VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, APRIL 15, 1910.

No. 49

HERE AND THERE

In the removal by the sad death of the late Hon. R. G. Tatlow, British Columbia has lost a patriotic public-spirited gentleman, one of whom all who have known him in either public or private life speak in the highest terms. Captain Tatlow filled the position of Minister of Finance and Agriculture for a period of six years. When he took charge of these departments the public affairs of British Columbia were at a very low ebb, and it was largely due to the untiring efforts of Captain Tatlow that the credit of the province has been placed upon such a high basis.

Another distinct feature in the life and work of Captain Tatlow is seen in the remarkable development of the Fruit industry in this province. We have repeatedly carried off the prizes in various great exhibitions and this again is due to the leadership and oversight of the late Minister of Agriculture who made many personal sacrifices in order to develop this important work. Not only has the province lost a man of highest possible integrity and ability, but society has lost one of the truest of men, one in whom all had confidence; one, who at all times and under all circumstances was kind and considerate. It mattered not whether the person addressing him was wealthy and cultured or of humblest circumstances, you were always sure of a kind and courteous reception.

All British Columbia will mourn the loss of such a character and our sympathy will go out to those who must feel the loss the more keenly because of the closer and more intimate relationship.

Ald. Macpherson moved the following resolution in the Council on Monday evening last:

"This Council learns with sincere regret the loss the Province of British Columbia and the City of Vancouver sustained by the fatality which has suddenly terminated the life of the late Robert G. Tatlow, Esq., for nine years member for this city in the Provincial Legislature, and for six years Minister of Finance in the Government of British Columbia.

And that this Council express, by means of an appropriate letter, signed by the Mayor and City Clerk, over the seal, the deep sympathy of its members with Mrs. Tatlow and other bereaved relatives of our distinguished fellow-citizen, who has been so tragically removed from a sphere of activity honorable to himself and useful to his province, to which he gave so many of his best years.

Mayor Taylor will, we are sure, receive the hearty support of the electors in his efforts to improve hotel conditions in Vancouver. At yesterday's session the subject of the transfer of the Winters hotel came up for further discussion. It will be remembered that questions asked by the Mayor at the meeting of the commission resulted in his being sued for libel. Yesterday Mr. Abbott, the attorney for the applicants, appeared before the commission and commenced a dissertation regarding the matter, when he was promptly ordered to order by his worship, who quickly informed Mr. Abbott that he was only allowed there as an act of courtesy by the board and that he (the Mayor) intended to pursue exactly the same course in spite of libel actions. The Mayor left no doubt in the minds of those present as to his intentions. Mr. Abbott suggested that if the board would accept his explanation and the Mayor withdraw from his attitude (Mr. Abbott) would see that his suit was withdrawn. This suggestion intensified the Mayor in his attitude and Mr. Abbott was informed to fight ahead with his libel, that nothing else would satisfy his worship. The consummate gall of these keep-bars in practically threatening a libel into taking an action inimical to the best interests of the city, is almost beyond belief. No man in any other part of business would dare to do it. We heartily support the Mayor in his efforts and hope the citizens will do so.

A petition for the paving of Westminster road has been signed up and is now ready to be presented to the Board of Works. It is to be sincerely hoped that every effort will be made to have this completed as soon as possible. We have repeatedly pointed out the necessity of securing as many paved streets as possible throughout the city and it is to be hoped that not only Westminster road but Broadway as well will be paved this season.

The Council on Monday evening last again reaffirmed its decision regarding the development of False Creek. Ald. McBride and his lone compatriot, Ald. MacTaggart, endeavored to have the matter discussed over again, but the Council wisely said "No." There was a full and exhaustive study of the question both by committee and by the full Council and its decision was not a snap verdict but a careful working out of a most intricate and difficult problem, and we think that Ald. McBride shows but poor grace to refuse to accept defeat but must perforce keep "nagging" at the question, that is not the way to make progress.

The B. C. Electric came in again for some severe criticism by Ald. Stevens, when the matter of Richard street car line came up. The company asks for fifteen months to complete and also had to refer several minor matters to London, which was characterized by the aldermen as a farce. In this we heartily concur. The company holds a valuable franchise and its operation is exclusively in and around Vancouver and Victoria and there is no one here qualified to deal with any matter of ordinary importance without first consulting the "Board" in London. We believe, however, this situation is used chiefly to delay any matter which the company do not wish to carry out and by a system of procrastination they often succeed in overcoming a situation which to them is unsavory, but which is in the public interests.

"My solicitors are Bowser, Reid & Wallbridge," said Mr. J. R. Atchison to the Mayor a few days ago.

"Go ahead and get your flat. It will take so long to get it here that by that time the job will be done and I will be on the other side," said Mr. J. R. Atchison to the police on Sunday.

Mr. Atchison is the representative of the American firm, Charles C. Moore & Co., who are building the big concrete chimney for the B. C. Electric Railway company.

Mr. Atchison, alarmed at the attention drawn to his operations by people who object to Sunday labor in this city, had applied to the Mayor for a permit under which he could work on the first day of the week and had been promptly refused. His remark, naming his solicitors, was made as the interview was closed.

Last Sunday, acting under instructions from the Mayor, the police visited the big smokestack and took the names of the men working there, with a view to initiating a prosecution as soon as the attorney-general's fiat had been obtained.

Then it was that Mr. Atchison said he would be through before Mr. Bowser's department would have given the fiat.

And now it remains to be seen whether the fiat will get to Vancouver first or Mr. T. R. Atchison to Seattle.

The above article appeared in The World of April 13, 1910. It is to be hoped that his open defiance of both law and custom will meet with a well-merited punishment. Opinions may and always will differ on the question of what a just and equitable Sabbath law is, but there is little difference of opinion as to the general cessation of labor on that day. The Sabbath day is an institution that has become a part of the national life and we agree as a people to make it a day of rest as far as possible. This is independent of law and a violation of a recognized custom is an insult to the people generally. Law simply crystallizes public opinion and authorizes its enforcement. Those who flagrantly abuse this public sentiment should therefore be made to suffer for it.

As we go to press, advice has been received from Victoria, that the attorney-general has granted a "Fiat"

FALSE CREEK PROBLEM

The agreement between the city and the Great Northern and the scheme of the Council to bulkhead False Creek opposite Gore avenue, is the chief topic of interest in the city at present. It is highly desirable that there should be as much publicity given to the matter as possible and we purpose discussing it fully from week to week in these columns.

We are convinced that the City Council have acted wisely and advisedly in what they have done. It is common knowledge that many weeks were spent by the Harbor Improvement committee in discussing the agreement with the Great Northern and in endeavoring to get the balance of the property owners along Park lane to come to reason. Many sessions of the committee were held and in some cases lasting all day long. It stands to reason that this body of intelligent men coupled with the advice of Mr. W. A. McDonald, who is recognized as the best municipal lawyer in the province, would not submit to council any other than a carefully prepared scheme. Then, following this there was a special meeting of the Council when the whole question was thoroughly discussed and the above mentioned agreement arrived at.

The point which we wish to make clear this week is the effect that an open waterway with wharfs in the head of False Creek would have on Westminster avenue. If the scheme were to be made pay it would mean that there must be sufficient traffic to pay the interest on this investment, his traffic would all have to pass through the Westminster avenue bridge; it takes one and a half minutes to lift and the same to lower the bascule, it would take about five minutes for a tug and scow to pass through. This would mean that eight minutes would be consumed in passing the bridge. All this time the street-car traffic and foot traffic would be held up. The bridge at present is taxed to comfortably handle the traffic, but what would be the result if there was a delay of from five to ten minutes? Carry this further and ask what would be the result if this occurred twenty times a day? It would mean that all the traffic to and from the south shore of the creek would be disorganized and this in turn would delay the traffic throughout the whole city. It is simply out of the question. No effort has been made to explain how this situation is to be met. It is an argument which is irrefutable. We have never had the inconvenience of waiting for an open bridge, and hence it is hard to conceive without experience. It will, however, be remembered what irritating delays were occasioned by the single-track on the old bridge. This only affected the car traffic. This opening will affect all kinds of traffic and must be disastrous to the business on Westminster avenue and militate against the interest of the public. Next week we will deal with other phases of the question and from week to week until the bylaw is passed.

