Enormous Profit.

The enormous sum of $111,000,000 earned as net profits during the year by the Steel Corporation gives a fair idea of the magnitude of its business and of its ranking importance among the sources of the nation's wealth. The United States Steel Corporation claims about 80 per cent. of the entire iron and steel output of the country. If this be true, and we assume that the outside concerns have made the same average profit, the total net revenues for the iron trade as a whole, have amounted to some $135,000,000 during the last 12 months. This is nearly twice the sum which the treasury took in during the fiscal year 1901. It is equal to a quarter of the entire year's receipts of the federal government from all sources, and more than half the $243,000,000 which was collected from customs during the 12 months ending last December. Multiply the same sum by four and we have an amount equal to last year's entire visible credit in foreign trade. From these comparisons the true proportions of the iron trade income are brought more clearly into view. No other manufacturing industry, of course, comes any way near it in point of profits. The mining and transportation of coal holds second place, and cotton manufacturers probably holds the third. But to see the wide gap between the returns from iron production and those from cotton manufacturers it is only necessary to compare the dividend disbursements by the principal, producing interests in the two interests during the last year. The Steel Corporation paid out altogether to its stockholders $66,000,000, against a total of $1,144,600 paid to shareholders in the Fall River cotton mills.

In Need of a Railway

The Toronto Globe says that if, as is generally expected, the Yukon is going to be a permanent source of wealth, and especially if quartz mining shall be carried on extensively, it is not difficult to see that the problem of supplies will be solved by a railway running through British Columbia. When this is done the boundary question will be less important than it is today. Northern British Columbia will be connected with the Northwest Territories, and the miners will be reveling in bread made of No, 1 hard, British Columbia fruit and fish, and Alberta beef, while all these regions will profit by selling their stuff at miners prices. Eastern Canada will supply manufacturers. Our American friends will not be in it when the Territories and British Columbia are connected with the Yukon by rail, unless they join the great American migration into Canada.

Mrs. McKinley Recovering

The widow of the late President McKinley is, it is stated, now in good health; better in fact, than she has been for many years past. She is strong enough to sign all her checks, writes autograph letters and transacts a considerable amount of business. Formerly she was unable to attend to any of these matters. The terrible ordeal through which she passed during her serious illness in California and at the time of the assassination and death of her husband, it is said, had the peculiar effect of restoring her nervous system to something like its normal condition.

Rich Strike on Old Cariboo.

A well known Big Bend mining man received a letter from Baskerville under recent date stating that a rich strike was made on the lower end of the old Spruce claim situate on Lightening Creek, which is yielding from 50 to 80 ozs. per set of timbers 8 foot cap. The Spruce was one of the Bonanza claims of Lightening Creek in the middle seventies. The present strike is about 20 feet higher and right over the old deep workings. Judging from present indications in the Bend we will in all probability be able to chronicle an event similar to the above from Smith Creek at an early date.

Will Borrow $3,000,000.

In his budget speech today, Finance Minister Prentice announced recently that the government proposed to borrow $3,000,000 to pay the overdraft of over a million dollars and to cover the estimated deficit of several hundred thousand dollars.—Nelson News.

A GREAT DIVINE DIES

Principal Grant, of Kingston, Dies After a Long and Most Painful Illness—Canada Has Lost A Most Loyal Man.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 10.—Rev. Dr. Grant, principal of Queen's university, died somewhat suddenly at 11:10 this morning of oedema of the lungs. Yesterday and all last night the patient seemed to be in a fair way to recovery. A bad turn came on this morning and the patient sank rapidly. His end was calm. He was conscious within an hour of his death, recognizing those around his bedside. These were W. R. Grant, M.A., his son; Mrs. Field, his sister-in-law, and Miss Field, and his medical men.

A Meeting of the Synod.

