful mien as I could muster, "And how about B 21?"

"Let's go up on the bridge; it's cooler there," was the only reply vouchsafed. So we climbed up to the fighting tops, I drawing a certain satisfaction from the thought that if we blew up we should still be able to hear a word of how the fire in coal bunker B 21 was put out, and, for all I know, it may be burning to this day.

Repairing Clocks.

"Watch repairers have a horror of touching a clock that has been tinkered by amateurs," explained a watch repairer to a reporter, "and they would rather get out of such a job if they can do so, for the loss of one of the smallest parts means considerable work to replace it. They are generally work that the general customer expects or wants to pay for. They try to get rid of such a job when they can, for in nine cases out of ten the result is not entirely satisfactory. People who have a good clock, unless they know something about the way clocks are made and how they should be taken apart, will do well to bring it to a specialist. It goes out of order. Experimenting with it often means the ruin of the clock. It is absolutely dangerous to try to unwind a mainspring, as men have discovered for themselves, unless the proper tools are handy. Now, a clock repairer has a contrivance known as a spring controller, which grasps the spring and holds it while being taken out or put into the clock; so that there is no danger. The spring for an eight day clock is often two yards long, and when suddenly let free it flies out with nearly the force of a charge of shot from a gun."—Washington Star.

The Best Parts of Lamb or Mutton.

In buying lamb or mutton you may choose the saddle or the whole hind quarter, the leg, loin or shoulder. The saddle is the best part of the hind quarter, the loin is roasted or cut into chops and the shoulder is roasted. The hind quarter costs more than the fore quarter, but the shoulder piece, boned and stuffed, makes a very nice and inexpensive roast. The shoulder and neck piece are also used for lamb steaks and fricassees.

Chops, the cut in two ways—there are the long chops and the short chops.

The long chops have the flank end left on, while in the short chops the flank is cut off and only the loin part used. The long chops cost less by the pound, but really are not so cheap, since the flank piece adds to the weight without giving any more eatable meat. It takes so much more to make the amount needed for family use that in the end it really costs more than the lesser number of pounds of short chops at the larger price.—Sallie Joy White in Woman's Home Companion.

Secondhand Wagon Wheels.

Among the great variety of things sold at secondhand car wagon and truck wheels. Wheels become secondhand from various causes. A concern running fine wagons kept always in perfect order would discard a wheel that was worn, though it might still be serviceable and replace it with a new one. The old wheel would be bought by somebody having a wagon repaired and needing a wheel to replace one broken and wanting it cheap. The secondhand wheel costs little, very much less than a new wheel. It may be possible to put a secondhand wheel on the same axle as the other that is very close to so that it matches well enough, but men have been known to take for the same end of a wagon two wheels of different colors and different heights.

When finally worn out, the old wagon wheels and truck wheels are broken up.

The wood is used for burning and the axle boxes and tires go to the scrap heap.—New York Sun.

The Icelanders' Language.

How strange it would seem to us today if there existed, say in Newfoundland, a colony of Anglo-Saxons, sent there by King Alfred, and speaking all the pure old Saxon tongue of King Alfred's Wessex! Yet this would exactly parallel the case of Iceland. While Danes and Swedes have modernized the ancient Scandinavian of the Sagas into the Danish and Swedish of the present day the Icelanders still go on speaking the tongue of their forefathers pretty much as it was spoken by Rolf the Gangar and Harold Hardrada. They read the Sagas in the tongue of the old singers as easily as our children can read Shakespeare and the English Bible.—Grant Allen in Popular Science.

THE BOUNTY JUMPER

HE PLAYED A PAYING GAME DURING THE CIVIL WAR.

The Richest Harvests Were Reaped in the Closing Days of the Conflict—Boston's Exciting Experience With a Gang of New Hampshire Recruits.

When the civil war broke out and the call in the north went forth for volunteers, no bounties were paid, and nearly 1,000,000 men volunteered with no pecuniary inducement than the regular army pay. After a time, however, volunteering languished, and to stimulate enlistments bounties were offered by the nation, the state and the cities and towns.

This not bringing forward recruits in sufficient numbers, the draft was resorted to. Drafted men were paid smaller bounties or none at all, and this fact sent into the service as volunteers many who were liable to desertion.

Men who were drafted often, when able, procured substitutes, paying at first $100, then $200, then $300, and finally, as available substitutes grew scarce, much larger amounts. Many cities and towns obtained the recruits needed to fill their quotas under the various calls for troops by enlistments in other localities, as men who were willing to enlist were given the most money. The procuring of men to serve as substitutes and to make up deficient quotas grew into a business of itself, and a very profitable one at that.

"Substitute brokers" quickly appeared in great numbers all over the north, and they made enormous profits by agreeing to fill quotas for so much per recruit, providing men whom they had induced to enlist on the payment of amounts much smaller than those offered by the towns.

One of the results of the payment of big bounties was the coming into existence of a class known as "bounty jumpers." The range of bounties and gratuities toward the end of the war rarely aggregated less than $1,000 per recruit, and a great many hard characters took advantage of this national, state and municipal liberality by enlisting, getting the money and deserting at the first opportunity.

It is on record that some of these men "jumped" their bounties as many as 30 times, each time clearing from $1,000 upward. Generally the desertions were effected at the state camps, where recruits were herded until called to the front.