Government Control of Railways

The Nor-West Farmer in an editorial gives the following:

The press despatches that have come from Ottawa within recent days have contained the information that the officials of the Department of Trade and Commerce are carrying on an investigation to ascertain if grades of grain are being mixed in the terminal elevators.

We will not jump to the conclusion that the investigation will show that mixing has been going on; that will be known only after the results are made public. But it is timely to remark that this circumstance gives considerable strength to the position of the Grain Growers' associations and those other bodies that are asking for Dominion which will betaken advantage of at once by the mayor and action at once commenced against contractor J. R. Atchison.

ENDORSE BORDEN AS LEADER

The following clipping from the leading Conservative organ of this city is simply another evidence of the interest which pervades the ranks of the Conservative party of Canada. The article states that "there was no half-heartedness about the matter. There seemed to be no real reason for the action." That is exactly where our learned friend is off. There is a reason, and a very good one, too, for the evident uneasiness in the ranks of the electorate generally. Why, we ask, are the leaders (?) of the party everlastingly confirming Borden as Leader. Every few months we hear of a great caucus held to discuss the leadership and there, we are told "was no occasion for it; that all was well." The article we refer to is as follows:

Ottawa, April 12.—The general committee of fifty which had in hand the preliminary arrangements for the Conservative convention, which was to have met here next June, decided this afternoon to report to caucus that it be postponed. The caucus will meet again in the morning and the report of the committee will be adopted. While the convention has been postponed from the date originally set, it is not likely that it will be held this year.

Hon. Mr. Borden was enthusiastically endorsed as leader of the party at the prolonged caucus of the Conservative members, Mr. George H. Perley, M. P. for Argenteuil, presiding. There was no half heartedness about the matter and a resolution was unanimously passed amid loud cheers, expressing implicit confidence in Mr. Borden's administration. It was the most enthusiastic caucus held this parliament.

There seems to have been no real foundation for any reason for dissension in the Conservative party as to the leadership of Mr. R. L. Borden. The meeting expressed confidence in him as the leader of the Liberal-Conservative party and its unanimous desire that he should continue to hold that position and pledged to him its allegiance and loyalty.

It will be noted that the convention which was to have been held in June and representative of all Canada is called off. By whom? By the leaders (?); by those who are manipulating the whole scheme of party government for themselves and the party. Therein lies the reason for the unrest of which we have spoken. The general electorate are about sick of being led around by the nose by a few extreme partisans whose sole interest is remaining in power or getting in that position. What the people are demanding today is a true interpretation of democracy, a system that will give them "in fact" what they are now supposed to have in theory. This can only be secured by the introduction of "direct legislation," and this in turn is the hardest blow which could be given to graft and patronage, and incidentally to political parasites. Hence the alarm; hence the withdrawal of a representative convention.

THE LICENSING BOARD

The full Board of License Commissioners met Tuesday in the Council chamber, which was crowded with an interested gathering. Again the board gave evidence of its determination to "clean" up the hotels. The license of the Louvre was indefinitely suspended. A rather curious surprise was sprung in connection with the Louvre, when the proprietor, in his earnest plea for time and leniency, stated that Magistrate Williams was the owner of the place. It is a disreputable hole, having only four bed-rooms and no dining-room, but a flourishing bar. It is a sample of many others which exist and the board is determined to have this class abolished.

The Iriquois, the place where poor, unfortunate Shiben met his death, was ordered closed and given 60 days to dispose of stock and license to a party satisfactory to the board. The board also went on record as favorable to a special inspector for hotels. The present inspector, Archie Robinson, is inspector for all licenses of every kind and has not the time necessary to devote to the hotel inspection.

The Vandicar got its license at last. Dr. Spencer opposed it, presenting a petition against the granting of the license, but the board thought that as the premises were in accord with the requirements of the law that a license should be granted.

The Mayor stated that next July when licenses are renewed there will be many who will not be renewed. A recent trip of investigation proved to the satisfaction of the board that some of the so-called hotels were nothing but dives of dissatisfaction and hence their determination to cancel all such cases.

THE TRADES COUNCIL POLITICAL PLATFORM

Doubtless the Trades Council welcomes any just comments made upon the "Political Platform" so ardently discussed last week. Any remarks made by me in this short article are intended to manifest sympathy with most of the Planks as well as with the enlightened and fairminded attempts by the Trades Council and their co-workers, looking towards bettering the conditions of the labouring classes in Vancouver and British Columbia.

So far as I can see and read, the labouring men of Canada are more wisely guided, better organized and more effective in their methods than similar institutions and workers in most other lands. And I would give, as a chief cause, the fact that there are so many well-read and just-minded socialists in the In the Labour Unions. In fact the socialists are now settling down to the only practical and finally successful method of correcting the unequal and unjust methods, under which the whole body politic groans, with slight expectation of immediate improvement.

Before making any comments upon the Platform, I wish to make a few short pointed remarks. First:— Socialism in Canada is more enlightened and advanced than in any other country, excepting one perhaps.

Second:— Many noisy, ignorant, vile-minded men are attached to the socialists, but are no more socialists than are true anarchists, and a pitiable blotch on, or in the ranks of the workers, and society. As they are comparatively few and have less and less influence among the leaders, and eventually will be cut adrift by the men who are determined to govern the labour organizations in the highest interests of the whole public, we may pass these poor fellows by for the present.

"He's not what you call strictly handsome," said the major, beaming through his eyeglasses on the baby, "but it's the kind of face that grows on you."
"It's not the kind of face that ever grew on you," was the indignant and unexpected reply of the mother. "You'd been better looking if it had."

COMMUNICATION WITH MARS

BY LORD TELLAMORE

A Serial Story to be run each week in the "Call"

How shall I announce my discovery? How shall I portray a long life struggle? I am now an old man of 118 winters and 117 summers. This is the year 1910. In two years more I shall die and go to my fathers, and to my many promoted friends.

This is the reason of my now giving to the world an account of my life work and of a very important discovery. Should I die and not first give the information to man kind, I would be a monster criminal before my own soul, and in the eyes of hosts of interested beings.

A young man-child was born in the year 1792 A. D., near T. . . . Canada. In early life, before he reached his teens, he was an ardent student of nature, sun, stars, moon, hills, rivers, fields, flowers, birds and the hosts of things around him.

In course of time he became one of the most noted travellers, explorers and naturalists of Canada.

About the year 1830 when I was young and full of ambition, I heard this wonderful man lecture on "Among the Mountains." His manner, speech, detailed and comprehensive grasp of the subject in hand, captured me body, mind and spirit.

The feature of his subject that caught and held my attention, and indeed changed my whole purposes, was his careful account of what he termed "Practical Seismology."

He explained how, in connection with the study of volcanoes and earthquakes, the Seismograph plays an important part, and simplifies much that would otherwise be undecipherable. He had instruments, index pointers, discs revolving by clock-work, and carbon plates to receive markings caused by earth-quakes, or earth jars, tidal waves, winds and ocean storms.

At one part of his lecture, he informed the audience that many vibrations are registered by the Seismograph, which vibrations are unintelligible. Concerning these, he said that some of them might come from the wind, some from ocean storms, some from tides, some from distant earth quakes, some from internal parts of the earth in process of sudden change, some from the perturbations of the planets, some from planet-quakes, and, perhaps, some from attempts on the part of intelligent beings on one of the planets, as Mars, to enter into communication with the inhabitants of earth.