The Synod of British Columbia of the Presbyterian church which includes Alberta, met in the city of Nanaimo on the 7th inst., at 7:30 p. m., in St. Andrew's church. Some thirty members were present. The large extent of country to be traversed, and expense, accounts for the small attendance. The retiring moderator, Rev. W. L. Clay, of Victoria, preached an excellent sermon before a large congregation from the text: "And if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." John 12, 32. The Synod was then constituted by prayer. After roll call, the Rev. Jos. McCoy, of Vernon, was unanimously elected Moderator. Beyond the appeal case from St. Andrew's church, New Westminster, against the action of the Presbytery in permitting the West End church to build within the limits of St. Andrew's, the docket comprised the ordinary church business. Thursday was taken up with the appeal case which proved both difficult and intricate. While considerable feeling had been engendered in the matter, the debate was carried on with a moderation and fairness most commendable. A decision was finally arrived at Friday morning. The appeal was sustained and limits laid down within which the West end church could build. Friday was taken up with the different reports. Rev. Dr. McLaren presented one on Home Missions, paying a graceful and tender tribute to the late superintendent of missions, Rev. J. Robertson, D. D. The various reports on Foreign Missions, Sabbath schools, Christian Endeavor, etc., were presented by the Convenors and were discussed at length. During the afternoon a deputation from the district Methodist meeting waited on the Synod to convey fraternal greetings. This was received by the Synod standing and a suitable reply was made to the Moderator. The Synod at the same time appointing a committee to wait on the Methodist Conference shortly to meet at the Coast and convey greetings. It was decided to meet next year on the first Wednesday of May in St. Andrew's church, Kamloops, at 7:30 p.m. The Synod closed on Friday at 10:30 p.m. The Moderator, after a brief but eloquent and touching address closed with the Benediction.

J. D. Graham Resigns

J. D. Graham, gold commissioner, at Atlin, tendered his resignation to the Department of Mines on May 9th, giving no reason for doing so. It is fully expected the government will accept it, though it has not been officially gazetted as yet.

Ah! There!

"An Undergraduate," writing from Trinity College, Oxford, to the London Mail, expresses the fear that the Rhodes' scholarships will cause the regular students to be swamped by colonials and backwoodsmen and urges that proper care must be taken to see that the winners of the Rhodes' scholarships are "fit to be members of a society of gentlemen." The tone of Undergradnate's plaint will identify him as one of the pink tea pets whose prototypes in South Africa are in daily need of the colonials and backwoodsmen to get them out of the pitfalls into which aristocratic imbecility has led them.—Vancouver World.

Preparing for Business

MONTREAL, May 7.—Mr. Mathews, manager of the C.P.R. hotel at Banff, left this afternoon with 60 men and women whom he has hired for the business which is to be done during the summer months.

Funeral of Archbishop Corrigan.

The body of Most Rev. Michael Augustine Corrigan, D. D., archbishop of New York, was interred on Friday, May 9th, in the crypt of St. Patrick's cathedral in that city. The funeral was conducted with all the impressive solemnity and ceremony of his church and attended by a gathering of clergy consisting of eight archbishops, eighteen bishops and over a thousand priests. With the break of day crowds began to assemble at the cathedral and when the funeral hour arrived a great multitud assembled to pay their last reverence to the dead prelate.

It is reported that a contract is about to be closed by the Pacific Cold Storage Co., of Seattle, with P. Burns & Co., whereby the former company will be supplied by the latter with 1,500 head of Calgary range cattle, to be laid down in Vancouver for transportation north to the Yukon via Skagway.

Bishop Dart's Visit.

Notwithstanding the heavy rain on Saturday afternoon, a large number of the faithful parisnioners of St. Peter's church embraced the delightful opportunity of meeting the Lord Bishop of New Westminster and Kootenay at a social function held at the rectory. It seldom occurs here that such an opportunity is given the members to come in touch and get personally acquainted with the Lord Bishop, and the HERALD man noticed that the people took advantage of it, for they turned out en masse to greet him.

The Bishop preached eloquent and impressive sermons both morning and evening in St. Peter's church and administered the rite of confirmation on Monday afternoon. His Lordship left on last night's No. 1 for his home in New Westminster.

INTERESTING YUKON LETTER

From A. H. Mogridge, Formerly Manager at Halcyon Hot Springs.

Sulphur Creek, Yukon Territory
April 7th, 1902.

To the Editor of the HERALD:

Sir: A few days ago our mutual friend Manager McNaught of Halcyon Springs sent me a Revelstoke HERALD, the perusal of which brought back pleasant recollections of days spent on Arrow Lakes and in your thriving town. The last time I had the pleasure of enjoying your society I was manager at the Springs and you were one of our guests, and I was trying to make things pleasent for you in anticipation of a writeup in your valuable paper and unless my memory plays me false I still have that writeup stored away in my trunk in Dawson, as a momento of times gone by. I left Vancouver in the month of June '98, bound for Dawson and had quite an eventful trip for the company that I became associated with, had built a stern wheel steamer to ply on the Yukon River, and upon this craft I stored away my belongings and made the voyage from Vancouver to the metropolis of the land of gold.