Sometimes, however, the bounty jumpers did not get away until they had been sent to regiments in the field. Usually the deserters left singly, as opportunities arose, but once in a while many would make a simultaneous break.

An instance of the last mentioned sort occurred in Boston, which created a sensation at the time. On Aug. 21, 1864, 450 recruits for the First New Hampshire cavalry, under command of Major Cummings and guarded by a company of the Veteran Reserve corps, arrived in the city by special train from Concord.

They had all been paid their big bounties the day before and were to sail from this port for Washington on the United States transport steamer Constitution. Arriving in the old Boston and Maine station at 11 o'clock in the morning, they were taken under escort by a detachment of troops from the Beach Street barracks and a detail of police and started on their march to Battery wharf, where the Constitution lay waiting to receive them.

A great crowd, which, as The Herald of the next day averred, "consisted mainly of the lowest characters from the city," gathered around the detachment as soon as it left the station, and immediately it got into Haymarket square scores of the recruits threw away their knapsacks, blankets, coats, caps and canteens and started on the run in every direction, their escape being covered by the toughs, who surrounded the guards and prevented them from firing on the deserters.

The police pursued and caught a number of the fleeing men, whom they brought back to the officer in command, but about 35 succeeded in getting away.

The remainder were marched down Blackstone to Commercial street and thence to the wharf, but on the way still more of them escaped from the ranks, while others flung away their clothing and equipments, until the pavement along the route of march was fairly carpeted. Many hurried their canteens at the officers, and one lieutenant was struck over the head with a beer bottle and knocked senseless.

At the wharf two men broke away and jumped overboard, and the guard fired at them, wounding one so badly that he was easily captured and killing the other, who immediately sank. It is hardly necessary to add that the steamer did not linger at the wharf after her unruly passengers were aboard.

In the course of the afternoon ten of the deserters were arrested by the police. One was discovered to be an escaped convict who had been confined in the state prison at Charlestown for the murder of his mother. The others were all "tough celtions," with long records of crime and well known to the police in this and other cities. Five were taken in the collar of a Hanover street, near the First station house, and a number of persons were arrested for securing them.

Most of the deserters were never captured and got away to enlist again and jump more bounties.—Boston Herald.

A Portmanteau Darling. Among the customers of a Columbia avenue drug store a few evenings ago was a young colored man attired in a very flashy suit and with the air of a "real hot sport, sub." He asked for 10 cents' worth of perfume, and the druggist, sizing up his taste properly, poured out an ounce or two of the loudest smelling cologne in the store. In the meantime the young "broad" stood in front of a mirror admiring his own image. He confided to the druggist that he was going to see his best girl.

"Yo' needn' wrap up de bottle, nishah," he said. "I wish yo' would po' hit ovah me."

"What! Pour it all on your clothes, do you mean?" asked the astonished druggist.

"Dat's jes' w'at I mean, sub. I dono want to smell good fo' out in miah life." After complying with the queer request the druggist sold him another 10 cents' worth for his girl.—Philadelphia Record.

All's Not Well. Dr. Field, who was the examining surgeon for the naval reserves while the recruiting was being done in New Orleans, has had a good story to tell of recruits in the service. A good one he tells is of a German who was walking his post and calling the hours, as is required. He called, "Seven bells, and all's well." The next call, however, was a variation. It was: "Eight bells, and all is not well. I had droppit my musket overboard."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

AMUSEMENTS

"A Fair Rebel" at the Third Avenue
"A Grand Success"

The production of the war drama, "A Fair Rebel" at the Third Avenue theatre last night by the French Theatre Co. was one of the greatest successes chronicled in the history of the house. The company is a strong one, well balanced, and every member of it does his or her utmost to correctly interpret the assigned part. Careful attention has been given to all details which makes the production enjoyable from beginning to end. Between the acts some first-class specialties are introduced. Even without these the drama would be a big drawing card, but with them it cannot fail to pack the theatre every evening.
It made one think of the days after the big fire to look over the theatre last night. There was not a vacant seat down stairs or in the gallery. Before the curtain went up the "Standing Room Only" sign was out, but still the crowd kept coming. At 9 o'clock every box was taken and all the available standing room was occupied. The gallery was a sea of faces.
The plot of the play deals with the civil war and throughout runs a beautiful love story. Blossom Boardman, as the "Fair Rebel," was always equal to the demands of the part and met the climaxes with a skill that won her the hearty applause of the audience. Eva Earle French scored a pronounced success as Sally Woods, the wife of a noted guerilla. It is a hard part, but she caught the spirit of it even to the Southern style of asking for a chew of tobacco. Mamie Holden a Seattle girl, was swayed and welcomed. She played the part of Joan Fitzgough well. The work of Mr. Smiley as De Perrin, the villain; Mr. French as Col. Mason, the hero; Mr. Boardman as Major Stillman; Mr. Durrell, as the telegraph operator who is killed while doing his duty; and Grace Wright, as Aunt Maggie, calls for special mention.
Several of the scenes are unusually realistic. That of the departure of Maj. Stillman and his bride for Washington in a real carriage drawn by two horses, libby prison and the escape are among the number.—Seattle P.I.