Already I had a general knowledge of telephony, telegraphy, telephony, telephony, telephony and kindred subjects.

The lecturer passed, the lecturer went his way, but he remained a permanent factor in my life, and on my knees I vowed that I would learn all I could, and try to talk with the people of Mars.

I did not know why the learned professor specially mentioned the planet Mars. However, he did so, I determined to bend my whole energy on this particular star, and of my own home the earth.

I served for years in the Canadian General Company's works, also was a telegrapher with the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., and put in time with other large concerns, including cable companies, wireless telegraphy companies, and others of a more complex and delicate nature.

In due course I passed through an important university, and then took a post graduate degree in science, theoretical and practical. When I was sixty years of age I completely withdrew from all further attempts to learn in colleges, schools and science institutes, that which I most ardently sought.

PROF. ODLUM'S CRITICISM ON THE "NEW THEOLOGY" BY CAMPBELL OF "THE CITY TEMPLE"

However, used by a pantheist and carrying the meaning it must carry to be consistent with such teaching, I am minded to raise an objection. I shall look at some things in nature for help.

Magnetism may be within us, and is; but before we find, or have any knowledge of it there, we may get knowledge of this subtle force by looking at a pocket compass, an ordinary magnet, or by rubbing the back of a pet cat.

So with gravity. Gravity is within as well as without. And yet we may get our first knowledge of gravity from seeing a tree, a leaf, a raindrop fall. The scientists in search of gravity, magnetism, electricity, force, temperature, go as a rule to the "elsewhere" rather than to the human unit to make discovery and to gain knowledge.

The "Bible," the "elsewhere," are just as helpful in discovering God, and more so than the solitary human soul. Of course Campbell makes the soul sufficient, as the soul is God, with him. Pantheistically he is consistent. But even then the "Bible" and the "elsewhere" are God as truly as the soul. So his talk could be cut out without loss. And the City Temple would not know the difference.

Page 208. "While sin remains in the universe God is defeated; everlasting punishment involves His everlasting failure." This quotation uttered by any ordinary evangelical of any known Christian denomination, could be taken as stated, and looked upon as fairly reasonable. Personally I could agree with the statement standing out free by itself. However, as it comes from Campbell, I shall not let it pass without comment.

He uses the word sin. We must see what he talks about when he takes sin for his topic.

- I shall use a few quotations:—
- "Evil is a negative term."
- "Evil is non-being."
- "Infinity can know nothing of evil."
- "Sin is but the failure to realize that we are Christ, the eternal Son."
- "Sin is a quest for God."
- "The visible universe is consciousness."
- "The invisible universe is consciousness."
- "We are here to grow the soul."
- "The spirit can neither make nor mar."
- "God is my deeper self."
- "I shall not cease to be I, nor you to be you."
- "There must be a region of experience where we shall find that you and I are one."

"The distinction between finite and infinite is not eternal."
"There can be nothing in the universe outside of God."
"Jesus was God, but so are we."
"We too are Christ, the Eternal Son."

When we consider what God is, what man is, what Jesus is, what evil is and what sin is as learned from the above quotations, then we are amazed at Campbell's further statement:—"While sin remains in the universe God is defeated," and the more amazed when we are told that "Sin is a quest after God." Poor Rip-Van-Winkled City Templars!

On page 215. "The deeper self is the judge, the self who is eternally one with God."
Now on page 35 he says of my deeper self, "God is my deeper self."
Let us substitute here on page 215, and instead of saying "The deeper self in the judge," we shall say "God is the judge." And then in the latter part of the quotation we shall say "The God who is eternally one with God." Then in its new form, using his own definition, we get the following: "God is the judge, the God who is eternally one with God." What arrant nonsense!!

But now we change and substitute self for God, as per pages 35 and 215. "The deeper self is the judge, the self who is eternally one with self." How silly! His statement when standing by itself looks quite reasonable, but when his former pantheistic definition is applied and substitution used, he appears foolish enough to remind one of the first day of April. Surely the City Temple and April the First are synonyms!

Page 217. "Pain is the token of our divine lineage." Yes, if pain be a characteristic of divinity. However from the Campbell pantheistic standpoint, pain is no more characteristic of divinity than are pleasure, greed, hate, love, noise, cold, hunger, smoke, fish, eels, snakes, snappers and sinners. I say this as seriously as is possible in dealing with his dogmatic pantheistic, tau-tological logomachy.

Page 221. "The philosophy underlying the New Theology, as I understand it, is monistic idealism, and monistic idealism recognizes no fundamental distinction between matter and spirit."

In this quotation he tells us that "monistic idealism" is the foundation of the New Theology. And as he is the spokesman for the New Theology, we shall take him at his word.

Then he is a monistic idealist. Good! And as such he admits "no distinction between matter and spirit." Good!

This is the last analysis of the pantheist. The monistic idealist is another name for the pantheistic materialist.
And no matter which term is used, the result is there can be nothing in the universe but God. All is God and God is all. Hence "My deeper self is God." And so he trots around in a circle. If he were a mathematician he would be a specialist in permutations. But being a loquacious word juggler he is an expert periphrastator, and lo! the City Temple applauds.

On page 32 he says:—"The universe is consciousness."
Hence it follows that the universe is the fundamental reality. I now wonder what is left.

But he says on page 222:—"The so-called material world is the product of consciousness exercising itself along a limited plane." Here we meet "so-called," and lop off "exercising itself along a limited plane."

Then we have the plain statement: "The material world is the product of consciousness."
But surely the "material world" is the visible universe, or a part of the "visible universe!" Page 32—"The universe is consciousness."

Thus he seriously informs us that "The visible universe is consciousness." Would he then say that "the visible universe is consciousness" and "the product of consciousness" at the same time?

He would find it difficult to satisfy himself, or any sane man, that the "world is the product of consciousness" and "is consciousness," at the same time. He certainly so says, and also says much else that is equally as foolish or more so, if possible. And the City Temple pays him for it.

Page 222. "Matter exists only in and for the mind." This is another child of his monistic-idealistic pantheism. Another permutation! The thing known as horse, mountain, frog, moon, earth and City Temple "exist, on," in Campbell's "mind."

And better still as he says, they "exist only for" his "mind," more especially The City Temple and the simpletons who pay the piper. They certainly seem to exist only for his mind, for his purpose, for his convenience.

Page 222. "The physical is a mode of language." A horse is a mode of language, and so also The City Temple light! A queer "mode!"
But he says at the same time: "The physical is an expression of thought" and further he asserts that the physical is a condition of thought.

- Now we shall put these in line and take a look at the row:
- The physical is a mode of language.
- The physical is an expression of thought.
- The physical is a condition of thought.
- "Matter exists only in the mind."
- Matter is physical and exists only in the mind. "Matter, the physical

COMMUNICATION WITH MARS

BY LORD TELLAMORE

A Serial Story to be run each week in the "Cal."

I was at last aided in my pursuits a second time by that most wonderful lecturer who had early in life powerfully influenced my mind.

An interested friend who was intimate with the learned professor told him of my attempts, my constant studies, and how I was in search of a means by which I could read the unintelligible Seismographic vibrations.

He became deeply interested in me and my work, wrote me, visited and instructed me as no other man could; and gave me a sum of money to use in the pursuit of my great object. I now had all the means necessary to follow up my work in comfort; and so I and my loving, unselfish little wife, gave our whole time and thought to the discovery of a means of deciphering what we called the Seismograph X. To us, in common with many, X represented the unknown quantity, so we abbreviated the unknown vibrations seen chronicled on the Seismograph to two letters S X. Hence our whole work was a search after S X, the Seismograph, i. e. unknown vibrations.