We started out in tow of the propellor Capilano, but found this means of locomotion both slow, dangerous and unpleasant, so cast off our hawser and proceeded for the nearer part of the voyage under our own steam. Almost from the first we had a stormy trip and at one time it looked as if we were all destined for Davy Jone's locker, instead of Dawson, for when well out in the Pacific ocean, some 60 miles south of Nakatak Bay, which lies almost under the shadow of Mount St, Elias, and is 180 miles west of Cape Spencer, we ran into a southeast gale, the most dreadful of all Pacific storms. We drifted at the mercy of the winds, but our boat was a staunch one and stood the test nobly, and although somewhat battered, we escaped without any serious damage and made the welcomed shelter of Nakatak Bay. This bay deserves some mention, as it is one of the principal bays on the South Alaskan Coast. It has a very wide entrance, and after rounding Ocean Cape, that marks its eastern limit, a fine harbor is found that is extensively used by crafts navigating these stormy waters. On the eastern shores of the harbor, and well sheltered from the Pacific, is the Indian village of Yakatak, consisting of many log buildings occupied by the Indian population, a Moravian mission and church, Alaska commercial post, and several trading posts, for the Indians for hundreds of miles along the coast and from the interior gather here to trade. This place also seems to be headquarters for the clan "Johnson," for the captain of our steamer "Lightning" was named Johnson, also the Moravian missionary, and one of the traders. The hand Johnson visited the sea Johnson and all seemed to take kindly to my Scotch whiskey, so if you, Mr. Editor, should happen to visit the part of the world you may be assured of a hearty welcome.

The main bay runs inland for a distance of 75 miles, almost to the foot of Mount St. Elias, and forms a large body of land-locked water, known as Disenchantment Bay. Deep channels run east from this as far as Dry Bay, and the Alaska river, west of Yakatak, stretching from the foot of Mount St. Elias to the Pacific, a distance of 150 miles. The land is covered by the giant Malispena glacier; this reaches in places right into the ocean and presents cliffs hundreds of feet high of solid blue ice. It is a coast sold out ship and cargo to the British American Corporation, so the writer transferred his allegience to that company and was appointed assistant manager. We had quite a lively trip up the river for pilots were almost dreaded by navigators and we were only too glad to see its unhospitable shores disappear.

No further mishap befell us until we reached the end of the Alaskan peninsula and tried to get through "Isanaki," or False Straits. The first passage between the mainland and the Alentian Islands here our Convoy ran aground and we had to act as lighters and unload most of her cargo before she floated. After this the Convoy decided to go round by Dutch Harbor and join us again on the Behren sea side of the straits. So we steamed into the Isanaki strait and cast anchor off the Russian village of Marzori, every other day taking a run out to the Behrens sea entrance to look out for the arrival of our Convoy. Here we experienced very rough weather for 16 days. It blew a gale of wind every day, and as there is a terrific tide through these straits, we had our fill of dangerous navigation, and had many narrow escapes from being wrecked, but at last our Convoy put in an appearance and we struck out for the trip across Behrens sea. The South Alaskan coast, is a barren desolate region and the peninsula is entirely bare of timber, but is relieved by the wonderful growth of rank grass of the most vivid green that I have ever seen and is dotted over with a bewildering variety of beautiful wild flowers of the most brilliant hues, so that it only needs the sun to shine to give the country a very attractive appearance. Unfortunately, the sun rarely shines, but it rains days, nights and Sundays, and then starts afresh and rains some more. It is a wonderful coast for fish and during the salmon season every little stream is choked by thousands of these fish trying to force their way up stream to spawn. Sea trout and codfish also abound and game, ptarmigan and waterfowl are here in abundance. The writer used to go ashore every day and shoot game enough to keep us in fresh meat whilst we were anchored at Mazoria. The Moran fleet of sternwheelers, 12 in all, and the Canadian and Columbian, of the Canadian Yukon Development Co., arrived and left for the north before we did. The Moran boats were badly battered and their captains envied us our trim craft that had come through without a scratch.

We had an uneventful voyage across Behrens sea and only sighted land once, most of the time experiencing thick weather with a heavy sea. We struck north of St. Michaels on account of shoal water near the coast, and sighted Cape Nome before running south to St. Michaels, where we arrived early in August, 60 days out from Vancouver. Shortly after our arrival the owners of the "Lightning, impossible to get and being Indians were d—d little good after you did get them. They asked from $10 to $20 per day for their services and none knew more than 30 to 40 miles of river, so that we were constantly hunting for pilots and constantly running on to bars, but in spite of all obstacles we reached Fort Yukon and tried our luck at getting through the Yukon Flats. Here the river splits into innumerable channels that cover an area of some 30 miles wide and in contrary to expectation, (the word "Flats" naturally leading one astray) the water runs like a mine sluice, but as the channels are shallow and full of bars, we had hardly entered the flats, before we stuck hard and fast. We had to take off every pound of cargo and even then had the river not risen I think the boat would be there still. This caused a delay of seven days and we began to think we would have to winter below Dawson. After reloading we returned to Fort Yukon and left half our cargo there in charge of the American Customs Collector and managed to get through the flats this time and reached Dawson about the 13th of September, and after such a long voyage of over three months it looked good to us all. But I was not allowed to linger in the metropolis of gold, for the company had decided to establish a post at Fort Selkirk, some 180 miles up the river, so sent me up there with the steamers "Lightning" and "Tyreel," as that place was supposed to be the future seat of the government of the Yukon.