Think of it reader! Two simple letters! S. X. We talked of S. X., thought of S. X.; worked for S. X.; dreamed of S. X.; and saw S. X. written across the face of the blue heavens, crimped over the curling sides of the thunder cloud, blazing in the lightning flash, shining in the dew drop, frozen in the crystal snowflake, and whispered in our morning, noonday, evening, and midnight prayers.

Chapter II.

We built a small, but strong and comfortable building in which we lived and labored for S. X. We selected a shaded spot where winds could do little to effect, to the smallest extent, our home. It was far inland, so that the impulses of wave-motions, arising from ocean storms, would be nil or reduced to a minimum.

We had a lovely home in the centre of a forty-acre block of land. Outside of, and over our home we constructed a large and strong building to protect the S. X. rooms from change by wind and temperature. By artificial means we kept the temperature of the space between the home and the covering house at a constant grade.

The outer house had no connection with the inner house, called "our home." The Seismographic rooms had no contact with the structure, foundation, and walls of the home. They were within and under the home, but not in touch. Each instrument had its own separate foundation on the solid bed rock, and in no way could it be sensibly affected, except through vibration from the foundation, or through the air.

Of course I had wire connection for purposes of light and communication, with all the lines telegraphic, telephonic, and others that seemed necessary.

We spent many years in collecting old discs, readings, pamphlets, booklets, reports written, typed and printed, and all other material that would aid us in finding S. X.

Our collection was very large, and we had an extensive technical reference library, and several expert assistants to lesson our labors. Each did the work given him, but none knew our real object. This was our secret, our life work, our goal, our own S. X. My wife and I alone held the mysterious in hand.

Daily, weekly, monthly, yearly, and irregularly, reports of seismic came to hand from various countries; and these were deciphered, differentiated, and classified for reference and comparison.

Every storm chronicled by every meteorological observatory, every newspaper clipping giving an account of a storm, in fact every kind of information that could bear on seismography was most carefully culled and tabulated for future use.

Years rolled on, and on, till we had most clearly found the various kinds and sources of vibration.

The earth movements, that came at regular intervals, were eliminated first and their true value found.

The tidal vibrations were put by themselves. These were of four sorts, (a), caused by the water on the surface of the earth answering to the attraction of sun and moon. (b), those caused by the action of the planets; (c), those caused by the internal or molten mass answering to the heavenly bodies in a manner similar to that of the water, and (d), the crust of the earth itself changing, flexing, yielding and answering to the action of the moon and sun.

Then the wind storms, regular and irregular, we found to be chronicled on our seismograph. These we eliminated. So on, and on we went, until we found much of confusion and complexity removed. We were approaching our goal, our S. X.

As time passed, my wife and I gradually lost all track of the current events of the world, except so far as they bore on the subject of our research.

Great events came and went, wonderful discoveries were chronicled, marvellous inventions of the past were developed to an extent far beyond the anticipation of the first inventors. The dirigible balloon, the air freight ship, the air war-ship, the submarine war, freight and passenger ships were all perfected, and people at will traveled through air, on the earth, over the seas and through the water! Not only the wealthy, but the middle class had, in large numbers, their underwater pleasure boats, and their own private air ships by which they would visit their near and distant friends in the most comfortable and rapid manner.

Mighty wars had fairly wrecked great and small nations. Russia was wiped off the map. Turkey disappeared. Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Belgium, Portugal, Italy, Greece and other countries had become a part of the Israelitish Empire which was formed by a union of Britannia, Unistatia and Japan. All these things we had some knowledge of, but our minds were fixed, intently devoted to our study, our hunt after our ideal S. X.

One thing that made us both more intent than all else, was the fact that we knew the time at which I should go away from the earth. So we hastened to find our goal before my departure.

I need not say how I came to know that I would live to, and die at the end of my 120th year, as it would absorb too much of this book, written for a quite another purpose.

After many long years of patient toil, we eliminated the following vibrations from the realm of study. 1st, the whole group that had their origin to waste our time, or jeopardize the public standing of those officially connected with our proposition, by making misleading statements.

We confine ourselves to the facts, and if you desire to invest in an enterprise of real merit, we would be glad to furnish you with the fullest particulars, and to have you interested with us, otherwise, please do not waste your own time or ours.

The Story in Brief

A syndicate of well-known business men of Vancouver have, by the expenditure of time and capital and the employment of experts, secured an area of what is believed to be THE BEST UNDEVELOPED OIL LANDS in California.

This property comprises 20 mineral oil locations, containing in all 3,080 acres. This ground is near San Diego, which city affords not only a good local market for oil products, but also good shipping facilities, and the property is favorably situated for the construction of a gravity pipe line to the harbor at a minimum cost.

On this field, the geological formations, the seepages and surface indications cannot be excelled in California, and its value is the more assured by its being in direct line with producing areas, having identical formations.

So favorable were the reports on this particular property, that, after a personal inspection by members of the Directorate, as large an area as possible was secured, and arrangements made for the commencement of development work.

THE BEAVER OIL COMPANY, organized to carry out the work of developing this property, is registered under the laws of California, to do business in that State. It is capitalized at $2,000,000 in ONE DOLLAR shares. There is no "preferred" or "promotion" stock, and the Company commences operations with its valuable property and plant entirely unencumbered.

All charges for prospecting, inspection and acquiring of this large acreage, the purchase and installation of an up-to-date steam drilling plant, together with all costs connected with company organization, have been met by the Syndicate Membership.

It is proposed to issue to the public small blocks of stock, as the requirements of the work will warrant. The first of these is for only 50,000 shares, and, considering the valuable assets of the Company, the price is exceptionally low. These shares are fully paid up and non-assessable, the management reserving the right to increase the price, without notice, on any shares that are not taken up.

Later issues will be placed at higher figures.

Don't Mistake Us

We are selling this stock at a low figure with the object of proving the value of the Company's property as quickly as possible. When we have developed the oil in a paying quantity, there will be no stock issued to the public at any price.

We are convinced that we have in this property and its development the best opportunity for great things in the way of business that ever knocked at our door, and we are backing up this conviction with our money. If you wish to have a part in this enterprise and to share the opportunity with us, now is the time to get in on ground floor prices.

With the advent of our first strike, every acre of our holding will jump in value to at least $2,000 per acre. The prices now being paid in Southern California for semi-developed oil lands are sufficient warrant for the estimate that the Beaver Oil Company's stock will soon be held at a price far exceeding its par value.

The Midway oil field in Kern County is probably the liveliest spot in the United States today, all on account of the great oil wells recently brought in there. Lands that were not worth $5 an acre six months ago are now selling at $2,000 per acre and upwards. One of the new wells is producing $6,500 worth of oil every 24 hours.

The Official Geological Report

refers most favorably to the San Diego district as an oil area.

G. W. Magwood, Esq., geological expert, is one of the latest to add testimony to the prospective richness of this field. After spending several weeks in the district investigating the oil conditions, he insists that this point is destined to become one of the greatest oil producing centres of the West. Further, "I have given ten years to the geological study of formation stratas, and anticlinals of the different oil fields of this State, and have been in every field that is to any extent developed, and find that the oil belt is continuous from Monterey to the Gulf of California," and "where the big producers are, the formation follows the Coast." Referring particularly to the ground between Del Mar and Otay (in which the Beaver Oil Company's land is situated), he states that "the oil strata can be traced in a line approximately the same distance inland, and the conditions are evidence that there are great lakes of oil, OF WHICH THE GREATEST LIES BETWEEN DELMAR AND OTAY MESA." In this district the expert finds all the favoring conditions, the lime, shale, oil sand, fossils, gypsum, sulphur and oil breaking through, to justify the belief of the existence here of the greatest pool of oil in the State of California.

Government ownership and control of terminal elevators. We think that with the strength of public opinion now in support of such a move the Dominion Government would be doing very well to establish its own line of terminals.

Reasons why this should be done have been accumulating rapidly enough within recent months, and one of the most prominent is the fact that the terminals have so largely fallen into the hands of private parties who are in some way connected with the grain trade. We are told that now the only independent storage at the lake front is owned by the C. P. R. company and this concern is not likely to continue in the business of warehousing grain very much longer. The best development of our grain trade business cannot come by hampering it, and it would certainly be seriously hampered if exporters that did not own a complete line of terminals and transfer elevators were compelled to put their shipments through the houses of rival firms.

There is, we think, a very, very much clearer case in favor of Dominion Government ownership of terminals and transfer elevators than there is for Provincial Government ownership of initial elevators. Several of the arguments on this matter have to do with the relations in which the shipper is placed, but perhaps the reason that would have the most weight with the government is found in the position that it itself occupies. By the very nature of our inspection and grading service, the integrity and responsibility of the Dominion Government is pledged on every certificated consignment of grain that goes into storage. Unless the Dominion Government is prepared to provide the machinery to guard, beyond peradventure, that the different grades shall go through without being tampered with, their certification of standards is bound sooner or later to become a farce. This has been so evident that they have already been forced to put in officials so that the operation of terminals is under their supervision. There is good reason for questioning if even this is giving satisfaction; and, anyway, it is not going a very great deal further to do the work than it is to put one man to watch how another man does it. If the present investigation reveals the fact that, even under supervision, grades are being mixed, it would look as though the preservation of its own integrity in connection with the grades should force the Dominion Government to accept the principal of ownership and operation of the elevators through which the grain to which it certifies must of necessity be passed.

THE WEALTH OF RUSSIAN MONASTERIES

From reports made recently by the chancery of the holy synod of the Greek Orthodox Catholic Church in Russia it is learned that the total value of the property owned by the monasteries and nunneries in Russia is estimated to be no less than $3,735,000,000. This amazing amount of wealth is owned by 809 such institutions, which contain more than fifty thousand inmates.

In England centuries ago it was the amassing of great wealth by the monastic orders of the Roman church which hastened the reformation. Many of these orders were professedly under the "vow of poverty," which was flagrantly violated by their great wealth. These church funds were withdrawn from taxation, which made the burdens of taxation fall all the heavier upon the common people. It is said that Cromwell ordered that the silver shrines of the Apostles which adorned the churches of his time should be melted into money and used for sending the gospel to the poor. It would be a blessing to Russia if all the wealth which is piled up in monastic orders were devoted to preaching a pure gospel to the people.

Nova Scotia Legislature Introduces Provincial Prohibitory Law.

After trying high license and Scott act, the Nova Scotians purpose dealing finally with the vexed liquor question according to latest despatches from that province as follows:

Halifax, April 13.—The government of Nova Scotia effected a radical change in its temperance policy yesterday, when Attorney-General McLean introduced into the legislature a prohibitory liquor bill. Hitherto the government legislation has been directed to strengthening the enforcement of the Canada Temperance act, as the federal liquor is called, or enacting stringent provincial license laws.

There are two counties in this province, Halifax and Richmond, where the Canada Temperance act is in force. These are exempt from the provisions of the proposed prohibitory law, but all the rest of the province is brought under its scope. As regards Richmond, the law comes into force there with the expiry of the existing licenses. In the city of Halifax, prohibition shall not become effective until after the census of 1911, and after a majority of the ratepayers shall have voted against the license.

In the meantime, in Halifax, the power of granting licenses is taken from the city council and vested in a license board. The number of licenses after the expiry of those in force is reduced to 70, and following the census of 1911 there shall not be more than one license for each thousand of the population. Inspector-in-chief for the enforcement of the law will, under its provisions, be appointed by the government. The bill will come up for a second reading on Thursday.

The Editor of The Western Call:

Sir,—Taking up your issue of the 8th inst., I was interested by the headlines "Prof. Odum's Criticism on the 'New Theology,'" by Mr. Campbell." I settled down to read, as I imagined, an intelligent criticism of a work which I had heard, but not had the pleasure of reading. From the idea I held of the professor's literary and intellectual attainments, I anticipated an impartial, intellectual and scholarly analysis of the book under review. But I was grievously disappointed. Instead of intelligent argument the professor indulged in most abusive and scurrilous attacks on Mr. Campbell, and introduced a vindictive personal element entirely uncalled for.

His criticism on "New Theology," would be more correctly termed "Slandering Abuse on the Author of 'New Theology.'" For invective he excels the renowned Mrs. Moriarty of Dublin fish-market fame. Here are a few of the choice expressions he uses: "ubish," "stupid folly," "silly argument," "stupid City Templars," "dullard Londoners." (Not content with venting his spleen on Mr. Campbell, the worthy professor must needs open his vials of wrath upon any who give him an intelligent hearing.) "Infinite humbug," "fool jugglar and libertine," "a spewer of blasphemous lunacy."

Well, sir, such a collection of "English" I have never before seen in print. Expressed in the heat of a particularly venomous personal quarrel, in some stratas of society, one may find some excuse for them; but when written in the cool atmosphere one would suppose a "criticism" to be written in, one can only stand aghast at such an exhibition of mud slinging by a defender of his creed. And especially when emanating from such a source.

As I have previously stated, I have never seen the book referred to, extracts from the professor's miscalled "criticism" in question comprising all I have read, so I am in no position to enter into a controversy. But it does seem to me that the professor tries to make a mountain out of a mole hill, to create a false impression out of one of Mr. Campbell's statements, for the purpose of delivering a destructive onslaught upon it—his own creation. He objects to the term "infinite" as used by Mr. Campbell, and goes into a hair-splitting dissertation as to the meaning of the term, when, unless one willfully tries to misconstrue it, its meaning is obvious.

And referring to page 153, "Men in their blank atheism, in their foul blasphemies are engaged in this dim, blundering quest for God," the bellicose professor expresses himself thus: "I Campbell were a dirty Tom Paine, or a filthy Voltaire, or a drunken aesthete, libertine and a bar-room loafing so (observe the select adjectives) I could read the above blundering folly with out a chill, but to read such words emanating from the City Temple oracle is to get a jar, a shock. And again I ask, is the man a fool, a Hyde-Jekyll juggler, a libertine?"

Then later follows: "And I hereby affirm that I have no knowledge of any religious writer who spews out more blasphemous lunacy than the one under consideration."

Well, sir, in answer to the above choice language, I may say I heard Mr. Gale, the evangelist, recently preaching at Grandview Methodist church—where the professor often attends—say "that the prostitute following her unhallowed calling, and the libertine seeking his innocent victim to destroy, but were exercising their God-given desires, and in their vile practices were groping in their quest for God, after that perfect peace and contentment which could only be found in living in harmony with His divine laws."

I respectfully draw the professor's attention to the oneness of these two statements, the first of which provokes him to such vitriolic fury. He may still hold to his opinion, but in that case, Mr. Gale, probably in hearty accord with him on most points of his creed, has to share in the pleasure of being the recipient of the above choice expression of the professor.

"A spewer of blasphemous lunacy." The professor says "Campbell talks too much." I would suggest it is a failing we are all prone to.

Now, sir, my only object in addressing you is to protest against such unseemly language in your columns, in what should be clean, spirited criticism. A man may hold different opinions from me, or even from the professor, and still be entitled to the same respect that we expect our honest opinions to receive.