We reached Ft. Selkirk on the 20th of September and unloaded the steamer the "Tyreel," returning down to Dawson and the "Lightning" being left in my charge to place in winter quarters. I found a good slough some 8 miles above Selkirk and before the ice started to run had her put away snugly and dismantled ready for winter.

After considerable delay from lack of lumber and building logs, for we brought up with us the saw mill plant of the Canadian Yukon Lumber Co., which concern had contracts with the government. I succeeded, after the snow was on the ground and winter had fairly set in, in obtaining sufficient logs and lumber to build a warehouse and hotel. I also leased an old log building which was fitted up as a store and a log cabin to live in. These buildings were the property of the Harper and Ladue Trading Co. and were built on the site of the old Hudson Bay Fort Pelly. Selkirk, during the winter of '98-'99, was booming. It is an ideal spot for a townsite, a fine high gravelly valley, level and dry and covered with park like timber. It would be hard to find a prettier spot for a town, with room enough for greater New York. It was a government townsite and the river front for 6 miles was reserved, extending 3 miles back, and upon this the N. W. M. P. and Field Force each had their own reserve staked out. It was alright for the government and government officials, but a poor civilian had no rights at all and was, until the government, surveyed a townsite, only allowed on top of the earth on suffrances and not a stick of lumber could civilians cut anywhere on this reserve, although it was very heavily timbered. It seemed as if no one but soldiers and policemen were to be allowed to live in the Canadian Yukon.

Late in December I got my buildings completed and everything started and running smoothly and the rest of the winter was the pleasantest time I ever remember spending. The officers of the Field Force were a fine sociable lot of fellows and my house was their headquarters and many a little dinner and pleasant evening we have put in together, the memory of which will never depart from me. Many of the fine fellows who used to be the life and soul of these little gatherings have since lost their lives fighting for their country in South Africa. Here was composed the celebrated article by Harry T. Munro, now a cavalry officer in South Africa, entitled the "Killing of the Mastodon," which was published in McClure's Magazine for October '99 and was so well written that the public and especially the scientists failed to realize that it was fiction and thought that the last of the Mastodons had really been found and killed in Alaska. The Smithsonian Institution (to which in the story the carcass of the Mastodon was donated) was beseiged by enquiries and requests for portions of same for other museums. The curator was furious and wrote indignant letters to the New York papers denying that they had received any Mastodon and designating H. Takeman, as Munro signed himself, as the most gigantic prevaricator of the age. How we did laugh at this!

The wonderful riches that were to have been dug up in the valley of the Pelly and its tributaries, have failed to materialize.

I have a piece of mining property left on lower Dominion creek that I have men working on now and which looks so promising that I think next fall will see a nice little sum to my credit on the right side of the ledger and before it is worked out, it ought to produce a comfortable stake.

Now friend Johnson, I think I have provided you with copy enough for the present, which may prove interesting to some of your readers who knew me when a resident of the West Kootenay. At a later date I will write you again and give you a description of the creeks and how a miner lives and works. For the present farewell and good wishes to the Kootenay boys.

Yours etc.,
A. H. MOGRIDGE.

The two boys who have been up for trial at New Westminster for tampering with a switch and thereby causing the wreck of the Great Northern train near Liverpool last month, were allowed out on suspended sentence. $500 bail and ordered to be whipped. This was done at the provincial gaol on the triangle, all the grim regulations being carried out to the letter, but six cuts with a riding whip replaced the cat.

Mr. Hillman, of Craig and Hillman, Thomson's Landing spent Monday in the city. He is on his way to Calgary and will bring back a car load of horses for the firms mail and freighting business. This firm has spent considerable money in vehicles and horses in anticipation of a busy summer. Mr. Hillman is one of the owners in the Horseshoe mining property near Ferguson, and he spent most of the winter superintending development work. The Horseshoe is about three miles from the wagon road and regular shipments will be made when the snow is off the trail sufficiently to enable pack horses to travel to and from the property. The owners appear very enthusiastic over it.