I know the professor slightly and hold him in considerable esteem. I have never seen or heard Mr. Campbell, and, as I have stated, never read a word of his writings beyond extracts introduced by the professor into his article, but I am inclined to think, on personal acquaintance, the professor would find him a man worthy of admiration, and striving to do his part in the uplift of humanity, probably often doing his duty when tempted to evade it, to escape the opprobrium usually meted out to one who dares to be honest to his convictions when they run counter to those held by those who have regarded him as one of them.

Yours, etc.,

C. ANDERSON.

Pupils of Prof. T. Bonne Miller Give Delightful Entertainment.

A delightful evening was spent on Tuesday in being entertained by the pupils of Prof. T. Bonne Miller, the popular organist and choirmaster of Mount Pleasant Methodist church. The pupils taking part were Misses Hazel Fremlin, Margaret Burns, Cella Gibson, Greta Bruce, May Quigley, Isabel Des Brisay, Nellie Hazelwood, Eva Bruce, Winnie Harris and Mr. Harold Fremlin. The whole programme was one of considerable merit and reflected great credit on both teacher and pupils. It is safe to predict that should these budding artists continue under the guidance of their present tutor, Mount Pleasant will indeed have a bevy of talent to be justly proud of.

After having heard Miss Fremlin's rendition of an Andante by Batisse so tastefully and with such an exquisite delicacy of touch, we looked forward with pleasurable anticipation to hearing her on the lighter instrument in Franz Listz's "At the Spring," but we were doomed to disappointment, owing to the length of the program this item being admitted.

Space forbids making any more than a mere mention of Miss Hazelwood's playing of "Happiness," by Lange, Miss Cella Gibson's playing of the "Invitation to the Dance," by Weber and the "Etude," by Wollenhaupt, which was delightfully played in spite of a slight manifestation of nervousness by Miss Margaret Bush. The pupils were assisted in their programme by Madame Julisse, soprano; Miss Beatrice Thomson, soprano; Mr. Gilbert Hall, baritone, and Mr. John Hamilton, basso, which, judging from the repeated hearty applause that greeted their efforts, were heartily appreciated.

WOMANS WORLD

The tendency to "sweet simplicity," which has always been the most emphatically sounded note concerning the construction of washable materials, seems to have been eliminated. True, there is a certain trimness that appeals as simplicity, but even the most inexpensive gingham or an ordinary percale is apt to be much decorated. At the trimming counter there are cotton braids in all degrees of fanciful effects and raitail trimmings that often are combined with Indian beads or with buttons. Garnitures of cotton lace and Indian bead work are effective, as are some of the net trimmings that are hand-run after the manner of the silk embroidered laces that had such a vogue this winter.

A VARIETY OF TRIMMINGS
Linen bandings in Oriental patterns are used with the heavier linens, and here are French embroidered bandings in all widths or in sets for skirt and blouse decoration. Macrame cords are fashioned into tapestry designs for bandings or garnitures, and are so effective that they are not expensive whatever their cost. Combinations of beading and embroidery on linen make handsome garnitures, and there is no end to the number of motifs and other ornaments that are made of cord. Irish crochet is still liked, although there is a reversion to the finer laces in which many of the made-up garnitures are most elaborate.

The desire for combining different materials prevails, and one sees silk and even velvet instigated into the decorative scheme of the cotton costume. They form pipings and bindings, facings and strappings, or they make up revers and shawl collars, and even skirt yokes. In most cases the silk may be removed when the garment has to be laundered.

Considerable attention is given to the separate blouse and skirt, and special materials designed for them.

although they have given place to the more dignified and satisfactory one-piece dress. The line of madras is expanded to take in new designs, stripes and small conventional figures. They include many new colorings, and, where a single color beside the background once held there are now innumerable color combinations such as cheerful greens and reds with alternating black stripes, gray checks, and blues, greens and reds, with even a dash of yellow. Madras, like linen, wears so well and launders so satisfactorily that it is a delight to wear it in the mornings, when it is a desirable change from the flimsy lingerie blouse that wails in damp air.

HAND - PRINTED LINENS
Hand - printed linen shirtings will be utilized in tailored dresses, alternating with percales. The designs are in flower patterns and in dainty stripes, flowers printed in between. Although these are supposed to be "strictly tailored," they are generally made with tucks and plaits and trimmed with a plain color matching that of the figure.

Allover embroideries make smart blouses and some are made in tailored effects, with strappings of plain material. Both blind and open work embroidery is in favor, but, of course, there is always a penchant for English eyelet embroidery of which there are excellent imitations in machine-made pieces. Often these are combined with Valenciennes insertion or with Cluny lace. The mannish effect is subdued even in the shirts of plain linen, by having the slight fullness at the waistline drawn toward the centre of the front. This gives a much better line to the figure, and is not only more feminine looking, but more useful. Leather belts are to be worn with these waists, and of them the patent leathers are best, although the suedes may be made in the same range of colors and designs.

Mrs. A. J. Clare, 26 Broadway west will not receive until further notice.

A petition is being prepared for the purpose of having Seventh avenue paved. We have not gone into the merits of this, but if Seventh avenue needs it as bad as Tenth and Eleventh, push it along.

The city engineer or his deputies seem lacking in horse sense when they allow Ninth from Westminster east to be torn up on both sides at once. There is a lot of traffic around this point, especially catching the interurban cars and this specimen of engineering is causing inconvenience.

Mrs. H. Wilson, 54 Tenth avenue west, left for the old country, where she will visit till the latter part of June. Mrs. Wilson is the president of the Helping Hand society of Alexander. Hive No. 7, L. O. T. M., and at their recent meeting at the home of Mrs. Athbert, Seventh avenue east, she was presented with a handsomely bound volume of Whittier's poems, the presentation being made on behalf of the ladies by Mrs. Pettipiece, lady commander of Alexandra Hive. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

The first closing exercises of the Mount Pleasant Presbyterian Athletic club were held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. A splendid program of free-motion exercises, mat work, fencing, exhibition, basketball and a concert was given. The "gym" has been in operation since Feb. 1, the advancement of classes being fairly good considering the absence of apparatus. The apparatus will be installed during the present month and will be in readiness for the fall term. A lacrosse team will be organized for the summer months.

Rev. Dr. Sippell, of Columbian College, New Westminster, preached to large congregations on Sunday in Mount Pleasant Methodist church on Sunday.

METHODS OF LIVING

Subject of Splendid Address by Rev. Parker.

The above was the subject of an able address given Sunday afternoon to the Men's Meeting in the Mount Pleasant Methodist church, by Rev. Mr. Parker of the Central Baptist church. Mr. Parker's address was in reference to the "white plague." The speaker in graphic terms painted the horrors of its ravages. Giving many cases which had come under his personal observation to illustrate the awful effect of this fell disease. He also pointed out the numerous causes which led to its spread, naming as chief among them the habit of expectorating on the streets and the wearing of long, sweeping gowns by the women. He stated that in his opinion a civic bylaw should be enacted prohibiting expectorating on the pavements and crossings, at least, and should be rigidly enforced and coupled with this a strong agitation against the long gowns commonly worn by ladies. The speaker in dealing with remedies or methods of life stated that much could be done to ameliorate the conditions and to arrest the spread of the disease by observing the simple laws of hygiene, such as having open windows in sleeping apartments, and care to have an abundance of fresh air in the house. The practicing of deep breathing and other simple lung exercises to develop and strengthen those organs so that they will be able to throw off the bacteria of the disease. Then the speaker urged the necessity of large and up-to-date sanitoriums under the control of the government for the proper care of those who are the victims of the disease. The address was well received and called forth many varied expressions of opinion on the subject by those of the audience who spoke afterwards, as is customary at those meetings.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Aid. Stevens moved that the club make a contribution of $25 to the Tranquill sanitarium, which was seconded by G. H. Healy and carried unanimously. A resolution was also passed expressing the opinion that it was in the public good that the government take over the sanitarium and manage it as a public institution. The meeting was well attended, Mr. R. Spierke presiding.

Endorse Commissioners.
At the regular meeting of Mount Pleasant council, R. T. of T., on Wednesday evening a resolution was passed commending the attitude of the Mayor and License Commissioners toward the liquor licenses. Two new members were initiated, Miss Martin and Mr. Lacey, and two members from Manitoba, Misses Irene and Edna Morningstar, were received by card. A meeting of the district council will be held on Tuesday evening next, April 19, in the Sons of England hall, Granville street, and it is desired that every Royal Templar in the city should attend, as matters of vital importance will be brought up.

COMMUNICATION WITH MARS

within, and on the earth. 2nd, all those that had their origin on the sun and moon. 3rd, All those that came from the planets Mercury, Venus, Jupiter, Saturn, Neptune and Uranus. 4th, All those that came from the purely physical and ordinary operations of Mars.

We found the seismograph registered the results of the rearing and fanning of Mars in its orbital journey; the tidal actions on the surface and within the planet's body and also the storms, earth quakes, avalanches and heavy shearings of Mars.

By "shearings" is meant the grinding, moving operations always in process on the solid internal mass of the mountains. Miners, who tunnel and shaft into the solid rock, know well that all sorts of rock, even granites, rub, wear, move and grind internally throughout their mass, as sand or cheese would under powerful pressure which, while steadily applied, would move constantly in the direction of its application. This is the true cause of a well known fact. There is no such thing to be found within the massive rock mountains as solid, uncracked, very large blocks of stone. Quarrymen, as well as miners, soon discover that they run necessarily in short distances upon checks, flaws, cracks and breaks in the rock.

This breaking, quite irregular in igneous rock, and somewhat regular in certain sedimentary rocks, comes from the grinding or "shearing" process common to all parts of the earth-crust.

Such then was the delicate nature of our seismograph and other instruments that we were able to measure the aforesaid vibrations: fairly accurately read their meanings, tabulate them, and lay them aside for use. In this manner we settled down to the translation of the vibrations that came from Mars but which did not arise in the ordinary way.

We made sure that we could see certain laws through these subtle and most remarkable vibrations. We determined to give our full attention to the more prominent which occurred at regular intervals. Here began the finding of the key to our solution.

1st. We discovered that periodically there was one set of vibrations set in motion, and by examining old discs from various stations over the world, we perceived they took place when the earth and Mars were in conjunction and in opposition. Then we saw that there were N times as many vibrations to correspond with conjunction as there were in opposition. Here indeed was intelligence speaking, for we knew that the gravital effect of Mars upon the earth and vice versa in conjunction is exactly N times as great as when they are in opposition.

By this we concluded 1st., that there are intelligent beings on Mars. 2nd., that they have advanced in electric, telegraphic and other knowledge. 3rd., that they have advanced in astronomical knowledge. 4th., that they were trying to establish communication with the earth or some other world.

We also saw that they had been regularly keeping up their attempts for 47 years. Hence we rightly concluded that they believed the earth is similar to Mars, that they had invented telescopes, microscopes, sextants, telegraphs and wireless systems of sending messages.

We knew they had patience, system, plan, enterprise, wealth and much freedom; and also were possessed of the true scientific spirit. We then felt sure that they were steadily awaiting an answer from earth, that had some regular plan, which, oft repeated, would be finally discovered and understood by them. At this point of time, and state of knowledge, we determined to test various means of establishing communication between earth and Mars.

It was natural to decide that the Marsians would be on the lookout at the regular opposition and conjunction periods of their planet and ours. So we got everything ready for the trial. Before the hour of conjunction, we had figured that I would take a given time for our telegram to reach Mars, and as we were very desirous of making our first attempt a success, we telegraphed 2 minutes and 30 seconds before the actual moment of perfect conjunction.

(To be continued next week.)

The Trades Council and its Political Platform

ent. Many of them are at times worse in their outward actions than they are deep down in their hearts. They feel that they are down, and in their hopelessness at times grow fierce against present conditions. In this frame of mind they are desperate and have little respect for law, order, and any honest attempt by their fellow-workers to improve the economic conditions. It is most desirable to lessen the number of these men, and it is our bounden duty to labour by every reasonable means not only to better their condition, but to prevent the constant and increasing additions to their numbers.

Third:— There is one fundamental element to often overlooked in the constitution on platforms, in the teaching public speaking, and literature of the socialists and other labour organizations. That is the neglect of that side of the private individual and of society which is always dependent upon moral teaching and living. Laws compiled and enacted, not wisely related to, and harmonized with our highest and safest moral instincts and convictions, are helpless and in the end must fail. They are to the permanent and expanding aspirations of humanity, as is the cold lifeless marble bust of a Wellington, or a Cicero to the original.

But I do know that very large numbers of socialists and other labourers are not only strictly moral citizens, but are among the hardest and most effective workers in the Christian Church. This much I emphasize:—The long continued contest between the socialists and the original labour unions is steadily and wisely coming to an end. After long study and close observation I am forced to say that the socialist plan of winning what they require by parliamentary legislation, is more effective and sure of final success, than the original plan of using the strike to gain the desired ends. The strike at best is a poor makeshift, and should be used, only when all other means fail. Education legislation and moderation in solving the complex and complicated problems are better machines than noise, sticks, stones, strikes, pickets and mob-law.

Now a few words on the items of the Platform.

First:—"The abolition of the poll-tax for whitemen."

The poll-tax is a clumsy nuisance, for the most part, and no serious loss would follow its sepulture. And yet it seems to be to wise to make certain persons pay towards their protection, while they are in a civilised community.

I, however, think the word "whitemen" is objectional. There are many negroes, Chinamen, Japanese, Hindoos and some others who could not be called whitemen, in the sense in which the term is frequently used by our workers, and yet they are property-holders, householders, merchants, and regular contributors to the tax levied of the city and country.

It is unreasonable and unjust to make these men pay poll-tax and let other similar business men and property holders go free. The poll-tax is a nuisance, a most irritating process, and might well be cut out, unless in relation to a very limited class. In any case we must legislate on the lines of justice, otherwise a community, unjustly making and enforcing law, will quickly suffer in its weakest parts. And all know well that the most susceptible to the pinch of injustice are the poor among the workers. And if any class should sow seeds of liberal and even handed justice so as to reap the richer and better fruits of economic equality it is the working class.

Therefore while I favour cutting out or materially modifying the scope of the poll-tax legislation, I oppose a colour line in this matter.

Second:—"Abolition of oriental labour in mines, lumbering, fishing and railways."

This is a large order and needs careful perusal, as well as much comparison in relation to international trade and economics. What the "Platform" is intended to do, is most surely this one thing:— It is intended to accomplish the highest good to the community as well as to all wage earners. If this be not the intention, then the "Brotherhood of man" and especially of wage-earners is a farce, a false cry in the mouths of socialist speakers and of labour union writers. But I at once assume that the final purpose of the men introducing the Platform is that of the greatest good to all workers, and those depending on them.

To prevent the Asiatics from work in the mines, fisheries, railways and lumbering, in addition to the many other limitations imposed upon them, is practically to make paupers of them. Cut off the means of making a living and they must become paupers, starve to death or leave the country.

If our commonwealth do not want Asiatics, then prevent them from coming, but when they are permitted to enter within our shores, then they must be permitted to keep themselves alive by earning their living. This means work exactly where they can get and to do the work offered.

On the other hand our workers who wish to keep high remuneration for their work, make a false move by so treating the Asiatic, as is proposed in this platform. Instead of meeting with the comparatively few orientals in Canada on a friendly and fraternal footing, and thus drawing them into the labour and social organisations as allies, from the very first the white workers pursued a course of ostracising, browbeating, belittling and abusing. The result is that the Orientals go their own gait, get work where they can, undersell labour, and return a retaliation of a most unmerciful sort. The white worker finds the Asiatic the winner in the realms of common labour, and sadly learns that his past brutal and isolating course has made him so helpless, that he has to call upon the whole community to come to his aid, and rescue him by unjust legislation.

Our white workers, who too commonly boast of their superiority, find themselves beaten in the contest, even though they had the whole field at the beginning. There is a waste of time in the past and present methods of dealing with Oriental labour. The tactics could be changed to great advantage. Honestly, and openly give such treatment to the Asiatic as will put him on a friendly and equitable footing, then with him in the labour unions as an equal with the Pole, Italian, Galician, Ruthenian, and the many other white nationalities, he will become a power, a true co-worker and a source of strength to the cause of labour.

So long as the white workers boast in a coarse and brutal manner that the Oriental is his inferior, just so long will the Oriental make him sweat in helplessness. There is no use of mining matters.

Just so long as the lowest and most ignorant elements are permitted to insult and isolate the Asiatics, so long will the better class of white worker, as well as his coarser and more ignorant brother suffer in the labour struggle. Better alter both the spirit and method of dealing with this people who are the white man's equal in practically every walk of life. Let us make these few orientals our working and organised friends, and then we are on the high road towards success.

By the present course our white workers constantly array both political parties, all labour employing men, and corporation, a very large percentage of the vote, including every kind of man who stands for justice and manly fairplay, against their spirit and ruling methods.

Prof. Odium's Criticism

universe, is the product of consciousness."

"Matter, the visible universe, is consciousness."

"The physical universe is consciousness."

Therefore consciousness is a "mode of language, an expression of thought, a condition of thought, and exists only in the mind and for the mind." The City Temple applauds and cries out: Behold the man!

Page 228. "Heaven and hell are states of the soul." But since I am God, Campbell is God and all is God, then heaven and hell are states of God.

Page 230. "Being what we are we cannot permanently rest in anything less than the love of God." To this I say, being what we are, we can never rest permanently in anything. But Campbell's words when lined up with his teachings in this book, his New Theology, are senseless, since he is God; and God is the universe.

Page 230. "The one unthinkable supposition from this point of view is that any kind of being which has ever become aware of itself, that is, has ever contained a ray of eternal consciousness, can perish." Let us boil this down, and we get this short statement: No being, self conscious, can perish.

The "can perish" may mean can be annihilated or perish in hell. I take it that the author means the former. So far as I see there need be no objection raised here.

If he mean the latter, then his statement runs foul of his pantheism. But this statement of his may fairly open the question of the animal creation.

◁ If a dog, an elephant, or an ape be aware of itself, then it cannot perish. No comment is necessary here, for the reason we have no sure data on which to base a useful discussion.

Page 234. "After the Great Captivity in Babylon the Jews were never without a foreign master, and the Northern Kingdom of Israel disappeared from history."

Campbell is one of the few writers who have hit historic truth in relation to the "Northern Kingdom of Israel." However he may mean that this kingdom disappeared finally from history, never to emerge again. If so, he is wrong.

But it is important and pleasing to find that he admits that the Kingdom of Israel did not merge into the Kingdom of Judah, as most writers incorrectly hold.

This Company has been formed as a medium to furnish capital to establish and extend sound and thoroughly approved INDUSTRIAL and MANUFACTURING INSTITUTIONS IN VANCOUVER; also to acquire either for immediate resale or development, large tracts of farming, coal and mining properties, and to bring these vast industrial possibilities convincingly before the investing public here and abroad.

The character and possibilities of the propositions undertaken will have the benefit of the careful investigation of the company's experts and the final approval of its Directors before presentation to the public. This will be invaluable alike to the enterprise, and to the investor.

Real Estate Values Must be Maintained and Developed by Stable Industrial Enterprises.

The commercial and industrial progress of a community is the only basis of true value.

Industrial enterprise makes payrolls.
 Payrolls make a city.
 Industrial enterprise swells the population; gives life to trade; puts money into circulation, and increases the value of property.
 It underlies all wealth.

An Era of Great Industrial Development is at Hand

The opinion—nay, the positive conviction of the greatest financiers of the age—Lord Strathcona, James J. Hill, Lord Northcliffe, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy—openly expressed in the public press—as to the incalculable wealth and inevitable future of our great natural resources, are in a way a justification for the present high real estate values, and even of values far greater, but only when supported by the actual commercial and industrial development essential to true prosperity.

Organization Department

Few people appreciate the almost multitudinous undeveloped resources of this province—resources that require capital and capital alone to awaken to productivity.

Our vast water power will develop many million horse-power.
 The immense coal fields with their supplies for hundreds of years to come, will give heat and energy incalculable. Power is cheap. The supply is inexhaustible.
 Practically all known minerals are mined in the Province.
 Timber is obtainable in any quantity for almost any purpose.
 The sea and the rivers afford the choicest quality of fish.
 The high average temperature encourages continuous activity in nearly all lines of industry. It gives open harbors the year through.
 These vast possibilities are now handicapped by lack of capital.

And This Capital Can Be Obtained

as soon as the investing public at home and abroad realizes the enormous opportunities offering in the industrial field of business enterprise.

Through the London Office of this Company

a close touch will be kept with British capital, with a view to flotation and issue on the European markets of propositions too large for the local market.

The profits of British Columbia enterprises are becoming keenly appreciated in the Old Country, and the Company's arrangements for introducing new capital have been most carefully made.

Through connections in St. Paul large tracts of British Columbia farm lands will be placed before the ever-increasing community of American settlers migrating from the older states to the Northwest. Already a large interest is being manifested in the wonderful fertility of British Columbia soil, and its temperate climate.

Investment Department

The same care and thoroughness that is given to every branch of the Organization Department, will be applied to the Investment Department, where local clients may feel confident that any funds invested through the company, are placed only in enterprises of the highest character and promise, such as the company itself is prepared to underwrite or invest in.

It is the aim of the Company to become the standard investment exchange of the province, where, through the most modern and efficient system applied to every branch of its business, and the most careful scrutiny of every proposition handled, investors will be protected as much as it is humanly possible to be, while sharing in the great industrial progress that is taking place in British Columbia to-day, and that will continue for many years to come.

Factories Must Come to Vancouver

"In five years" is the official announcement of the Vancouver Information and Tourist Association, "Vancouver should become the greatest manufacturing centre in Western Canada and in the lifetime of many now living, one of the foremost on this continent.

But this will not come to pass without effort. Despite our unrivalled natural advantages, if the people of this generation want to see here "a forest of tall chimneys," in their time, they will have to get busy.

Other cities are not sleeping on their opportunities or making a secret of their advantages. The biggest and most prosperous, as well as the younger, among them are reaching out for things that will do them good—and are getting them.

Vancouver should do the same—and do it now. Delay in this, as in most other matters, is dangerous. Cities could be named whose phenomenal early progress obscured the need of such action. But the need existed, none the less, and the cities in question reaped the harvest of their neglect of it in an abrupt cessation of growth and shrinkage of realty values and revenue that had nothing to justify them in what were practically non-producing communities."

This Company, under the most experienced management possible to obtain, and backed by business men of Vancouver of the highest integrity and ability, men whose lives have been spent in the advancement of our Province, will endeavor to put into practical operation the aspirations of the citizens in bringing about this era of commercial and industrial activity. In this space, from time to time, announcements of the organization or reorganization of manufacturing concerns will be made, and our representatives will call upon the investing public of the Province, showing in more detail than is possible by advertisement, the opportunities which these commercial propositions offer to the conservative investor, giving absolute security and at the same time advancing the interests of our City and Province.

Every proposition, either for Organization or Investment, will be carefully considered, and the small investor will receive the same courteous attention as the capitalist.
